810. † Either here is a corruption of numbers, 27 for 17, or this was in the 27th year of his partnerſhip with his father, and the 16th of his own reign. Chap. xiv. 21. 2 Chron. xxvi. 3. About 765. [a] Chap. xiv. 3. [b] Chap. xii. 3. & xiv. 1. [c] 2 Chron. xxvi. 19. [d] Num. xii. 10. [e] Lev. xiii. 46. [f] 2 Chron. xxvi. 23. 758.

1. IN † the twenty and ſeventh year of Jeroboam king of Iſrael, began Azariah ſon of Amaziah king of Judah to reign. 2. Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jeruſalem, and his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jeruſalem. 3. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, [a] according to all that his father Amaziah had done; 4. [b] Save that the high places were not removed: the people ſacrificed and burnt incenſe ſtill on the high places. 5. ¶ And [c] the LORD ſmote the king, ſo that he was [d] a leper unto the day of his death, and [e] dwelt in a ſeveral houſe: and Jotham the king's ſon was over the houſe, judging the people of the land. 6. And the reſt of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah: 7. So Azariah ſlept with his fathers, and [f] they buried him with his fathers in the city of David; and Jotham his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

v. 1—7. Azariah, called alſo Uzziah, began young to reign, and ſat very long upon the throne of Judah; and, like his immediate anceſtors, his firſt days were his beſt. The common fault of the high places remained, and for daring to intrude into the prieſt's office, he was ſtruck with leproſy, ſecluded from ſociety till his death, and Jotham his ſon adminiſtred in his room, as viceroy, the affairs of the kingdom. Note, (1.) Thoſe who walk in pride God is able to abaſe. (2.) One ſtroke of diſeaſe can make the mightieſt monarch loathſome to others, and a burden to himſelf. (3.) God, when he hath pardoned the guilt of our ſins, may yet correct us long with temporal afflictions, and bring us under them even to the grave.

773. † After an interregnum of 11 years. [g] Chap. x. 31. & xiii. 2. 11. & xiv. 24. [h] 2 Chron. xxi. 20. Amos vii. 9. [i] Chap. x. 30. 772. [k] Prov. xxviii. 2.

8. ¶ In the thirty and eighth year of Azariah king of Judah, † did Zachariah the ſon of Jeroboam reign over Iſrael in Samaria ſix months. 9. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, [g] as his fathers had done: he departed not from the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. 10. And Shallum the ſon of Jabeſh conſpired againſt him, and ſmote him [h] before the people, and ſlew him, and reigned in his ſtead. 11. And the reſt of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael. 12. [i] This was the word of the LORD which he ſpake unto Jehu, ſaying, Thy ſons ſhall ſit on the throne of Iſrael unto the fourth generation. And ſo it came to paſs. 13. ¶ Shallum the ſon of Jabeſh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of Uzziah king of Judah, and he reigned a full month in Samaria. 14. For Menahem the ſon of Gadi went up from Tirzah, and came to Samaria, and ſmote Shallum the ſon of Jabeſh in Samaria, and ſlew him, and [k] reigned in his ſtead. 15. And the reſt of the acts of Shallum, and his conſpiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael. 16. ¶ Then Menahem ſmote Tiphſah, and all that were therein, and the coaſts thereof from Tirzah: becauſe they opened not to him, therefore he ſmote it, and [l] all the women therein that were with child, he ript up. 17. In the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah, began Menahem the ſon of Gadi to reign over Iſrael, and reigned ten years in Samaria. 18. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD: he departed not all his days from the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. 19. And [m] Pul the king of Aſſyria came againſt the land: and Menahem gave Pul [n] a thouſand talents of ſilver, that his hand might be with him, to confirm the kingdom in his hand. 20. And Menahem exacted the money of Iſrael, even of all the mighty men of wealth of each man fifty ſhekels of ſilver, to give to the king of Aſſyria: ſo the king of Aſſyria turned back, and ſtayed not there in the land. 21. ¶ And the reſt of the acts of Menahem, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael? 22. And Menahem ſlept with his fathers, and Pekahiah his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 23. ¶ In the fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekahiah the ſon of Menahem began to reign over Iſrael in Samaria, and reigned [o] two years. 24. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, he departed not from the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. 25. But Pekah the ſon of Remaliah, a captain of his, conſpired againſt him, and ſmote him in Samaria, in the palace of the king's houſe, with Argob, and Arieh, and with him fifty men of the Gileadites: and he killed him, and reigned in his room. 26. And the reſt of the acts of Pekahiah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael. 27. ¶ In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekah the ſon of Remaliah began to reign over Iſrael in Samaria, and reigned twenty years. 28. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, he departed not from the ſins of Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin. 29. In the days of Pekah king of Iſrael [p] came Tiglath-pileſer king of Aſſyria, and took Ijon, and Abel-beth-maachah, and Janoah, and Kedeſh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and [q] carried them captive to Aſſyria. 30. And Hoſhea the ſon of Elah made a conſpiracy againſt Pekah the ſon of Remaliah, and [r] ſmote him, and ſlew him, and ‡ reigned in his ſtead, § in the twentieth year of Jotham the ſon of Uzziah. 31. And the reſt of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Iſrael.

Before Chriſt 772. [l] Chap viii. 12. Amos i. 13. 772. [m] 1 Chron. v. 26. About 771. [n] About 375,000 pounds. 761. [o] Job xx. 5. 759. [p] 2 Chron. xxviii. 20. Iſa ix. 1. [q] Deut. xxviii. 47, 48. 739. [r] Ver. 25. Mat. vii. 2. ‡ After an anarchy for nine years. Chap. xvii. 1. § i. e. In the 4th of Ahaz, which was 20 years after Jotham began to reign.

v. 8—31. Terrible was the ſtate of Iſrael in theſe laſt days. Like the convulſions of the body before its diſſolution, under judgments unhumbled, with mercies unaffected, uniformly perſevering in a courſe of idolatry; their kings mounting ſucceſſively to the throne by murder; ſhook with inteſtine commotions, ſpoiled by invading enemies, till at laſt the beſom of deſtruction ſwept the land.

1. Zachariah, the laſt of Jehu's family, began and ended in ſix months his reign, after an interregnum, as it appears, of eleven years, occaſioned probably by diſputes about the ſucceſſion.

2. Shallum, his murderer and ſucceſſor, had ſtill a ſhorter ſpace. One month ſaw his ill-gotten greatneſs ruined. Menahem revenged his treaſon and murder upon him, and ſeized the crown, of which the uſurper was diſpoſſeſſed. Note, Few traitors and murderers die in their beds.

3. Menahem, having climbed into the throne by blood, ſeeks to ſecure his ſeat by the moſt inhuman barbarity on thoſe who dared oppoſe him. Tiphſah, for refuſing to open its gates, is, as a terror to others, ſacked and ravaged with the moſt ſavage fury, even to ripping up the women with child. Yet, cowardly as cruel, he dared not fight the king of Aſſyria, who invaded him; but at an immenſe ſum, which he levied from his nobles, bought him off, and engaged him to ſupport his wicked government. Note, The more we read of this miſerably oppreſſed and diſtracted ſtate, the more thankful ſhould we be for the liberty, peace, and ſecurity we enjoy, under our own mild government.

4. Pekahiah ſucceeded his father, who died in peace, though a tyrant and uſurper. There ſeems to have been an interregnum of a year, before probably he was fixed on the throne: two years more his tottering government continued, when he fell by the conſpiracy of his general Pekah, who ſeized the throne, and reigned in his ſtead.

Before Chriſt 739.

5. Twenty years Pekah kept the crown his treaſon had ſecured; but long impunity is no final ſecurity. The king of Aſſyria, though ſo lately bribed, returned, and ſeized all Gilead, with part of Naphtali, Zebulon, and Ephraim; and thus half of the ten tribes went into captivity. Whereupon a conſpiracy was formed againſt Pekah, and Hoſhea having murdered him, as he did his predeceſſor, ventured to wear that crown that had been ſo fatal to others, and proved as deſtructive to himſelf. All theſe kings concurred in following Jeroboam's ſins, and thereby juſtified God in theſe judgments, which fell ſo heavy upon them.

758.
[s] 2 Chron. xxvii. 1.
† i. e. The perfection of the Lord. Ver. 34.

32. ¶ In the ſecond year of Pekah the ſon of Remaliah king of Iſrael, [s] began † Jotham the ſon of Uzziah king of Judah to reign. 33. Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned ſixteen years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Jeruſha, the daughter of Zadok. 34. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD: he did according to all that his father Uzziah had done. 35. ¶ Howbeit, the high places were not removed: the people ſacrificed and burnt incenſe ſtill in the high places: he built the higher gate of the houſe of the LORD. 36. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Jotham, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 37. (In thoſe days [t] the LORD began to [u] ſend againſt Judah, Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the ſon of Remaliah). 38. And Jotham ſlept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father, and Ahaz his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[t] Iſa. x. 5.
[u] Chap. xvi. 5. Iſa. vii. 1.
742.

v. 32—38. Jotham, who ſucceeded his father Uzziah, copied his excellences, and avoided his ſins; only the high places remained, which the beſt of kings either could not, or cared not to remove. His repairing the gate of the Lord's houſe ſhews his reſpect to the place, and God kept him in peace, it ſeems, all his days, removing him at the age of forty-one, from the ſtorm which was gathering under the confederacy of the kings of Syria and Iſrael. Note, (1.) The righteous are taken away from the evil to come. (2.) When God removes a good king from a nation, or a good miniſter from his flock, they have reaſon to fear, leſt for their ſins and unprofitableneſs, the Lord hath a controverſy againſt them.

CHAP. XVI.

We have here, 1. Ahaz's idolatry, ver. 1—4. 2. His hiring the king of Aſſyria to invade Syria and Iſrael, ver. 5—9. 3. His cauſing an altar to be built after the pattern of an heathen one he ſaw at Damaſcus, ver. 10—16. 4. His embezzling the furniture of the temple, ver. 17, 18. 5. His death, ver. 19, 20.

742.
[a] 2 Chron. xxviii. 1.
[b] Lev. xviii. 21. Pſ. cvi. 37.
[c] Lev. xxvi. 30.
[d] Deut. xii. 2.

1. IN the ſeventeenth year of Pekah the ſon of Remaliah, [a] Ahaz the ſon of Jotham king of Judah began to reign. 2. Twenty years old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned ſixteen years in Jeruſalem, and did not that which was right in the ſight of the LORD his God, like David his father. 3. But he walked in the way of the kings of Iſrael, yea, and [b] made his ſon to paſs through the fire, according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD caſt out from before the children of Iſrael. 4. And he ſacrificed and burnt incenſe [c] in the high places, and on the hills, and [d] under every green tree.

v. 1—4. Ahaz, the ſon of pious Jotham, degenerated greatly from the ſteps of his holy anceſtors. The idolatry of Iſrael pleaſed him better than the pure worſhip of Judah; and Molech is preferred to the glorious Jehovah. He ſacrificed on the high places, which his fathers, though they left them, had never uſed; and, as if unſatisfied with leſſer abominations, made his own ſons paſs between, or through, the fires of luſtration, or perhaps burnt them in it, to the honour of his hateful idols. Note, (1.) They who provoke God to give them up, loſe even natural affection, and turn monſters inſtead of men. (2.) The deſperate wickedneſs of the heart of man, when left to itſelf, who can know?

742.
[g] 1 Kings xi. 36. 2 Chron. vii. 16. Iſa. vii. 4, 11.
[h] Chap. xiv. 22.
Before Chriſt 742.
[i] Chap. xv. 29.
[k] Jer. xvii. 5.
[l] Chap. xii. 18. & xviii. 16.
740.
[m] Ver. 5. Pſ. vii. 15, 16. Amos i. 5. Mat. vii. 2.

5. ¶ Then Rezin king of Syria, and Pekah ſon of Remaliah king of Iſrael, came up to Jeruſalem to war: and they beſieged Ahaz, [g] but could not overcome him. 6. At that time Rezin king of Syria [h] recovered Elath to Syria, and drave the Jews from Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day. 7. So Ahaz ſent meſſengers to [i] Tiglath-pileſer king of Aſſyria, ſaying, I am thy ſervant, and thy ſon: come up, and [k] ſave me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Iſrael, which riſe up againſt me. 8. And Ahaz [l] took the ſilver and gold that was found in the houſe of the LORD, and in the treaſures of the king's houſe, and ſent it for a preſent to the king of Aſſyria. 9. And the king of Aſſyria hearkned unto him: for the king of Aſſyria went up againſt Damaſcus, and [m] took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and ſlew Rezin.

v. 5—9. The ſin of Ahaz ſoon brought him into deep diſtreſs, Iſa. vii. 2. His country was ravaged, Elath loſt, and his capital beſieged by the confederate forces of Syria and Iſrael. Yet, far from having recourſe to God, or depending on his promiſes, Iſa. vii. 4—16. he rather truſted on an arm of fleſh; and, to engage the king of Aſſyria to make a diverſion in his favour, robbed the houſe of God of the dedicate treaſures, impoveriſhed his own, and profeſſed himſelf the vaſſal of an idolatrous Aſſyrian, rather than be the ſervant of the King of kings, who was ſo much better able to deliver him. The project ſucceeded: the king of Syria was ſlain, his capital taken, and his people led captive to Kir, as foretold, Amos i. 5. Note, (1.) God is the laſt reſource a ſinner will fly to. (2.) They who caſt off God's government, make themſelves quickly the worſt of ſlaves. (3.) When men by their wickedneſs involve themſelves in trouble, they will ſcarce ſtick at fraud or injuſtice, to extricate them from it.

About 739.
[n] Iſa. viii. 2. 2 Tim. iv. 10.
[o] Jer. ii. 8. Mal. ii. 7. Gal. i. 10.
[p] 2 Chron. iv. 1.
[q] Jer. ii. 11
[r] Acts v. 29. 1 Theſ. ii. 4. Jude 11.

10. ¶ And king Ahaz went to Damaſcus, to meet Tiglath-pileſer king of Aſſyria, and ſaw an altar that was at Damaſcus: and king Ahaz ſent to Urijah the prieſt the faſhion of the altar, and the pattern of it, according to all the workmanſhip thereof. 11. And [n] Urijah the prieſt built an altar according to all that king Ahaz had ſent from Damaſcus: [o] ſo Urijah the prieſt made it, againſt king Ahaz came from Damaſcus. 12. And when the king was come from Damaſcus, the king ſaw the altar: and the king approached to the altar, and offered thereon. 13. And he burnt his burnt-offering, and his meat-offering, and poured his drink-offering, and ſprinkled the blood of his peace-offerings upon the altar. 14. And he brought alſo [p] the braſen altar which was before the LORD, from the fore-front of the houſe, from between the altar and the houſe of the LORD, and [q] put it on the north ſide of the altar. 15. And king Ahaz commanded Urijah the prieſt, ſaying, Upon the great altar burn the morning burnt-offering, and the evening meat-offering, and the king's burnt-ſacrifice, and his meat-offering with the burnt-offering of all the people of the land, and their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings, and ſprinkle upon it all the blood of the burnt-offering, and all the blood of the ſacrifice: and the braſen altar ſhall be for me to enquire by. 16. [r] Thus did Urijah the prieſt, according to all that king Ahaz commanded.

v. 10—16. He who had enſlaved his body to Aſſyria's king' now enſlaves his ſoul to Aſſyria's idols.

1. On a viſit to the king of Aſſyria, to congratulate him on his ſucceſs, and to pay him the homage he had promiſed, he ſaw at Damaſcus, whilſt probably he joined with him in his idol ſacrifices, an altar that much pleaſed him for its beauty; and inſtantly he reſolves to copy it, ſends the model to Urijah the prieſt, and bids him prepare juſt ſuch another againſt his return.

2. Urijah, a true court-prieſt, to gratify his maſter, conſents to proſtitute his office; and Ahaz, at his return, is vaſtly pleaſed with the altar, offers on it his burnt-offerings; and though the prieſt had ſome ſhame left, and ſet it behind the braſen altar, the king will have the old altar thrown by, and will conſider what to do with it, whilſt his own is advanced into its place; and Urijah, who is too complaiſant to offend a king, baſely complies. Note, (1.) Of all characters, a ſycophant prieſt is the moſt deteſtable. (2.) Court air is dangerous to breathe in: they who ſet their hearts on riſing, rather than offend their great patrons, will worſhip at their altars, and comply with their evil ways.

17. ¶ And king Ahaz cut off the borders of the baſes, and removed the laver from off them, and took down the ſea from off the braſen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of ſtones. 18. And the covert for the ſabbath that they had built in the houſe, and the king's entry without, turned he from the houſe of the

LORD,

Before Chriſt 727. LORD, for the king of Aſſyria. 19. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Ahaz, which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 20. s 2 Chron. xxviii. 27. And Ahaz ſlept with his fathers, and [s] was buried with his fathers in the city of David, and Hezekiah his ſon 727. reigned in his ſtead.

v. 17—20. To caſt contempt on the temple and its ſervice, he continues to deface and remove the divinely-appointed veſſels. The borders of the ten baſes, curiouſly adorned, he cut off, and took off the lavers from them. The braſen ſea alſo he removed from the oxen, either to render them contemptible, or to convert ſome of the braſs to other uſes. The covert for the ſabbath, a rich canopy probably, under which the king ſat on the ſabbath, when he went up to the houſe of God, he removed; and, to gratify the king of Aſſyria, turned the noble aſcent Solomon had made, another way, as relinquiſhing the worſhip of the temple. But in the midſt of his days God, in mercy to his people, ſtopped his career of wickedneſs, and at thirty-ſix years of age he died, and left his crown to his moſt worthy ſucceſſor and ſon Hezekiah. Note, God's grace is ſovereign. Whilſt the ungodly father is left to periſh in his wickedneſs, his ſon, though brought up under his ill example, is ſnatched as a brand from the burning.

CHAP. XVII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The captivity of the ten tribes, ver. 1—6. 2. Remarks upon it, and the cauſes of it, ver. 7—23. 3. An account of the nations which ſucceeded them, and their religion, ver. 24—41.

731. 1. IN † the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah, be-† After an interregnum of nine years. Chap. xv. 30. Hoſ. x. 3. gan Hoſhea the ſon of Elah to reign in Samaria, over Iſrael nine years. 2. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, [a] but not as the kings of Iſrael that were before him. 3. ¶ Againſt him came 728. up Shalmanezer king of Aſſyria, and Hoſhea became a Chap. iii. 2. his ſervant, and gave him ‡ preſents. 4. And the king ‡ Or tribute. of Aſſyria found [b] conſpiracy in Hoſhea: for he had ſent b Chap. xxiv. 20. meſſengers to So king of Egypt, and brought no preſent to the king of Aſſyria, as he had done year by year:
therefore the king of Aſſyria ſhut him up, and bound c Exod. xxxiv. 24. him in priſon. 5. ¶ Then the king of Aſſyria [c] came About 724. up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, d Chap. xviii. 10. and beſieged it three years. 6. ¶ [d] In the ninth year of Hoſhea, the king of Aſſyria took Samaria, and [e] car-721. ried Iſrael away into Aſſyria, and placed them in Ha-e Lev. xxvi. 32. Hoſ. i. 6, 9. lah, and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

v. 1—6. Hoſhea, the laſt of Iſrael's kings, loſt with ſhame the throne he had aſcended by perfidy and murder. It was nine years ere he was fixed in the throne; or perhaps he reigned at firſt only as viceroy to the king of Aſſyria, and his reign is dated from his withdrawing himſelf from his ſervice. We have here,

1. Iſrael become tributary, as a prelude to their final deſtruction. Though their king was not ſo bad as his predeceſſors, the people continued as bad as ever; and therefore God ſold them into the hand of Shalmanezer. Note, (1.) God tries leſſer judgments before he ſtrikes the final blow. (2.) They who ſell themſelves to the ſervice of ſin, will find the wages of it ſhortly to be eternal ruin.

2. Utterly deſtroyed and diſperſed. Hoſhea, by the help of So, king of Ethiopia, rebelled againſt the king of Aſſyria; but he ſuffered for his falſhood: his country is ravaged, his capital beſieged, and, after three years reſiſtance, taken; himſelf made priſoner; and, effectually to prevent any future revolt, all the people of any note carried away captive, and diſperſed in the north of Aſſyria, and in the cities of Media; whilſt colonies of Aſſyrians are put in poſſeſſion of their fruitful land, under whom the remainder of this miſerable nation might be huſbandmen and vine-dreſſers, and ſerve, in other menial employments, their proud conquerors. What guilty nation ſinning againſt goſpel grace, need not tremble, that reads the cataſtrophe of God's once favoured people?

Thus ended the kingdom of Iſrael, which, from its commencement under Jeroboam, had continued two hundred and fifty-five years.

f Exod. xx. 2, 3. 7. For ſo it was, that the children of Iſrael had ſin-ned againſt the LORD their God, [f] which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand g Lev. xviii. 3. Jer. ii. 13. of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods, 8. And [g] walked in the ſtatutes of the heathen, (whom the LORD caſt out from before the children of Iſrael) Before Chriſt 721.
and of the kings of Iſrael [h] which they had made. 9. h Mic. vi. 16.
And the children of Iſrael † did ſecretly thoſe things that were not right againſt the LORD their God, and † Heb. Covered. Ezek. viii. 12. Eph. v. 12. they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen, to the fenced city. 10. And [i] they ſet them up images and groves in every high hill, i Lev. xxvi. 1. Ezek. ix. 9.
and under every green tree: 11. And there they burnt incenſe in all the high places, [k] as did the heathen whom k Lev. xviii. 27, 28.
the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger. 12. For [l] they ſerved idols, whereof the LORD had ſaid unto l Deut. v. 8, 9. them, Ye ſhall not do this thing. 13. Yet the LORD teſtified againſt Iſrael, and againſt Judah, [m] by all the m Jer. xxv. 4. prophets, and by all the ſeers, ſaying, [n] Turn ye from n Ibid. 5.
your evil ways, and keep my commandments, and my ſtatutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I ſent to you by my ſervants the prophets. 14. Notwithſtanding, they would not hear, [o] but hardned their necks, like to the neck of their fa- o Prov. xxix. 1.
thers, that did not believe in the LORD their God.
15. And they rejected his ſtatutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his teſtimonies which he teſtified againſt them, and they followed vanity, and [p] became vain, and went after the heathen that p Rom. i. 21.
were round about them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, [q] that they ſhould not do like them. q Joſh. xxiii. 7.
16. And [r] they left all the commandments of the LORD r Iſa. i. 4--6. their God, and made them [s] molten images, even [t] two s Exod. xxxii. 8.
calves, and [u] made a grove, and worſhipped all the hoſt t 1 Kings xii. 28.
of heaven, and [x] ſerved Baal. 17. And [y] they cauſed their u Ibid. xvi. 33.
ſons and their daughters to paſs through the fire, and uſed divination and enchantments, and [z] ſold themſelves x Ibid. 31. Chap. xi. 18. to do evil in the ſight of the LORD, to provoke y Lev. xviii. 21. Chap. xvi. 3. Ezek. xxiii. 27. him to anger. 18. Therefore the LORD was very angry with Iſrael, and [a] removed them out of his ſight:
there was none left [b] but the tribe of Judah only. 19. z 1 Kings xxi. 20. Iſa. l. 1.
[c] Alſo Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the ſtatutes of Iſrael, which they made. 20. And [d] the LORD rejected all the ſeed a Iſa. x, 5. & xlii. 24. of Iſrael, and afflicted them, and delivered them into b 1 Kings xi. 13, 34. Hoſ. xi. 12. the hand of [e] ſpoilers, until he had caſt them out of his ſight. 21. For [f] he rent Iſrael from the houſe of David, c Jer. iii. 8. and [g] they made Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat king, and d Deut. xxxii. 30.
Jeroboam drave Iſrael from following the LORD, and e Chap. xiii. 3.
[h] made them ſin a great ſin. 22. For the children of f 1 Kings xi. 31.
Iſrael walked in all the ſins of Jeroboam which he did, g Ibid. xii. 20.
they departed not from them: 23. Until the LORD removed Iſrael out of his ſight, as he had ſaid by all his h Ibid. 28. ſervants the prophets. So was Iſrael carried away out of their own land to Aſſyria, unto this day.

v. 7—23. To vindicate the ways of God to man, and open the cauſes why Iſrael was thus abandoned to ruin, the ſacred hiſtorian, after relating their diſperſion, declares the juſt reaſons of God's procedure.

1. Their ſins had provoked his judgment, great, numberleſs, aggravated, and incorrigible.

(1.) Baſe ingratitude. God, had reſcued them from the iron bondage of Egypt; after many wonderful interpoſitions, had beſtowed on them the land of the heathen; and, to crown all, had given them the plaineſt direction for their conduct, and the moſt glorious promiſes to encourage their obedience. But all would not engage their hearts to him; they forgat the God of their mercies, and turned from him to idols.

(2.) Wilful diſobedience. They rejected God's covenant, v. 15. left all his commandments, v. 16. and ſold themſelves to work wickedneſs, v. 17. as ſlaves by willing choice to their luſts: and if for a time reſtrained, through fear or ſhame, from open and avowed impiety, they ſtill in ſecret indulged their abandoned hearts, and continued as bad as ever.

(3.) Groſs idolatry. Of all their ſins this was moſt provoking: againſt it they had received eſpecial warnings; and, becauſe of it, had ſeen God's heavy judgments on the heathen. Yet, they not only learned their ways, but became worſe than the idolaters they imitated. They readily kiſſed the calves the wicked Jeroboam erected; adopted all their neighbours gods, v. 15. worſhipped the hoſts of heaven, the ſun, moon, and planets; yea, ſo mad were they upon their idols, that there was not a grove, or a ſpreading tree ſcarcely, without an image under it. Every city, yea, every village, even to the meaneſt watch-tower, had its, hill-altar, till they were multiplied as heaps in the furrows of the field, Hoſ. xii. 11. There they offered incenſe to theſe ſtrange gods; and ſo loſt to natural af-ſection, ſo beſotted were they in their adulterous rage after theſe abominations, that their very children were led through the fires, or burnt in them, to honour theſe diabolical deities. Lord, what is man!

Before Christ 721.

(4.) Hardened incorrigibleneſs. Prophet after prophet did God raiſe up to warn them, v. 13. and, to enforce the word of their mouth, he ſmote them with the ſword of his corrections; but under both they proved alike impenitent. They regarded not the warning voice, nor repented under the ſtroke of judgment. Therefore, when every method of recovery was fruitleſs,

2. God removed them out of his ſight, according to the word of his prophets. The rod of his anger was the Aſſyrian, but the deſtruction was from the Almighty.

3. Judah is glanced at in this catalogue of ſins, v. 19. as having learned of their brethren, which was an aggravation of Iſrael's ſin. But let Judah be warned by their ſufferings to repent, leſt evil alſo overtake them.

About 677.

24. ¶ And the king of Aſſyria brought men from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria, [i] inſtead of the children of Iſrael; and they poſſeſſed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof. 25. And ſo it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that [k] they feared not the LORD; therefore the LORD ſent lions among them, which ſlew ſome of them. 26. Wherefore they ſpake to the king of Aſſyria, ſaying, The nations which thou haſt removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath ſent lions among them, and behold, they ſlay them, becauſe they know not the manner of the God of the land. 27. Then the king of Aſſyria commanded, ſaying, Carry thither one of the prieſts whom ye brought from thence, and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land. 28. Then one of the prieſts, whom they had carried away from Samaria, came and dwelt in [l] Beth-el, and taught them how they ſhould fear the LORD. 29. Howbeit, every nation [m] made gods of their own, and put them in the houſes of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt. 30. And the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth, and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Aſhima, 31. And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to † Adrammelech and Anammelech the gods of Sepharvaim. 32. So [n] they feared the LORD, and made unto themſelves of [o] the loweſt of them prieſts of the high places, which ſacrificed for them in the houſes of the high places. 33. They feared the LORD, and ſerved their own gods, after the manner of the nations, whom they carried away from thence. 34. Unto this day they do after the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their ſtatutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, [p] whom he named Iſrael; 35. [q] With whom the LORD had made a covenant, and charged them, ſaying, [r] Ye ſhall not fear other gods, nor bow yourſelves to them, nor ſerve them, nor ſacrifice to them: 36. But the LORD, [s] who brought you up out of the land of Egypt, with great power, and a ſtretched-out arm, him ſhall ye fear, and him ſhall ye worſhip, and to him ſhall ye do ſacrifice. 37. And the ſtatutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment which he wrote for you, ye ſhall obſerve to do for evermore, and ye ſhall not fear other gods. 38. And the covenant that I have made with you, [t] ye ſhall not forget, neither ſhall ye fear other gods. 39. But the LORD your God ye ſhall fear, and he ſhall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies. 40. Howbeit, they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner. 41. So theſe nations [u] feared the LORD, and ſerved their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, ſo do they unto this day.

[i] Ver. 6. Iſa. i. 7.
[k] Eph. ii. 12.
[l] 1 Kings xii. 32.
[m] Rom. i. 23.
† i. e. A glorious king.
[n] Zeph. i. 5.
[o] 1 Kings xii. 31.
[p] Gen. xxxii. 28. & xxxv. 10.
[q] Deut. iv. 23.
[r] Exod. xx. 3—5.
[s] Deut. v. 15.
[t] Deut. vi. 12. & viii. 11.
[u] Ver. 32. Zech. i. 5.

v. 24—41. What a change hath this unhappy land undergone! ſtrangers devour it. We have here,

1. The perſons whom the king of Aſſyria ſent to occupy the land of Iſrael from Babylon. &c. who dwelt in the cities of Samaria, and entered into the deſolate heritage of God's people.

2. God's viſitation upon them. Lions, which were common on the banks of Jordan, are ſent to chaſtiſe thoſe ſtrangers. So eaſily could God make their abode too hot to hold them. Note, If God let looſe the old raging lion upon the ſoul, then woe to the ſinner.

Before Christ 727.

3. Concluding Iſrael's God, whom they regarded as a topical deity, offended, becauſe they knew not the manner of his worſhip, they ſend to Aſſyria their complaints; and one of Jeroboam's prieſts is ſent them, who took up his reſidence at Beth-el, the ſeat of the calves. He taught them probably the law of Moſes, ſo far as the outward ritual went; but did not oppoſe, or could not prevail on them to forſake their idols; ſo that there was a ſtrange medley of religion, whilſt in general they obſerved the Jewiſh rites and feſtivals, conſecrating prieſts of the people in common for their ſacrifices, as Jeroboam had done; yet every nation kept its own tutelar god, and ſacrificed to them in the high places. The names of theſe gods are preſerved, but their ſignifications are very dubious. Succoth-benoth is thought to be the goddeſs Venus; the reſt, different names of the ſun, according to the different repreſentations under which theſe nations worſhipped him. This mungrel ſuperſtition continued long, at leaſt till the time of Alexander the Great, and was not quite aboliſhed, even to our Saviour's time. See John iv. 22.

4. A ſhort account is given of thoſe who went into captivity. Not the leaſt altered by their ſufferings, They did after their former manner, v. 40. a reproach to the name of Iſrael, which they bore; ungrateful to their great benefactor, rebellious againſt his word, rooted in idolatry, and therefore left to periſh, loſt and incorporated in the idolatrous nations, among whom they dwelt. Note, They whom no judgments can reclaim, muſt periſh without remedy.

CHAP. XVIII.

A more pleaſing ſcene than the laſt opens in Judah, where we have, 1. Hezekiah reforming his kingdom, ver. 1—6. 2. Proſpering in all his undertakings, ver. 7—12. 3. Invaded by Sennacherib, the king of Aſſyria, ver. 13—16. and Jeruſalem beſieged, ver. 17. 4. Rabſhakeh's blaſphemy, ver. 18—37.

727.

1. NOW it came to paſs in the third year of Hoſhea ſon of Elah king of Iſrael, that [a] Hezekiah the ſon of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign. 2. Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jeruſalem: his mother's name alſo was Abi, the daughter of Zachariah. 3. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, [b] according to all that David his father did. 4. ¶ [c] He removed the high places, and brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces [d] the braſen ſerpent that Moſes had made: for unto thoſe days the children of Iſrael did burn incenſe to it: and he called it † Nehuſhtan. 5. He [e] truſted in the LORD God of Iſrael, ſo that [f] after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him. 6. For [g] he clave to the LORD, and departed not from following him, but kept his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moſes. 7. And [h] the LORD was with him, and he ‡ proſpered whitherſoever he went forth: and [i] he rebelled againſt the king of Aſſyria, and ſerved him not. 8. He ſmote the Philiſtines, even unto Gaza, and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

[a] 2 Chron. xxix. 1, &c.
[b] 1 Kings xv. 5.
[c] Deut. vii. 5.
[d] Num. xxi. 9.
† i. e. Mere braſs. Jer. i. 5.
[e] Chap. xix. 10. Job xiii. 15. Pſ. xiii. 5.
[f] Chap. xxiii. 25.
[g] Deut. x. 20. Joſh. xxiii. 9.
[h] 1 Sam. xviii. 14.
‡ Or, did valiantly. Num. xxiv. 18. Pſ. lx. 12.
[i] Chap. xvi. 7.

v. 1—8. Though Iſrael was gone into captivity, Judah yet remained, and in a ſtate of great proſperity, under the pious Hezekiah, who came to the crown at the age of twenty-five, and conſequently muſt be born when his father exceeded not twelve years of age.

1. He copied after the beſt of his progenitors, though the ſon of the worſt; and was, like David in heart and temper, devoted to God's worſhip and ſervice: nor did he, as ſome before him, begin well and end ill, but perſevered to the laſt in conſtant dependance upon God, and unſhaken fidelity to him under all his trials: ſo that in this, neither before nor after him was any like him of all the kings of Judah. Note, (1.) God in the darkeſt times, can raiſe up in his church the moſt burning and ſhining lights; let not his people therefore deſpair. (2.) The more obſtacles are in the way, the more does the grace of God appear great and glorious in overcoming them. (3.) Perſeverance in the truth, is the crown of fidelity.

2. His zeal for God's glory immediately appeared on his acceſſion to the throne. He applied no palliatives to the deep and prevailing idolatry, but laid the ax to the root of the tree. Undiſmayed through fear of oppoſition, he not only deſtroyed the groves and images, but alſo removed the high places, which had ſo long been abuſed, and which the moſt pious of his predeceſſors connived at: even the brazen ſerpent which Moſes had had made, becauſe in the late reign a ſuperſtitious adoration had been paid to it, he broke in pieces, as Nebuſtan, no more than common braſs. Note, (1.) They need not fear, who boldly truſt on God, in the path of duty. (2.) No length of cuſtom can conſecrate an evil practice. (3.) If our parents have diſhonoured God, it is our honour to be unlike them.

Before Chriſt 727.

3. God bleſſed him in all his undertakings. Having delivered the nation from the yoke of idolatry, he bravely threw off the yoke of the king of Aſſyria's uſurped dominion, and recovered from the hand of the Philiſtines the cities his father had loſt, 2 Chron. xxviii. 18. Note, Fidelity in God's ſervice, will be ever accompanied with his bleſſing.

724. 9. ¶ And it came to paſs in the fourth year of king Hezekiah (which was the ſeventh year of Hoſhea, ſon of Elah king of Iſrael) that [k] Shalmaneſer king of Aſſyria came up againſt Samaria, and beſieged it. 10. And at the end of three years [l] they took it, even in the ſixth year of Hezekiah (that is, in the ninth year of Hoſhea king of Iſrael) Samaria was taken. 721. 11. And the king of Aſſyria did carry away Iſrael unto Aſſyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes: 12. [m] Becauſe they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but tranſgreſſed his covenant, and all that Moſes the ſervant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them.

[k] Chap. xvii. 3.
[l] 2 Pet. ii. 9.
[m] Dan. ix. 6, 9.

714. 13. ¶ Now [n] in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah, did Sennacherib king of Aſſyria come up againſt all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them. 14. And Hezekiah king of Judah ſent to the king of Aſſyria to Lachiſh, ſaying, [o] I have offended, return from me: that which thou putteſt on me, I will bear. And the king of Aſſyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah, three hundred talents of ſilver, and thirty talents of gold. 15. And Hezekiah gave him [p] all the ſilver that was found in the houſe of the LORD, and in the treaſures of the king's houſe. 16. At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave it to the king of Aſſyria.

[n] 2 Chron. xxxii. 1, &c. Iſa. xxxvi. 1, &c.
[o] Prov. xxix. 25.
[p] Chap. xvi 8.

v. 9—16. The ruin of Iſrael, which we had before, is again here mentioned, in order to introduce the invaſion of Judah, now laid open by the ſubjection of Iſrael to the king of Aſſyria. The conqueſt the father had begun, his ſon Sennacherib deſired to compleat, by adding Judah to the former conqueſts.

1. He makes a ſucceſsful invaſion, and without much reſiſtance ſeizes the frontier towns, and opens a way for the ſiege of Jeruſalem the capital. Note, They who are moſt zealous for God, may be reduced, to prove their faith and conſtancy, to great difficulties.

2. Hezekiah's trembling heart began to diſtruſt his Almighty Saviour; and inſtead of having recourſe to God, or his prophet Iſaiah, ſeeks by an inglorious ſubmiſſion, and a vaſt ranſom of 247,500 l. to buy off the danger. Note, Unſhaken faith at all times, and in all dangers, is not to be found. Bleſſed be God we have one who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and though we diſtruſt him, will not be unmindful of us.

About 710. 17. ¶ [q] And the king of Aſſyria ſent Tartan, and Rabſaris, and Rab-ſhakeh from Lachiſh, to king Hezekiah, with a great hoſt againſt Jeruſalem: and they went up and came to Jeruſalem: and when they were come up, they came and ſtood by the conduit of the upper pool, which is in the high-way of the fuller's field. 18. And when they had called to the king, there came out to them Eliakim the ſon of Hilkiah, which was over the houſhold, and Shebna the ſcribe, and Joah the ſon of Aſaph the recorder. 19. And Rab-ſhakeh ſaid unto them, Speak ye now to Hezekiah, Thus ſaith [r] the great king, the king of Aſſyria, [s] What confidence is this wherein thou truſteſt? 20. Thou ſayeſt (but they are but † vain words) [t] I have counſel and ſtrength for the war: now on whom doſt thou truſt, that thou rebelleſt againſt me? 21. Now, behold thou truſteſt upon [u] the ſtaff of this bruiſed reed, even upon Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: ſo is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that truſt on him. 22. But if ye ſay unto me, We truſt in the LORD our God: is not that he whoſe high places, and [x] whoſe altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and hath ſaid to Judah and Jeruſalem, Ye ſhall worſhip before this altar in Jeruſalem? 23. Now therefore I pray thee give ‡ pledges to my lord the king of Aſſyria, and I will deliver thee two thouſand horſes, if thou be able on thy part to ſet riders upon them. 24. How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the leaſt of my maſter's ſervants, and put thy truſt on Egypt for chariots and for horſemen? 25. Am I now come up without the LORD againſt this place to deſtroy it? [y] The LORD ſaid to me, Go up againſt this land, and deſtroy it. 26. Then ſaid Eliakim the ſon of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-ſhakeh, Speak, I pray thee, unto thy ſervants in the Syrian language (for we underſtand it) and talk not with us in the Jews language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall. 27. But Rab-ſhakeh ſaid unto them, Hath my maſter ſent me to thy maſter, and to thee, to ſpeak theſe words? hath he not ſent me to the men which ſit on the wall, that [z] they may eat their own dung, and drink § their own piſs with you? 28. Then Rab-ſhakeh ſtood and cried with a loud voice in the Jews language, and ſpake, ſaying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Aſſyria. 29. Thus ſaith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you, for [a] he ſhall not be able to deliver you out of his hand: 30. Neither let Hezekiah make you truſt in the LORD, ſaying, the LORD will ſurely deliver us, and this city ſhall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Aſſyria. 31. Hearken not unto Hezekiah: for thus ſaith the king of Aſſyria, ‖ Make an agreement with me by a preſent, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his ciſtern: 32. Until I come and take you away to a land [b] like your own land, a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil-olive, and of honey, that ye may live and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah when he perſuadeth you, ſaying, The LORD will deliver us. 33. Hath [c] any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Aſſyria? 34. [d] Where are the gods of Hamath, and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand? 35. Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, [e] that the LORD ſhould deliver Jeruſalem out of mine hand? 36. But the people held their peace, and anſwered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, ſaying, [f] Anſwer him not. 37. Then came Eliakim the ſon of Hilkiah, which was over the houſhold, and Shebna the ſcribe, and Joah the ſon of Aſaph the recorder, to Hezekiah [g] with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-ſhakeh.

[q] Iſa. xxxvi. 2, &c.
[r] Jude 16.
[s] Pſ. xlii. 3. & lxxi. 11. & lxxviii. 19.
† Heb. Words of the lips.
[t] Job. xx. 3. Prov. xxi. 30.
[u] Ezek. xxix. 6, 7.
[x] 2 Chron. xxxi. 1. & xxxii. 12.
‡ Or, hoſtages.
Before Chriſt 714.
[y] 1 Kings xiii. 18. Iſa. x. 5, 6.
[z] Exod. xv. 9. 1 King. xx. 10. Pſ. lxxiii. 8.
§ Heb. The water of their feet.
[a] Dan. iii. 15. & vii. 25. Rev. xiii. 6.
‖ Heb. Make with me a bleſſing. Gen. xxxiii. 11.
[b] Exod. iii. 8 Deut. xxxii. 13, 14.
[c] Deut. xxxii. 37. Pſal. cxv. 2—8.
[d] Chap. xix. 13.
[e] Rev. xiii. 6.
[f] Pſ. xxxviii. 13, 14. Prov. xxvi. 4. Mat. vii. 6.
[g] Ezra ix. 3. Mat. xxvi. 65.

v. 17—37. Hezekiah had dearly purchaſed his peace; but when he thought he had now appeaſed the ſtorm, to his ſurprize he ſees Jeruſalem ſurrounded by the hoſts of perfidious Aſſyrians. Note, (1.) They who neglecting to truſt in God, fly to human confidences, will uſually find the evil they attempt to avert increaſing upon them. (2.) Treaties are ſlight bands to wicked kings.

1. We have the conference between Hezekiah's commiſſioners and the Aſſyrian chiefs, with Rabſhakeh at their head. They make him only one requeſt, to ſpeak to them in the Aſſyrian language, as they were near the gate, where the people might hear, v. 26. but Rabſhakeh, who had begun his inſolent ſpeech, only talked the louder and prouder. Note, They who have to do with unreaſonable and wicked men, muſt expect from them little complaiſance.

2. Rabſhakeh's ſpeech is artful, inſolent, and blaſphemous; admirably ſuited with lying inſinuations to carry his point with the people, and lead them to ſurrender, and ſhews a great wicked man. [1.] He repreſents their defenceleſs ſtate, and the folly of reſiſting. Their confidences he ſuppoſes to be either their own ſtrength, v. 20. the aſſiſtance of Egypt, v. 21. or the interpoſition of their God, v. 22. neither of which could profit. Their own ſtrength he deſpiſes, v. 23. If they could produce two thouſand men, he would give them horſes; and, after that, the meaneſt captain in his army were ſtrong enough to rout them. Egypt was a broken reed; their confidence there was vain, and would deſtroy inſtead of ſupporting them, v. 21. And as for God, he neither would nor could help them. He inſinuates as if Hezekiah had offended him by taking away the high places, v. 22. and that himſelf had a commiſſion from him to avenge his quarrel, v. 25. nay, that ſhould he attempt to ſuccour them, it were vain; blaſphemouſly concluding him as impotent to ſave, as the idol gods whom he proudly boaſts his maſter had vanquiſhed,

v. 33, 35. Note, (1.) Men's deeds do not uſually correſpond to their proud boaſting. (2.) Human confidences are certainly a broken reed; they who truſt on them may expect diſappointment. (3.) Ignorant and wicked men often reproach God's people for that which is their higheſt honour. (4.) Many pretend God's commiſſion, whoſe falſhood will ſoon be detected. [2.] He boaſts of the power of his king, the great king, whoſe conqueſts made him look ſo big, and whoſe armies rendered him ſo formidable, that all oppoſition againſt him was uſeleſs. Note, Worldly greatneſs is almoſt idolized in the eyes of carnal men, whilſt the eye of faith looks upon a great wicked man only as a great worm. [3.] He endeavours to cajole them into immediate ſurrender, and to buy their peace with a preſent, as if it would be their own intereſt to do ſo. They would elſe be reduced to the greateſt extremities, v. 31. if they dared to reſiſt. But, if they ſubmitted, he promiſes them to let them continue for a while in their preſent poſſeſſions, and then remove them into a land as good as their own, where was plenty of every thing. Note, (1.) By lying promiſes the tempter baits his hook; but experience too late diſcovers the terrible deception. (2.) We may not truſt the fair words of an enemy. Many a ſmooth tongue hath under it the poiſon of aſps.

3. The commiſſioners of Hezekiah, according to his command, made no reply, but rent their clothes, in token of diſtreſs, as well as in deteſtation of the blaſphemy, and told the king what had paſſed, that he might conſider of an anſwer. Note, The beſt anſwer to inſolent abuſe is ſilence. It but exaſperates to anſwer a fool according to his folly.

CHAP. XIX.

1. Hezekiah, in great diſtreſs, deſires the prayers of the prophet Iſaiah, ver. 1—5. and receives from him an anſwer of peace, ver. 6, 7. 2. Sennacherib ſends a threatning letter to Hezekiah, ver. 8—13. 3. Hezekiah recommends his caſe to God, ver. 14—19. 4. God, by Iſaiah, aſſures him of deliverance, ver. 20—34. 5. The army of the Aſſyrians is cut off by an angel, and Sennacherib himſelf ſlain by his own ſons, ver. 35—37.

1.[a] AND it came to paſs when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himſelf with ſackcloth, and [b] went into the houſe of the LORD. 2. And he ſent Eliakim, which was over the houſhold, and Shebna the ſcribe, and the elders of the prieſts, covered with ſackcloth, to Iſaiah [c] the prophet the ſon of Amoz. 3. And they ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of † rebuke and [d] blaſphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and [e] there is not ſtrength to bring forth. 4. [f] It may be the LORD thy God will hear all the words of Rab-ſhakeh, whom the king of Aſſyria his maſter hath ſent to reproach the living God; and [g] will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore [h] lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are left. 5. So the ſervants of king Hezekiah came to Iſaiah. 6. ¶ And Iſaiah ſaid unto them, Thus ſhall ye ſay to your maſter, Thus ſaith the LORD, [i] Be not afraid of the words which thou haſt heard, with which the ſervants of the king of Aſſyria have blaſphemed me. 7. Behold, I will ſend a ‡ blaſt upon him, and he ſhall hear a rumour, and ſhall return to his own land, and [k] I will cauſe him to fall by the ſword in his own land.

[a] Iſa. xxxvii. 1, &c.
[b] 2 Chron. vii. 15.
[c] Chap. iii. 11. Jam. v. 16.
† Or, reviling. Pſal. cxxiii. 3.
[d] Chap. xviii. 35.
[e] Gen. xxii. 14. Hoſ. xiii. 13.
[f] Exod. ii. 25. 2 Sam. xvi. 12.
[g] Pſ. l. 21.
[h] Joel ii. 17. 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2.
[i] Exod. xiv. 13.
‡ Heb. Spirit. Ver. 35.
[k] Ver. 37.

v. 1—7. In deep diſtreſs, the afflicted Hezekiah rends his clothes, and puts on the mournful ſackcloth. Human help is vain; God alone can ſuccour him. Therefore,

1. He addreſſes himſelf to God, and goes up to the temple, there to ſeek counſel and comfort. Note, Whilſt we have an almighty God to fly to, we need not, in the midſt of trouble, deſpair.

2. He ſends to beg Iſaiah's prayers for him. Eliakim and Shebna could beſt inform him of Rabſhakeh's inſolence and blaſphemy. Now was the critical moment. In this deplorable ſituation, if God did not help inſtantly, they muſt periſh, having no ſtrength and power to help themſelves, v. 3. Therefore he intreats the prophet to lift up the prayer of faith and importunity, that the arm of God may be ſtretched out to rebuke the blaſphemy he hath heard, and ſave the remnant which is left. Note, (1.) Whilſt we are crying to God in trouble, we ſhould deſire to intereſt the prayers of the miniſters and people of God in our behalf. (2.) They who apply to the great Prophet to be their advocate, have not only an it may be to ſupport their hopes, but an it ſhall be, to give them aſſurance of relief.

3. Iſaiah's anſwer is comfortable and encouraging. Terrible as the preſent danger appeared, Hezekiah need not fear it: God, who had heard the blaſphemy, undertakes to blaſt their projects, and, with confuſion deſtroying the hoſts of Aſſyria, to ſend their king home covered with diſhonour, there to fall more ingloriouſly by the ſword of domeſtic enemies. Note, (1.) None ever truſted in God, and were confounded. (2.) They who liſt up their tongues againſt God, bring down his ſwift vengeance upon their own heads.

8. ¶ So Rab-ſhakeh returned, and found the king of Aſſyria warring againſt Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachiſh. 9. And when he heard ſay of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, [l] he is come out to fight againſt thee: he ſent meſſengers again unto Hezekiah, ſaying, 10. Thus ſhall ye ſpeak to Hezekiah king of Judah, ſaying, [m] Let not thy God in whom thou truſteſt, deceive thee, ſaying, Jeruſalem ſhall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Aſſyria. 11. Behold, thou haſt heard what the kings of Aſſyria have done to all lands, by deſtroying them utterly: and ſhalt thou be delivered? 12. Have the Gods of the nations delivered them [n] which my fathers have deſtroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Thelaſar? 13. Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah? 14. ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the meſſengers, and read it: and Hezekiah [o] went up into the houſe of the LORD, and ſpread it before the LORD. 15. And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD, and ſaid, O LORD God of Iſrael, [p] which dwelleſt between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou [q] alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth, [r] thou haſt made heaven and earth. 16. LORD, [s] bow down thine ear, and hear: [t] open, LORD, thine eyes, and ſee: and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath ſent him to reproach the living God. 17. Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Aſſyria have [u] deſtroyed the nations, and their lands. 18. And have † caſt their gods into the fire: for they were no gods, [x] but the work of men's hands, wood and ſtone: therefore they have deſtroyed them. 19. Now therefore, O LORD our God, I beſeech thee, ſave thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth [y] may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

[l] Rev. xii. 16.
[m] Chap. xviii. 30.
[n] Chap. xvii. 3.
[o] 1 Kings viii. 30.
[p] 1 Sam. iv. 4. Pſ. lxxx. 1.
[q] Iſa. xliv. 6.
[r] Jer. x. 12.
[s] Pſ. xxxi. 2.
[t] 2 Chron. vi. 40.
[u] Num. xiv. 9.
† Heb. Given.
[x] Jer. x. 3, &c.
[y] Joſh. vii. 9. Pſ. lix. 13. & lxxxiii. 18.

v. 8—19. When Hezekiah's ſilence gave no hopes of a ſurrender, Rabſhakeh returned to give the king an account of the conference, who had left Lachiſh; either it was too ſtrong, or he might have taken it, and now was beſieging Libnah. There intelligence being received, that Tirhakah was coming to Hezekiah's relief, he makes one effort more to terrify him to a ſurrender.

1. He ſends a threatning letter to him, mocking his vain confidence in God; magnifying and boaſting of his conqueſts over other nations and their gods; and therefore intimating the vanity of Hezekiah's reſiſtance. Note, (1.) Wicked men, in the diſtreſſes of God's people, ſay, Where is now their God? But, though for a time he may permit their proud boaſting, he will not finally fail thoſe that truſt him. (2.) Vain minds trumpet their own praiſes, but God quickly covers them with ſhame.

2. Hezekiah received and read the letter; and, as the contents ſtruck more at God's glory, than even his crown and dignity, he went up to the temple, and ſolemnly ſpread it before him, as leaving the matter in his hands, and fervently in prayer imploring preſent help. The God of Iſrael, whom Sennacherib deſpiſed as a local deity, he adored as the Univerſal Sovereign; intreats his attention to the diſhonour caſt on his great name; acknowledges the Aſſyrian conqueſts, but over gods the work of men's hands, that could neither help themſelves, nor their worſhippers; and therefore prays that Sennacherib might be made to know the difference between the God of Iſrael and the gods of the nations; and that all the world might ſee, in the greatneſs of the ſalvation wrought for them, the glory of the God they worſhipped. Note, We may confidently expect to be heard, when the great object of our requeſts is the manifeſtation of God's glory.

20. ¶ Then Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz [z] ſent to Hezekiah, ſaying, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, That which thou haſt prayed to me againſt Sennacherib king of Aſſyria, [a] I have heard. 21. This is the word that the LORD hath ſpoken concerning him, [b] The virgin, the daughter of Zion, [c] hath deſpiſed thee, and laughed thee to ſcorn, the daughter of Jeruſalem hath ſhaken her head at thee. 22. Whom haſt thou reproached and blaſphemed? and againſt whom haſt thou exalted thy

[z] Dan. ix. 20.
[a] Pſ. lxv. 2.
[b] Hoſ. xi. 12.
[c] Iſa. viii. 9. Zech. ii. 5.

Before Chriſt 710.

thy voice, and lift up thine eyes on high? even againſt the [d] holy One of Iſrael. 23. † By thy meſſengers thou haſt reproached the LORD, and haſt ſaid, With [e] the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the ſides of Lebanon, and will cut down the ‡ tall cedar-trees thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof: and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into the foreſt || of his Carmel. 24. I have digged and drunk ſtrange waters, and with the ſole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of beſieged places.
25. Haſt thou not heard long ago how I have done it, and of ancient times, that I have formed it? now have I brought it to paſs, [f] that thou ſhouldeſt be to lay waſte fenced cities into ruinous heaps. 26. Therefore their inhabitants were § of ſmall power, they were diſmayed and confounded, they were as the graſs of the field, and as the green herb, [g] as the graſs on the houſe-tops, and as corn blaſted before it be grown up. 27. But [h] I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and [i] thy rage againſt me. 28. Becauſe thy rage againſt me, and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore [k] I will put my hook in thy noſe, and [l] my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou cameſt. 29. And [m] this ſhall be a ſign unto thee, [n] Ye ſhall eat this year ſuch things as grow of themſelves, and in [o] the ſecond year [p] that which ſpringeth of the ſame, and in the third year ſow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof. 30. And the † remnant that is eſcaped of the houſe of Judah, [q] ſhall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward. 31.
For [r] out of Jeruſalem ſhall go forth a remnant, and they that eſcape out of mount Zion: [s] the zeal of the LORD of hoſts ſhall do this. 32. Therefore thus ſaith the LORD concerning the king of Aſſyria, [t] he ſhall not come into this city, nor ſhoot an arrow there, nor come before it with ſhield, nor caſt a bank againſt it. 33. By the way that he came, by the ſame ſhall he return, and ſhall not come into this city, ſaith the LORD. 34. For I will defend this city to ſave it, for mine own ſake, and [u] for my ſervant David's ſake.

[d] Pſal. lxxi. 22. Iſa. v. 24.
† Heb. By the hand of, &c.
[e] Pſal. xx. 7. Iſa. x. 13—15.
‡ Heb Tallneſs of thy cedars.
|| Heb. Or, and his fruitful field. Iſa. x. 18.
[f] Iſa. x. 5, 7.
§ Heb. Short of hand. Jer. v. 10.
[g] Pſal. cxxix. 6.
[h] Pſ. cxxxix. 2.
[i] Acts ix. 4.
[k] Job xli. 1, 2. Ezek. xxix. 4. & xxxviii. 4.
[l] Pſal. xxxii. 9.
[m] Like that. Exod. iii. 12.
[n] Pſal. xxxvii. 3.
[o] Lev. xxv. 4.
[p] Eph. iii. 20.
† Heb. Eſcaping of the houſe of Judah that remaineth.
[q] Pſal. lxxx. 9.
[r] Iſa. x. 22. Rom. ix. 27.
[s] Iſa. ix. 7.
[t] Ver. 35.
[u] 1 Kings xi. 12.

v. 20—34. Whilſt Hezekiah was ſpeaking to God in the temple, he was returning an anſwer to him of peace, by his prophet Iſaiah. So ſpeedy are often God's anſwers to the prayer of faith.

1. He aſſures him of the vanity of Sennacherib's boaſt, and the confuſion which ſhould cover him. Jeruſalem, which God as a chaſte virgin had eſpouſed, he would as a faithful huſband protect from every violence. She therefore mocked at theſe inſolent threatnings, and deſpiſed his attempts: theſe reproaches God with jealouſy heard, and would avenge. The conqueſts he boaſted as gotten by his own arm, God had given him as the rod of his anger againſt theſe nations; and ſince the ax boaſteth itſelf againſt the hewer, Iſa. x. 13, 14. its pride ſhall be humbled. God, who knew his invenomed heart, and all his ſchemes for the deſtruction of Iſrael, would diſappoint him. As the fiſh that is entangled with the hook, and the horſe held with bit and bridle, ſo ſhould this great king be, his power as eaſily reſtrained and broken. Note, (1.) God's people are like a virgin, chaſte; and like a wife of youth, beloved: let them prove faithful, and then never fear being protected. (2.) They who forget God in their atchievements, take to themſelves that praiſe which is not their own. (3.) The powers of ſin and darkneſs have their limited bounds; though theſe proud waves rage horribly, yet God hath ſaid, hitherto ſhalt thou come, and no further.

2. He comforts Hezekiah and the people with farther promiſes of the Divine favour, 1. The plenty which they ſhould enjoy. Though the Aſſyrians had waſted the country, and the next year was a ſabbatical year, yet God would take care they ſhould have enough ſpontaneouſly produced, to feed them till the harveſt of the following year. Note, If we have truſted God with our ſouls, let us never diſtruſt his care for our bodies. 2. Proſperity and peace ſhould be in their borders. The remnant which is eſcaped, ſhould increaſe in their families, and be affluent in their circumſtances, and no ſiege prevent the quiet purſuit of their ſeveral occupations. Note, They enjoy a glorious liberty, who have God for their protector; and rooted in faith, and fruitful in holineſs, are bleſt with a portion among that remnant, which is choſen according to the election of grace. 3. There ſhould not be the leaſt hoſtile attack made againſt them. God will inſtantly defeat the projected ſiege; and for David's ſake, and for his own glory, defend them as with a ſhield. Note, (1.) They are ſafe whom God protects. (2.) Though we are unworthy, yet for his own glory, and to fulfil his promiſes made to our David, God will ſave us.

35. ¶ And it came to paſs [x] that night, that [y] the angel of the LORD went out, and ſmote in the camp of the Aſſyrians, an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand: and when they aroſe early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpſes. 36. So Sennacherib king of Aſſyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh. 37. And it came to paſs as he was worſhipping in the houſe of Niſroch [z] his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his [a] ſons ſmote him with the ſword:
and they eſcaped into the land of Armenia; and Eſar-haddon his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[x] 1 Theſ. v. 2, 3.
[y] 2 Sam. xxiv. 16.
[z] Chap. xvii 35.
[a] Tobit i. 21.

v. 35—37. The promiſe is ſcarce ſooner made, than fulfilled.

1. The army of Aſſyria is deſtroyed. A mighty angel, ſent from God, in one night ſlew 185,000 men; ſo that in the morning they beheld thoſe dead corpſes, who the preceding evening looked ſo formidable. Note, (1.) When our laſt hour of trial is ended in death, then ſhall we ſee all our ſpiritual enemies thus ſlain before us. (2.) If one angel could work ſuch a great deliverance, why ſhould the heirs of ſalvation fear, when legions miniſter to them continually?

2. The affrighted king lives to ſee the ruin, and by an ignominious flight, ſeeks to ſave himſelf; but vain is the thought of eſcaping, when God marks the ſinner as the but of his anger. Inſtead of being overcome with the ſenſe of the power of Iſrael's God, and repenting of his blaſphemies, he ſtill cleaves to Niſroch his god. Perhaps he was now thanking him for his deliverance, or imploring his help on ſome new attempt he had meditated; but the arm of death ſeizes him in the idol temple. He is murdered by two of his ſons, who eſcape from juſtice, and Eſarhaddon, another of them, reigned in his ſtead. Note, (1.) When parents are rebels againſt God, let them not marvel if their children rebel againſt them. (2.) They who after warning perſiſt in their wickedneſs, juſtly ſuffer the reward of their deeds.

CHAP. XX.

In this chapter we have, 1. Hezekiah's ſickneſs, and recovery, ver. 1—11. 2. Hezekiah's ſin, and recovery, ver. 12—19. 3. The concluſion of his reign, ver. 20, 21.

714.

1. [a] IN thoſe days was Hezekiah ſick unto death: and the prophet Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz came to him, and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, Set thine houſe in order, for thou ſhalt die and not live. 2. Then he turned his face [b] to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, ſaying, 3. I beſeech thee, O LORD, [c] remember now how I have walked before thee in truth, and [d] with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy ſight: and Hezekiah [e] wept † ſore. 4. And it came to paſs afore Iſaiah was gone out into the middle court, that the word of the LORD came to him, ſaying, 5. Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the captain of my people, Thus ſaith the LORD, the God of David thy father, [f] I have heard thy prayer, I have ſeen [g] thy tears: behold, [h] I will heal thee; on the third day thou ſhalt go up unto the houſe of the LORD. 6.
And [i] I will add unto thy days fifteen years, and [k] I will deliver thee, and this city, out of the hand of the king of Aſſyria, and [l] I will defend this city for mine own ſake, and for my ſervant David's ſake. 7. And Iſaiah ſaid, [m] Take a lump of figs. And they took and laid it on the boil, and he ‡ recovered. 8. ¶ And Hezekiah ſaid unto Iſaiah, What ſhall be the ſign that the LORD will heal me, and [n] that I ſhall go up into the houſe of the LORD the third day? 9. And Iſaiah ſaid, This ſign ſhalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath ſpoken: [o] ſhall the ſhadow go forward ten degrees: or go back ten degrees? 10. And Hezekiah anſwered, It is a light thing for the ſhadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but [p] let the ſhadow return backward ten degrees. 11. And Iſaiah the prophet [q] cried unto the LORD, and he brought the ſhadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the || dial of Ahaz.

[a] 2 Chron. xxxii. 24, &c. Iſa. xxxviii. 1, &c.
[b] 1 Kings viii. 30. or Mat. vi. 6.
[c] Neh. xiii. 22.
[d] Job ii. 3.
[e] Heb. v. 7.
† Heb. With a great weeping.
[f] Pſal. lxi 2.
[g] Ibid. xxxix. 12. & lvi. 8.
[h] Mat. vii. 7.
[i] Job xiv. 5.
[k] 2 Cor. i. 10.
[l] Chap. xix. 34.
[m] Chap. iv. 41. John ix. 6.
‡ Heb. Lived.
Chap. viii. 8.
[n] Pſal. lxxxiv. 2.
[o] Judg. vi. 37, 39.
[p] Joſh. x. 13. Ecclus xlviii. 23.
[q] Exod. xiv. 15.
|| Heb. Degrees.

v. 1—11. We have heard the deliverance of Jeruſalem from deſtruction; here we have the recovery of her king from death.

1. Hezekiah is ſick of a diſeaſe eſteemed mortal. This muſt have happened ſoon before, or ſoon after the ruin of the Aſſyrian army; when he could ill be ſpared, or when in the midſt of his triumphs. Note, (1.) The beſt of men are liable to death, and that becauſe the plague of ſin hath ſeized their mortal bodies.

Before Chriſt 714.

(2.) Every moment of life is uncertain; death pays no more reſpect to the conqueror than to his priſoners.

2. The prophet is ſent to give him notice that he muſt die, and therefore to prepare for it, by ſettling his family and affairs. Note, (1.) God's miniſters need often preſs this argument whilſt men are in health, as a quickning call, to awaken the people's diligence to provide for death. (2.) When we are ill, they are our beſt friends, not who flatter us with life, but admoniſh us to be ready to reſign it. (3.) Our ſouls are infinitely a more important concern than our houſes; let them therefore be ſet in order, through renewed applications to atoning blood, and chearful reſignation of them into the hands of God.

3. Hezekiah, ſtruck with the meſſage, turned his face to the wall, either as deſiring to be unobſerved, or as directing his prayer towards the temple, and cried unto God. He humbly mentions the ſimplicity of his heart; not as his title to God's favour, but as a comfortable proof of the grace of which he had been a partaker, and begs God would ſtill remember him in mercy in this trying ſeaſon, whether for life or death. He wept ſore. The dangerous ſtate of Judah expoſed to the Aſſyrian ſword, the reformation from idolatry ſcarce ſettled, and no ſon yet to ſucceed him; theſe grieved him for the people's ſake, or his tears were the expreſſion of the fervency of his devotion, rather than the effect of any diſmaying fear. Note, (1.) Though all our hopes towards God in a dying hour depend upon the finiſhed work of Jeſus, yet will the teſtimony of our conſcience to our ſimplicity before him afford us no ſmall conſolation. (2.) There is in death ſomething terrible to nature, but grace can make us more than conquerors over its fears. (3.) The beſt preparation for death is prayer, when our ſpirit is departing; then let us look up and ſay, "Into thy hands I "commend my ſpirit, for thou haſt redeemed me, O Lord."

4. Iſaiah is immediately ſent back with a meſſage of peace to him; not that there is any change in God's mind, but he who gave him notice of the fatal tendency of his diſeaſe, deſigned to ſtir up Hezekiah's prayer, and to anſwer him in mercy. For his people's ſake, over whom Hezekiah preſided, and as the God of David, mindful of his covenant, he tells him his prayer is heard, and more than anſwered: he ſhall not only recover, but preſently return to God's courts to worſhip, ſhall enjoy fifteen years longer life, and during that time, be protected from every attack of the king of Aſſyria, who threatned his country. Note, (1.) God's gifts exceed our deſires as well as deſerts. (2.) Life is a bleſſing, when continued to advance the purpoſes of God's glory upon earth, and this is the only end which can make it deſirable. (3.) Though we know not the limits of our remaining days, we know they are few, and therefore need diligently improve them.

5. The outward means preſcribed for his recovery, was a lump of figs laid on the boil; not that they could ſo ſuddenly operate, or ſo perfectly effect the cure, but God would reſtore him in the uſe of means, though the efficacy was not in the figs, but the faith which applied them. Note, (1.) As we muſt not tempt God in our ſickneſs, by the neglect of means, we muſt take care not to truſt in them. (2.) When we are ſick, the prayers and advice of God's prophets may do more good than the preſcription of our phyſician.

6. To confirm his faith, Hezekiah aſked, and God granted him a ſign of his recovering health, and return to the temple. God propoſed to him his choice, whether the ſhadow ſhould go forward or backward ten degrees (or half hours, as it is generally thought) upon the dial of Ahaz, which he might ſee from his window. As the retrograde motion would appear moſt miraculous, he choſe that; and immediately the ſun (as to appearance it ſeemed, but in fact it muſt be the earth) at Iſaiah's prayer returned either ſuddenly to begin its morning courſe again, or gradually; which ſuppoſing it roſe at ſix, and it was then eleven o'clock, would make that day twenty-two hours long. Note, He who firſt impreſſed motion on theſe revolving planets, and keeps them in their ſpheres, can when he pleaſes arreſt their rapid courſe, and ſhortly will put a final period to their revolutions.

713.

12. ¶ [r] At that time Berodach-baladan the ſon of Baladan, king of Babylon, [s] ſent letters and a preſent unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been ſick. 13. And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and [t] ſhewed them all the houſe of his precious things, the ſilver, and the gold, and the ſpices, and the precious ointment, and all the houſe of his † armour, and all that was found in his treaſures: [u] there was nothing in his houſe, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah ſhewed them not. 14. ¶ Then came Iſaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and ſaid unto him, What ſaid theſe men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah ſaid, They are come from a far country, even from Babylon. 15. And he ſaid, What have they ſeen in thine houſe? And Hezekiah anſwered, [x] All the things that are in mine houſe have they ſeen: there is nothing among my treaſures, that I have not ſhewed them. 16. And Iſaiah ſaid unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD. 17. Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine houſe, and that which thy fathers have laid up in ſtore unto this day, [y] ſhall be carried into Babylon: nothing ſhall be left, ſaith the LORD. 18. And of thy ſons that ſhall iſſue from thee, which thou ſhalt beget, [z] ſhall they take away, and [a] they ſhall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon. 19. Then ſaid Hezekiah unto Iſaiah, [b] Good is the word of the LORD which thou haſt ſpoken. And he ſaid, Is it not good, if peace and truth be in my days? 20. ¶ And the reſt of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how he made a pool, and a conduit, and [c] brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 21. And Hezekiah ſlept with his fathers: and ‡ Manaſſeh his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

r Iſa. xxxix. 1, &c. s 2 Sam. viii. 10.
t 2 Chron. xxxii. 25.
† Heb. Veſſels.
u 1 Kings xiii. 46. Eccleſ vii. 20. 1 John i. 8.
x Joſh. vii. 19. Job xxxi. 33.
Before Chriſt 698.
y Chap. xxiv. 13. Jer. xxvii. 22. & lii. 17.
z Chap. xxiv. 12. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11.
a Dan. i. 3.
b 1 Sam. iii. 18. Job i. 21. Pſal. xxxix. 9.
c 2 Chron. xxxii. 20.
698.
‡ i. e. Forgetting, or forgotten.

v. 12—21. The king of Babylon, hitherto tributary to the king of Aſſyria, but probably on the late ſtroke on Sennacherib's forces meditating a revolt, in order to engage Hezekiah's friendſhip, concerning whom he had heard ſuch great things,

1. Sends ambaſſadors to congratulate him on his recovery; with a letter and a preſent, in token of his high reſpect for him, and deſire to cultivate a correſpondence with him. Note, It is wiſe to gain their favour, who have God for their friend.

2. Hezekiah unſuſpicious of danger, and probably giving way to the vanity of his heart, flattered with ſuch honour done him by ſo great a king, received them with great cordiality; and to excite a high idea of his riches and magnificence, ſhewed them his treaſures, armoury, palaces, and whatever was curious or noble in his dominions. Note, Our poſſeſſions become a ſnare to us when we pride ourſelves on them, take a pleaſure in ſhewing them, and delight to hear them commended.

3. God ſaw and condemned the pride of his heart, and Iſaiah is ſent to reprove him for it. He enquires concerning the perſons, whence they came, and what they had ſeen. Hezekiah without reſerve informed him, and receives a threatning ſentence from the prophet. The treaſures on which he was ſo vain, the king of Babylon ſhould ſeize; and the alliance on which he prided himſelf, would be fatal to his family, v. 18. Note, (1.) They who will walk in pride, God will abaſe. (2.) That which hath miniſtred to our vanity and ſelf-confidence, ere long will cover us with confuſion.

4. Hezekiah humbly ſubmits to the divine denunciation. Thankful that in judgment God had remembered mercy, and that in his days there ſhould be peace. Note, (1.) We muſt ſubmit to God's afflictions not only as juſt, but gracious; deſigned not for our deſtruction, but humiliation. (2.) In the darkeſt diſpenſations of Providence we have cauſe to be thankful, if but that we are out of hell. (3.) The enjoyment of peace and truth, outward quietneſs, and goſpel-preaching, is a ſingular mercy we can never ſufficiently acknowledge.

5. Hezekiah's reign, according to the prophetic word, ended peaceably and glorioully, of which we ſhall hear more, 2 Chron. xxix. His aqueduct, for the ſupply of Jeruſalem with water, is here only mentioned, a noble and uſeful work. After a life of piety, he left his crown to his ſon Manaſſeh, an unworthy ſucceſſor, who haſtened the nation's ruin. Note, A good man cannot entail his piety on his poſterity.

CHAP. XXI.

In this chapter we have a ſhort but ſad account of the reigns of two of the kings of Judah, Manaſſeh and Amon. 1. Manaſſeh devoted himſelf to all manner of wickedneſs, ver. 1—9. God therefore devoted him and Jeruſalem to ruin, ver. 10—18. 2. Amon followed his father's ſteps, ver. 19—22. Was ſoon ſlain by the ſword, and left good Joſiah his ſucceſſor, ver. 23—26.

1. [a] MAnaſſeh was twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty and five years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was [b] Hephzi-bah. 2. And [c] he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, after the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD caſt out before the children of Iſrael. 3. For he built up again the high places [d] which Hezekiah his father had deſtroyed, and he reared up altars for Baal, and made a grove, [e] as did Ahab king of Iſrael, and worſhipped all the hoſt of heaven, and ſerved them. 4. And he [f] built altars in the houſe of the LORD, of which the LORD ſaid, [g] In Jeruſalem will I put my name. 5. And he built altars for all the hoſt of heaven, in the two courts of the houſe of the LORD. 6. And [h] he made his ſon paſs through the fire, and [i] ob-a 2 Chron. xxxiii. 1, &c. b Iſa. lxii. 4. c Ver. vi. 16.

d Chap. xviii. 4.
e 1 Kings xvi. 33.
f Jer. xxxii. 34.
g 2 Sam. vii. 13. 1 Kings viii. 29. & ix. 3.
h Chap. xvi. 3.

Before Chriſt 698.

[i] obſerved times, and uſed inchantments, and dealt with familiar ſpirits, and wizards: he wrought much wickedneſs in the ſight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. 7. And he ſet a graven image of the grove that he had made, in the houſe of which the LORD ſaid to David, and to Solomon his ſon, [k] In this houſe, and in Jeruſalem, which I have choſen out of all the tribes of Iſrael, will I put my name for ever. 8. Neither will I make the feet of Iſrael move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; only [l] if they will obſerve to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my ſervant Moſes commanded them. 9. [m] But they hearkened not: and [n] Manaſſeh ſeduced them to do more evil than did the nations, whom the LORD deſtroyed before the children of Iſrael.

[i] Lev. xix. 26, 31. Deut. xviii. 10.
[k] 2 Sam. vii. 10. 1 Kings viii. 29. &, ix. 3. Chap. xxiii. 27. Pſal. cxxxii. 14.
[l] Lev. xxvi. 14.
[m] John. xv. 22. Jam. iv. 17.
[n] Prov. xxix. 12.

v. 1—9. Like the ſeven years famine of Egypt, that made the former plenty forgotten, the wickedneſs of Manaſſeh blots out all the glorious work his father had ſo piouſly accompliſhed.

1. Manaſſeh was young when he began his reign, and continued longeſt of any of the kings of Judah, reckoning the years of his captivity in Babylon. Whether he was immediatediately corrupted by thoſe at court, who, amidſt their pretended reformation, retained their love for the old abominations; and by flattery, gained the ear of the unexperienced king, or whether only after he had children, v. 6. he apoſtatized, is uncertain. Note, It is very dangerous to come too young to the poſſeſſion of honour and greatneſs; ſo many are in wait to flatter ſuch to their ruin.

2. His wickedneſs was beyond all his predeceſſors. Not warned by Iſrael's puniſhment, he adopted all their ſins with circumſtances of peculiar aggravation; deſpiſing, or rather as if deſigning to caſt reproach on his father's proceedings, he began with rebuilding the high places Hezekiah had deſtroyed. Baal and Aſhtoreth (tranſlated a grove) once more reared up their hateful heads, and the hoſts of heaven were the objects of his worſhip, inſtead of that God who made them. To profane God's holy temple, he dared there erect his idol altars, filled the houſe and courts with theſe abominations, and there ſacrificed to his gods. In the temple itſelf he placed the image of Aſhtoreth, v. 7. in oppoſition and defiance to God, provoking him to caſt them off for ever; whom, on their fidelity, he had promiſed ever to protect and preſerve. Mad upon his idols, he made his ſon to paſs through the fire, in honour to theſe falſe deities; and ſuperſtitious as impious, he truſted on charms, and conſulted wizards, as if the devil were a better oracle than the God that ſpoke from between the cherubims. Seduced by their king's example, the people in general followed him, and Judah was filled with idolatry, worſe than the very heathen nations around them. Note, (1.) They who have had a religious education, when they give themſelves up to evil, uſually grow of all others the moſt profligate. (2.) Irreligion and ſuperſtition are nearly allied. They who caſt off all fear of God, are often ſeen to be the greateſt ſlaves to the illuſions of the devil. (3.) A bad example is deadly infectious, and eſpecially in kings: how much will they have to anſwer in the day of God, who are chargeable not only with their own blood, but with the murder of thouſands of ſouls, whom they have ſeduced and deſtroyed?

10. ¶ And the LORD ſpake by his ſervants the prophets, ſaying, 11. [o] Becauſe Manaſſeh king of Judah hath done theſe abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did which were before him, and hath made Judah alſo to ſin with his idols: 12. Therefore thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, Behold, [p] I am bringing ſuch evil upon Jeruſalem and Judah, that whoſoever heareth of it, [q] both his ears ſhall tingle. 13. And [r] I will ſtretch over Jeruſalem the line of Samaria, and the plummet of [s] the houſe of Ahab: and [t] I will wipe Jeruſalem as a man wipeth a diſh, wiping it, and turning it † upſide down. 14. And I will forſake the remnant of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies, and they ſhall become a prey, and a ſpoil to all their enemies: 15. Becauſe they have done that which was evil in my ſight, and have provoked me to anger ſince the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt even unto this day. 16. Moreover, [u] Manaſſeh ſhed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jeruſalem ‡ from one end to another, beſide his ſin wherewith he made Judah to ſin, in doing that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD. 17. ¶ Now [x] the reſt of the acts of Manaſſeh, and all that he did, and his ſin that he ſinned, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 18. And Manaſſeh ſlept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his own houſe, in the garden of Uzza: and Amon his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[o] Jer. xv. 4.
[p] Dan. ix. 12. Mic. iii. 12.
[q] 1 Sam. iii. 11. Jer. xix. 3.
[r] Iſa. xxxiv. 11. Lam. ii. 8. Amos vii. 8.
[s] 1 Kings xxi. 24.
[t] Jer. xxvi. 9.
† Heb. Upon the face thereof.
[u] Chap. xxiv. 4.
‡ Heb. From mouth to mouth.
[x] 2 Chron. xxxiii. 11—19.

643.

Before Chriſt 643.

v. 10—18. Though their provocations were ſo great, God did not ſtrike without warning. Joel, Nahum, Habakkuk propheſied, it is ſuppoſed, under Manaſſeh; and the tradition is, that Iſaiah was ſawn aſunder by him, Heb. xi. 37. At laſt, when incorrigible, the threatned judgment came; of which we ſhall hear more, 2 Chron. xxxiii. We have here,

1. The charge brought againſt Manaſſeh. His vile idolatry, his infamous ſeduction of God's people; and, as the ſummit of his guilt, v. 16. the blood of innocents which he ſhed, and as above hinted, of God's prophets: this filled the meaſure of his iniquities brim full, and brought down the heavy wrath of a juſtly offended God. Note, (1.) The greateſt kings muſt ſtand ſhortly as the meaneſt criminals at God's bar. (2.) The perſecution of God's people is the crime which fills ſooneſt the meaſure of a nation's ſins.

2. The ſentence pronounced upon him. A deſtruction ſo terrible, that the neighbour nations ſhould be aſtoniſhed at the report. The ſame judgments ſhould light on Jeruſalem as Samaria, and the houſe of Manaſſeh be deſtroyed as the houſe of Ahab. The country ſhould be thoroughly plundered, ranſacked, and deſolate, ſpoiled of all, as a diſh wiped clean, and turned upſide down, and all the inhabitants removed into a ſtrange land. Since they had forſaken God, he would forſake them; and taking now their former ſins, from the day they left Egypt, into the account, reckon with them from firſt to laſt. Note, (1.) When by our perfidious apoſtacy we turn from God, old guilt that had otherwiſe been cancelled is recalled, to witneſs againſt and condemn us. (2.) They who forſake God, muſt expect to be forſaken by him. (3.) When God viſits for ſin in the great day, then ſhall indeed the ears of ſinners tingle at the dreadful ſentence denounced upon them.

3. Manaſſeh's death is recorded, and his burial. Whether on his penitence, See 2 Chron. xxxiii. he judged himſelf unworthy, or others thought an idolater ought not to lie there, he was not buried in the royal ſepulchres, but privately in his own garden, leaving his crown to his ſon, the heir of his idolatry, as well as his kingdom.

19. ¶ Amon was twenty and two years old when he began to reign, and he reigned two years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Meſhullemeth, the daughter of Haruz of Jotbah. 20. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, as his father Manaſſeh did. 21. And he walked in all the way that his father walked in, and ſerved the idols that his father ſerved, and worſhipped them: 22. And [y] he forſook the LORD God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of the LORD. 23. ¶ And the ſervants of Amon conſpired againſt him, and ſlew the king in his own houſe. 24 And the people of the land [z] ſlew all them that had conſpired againſt king Amon, and the people of the land made Joſiah his ſon king in his ſtead. 25. Now the reſt of the acts of Amon which he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 26. And he was buried in his ſepulchre, in the garden of Uzza: and Joſiah his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[y] Jer. ii. 13.
[z] Jud. i. 7. Mat. vii. 2.

v. 19—26. 1. Amon's reign and life were ſhort, and his end tragical. He returned to theſe idolatries, which, in his latter days, his penitent father had ſuppreſſed; and thus by his wickeneſs, haſtened his death. A conſpiracy was formed; and, after a reign of but two years, he was ſlain in his own houſe. Note, (1.) The evil we have occaſioned to others, we can never repair. When we would wiſh to undeceive thoſe we have ſeduced, to our grief, we find every effort vain. (2.) It is a mercy to a nation, that the career of a wicked king is ſhort.

2. The men of Judah revenged his death on the conſpirators, and ſet up Joſiah his ſon in his ſtead; who being an infant, probably they deſigned to rob him of the crown: and they buried Amon with his father, in the garden of Uzza, as unworthy a tomb among his illuſtrious predeceſſors.

CHAP. XXII.

We have here in this chapter, 1. The good character of Joſiah, ver. 1, 2. 2. His regard to God's houſe and worſhip, ver. 3—7. 3. The impreſſion made on him by God's word. ver. 8—11. 4. The anſwer he received, on conſulting the propheteſs Huldah thereupon, ver. 12—20.

641.

1. JOſiah was [a] eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty and one years in Jeruſalem: and and his mother's name was Jedidah, the daughter of Adaiah of Boſcath. 2. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, and walked in all the way of David his father, and [b] turned not aſide to the right hand or to the left. 3. ¶ And it came to paſs [c] in the eighteenth year of king Joſiah, that the king ſent Shaphan the ſon of Azaliah, the ſon of Meſhullam, the ſcribe, to the houſe of the LORD, ſaying, 4. Go up to Hilkiah the high prieſt, that he may ſum the ſilver [d] which is brought into the houſe of the LORD, which the keepers of the † door have gathered of the people. 5. And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the overſight of the houſe of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the houſe of the LORD, to repair the breaches of the houſe. 6. Unto carpenters, and builders, and maſons, and to buy timber and hewn ſtone to repair the houſe. 7. Howbeit, [e] there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, becauſe they dealt ‡ faithfully. 8. ¶ And Hilkiah the high prieſt ſaid unto Shaphan the ſcribe, I have found [f] the book of the law in the houſe of the LORD: and Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it. 9. And Shaphan the ſcribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and ſaid, Thy ſervants have gathered the money that was found in the houſe, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the overſight of the houſe of the LORD. 10. And Shaphan the ſcribe ſhewed the king, ſaying, Hilkiah the prieſt hath delivered me a book: and Shaphan [g] read it before the king.

[a] Iſa. iii. 4. Ezek. xvi. 14, &c.

v. 1—10. One merciful reſpite more is given to idolatrous Judah; another good king to prove them, if yet they will bring forth fruit, before the ax is laid to the root of the tree.

1. Though Joſiah was very young, but eight years of age when he came to the crown, he gave very early ſymptoms of uncommon piety, and all his days the fruit anſwered the promiſing bloſſoms; and he neither turned to the right or left from following the ſteps of David, that great pattern of excellence. Note, (1.) Early piety is peculiarly pleaſing and promiſing. (2.) When a ſon is taken out of ſo wicked a houſe as Amon's, God's ſovereign and rich grace appears more eminently diſplayed in the choice and ſeparation.

2. As ſoon as he was fit to take the reigns of government into his own hand, he began to reform the interrupted worſhip, and repair the decayed temple of God. Nearly the ſame method ſeems to be taken, as in the days of Joaſh, chap. xii. to collect the money, and the ſame integrity appears in the perſons employed. Note, They who delight in the temple ſervice, may be truſted for their fidelity and honeſty in the repairs of it.

3. In the repairs of the temple, the book of the law was happily found, generally ſuppoſed to be the very copy, Deut. xxxi. 24. Moſes laid up in the moſt holy place; and which either ſome wicked high-prieſt had taken from thence, that he might hide what would put him to ſhame; or ſome good one, to prevent its being deſtroyed by the preceding idolatrous kings, had ſecreted, to preſerve it from being deſtroyed. Perhaps in theſe ſad days, the neglect of the word of God was ſo great, that another perfect copy no where remained; and from what appears, neither Joſiah, though ſo good a king, nor Hilkiah, though ſo good a prieſt, had before ſeen ſo perfect a copy of this ſacred treaſure. It is conjectured, that in ſuch troubleſome times under idolatrous kings, the public reading of the law every ſabbatical year, had been diſcontinued, and the kings no longer tranſcribed it, as was commanded. Whilſt perhaps ſome abſtracts from it ſerved for a ritual, in which the threatnings and promiſes, Lev. xxvi. and Deut. xxviii. were omitted; theſe therefore, when read, ſo affected the king, v. 11. Note, (1.) The preſervation of the inſpired writings through ſo many ages, and amidſt ſo many enemies, is a ſtanding witneſs to their divine authority. (2.) When God's word is thruſt into a corner, unnoticed by, or cruelly with-held from the people, no marvel iniquity abounds. (3.) They who have never read through all the book of God, know not how much it contains to make them tremble: and yet how many chriſtians, yea proteſtants, are thus negligent, and never once in their lives read God's word entire?

4. Hilkiah having firſt read the book himſelf to Shaphan, deſires him to convey it to the king, and read it in his ears, as it contained matters ſo deeply and nearly affecting him. Note, (1.) Reading their Bibles, is among the beſt employments in which kings can be engaged. (2.) They are inexcuſable, who have this ſacred book in their hands, and continue wilfully ignorant of its contents.

11. And it came to paſs, when the king had heard [h] the words of the book of the law, that he [i] rent his clothes. 12. And the king commanded Hilkiah the prieſt, and Ahikam the ſon of Shaphan, and Achbor the ſon of Micaiah, and Shaphan the ſcribe, and Aſahiah a ſervant of the king, ſaying, 13. Go ye, inquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled againſt us, becauſe our fathers have not hearkned unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us. 14. So Hilkiah the prieſt, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Aſahiah, went unto Huldah [k] the propheteſs, the wife of Shallum, the ſon of Tikvah, the ſon of Harhas, keeper of the † wardrobe (now ſhe dwelt in Jeruſalem, in the ‡ college) and they communed with her. 15. ¶ And ſhe ſaid unto them, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, Tell the man that ſent you to me, 16. Thus ſaith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even [l] all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath read. 17. Becauſe they have forſaken me, and have burnt incenſe unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all [m] the works of their hands: therefore my wrath ſhall be kindled againſt this place, and ſhall not be quenched. 18. But to [n] the king of Judah which ſent you to inquire of the LORD, thus ſhall ye ſay to him, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, As touching the words which thou haſt heard; 19. Becauſe [o] thine heart was tender, and [p] thou haſt humbled thyſelf before the LORD, when thou heardeſt what I ſpake againſt this place, and againſt the inhabitants thereof, that they ſhould become a deſolation and a curſe, and haſt rent thy clothes, and wept before me: I alſo have heard thee, ſaith the LORD. 20. Behold therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and [q] thou ſhalt be gathered into thy grave [r] in peace, and thine eyes ſhall not ſee all the evil which I will bring upon this place. And they brought the king word again.

v. 11—20. We have here the effect which the reading the law produced upon the good Joſiah.

1. He rent his clothes in token of his awakened ſenſe of the guilt lying upon them. He perceived clearly the dreadful diſobedience of his anceſtors, and juſtly feared the impending wrath, which was denounced againſt them. Note, (1.) When God's ſpiritual law is laid open to the heart, it will rend it in deep humiliation under a ſenſe of ſin. (2.) When we ſee the heavy wrath of God hanging over us, it is high time to bethink us of flying from it.

2. He ſent inſtantly to enquire of God, what method to take to avert the ſtorm, if yet there might be hope. Jeremiah and Zephaniah both propheſied at that time, but probably they were at a diſtance from Jeruſalem; where Huldah, the wife of Shallum, who had a poſt at court, was more known, and nearer to be applied to. Though a woman, yet honoured with prophetic inſpiration, and though in a court, eminent for her piety. Note, (1.) Though God hath given the ſuperiority to the man, yet will he put ſuch honour upon the weaker ſex, as may make them reſpected. (2.) If we have holy men or women near us, it is wiſe to make them our friends and adviſers.

3. The propheteſs from God returned a plain anſwer to his enquiry. She uſed no compliment to introduce her meſſage, v. 15. but declared the unquenchable wrath of God gone forth againſt the land, for their paſt abominations; nor could any prayers or intreaties ſtay its ravages, though for a time it might be ſuſpended: becauſe Joſiah's heart was tender, impreſſed with the words of God's law, and in deep humiliation laid low before theſe dreaded threatnings, in his days the evil ſhould not come, he ſhould die in peace. For though he fell in battle, it was not till afterwards, in his ſon's days, that the threatned wrath was poured out on the nation. Note, (1.) When ſinners are taken away to their final puniſhment, there the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. (2.) Obſtinate and wilful ſin muſt end in remedileſs and endleſs miſery. (3.) A tender heart is a great mercy from God; and young perſons uſually moſt impreſſible: how then ſhould we improve the bleſſed moment, before the heart be hardned, through the deceitfulneſs of ſin? (4.) The ſoul that trembles under the apprehenſion of deſerved wrath, is in the way to eſcape from it. (5.) They who are happy in preſent peace with God, muſt needs go in peace to the grave, as the gate of that eternal reſt, which remaineth for the people of God.

CHAP.

Before Chriſt 623.

[b] Deut. v. 32.

623.

[c] 2 Chron. xxxiv. 8.

[d] Chap. xii. 4.

† Heb. Threſhold. Pſal. lxxxiv. 10.

[e] Chap. xii. 12.

‡ Heb. In truth. Neh. vii. 2.

[f] Deut. xxxi. 24—26.

[g] Jer. xxxvi. 21.

Before Chriſt 623.

[h] Deut. xvii. 19. & xxviii. 3—68.

[i] Joel ii. 13.

[k] Exod. xv. 20. Judg. iv. 4.

† Heb. Garments.

‡ Or ſecond court.

[l] Dan. ix. 12.

[m] Pſal. cxv. 4. Iſa. ii. 8. Mic. v. 13.

[n] Iſa. iii. 10.

[o] Pſal. li. 17.

[p] Lev. xxvi. 40, 42. Prov. xxviii. 13. Iſa. lvii. 15.

[q] Chap. xxiii. 29, 30.

[r] Pſ. xxxvii. 37. Iſa. lvii. 2.

Before Chriſt 623.

CHAP. XXIII.

We have here, 1. The happy continuance of Joſiah's reign, and the progreſs of the reformation, ver. 1—20. 2. His keeping a ſolemn paſſover, &c. ver. 21—25. 3. His untimely death, ver. 26—30. 4. The bad reigns of his two ſons Jehoahaz and Jehoiakim, ver 31—37.

1. AND the king ſent, and [a] they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah, and of Jeruſalem. 2. And the king went up into the houſe of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jeruſalem with him, and the prieſts, and the prophets, and [b] all the people both ſmall and great: and he read in their ears all the words of [c] the book of the covenant which was found in the houſe of the LORD. 3. ¶ And [d] the king ſtood by a pillar, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his teſtimonies, and his ſtatutes, with all their heart and all their ſoul, to perform the words of this covenant, that were written in this book: and all the people [e] ſtood to the covenant.

a 2 Chron. xxxiv. 29, &c.
b Neh. viii. 2, 3. c Chap. xxii. 8.
d Chap. xi. 14.
e Eccleſ. viii. 2.

v. 1—3. To avert, if poſſible, the threatned wrath, Joſiah, with earneſt ſollicitude, ſeeks the reformation of the people.

1. In a general aſſembly of the elders, prieſts, prophets, and people, convened on purpoſe for the occaſion, he himſelf, as it ſeems, read in their ears the words of the book found in the houſe of the Lord, that it might more deeply engage their attention.

2. The book of the covenant being rehearſed, the tenor of which was, that on their fidelity, they were aſſured of God's bleſſing. The king, to encourage and engage the people, ſolemnly, as in the preſence of God, declared his purpoſe of walking after the Lord, in all the ways of his inſtituted worſhip, and obſerving all his commandments moral, judicial, and ceremonial; and this with all ſimplicity and ſincerity, truſting upon God to enable him for what was ſo plainly his duty, and ſo greatly his deſire. The people join the king in his engagement, and promiſing all fidelity, ſtand to the covenant. Note, (1.) A good and great example is very influential. (2.) Jeſus our king, is our covenant-head, and covenant-fulfiller: faith in him is now our ſecurity. (3.) God's people are bound to him, not ſo much by bonds of vows and promiſes, as by better bonds of love indiſſoluble.

4. And the king commanded Hilkiah the high prieſt, and the prieſts of the ſecond order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD, all [f] the veſſels that were made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the hoſt of heaven: and he burnt them without Jeruſalem, in the fields of Kidron, and carried the aſhes of them unto [g] Beth-el. 5. And he † put down [h] the idolatrous prieſts, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incenſe in the high places, in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jeruſalem, them alſo that burnt incenſe unto Baal, to the ſun, and to the moon, and to the ‡ planets, and to all the hoſt of heaven. 6. And he brought out [i] the grove from the houſe of the LORD, without Jeruſalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burnt it at the brook Kidron, and ſtampt it ſmall to powder, and [k] caſt the powder thereof upon the graves of the children of the people. 7. And he brake down the houſes of [l] the ſodomites that were by the houſe of the LORD, where the women wove ‖ hangings for the grove. 8. And he brought all the prieſts out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the prieſts had burnt incenſe, from Geba to Beer-ſheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entring in of the gate of Joſhua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city. 9. [m] Nevertheleſs, the prieſts of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jeruſalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren. 10. And he defiled [n] Topheth, which is in [o] the valley of the children of Hinnom, that no man [p] might make his ſon or his daughter to paſs through the fire to Molech. 11. And he took away the horſes that the kings of Judah had given to the ſun, at the entring in of the houſe of the LORD, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the chamberlain, which was in the ſuburbs, and burnt the chariots of the ſun with fire. 12. And the altars that were [q] on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars [r] which Manaſſeh had made in the two courts of the houſe of the LORD, did the king beat down, and brake them down from thence, and caſt the duſt of them into the brook Kidron. 13. And the high places that were before Jeruſalem, which were on the right hand of § the mount of corruption, [s] which Solomon the king of Iſrael had builded for Aſhtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for Chemoſh the abomination of the Moabites, and for Milcolm the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile. 14. And [t] he brake in pieces the images and cut down the groves, and filled their places with the bones of men. 15. ¶ Moreover, [u] the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high place which Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, who made Iſrael to ſin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burnt the high place, and ſtampt it ſmall to powder, and burnt the grove. 16. And as Joſiah turned himſelf, he ſpied the ſepulchres that were there in the mount, and ſent and took the bones out of the ſepulchres, and [x] burnt them upon the altar, and polluted it according to the word of the LORD which the man of God proclaimed, who proclaimed theſe words. 17. Then he ſaid, What title is that that I ſee? And the men of the city told him, [y] It is the ſepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed theſe things that thou haſt done againſt the altar of Beth-el. 18. And he ſaid, Let him alone, [z] let no man move his bones: ſo they let his bones alone, with [a] the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria. 19. And all the houſes alſo of the high places that were [b] in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Iſrael had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Joſiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el. 20. And [c] he † ſlew all the prieſts of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burnt men's bones upon them, and returned to Jeruſalem. 21. ¶ And the king commanded all the people, ſaying, [d] Keep the paſſover unto the LORD your God, [e] as it is written in the book of this covenant. 22. Surely [f] there was not holden ſuch a paſſover, from the days of the judges that judged Iſrael, nor in all the days of the kings of Iſrael, nor of the kings of Judah: 23. But in the eighteenth year of king Joſiah, wherein this paſſover was holden to the LORD [g] in Jeruſalem. 24. ¶ Moreover, the workers with [h] familiar ſpirits, and the wizards, and the ‡ images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were ſpied in the land of Judah, and in Jeruſalem, did Joſiah put away, that he might perform [i] the words of the law, which were written in the book [k] that Hilkiah the prieſt found in the houſe of the LORD.

f Chap. xxi. 4, 7.
g 1 Kings xii. 29.
† Heb. Cauſed to ceaſe.
h Jer. iii. 6, 7. Zeph. i. 4.
‡ Or conſtellations.
i Chap. xxi. 7.
k 2 Chron. xxxiv. 4.
l Deut. xxiii. 17. 1 Kings xv. 12.
‖ Or ſhrines. Acts xix. 24. m Ezek. xliv. 10—14.
n Jer. vii. 31. & xix. 6, 11.
o Joſh. xv. 8.
p Lev. xviii. 21. Deut. xviii. 10. Ezek. xxiii. 37, 39.
q Jer. xix 13. Zeph. i. 5.

Before Chriſt 623.

r Chap. xxi. 5.
§ i. e. the mount of Olives.
s 1 Kings xi. 7.
t Exod. xxiii. 24. Deut. vii. 5, 25.
u 1 Kings xii. 29.
x 1 Kings xiii. 2.
y Ibid. 30.
z Iſa. lvii. 2.
a 1 Kings xiii. 31.
b 2 Chron. xxxiv. 6.
c 1 Kings xiii. 2.
† Or ſacrificed. Exod. xxii. 20. Prov. xxi. 3. d 2 Chron. xxxv. 1.
e Exod. xii. 3. Num. ix. 3. Deut. xvi. 2.
f 2 Chron. xxxviii. 18.
g Deut. xii. 5.
h Chap. xxi. 6.
‡ Or teraphim.
i Lev. xx. 27. Deut. xviii. 10, &c.
k Chap. xxii. 8.

v. 4—24. In conſequence of his ſolemn engagements, Joſiah without delay, ſet himſelf to remove all the abominations, contrary to the book of the law, which were found in the land.

1. He began with Judah and Jeruſalem; where, ſhocking to tell! the moſt groſs and ſtrange monuments of idolatry remained. To purge the houſe of the Lord was his firſt concern: thence he fetched all the veſſels which had been conſecrated to, and employed in the ſervice of Baal and Aſhtoreth, and the hoſts of heaven; and having burnt them, carried their aſhes to Beth-el, that hated beginning of idolatry, which now he would make a dunghill, and lay there the filth and off-ſcouring of all theſe abominations. The idolatrous prieſts, (for ſuch there will be, when court favour follows Baal's worſhip) he put down, deſtroying all the high places where they offered incenſe, which though Hezekiah had ruined, his wicked ſucceſſors had reſtored. Theſe were degraded from their office; and though they had a portion with the prieſts for their maintenance, they were no more ſuffered to approach the altars of the Lord. The images of their falſe deities he ſtamped to powder; and to render them more loathſome, caſt the duſt on the graves of their worſhippers, as a reproach to their memory, and in contempt to their idols; whilſt he dug up the bones of the prieſts, and ſcattered them upon the high places, where they had uſed to ſacrifice. The houſes of the ſodomites, unnatural crime! that with dire effrontery were placed near the temple, where women, as well as men, wrought all iniquity, in honour of their impure deities, he raſed to the foundations. Tophet, a valley near Jeruſalem, ſo called, from the drums they beat, to drown the cries of infants burnt there in the fire to Molech, he defiled, making it a burying-place. The horſes which had been dedicated to the ſun, according to the blind uſages of the heathen, either

Before Chriſt 623.

either to be offered in ſacrifice, or to draw the chariots ſacred to that deity, he burnt with the chariots. His own houſe alſo he thoroughly purged: the altar of Ahaz, which was on the roof, and thoſe Manaſſeh had made; which, though once caſt out of Jeruſalem, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 15. Amon had brought back again: theſe he beat to powder, and threw the duſt into the brook Kidron. Throughout Judah, he put away all wizards and workers with familiar ſpirits; and in ſhort, every abomination he found, after the ſtricteſt ſearch made, according to the word of the Lord, he utterly aboliſhed it. Note, True converſion to God makes thorough work, caſting away every weight, and the ſin which doth moſt eaſily beſet us.

2. He proceeded to carry the reformation he had begun in Judah, into part of the cities of Iſrael; ſeveral of which, and Beth-el particularly, had after the captivity, or on the laſt defeat of Sennacherib, ſubmitted to him, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 6. The altar at Beth-el he defiled; and, after ſacrificing the idolatrous prieſts, and burning the bones of dead men upon it, deſtroyed it, with the high place and the grove adjoining; carefully preſerving however the bones of the prophet, who, about 350 years before, had foretold what now was literally fulfilled. And as he did at Beth-el, he did in all the cities of Samaria, under his dominion, utterly rooting out every monument of idolatry. Note, Though God's word be long ere it be fulfilled, whether it be promiſe or threatning, the accompliſhment is ſure.

3. The land being thus cleanſed from idols, and the people, according to their engagements, returning in truth to the worſhip of God; a ſolemn paſſover is proclaimed and kept, with ſuch exactneſs and conformity to the divine inſtitution, with ſuch delight and joy, that ſince the days of the judges, even under the beſt of their kings, no ſuch paſſover had been obſerved. Note, They who are faithful in the covenant, will be happy to partake of the ſeals of it. Neglect of the table of the Lord, is a ſure mark of the continuing apoſtacy of the heart from God.

25. And [l] like unto him there was no king before him, that turned to the LORD [m] with all his heart, and with all his ſoul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moſes; neither after him aroſe there any like him. 26. ¶ [n] Notwithſtanding, the LORD turned not from the fierceneſs of his great wrath, whereupon his anger was kindled againſt Judah, becauſe of all the † provocations that Manaſſeh had provoked him withal. 27. And the LORD ſaid, I will [o] remove Judah alſo out of my ſight, as I have removed [p] Iſrael, and will caſt off this city Jeruſalem, which I have choſen, and the houſe of which I ſaid, [q] My name ſhall be there. 28. Now the reſt of the acts of Joſiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 29. ¶ [r] In his days Pharaoh-nechoh king of Egypt went up againſt the king of Aſſyria to the river Euphrates: and king Joſiah went againſt him, and [s] he ſlew him at Megiddo, when [t] he had ſeen him. 30. And his ſervants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jeruſalem, and buried him in his own ſepulchre: and the people of the land took ‡ Jehoahaz the ſon of Joſiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's ſtead.

[l] Chap. xviii. 5. [m] Deut. vi. 5. 1 Kings ii. 4. [n] 1 Sam. iii. 14. Chap. xxiv. 4. Jer. iii. 10. & xv. 1. † Heb. Angers. [o] Chap. xxiv. 14—16. & xxv. 11. [p] Chap. xvii. 6. [q] 1 Kings viii. 29. [r] 2 Chron. xxxv. 20. [s] Ver. 25. Pſal. xxxvi. 6. Rom. xi. 33. [t] Chap xiv. 8. ‡ Called Shallum. 1 Chron. iii. 15. Jer. xxii. 11.

v. 25—30. We have here,

1. A moſt noble character given of Joſiah. As Hezekiah was diſtinguiſhed for his faith in God, ſo was Joſiah, above all his predeceſſors, remarkable for his ſincerity and zeal in the reformation he ſought. With his whole heart, in uprightneſs and truth, he turned to the Lord, and with all his might uſing his utmoſt influence to convert his people, and ever making God's word the rule of his conduct. Note, (1.) God regards the heart; when that is right, then the ſervice is acceptable. (2.) They who would pleaſe God, muſt give up their whole heart, and make no allowed reſerves. (3.) When we have true zeal for God, much more may be done, than at firſt we could imagine.

2. God's anger is not however turned away. Notwithſtanding the apparent reformation, many were ſtill hypocritical, and the former abominations of Manaſſeh had fixed the Divine decree. Note, Tho' the decree may be paſſed concerning a nation's ſins, yet every real penitent may be aſſured, whenever he returns unto God, he will turn away from his fierce anger; and though he ſinks in a common calamity, his eternal ſafety is ſecured.

3. Joſiah is ſlain in the midſt of his days. Attempting to oppoſe the invaſion which the king of Egypt made on his ally the king of Babylon, and now alſo of Aſſyria, he fell in battle at Megiddo. Whether he could be juſtified in this war, is uncertain; we are ſure God was juſt in permitting his fall, as a puniſhment to the people, and in mercy took him away before the deſolation threatned againſt his kingdom came upon them. Note, When men know not to value their mercies, and to profit under the means they enjoy, God will puniſh them by removing them.

Before Chriſt 610.

31. ¶ Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. 32. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done. 33. And Pharaoh-nechoh [u] put him in bands at Riblah, in the land of Hamath, that he might not reign in Jeruſalem, and put the land to a tribute of an hundred talents of ſilver, and a talent of gold. 34. And Pharaoh-nechoh made Eliakim the ſon of Joſiah king, in the room of Joſiah his father, and [x] turned his name to Jehoiakim, and took Jehoahaz away: and he came to Egypt, and [y] died there. 35. And Jehoiakim gave the ſilver and the gold to Pharaoh, but he taxed the land to give the money according to the commandment of Pharaoh; he exacted the ſilver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh. 36. ¶ Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah. 37. And he did that which was [z] evil in the ſight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

[u] Ezek. xix. 3, 4. [x] Chap. xxiv. 17. Dan. i. 7. [y] Jer. xxii. 10—12. [z] Jer. xxii. 13. & xxvi. 23. & xxxvi. 26.

v. 31—37. With Joſiah periſhed all the glory of Judah. Like a man mortally wounded, the kingdom gaſped a while under his ſons, and then expired, as it were, under Nebuchadnezzar's invaſion.

1. Jehoahaz ſucceeded his father; though not the eldeſt ſon, yet ſet up by the people, becauſe perhaps he ſeemed more warlike than his brother; but his wickedneſs made his valour uſeleſs. Following the idolatries of his wicked forefathers, he was forſaken of God; and after a ſhort reign of three months, taken priſoner by Pharaoh-nechoh, and died in bondage in Egypt. Note, When neither warnings will reſtrain, nor good examples influence, deſtruction is near.

2. His brother is made king in his ſtead; his name is changed by Pharaoh, in token of his ſubjection, into Jehoiakim, and a tribute levied upon the land, to which every man was obliged to contribute, according to his abilities, amounting to upwards of forty thouſand pounds. Yet none of theſe afflictions availed to admoniſh him; he followed the ways of his bad predeceſſors, and thereby haſtened the ruin of the land.

CHAP. XXIV.

We have here, 1. Jehoiakim ſubdued and chaſtiſed by the king of Babylon, for attempting to ſhake off his yoke, ver. 1—6. 2. Egypt alſo is conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, ver. 7. 3. Jehoiachin, and all his great men, are carried captives to Babylon, ver. 8—16. 4. Zedekiah, the laſt king, appointed, ver. 17—20.

1. [a] IN his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his ſervant three years: then he turned and rebelled againſt him. 2. And [b] the LORD ſent againſt him [c] bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and ſent them againſt Judah to deſtroy it, according to the word of the LORD, [d] which he ſpake by his ſervants the prophets. 3. Surely at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove them out of his ſight, [e] for the ſins of Manaſſeh, according to all that he did. 4. And alſo [f] for the innocent blood that he ſhed (for he filled Jeruſalem with innocent blood) [g] which the LORD would not pardon. 5. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah? 6. So [h] Jehoiakim ſlept with his fathers: and Jehoiachin his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 7. And the king of Egypt [i] came not again any more out of his land: for [k] the king of Babylon had taken from the river of Egypt unto the river of Euphrates, all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

606. [a] Jer. xxv. 1. Dan. i. 1. 603. [b] 1 Kings xii. 15. [c] Ezek. xix. 8. [d] Lev. xxvi. 17. Chap. xxii. 16. Jer. xxv. 9. [e] Chap. xxiii. 26.27. [f] Chap. xx. 16. Rev. xviii. 24. [g] Chap. xxiii. 26. 599. [h] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6. Jer. xxii. 18, 19. & xxxvi. 30. [i] Jer. xxxvii. 7. [k] Jer. xlvi. 2.

v. 1—7. Jehoiakim, the vaſſal of the king of Egypt, ſoon changed his maſter; and from this æra of the third of Jehoiakim, the ſeventy years of the Babyloniſh captivity commence.

1. In the third, or beginning of his fourth year, Jehoiakim was ſubdued by the king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar; and, on on promiſe of obedience, reſtored to his government: but, in hopes of aſſiſtance from Egypt, he rebelled, and ſmarted for it. A vaſt army of Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, ſubjects of the king of Babylon, are ſent of God in juſt judgment againſt Judah, according to the word of the Lord by his prophets Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Zephaniah, and Huldah, becauſe of the innocent blood Manaſſeh had ſhed, and they had conſented to, and followed his bad example, Jer. xxii. 17. And tho' on his repentance his ſin was pardoned, reſpecting the eternal conſequences to his own ſoul, the temporal puniſhment of it upon the land was decreed, and now accompliſhed. Jehoiakim, unable to reſiſt, was made priſoner, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6. and bound in chains to be carried to Babylon, but died before he could be removed; and, according to the prophecy of Jeremiah, his dead body was caſt out, buried with the burial of an aſs, Jer. xxii. 18. xxxvi. 30. Note, (1.) Many who are ſerving their own pride and ambition, little think they are but the ſcourge in God's hand. (2.) Vain is reſiſtance when God will deſtroy. (3.) Let not ſinners think that one jot or tittle of God's threatnings againſt them ſhall fail. Heaven and earth ſhall ſooner paſs away, than his word be diſappointed.

Before Chriſt 599.

2. The king of Egypt was ſubdued, and loſt great part of his country, whereby he became unable to aſſiſt Jehoiakim. Note, The ſinner's vain confidences in a day of wrath ſhall all utterly fail.

8. ¶ Jehoiachin was eighteen years old when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jeruſalem [l] three months: and his mother's name was Nehuſhta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jeruſalem. 9. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done. 10. ¶ At that time the ſervants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up againſt Jeruſalem, and the city was beſieged, 11. And [m] Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came againſt the city, and his ſervants did beſiege it. 12. And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his ſervants, and his princes, and his officers: and the king of Babylon [n] took him in the eighth year of † his reign. 13. And he carried out thence all the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD, and the treaſures of the king's houſe, and cut in pieces all the veſſels of gold which Solomon king of Iſrael had made in the temple of the LORD, [o] as the LORD had ſaid. 14. And he carried away all Jeruſalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thouſand captives, and all the craftſmen and ſmiths: none remained, ſave [p] the pooreſt ſort of the people of the land. 15. And [q] he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land, thoſe carried he into captivity, from Jeruſalem to Babylon. 16. And [r] all the men of might, even ſeven thouſand, and craftſmen, and ſmiths a thouſand, all that were ſtrong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon. 17. ¶ And [s] the king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his ſtead, and changed his name to Zedekiah. 18. Zedekiah was twenty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was [t] Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. 19. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. 20. For [u] through the anger of the LORD it came to paſs in Jeruſalem and Judah, until he had caſt them out from his preſence, that Zedekiah [x] rebelled againſt the king of Babylon.

[l] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 9.
[m] Deut. xxviii. 49, &c.
[n] Chap. xxv. 27.
599.
† i. e. Nebuchadnezzar's. Jer. xxv. 1.
[o] Chap. xx. 17. Jer. xx. 5. & xxvii. 18.
[p] Chap. xxv. 12. Jer. xxxix. 10.
[q] Eſth. ii. 6.
[r] Pſ. lxxvi. 5.
[s] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 11. Jer. xxxvii. 1. & lii. 1.
599.
[t] Chap. xxiii. 31.
[u] Chap. xvii. 18.
[x] Ezek. xvii. 12—15.
About 593.

v. 8—20. Jehoiachin, called alſo Jeconiah, and in contempt, Coniah, ſucceeded his father. We have here,

1. His ſhort reign, and long captivity. He did evil, like his forefathers, againſt God, and gave the king of Babylon ſuch reaſon to be diſpleaſed with his government, that, after a ſhort reign of three months, he came up to beſiege him in his capital; and being defenceleſs, not only deſtitute of forces, but forſaken of God, he is forced, with all his family, to ſurrender priſoner at diſcretion. His palace and the temple are now plundered of all that was left, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7. The veſſels of gold, many of them at leaſt, Nebuchadnezzar cut up, and coined, probably to pay his army, and carried the reſt to Babylon, See Dan. v. 2, 3. and, to prevent future revolts by weakening the land, all the great men, and officers of the army, with the craftſmen and the ſmiths, were led away captives. Among theſe were Ezekiel the prophet, and Mordecai, the uncle of Eſther. Note, When wickedneſs is in high places, deſolations are at hand.

2. His uncle Mattaniah is appointed to ſucceed Jehoiachin, and his name changed into Zedekiah, as the king of Babylon's ſervant, and as a preſage of the juſtice of the Lord, as the name ſignifies, which ſhould overtake him upon his revolt. His ways were wicked, as thoſe who went before him; and, fooliſh as falſe, he dared rebel againſt the king who ſet him up, though ſo unable to contend with him, which is aſcribed to God's anger, who infatuated him to ruſh on his deſtruction. Note, (1.) There is no evil in the city, but the Lord hath done it. To his hand muſt every ſuffering be aſcribed. (2.) A nation is on the verge of ruin, when God gives up her rulers to infatuation.

Before Chriſt 590.

CHAP. XXV.

In this chapter we have, 1. The utter deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Chaldeans, ver. 1—4, 8—10. 2. The king made a moſt miſerable priſoner, and the ſeed royal deſtroyed, ver. 5—7. 3. The principal officers put to death, 18—21. 4. The ſacred veſſels that remained are carried away to Babylon, ver. 13—17. 5. The diſtraction of them that were left under Gedaliah, ver. 22—26. 6. The kindneſs which was ſhewn to Jehoiachin the captive king of Judah, ver. 27—30.

1. AND it came to paſs [a] in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his hoſt, againſt Jeruſalem, and pitched againſt it, and they [b] built forts againſt it round about. 2. And the city was beſieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah. 3. And on the ninth day of the fourth month, the famine prevailed in the city, and [c] there was no bread for the people of the land. 4. ¶ And [d] the city was broken up, and [e] all the men of war fled [f] by night, by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden, (now the Chaldees were againſt the city round about) and the king went the way toward the plain. 5. And the army of the Chaldees purſued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho: and all his army were ſcattered from him. 6. So [g] they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon, to Riblah, and they † gave judgment upon him. 7. And they ſlew the ſons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and [h] put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and [i] bound him with fetters of braſs, and carried him to Babylon.

590.
[a] Jer. lii. 4, &c. Ezek. xxiv. 1.
[b] Ezek. iv. 2.
588.
[c] Lam. iv. 4. Ezek. v. 10.
[d] Jer. lii. 7.
[e] Deut. xxviii. 25.
[f] Ezek. xii. 12.
[g] Ezek. xii. 13. Amos. ii. 14.
† Heb. Spake judgment with him. Ezek. xvii. 18.
[h] Ezek. xii. 13.
[i] Pſ. cvii. 10, 11.

v. 1—7. Zedekiah ſoon felt what an unequal match he was for the king he had by rebellion provoked; for how could he hope to reſiſt, who had not only the powers of earth, but the arm of God againſt him?

1. Jeruſalem is beſieged, and, after ſuffering the greateſt extremities of famine, Ezek. v. 10. Jer. lii. 6. taken by ſtorm. How terrible is war! What thanks do we owe for peace in our borders!

2. The king is taken priſoner as he attempted to eſcape, forſaken of his guards, and brought back with ſhame to the camp of the Chaldeans, to behold thoſe miſeries, which, had he followed Jeremiah's advice, chap. xxxviii. 17. he might have eſcaped; He is condemned to ſuffer the reward of his deeds; firſt, to behold the tormenting ſight of his ſons all murdered before his eyes, and then for ever to cloſe them upon this mournful ſcene, as left in miſery to ruminate on the cauſe; whilſt, languiſhing in fetters of iron, he paſſed his wretched days, a miſerable ſpectacle, and monument of the wages of ſin. Note, (1.) They who refuſe God's counſel to eſcape, will find the vanity of their own contrivances. (2.) The impenitent ſinner's doom is to be bound in chains of darkneſs unto the judgment of the great day.

8. ¶ And [k] in the fifth month, on the ſeventh day of the month (which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon) came Nebuzar-adan captain of the guard, a ſervant of the king of Babylon, unto Jeruſalem: 9. And he [l] burnt the houſe of the LORD, and the king's houſe, and all the houſes of Jeruſalem, and [m] every great man's houſe burnt he with fire. 10. And all the army of the Chaldees that were with the captain of the guard, [n] brake down the walls of Jeruſalem round about. 11. Now [o] the reſt of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard carry away. 12. But the captain of the guard [p] left the poor of the land, to be vine-dreſſers, and huſbandmen. 13. And [q] the pillars of braſs that were in the houſe of the LORD, and the [k] Jer. lii. 12, &c.

[l] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 19. Pſ. lxxix. 1. Jer. vii. 14.
[m] Jer. xxxix. 8.
[n] Neh. i. 3.
[o] Jer. lii. 15.
[p] Chap. xxiv. 14.
[q] 1 Kings vii. 15, &c.

baſes, and the braſen ſea that was in the houſe of the LORD, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the braſs of them to Babylon. 14. And the pots, and the ſhovels, and the ſnuffers, and the ſpoons, and all the veſſels of braſs wherewith they miniſtred, took they away. 15. And the fire-pans, and the bowls, and ſuch things as were † of gold, in gold, and of ſilver, in ſilver, the captain of the guard took away. 16. The two pillars, one ſea, and the baſes which Solomon had made for the houſe of the LORD, the braſs of all theſe veſſels was without weight. 17. The height of the one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapiter upon it was braſs: and the height of the chapiter three cubits: and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapiter round about, all of braſs: and like unto theſe had the ſecond pillar with wreathen work. 18. ¶ And the captain of the guard took [r] Seraiah the chief prieſt, and Zephaniah the ſecond prieſt, and the three keepers of the ‡ door. 19. And out of the city he took an officer, that was ſet over the men of war, and five men of them that § were in the king's preſence, which were found in the city, and the principal ſcribe of the hoſt, which muſtered the people of the land, and threeſcore men of the people of the land that were found in the city. 20. And Nebuzar-adan captain of the guard took theſe, and brought them to the king of Babylon, to Riblah. 21. And the king of Babylon ſmote them, and ſlew them at Riblah in the land of Hamath. [s] So Judah was carried away out of their land.

† Heb. Gold gold, and ſilver ſilver.

[r] 1 Chron. vi. 14.

‡ Heb. Threſhold. Chap. xxii. 4.

§ Heb. Saw the king's face. Eſth. i. 14.

[s] Deut. xxviii. 36. Jer. xxix. 9. Amos. ii. 4.

v. 8—21. Near two months were ſpent in plundering the city, or given of God as a reprieve to the people, and then the decree went forth.

1. The temple, and all the palaces in Zion, are laid in aſhes, the walls diſmantled, and the whole city laid in ruins. The temple had now ſtood about four hundred and twenty years; and it is remarked by Joſephus, that on the ſame month, and the ſame day, the ſecond temple was deſtroyed by the Romans. Note, (1.) The temple is no longer precious in God's ſight, when the people are apoſtate. (2.) God's patience with ſinners by and by will end, and then judgment will overtake them to the uttermoſt.

2. The few veſſels of ſilver and gold which remained in the temple, were now carried away, with all the braſs, the pillars, the ſea, the baſes, and all the veſſels belonging to the ſervice, which for its vaſt quantity is ſaid to be without weight. Thus a period was put to their worſhip. They who had ſo abuſed God's houſe, and theſe conſecrated veſſels, deſerved to be deprived of them.

3. Many of the great men are ſeized and executed, as being the ſupporters of the rebellion, v. 18—20. and the reſt carried away captive, Jer. lii. 29. only the poor of the land were left to till the ground for their proud conquerors. Thus, after about 860 years poſſeſſion, the ſame iniquities caſt them out, as had been fatal to the Canaanites, on whom they had executed God's judgments. If Canaan be not ſpared, let not Iſrael think to eſcape.

22. ¶ And as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even [t] over them he made Gedaliah the ſon of Ahikam, the ſon of Shaphan, ruler. 23. And when all the captains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Iſhmael the ſon of Nethaniah, and Johanan the ſon of Careah, and Seraiah the ſon of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jaazaniah the ſon of a Maachathite, they, and their men. 24. And Gedaliah ſware to them, and to their men, and ſaid unto them, Fear not to be the ſervants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and ſerve the king of Babylon, and it ſhall be well with you. 25. But it came to paſs in the ſeventh month, that Iſhmael the ſon of Nethaniah, the ſon of Eliſhamah, of the ſeed † royal, came, and ten men with him, and [u] ſmote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah. 26. And all the people, both ſmall and great, and the captains of the armies aroſe, and [x] came to Egypt: for they were afraid of the Chaldees.

[t] Jer. xl. 5, &c.

† Heb. Of the kingdom Chap. xi. 1.

[u] Jer. xli. 2.

[x] Ibid. xliii. 7.

v. 22—26. The few who remained were put under the care of Gedaliah, a good man it ſhould ſeem, and one who, if it had been poſſible, might have yet preſerved them from utter ruin; but what the king of Babylon left unfiniſhed, their own madneſs and folly compleated. Iſhmael, one of the ſeed-royal, was among the number of thoſe who came to Gedaliah, under pretence of ſubmiſſion to his government: but envying his power, or to be revenged of the Chaldeans, who ſupported him, he treacherouſly fell upon him, ſlew him and his friends, whether Jews or Chaldeans; and then, in ſpite of Jeremiah's remonſtrance, all the people who remained under him as their leader, went down to Egypt, and mixed probably with that idolatrous people, (See Deut. xxviii. 68.) and thus their deſolations were accompliſhed.

27. ¶ [y] And it came to paſs in the ſeven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the ſeven and twentieth day of the month, that [z] Evil-merodach king of Babylon, in the year that he began to reign, [a] did lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of priſon. 28. And he ſpake † kindly to him, and ſet his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon, 29. And changed his priſon-garments: and he [b] did eat bread continually before him all the days of his life. 30. And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life.

[y] Jer. lii. 31, &c.

562.

[z] Prov. xxi. 1.

[a] Gen. xl. 13.

† Heb. Good things with him.

[b] 2 Sam. ix. 7.

v. 27—30. How hopeleſs, how deſperate appeared the caſe of Judah and her king! yet now in the midſt of their captivity there ariſeth up light in their darkneſs. Their captive king Jehoiachin is brought from his mournful priſon, and, on the acceſſion of Evil-merodach, Nebuchadnezzar's ſon, admitted into the royal favour, obtains apartments in the palace, a noble proviſion for himſelf and family, and pre-eminence over the other kings who were captives with him. This happened juſt in the midſt of the ſeventy years during which this captivity was to laſt, as a means to ſupport the hopes, and confirm the faith of the people in the fulfilment of the promiſes in due time. Note, (1.) Whilſt there is life, there is hope: we may not deſpair. God can turn the dungeon, when he pleaſes, into a palace. (2.) When our friend the great King ſhall ſit on the throne of his kingdom, then he ſhall looſe the bands of death, change the priſon garments of his ſaints, cloath them with immortality, and placing their throne next his own, make them ſit down with him, and reign in glory everlaſting.

THE

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the FIRST BOOK of CHRONICLES.

The penman of theſe books is ſuppoſed to be Ezra; they are called in the Hebrew, Words of days, journals, or annals; becauſe by Divine direction collected out of ſome public and authentic records. The collection was made after the captivity, and yet the language of the originals written before is ſometimes retained; as 2 Chron. v. 9. There it is unto this day, which muſt have been written before the deſtruction of the temple. The Septuagint calls it a book Παραλειπομένων of things left, or overlooked by the preceding hiſtorians, and ſeveral ſuch things there are in it. It is the rereward, the ſcattered hoſt of this ſacred camp, which gathers up what remained, that nothing might be loſt. In this firſt book we have, 1. A collection of ſacred genealogies, from Adam to David; and they are none of thoſe which the Apoſtle calls endleſs genealogies, but have their uſe and end in Chriſt, chap. i---ix. Divers little paſſages of hiſtory are here inſerted, which we had not before. 2. A repetition of the hiſtory of the tranſlation of the kingdom from Saul to David, and of the triumphs of David's reign, with large additions, chap. x---xxi. 3. An original account of the ſettlement David made of the eccleſiaſtical affairs, and the preparation he made for the building of the temple, chap. xxii---xxix.

Before Chriſt 4004.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter we have, 1. The deſcents from Adam to Noah, and his ſons, ver. 1—4. 2. The poſterity of Noah's ſons, ver. 5—23. 3. The deſcents from Shem to Abraham, ver. 24—28. 4. The poſterity of Iſhmael, and of Abraham's ſons by Keturah, ver. 29—33. 5. The poſterity of Eſau, ver. 35—54.

1. ADAM, [a] Sheth, [b] Enoſh, 2. [c] Kenan, Mahalaleel, Jered, 3. Henoch, Methuſhelah, Lamech, 4. [d] Noah, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. 5. ¶ [e] The ſons of Japheth; Gomer, and Magog, and Madai, and Javan, and Tubal, and Meſhech, and Tiras. 6. And the ſons of Gomer; Aſhchenaz, and † Riphath, and Togarmah. 7. And the ſons of Javan; Eliſha, and Tarſhiſh, Kittim, and ‡ Dodanim. 8. ¶ [f] The ſons of Ham; Cuſh, and Mizraim, Put, and Canaan. 9. And the ſons of Cuſh; Seba, and Havilah, and Sabta, and Raamah, and Sabtecha: and the ſons of Raamah; Sheba, and Dedan.
10. And Cuſh [g] begat Nimrod: he began to be mighty upon the earth. 11. And Miſraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuhim, 12. And Pathruſim, and Caſluhim (of whom came the Philiſtines) and [h] Caphtorim. 13. And [i] Canaan begat Zidon his firſt-born, and Heth, 14. The Jebuſite alſo, and the Amorite, and the Girgaſhite, 15. And the Hivite, and the Archite, and the Sinite, 16. And the Arvadite, and the Zemarite, and the Hamathite. 17. ¶ [k] The ſons of Shem; Elam, and Aſhur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram, and Uz, and Hul, and Gether, and ‖ Meſhech. 18. And Arphaxad begat Shelah, and Shelah begat Eber. 19. And unto Eber were born two ſons: the name of the one was § Peleg, (becauſe in his days the earth was divided) and his brother's name was Joktan. 20. And [l] Joktan begat Almodad, and Sheleph, and Hazarmaveth, and Jerah, 21. Hadoram alſo, and Uzal, and Diklah, 22. And Ebal, and Abimael, and Sheba, 23. and Ophir, and Havilah, and Jobab. All theſe were the ſons of Joktan. 24. ¶ [m]
Shem, Arphaxad, Shelah, 25. [n] Eber, Peleg, Reu, 26. Serug, Nahor, Terah, 27. [o] Abram, the ſame is Abraham.

[a] Gen. v. 1, 3.
[b] Ibid. iv. 26.
[c] Ibid. v. 9, &c.
[d] Ibid. x. 1.
[e] Ibid. 2, &c.
† Or Diphath, as ſome read it.
‡ Or Rodanim.
[f] Gen. x. 6.
[g] Ibid. 8.
[h] Deut. ii. 23.
[i] Gen. x. 15.

Before Chriſt 4004.

[k] Ibid. 2. & xi. 10.
‖ Or Maſh. Gen. x 23.
§ i. e. Diviſion.
[l] Gen. x. 26.
[m] Ibid. xi. 10. Luke iii. 34, &c.
[n] Gen. xi. 15.
[o] Ibid. xvii. 5.

v. 1—27. Adam begins, and Abraham cloſes this firſt genealogical line. The one, our common father after the fleſh; the other, the common father of the faithful. By the guilt of Adam's ſin, the univerſal curſe deſcended on man: by Abraham's promiſed ſeed, the curſe removes, and all who believe on him, are re-inſtated in the favour of God.

The line of Chriſt, for whoſe ſake the reſt are preſerved, reaches in the four firſt verſes as far as Shem; and from him, in the four laſt, to Abraham: the others are more lightly paſſed over. Japhet's poſterity originally peopled Europe; Ham, Africa, Canaan, and Philiſtia; Shem's poſterity, Aſia; and probably from the northern parts of Aſia, America received its firſt inhabitants. Note, As we are originally of one ſtock, it ſhould teach us to love all mankind as brethren.

28. The

Before Christ
4004.

[p] Gen. xxi. 2, 3.
[q] Ibid. xvi. 11, 15.
[r] Ibid. xxv. 13—17.
† Or Hader. Gen. xxv. 15.
[s] Ibid. 1, 2.

28. The ſons of Abraham; [p] Iſaac, and [q] Iſhmael. 29. ¶ Theſe are their generations: [r] The firſt-born of Iſhmael, Nebaioth; then Kedar, and Adbeel, and Mibſam, 30. Miſhma, and Dumah, Maſſa, † Hadad, and Tema, 31. Jetur, Naphiſh, and Kedemah. Theſe are the ſons of Iſhmael. 32. ¶ Now [s] the ſons of Keturah, Abraham's concubine: ſhe bare Zimran, and Jokſhan, and Medan, and Midian, and Iſhbak, and Shuah. And the ſons of Jokſhan; Sheba, and Dedan. 33. And the ſons of Midian; Ephah, and Epher, and Henoch, and Abida, and Eldaah. All theſe are the ſons of Keturah. 34. And [t] Abraham begat Iſaac. [u] The ſons of Iſaac; Eſau and Iſrael. 35. ¶ The ſons of [x] Eſau; Eliphaz, Reuel, and Jeuſh, and Jaalam, and Korah. 36. The ſons of Eliphaz; Teman, and Omar, ‡ Zephi, and Gatam, Kenaz, and Timna, and Amalek. 37. The ſons of Reuel; Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah. 38. And [y] the ſons of Seir; Lotan, and Shobal; and Zibeon, and Anah, and Diſhon, and Ezar, and Diſhan. 39. And the ſons of Lotan; Hori, and ‖ Homam: and Timna was Lotan's ſiſter. 40. The ſons of Shobal; Alian, and Manahath, and Ebal, Shephi, and Onam. And the ſons of Zibeon; Aiah, and Anah. 41. The ſons of Anah; Diſhon. And the ſons of Diſhon; § Amram, and Eſhban, and Ithran, and Cheran. 42. The ſons of Ezer; Bilhan, and Zavan, and † Jakan. The ſons of Diſhan; Uz, and Aran. 43. ¶ Now [y] theſe are the kings that reigned in the land of Edom, before any king reigned over the children of Iſrael; Bela the ſon of Beor: and the name of his city was Dinhabah. 44. And when Bela was dead, Jobab the ſon of Zerah of Bozrah, reigned in his ſtead. 45. And when Jobab was dead, Huſham of the land of the Temanites, reigned in his ſtead. 46. And when Huſham was dead, Hadad the ſon of Bedad (which ſmote Midian in the field of Moab) reigned in his ſtead: and the name of his city was Avith. 47. And when Hadad was dead, Samlah of Maſrekah reigned in his ſtead. 48. And when Samlah was dead, Shaul of Rehoboth by the river, reigned in his ſtead. 49. And when Shaul was dead, Baal-hanan the ſon of Achbor reigned in his ſtead. 50. And when Baal-hanan was dead, ‡ Hadad reigned in his ſtead: and the name of his city was Pai; and his wife's name was Mehetabel the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab. 51. ¶ Hadad died alſo. And the ‖ dukes of Edom were, duke Timna, duke † Aliah, duke Jetheth, 52. Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon, 53. Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar, 54. Duke Magdiel, duke Iram. Theſe are the dukes of Edom.

[t] Ibid. xxi. 2.
[u] Ibid. xxv. 25.
[x] Ibid. xxxvi. 9—27.
‡ Or Zepho. Gen. xxxvi. 11.
[y] Gen. xxxvi. 31—43.
‖ Or Heman. Gen. xxxvi. 22.
§ Or Hemdan. Gen. xxxvi. 26.
† Or Achan. Gen. xxxvi. 27.
‡ Or Hadar. Gen. xxxvi. 39.
1496.
‖ Princes. Job xxi. 8, 9. Pſal. xvii. 14. & xxxvii. 35.
† Or Alvah. Gen. xxxvi. 40.

v. 28—54. Before the ſacred hiſtorian paſſes on to the line of the Meſſiah, he ſpends a moment on the deſcendants of Abraham after the fleſh. Iſhmael, according to Gen. xvii. 20. becomes the father of twelve princes. Midian of the ſons of Keturah, is moſt taken notice of, becauſe with his deſcendants the people of God had eſpecial conteſts. Eſau's poſterity, and their dignity, are particularly remarked. Whilſt the children of promiſe were ſuffering in Egypt, the children of the rejected Eſau were reigning in Edom. The ſons of wickedneſs have often in this world the chief portion; God hath prepared a better country for the heirs of ſalvation.

CHAP. II.

Here is, 1. The names of the twelve ſons of Iſrael, ver. 1, 2. 2. An account of the tribe of Judah, down to Jeſſe, ver. 3—12. 3. The children of Jeſſe, ver. 13—17. 4. The poſterity of Hezron, not only through Ram, from whom David came, but Caleb, ver. 18—20. Segub, ver. 21—24. Jerahmeel, ver. 25—33. and ſo to ver. 41. and more by Caleb, ver. 42—49. with the family of Caleb the ſon of Hur, ver. 50—55.

[a] Gen. xxix. 32. & xxx. 5. & xxxv. 18, 22. & xlvi. 8, &c.
[b] Gen. xxxviii. 3. & xlvi. 12. Num. xxvi. 19.
[c] Gen. xxxviii. 2.
[d] Ibid. 7.
[e] Ibid. 29, 30. Mat. i. 3.

1. THESE are the ſons of Iſrael; [a] Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, Iſſachar, and Zebulun, 2. Dan, Joſeph, and Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Aſher. 3. ¶ The ſons of [b] Judah; Er, and Onan, and Shelah: which three were born unto him of the daughter of [c] Shua the Canaaniteſs. And [d] Er the firſt-born of Judah was evil in the ſight of the LORD, and he ſlew him. 4. And [e] Tamar his daughter in law bare him Pharez and Zerah. All the ſons of Judah were five. 5. The ſons of [f] Pharez; Hezron and Hamul. 6. And the ſons of Zerah; † Zimri, and Ethan, and Heman, and Calcol, and ‡ Dara: five of them in all. 7. And the ſons of [h] Carmi; Achar, the troubler of Iſrael, [i] who tranſgreſſed in the thing accurſed. 8. And the ſon of Ethan; Azariah. 9. The ſons of Hezron that were born unto him; Jerahmeel, and ‖ Ram, and † Chelubai. 10. And [k] Ram begat Amminadab; and Amminadab begat Nahſhon, [l] prince of the children of Judah; 11. And Nahſhon begat Salma, and Salma begat Boaz, 12. And Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jeſſe, 13. ¶ And [m] Jeſſe begat his firſt-born Eliab, and Abinadab the ſecond, and Shimma the third, 14. Nethaneel the fourth, Raddai the fifth, 15. Ozen the ſixth, David the ſeventh: 16. Whoſe ſiſters were Zeruiah, and Abigail. And [n] the ſons of Zeruiah; Abiſhai, and Joab, and Aſahel, three. 17. And [o] Abigail bare Amaſa: and the father of Amaſa was ‡ Jether the Iſhmeelite.

Before Christ
1476.

[f] Gen. xlvi. 12. Ruth iv. 18.
† Or Zabdi. Joſh. vii. 1.
‡ Or Darda.
[h] See Chap. iv. 1.
[i] Joſh. vi. 19. & vii. 1.
1471.
‖ Or Aram. Mat. i. 3, 4.
† Or Caleb. Ver. 18, 42.
[k] Ruth iv. 19. Mat. i. 4.
[l] Num. i. 7. & ii. 3.
[m] 1 Sam. xvi. 6, &c.
[n] 2 Sam. ii. 18.
[o] Ibid. xvii. 25.
‡ Or Ithra, an Iſraelite.

v. 1—17. We have here the illuſtrious family of Jacob; and of them, Judah, as moſt diſtinguiſhed, hath the pre-eminence in his genealogy. Of him we have the largeſt account, not only becauſe he was of the royal tribe, but for the Meſſiah's ſake, who ſprung from him. The names of many of his deſcendants, Er, Onan, Achan, and of Tamar, his inceſtuous daughter in law, are marked with infamy in ſcripture: yet to theſe was the friend of ſinners allied, and from her deſcended. Let the greateſt criminals not deſpair.

The family of Jeſſe is particularly taken notice of, for David's ſake, of whom as concerning the fleſh Chriſt came. He is called the ſeventh ſon of Jeſſe; though in Sam. xvi. 10. Jeſſe had eight, and he the youngeſt. Either one of them died before he came to the crown, or one of the eight might be by another wife.

18. ¶ And Caleb the ſon of Hezron begat children of Azubah his wife, and of Jerioth: her ſons are theſe; Jeſher, and Shobab, and Ardon. 19. And when Azubah was dead, Caleb took unto him [p] Ephrath, which bare him Hur. 20. And Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat [q] Bezaleel. 21. ¶ And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of [r] Machir, the father of Gilead, whom he married when he was threeſcore years old, and ſhe bare him Segub. 22. And Segub begat Jair, who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead. 23. And [s] he took Geſhur, and Aram, with the towns of Jair, from them, with Kenath and the towns thereof, even threeſcore cities: all theſe belonged to the ſons of Machir, the father of Gilead. 24. And after that Hezron was dead in Caleb-ephratah, then Abiah, Hezron's wife, bare him [t] Aſher the father of Tekoa. 25. ¶ And the ſons of Jerahmeel the firſt-born of Hezron were, Ram the firſt-born, and Bunah, and Oren, and Ozem, and Ahijah. 26. Jerahmeel had alſo another wife, whoſe name was Atarah, ſhe was the mother of Onam. 27. And the ſons of Ram the firſt-born of Jerahmeel were Maaz, and Jamin, and Eker. 28. And the ſons of Onam were Shammai and Jada. And the ſons of Shammai; Nadab, and Abiſhur. 29. And the name of the wife of Abiſhur was Abihail, and ſhe bare him Ahban, and Molid. 30. And the ſons of Nadab; Seled, and Appaim: but Seled died without children. 31. And the ſons of Appaim; Iſhi. And the ſons of Iſhi; Sheſhan. And [u] the children of Sheſhan; Ahlai. 32. And the ſons of Jada the brother of Shammai; Jether, and Jonathan: and Jether died without children. 33. And the ſons of Jonathan; Peleth, and Zaza. Theſe were the ſons of Jerahmeel. 34. ¶ Now Sheſhan had no ſons, but daughters: and Sheſhan had a ſervant, an Egyptian, whoſe name was Jarha. 35. And Sheſhan gave his daughter to Jarha his ſervant to wife, and ſhe bare him Attai. 36. And Attai begat Nathan, and Nathan begat [x] Zabad, 37. And Zabad begat Ephlal, and Ephlal begat Obed, 38. And Obed begat Jehu, and Jehu begat Azariah, 39. And Azariah begat Helez, and Helez begat Eleaſah, 40. And Eleaſah begat Siſamai, and Siſamai begat Shallum, 41. And Shallum begat Jekamiah, and Jekamiah begat Eliſhama. 42. ¶ Now the ſons of Caleb the brother of Jerahmeel, were Meſha his firſt-born, which was the father of Ziph: and the

[p] Ver. 50.
[q] Exod. xxxi. 2.
[r] Num. xxvii. 1.
[s] Ibid. xxxii. 41. Deut. iii. 14. Joſh. xiii. 30.
[t] Chap. iv. 5.
[u] See ver. 34, 35.
[x] Chap. xi. 41.

Before Christ 1400.

the ſons of Mareſhah the father of Hebron. 43. And the ſons of Hebron; Korah and Tappuah, and Rekem, and Shema. 44. And Shema begat Raham, the father of Jorkoam: and Rekem begat Shammai. 45. And the ſon of Shammai was Maon: and Maon was the father of Beth-zur. 46. And Ephah Caleb's concubine bare Haran, and Moza, and Gazez: and Haran begat Gazez.
47. And the ſons of Jahdai; Regem, and Jotham, and Geſhan, and Pelet, and Ephah, and Shaaph. 48. Maachah Caleb's concubine bare Sheber, and Tirhanah.
49. She bare alſo Shaaph the father of Madmannah, Sheva the father of Machbenah, and the father of Gibea:
and the daughter of Caleb was [y] Achſa. 50. ¶ Theſe were the ſons of Caleb the ſon of Hur, the firſt-born of † Ephratah; Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim, 51.
Salma the father of Beth-lehem, Hareph the father of Beth-gader. 52. And Shobal the father of Kirjath-jearim had ſons; ‡ Haroeh, and half of the Manahethites.
53. And the families of Kirjath-jearim; the Ithrites, and the Puhites, and the Shumathites, and the Miſhraites:
of them came the Zareathites, and the Eſhtaulites. 54.
The ſons of Salma; Beth-lehem, and the Netophathites, || Attaroth, the houſe of Joab, and half of the Manahethites, the Zorites. 55. And the families of the ſcribes which dwelt at Jabez; the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, and Suchathites. Theſe are [z] the Kenites that came of Hemath, the father of the houſe of [a] Rechab.

[y] Joſh. xv. 17.

† Or Ephrath. Ver. 19.

‡ Or Reaiah. Chap. iv. 2.

|| Or Atarites or crowns of the houſe of Joab.

[z] Judg. i. 16.

[a] Jer. xxxv. 2.

v. 18—55. Caleb is the ſame as Chelubai, v. 9. and Jenoth ſeems another name of his wife Azubah. A numerous poſterity deſcended from Hezron, who even in old age married, and left his wife with child. He is ſaid to die in Caleb-Ephratah, ſuppoſed to be Beth-lehem, where he reſided, it ſeems, whilſt his brethren dwelt in Goſhen.—Two of the perſons mentioned in this genealogy, died childleſs, v. 30, 32. and another had no ſon. God's gifts are ſovereign: let not thoſe murmur from whom the bleſſing of children is with-held, but ſeek to ſecure a name in heaven, better than that of ſons and daughters. He who had no ſons, married his daughter, though an heireſs, v. 34. to an Egyptian proſelyte his ſervant. Either it was his choice, from the excellent diſpoſitions he had ſeen in him, and he conſulted her happineſs rather than her greatneſs; or if the choice was her own, and he ſaw her affections placed on him, though her inferior, he was too indulgent to refuſe his conſent, where, except the mere want of worldly wealth, the perſon appeared deſerving her regard. Note, A good parent in the diſpoſal of his children, will conſult the happineſs of their lives, rather than mere money, or wretched nobility. Several of theſe genealogies end in the names of places, v. 19, 50, 51. where the deſcendants of ſuch an one were afterwards fixed. Some of them were families of ſcribes, among whom eſpecially learning flouriſhed—an honourable diſtinction. The Kenites are here mentioned, v. 55. not as deſcended from Salma, but as dwelling among his poſterity in the tribe of Judah, Judg. i. 16. Note, They who have the heart to join God's militant Iſrael, ſhall ſhare with them their portion in the land of glory.

CHAP. III.

We have here a full account of, 1. David's ſons, ver. 1—9. 2. His ſucceſſors in the throne as long as the kingdom continued, ver. 10—16. 3. The remains of his family in and after the captivity, ver. 17—24.

About 1055.

1. NOW [a] theſe were the ſons of David which were born unto him in Hebron; the firſt-born Amnon, of Ahinoam [b] the Jezreeliteſs: the ſecond † Daniel, of Abigail the Carmeliteſs: 2. The third, Abſalom the ſon of Maachah, the daughter of Talmai king of Geſhur:
the fourth, Adonijah the ſon of Haggith: 3.
The fifth, Shephatiah of Abital: the ſixth, Ithream by [c] Eglah his wife. Theſe ſix were born unto him in Hebron, and [d] there he reigned ſeven years and ſix months:
and [e] in Jeruſalem he reigned thirty and three years. 5.
And [f] theſe were born unto him in Jeruſalem; Shimea, and Shobab, and Nathan, and [g] Solomon, four, of Bathſhua the daughter of ‡ Ammiel: 6. Ibhar alſo, and || Eliſhama, and Eliphelet, 7. And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia, 8. And Eliſhama, and Eliada, and Eliphelet, nine, 9. Theſe were all the ſons of David, beſide the ſons of the concubines, and [h] Tamar their ſiſter.

[a] 2 Sam. iii. 2, &c.

[b] Joſh. xv. 56.

† Or Chileab. 2 Sam. iii. 3.

[c] Ibid. 5.

[d] Ibid. ii. 11.

[e] Ibid. v. 5.

1048.

[f] 2 Sam. v. 14. Chap. xiv. 4.

[g] 2 Sam. xii. 24.

‡ Or Eliam. 2 Sam. xi. 3.

|| Or Eliſhua. 2 Sam. v. 15.

[h] Ibid. xiii. 1.

v. 1—9. David's illuſtrious family conſiſts of ſixteen ſons and one daughter: four of them by Bathſhua, or Bathſheba; one of which, Solomon, was his ſucceſſor, and Nathan another, from whom St. Luke traces our Lord's pedigree, chap. iii. The ſons of his concubines are not reckoned.

Before Christ 1300.

10. ¶ And Solomon's ſon was [i] Rehoboam, † Abia his ſon, Aſa his ſon, Jehoſhaphat his ſon, 11. Joram his ſon, Ahaziah his ſon, Joaſh his ſon, 12. Amaziah his ſon, Azariah his ſon, Jotham his ſon, 13. Ahaz his ſon, Hezekiah his ſon, Manaſſeh his ſon, 14. Amon his ſon, Joſiah his ſon. 15. And the ſons of Joſiah were, the firſt-born Johanan, the ſecond Jehoiakim, the third Zedekiah, the fourth Shallum. 16. And the ſons of [k] Jehoiakim; Jeconiah his ſon, Zedekiah ‡ his ſon.
17. ¶ And the ſons of Jeconiah; Aſſir, || Salathiel [l] his ſon, 18. Malchiram alſo, and Pedaiah, and Shenazar, Jecamiah, Hoſhama, and Nedabiah. 19. And the ſons of Pedaiah were, Zerubbabel, and Shimei: and the ſons of Zerubbabel; Meſhullam, and Hananiah, and Shelomith their ſiſter: 20. And Haſhubah, and Ohel, and Berechiah, and Haſadiah, Juſhab-heſed, five. 21. And the ſons of Hananiah; Pelatiah, and Jeſaiah: the ſons of Rephaiah, the ſons of Arnan, the ſons of Obadiah, the ſons of Shechaniah. 22. And the ſons of Shechaniah; Shemaiah: and the ſons of Shemaiah; [m] Hattuſh, and Igeal, and Bariah, and Neariah, and Shaphat, ſix.
23. And the ſons of Neariah; Elioenai, and § Hezekiah, and Azrikam, three. 24. And the ſons of Elioenai were Hodaiah, and Eliaſhib, and Pelaiah, and Akkub, and Johanan, and Dalaiah, and Anani, ſeven.

[i] 1 Kings xi. 34. & xv. 6.

† Or Abijam. 1 Kings xv. 1.

[k] Mat. i. 11.

‡ He was his uncle. See 2 Kings xxiv. 17.

|| Heb. Shealtiel.

[l] Mat. i. 12.

[m] Ezra viii. 2.

§ Heb. Hiſkijahu.

v. 10—24. For ſeventeen deſcents the crown of Judah went from father to ſon, in a direct line. Juſt before the captivity, the lineal deſcent was interrupted. Jeconiah, Aſſir the captive, v. 17. (not a deſcendant of his, but Jeconiah himſelf) though he was written childleſs, reſpecting the ſucceſſion to the throne, yet ſeems to have ſeveral children in Babylon, v. 17, 18. Zerubbabel, here ſaid to be the ſon of Pedaiah, is elſewhere called the ſon Salathiel: either his grandſon, if Pedaiah was Salathiel's ſon, or if his brother, as it ſeems more probable, Pedaiah, as next of kin, might, on his dying childleſs, marry his widow, and raiſe up ſeed to his brother, which ſeems the beſt ſolution of the difficulty. There is an obſervable difference between the deſcendants of Zerubbabel here, and in St. Matthew, which may be accounted for by the ſame perſon frequently having more names than one.

CHAP. IV.

In this chapter we have, 1. A further account of the genealogies of Judah. The poſterity of Shobal the ſon of Hur, ver. 1—4. Of Aſhur, the poſthumous ſon of Hezron, who was mentioned, chap. ii. 24. with ſomething particular concerning Jabez, ver. 5—10. Of Chelub, and others, ver. 11—20. Of Shelah, ver. 21—23. 2. An account of the poſterity and cities of Simeon, their conqueſt of Gedor, and of the Amalekites in mount Seir, ver. 24—43.

1. THE ſons of Judah; [a] Pharez, Hezron, and † Carmi, and Hur, and Shobal. 2. And ‡ Reaiah the ſon of Shobal begat Jahath, and Jahath begat Ahumai, and Lahad. Theſe are the families of the Zorathites.
3. And theſe were of the father of Etam; Jezreel, and Iſhma, and Idbaſh: and the name of their ſiſter was Hazelelponi. 4. And Penuel the father of Gedor, and Ezer the father of Huſhah. Theſe are the ſons of [b] Hur, the firſt-born of Ephratah, the father of Beth-lehem.
5. ¶ And [c] Aſhur the father of Tekoa had two wives, Helah and Naarah. 6. And Naarah bare him Ahuzam, and Hepher, and Temeni, and Haahaſhtari.
Theſe were the ſons of Naarah. 7. And the ſons of Helah were, Zereth, and Jezoar, and Ethnan. 8. And Coz begat Anub, and Zobebah, and the families of Aharhel, the ſon of Harum. 9. ¶ And Jabez [d] was more honourable than his brethren: and his mother called his name || Jabez, ſaying, Becauſe I bare him with ſorrow.
10. And Jabez called on the God of Iſrael, ſaying, Oh that thou wouldſt bleſs me indeed, and enlarge my coaſt, and that thine hand might be with me, and that thou wouldſt keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me.
And [e] God granted him that which he requeſted.

[a] Gen. xxxviii. 29. & xlvi. 12.

† Or Chelubai. Chap. ii. 9. Or Caleb. Chap. ii. 18.

‡ Or Haroch. Chap. ii. 52.

[b] Chap. ii. 50.

[c] Ibid. 24.

[d] 1 Sam. ii. 30. Ver. 10.

|| i. e. Sorrow.

[e] Iſa. xlv. 19. Mat. vii. 7.

Before Christ 1300.

v. 1—10. Among the numerous deſcendants of Judah, in the line of Pharez, Jabez is eſpecially taken notice of, who ſeems to be of the family of Aharhel.

1. His name was given him from the pangs of travail his mother endured. A memorial of the mercy of God to herſelf, who reſtored her from the jaws of death; or to him, of the ſorrow and trouble to which man is born, as the ſparks fly upwards.

2. He was a great man, more honourable than his brethren; either for wealth, or courage, or wiſdom; or above all, as from his prayer it appears, for piety. Greatneſs when united with goodneſs, is doubly diſtinguiſhed.

3. His prayer and the anſwer is recorded to his honour: for nothing is more truly noble, than in prayer to have power with God as a prince, and to prevail. (1.) The prayer is addreſſed to the God of Iſrael, his covenant God. Note, They who draw near to God with faith, as intereſted in a covenant of grace, may expect with confidence they ſhall be heard and anſwered. (2.) The ſubſtance of it is, for God's bleſſing either temporal, the enlargement of his border in the expulſion of the Canaanites, the ſupport of God in his attempts againſt them, and preſervation from danger; or ſpiritual bleſſings, the enlargement of his heart in light and love, and every holy affection, the ſtrength of divine grace to ſubdue his corruptions; and protection from that greateſt of evils, ſin, and its preſent and eternal conſequences. Note, (1.) Every bleſſing, temporal and ſpiritual, comes from God, and ſhould he ſought in the way of prayer. (2.) They who wait upon God, will renew their ſtrength, and be kept from the power of the evil one, the evil heart, and the evil world. (3.) Unleſs God ſtrengthen us, we become a prey to the weakeſt of our enemies.

4. God granted his prayer. So ready is God to give to him that aſketh, and to ſupply the largeſt deſires of our ſouls.

11. ¶ And Chelub, the brother of Shuah, begat Mehir, which was the father of Eſhton. 12. And Eſhton begat Beth-rapha, and Paſeah, and Tehinnah the father of † Ir-nahaſh. Theſe are the men of Rechah. 13. And the ſons of Kenaz; [f] Othniel, and Seraiah: and the ſons of Othniel; Hathath. 14. And Meonothai begat Ophra: and Seraiah begat Joab, the father of [g] the valley of ‡ Charaſhim, for they were craftſmen, 15. And the ſons of Caleb the ſon of Jephunneh; Iru, Elah, and Naam: and the ſons of Elah § even Kenaz. 16. And the ſons of Jehaleleel; Ziph, and Ziphah, Tiria, and Aſareel. 17. And the ſons of Ezra were, Jether, and Mered, and Epher, and Jalon: and ſhe bare Miriam, and Shammai, and Iſhbah the father of Eſhtemoa. 18. And his wife † Jehudijah bare Jered the father of Gedor, and Heber the father of Socho, and Jekuthiel, the father of Zanoah. And theſe are the ſons of Bithiah, the daughter of Pharaoh, which Mered took. 19. And the ſons of his wife Hodiah, the ſiſter of Naham, the father of Keilah the Garmite, and Eſhtemoa the Maachathite. 20. And the ſons of Shimon were, Amnon, and Rinnah, Ben-hanan, and Tilon. And the ſons of Iſhi were, Zoheth, and Ben-zoheth. 21. ¶ The ſons of Shelah, [h] the ſon of Judah were, Er the father of Lecah, and Laadah the father of Mareſhah, and the families of the houſe of them that wrought fine linen of the houſe of Aſhbea, 22. And Jokim, and the men of Chozeba, and Joaſh, and Saraph, who had the dominion in Moab, and Jaſhubilehem. And theſe are ancient things. 23. Theſe were the potters, and thoſe that dwelt amongſt plants and hedges: there they dwelt with the king for his work.

† Or the city of Naaſh.
[f] Joſh. xv. 17.
[g] Neh. xi. 35.
‡ i.e. Craftſmen.
§ Or Uknaz.
† Or the Jeweſs.
[h] Gen. xxxviii. i. 5.

v. 11—23. We have here among the deſcendants of Judah, two families diſtinguiſhed, as being craftſmen and weavers. Theſe trades deſcended from father to ſon: one of theſe craftſmen was, it ſeems, nobly allied, v. 18. it was not then counted mean to be an ingenious mechanic. Another family had, during the days of Moab's ſubjection, been ſent thither as governors for David; but ſince thoſe antient conqueſts, times were now ſadly changed, and they were reduced to be potters and huſbandmen to the king of Babylon, and earned their bread with the ſweat of their brow. Note, This world is a changing ſcene: nothing ſubſtantial or enduring is to be expected in it. Let it quicken our diligence to ſecure a better, where our dignity will be ſecure without variableneſs, or ſhadow of turning.

24. ¶ The ſons of Simeon were, † Nemuel, and Jamin, ‡ Jarib, § Zerah, and Shaul: 25. Shallum his ſon, Mibſam his ſon, Miſhma his ſon. 26. And the ſons of Miſhma; Hamuel his ſon, Zacchur his ſon, Shimei his ſon. 27. And Shimei had ſixteen ſons and ſix daughters; but his brethren had not many children, neither did all their family multiply, like to the children of Judah. 28. And [i] they dwelt at Beer-ſheba, and Moladah, and Hazar-ſhual, 29. And at † Bilhah, and at Ezen, and at ‡ Tolad, 30. And at Bethuel, and at Hormah, and at Ziklag, 31. And at Beth-mercaboth, and § Hazar-ſuſim, and at Beth-birei, and at Shaaraim: Theſe were their cities, unto the reign of David. 32. And their villages were, † Etam, and Ain, Rimmon, and Tochen, and Aſhan, five cities. 33. And all their villages that were round about the ſame cities, unto ‡ Baak. Theſe were their habitations, § and their genealogy. 34. And Meſhobab, and Jamlech, and Joſhah, the ſon of Amaziah, 35. And Joel, and Jehu the ſon of Joſibiah, the ſon of Seraiah, the ſon of Aſiel, 36. And Elioneai, and Jaakobah, and Jeſhohaiah, and Aſaiah, and Adiel, and Jeſimiel, and Benaiah, 37. And Ziza the ſon of Shiphi, the ſon of Allon, the ſon of Jedaiah, the ſon of Shimri, the ſon of Shemaiah. 38. Theſe † mentioned by their names, were princes in their families: and the houſe of their fathers increaſed greatly. 39. ¶ And they went to the entrance of Gedor, even unto the eaſt-ſide of the valley, to ſeek paſture for their flocks. 40. And they found fat paſture and good, and the land was wide, and quiet, and peaceable: for they of Ham had dwelt there of old. 41. And theſe written by name, came in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and ſmote their tents, and the habitations that were found there, and deſtroyed them utterly unto this day, and dwelt in their rooms: becauſe there was paſture there for their flocks. 42. And ſome of them, even of the ſons of Simeon, five hundred men, went to [k] mount Seir, having for their captains Pelatiath, and Neariah, and Rephaiah, and Uzziel, the ſons of Iſhi. 43. And they ſmote [l] the reſt of the Amalekites that were eſcaped, and dwelt there unto this day.

† Or Jemuel. Gen. xlvi. 10. Exod. vi. 15. Num. xxvi. 12.
‡ Or Jachin.
§ Or Zohar.
Before Christ 1300.
[i] Joſh. xix. 2, &c.
† Or Balah. Joſh. xix. 3.
‡ Or Eltolad. Joſh. xix. 4.
§ Or Hazar-ſuſah. Joſh. xix. 5.
† Or Ether. Joſh. xix. 7.
‡ Baalath-beer. Joſh. xix. 8.
§ Or as they divided themſelves by nations among them.
† Heb. Came to names. Gen. vi. 4.
About 710.
[k] Deut. ii. 5.
[l] 1 Sam. xv. 8. & xxx. 17. 2 Sam. viii. 12.

v. 24—43. The tribe of Simeon follows that of Judah, as being reckoned with it, and having its lot in the midſt of Judah. Three things are remarked of them,

1. That in the reign of David, they either quitted, or were removed from thoſe cities mentioned, v. 28, 31.

2. That in the time of Hezekiah, they proſpered greatly; enlarged their borders by two expeditions; one againſt thoſe who inhabited the valley of Gedor, who, as being of the race of Ham, v. 40. were probably Philiſtines: the other againſt the Amalekites, who, after the general ſlaughters of Saul and David, fixed upon this ſpot of Edom for their abode, but were now utterly extirpated.

3. That they who were in Seir, were not carried captives with the other Iſraelites into Babylon, but continued there at the return of Ezra, the author of this book. Note, (1.) The wrath of God, like the deſtruction of Amalek, will, though long ſuſpended, overtake the ſinner. (2.) That may appear an afflictive ſeparation, which by and by proves a moſt providential deliverance.

CHAP. V.

This chapter gives us ſome account, 1. Of the two tribes and a half that were ſeated on the other ſide Jordan. (1.) Of Reuben, ver. 1—10. (2.) Of Gad, ver. 11—17. (3.) Of the half tribe of Manaſſeh, ver. 23, 24. 2. How they conquered the Hagarites, ver. 18—22. 3. How they were at length themſelves conquered by the king of Aſſyria, becauſe they had forſaken God. ver. 25, 26.

1. NOW the ſons of Reuben the firſt-born of Iſrael (for [a] he was the firſt-born, but foraſmuch as [b] he defiled his father's bed, [c] his birthright was given unto the ſons of Joſeph the ſon of Iſrael: and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. 2. For [d] Judah prevailed above his brethren, and [e] of him came the chief † ruler, but the birthright was Joſeph's). 3. The ſons I ſay, of [f] Reuben the firſt-born of Iſrael were Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi. 4. The ſons of Joel; Shemaiah his ſon, Gog his ſon, Shimei his ſon, 5. Micah his ſon, Reaia his ſon, Baal his ſon, 6. Beerah his ſon, whom ‡ Tilgath-pilnezer king of Aſſyria, carried away captive: he was prince of the Reubenites. 7. And his brethren by their families ([g] when the genealogy of their generations was reckoned) were the chief, Jeiel, and Zecha-

[a] Gen. xxix. 32.
[b] Ibid. xxxv. 22.
[c] Ibid. xlviii. 15, 22.
[d] Ibid. xlix. 8, 10. Pſ. lx. 7. & cviii. 8.
[e] Mic. v. 2. Mat. ii. 6.
† Or, prince. 1 Tim. vi. 15.
[f] Gen. xlvi. 9. Exod. vi. 14. Num. xxvi. 5.
‡ Or, Tiglath-pileſer. 2 Kings xv. 29. & xvi. 7.
[g] Ver. 17.

Zechariah, 8. And Bela, the ſon of Azaz, the ſon of § Shema, the ſon of Joel, who dwelt in [h] Aroer, even unto Nebo and Baal-meon. 9. And eaſtward he inhabited unto the entring in of the wilderneſs from the river Euphrates: becauſe their cattle were multiplied in [i] the land of Gilead. 10. And in the days of Saul they made war with [k] the Hagarites, who fell by their hand: and dwelt in their tents ‖ throughout all the eaſt-land of Gilead. 11. ¶ And the children of Gad dwelt over againſt them, in the land of [l] Baſhan unto Salcah: 12. Joel the chief, and Shapham the next, and Jaanai, and Shaphat in Baſhan. 13. And their brethren of the houſe of their fathers were Michael, Meſhullam, and Sheba, and Jorai, and Jachen, and Zia, and Heber, ſeven. 14. Theſe are the children of Abihail the ſon of Huri, the ſon of Jaroah, the ſon of Gilead, the ſon of Michael, the ſon of Jeſhiſhai, the ſon of Jahdo, the ſon of Buz; 15. Ahi the ſon of Abdiel the ſon of Guni, chief of the houſe of their fathers. 16. And they dwelt in Gilead in Baſhan, and in her towns, and in all the ſuburbs of [m] Sharon, upon their † borders. 17. All theſe were reckoned by genealogies in the days of [n] Jotham king of Judah, and in the days of [o] Jeroboam king of Iſrael.

v. 1—17. We have here the genealogy,

1. Of the Reubenites. For his ſin, Reuben was degraded from the pre-eminence and the birthright. Joſeph was ſubſtituted in his place, and, as firſt-born, poſſeſſed a double portion, his two ſons being each head of a tribe; and Judah had the ſceptre annexed to it, and the bleſſing of the Meſſiah. But though degraded, he is not diſinherited; he hath his lot with his brethren in Gilead; and when, by the increaſe of his flocks, he wanted enlargement, he diſpoſſeſſed the Hagarenes, and dwelt in their country. His line is brought down to Beerah, who was their chief, when carried captives into Aſſyria, from whence they never returned. Note, (1.) One falſe ſtep leaves often an indelible ſtain on the memory. (2.) They may not utterly be reprobate of God, who for a time may foully fall, and be ſeverely puniſhed in the fleſh.

2. Of the Gadites, who, with the Reubenites, had been numbered twice, under Jeroboam and Jotham.

18. ¶ The ſons of Reuben, and the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manaſſeh † of valiant men, men able to bear buckler and ſword, and to ſhoot with bow, and ſkilful in war, were four and forty thouſand and ſeven hundred and threeſcore, that went out to the war. 19. And they made war with the Hagarites, with [p] Jetur, and Nephiſh, and Nodab. 20. And [q] they were helped againſt them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them: for they [r] cried to God in the battle, and he was intreated of them, becauſe [s] they put their truſt in him. 21. And they ‡ took away their cattle; of their camels fifty thouſand, and of ſheep two hundred and fifty thouſand, and of aſſes two thouſand, and of men an hundred thouſand. 22. For there fell down many ſlain, becauſe [t] the war was of God. And they dwelt in their ſteads until [u] the captivity. 23. ¶ And the children of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh dwelt in the land: they increaſed from Baſhan unto Baal-hermon, and Senir, and unto mount Hermon. 24. And theſe were the heads of the houſe of their fathers, even Epher, and Iſhi, and Eliel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, § famous men, and heads of the houſe of their fathers. 25. ¶ And they tranſgreſſed againſt the God of their fathers, and [x] went a whoring after the gods of the people of the land, whom God deſtroyed before them. 26. And the God of Iſrael ſtirred up the ſpirit of [y] Pul king of Aſſyria, and the ſpirit of Tilgath-pilnezer king of Aſſyria, and he carried them away (even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh) and brought them unto [z] Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan, unto this day.

v. 18—26. The half tribe of Manaſſeh is here mentioned, who with Reuben and Gad living together, ſeparate from their brethren, by the river Jordan, were particularly aſſociated together, both in their victories, and their captivity.

1. With an army of 44,760 choſen men, they invaded the Hagarenes, and truſting more on the bleſſing of God, than on the ſword and ſpear, they prayed as they fought, and God gave them a diſtinguiſhed victory, with immenſe ſpoils, and enlarged their borders with the extenſive country of their vanquiſhed enemies; for the war was of God, undertaken at his command, and proſecuted under his bleſſing. Note, (1.) They who are men of war, ſhould be men of prayer. (2.) When we cry to God, then ſhall our ſpiritual enemies be put to flight. (3.) Every ſucceſs ſhould be gratefully aſcribed, not to the arm of fleſh, but to the help of God.

2. By the king of Aſſyria they were led away captive together, as the juſt puniſhment of their revolt from God's worſhip and ſervice, and their ungrateful returns of the divine mercy. God firſt ſtirred up one king to chaſtiſe them; and, when they were incorrigible, another to deſtroy them; and from their captivity they never returned. Note, Incorrigible offenders, who are cut off in their ſins, periſh in them for ever. When death hath ſeized the impenitent, there is no more hope.

Before Chriſt 1300.

§ Or, Shemaiah. Ver. 4.
[h] Joſh. xiii. 16.
[i] Ibid. xxii. 9.
[k] Gen. xxv. 12.
‖ Heb. Upon all the face of the eaſt.
[l] Joſh. xiii. 11, 24.
[m] Chap. xxvii. 29.
† Heb. Goings forth.
[n] 2 Kings xv. 5, 32.
[o] 2 Kings xiv. 16, 28.
† Heb. Sons of valour.
[p] Gen. xxv. 15. Chap. i. 31.
[q] Ver. 22. Pſ. xlvi. 1.
[r] Exod. xvii. 11. 1 Kings xxii. 32. 2 Chron. xiv. 11.
[s] 2 Kings xviii. 5. Pſ. xci. 2.
‡ Heb. Led captive.
[t] 2 Chron. xxxii. 8. Rom. viii. 31.
[u] 2 Kings xv. 29. & xvii. 6.
§ Heb. Men of names.
[x] 2 Kings xvii. 7.
[y] Ibid. xv. 19.
[z] Ibid. xvii. 6. & xviii. 11.

CHAP. VI.

We have an account in this chapter of the tribe of Levi. 1. Their pedigree, ver. 1—3. The line of the prieſts from Aaron to the captivity, ver. 4—15. and of ſome other of their families, ver. 16—30. 2. Their works; the work of the Levites, ver. 31—48. Of the prieſts, ver. 40—53. 3. The cities appointed them in the land of Canaan, ver. 54—81.

1. THE ſons of Levi; [a] Gerſhom, Kohath, and Merari. 2. And the ſons of Kohath; Amram. [b] Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel. 3. And the children of Amram; Aaron, and Moſes, and Miriam. The ſons alſo of Aaron; [c] Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar. 4. ¶ Eleazar begat Phinehas, Phinehas begat Abiſhua, 5. And Abiſhua begat Bukki, and Bukki begat Uzzi, 6. And Uzzi begat Zerahiah, and Zerahiah begat Meraioth, 7. Meraioth begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub, 8. And [d] Ahitub begat Zadok, and [e] Zadok begat Ahimaaz, 9. And Ahimaaz begat Azariah, and Azariah begat Johanan, 10. And Johanan begat Azariah (he it is [f] that executed the prieſt's office, in the † temple [g] that Solomon built in Jeruſalem) 11. And [h] Azariah begat Amariah, and Amariah begat Ahitub, 12. And Ahitub begat Zadok, and Zadok begat ‡ Shallum, 13. And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, 14. And Azariah begat [i] Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Jehozadak, 15. And Jehozadak went into captivity, [k] when the LORD carried away Judah and Jeruſalem by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar. 16. ¶ The ſons of Levi; [l] Gerſhom, Kohath, and Merari. 17. And theſe be the names of the ſons of Gerſhom; Libni, and Shimei. 18. And the ſons of Kohath were, Amram, and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel. 19. The ſons of Merari; Mahli, and Muſhi. And theſe are the families of the Levites according to their fathers. 20. Of Gerſhom; Libni his ſon, Jahath his ſon, [m] Zimmah his ſon, 21. § Joah his ſon, ‖ Iddo his ſon, Zerah his ſon, † Jeaterai his ſon. 22. The ſons of Kohath; ‡ Aminadab his ſon, Korah his ſon, Aſſir his ſon, 23. Elkanah his ſon, and Ebiaſaph his ſon, and Aſſir his ſon, 24. Tahath his ſon, § Uriel his ſon, ‖ Uzziah his ſon, and † Shaul his ſon. 25. And the ſons of Elkanah, [n] Amaſai, and Ahimoth. 26. As for Elkanah: the ſons of Elkanah; ‡ Zophai his ſon, and [o] Nahath his ſon, 27. [p] Eliab his ſon, Jeroham his ſon, Elkanah his ſon. 28. And the ſons of Samuel; the firſt-born § Vaſhni, and Abiah. 29. The ſons of Merari; Mahli, Libni his ſon, Shimei his ſon, Uzza his ſon, 30. Shimea his ſon, Haggiah his ſon, Aſaiah his ſon.

v. 1—30. As Judah had the pre-eminence, and Joſeph the birthright, Levi had the honour of the prieſthood. The three ſons of Levi, v. 1. have been often mentioned. Among the deſcendants of Kohath were Moſes, Aaron, and Miriam, whoſe names are great in God's book. Two of the ſons of Aaron, on whom the prieſthood was ſettled, ſuffered for their daring preſumption. In the others, the prieſtly line was maintained. The line of Eleazar to the captivity is drawn, v. 4—15. during which, the high-prieſthood in general continued in that family; though, in the time of the Judges, we find it for a while transferred to the deſcendants of Ithamar, till Solomon again reſtored Zadok. Azariah is mentioned as officiating in Solomon's temple, probably when Uzziah invaded the prieſt's office, whom he ſo nobly withſtood. They who have a zeal for God, fear not to teſtify againſt the ſins of the greateſt men, though at the hazard of priſon or death. Other families of Levites are recorded: the family of Libni, from Gerſhom, honoured with producing

Before Chriſt 1300.

[a] Gen. xlvi. 11. Exod. vi. 16. Num. xxvi. 57. Chap. xxiii. 6.
[b] See ver. 22.
[c] Lev. x. 1.
[d] 2 Sam. viii. 17.
[e] Ibid. xv. 27.
[f] 2 Chron. xxvi. 17.
† Heb. Houſe.
[g] 1 King vi. 2 Chron. iii.
[h] Ezra vii. 3
‡ Or, Meſhullam. Chap. ix. 11.
[i] Neh. xi. 11.
[k] 2 Kings xxv. 18.
[l] Exod. vi. 16.
[m] Ver. 42.
§ Or, Ethan, Ver. 42.
‖ Or, Adaiah. Ver. 41.
† Or, Ethni. Ver. 41.
‡ Or, Izhar. Ver. 2, 18.
§ Or, Zephaniah.
‖ Or, Azariah.
† Or, Joel. Ver 36.
[n] Ver. 35, 36.
‡ Or, Zuph. Ver. 35. 1 Sam. i. 1.
[o] Ver. 34. Toah.
[p] Ver. 34. Eliel.
§ Or, Joel. Ver. 33. 1 Sam. viii. 2.

Before Chriſt 1300.

producing Samuel ; and the family of Mahli, deſcended from Merari.

31. And theſe are they whom David ſet over the ſervice of ſong in the houſe of the LORD, after that[q] the ark had reſt. 32. And they miniſtred before the dwelling-place of the tabernacle of the congregation, with ſinging, until Solomon had built the houſe of the LORD in Jeruſalem : and then they waited on their office according to their order. 33. And theſe are they that † waited with their children : of the ſons of the Kohathites ; Heman a ſinger, the ſon of Joel, the ſon of Shemuel, 34. The ſon of Elkanah, the ſon of Jeroham, the ſon of Eliel, the ſon of ‡ Toah. 35. The ſon of § Zuph, the ſon of Elkanah, the ſon of Mahath, the ſon of Amaſai. 36. The ſon of Elkanah, the ſon of ‖ Joel, the ſon of † Azariah, the ſon of ‡ Zephaniah, 37. The ſon of Tahath, the ſon of Aſſir, the ſon of [r] Ebiaſaph, the ſon of Korah, 38. The ſon of Izhar, the ſon of Kohath, the ſon of Levi, the ſon of Iſrael. 39. And his brother Aſaph (who ſtood on his right hand) even Aſaph the ſon of Berechiah, the ſon of Shimea, 40. The ſon of Michael, the ſon of Baaſeiah, the ſon of Malchiah. 41. The ſon of [s] Ethni, the ſon of Zerah, the ſon of Adaiah, 42. The ſon of Ethan, the ſon of Zimmah, the ſon of Shimei, 43. The ſon of Jahath, the ſon of Gerſhom, the ſon of Levi. 44. And their brethren the ſons of Merari, ſtood on the left hand : § Ethan, the ſon of ‖ Kiſhi, the ſon of Abdi, the ſon of Malluch, 45. The ſon of Haſhabiah, the ſon of Amaziah, the ſon of Hilkiah, 46. The ſon of Amzi, the ſon of Bani, the ſon of Shamer, 47. The ſon of Mahli, the ſon of Muſhi, the ſon of Merari, the ſon of Levi. 48. Their brethren alſo the Levites were appointed unto all manner of ſervice of the tabernacle of the houſe of God.

v. 31—48. When David had brought up the ark from Obed-edom's houſe, he appointed a ſolemn choir of Levites, for the conſtant ſinging God's praiſes ; at the head of which were Heman, Aſaph, and Ethan, one out of each of the three great houſes of Levi, with their children, as many as were muſical at leaſt. The other Levites, according to the claſſes into which they were divided, did the reſt of the ſervice, kept the gates, prepared the ſacrifices, &c. Note, (1.) The work of praiſe in the great congregation ſhould be as much the miniſter's care, as the work of prayer. It is a ſure ſign of a decay of godlineſs, when there is a neglect of divine pſalmody. (2.) That is only to God a pleaſing ſervice of ſong, when in the heart, as well as the lips, we make melody to God. (3.) In God's houſe there muſt be no idlers ; the work is important, and calls for labour and diligence.

49. ¶ But Aaron and his ſons offered [t] upon the altar of the burnt-offering, and [u] on the altar of incenſe, and were appointed for all the work of the place moſt holy, and to make an atonement for Iſrael, according to all that Moſes the ſervant of God had commanded. 50. And theſe are the ſons of Aaron ; Eleazar his ſon, Phinehas his ſon, Abiſhua his ſon, 51. Bukki his ſon, Uzzi his ſon, Zerahiah his ſon, 52, Meraioth his ſon, Amariah his ſon, Ahitub his ſon, 53. Zadok his ſon, Ahimaaz his ſon.

v. 49—53. Sacrificing was peculiarly appropriated to the prieſts, the ſons of Aaron. They alone ſhed the blood of atonement, and burnt incenſe, and herein were typical of him, who, himſelf both prieſt and ſacrifice, by one oblation of himſelf once offered, hath obtained eternal redemption for us.

54. ¶ [x] Now theſe are their dwelling-places throughout their caſtles in their coaſts of the ſons of Aaron, of the families of the Kohathites : for theirs was the lot. 55. And [y] they gave them Hebron in the land of Judah, and the ſuburbs thereof round about it. 56. [z] But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, they gave to Caleb the ſon of Jephunneh. 57. And [a] to the ſons of Aaron they gave the cities of Judah, namely, Hebron the city of refuge, and Libnah, with her ſuburbs, and Jattir, and Eſhtemoah, with their ſuburbs, 58. And † Hilen with her ſuburbs, Debir with her ſuburbs, 59. And ‡ Aſhan with her ſuburbs, and Beth-ſhemeſh with her ſuburbs : 60. And out of the tribe of Benjamin : Geba with her ſuburbs, and § Alemeth with her ſuburbs, and Anathoth with her ſuburbs. All their cities throughout their families were thirteen cities. 61. And unto the ſons of Kohath, [b] which were left of the family of that tribe, were cities given out of the half-tribe, namely, out of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, [c] by lot, ten cities. 62. And to the ſons of Gerſhom throughout their families, out of the tribe of Iſſachar, and out of the tribe of Aſher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manaſſeh in Baſhan, thirteen cities. 63. Unto the ſons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, [d] twelve cities. 64. And the children of Iſrael gave to the Levites theſe cities, with their ſuburbs. 65. And they gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, theſe cities, which are called by their names. 66. And [e] the reſidue of the families of the ſons of Kohath had cities of their coaſts out of the tribe of Ephraim. 67. And [f] they gave unto them of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim, with her ſuburbs : they gave alſo Gezer with her ſuburbs, 68. [g] And Jokmeam with her ſuburbs, and Beth-horon with her ſuburbs, 69. And Aijalon with her ſuburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her ſuburbs : 70. And out of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh ; Aner with her ſuburbs, and Bileam with her ſuburbs, for the family of the remnant of the ſons of Kohath. 71. Unto the ſons of Gerſhom were given out of the family of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, Golan in Baſhan, with her ſuburbs, and Aſhtaroth with her ſuburbs : 72. And out of the tribe of Iſſachar ; Kedeſh with her ſuburbs, Daberath with her ſuburbs, 73. And Ramoth with her ſuburbs, and Anem with her ſuburbs : 74. And out of the tribe of Aſher ; Maſhal with her ſuburbs, and Abdon with her ſuburbs, 75. And Hukok with her ſuburbs, and Rehob with her ſuburbs : 76. And out of the tribe of Naphtali ; Kedeſh in Galilee with her ſuburbs, and Hammon with her ſuburbs, and Kirjathaim with her ſuburbs. 77. Unto the reſt of the children of Merari were given out of the tribe of Zebulun, Rimmon with her ſuburbs, Tabor with her ſuburbs : 78. And on the other ſide Jordan by Jericho, on the eaſt ſide of Jordan, were given them out of the tribe of Reuben, Bezer in the wilderneſs with her ſuburbs, and Jahzah with her ſuburbs, 79. Kedemoth alſo with her ſuburbs, and Mephaath with her ſuburbs : 80. And out of the tribe of Gad ; Ramoth in Gilead with her ſuburbs, and Mahanaim with her ſuburbs, 81. And Heſhbon with her ſuburbs, and Jazer with her ſuburbs.

v. 54—81. The Levites were diſtributed throughout the tribes, that the people might be better taught : taken off all worldly employments, that they might give themſelves up to the work of the miniſtry ; and liberally provided with cities to dwell in, and the tythes for their maintainance. The names of the cities are much the ſame as Joſh. xxi. except ſome trivial differences, which time may be ſuppoſed to have made. Note, (1.) They deſerve a liberal proviſion, who labour in the word and doctrine. (2.) They who neglect the Levites work, to eat the bread of the church in idleneſs, not only rob their brethren, but rob God alſo.

CHAP. VII.

In this chapter we have ſome account of the genealogies, 1. Of Iſſachar, ver. 1—5. 2. Of Benjamin, ver. 6—12. 3. Of Naphtali, ver. 13. 4. Of Manaſſeh, ver. 14—19. 5. Of Ephraim, ver. 20—29. 6. Of Aſher, ver. 30—40.

Before Chriſt 1280.

1. NOW the ſons of Iſſachar were [a] Tola, and † Puah, Jaſhub, and Shimron, four. 2. And the ſons of Tola ; Uzzi, and Rephaiah, and Jeriel, and Jahmai, and Jibſam, and Shemuel, heads of their father's houſe, to wit, of Tola : they were valiant men of might in their generations ; [b] whoſe number was in the days of David two and twenty thouſand and ſix hundred. 3. And the ſons of Uzzi ; Izrahiah : and the ſons of Izrahiah ; Michael, and Obadiah, and Joel, Iſhiah, five : all of them chief men. 4. And with them, by their generations, after the houſe of their fathers were bands of ſoldiers for war, ſix and thirty thouſand men : for they had

[q] Chap. xvi. 1.

† Heb. Stood.

‡ Or, Nahath.

§ Or, Zophai. Ver. 26.

‖ Or, Shaul.

† Or, Uzziah.

‡ Or, Uriel. Ver. 24.

[r] Exod. vi. 24.

[s] Ver. 21.

§ Or, Jeduthun. Chap. ix. 16. & xxv. 1, 3, 6.

‖ Or, Kuſhaia. Chap. xv. 17.

[t] Lev. i. 9.

[u] Exod. xxx. 7.

[x] Joſh. xxi.

1444.

[y] Joſh. xxi. 11.

[z] Joſh. xiv. 13. & xv. 13.

[a] Joſh. xxi. 13.

† Or, Holon. Joſh. xxi. 15.

‡ Or, Ain. Joſh. xxi. 16.

§ Or, Almon. Joſh. xxi. 18.

[b] Ver. 66.

[c] Joſh. xxi. 5.

[d] Joſh. xxi. 7. 34.

[e] Ver. 61.

[f] Joſh. xxi. 21.

[g] Joſh. xxi. 22—35. where many of theſe cities have other names.

[a] Gen. xlvi. 13. Num. xxvi. 23.

† Or, Phuvah, Job, &c.

[b] 2 Sam. xxiv. 1, 2. Chap. xxvii. 1.

had many wives and ſons. 5. And their brethren among all the families of Iſſachar were valiant men of might, reckoned in all by their genealogies fourſcore and ſeven thouſand. 6. ¶ The ſons of [c] Benjamin; Bela, and Becher, and Jediael, three. 7. And the ſons of Bela; Ezbon, and Uzzi, and Uzziel, and Jerimoth, and Iri, five; heads of the houſe of their fathers, mighty men of valour, and were reckoned by their genealogies twenty and two thouſand and thirty and four. 8. And the ſons of Becher; Zemira, and Joaſh, and Eliezer, and Elioenai, and Omri, and Jerimoth, and Abiah, and Anathoth, and Alameth. All theſe are the ſons of Becher. 9. And the number of them after their genealogy by their generations, heads of the houſe of their fathers, mighty men of valour, was twenty thouſand and two hundred. 10. The ſons alſo of Jediael; Bilhan: and the ſons of Bilhan; Jeuſh, and Benjamin, and Ehud, and Chenaanah, and Zethan, and Tharſhiſh, and Ahiſhahar. 11. All theſe the ſons of Jediael, by the heads of their fathers, mighty men of valour, were ſeventeen thouſand and two hundred ſoldiers, fit to go for war and battle. 12. ‡ Shuppim alſo, and Huppim, the children of § Ir, and Huſhim, the ſons of ‖ Aher. 13. ¶ The ſons of Naphtali; Jahziel, and Guni, and Jezer, and † Shallum the ſons of Bilhah. 14. ¶ The ſons of Manaſſeh; Aſhriel, whom ſhe bare: (but his concubine the Aramiteſs bare Machir the father of Gilead: 15. And Machir took to wife the ſiſter of Huppim, and Shuppim, whoſe ſiſter's name was Maachah) and the name of the ſecond was Zelophehad: and Zelophehad had daughters. 16. And Maachah the wife of Machir bare a ſon, and ſhe called his name Pereſh; and the name of his brother was Sheresh: and his ſons were Ulam, and Rakem. 17. And the ſons of Ulam; [d] Bedan. Theſe were the ſons of Gilead, the ſon of Machir, the ſon of Manaſſeh. 18. And his ſiſter Hammoleketh bare Iſhod, and ‡ Abiezer, and Mahalah. 19. And the ſons of Shemida were, Ahian, and Shechem, and Likhi, and Aniam.

[c] Gen. xlvi. 21. Num. xxvi. 38. Chap. viii. 1, &c.
‡ Muppim, Gen. xlvi. 21. and Shupham, Num. xxvi. 39.
§ Or, Iri, Ver. 7.
‖ Or, Ahiram, Num. xxvi. 38.
† Or, Shillem, Gen. xlvi. 24.
[d] 1 Sam. xii. 11.
‡ Or, Jeezer, Num. xxvi. 30.

v. 1—19. We have a ſhort account of three tribes and a half. 1. Of Iſſachar. They were very numerous, owing to the polygamy then allowed, v. 4. and very warlike, amounting, in the time of David, to 87,000 fighting men. 2. Of Benjamin. They were fewer, 59,430, if all of them were numbred, as they ſeem not to have been. 3. Of Naphtali. The fathers of the families only are mentioned. 4. Of the half tribe of Manaſſeh. The marriage of his ſon Aſhriel with a Syrian is noted; and of his ſon Gilead, who more wiſely choſe a partner of the daughters of his brother Benjamin. Bad examples, though of our parents, ſhould not be imitated. Bedan, one of the judges, probably the ſame as Jair, was of this tribe, v. 17.

20. ¶ And [e] the ſons of Ephraim; Shuthelah, and Bered his ſon, and Tahath his ſon, and Eledah his ſon, and Tahath his ſon, 21. ¶ And Zabad his ſon, and Shuthelah his ſon, and Ezer and Elead, whom the men of Gath that were born in that land ſlew, becauſe they came down to take away their cattle. 22. And Ephraim their father mourned many days, and [f] his brethren came to comfort him. 23. ¶ And when he went in to his wife, ſhe conceived and bare a ſon, and he called his name † Beriah, becauſe it went evil with his houſe. 24. (And his daughter was Sherah, who built Beth-horon the nether, and the upper, and Uzzen-ſherah.) 25. And Rephah was his ſon, alſo Reſheph, and Telah his ſon, and Tahan his ſon, 26. Laadan his ſon, Ammihud his ſon, Eliſhama his ſon, 27. ‡ Non his ſon, Jehoſhua his ſon. 28. ¶ And their poſſeſſions and habitations were Beth-el, and the towns thereof, and eaſtward § Naaran, and weſtward Gezer with the ‖ towns thereof, Shechem alſo and the towns thereof, unto Gaza and the towns thereof: 29. And by the borders of the children of [g] Manaſſeh, Beth-ſhean and her towns, Taanach and her towns, [h] Megiddo and her towns, Dor and her towns. In theſe dwelt the children of Joſeph the ſon of Iſrael.

[e] Num. xxvi. 35.
[f] Job ii. 11.
† i. e. In evil.
‡ Nun, Num. xiii. 8, 16.
§ Naarath, Joſh. xvi. 7.
‖ Heb. Daughters.
[g] Joſh. xvii. 7.
[h] Ibid. 11.

v. 20—29. Ephraim the moſt diſtinguiſhed of the tribes next to Judah, ſuffers more than any of them at firſt. We have here,

1. The breach made in his family. The men of Gath, who had gone up from Egypt to ſettle there, now made an irruption upon that part of Goſhen where Zabud (who ſeems to be a ſecond ſon of Ephraim after Shuthelah) and his ſons fed their cattle, in defending which they loſt their lives. Note, (1.) Providences ſeem often to contradict promiſes; (See Gen. xlviii. 19.) but the counſel of the Lord, that ſhall ſtand. (2.) We are nowhere ſafe from danger; as thoſe therefore who are in jeopardy every hour, let us be always ready for the ſtroke of death. (3.) A good cauſe is not always ſucceſsful. God now often permits the wicked to proſper; but a day is coming, when all God's diſpenſations will be cleared up to us.

2. Ephraim beheld with anguiſh the loſſes of his family, and was ready to lay down his grey hairs with ſorrow in the grave; but his brethren pour the friendly balm of conſolation into his wounded heart, and encourage him to truſt ſtill in God. Note, (1.) They who live long, only live to ſee their ſorrows multiplied, and to bury the choiceſt of their worldly comforts. (2.) To ſooth the griefs of the afflicted, is to act the part of a brother: an unfeeling heart cannot be in a true Iſraelite.

3. God gave him another ſon in his old age, whom, in remembrance of the evils which had happened to his family, he called Beriah, in evil; a fit name for every miſerable babe born in ſin, expoſed to an evil world, and liable to eternal ſuffering.

4. Sherah, a diſtant deſcendant of Beriah, not his immediate daughter, was famous in after-times for her buildings in Canaan, v. 24.

5. The genealogy cloſes with Joſhua, ſo famed in the book of God, who was the peculiar glory of this tribe. Note, A great good man reflects honour on all who are related to him.

30. ¶ [i] The ſons of Aſher; Imnah, and Iſuah, and Iſhuai, and Beriah, and Serah their ſiſter. 31. And the ſons of Beriah; Heber, and Malchiel, who is the father of Birzavith. 32. And Heber begat Japhlet, and † Shomer, and Hotham, and Shua their ſiſter. 33. And the ſons of Japhlet; Paſach, and Bimhal, and Aſhuath: theſe are the children of Japhlet. 34. And the ſons of Shamer; Ahi, and Rohgah, Jehubbah, and Aram. 35. And the ſons of his brother Helem, Zophah, and Imna, and Sheleſh, and Amal. 36. The ſons of Zophah; Suah, and Harnepher, and Shual, and Beri, and Imrah, 37. Bezer, and Hod, and Shamma, and Shilſha, and Ithran, and Beera. 38. And the ſons of Jether; Jephunneh, and Piſpah, and Ara. 39. And the ſons of Ulla; Arah, and Haniel, and Rezia. 40. All theſe were the children of Aſher, heads of their father's houſe, choice and mighty men of valour, chief of the princes. And the number throughout the genealogy of them, that were apt to the war, and to battle, was twenty and ſix thouſand men.

[i] Gen. xlvi. 17. Num. xxvi. 44.
† Shamer, Ver. 34.

v. 30—40. The tribe of Aſher is the laſt mentioned, Dan and Zebulun being wholly omitted. The heads of the chief families are taken notice of, and their ſelect militia, amounting to 26,000 in the time of David; perhaps fewer of them might be trained to war, than of the other tribes, their borders not being ſo much expoſed.

CHAP. VIII.

From Benjamin aroſe the firſt king; and they cleaving to Judah, returned with them after the captivity; therefore a more particular account is given, 1. Of the heads of that tribe, ver. 1—32. 2. Of the family of Saul, ver. 33—40.

1400.

1. NOW Benjamin begat [a] Bela his firſt-born, Aſhbel the ſecond, and Aharah the third, 2. Nohah the fourth, and Rapha the fifth. 3. And the ſons of Bela were † Addar, and Gera, and Abihud. 4. And Abiſhua, and Naaman, and Ahoah, 5. And Gera, and ‡ Shephuphan, and Huram. 6. And theſe are the ſons of Ehud: theſe are the heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Geba, and they removed them to [b] Manahath: 7. And Naaman, and Ahiah, and Gera, he removed them, and begat Uzza, and Ahihud. 8. And Shaharaim begat children in the country of Moab, after he had ſent them away; Huſhim and Baara were his wives. 9. And he begat of Hodeſh his wife, Jobab, and Zibia, and Meſha, and Malcham, 10. And Jeuz, and Shachia, and Mirma. Theſe were his ſons, heads of the fathers. 11. And of Huſhim he begat Abitub, and Elpaal. 12. The ſons of Elpaal; Eber, and Miſham, and Shamed, who built Ono, and Lod with the towns thereof: 13. Beriah alſo, and [c] Shema, who were heads of the fathers of the inhabitants of Aijalon, who drove away the inhabitants of Gath: 14. And Ahio, Shaſhak, and Jeremoth,

[a] Gen. xlvi. 21. Num. xxvi. 38. Chap. vii. 6.
† Ard. Gen. xlvi. 21.
‡ Shupham, Num. xxvi. 39. Chap. vii. 12.
[b] Chap. ii. 52.
[c] Ver. 21.

Before Chriſt 1400.

moth, 15. And Zebadiah, and Arad, and Ader, 16. And Michael, and Iſpah, and Joha, the ſons of Beriah; 17. And Zebediah, and Meſhullam, and Hezeki, and Heber. 18. Iſhmerai alſo, and Jezliah, and Jobab, the ſons of Elpaal; 19. And Jakim, and Zichri, and Zabdi, 20. And Elienai, and Zilthai, and Eliel, 21. And Adaiah, and Beraiah, and Shimrath, the ſons of § Shimhi; 22. And Iſhpan, and Heber, and Eliel, 23. And Abdon, and Zichri, and Hanan, 24. And Hananiah, and Elam, and Antothijah, 25. And Iphedeiah, and Penuel, the ſons of Shaſhak; 26. And Shamſherai, and Shehariah, and Athaliah, 27. And Jareſiah, and Eliah, and Zichri, the ſons of Jeroham. 28. Theſe were heads of the fathers, by their generations, chief men: Theſe dwelt in Jeruſalem. 29. And [d] at Gibeon dwelt the father of Gibeon, (whoſe wife's name was Maachah) 30. And his firſt-born ſon Abdon, and Zur, and Kiſh, and Baal, and Nadab, 31. And Gedor, and Ahio, and ‖ Zacher. 32. And Mikloth begat † Shimeah. And theſe alſo dwelt with their brethren in Jeruſalem over againſt them.

§ Shema, Ver. 13.

[d] Chap. ix. 5.

‖ Zechariah, Chap. ix. 37.

† Shimeam, Chap. ix. 38.

v. 1—32. The names of ſome of Benjamin's deſcendants vary ſomewhat from thoſe in Gen. xlvi. but what ſeems variety and intricacy to us, was, at the time when this was written, no doubt, well underſtood. In v. 8. after ſent them away, it may beſt be read, even Huſhim and Baara his wives, as divorced. The Ehud mentioned, v. 6. ſeems not to be the judge of that name. Thoſe who dwelt at Jeruſalem, v. 28—32. are twice mentioned, as an inducement to their poſterity to ſettle there after their return from Babylon, When we depart from the priſon of the body, happy will it be for thoſe who have a part in the new Jeruſalem.

33. ¶ And [e] Ner begat Kiſh, and Kiſh begat Saul, and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchiſhua, and † Abinadab, and ‡ Eſhbaal. 34. And the ſon of Jonathan was § Merib-baal; and Merib-baal begat [f] Micah. 35. And the ſons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and ‖ Tarea, and Ahaz. 36. And Ahaz begat † Jehoadah, and Jehoadah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza. 37. And Moza begat Binea: ‡ Rapha was his ſon, Eleaſah his ſon, Azel his ſon: 38. And Azel had ſix ſons, whoſe names are theſe, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Iſhmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. All theſe were the ſons of Azel. 39. And the ſons of Eſhek his brother were Ulam his firſt-born, Jehuſh the ſecond, and Eliphelet the third. 40. And the ſons of Ulam were mighty men of valour, archers, and had many ſons, and ſons ſons an hundred and fifty. All theſe are the ſons of Benjamin.

[e] 1 Sam. xiv. 51.

† Iſhui, 1 Sam. xiv. 49.

‡ Iſh-boſheth, 2 Sam. ii. 8.

§ Mephiboſheth, 2 Sam. iv. 4. & ix. 6, 10.

[f] 2 Sam. ix. 12.

‖ Tahrea, Chap. ix. 41.

† Jarah, Chap. ix. 42.

‡ Rephaiah, Chap. ix. 43.

v. 33—40. The family of Saul is here taken notice of. Several ſons he had, but the line of Jonathan only is continued for about ten generations to Ulam, whoſe family was much increaſed, and remarkable for their valour, and uſe of the bow or ſling. The name of a valiant ſoldier is great, but that of a ſaint of God greater.

CHAP. IX.

On their return from the captivity we have an account who dwelt at Jeruſalem, 1. The Iſraelites, ver. 2–9. 2. The prieſts, ver. 10—13. 3. The Levites, and other Nethinims, ver. 14—26. 4. Here is the particular charge of ſome of the prieſts and Levites, ver. 27—34. 5. A repetition of the genealogy of king Saul, ver. 35—44.

1. SO [a] all Iſrael were reckoned by genealogies, and behold, they were written in the book of the kings of Iſrael and Judah, who were carried away to Babylon for their tranſgreſſion. 2. ¶ [b] Now the firſt inhabitants that dwelt in their poſſeſſions in their cities were, the Iſraelites, the prieſts, Levites, and [c] the Nethinims. 3. And in [d] Jeruſalem dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim, and Manaſſeh: 4. Uthai the ſon of Ammihud, the ſon of Omri, the ſon of Imri, the ſon of Bani, of the children of Pharez the ſon of Judah. 5. And of the Shilonites; Aſaiah the firſt-born, and his ſons. 6. And of the ſons of Zera; Jeuel, and their † brethren, ſix hundred and ninety. 7. And of the ſons of Benjamin: Sallu the ſon of Meſhullam, the ſon of Hodaviah, the ſon of Haſenuah, 8. And Ibneiah the ſon of Jeroham, and Elah the ſon of Uzzi, the ſon of Michri, and Meſhullam the ſon of Shephatiah, the ſon of Reuel, the ſon of Ibnijah, 9. And their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and ſix. All theſe men were chief of the fathers in the houſe of their fathers.

[a] Ezra ii. 59.

[b] Ibid. 70. Neh. vii. 73.

[c] Ezra ii. 43. & viii. 20.

[d] Neh. xi. 1.

† i. e. Kinſmen. Gen. xiii. 8. Ver. 9.

Before Chriſt 1200.

10. ¶ [e] And of the prieſts; Jedaiah, and Jehoiarib, and Jachin, 11. And ‡ Azariah the ſon of Hilkiah, the ſon of Meſhullam, the ſon of Zadok, the ſon of Meraioth, the ſon of Ahitub, the ruler of the houſe of God. 12. And Adaiah the ſon of Jeroham, the ſon of Paſhur, the ſon of Malchijah, and Maaſiai the ſon of Adiel, the ſon of Jahzerah, the ſon of Meſhullam, the ſon of Meſhillemith, the ſon of Immer, 13. And their brethren, heads of the houſe of their fathers, a thouſand and ſeven hundred and threeſcore; § very able men for the work of the ſervice of the houſe of God.

[e] Neh. xi. 10, &c.

‡ Seraiah, Neh. xi. 11.

§ Heb. Mighty men of valour.

v. 1—13. Iſrael never more returned from Aſſyria: there all their genealogies periſhed, ſo that the writer could carry them no farther: but Judah (as it ſhould be rendered) being returned again, their families were preſerved, and the places where their anceſtors reſided, particularly thoſe who were fixed at Jeruſalem. It is remarked, they were carried away for their tranſgreſſion, a warning to them now when they are returned, to beware of their fathers ſins. Many of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, either at the captivity of Iſrael, or when Judah was in Babylon, joined them, and returned with them to Jeruſalem. It is a mercy if afflictions drive us together, and, forgetting former variance, we unite in the work and ſervice of God, Ephraim no more vexing Judah, or Judah Ephraim. The prieſts appear to have the greateſt zeal for returning to Jeruſalem: more of them came, than of Judah and Benjamin put together, v. 13. and what was their peculiar commendation, they were as able as willing for the ſervice of God. It is an unſpeakable mercy, when abilities and zeal unite in a miniſter of the ſanctuary: under ſuch rulers in the houſe of God, the cauſe may be expected to proſper.

14. And of the Levites; Shemaiah the ſon of Haſhub, the ſon of Azrikam, the ſon of Haſhabiah, of the ſons of Merari, 15. And Bakbakhar, Hereſh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the ſon of Micah, the ſon of Zichri, the ſon of Aſaph, 16. And Obadiah the ſon of Shemaiah, the ſon of Galal, the ſon of Jeduthun, and Berechiah the ſon of Aſa, the ſon of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the Netophathites. 17. And the porters were Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: Shallum was the chief. 18. (Who hitherto waited in the king's gate eaſtward) They were porters in the companies of the children of Levi. 19. And Shallum the ſon of Kore, the ſon of Ebiaſaph, the ſon of Korah, and his brethren: (of the houſe of his father) the Korahites were over the work of the ſervice, keepers of the † gates of the tabernacle: and their fathers being over the hoſt of the LORD, were keepers of the entry. 20. And [f] Phineas the ſon of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time paſt, and the LORD was with him. 21. And Zechariah the ſon of Meſhelemiah, was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation. 22. All theſe which were choſen to be porters of the gates, were two hundred and twelve. Theſe were reckoned by their genealogy in their villages: whom [g] David and Samuel [h] the ſeer ‡ did ordain in their ſet office. 23. So they and their children had the overſight of the gates of the houſe of the LORD, namely the houſe of the tabernacle, by wards. 24. In four quarters were the porters, toward the eaſt, weſt, north, and ſouth. 25. And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come [i] after ſeven days from time to time with them. 26. For theſe Levites, the four chief porters, were in their § ſet office, and were over the ‖ chambers and treaſuries of the houſe of God. 27. ¶ And they lodged round about the houſe of God, [k] becauſe the charge was upon them, and the opening thereof every morning pertained to them. 28. And certain of them had the charge of the miniſtring veſſels, that they ſhould bring them in and out by tale. 29. Some of them alſo were appointed to overſee the veſſels, and all the inſtruments of the ſanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and the oil, and the frankincenſe, and the ſpices. 30. And ſome of the ſons of the prieſts [l] made the ointment of the ſpices. 31. And Mattathiah, one of the Levites (who was the firſt-born of Shallum the Korahite) had the ſet office over [m] the things † Heb. Threſholds.

[f] Num. xxv. 6.

[g] Chap. xxvi. 1, 2.

[h] 1 Sam. ix. 9.

‡ Heb. Founded in their truſt.

[i] 2 Kings xi. 5.

§ Or, Truſt, Ver. 31.

‖ Or, Store-houſes.

[k] Rom. xii. 7.

[l] Exod. xxx. 23.

[m] Lev. ii. 5. & vi. 21.

Before Chriſt 1200.

that were made † in the pans. 32. And other of their brethren of the ſons of the Kohathites [n] were over the ſhew-bread to prepare it every ſabbath. 33. And theſe are [o] the ſingers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers, were free: for ‡ they were employed in that work day and night. 34. Theſe chief fathers of the Levites were chief throughout their generations; theſe dwelt at Jeruſalem.

† Or, on flat plates.
[n] Lev. xxiv. 8.
[o] Chap. vi. 31. & xxv. 1.
‡ Heb. Upon them was, &c.

v. 14—34. The Levites imitated their brethren the prieſts in their zeal for the work of the Lord. Long had they been deſtitute of temple, altar, and ſacrifice; immediately therefore on their return, till a temple can be built, a tabernacle is reared, v. 19. and the ſervice commences. According to their diſtribution in the days of David, which he had planned with Samuel the prophet, they were divided into courſes, two hundred and twelve by turns ſucceeding to keep the charge of the tabernacle. Thoſe who were in waiting, had their lodging round about the houſe of God, that they might be at hand for their work. Every one had his ſeveral duty, v. 28—32. and ſome, diſcharged from all other employment, were conſtantly, or at ſtated hours by turns, engaged day and night in ſinging God's praiſes. Note, (1.) Order in the houſe of God conduces greatly to the profitableneſs of the ſervice. (2.) They who begin with God, may hope to proſper in their undertakings. (3.) Reſidence, labour and zeal, are indiſpenſibly required from every miniſter of God.

35. ¶ And [p] in Gibeon dwelt the father of Gibeon, Jehiel, whoſe wife's name was Maachah: 36. And his firſt-born ſon Abdon, then Zur, and Kiſh, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37. And Gedor, and Ahio, and Zechariah, and Mikloth, 38. And Mikloth begat Shimeam: and they alſo dwelt with their brethren at Jeruſalem, over againſt their brethren. 39. And [q] Ner begat Kiſh, and Kiſh begat Saul, and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchiſhua, and Abinadab, and Eſh-baal. 40. And the ſon of Jonathan was Merib-baal: and Merib-baal begat Micah. 41. And the ſons of Micah were Pithon, and Melech, Tahrea, [r] and Ahaz. 42. And Ahaz begat Jarah, and Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza, 43. And Moza begat Binea; and Rephaiah his ſon, Eleaſah his ſon, Azel his ſon. 44. And Azel had ſix ſons, whoſe names are theſe, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Iſhmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. Theſe were the ſons of Azel.

[p] Chap. viii. 29.
[q] Chap. viii. 33.
[r] Chap. viii. 35.

v. 35—44. Theſe verſes are a repetition of chap. viii. 29—38. to introduce the hiſtory of Saul in the following chapter.

CHAP. X.

In this chapter we have, 1. The Iſraelites routed by the Philiſtines, and Saul ſlain, ver. 1—7. 2. The Philiſtines triumph thereupon, ver. 8—10. 3. The reſpect which the men of Jabeſh-gilead ſhewed to the royal corps, ver. 11, 12. 4. The reaſon of Saul's rejection, ver. 13, 14.

1. [a] NOW the Philiſtines fought againſt Iſrael, and the men of Iſrael fled from before the Philiſtines, and fell down † ſlain in mount Gilboa. 2. And the Philiſtines followed hard after Saul, and after his ſons, and the Philiſtines ſlew [b] Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Malchiſhua, the ſons of Saul. 3. And the battle went ſore againſt Saul, and the archers [c] hit him, and he was wounded of the archers. 4. Then ſaid Saul to his armour-bearer, Draw thy ſword, and [d] thruſt me through therewith; leſt theſe uncircumciſed come and abuſe me. But his armour-bearer would not, for [e] he was ſore afraid. So Saul took a ſword, and fell upon it. 5. And when his armour-bearer ſaw that Saul was dead, he fell likewiſe on the ſword, and died. 6. So Saul died, and his three ſons, and [f] all his houſe died together. 7. And when all the men of Iſrael that were in the valley, ſaw that they fled, and that Saul and his ſons were dead; then they forſook their cities, and fled: and the Philiſtines came and dwelt in them.

[a] 1 Sam. xxxi. 1, &c.
† Heb. Thruſt through.
[b] Eccleſ. ix. 1, 2.
[c] Amos ii. 14.
[d] Judg. ix. 54.
[e] 1 Sam. xxvi. 9.
[f] 2 Sam. iii. 1.

v. 1—7. For this account of Saul's death, ſee 1 Sam. xxxi. 1. It was a juſt judgment on Saul; and, no doubt, his bloody houſe following his ill example, deſerved to fall with him. Thus a way was made for David to the crown, moſt of his competitors being removed. We pity Jonathan, that lovely name, fallen among the ſlain; but all is wiſe and good which God doth, though we are ſhort-ſighted, and ſee not always the reaſons of his procedure.

Before Chriſt 1056.

8. ¶ And it came to paſs on the morrow, when the Philiſtines came to ſtrip the ſlain, that they found Saul and his ſons fallen in mount Gilboa. 9. And when they had ſtripped him, they took his head, and his armour, and ſent into the land of the Philiſtines round about, [g] to carry tidings unto their idols, and to the people. 10. And they put his armour in the houſe of their gods, and faſtened his head in [h] the temple of Dagon. 11. ¶ And when all [i] Jabeſh-gilead heard all that the Philiſtines had done to Saul; 12. They aroſe, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his ſons, and brought them to Jabeſh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabeſh, and [k] faſted ſeven days. 13. ¶ So Saul died for his tranſgreſſion which he committed againſt the LORD, even [l] againſt the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and alſo for [m] aſking counſel of one that had a familiar ſpirit, to inquire of it; 14. And [n] inquired not of the LORD: [o] therefore he ſlew him, and [p] turned the kingdom unto David the ſon of Jeſſe.

[g] Judg. xvi. 24.
[h] 1 Sam. v. 2.
[i] Ibid. xi. 3, 9, 11.
[k] Gen. l. 10.
[l] 1 Sam. xiii. 13. & xv. 23.
[m] Ibid. xxviii. 7.
[n] Ibid. 6.
[o] 1 Kings xii. 15.
[p] 1 Sam. xiii. 14. & xv. 28.

v. 8—14. The indignity offered the bodies of Saul and his ſons, and the bold attempt of the men of Jabeſh-gilead, were before obſerved; and his diſobedience to God, in the caſe of Amalek, and his conſulting a familiar ſpirit, are here mentioned as the cauſes of his fall. Note, (1.) God will viſit for ſin, and the higheſt are not above his arm. (2.) They who abuſed their power when alive, deſerve to be ſtigmatized when dead, for a warning to others. (3.) Ruin muſt be near, when men, like Saul, turn away from God, and abandon themſelves to the devil.

CHAP. XI.

In this chapter is repeated, 1. David's elevation to the throne, ver. 1—3. 2. His conqueſt of the caſtle of Zion, ver. 4—9. 3. A catalogue of his worthies, and the great men of his kingdom, ver. 10—47.

1048.

1. THEN [a] all Iſrael gathered themſelves to David unto Hebron, ſaying, Behold, [b] we are thy bone and thy fleſh. 2. And moreover in time paſt, even when Saul was king, [c] thou waſt he that leddeſt out, and broughteſt in Iſrael: and [d] the LORD thy God ſaid unto thee, [e] Thou ſhalt feed my people in Iſrael, and thou ſhalt be ruler over my people Iſrael. 3. Therefore came all the elders of Iſrael to the king to Hebron, and [f] David made a covenant with them in Hebron, [g] before the LORD, and [h] they anointed David king over Iſrael, [i] according to the word of the LORD, by Samuel. 4. ¶ And [k] David and all Iſrael [l] went to Jeruſalem which is Jebus, where the Jebuſites were, the inhabitants of the land. 5. And the inhabitants of Jebus ſaid to David, Thou ſhalt not come hither. Nevertheleſs, David took the caſtle of Zion, which is the city of David. 6. And David ſaid, Whoſoever ſmiteth the Jebuſites firſt, ſhall be chief and captain. So Joab the ſon of Zeruiah went firſt up, and was chief. 7. And David dwelt in the caſtle, therefore they called it, The city of David. 8. And he built the city round about, even from Millo round about: and Joab repaired the reſt of the city. 9. So David waxed greater and greater: [m] for the LORD of hoſts was with him.

[a] 2 Sam. v. 1.
[b] Deut. xvii. 15. Eph. v. 30.
[c] 1 Sam. xviii. 13.
[d] Ibid. xvi. 12.
[e] Pſ. lxxviii. 71. Iſa. xl. 11. John x. 11.
[f] 2 Kings xi. 17.
[g] Judg. xi. 11.
[h] 2 Sam. ii. 4. Pſ. ii. 6.
[i] 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 12, 13.
[k] 2 Sam. v. 6.
[l] Judg. i. 8. & xix. 11.
[m] Rom. viii. 31.

v. 1—9. David, on Saul's death, was ſoon received in Judah, and reigned in Hebron, though he was not, till ſeven years afterwards, acknowledged as king by the other tribes. But God's counſel muſt ſtand: the time came, when Iſrael bowed before him, ſwore allegiance, and received the reciprocal aſſurance of an equitable and righteous government. The obligation between prince and people is mutual; the one as much bound to rule with juſtice, as the other to obey with chearfulneſs. When they were gathered together on this ſolemn occaſion, David led them againſt the fortreſs of Jebus, where he intended to fix his royal reſidence; and though ſtrong by art and nature, yet, animated by the proſpect of preferment, Joab entered the place. Shall the proſpect of a poſt of honour thus engage the ſoldier to hazard his life; and ſhall we heſitate at any difficulties in our ſpiritual warfare, where we are aſſured of ſucceſs, and animated by promiſes of eternal glory?

10. ¶ [n] Theſe alſo are the chief of the mighty men which David had, who † ſtrengthened themſelves with him in his kingdom, and with all Iſrael, to make him king, [o] according to the word of the LORD, concerning Iſrael. 11. And this is the number of the mighty men whom David had; Jaſhobeam an Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lift up his ſpear againſt three hundred ſlain by him at one time. 12. [p] And after him was Eleazar the ſon of Dodo the Ahohite, who was one of the three mighties. 13. He was with David at ‡ Paſ-dammim, and there the Philiſtines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley, and [p] the people fled from before the Philiſtines. 14. And they ſet themſelves in the midſt of that parcel, and delivered it, and ſlew the Philiſtines; and [q] the LORD ſaved them by a great deliverance. 15. ¶ Now three of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David, into [r] the cave of Adullam, and the hoſt of the Philiſtines encamped in the valley of Rephaim. 16. And David was then in the hold, and the Philiſtines gariſon was then at Beth-lehem. 17. And David longed, and ſaid, O that one would give me drink of [s] the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate! 18. And the three [t] brake through the hoſt of the Philiſtines, and [u] drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the LORD, 19. And ſaid, My God forbid it me, that I ſhould do this thing: ſhall I drink [x] the blood of theſe men that have put their lives in jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it: therefore he would not drink it. Theſe things did theſe three mightieſt. 20. ¶ And Abiſhai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his ſpear [y] againſt three hundred, he ſlew them, and had a name among the three. 21. Of the three, he was more honourable than the two, for he was their captain; howbeit, [z] he attained not unto the firſt three. 22. Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, the ſon of a valiant man of Kabzeel, § who had done many acts, [a] he ſlew two lion-like men of Moab; alſo he went down and ſlew a lion in a pit in a ſnowy day. 23. And he ſlew an Egyptian, a man of great ſtature, five cubits high, and in the Egyptian's hand was a ſpear like a weaver's beam, and he went down to him with a ſtaff, and pluckt the ſpear out of the Egytian's hand, and [b] ſlew him with his own ſpear. 24. Theſe things did Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada, and had the name among the three mighties. 25. Behold, he was honourable among the thirty, but attained not to the firſt three: and David ſet him over his ‖ guard. 26. ¶ Alſo the valiant men of the armies were [c] Aſah-el the brother of Joab, Elhanan the ſon of Dodo, of Beth-lehem, 27. † Shammoth the Harorite, Helez the Pelonite, 28. Ira the ſon of Ikkeſh the Tekoite, Abiezer the Antothite, 29. ‡ Sibbecai, the Huſhathite, § Ilai the Ahohite, 30. Maharai the Netophathite, ‖ Heled the ſon of Baanah the Netophathite, 31. Ithai the ſon of Ribai of Gibeah, that pertained to the children of Benjamin, Benaiah the Pirathonite, 32. † Hurai of the brooks of Gaaſh, ‡ Abiel the Arbathite, 33. Azmaveth the Baharumite, Eliahba the Shaalbonite. 34. The ſons of § Haſhem the Gizonite, Jonathan the ſon of Shage the Hararite, 35. Ahiam the ſon of Sacar the Hararite; ‖ Eliphal the ſon of † Ur, 36. Hepher the Mecherathite, Ahijah the Pelonite, 37. Hezro the Carmelite, ‡ Naarai the ſon of Ezbai, 38. Joel the brother of Nathan, Mibhar the ſon of Haggeri, 39. Zelek the Ammonite, Naharai the Berothite, the armour-bearer of Joab the ſon of Zeruiah. 40. Ira the Ithrite, Gareb the Ithrite, 41. Uriah the Hittite, Zabad the ſon of Ahlai, 42. Adina the ſon of Shiza the Reubenite, a captain of the Reubenites, and thirty with him, 43. Hanan the ſon of Maachah, and Jehoſhaphat the Mithnite, 44. Uzzia the Aſhterathite, Shama and Jehiel the ſons of Hothan the Aroerite, 45. Jediael the ſon of Shimri, and Joha his brother the Tizite, 46. Eliel the Mahavite, and Jeribai, and Joſhaviah, the ſons of Elnaam, and Ithmah the Moabite, 47. Eliel, and Obed, and Jaſiel the Meſobaite.

Before Chriſt 1048.

[n] 2 Sam. xxiii. 8, &c.

† Or held ſtrongly with him.

[o] 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 12.

[p] Ibid. xxiii. 9, &c.

1047.

‡ Epheſ-dammim. 1 Sam. xvii. 1.

[q] Pſ. iii. 8. Prov. xxi. 31.

[r] 1 Sam. xxii. 1.

[s] John iv. 10, 14.

[t] Mat. xi. 12.

[u] Iſa. xii. 3.

[x] Pſ. lxxii. 14.

[y] Rom. viii. 31.

[z] Mat. xiii. 8.

§ Heb. Great in deeds. Luke xxiv. 19.

[a] Exod. xv. 15.

[b] 1 Sam. xvii. 51.

‖ Or, council.

[c] 2 Sam. ii. 18.

† Shammah the Harodite. 2 Sam. xxiii. 25.

‡ Or, Mehunnai.

§ Or, Zalmon.

‖ Or, Keleb.

† Or, Huddai.

‡ Or, Abialbon.

§ Or, Jaſhem.

‖ Or, Eliphelet.

† Or, Ahaſbai.

‡ Or, Paari.

v. 10—47. This catalogue of worthies we had before, 2 Sam. xxiii. others are here added to them, v. 42—47. By their aſſiſtance chiefly the kingdom was confirmed to David, and by ſupporting him they ſtrengthened and advanced themſelves. They who have been our helpers in any ſhape, have a right to our grateful returns. The exploits theſe performed were great and aſtoniſhing; but every believer, liſted under the banner of Jeſus, is ſtrengthened for mightier conflicts, and enabled for more glorious atchievements; for we wreſtle not with fleſh and blood only, but with angels, principalities, and powers, and the rulers of the darkneſs of this world. It was not, however, till after enduring many dangers with their king, that they came to reign with him. Through much tribulation, and ſuffering hardſhip, as good ſoldiers of Jeſus Chriſt, can we only hope to ſit down with him in his kingdom.

CHAP. XII.

We are here told, 1. Who came in to David to Ziklag to make him king of Judah, ver. 1—22. 2. Who came in to him to Hebron to make him king over all Iſrael, ver. 23—40.

1. NOW theſe are they that came to David to [a] Ziklag, while he yet kept himſelf cloſe, becauſe of Saul the ſon of Kiſh: and they were among the mighty men, helpers of the war. 2. They were armed with bows, and [b] could uſe both the right hand and the left, in hurling ſtones, and ſhooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin. 3. The chief was Ahiezer, then Joaſh, the ſons of † Shemaah, the Gibeathite, and Jeziel, and Pelet, the ſons of Azmaveth, and Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite, 4. And Iſmaiah the Gibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty, and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan, and Joſabad the Gederathite, 5. Eluſai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, and Shephatiah, the Haruphite. 6. Elkanah, and Jeſiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jaſhobeam, the Korhites, 7. And Joelah, and Zebadiah the ſons of Jeroham of Gedor. 8. And of the Gadites there ſeparated themſelves unto David, into [c] the hold to the wilderneſs, men of might, and men of war fit for the battle, that could handle ſhield and buckler, whoſe faces were like the faces of lions, and were ‡ as ſwift as the roes upon the mountains: 9. Ezer the firſt, Obadiah the ſecond, Eliab the third, 10. Miſhmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth, 11. Attai the ſixth, Eliel the ſeventh, 12. Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth, 13. Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh. 14. Theſe were of the ſons of Gad, captains of the hoſt: one of the leaſt § was over an hundred, and the greateſt over a thouſand. 15. Theſe are they that went over Jordan in the firſt month, [d] when it had overflown all his banks, and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the eaſt, and toward the weſt. 16. And there came of the children of Benjamin, and Judah, to the hold unto David. 17. And David went out to meet them, and anſwered and ſaid unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me, to help me, mine heart ſhall be ‖ knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, [e] ſeeing there is no wrong in mine hands, [f] the God of our fathers look thereon, and rebuke it. 18. Then the ſpirit † came upon Amaſai, who was chief of the captains, and he ſaid, Thine are we, David, and on thy ſide, thou ſon of Jeſſe: Peace, peace, be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band. 19. And there fell ſome of Manaſſeh to David (when he came with the Philiſtines againſt Saul to battle, but they helped them not, for [g] the lords of the Philiſtines, upon adviſement, ſent him away, ſaying, He will fall to his maſter Saul, ‡ to the jeopardy of our heads) 20. As he went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manaſſeh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jediael, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, captains of the thouſands that were of Manaſſeh. 21. And they helped David againſt [h] the band of the rovers: for [i] they were all mighty men of valour, and were captains in the hoſt. 22. For at that time day by day, there came to David to help him, until it was a great hoſt, like the hoſt of God.

Before Chriſt 1058.

About 1058.

[a] 1 Sam. xxvii. 6.

[b] Judg. xx. 16.

† Or, Haſmaah.

About 1062.

[c] 1 Sam. xxii. 4.

‡ Heb. Like the roes of the mountains in ſwiftneſs.

§ Or, could reſiſt. Deut. xxxii. 30.

[d] Cant. viii. 7. Rom. viii. 35.

‖ Heb. One with you. 2 Kings x. 15.

[e] 1 Sam. xxiv. 17.

[f] Zech. iii. 2.

† Heb. Cloathed. Judg. vi. 34.

About 1056.

[g] 1 Sam. xxix. 4.

‡ Heb. On our heads

[h] 1 Sam. xxx. 1—17.

[i] Chap. v. 24.

Before Chriſt 1048.

v. 1—22. As the time drew nearer for David's acceſſion to the throne, God, in whoſe hand, are the hearts of all men, appears here inclining them towards his anointed. Some of theſe joined him before Saul's death, v. 8, 19. but the moſt of them, it is probable, immediately after it.

1. Some of Saul's relations of Benjamin, men of great dexterity and valour, came to him in Ziklag.

2. Of the Gadites, ſome of moſt diſtinguiſhed courage joined him in the wilderneſs; men who had afterwards great commands in their tribe, v. 14. like lions for ſtrength and boldneſs, and ſwift as roes to purſue their enemies. Not deterred by the overflowings of Jordan, they plunged into the rapid ſtream, and ſwam through; and on their way to the hold, meeting ſome plundering bands of Philiſtines, or Moabites, fell upon them, and routed them. Note, (1.) When we are in the way to Jeſus, no difficulties muſt diſcourage us. (2.) As ſwift to fly from evil, and as bold in the cauſe of truth, ought every follower of the ſon of David to be.

3. Many of Judah and Benjamin, beſides thoſe v. 2. under the conduct of Amaſai, or Amaſa, David's nephew, 2 Sam. xvii. 25. fell to him; who being a numerous body, David had ſome ſuſpicion, leſt they had ſome ill deſign. They who have been once endangered by falſe friends, need be more jealous of future profeſſions. [1.] He queſtions them therefore on their intentions: If they came peaceably, as real friends to aſſiſt him, his heart would be knit unto them; he would love them affectionately, and they ſhould ſhare his future welfare: if, under colour of friendſhip, to betray him, then he refers himſelf to God, as the avenger of the perfidious and deceitful. Note, (1.) There is one who ſeeth and judgeth, whom lying lips and a deceitful tongue cannot impoſe upon. (2.) They who come to us in friendſhip, with profeſſions of real regard, are entitled to a warm return of equal affection. (3.) They who have a good cauſe, and a good conſcience, can comfortably leave their all in God's hands. [2.] Amaſai, as the mouth of the company, with a ſpirit of wiſdom and genuine affection, ſilences David's fears; aſſuring him of their fidelity; praying for his peace, and for all his friends, and profeſſing a full confidence, that God would ſtrengthen him to overcome all his enemies. Such a frank and zealous good wiſh removed David's ſuſpicions: he received them, and preferred them probably when he came to the crown, v. 18. Note, (1.) It is prudence to ſeek thoſe for our friends, who have God for their helper. (2.) He who is under the divine protection, ſhall be kept in peace in the midſt of trouble. (3.) It is our duty thus to make an unreſerved ſurrender of ourſelves to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to ſpend and be ſpent in his honourable ſervice. (4.) Whatever ſtrength, zeal, or diligence, God hath bleſſed us with for his work, we muſt never forget to be importunate for his bleſſing; elſe we ſhall labour in vain, and ſpend our ſtrength for nought. (5.) Whom the Lord Jeſus Chriſt receives into the arms of his love, he will advance to the kingdom of his glory.

4. Of Manaſſeh, ſeveral chief men joined him as he went to battle with the Philiſtines, and in his return to Ziklag, who being all valiant warriors, aſſiſted him greatly in the purſuit and conqueſt of the Amalekites. Note, God will often, juſt at the critical moment, raiſe us up thoſe very friends we want.

5. After the defeat of Saul, multitudes flocked to him from every ſide, till his little band became a vaſt army, v. 22. Note, They who patiently wait by faith on the promiſe, ſhall aſſuredly ſee at laſt the ſalvation of God.

† Heb. Heads.
1048.
[k] 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 3.
‡ Or, prepared.
[l] 2 Sam. viii. 17.
§ Heb. Brethren.
[m] 2 Sam. ii. 8, 9.
‖ Heb. Men of names. Gen. vi. 4.
[n] Eſth. i. 13. Dan. v. 11. Mat. xvi. 3.
[o] Gen. xlix. 15.

23. ¶ And theſe are the numbers of the † bands that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron, to turn the kingdom of Saul to him, [k] according to the word of the LORD. 24. The children of Judah that bare ſhield and ſpear, were ſix thouſand and eight hundred, ready ‡ armed to the war. 25. Of the children of Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, ſeven thouſand and one hundred. 26. Of the children of Levi, four thouſand and ſix hundred. 27. And Jehoiada was the leader of the Aaronites, and with him were three thouſand and ſeven hundred. 28. And [l] Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's houſe twenty and two captains. 29. And of the children of Benjamin the § kindred of Saul, three thouſand: for hitherto [m] the greateſt part of them had kept the ward of the houſe of Saul. 30. And of the children of Ephraim, twenty thouſand and eight hundred mighty men of valour, ‖ famous throughout the houſe of their fathers. 31. And of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, eighteen thouſand which were expreſſed by name, to come and make David king. 32. And of the children of Iſſachar, which were men [n] that had underſtanding of the times, to know what Iſrael ought to do: the heads of them were two hundred, and [o] all their brethren were at their commandment. 33. Of Zebulun ſuch as went forth to battle, expert in war, with all inſtruments of war, fifty thouſand, which could keep rank: they were † not of double heart. 34. And of Naphtali a thouſand captains with them, with ſhield and ſpear, thirty and ſeven thouſand. 35. And of the Danites expert in war, twenty and eight thouſand and ſix hundred. 36. And of Aſher, ſuch as went forth to battle, expert in war, forty thouſand. 37. And on the other ſide of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, with all manner of inſtruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thouſand. 38. All theſe men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Iſrael: and all the reſt alſo of Iſrael were of one heart to make David king. 39. And there they were with David three days, eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them. 40. Moreover, they that were nigh them, even unto Iſſachar, and Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought bread on aſſes, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and ‡ meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raiſins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and ſheep abundantly, for [p] there was joy in Iſrael.

Before Chriſt 1048.
† Heb. Without a heart and a heart. John i. 47.
‡ Or, victuals of meal.
[p] Prov. xi. 10.

v. 23—40. During the life of Iſhboſheth, the cauſe of the houſe of Saul daily weakened; on his death, all the tribes, convinced of the divine appointment of David, with joint conſent aſſembled to make him king; and they brought with them ſuch a force as would enable him to maintain his pretenſions againſt all oppoſers. Near 350,000 valiant men met on this occaſion, and, among the reſt,

1. The prieſts and Levites ſhewed great zeal for David, not only ready to pray for him, as by office bound, but to hazard their lives for him, if needful, in the field. Note, A faithful miniſter of God cannot but be a loyal ſubject to his prince.

2. The men of Iſſachar ſent a deputation of two hundred of their chiefs, men of deep underſtanding, able counſellors, who knew what was for Iſrael's advantage, and therefore gladly welcomed David to the throne; and men of great influence, the whole tribe being under their ſway. Note, A wiſe and able head is of greater weight to a cauſe, than the ſword of the mighty.

3. All theſe are ſaid to have a perfect heart. It was the reſult of conviction, that David ought, and the wiſh of their hearts that he might reign over them. He is truly a great king, whom his ſubjects obey, not only from conſcience of duty, but from real love of his perſon and government.

4. So great a camp required vaſt proviſion, and ſo liberally the country ſupplied them, that they were not only fed, but feaſted, whilſt Iſrael rang again for joy to ſee the man after God's own heart upon the throne. Note, When Jeſus erects his throne in the heart, he gives preſent joy in believing; and when he comes at laſt to reign over his ſaints, then ſhall we be for ever filled with joy unſpeakable, and full of glory.

CHAP. XIII.

Here, 1. A reſolution is made by David and the elders, to bring up the ark from Kirjath-jearim, ver. 1—4. 2. It is brought out thence with great joy and ſolemnity, ver. 5—8. 3. Uzza is ſtruck dead for touching it, which ſpoils the ſolemnity, and ſtops their proceedings, ver. 9—14.

[a] Prov. xi. 14. & xv. 22.
[b] 1 Sam. xxxi. 1.
[c] 2 Sam. vi. 1.
[d] Joſh. xv. 9. 1 Sam. vii. 1.
† Heb. Made to ride.
[e] Num. vii. 9. 1 Sam. vi. 7. Mat. xxviii. 20.

1. AND David [a] conſulted with the captains of thouſands, and hundreds, and with every leader. 2. And David ſaid unto all the congregation of Iſrael, If it ſeem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us ſend abroad unto our brethren every where, [b] that are left in all the land of Iſrael, and with them alſo to the prieſts and Levites which are in their cities and ſuburbs, that they may gather themſelves unto us. 3. And let us bring again the ark of our God to us: for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul. 4. And all the congregation ſaid, that they would do ſo: for the thing was right in the eyes of all the people. 5. So [c] David gathered all Iſrael together, from Shihor, of Egypt, even unto the entring of Hemath, to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim. 6. And David went up, and all Iſrael to [d] Baalah, that is to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, that dwelleth between the cherubims, whoſe name is called on it. 7. And they † carried the ark of God [e] in a new cart, out of the houſe of Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drave the cart. 8. And David and all Iſrael [f] played before God with all their might, and with ſinging, and with harps, and with pſalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

Before Chriſt 1044.

[f] Pſ. lxviii. as ſome ſuppoſe.

v. 1—8. No ſooner was David gone up from Hebron, and had ſecured the fortreſs of Jeruſalem, where he reſolved to take up his future abode, than he is ſollicitous to raiſe the neglected ark from its obſcurity, and to bring it to a more honourable place.

1. He propoſes the matter to his great men and officers, for their advice and concurrence. They had neglected the ark in the days of Saul, when religion went greatly to decay. It would be now the ſtability of the kingdom, and the happineſs of the land to enjoy the divine preſence and favour; and therefore if it ſeemed good to them, as he doubted not they would approve the motion, they would without delay collect the prieſts and Levites, and the principal men of the land to attend the ſolemnity of bringing up the ark to Jeruſalem. Note, (1.) To have God with us ſhould be our firſt and chief deſire, as the foundation of all true felicity. (2.) Reſpect paid to thoſe whom we might command, engages their conſent to our wiſhes, and is the way to be obeyed with chearfulneſs.

2. The propoſal was very much applauded, and the congregation aſſembled from one end of the land to the other, and with great delight and joy they began the proceſſion. Note, (1.) It is matter of unſpeakable joy to true Iſraelites, to ſee the drooping cauſe of God revive. (2.) When princes are promoters of godlineſs, it ſhould ſtir up prieſts and people to correſpond with their godly deſigns.

9. ¶ And when they came unto the threſhing-floor of † Chidon, Uzza [g] put forth his hand to hold the ark, for the oxen ‡ ſtumbled. 10. And the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt Uzza, and he ſmote him, becauſe he put his hand to the ark: and [h] there he died before God. 11. And [i] David was diſpleaſed, becauſe the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza; wherefore that place is called ‖ Perez-uzza to this day. 12. And David was afraid of God that day, ſaying, [k] How ſhall I bring the ark of God home to me? 13. So David brought not the ark home to himſelf to the city of David, but carried it aſide into the houſe of Obed-edom the Gittite. 14. And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his houſe three months. And the LORD [l] bleſſed the houſe of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

† Nachon. 2 Sam. vi. 6.
[g] Num. iv. 15.
‡ Or ſhook it.
[h] Lev. x. 3. Pſal. l. 16.
[i] Job iv. 17.
‖ i. e. The breach of Uzza.
[k] Job xxv. 6. Pſal. cxix. 120.
[l] Mat. vi. 33. 2 Cor. ii. 16. 2 Pet. ii. 6, &c.

v. 9—14. The error they committed in removing the ark, hath been already obſerved, 2 Sam. vi. as well as the death of Uzza, and the interruption of the ſolemnity conſequent thereupon. It may teach us, 1. Careful attention to the Divine preſcription, nor to make light of the leaſt commandment. (2.) Ignorance in thoſe who miniſter before the ark, is eſpecially criminal. (3.) In the midſt of every earthly joy, we have need to tremble. (4.) Diſcouraging providences are apt to cool our zeal in the way of duty, ſo that, like David, we ſtop ſhort. (5.) The ſame word of God, like the ark to Uzza and Obed-edom, is to one man the ſavour of life unto life, to another the ſavour of death unto death.

CHAP. XIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. David's kingdom eſtabliſhed, ver. 1, 2. 2. His family built up, ver. 3—7. 3. His enemies the Philiſtines routed in two campaigus, ver. 8—17.

1. NOW [a] Hiram king of Tyre ſent meſſengers to David, and timber of cedars, with maſons, and carpenters, to build him an houſe. 2. And David perceived that [b] the LORD had confirmed him king over Iſrael, for his kingdom was lift up on high, becauſe of his people Iſrael. 3. ¶ And David [c] took more wives at Jeruſalem: and David begat more ſons and daughters. 4. Now theſe are the names of his children which he had in Jeruſalem; Shammua, and Shobab, Nathan, and Solomon, 5. And Ibhar, and Eliſhua, and Elpalet, 6. And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia, 7. And Eliſhama, and † Beeliada, and Eliphalet.

[a] 2 Sam. v. 11.
[b] Pſal. lxxv. 6.
[c] Deut. xvii. 17.
† Eliada. 2 Sam. v. 16.

v. 1—7. This account of Hiram's kindneſs and David's family, we had 2 Sam. v. 11. (1.) Like Hiram, we ſhould not envy, but rejoice in our neighbour's proſperity, and wiſh to increaſe it. (2.) Like David, we ſhould conſider every temporal bleſſing we poſſeſs, as lent us of the Lord, to be improved for his glory, and the good of mankind.

Before Chriſt 1048.

8. ¶ And [d] when the Philiſtines heard that David was anointed king over all Iſrael, [e] all the Philiſtines went to ſeek David: and David heard of it, and went out againſt them. 9. And the Philiſtines came and ſpread themſelves [f] in the valley of Rephaim. 10. And David [g] inquired of God, ſaying, [h] Shall I go againſt the Philiſtines? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD ſaid unto him, Go up, for I will deliver them into thine hand. 11. So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David ſmote them there. Then David ſaid, [i] God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand, like the breaking forth of waters: therefore they called the name of that place † Baal-perazim. 12. And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and [k] they were burnt with fire. 13. And the Philiſtines yet again ſpread themſelves abroad in the valley: 14. Therefore David enquired again of God; and God ſaid unto him, Go not up after them, turn away from them, and come upon them over-againſt the mulberry-trees. 15. And it ſhall be, when thou ſhalt hear [l] a ſound of going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that then thou ſhalt go out to battle: for [m] God is gone forth before thee, to ſmite the hoſt of the Philiſtines. 16. David therefore did as God commanded him: and they ſmote the hoſt of the Philiſtines from Gibeon even to Gazer. 17. And the fame of David went out into all lands, and the LORD brought the fear of him upon all nations.

[d] 2 Sam. v. 17.
[e] Pſal. ii. 1, 2.
[f] Iſa. xvii. 5.
[g] Num. xxvii. 21. Pſal. lxxiii. 28.
[h] Prov. iii. 6.
[i] Pſal. xliv. 3.
† i. e. Lord of the breaches. Iſa. xxviii. 21.
[k] Deut. vii. 25.
1047.
[l] Lev. xxvi. 36. 2 Kings vii. 6.
[m] Phil. ii. 13.

v. 8—17. The Philiſtines invaſions, and David's victories, we heard before. They give us, 1. A comfortable emblem of the conqueſts which Jeſus hath made for us of all our enemies. (2.) They admoniſh us of the reſtleſs enmity of the ſeed of the ſerpent againſt the children of God. (3.) They teach us, with David, to cry to God for direction in all our difficulties, and to aſcribe to him the praiſe of all our mercies. (4.) David's ſon and David's Lord hath gotten him a greater name, by his victories over ſin, and death, and hell: in him his people rejoice, before him his enemies tremble.

CHAP. XV.

A ſecond time David ſeeks to bring up the ark to Zion. 1. A place is prepared for it, ver. 1. 2. The prieſts are ordered to carry it, ver. 2—15. 3. The Levites have their offices aſſigned them in attending on it, ver. 16—24. 4. It is done ſucceſsfully, ver. 25—28. 5. Michal deſpiſes David, ver. 29.

1. AND David made him houſes in the city of David, and prepared a place for the ark of God, and [a] pitched for it a tent. 2. Then David ſaid, [b] None ought to carry the ark of God, but the Levites: for them hath the LORD choſen to carry the ark of God, and to miniſter unto him for ever. 3. And David gathered all Iſrael together to Jeruſalem, to bring up the ark of the LORD unto his place, which he had prepared for it. 4. And David aſſembled the children of Aaron and the Levites: 5. Of the ſons of Kohath: Uriel the chief, and † his brethren an hundred and twenty. 6. Of the ſons of Merari: Aſaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred and twenty. 7. Of the ſons of Gerſhom: Joel the chief, and his brethren an hundred and thirty. 8. Of the ſons of [c] Elizaphan: Shemaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred. 9. Of the ſons of [d] Hebron: Eliel the chief, and his brethren fourſcore. 10. Of the ſons of Uzziel: Amminadab the chief, and his brethren an hundred and twelve. 11. And David called for Zadok and Abiathar the prieſts, and for the Levites, for Uriel, Aſaiah, and Joel, Shemaiah, and Eliel, and Amminadab, 12. And ſaid unto them, Ye are the chief of the fathers of the Levites: [e] ſanctify yourſelves both ye and your brethren, that you may bring up the ark of the LORD God of Iſrael, unto the place that I have prepared for it. 13. For becauſe ye did it not at the firſt, [f] the LORD God made a breach upon us, for that we ſought him not [g] after the due order, 14. So the prieſts and the Levites ſanctified themſelves to bring up the ark of the LORD God of Iſrael. 15. And the children of the Levites bare the ark of God upon their ſhoulders, with the ſtaves thereon, [h] as Moſes commanded, according to the word of the LORD.

1044.
[a] Chap. xvi. 1.
[b] Num. iv. 15. Deut. x. 8.
† Or kinſmen.
[c] Exod. vi. 22.
[d] Ibid. vi. 18.
[e] Ibid. xii. 10, 15.
[f] Chap. xiii. 10. See Lev. x. 1, 2.
[g] Num. iv. 15.
[h] Exod. xxv. 14. Num. iv. 15. & vii. 9.

Before Chriſt 1044.

LORD. 16. And David ſpake to the chief of the Levites, to appoint their brethren [i] to be the ſingers with inſtruments of muſic, pſalteries, and harps, and cymbals, ſounding, by lifting up the voice with joy. 17. So the Levites appointed [k] Heman the ſon of Joel; and of his brethren, [l] Aſaph the ſon of Berechiah: and of the ſons of Merari their brethren, [m] Ethan the ſon of Kuſhaiah. 18. And with them their brethren of the ſecond degree, Zechariah, Ben, and Jaaziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Benaiah, and Maaſeiah, and Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, the porters. 19. So the ſingers, Heman, Aſaph, and Ethan, were appointed to ſound with cymbals of braſs. 20. And Zechariah, and † Aziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, and Eliab, and Maaſeiah, and Benaiah, with pſalteries on ‡ Alamoth; 21. And Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, and Azziah, with harps [n] on the Sheminith to excel. 22. Chenaniah chief of the Levites was § for ſong: he inſtructed about the ſong, becauſe he was ſkilful. 23. And Berechiah, and Elkanah were door-keepers for the ark. 24. And Shebaniah, and Jehoſhaphat, and Nethaneel, and Amaſai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eliezer the prieſts [o] did blow with the trumpets before the ark of God: and Obed-edom, and Jehiah were door-keepers for the ark.

[i] Pſal. cl. 3, 4, 5.
[k] Chap. vi. 33.
[l] Chap. vi. 39.
[m] Chap. vi. 44.
† Jaaziel. Ver. 18.
‡ Or the treble. Pſal. 46. title. It ſignifies virgins. Cant. i. 3. & vi. 8.
[n] Pſal. vi. Title.
§ Heb. Over the lifting up.
[o] Num. x. 8. Pſal. lxxxi. 3.

v. 1—24. The firſt attempt to remove the ark proved abortive. The reaſon of their misfortune David now had learnt; he therefore juſtifies God, humbles himſelf, and warns the Levites to be more exact for the future. When we mean well, yet ſuffer for our miſtakes, we muſt not be diſcouraged, but with greater circumſpection apply to the work before us.

1. David having built his own houſe, and reared a tabernacle for the reception of the ark, gathers the prieſts and Levites to the amout of eight hundred and ſixty-two, beſides their ſix chiefs; and having admoniſhed them of the cauſe of the late diſaſter, exhorts them to prepare for the ſolemnity, and be more exactly obſervant of the Divine preſcription. Note, (1.) The greateſt reformers are men, and therefore not faultleſs. (2.) It is a mercy when we diſcover our errors, and amend them.

2. The Levites carefully now obſerved the Divine rule, and God enabled them for their work. Each man had his ſeveral poſt; ſome bore the ark, others were porters to keep the doors of the tabernacle from intruders; and now probably ſurrounded the ark, that others might not touch it, as Uzza had done. Some with muſical inſtruments joined in concert, whilſt others were appointed to lead the ſacred ſong, and join the vocal with inſtrumental harmony. Note, (1.) When we have a right underſtanding of the way of duty, and ability to walk in it, both theſe come from the Lord. (2.) Church muſic, when under good regulations, might ſtill be made a bleſſing; though the abſurd and irreligious manner in which it is commonly performed, is juſtly offenſive, and a diſturbance to devotion.

25. ¶ [p] So David and the elders of Iſrael, and the captains over thouſands, went to bring up the covenant of the LORD, out of the houſe of Obed-edom with joy. 26. And it came to paſs when God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that they offered ſeven bullocks, and ſeven rams. 27. And [q] David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the ſingers, and Chenaniah the maſter of the ſong, with the ſingers: David alſo had upon him an ephod of linen. 28. Thus all Iſrael brought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD [r] with ſhouting, and with ſound of the cornet, and with trumpets, and with cymbals, making a noiſe with pſalteries and harps. 29. ¶ And it came to paſs as the ark of the covenant of the LORD came to the city of David, that Michal the daughter of Saul looking out at a window, ſaw king David dancing and playing: and [s] ſhe deſpiſed him in her heart.

[p] 2 Sam. vi. 13, &c.
[q] 1 Sam. ii. ii. 18.
[r] Pſal. lxxxi. 1. & xcviii. 6.
[s] Acts ii. 13. 1 Cor. ii. 14. Jude 10.

v. 25—29. With ſolemn ſacrifices, as atonements for paſt miſtakes, and to obtain preſent aſſiſtance, the Levites proceeded, ſupported under their burden, and with every expreſſion of joy, David and the people rejoiced before the ark. Michal, David's wife, ſeems the only diſcontented ſpirit that was that day in Iſrael. She could not without indignation and contempt behold her huſband, as ſhe thought, thus demeaning himſelf. Note, (1.) Songs of praiſe are the natural expreſſions of the ſoul that is happy in God. (2.) They who have no reliſh for a chriſtian's joys, are apt to deſpiſe them, and think theſe ſervices of religion mean and contemptible, which the believer counts his moſt honourable and happy employment.

CHAP. XVI.

Here is, 1. The ſolemnity with which the ark was fixed, ver. 1—6. 2. The pſalm David gave to be ſung on this occaſion, ver. 7—36. 3. The ſetting of the conſtant ſtated worſhip of God in order from thenceforward, ver. 37—43.

1. SO [a] they brought the ark of God, and ſet it in the midſt of the tent that David had pitched for it: and they offered burnt-ſacrifices and peace-offerings before God. 2. And when David had made an end of offering the burnt-offerings, and the peace-offerings, [b] he bleſſed the people in the name of the LORD. 3. And [c] he dealt to every one of Iſrael, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of fleſh, and a flagon of wine. 4. ¶ And he appointed certain of the Levites to miniſter before the ark of the LORD, and to record, and to thank and praiſe the LORD God of Iſrael: 5. Aſaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom: and Jeiel † with pſalteries, and with harps: but Aſaph made a ſound with cymbals. 6. Benaiah alſo and Jahaziel the prieſts with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

[a] 2 Sam. vi. 17.
[b] 1 Kings viii. 55. Luke xxiv. 50.
[c] Neh. viii. 10.
† Heb. With inſtruments of pſalteries and harps.

1—6. The ark being ſafely lodged, vaſt ſacrifices were offered in honour to God; the people nobly feaſted, and a conſtant courſe of Levites were now appointed to ſing God's praiſes, and to commemorate the mercies they had received from him. Note, (1.) Grateful praiſe is the moſt acceptable ſacrifice. (2.) The hungry who wait upon God, ſhall be filled with his good things. (3.) Our worſhip of God muſt be regular and conſtant: whatever engagements may call us off, we muſt never omit the daily work of prayer and praiſe.

7. ¶ Then on that day, David delivered firſt [d] this pſalm to thank the LORD, into the hand of Aſaph and his brethren. 8. Give thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name, [e] make known his deeds among the people. 9. Sing unto him, ſing pſalms unto him, [f] talk you of all his wondrous works. 10. [g] Glory ye in his holy name, [h] let the heart of them rejoice that ſeek the LORD. 11. Seek the LORD and [i] his ſtrength, ſeek his face continually. 12. [k] Remember his [l] marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth. 13. O ye ſeed of Iſrael his ſervant, ye children of Jacob [m] his choſen ones. 14. He is the LORD our God, his judgments are in all the earth. 15. [n] Be ye mindful always of his covenant: the word which he commanded to a thouſand generations; 16. Even [o] of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of [p] his oath unto Iſaac: 17. And hath confirmed the ſame [q] to Jacob for a law, and to Iſrael for an everlaſting covenant, 18. Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance. 19. When ye were but few, even a few, and [r] ſtrangers in it. 20. And when they went [s] from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people: 21. He ſuffered no man to do them wrong: yea, [t] he reproved kings for their ſakes, 22. Saying, Touch not mine anointed, and [u] do my prophets no harm. 23. [x] Sing unto the LORD all the earth: [y] ſhew forth from day to day his ſalvation. 24. Declare his glory among the heathen: his marvellous works among all nations. 25. For great is the LORD, and [z] greatly to be praiſed: he alſo is to be feared [a] above all gods. 26. For all the gods of the people are † idols: but [b] the LORD made the heavens. 27. Glory and honour are in his preſence, ſtrength and gladneſs are in his place. 28. [c] Give unto the LORD, ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD [d] glory and ſtrength. 29. Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name: [e] bring an offering and come before him, [f] worſhip the LORD in the beauty of holineſs. 30. Fear before him all the earth: the world alſo ſhall be ſtable, that it be not moved. 31. Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice: and let men ſay [g] among the nations, [h] The LORD reigneth. 32. Let the ſea rore, and the fulneſs thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein. 33 Then ſhall the trees

[d] Pſal. cv. 1, &c.
[e] Pſal. cxlv. 4—6.
[f] Ibid. 11, 12.
[g] 1 Cor. i. 31.
[h] Phil. iv. 4.
[i] 2 Chron. vi. 41.
[k] Pſal. lxxvii. 11.
[l] Ibid. cxi. 2, 3.
[m] Deut. vii. 7, 8.
[n] Pſal. cv. 8.
[o] Gen. xvii. 2—8.
[p] Ibid. xxvi. 3.
[q] Ibid. xxviii. 13.
[r] Heb. xi. 9, 13.
[s] Gen. xii. 1. & xx. 1.
[t] Gen. xii. 17. & xx. 3. Exod. vii. 15.
[u] Gen. xx. 7.
[x] Pſal. xcvi. 1, &c.
[y] Ibid. iii. 8.
[z] Rev. iv. 11.
[a] Pſal. xcv. 3.
† Heb. Nought. 1 Cor. viii. 4.
[b] Iſa. xlii. 5.
[c] Pſal. xxix. 1.
[d] Ibid. cxv. 1.
[e] Rom. xii. 1.
[f] Pſal. xxix. 2.
[g] Ibid. xviii. 49.
[h] Ibid. xciii. 1. Rev. xi. 15.

Before Christ 1044.

of the wood ſing out at the preſence of the LORD, becauſe [i] he cometh to judge the earth. 34. [k] O give thanks to the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. 35. And [l] ſay ye, [m] Save us, O God of our ſalvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and glory in thy praiſe. 36. [n] Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael for ever and ever: and [o] all the people ſaid, Amen, and praiſed the LORD.

[i] Rev. xxii. 12.
[k] Pſal. cvi. 1. & cvii. 1. & cxviii. 1. & cxxxvi. 1.
[l] Hoſ. xiv. 2. Luke xi. 2.
[m] Pſal. cvi. 47, 48.
[n] 1 Kings viii. 15. Eph. i. 3.
[o] Deut. xxvii. 15. Neh. viii. 6.

v. 3—36. This pſalm is chiefly compoſed of two others, cv. 1—15. and the xcvi.

It opens, [1.] With thankſgiving. God's people, (1.) Are bound to praiſe him. (2.) To call upon him in prayer, for the continuance of his mercies. (3.) To publiſh his glory to others, v. 9. (4.) To rejoice in him, yea to glory in his name, in his love, power, faithfulneſs, and mercy. [2.] It contains grateful memorials of God's dealings, which deſerve everlaſting remembrance; (1.) His election of his people, of ſovereign grace, v. 13. (2.) The covenant eſtabliſhed with their fathers, and fulfilled to them, v. 15—18. (3.) The miraculous works and providential preſervation for which they were indebted, v. 12, 19—22. (4.) The ſtatutes and judgments of his revealed will, with which they were ſo peculiarly favoured, v. 12. [3.] It proceeds to declare the tranſcendant excellency of Iſrael's God; (1.) He, as the creator, is alone deſerving worſhip, fear, and adoration, v. 25, 26. (2.) His perfections are great beyond compare, his ſtrength almighty, his goodneſs unutterable, his glory ſurpaſſing, his dominion univerſal, v. 27—32, 34. (3.) He who is the univerſal governor, is alſo the univerſal judge; at whoſe bar the eternal ſtate of man muſt be determined, v. 33. [4.] In conſequence of theſe views of God's glory, and paſt experience of his mercy, the Pſalmiſt cloſes his ſong of praiſe with the language of prayer; (1.) He begs ſalvation from every enemy, v. 35. (2.) That God would gather together his elect, now in the land of promiſe, and ſhortly in the regions of glory, v. 35. (3.) The conſequence of his continual grace will engage their everlaſting praiſe, v. 36. [5.] The people hereunto added their joyful Amen, and praiſed the Lord. And ſo may every faithful ſoul, in every age and place, exalt God's glory, grace and faithfulneſs; and as in duty bounden, earneſtly ſupplicate the continuance of the ſame bleſſings.

37. ¶ So he left there before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, Aſaph and his brethren, to miniſter before the ark continually, † as every days work required: 38. And Obed-edom, with their brethren, threeſcore and eight: Obed-edom alſo the ſon of Jeduthun, and Hoſah to be porters: 39. And Zadok the prieſt, and his brethren the prieſts [p] before the tabernacle of the LORD, in the high place that was at Gibeon, 40. To offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD, upon the altar of the burnt-offering continually [q] morning and evening, and to do according to all that is written in the law of the LORD, which he commanded Iſrael: 41. And with them Heman and Jeduthun, and the reſt that were choſen, who were expreſſed by name, to give thanks to the LORD, [r] becauſe his mercy endureth for ever: 42. And with them Heman and Jeduthun with trumpets, and cymbals, for thoſe that ſhould make a ſound, and with muſical inſtruments of God: and the ſons of Jeduthun were ‡ porters. 43. And all the people departed every man to his houſe: and [s] David returned to bleſs his houſe.

† Heb. According to the work of a day in its day.
[p] Chap. xxi. 29. 2 Chron. i. 3.
[q] Exod. xxix. 38. Num. xxviii. 3.
[r] 2 Chron. v. 13. & vii. 3. Ezra iii. 11. Jer. xxxiii. 11.
‡ Heb. For the gate.
[s] 2 Sam. vi. 20.

v. 37—43. The ark being fixed at Jeruſalem, and the Levites appointed to miniſter before it, David takes a like care of the tabernacle at Gibeon, v. 39. There Zadok attended, with the prieſts and Levites, to offer the appointed ſacrifices continually, whilſt Abiathar probably abode at Jeruſalem, to conſult the Lord before the ark. The ſervice of God being thus ſettled, the people departed with joy, and David went down to bleſs his houſe, to pray with them, and for them. Note, Public ſervices muſt never ſuperſede private and family devotion.

CHAP. XVII.

This chapter contains, 1. God's acceptance of David's purpoſe to build him an houſe, and the promiſe he made him thereupon, ver. 1—15. 2. David's thankfulneſs for the promiſe, and prayer for its fulfilment, ver. 16—27.

1. NOW [a] it came to paſs, as David ſat in his houſe, that David ſaid to Nathan the prophet, [b] Lo, I dwell in an houſe of cedars, [c] but the ark of the covenant of the LORD remaineth under curtains. 2. Then Nathan ſaid unto David, [d] Do all that is in thine heart, for God is with thee. 3. ¶ And it came to paſs the ſame night, that the word of God came to Nathan, ſaying, 4. Go and tell David my ſervant, Thus ſaith the LORD, Thou ſhalt not build me an houſe to dwell in. 5. For I have not dwelt in an houſe [e] ſince the day that I brought up Iſrael, unto this day, but have gone from tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another. 6. Whereſoever I have walked with all Iſrael, ſpake I a word to any of the judges of Iſrael (whom I commanded to [f] feed my people) ſaying, Why have ye not built me an houſe of cedars? 7. Now therefore thus ſhalt thou ſay unto my ſervant David, Thus ſaith the LORD of hoſts, [g] I took thee from the ſheep-cote, even † from following the ſheep, that thou ſhouldeſt be ruler over my people Iſrael: 8. And [h] I have been with thee whitherſoever thou haſt walked, and [i] have cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and [k] have made thee a name like the name of the great men that are in the earth. 9. Alſo I will ordain a place for my people Iſrael, and will plant them, and they ſhall dwell in their place, and ſhall be moved no more; [l] neither ſhall the children of wickedneſs waſte them any more: (as at the beginning, 10. And ſince the time that [m] I commanded judges to be over my people Iſrael) moreover I will ſubdue all thine enemies. Furthermore, I tell thee, that [n] the LORD will build thee an houſe. 11. ¶ And it ſhall come to paſs, [o] when thy days be expired, that thou muſt go to be with thy fathers, that [p] I will raiſe up thy ſeed after thee, which ſhall be of thy ſons, and [q] I will eſtabliſh his kingdom. 12. [r] He ſhall build me an houſe, [s] and I will eſtabliſh his throne for ever. 13. I will be his father, and [t] he ſhall be my ſon, and [u] I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee. 14. But I will ſettle him in mine houſe, and [x] in my kingdom for ever, and his throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed [y] for evermore. 15. [z] According to all theſe words, and according to all this viſion, ſo did Nathan ſpeak unto David.

[a] 2 Sam. vii. 1.
[b] Hag. i. 4.
[c] Acts vii. 46.
[d] 1 Cor. xiii. 9.
[e] 1 Kings viii. 16.
[f] 2 Sam. v. 2.
[g] 1 Sam. xvi. 11. Pſal. lxxviii. 70.
† Heb. From after.
[h] 2 Sam. viii. 6, 14.
[i] Pſal. lxxxix. 23.
[k] 2 Sam. v. 10. Pſal. cxiii. 7, 8.
[l] Pſal. lxxxix. 22.
[m] Judg. ii. 16.
[n] Exod. i. 21. Pſal. cxxvii. 1.
[o] 1 Kings viii. 20. Acts xiii. 36.
[p] Ibid 23. Rom. i. 3.
[q] Iſa. ix. 6, 7. Dan. vii. 25.
[r] Mat. xvi. 18.
[s] Luke i. 32.
[t] Heb. i. 5.
[u] Acts xiii. 34.
[x] Pſal. lxxxix. 28, 34, &c. Dan. ii. 44.
[y] John xii. 34.
[z] Jer. xxiii. 28.

v. 1—15. David's pious purpoſe, Nathan's encouragement, and God's gracious acceptance of his intentions, though he reſtrained him from the ſervice, we had before, 2 Sam. vii. We may obſerve, (1.) How ſollicitous the heart of every faithful Iſraelite is, that God's glory may be ſet forth. (2.) That God's miniſters ſhould delight to encourage others, to every good word and work. (3.) A gracious deſire, though ineffectual, is not forgotten of God. (4.) Bleſſings on our children, are mercies to ourſelves. (5.) In Jeſus Chriſt is the promiſe fulfilled, v. 14. who is exalted to ſit upon the throne of David for ever and ever.

16. ¶ And David the king came, and ſat before the LORD, and ſaid, [a] Who am I, O LORD God, and what is mine houſe, that thou haſt brought me hitherto? 17. And [b] yet this was a ſmall thing in thine eyes, O God, for [c] thou haſt alſo ſpoken of thy ſervant's houſe for a great while to come, and haſt regarded me according to the eſtate of a man of high degree, O LORD God. 18. What can David ſpeak more to thee for the honour of thy ſervant? for [d] thou knoweſt thy ſervant. 19. O LORD, [e] for thy ſervant's ſake, and [f] according to thine own heart haſt thou done all this greatneſs, in making known all theſe great things. 20. O LORD, [g] there is none like thee, neither is there any God beſides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears. 21. And [h] what one nation in the earth is like thy people Iſrael, [i] whom God went to redeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of greatneſs and terribleneſs, by driving out nations from before thy people whom thou haſt redeemed out of Egypt? 22. For thy people Iſrael didſt thou make thine own people for ever, and [k] thou, LORD, becameſt their God. 23. Therefore now, LORD, let the thing that thou haſt ſpoken concerning thy ſervant, and concerning his houſe, [l] be eſtabliſhed for ever, and do as thou haſt ſaid. 24. Let it even be eſtabliſhed, that [m] thy name may be magnified for ever, ſaying, The LORD of hoſts is the God of Iſrael, even a God to Iſrael: and let the houſe of David thy ſervant be eſtabliſhed before thee. 25. For thou, O my God, haſt † told thy

[a] Gen. xxxii. 10. Judg. vi. 15. 1 Sam. xviii. 18. Pſal. cxliv. 3. Eph. iii. 8.
[b] Ver. 7, 8.
[c] 1 Kings iii. 13. Eph. iii. 20.
[d] 1 Sam. xvi. 7. Pſal. cxxxix. 1. John xxi. 16.
[e] Iſa. xlix. 6.
[f] Mat. xi. 26. Eph. i. 11.
[g] Exod. xv. 11. Deut. iii. 24. Pſal. lxxxix. 6—8. Iſa. xlv. 5, 22.
[h] Deut. iv. 7. & xxxiii. 29. Pſal. cxlvii. 20. Amos iii. 2.
[i] Exod. iii. 8. Tit. ii. 14.
[k] Gen. xvii. 7. Pſal. xlviii. 14.
[l] Ezek. xxxvi. 37.
[m] Mat. vi. 9. John xii. 28.
† Heb. Revealed before the ear of, &c. 1 Sam. ix. 15.

Before Chriſt 1041.

thy ſervant, that thou wilt build him an houſe: therefore thy ſervant [n] hath found in his heart to pray before thee. 26. And now, LORD (thou art God, and [o] haſt promiſed this goodneſs unto thy ſervant). 27. Now therefore let it pleaſe thee to bleſs the houſe of thy ſervant, that it may be before thee for ever: for [p] thou bleſſeſt, O LORD, and it ſhall be bleſſed [q] for ever.

[n] Pſal. x. 17.
[o] Tit. i. 2.
[p] Num. xxii. 6.
[q] Rom. xi. 29.

v. 16—27. David's prayer differs little here from the former, but in a few expreſſions. It teaches, (1.) With what deep humility we ſhould approach God, v. 16. (2.) That thoſe are the truly honourable of the earth, whom God regards, v. 17. (3.) That the higheſt glory of the greateſt king, is to be the ſervant of God, v. 18. (4.) As there is no God like the Lord, ſo there is no happineſs equal to a ſenſe of his favour. (5.) When we have God's promiſes, we may confidently plead them, and be aſſured we ſhall be heard and anſwered. (6.) They who now ſhare in God's covenant of grace, will aſſuredly partake of everlaſting glory.

CHAP. XVIII.

Here, 1. David conquers the Philiſtines, ver. 1. 2. The Moabites, ver. 2. 3. The king of Zobah, ver. 3, 4. 4. The Syrians, ver. 5—8. 5. He makes the king of Hamath his tributary, ver. 9—11. as alſo the Edomites, ver. 12, 13. 6. A ſhort account is given of his court and kingdom, ver. 14—17.

1. NOW [a] after this it came to paſs, that David ſmote the Philiſtines, and ſubdued them, and took Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philiſtines. 2. And [b] he ſmote Moab; and the Moabites became David's ſervants, and brought gifts. 3. ¶ And David ſmote Hadarezer king of [c] Zobah unto Hamath, as he went to ſtabliſh [d] his dominion by the river Euphrates. 4. And David took from him a thouſand chariots, and [e] ſeven thouſand horſemen, and twenty thouſand footmen: David alſo [f] houghed all the chariot-horſes, but [g] reſerved of them an hundred chariots. 5. And when the Syrians of Damaſcus came to [h] help Hadarezer king of Zobah, David [i] ſlew of the Syrians two and twenty thouſand men. 6. Then David put garriſons in Syria-Damaſcus, and the Syrians became David's ſervants, and brought gifts. Thus [k] the LORD preſerved David whitherſoever he went. 7. And David took the ſhields of gold that were on the ſervants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jeruſalem. 8. Likewiſe from † Tibbath, and from ‡ Chun, cities of Hadarezer, brought David very much braſs, wherewith [l] Solomon made the brazen ſea, and the pillars, and the veſſels of braſs.

[a] 2 Sam. viii. 1.
[b] Num. xxiv. 17. Pſal. lx. 8.
[c] Pſal. lx. Title.
[d] Gen. xv. 18.
[e] 2 Sam. viii. 4.
[f] Joſh. xi. 6.
[g] Pſal. xx. 7. & xxxiii. 16, 17.
[h] Iſa. viii. 9.
[i] Job ix. 13. Iſa. xxxi. 3.
[k] Pſal. xx. 8. Prov. xxi. 31.
† Betah.
‡ Berothai. 2 Sam. viii. 8.
[l] 1 Kings vii. 23. 2 Chron. iv. 15.

v. 1—8. David's conqueſts, here recorded, we had 2 Sam. viii. They followed upon the prayer and promiſe of the preceding chapter; for they who have God for their friend, have nothing to fear from their enemies. Note, (1.) Such ſhall be the believer's victories, over all his corruptions: though they are numerous, and often return to the attack, yet ſin ſhall not prevail againſt him. (2.) The aſſociated forces of earth and hell in vain oppoſe God's church; it ſhall ſtand triumphant at laſt, over every foe. (3.) Shields of Gold cannot defend us, but the ſhield of faith never faileth.

9. ¶ Now [m] when Tou king of Hamath heard how David had ſmitten all the hoſt of Hadarezer, king of Zobah: 10. He ſent † Hadoram his ſon to king David, to enquire of his welfare, and to ‡ congratulate him, becauſe he had fought againſt Hadarezer, and ſmitten him (for Hadarezer ‖ had warred with Tou) and with him all manner of veſſels of gold, and ſilver, and braſs. 11. ¶ Them alſo king David dedicated unto the LORD, [n] with the ſilver and the gold that he brought from all theſe nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philiſtines, and from Amalek. 12. Moreover, Abiſhai the ſon of Zeruiah ſlew of the Edomites in the valley of ſalt, eighteen thouſand. 13. ¶ And he put garriſons in Edom; and [o] all the Edomites became David's ſervants. Thus the LORD preſerved David whitherſoever he went. 14. ¶ So David reigned over all Iſrael, and [p] executed judgment and juſtice among his people. 15. And Joab the ſon of Zeruiah was over the hoſt, and Jehoſhaphat the ſon of Ahilud, § recorder. 16. And Zadok the ſon of Ahitub, and Abimelech the ſon of Abiathar, were [q] the prieſts, and † Shauſha was ſcribe. 17. And Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites, and the Pelethites: and the ſons of David were [q] chief ‡ about the king.

[m] 2 Sam. viii. 9.
† Joram. 2 Sam. viii. 10.
‡ Heb. Bleſs him.
‖ Heb. Was a man of wars with Tou.
[n] Mic. iv. 13.
[o] Gen. xxvii. 37. Pſal. xviii. 44.
[p] Iſa. xi. 3, 4.
§ Or Remembrancer.

Before Chriſt 1040.

† Seraiah. 2 Sam. viii. 17.
[q] Rev. i. 6.
‡ Heb. At the hand of the king.

v. 9—17. They who are proſperous, like David, will be courted; but a true friend is beſt known in adverſity. Tou counted David's favour well worth the moſt valuable preſent he could ſend him; and ſhall we not be more ſollicitous to ſecure him for our friend, whoſe favour is better than life itſelf, and which may be obtained without price or preſent? David's government appears to be as excellent, v. 14. as his victories were glorious, and no wonder when God proſpered him in every undertaking. The ſon of David rules with greater equity, as well as enjoys a more univerſal dominion: happy the people who are ſubjects of his righteous government, and enjoy his divine protection.

CHAP. XIX.

Here is, 1. David's civility to the king of Ammon, ver. 1, 2. 2. The affront ſhewn to David, in the baſe uſage of his ambaſſadors, ver. 3, 4. 3. David's juſt reſentment of it, ver. 6—19.

1038.

1. NOW [a] it came to paſs after this, that Nahaſh the king of the children of Ammon died, and his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 2. And David ſaid, [b] I will ſhew kindneſs unto Hanun the ſon of Nahaſh, becauſe his father ſhewed kindneſs to me. And David ſent meſſengers, to comfort him concerning his father: ſo the ſervants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon, to Hanun, to comfort him. 3. But the princes of the children of Ammon ſaid to Hanun, † Thinkeſt thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath ſent comforters unto thee? [c] are not his ſervants come unto thee, for to ſearch, and to overthrow, and to ſpy out the land? 4. Wherefore Hanun took David's ſervants, and [d] ſhaved them, and cut off their garments in the midſt [e] hard by their buttocks, and ſent them away. 5. Then there went certain, and told David how the men were ſerved; and he ſent to meet them (for the men were greatly aſhamed) and the king ſaid, [f] Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

[a] 2 Sam. x. 1.
[b] See 2 Sam. ix. 1.
† Heb. In thine eyes doth David, &c.
[c] 1 Cor. xiii. 7.
[d] Lev. xix. 27. 2 Sam. x. 4.
[e] Iſa. xx. 4.
[f] Pſal. xxxvii. 6, 7.

v. 1—5. This ſtory we may find, 2 Sam. x. It ſhews, (1.) How the kindeſt actions may be miſinterpreted, and the moſt friendly concern be repaid with ingratitude. (2.) That the moſt innocent character may ſuffer much reproach. (3.) Where whiſperers are heard, very friends are ſeparated. (4.) That they who receive damage in our ſervice, ought to be tenderly taken care of, and provided for.

6. ¶ [g] And when the children of Ammon ſaw that they had made themſelves † odious to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon ſent a thouſand talents of ſilver to [h] hire them chariots and horſemen out of Meſopotamia, and out of Syria-maachah, and out of Zobah. 7. So they hired thirty and two thouſand chariots, and the king of Maacah and his people, who came and pitched before Medeba. And the children of Ammon gathered themſelves together from their cities, and came to battle. 8. And when David heard of it, he ſent Joab, and all the hoſt of [i] the mighty men. 9. And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in aray before the gate of the city: and [k] the kings that were come, were by themſelves in the field. 10. Now when Joab ſaw that † the battle was ſet againſt him, before and behind, he choſe out of all ‡ the choice of Iſrael, and put them in aray againſt the Syrians. 11. And the reſt of the people he delivered unto the hand of Abiſhai his brother, and they ſet themſelves in aray againſt the children of Ammon. 12. And he ſaid, If the Syrians be too ſtrong for me, [l] then thou ſhalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too ſtrong for thee, then I will help thee. 13. [m] Be of good courage, and let us behave ourſelves valiantly [n] for our people, and for the cities of our God: and let the LORD do that which is good in his ſight. 14. So Joab and the people that were with him, drew nigh before the Syrians, unto the battle; and they fled before him. 15. And when the children of Ammon ſaw that the Syrians were fled, they likewiſe fled before Abiſhai his brother, and entred into the city. Then Joab came to Jeruſalem. 16. ¶ And when the Syrians ſaw that they [g] 2 Sam. x. 6.

† Heb. To ſtink. Gen. xxxiv. 30. Exod. v. 21. 1 Sam xiii. 4.
[h] Iſa. viii. 9.
[i] Ibid. xiii. 3.
[k] 2 Sam. x. 8.
† Heb. Face of the battle.
‡ Heb. Young men.
[l] Neh. iv. 20. Luke xxii. 32. Rom. xv. 1.
[m] 1 Cor. xvi. 15.
[n] Neh. iv. 14.

they were put to the worſe before Iſrael, [o] they ſent meſſengers, and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond § the river: and † Shophach the captain of the hoſt of Hadarezer went before them. 17. And it was told David, and he gathered all Iſrael, and paſſed over Jordan, and came upon them, and ſet the battle in aray againſt them: ſo when David had put the battle in aray againſt the Syrians, they fought with him. 18. But the Syrians fled before Iſrael, and David ſlew of the Syrians [p] ſeven thouſand men, which fought in chariots, and [q] forty thouſand footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the hoſt. 19. And when the ſervants of Hadarezer ſaw that they were put to the worſe before Iſrael, they made peace with David, and became his ſervants: [r] neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon any more.

v. 6—19. 1. Had the Ammonites ſubmitted, they might at much leſs expence have obtained their peace with David, than the uſeleſs aſſiſtance of Syria; but the miſchief which pride begins, obſtinacy often compleats.

2. Joab. v. 10. ſeems to have been in imminent danger; like the chriſtian who is often ſore beſet behind and before, only to excite his faith and fortitude, and to exalt the power and grace of God in his preſervation.

3. One loſs only whetted the Syrians revenge, v. 16. but their united forces met no more ſucceſs the ſecond time, than the firſt. In vain do they ſtrive, who fight againſt God.

4. Experience taught them at laſt to ſubmit, v. 19. It is a mercy if our ſufferings drive us at laſt to God, to take hold of his ſtrength, and make peace with him.

Before Chriſt 1037.

[o] Mic. iv. 11—13.

§ i. e. Euphrates.

† Shobach. 2 Sam. x. 16.

[p] Prov. xxvi. 17.

[q] Pſal. xxxiii. 16.

[r] Ibid. xlviii. 4. Rev. xviii. 10.

CHAP. XX.

We have here David's wars, 1. With the Ammonites, and the taking of Rabbah, ver. 1—3. 2. With the giants of the Philiſtines, ver. 4—8.

1. [a] AND it came to paſs, that † after the year was expired, [b] at the time that kings go out to battle, Joab led forth the power of the army, and waſted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and beſieged Rabbah ([c] but David tarried at Jeruſalem) and Joab ſmote Rabbah, and deſtroyed it. 2. And [d] David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found ‡ it to weigh [e] a talent of gold, and there were precious ſtones in it, and it was ſet upon David's head, and he brought alſo exceeding much ſpoil out of the city. 3. And he brought out the people that were in it: and cut them with ſaws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes: even ſo dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jeruſalem.

v. 1—3. Whilſt Joab conquered the country of the Ammonites, David ſtaid at Jeruſalem. We are told with grief, to how bad purpoſe, 2 Sam. xi. Here his crime is paſt over. A veil ſhould be drawn over the ſins that are repented of, and they ſhould no more be mentioned to a man's ſhame.

4. ¶ [f] And it came to paſs after this, that there aroſe war at † Gezer with the Philiſtines, at which time Sibbechai the Huſhathite ſlew ‡ Sippai that was of the children of ‖ the giant, and they were ſubdued. 5. And there was war again with the Philiſtines, and Elhanan the ſon of § Jair, ſlew Lahmi the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whoſe ſpear-ſtaff was like a weaver's beam. 6. And yet again there was war at Gath, where was a man of great ſtature, whoſe fingers and toes were four and twenty, ſix on each hand, and ſix on each foot: and he alſo was † the ſon of the giant. 7. But when [g] he defied Iſrael, Jonathan the ſon of Shimea, David's brother, ſlew him. 8. Theſe were born unto the giant in Gath; and [h] they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his ſervants.

v. 4—8. The Philiſtines ſtruggle long and hard againſt Iſrael, but all their mighty men fell at laſt before the victorious ſword of David and his ſervants. Note, Whilſt life endures, corruption will war; and we may ſtill find giants even to the laſt conflict; but the Lord ſhall in death at leaſt, put all enemies under our feet.

[a] 2 Sam. xi. 1.

† Heb. At the return of the year.

1036.

[b] 1 Kings xx. 22, 26. Eccleſ. iii. 8.

[c] Deut. xxxii. 15.

1035.

[d] 2 Sam. xii. 30.

‡ Heb. The weight of it.

[e] Prov. xiii. 22.

1018.

[f] 2 Sam. xxi. 18.

† Or Gob.

‡ Or Saph.

‖ Or Rapha.

§ Jaare-oregim. 2 Sam. xxi. 19.

† Heb. Born to Rapha. Ver. 8.

[g] 1 Sam. xvii. 10.

[h] Eccleſ. ix. 11. Jer. ix. 23. 1 Cor. i. 27. Rom. viii. 31.

CHAP. XXI.

Here is, 1. David's ſin in forcing Joab to number the people, ver. 1—4. 2. His ſorrow for it, ver. 5—8. 3. The judgment ſent of God, ver. 9—16. 4. David's repentance, and ſacrifice, and the ſlaying of the plague thereupon, ver. 18—30.

1. [a] AND Satan ſtood up againſt Iſrael, and provoked David to number Iſrael. 2. And David ſaid to Joab, and to the rulers of the people, [b] Go, number Iſrael from Beerſheba even to Dan; and [c] bring the number of them to me, that I may know it. 3. And Joab anſwered, The LORD † make his people an hundred times ſo many more as they be: but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's ſervants? why then doth my lord require this thing? why will he be a cauſe of treſpaſs to Iſrael? 4. Nevertheleſs, the king's word prevailed againſt Joab: wherefore Joab departed, and went throughout all Iſrael, and came to Jeruſalem. 5. ¶ And Joab gave the ſum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Iſrael were [d] a thouſand thouſand and an hundred thouſand men that drew ſword: and Judah was four hundred threeſcore and ten thouſand men that drew ſword. 6. But Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them: for the king's word was abominable to Joab.

v. 1—6. Obſerve,

1. The greateſt ſaints of God upon earth are men, againſt whom Satan deſpairs not of prevailing; and they have need to take heed leaſt they fall, as David did here.

2. Pride of heart was the corruption the devil wrought upon, and deep it lies in every boſom. If once he can ſtrike a ſpark on this tinder, eaſily it kindles.

3. Even a bad man, as Joab, may ſometimes ſee and condemn the evil in a child of God, yet their ſtate is very different; the one is rotten at the heart, the other deceived by the tempter, though habitually delighting in the law of God after the inner man.

4. When the heart is averſe, the work goes on heavily, and is left imperfect.

7. ¶ And God was diſpleaſed with this thing, [e] therefore he ſmote Iſrael. 8. [f] And David ſaid unto God, [g] I have ſinned greatly, becauſe I have done this thing: but now I beſeech thee, [h] do away the iniquity of thy ſervant, for I have done very fooliſhly. 9. ¶ And the LORD ſpake unto Gad, David's ſeer, ſaying, 10. Go and tell David, ſaying, Thus ſaith the LORD, I offer thee three things, chooſe thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee. 11. So Gad came to David, and ſaid unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD, [i] chooſe thee 12. Either three years [k] famine, or three months to be deſtroyed before thy foes (while that the ſword of thine enemies overtaketh thee) or elſe three days the ſword of the LORD, even the peſtilence in the land, and the angel of the LORD deſtroying throughout all the coaſts of Iſrael: now therefore adviſe thyſelf, what word I ſhall bring again to him that ſent me. 13. And David ſaid unto Gad, I am in a great ſtrait: let me fall now into the hand of the LORD (for † very [l] great are his mercies) but [m] let me not fall into the hand of man. 14. ¶ So the LORD ſent peſtilence upon Iſrael: and there fell of Iſrael [n] ſeventy thouſand men. 15. And God ſent an angel unto Jeruſalem to deſtroy it: and as he was deſtroying, the LORD beheld, and he [o] repented him of the evil, and ſaid to the angel that deſtroyed, It is enough, ſtay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD ſtood by the threſhing-floor of ‡ Ornan the Jebuſite. 16. And David lift up his eyes, and ſaw the angel of the LORD ſtand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn ſword in his hand, ſtretched out over Jeruſalem: then David and the elders of Iſrael, who were clothed in ſackcloth, fell upon their faces. 17. And David ſaid, unto God, Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? [p] even I it is that have ſinned and done evil indeed; but as for theſe ſheep, what have they done? let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and on my father's houſe, but not on thy people, that they ſhould be plagued.

Before Chriſt 1017.

[a] 2 Sam. xxiv. 1.

[b] Joſh. ix. 14.

[c] Deut. viii. 13, 14. Hab. ii. 4.

† Heb. Add unto.

[d] 2 Sam. xxiv. 9.

[e] Joſh. vii. 1.

[f] 2 Sam. xxiv. 10.

[g] Prov. xxviii. 13. 1 John i. 9.

[h] Mic. vii. 8, 9.

[i] Rev. iii. 19.

[k] Lam. iv. 9.

† Or many.

[l] Pſal. ciii. 13. & cxxx. 7. Lam. iii. 22.

[m] Prov. xii. 10. Iſa. xlvi 7. Zech. i. 15.

[n] Iſa. xxvi. 39.

[o] Pſal. lxxviii. 38. Hab. iii. 2.

‡ Araunah. 2 Sam. xxiv. 18.

[p] Ezek. xvi. 63.

v. 7—17. Obſerve here,

1. Where God hath love to a ſinner's ſoul, he will not ſpare the rod of chaſtiſement.

2. Gad's reproof brought David to his knees, but this could not ſave him from the threatned judgment. We ſhall ſuffer in the fleſh for our ſins, though our ſpirit may be ſaved in the day of the Lord.

3. Our folly uſually brings us into our greateſt ſtraits, and we have nobody but ourſelves to blame.

4. If God's mercy was not infinite, verily we ſhould be utterly conſumed.

5. The only reſource which we have left, is that God we have offended; when humbled in the duſt we fly to him, he will lay the uplifted thunderbolt aſide, v. 16.

18. ¶ Then the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to ſay to David, that David [q] ſhould go up and ſet up an altar unto the LORD, in the threſhing-floor of Ornan the Jebuſite. 19. And [r] David went up at the ſaying of Gad, which he ſpake in the name of the LORD. 20. † And Ornan turned back, and ſaw the angel; and his four ſons with him hid themſelves. Now Ornan was threſhing wheat. 21. And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked and ſaw David, and went out of the threſhing-floor, and bowed himſelf to David with his face to the ground. 22. Then David ſaid to Ornan, ‡ Grant me the place of this threſhing-floor, that I may build an altar therein unto the LORD: thou ſhalt grant it me for the full price, [s] that the plague may be ſtayed from the people. 23. And Ornan ſaid unto David, Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee the oxen alſo for burnt-offerings, and the threſhing-inſtruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat-offering, I give it all. 24. And king David ſaid to Ornan, Nay, but [t] I will verily buy it for the full price: for I will not take that which is thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt-offerings without coſt. 25. So David gave to Ornan for the place, [u] ſix hundred ſhekels of gold by weight. 26. And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings, and peace-offerings, and called upon the LORD, and [x] he anſwered him from heaven by fire upon the altar of burnt-offering. 27. And the LORD commanded the angel, and [y] he put up his ſword again into the ſheath thereof. 28. ¶ At that time, when David ſaw that the LORD had anſwered him in the threſhing-floor of Ornan the Jebuſite, then he ſacrificed there. 29. For [z] the tabernacle of the LORD, which Moſes made in the wilderneſs, and the altar of the burnt-offering, were at that ſeaſon in the high-place at Gibeon. 30. But David could not go before it to enquire of God; for [a] he was afraid, becauſe of the ſword of the angel of the LORD.

[q] Gen. xxii. 14. Pſal. xlvi. 1.
[r] Mat. xxviii. 20. Acts xxvi. 19.
† Or when Ornan turned, &c. then he and his four ſons, &c.
‡ Heb. Give.
[s] Num. xvi. 48.
[t] Rom. xii. 17. & xiii. 8.
[u] 2 Sam. xxiv. 24.
[x] Lev. ix. 24. 2 Chron. iii. 1.
[y] Pſal. lxxxv. 3. Iſa. xii. 1.
[z] Chap. xvi. 39.
[a] Pſal. cxix. 120.

v. 18—30. David is relieved from his terrible diſtreſs: Gad, the meſſenger of his plague, brings him notice of reconciliation, and directs him what to do, in which David makes no delay.

1. He purchaſes the threſhing-floor of Ornan, or Araunah, where the angel appeared, to rear an altar for ſacrifice.

2. He offers there the blood of atonement, and God teſtifies his acceptance, by fire from heaven on the ſacrifice. There is one ſacrifice in which God is well pleaſed; if his blood be upon us, then the ſword of judgment ſhall not hurt us.

3. David continued ever after to ſacrifice on this altar. At firſt, he was afraid to move from Jeruſalem, where he had ſeen the terrible angel, till the judgment was removed; and afterwards God's gracious acceptance of his offering, encouraged him to continue his attendance at the ſame place. Note, Where we have found eſpecial bleſſings to our ſouls, it is our wiſdom there to continue our attendance upon God.

CHAP. XXII.

We have here, 1. David's preparation to build the houſe of God, ver. 1—5. 2. His inſtructions to Solomon concerning the work, ver. 6—16. 3. His charge to the princes to aſſiſt him, ver. 17—19.

1. THEN David ſaid, [a] This is the houſe of the LORD God, and this is the altar of the burnt-offering for Iſrael. 2. And David commanded to gather together [b] the ſtrangers that were in the land of Iſrael, and he ſet maſons to hew wrought ſtones to build the houſe of God. 3. And David prepared iron in abundance for the nails for the doors of the gates, and for the joinings; and braſs in abundance [c] without weight; 4. Alſo cedar-trees in abundance: for the Zidonians, and they of Tyre brought much cedar-wood to David. 5. And David ſaid, [d] Solomon my ſon is [e] young and tender, and the houſe that is to be builded for the LORD, muſt be exceeding magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now make preparation for it. So David prepared abundantly before his death.

[a] Deut. xii. 5. Chap. xxi. 26. 2 Chron. iii. 1.
[b] 1 Kings ix. 21.
[c] Ver. 14.
[d] Chap. xxix. 1.
[e] 1 Kings iii. 7.

v. 1—5. That a houſe ſhould be built, was before reſolved: here, v. 1. the ſpot is fixed upon, and the preparations begun.

1. The reaſons given for the immediate concern David was in to make preparation for the building, though himſelf might not enjoy the honour of it, were, 1. The magnificence of the houſe of God. An abode, though not becoming the divine inhabitant, yet ſuperior to all that earth had ſeen beſide, to engage the attention of ſtrangers, who might be induced by its grandeur to viſit it. 2. Solomon was young, and ſhould the crown devolve to him, it would encourage him to proceed, when ſo much was ready to his hand. Note, (1.) Whilſt our moment is prolonged, it becomes us to labour for God. (2.) They who are ſtrong, ſhould eaſe their younger and weaker brethren of the more difficult ſervices.

2. The perſons he employed were ſtrangers; either they were more able artiſts, or he would have no ſervile work laid on free-born Iſraelites; or as a figure of things to come, when gentiles ſhould be called not only into the church, but be employed as maſter builders.

3. The preparations made were vaſt and coſtly, v. 2, 3, 4. No labours nor expence ſhould be ſpared, where God's glory is concerned.

6. ¶ Then he called for Solomon his ſon, and charged him to build an houſe for the LORD God of Iſrael. 7. And David ſaid to Solomon, My ſon, as for me, [f] it was in my mind to build an houſe [g] unto the name of the LORD my God: 8. But the word of the LORD came to me, ſaying, [h] Thou haſt ſhed blood abundantly, and haſt made great wars: thou ſhalt not build an houſe unto my name, becauſe thou haſt ſhed much blood upon the earth in my ſight. 9. [i] Behold, a ſon ſhall be born to thee who ſhall be a man of reſt, and I will give him reſt from all his enemies round about: for his name ſhall be † Solomon, and I will give peace and quietneſs unto Iſrael in his days. 10. [k] He ſhall build an houſe for my name, and [l] he ſhall be my ſon, and I will be his father, and [m] I will eſtabliſh the throne of his kingdom over Iſrael for ever. 11. Now, my ſon, [n] the LORD be with thee, and proſper thou, and build the houſe of the LORD thy God, as he hath ſaid of thee. 12. Only the LORD give thee [o] wiſdom and underſtanding, and give thee charge concerning Iſrael, that thou mayeſt keep the law of the LORD thy God. 13. [p] Then ſhalt thou proſper, if thou takeſt heed to fulfil the ſtatutes and judgments which the LORD charged Moſes with concerning Iſrael: [q] be ſtrong and of good courage, dread not, nor be diſmayed. 14. Now behold, in my trouble I have prepared for the houſe of the LORD an hundred thouſand talents of gold, and a thouſand thouſand talents of ſilver; and of braſs, and iron, [r] without weight (for it is in abundance) timber alſo and ſtone have I prepared, and thou mayeſt add thereto. 15. Moreover, there are workmen with thee in abundance, hewers, and ‡ workers of ſtone and timber, and all manner of cunning men for every manner of work. 16. Of the gold, the ſilver, and the braſs, and the iron there is no number. [s] Ariſe therefore, and be doing, and the LORD be with thee.

[f] 2 Sam. vii. 2. Chap. xvii. 1.
[g] Deut. xii. 5—11.
[h] 1 Kings v. 3. Chap. xxviii. 3.
[i] Chap. xxviii. 5.
† i. e. Peaceable.
[k] 2 Sam. vii. 13. 1 Kings v. 5. Chap. xvii. 12, 13.
[l] Heb. i. 5.
[m] Pſal. lxxxix. 29.
[n] Ver. 16.
[o] 1 Kings iii. 9. Pſal. lxxii. 1.
[p] Jer. xxii. 3, 4.
[q] Deut. xxxi. 7, 8. Joſh. i. 6, &c.
[r] Ver. 3.
‡ i. e. Maſons and carpenters.
[s] Ver. 11.

v. 6—16. The work of building the temple being by Divine appointment delegated to Solomon, David gives him inſtructions concerning it.

1. Becauſe of the perpetual wars in which he was engaged, and the blood he had ſhed, God forbad him to do it, but aſſured him withal, that a ſon ſhould be born to him, in whoſe days Iſrael ſhould be at peace, and he at leiſure to undertake the arduous taſk. Note, (1.) The church of Chriſt may not be built by the ſword of war, but by the preaching of the goſpel of peace. (2.) They who have leiſure from other avocations, are more immediately called to employ it in the work of God.

Before Chriſt 1017.

2. As an encouragement, David informs him, (1.) That vaſt preparations were already made, v. 14. notwithſtanding the troubles in which he had been involved. They were immenſe indeed, amounting, in ſilver and gold, beſide braſs, iron, cedar, ſtone, to near eight hundred million of our money; but it is rather thought Kikkar here ſignifies an ingot of leſs value than the Moſaic talent. (2.) That God hath promiſed to eſtabliſh his kingdom for ever, therefore that he could never do enough to ſhew his gratitude for the mercy, v. 10—14. Note, The more God hath done for us, the greater is our obligation to ſerve him.

3. He exhorts him not to be diſcouraged at the greatneſs of the work, or the difficulties in the way, v. 13. as alſo to take heed to all God's commandments; from obedience to which, he might hope for God's bleſſing, v. 13. Note, (1.) They who are intent on building up Chriſt's church, need much courage, for they will find many adverſaries and difficulties. (2.) It is not the greatneſs of the work, but the ſpirituality of the temper that gives it value before God.

4. David prays that God would give him wiſdom and underſtanding thus to walk and act; and bids him without delay addreſs himſelf to the work, up and be doing, aſſuredly concluding the Lord would be with him. Note, (1.) When we ariſe from prayer, we may comfortably and confidently expect that God will proſper the work of our hands. (2.) Truſt on his ſupport and bleſſing ſhould quicken our own endeavours.

17. ¶ David alſo commanded all the princes of Iſrael to help Solomon his ſon, ſaying, 18. Is not the LORD your God with you? and hath he not given you reſt on every ſide? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand, and the land is ſubdued before the LORD, and before his people. 19. Now [t] ſet your heart and your ſoul to ſeek the LORD your God, ariſe therefore, and [u] build ye the ſanctuary of the LORD God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy veſſels of God, into the houſe that is to be built to the name of the LORD.

[t] Chap. xxviii. 9. 2 Chron. xx. 3.
[u] 1 Theſ. v. 11.

v. 17—19. David exhorts the princes to aſſiſt his ſon in the undertaking. Kings need able miniſters, to execute the good they deſign.

1. They muſt ſet their heart to ſeek the Lord, as moſt bound by his mercies, v. 18. Note, The great and leading concern ſhould be, that the heart be right with God.

2. He calls upon them to help Solomon to build the ſanctuary, v. 19. Note, (1.) When the heart is engaged, head, hand, and purſe, will be employed in the ſervice. (2.) The moſt zealous and active miniſter wants aſſiſtance, and every private chriſtian is called upon to lend a helping hand.

CHAP. XXIII.

In this chapter, 1. David declares Solomon to be his ſucceſſor, ver. 1. 2. He numbers the Levites, and appoints them their offices, ver. 2—5. 3. He takes an account of the ſeveral families of the Levites, ver. 6—23. 4. He makes a new reckoning of them from twenty years old, and according to their age employs them, 24—32.

1015.

1. SO when David was old and full of days, [a] he made Solomon his ſon king over Iſrael. 2. ¶ And he gathered together all the princes of Iſrael, with the prieſts and the Levites. 3. Now the Levites were numbred [b] from the age of thirty years and upward: and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight thouſand. 4. Of which, twenty and four thouſand were to † ſet forward the work of the houſe of the LORD: and ſix thouſand were [c] officers and judges. 5. Moreover, four thouſand were porters, and four thouſand praiſed the LORD with the inſtruments [d] which I made (ſaid David) to praiſe therewith. 6. And David [e] divided them into ‡ courſes among the ſons of Levi, namely, Gerſhon, Kohath, and Merari. 7. ¶ [f] Of the Gerſhonites were ‖ Laadan, and Shimei. 8. The ſons of Laadan, the chief was Jehiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three. 9. The ſons of Shimei; Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. Theſe were the chief of the fathers of Laadan. 10. And the ſons of Shimei were, Jahath, § Zina, and Jeuſh, and Beriah. Theſe four were the ſons of Shimei. 11. And Jahath was the chief, and Zizah the ſecond: but Jeuſh and Beriah † had not many ſons: therefore they were in one reckoning, according to their father's houſe. 12. ¶ [g] The ſons of Kohath; Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel, four. 13. The ſons of [h] Amram; Aaron and Moſes: and [i] Aaron was ſeparated, that he ſhould ſanctify the moſt holy things, he and his ſons for ever, [k] to burn incenſe before the LORD, to miniſter unto him, and [l] to bleſs in his name for ever. 14. Now concerning Moſes the man of God, [m] his ſons were named of the tribe of Levi. 15. [n] The ſons of Moſes were Gerſhom, and Eliezer. 16. [o] Of the ſons of Gerſhom, ‡ Shebuel was the chief. 17. And the ſons of Eliezer were [p] Rehabiah the ‖ chief. And Eliezer had no other ſons; but the ſons of Rehabiah were § very many. 18. Of the ſons of Izhar; † Shelomith the chief. 19. [q] Of the ſons of Hebron; Jeriah the firſt, Amariah the ſecond, Jehaziel the third, and Jekameam the fourth. 20. Of the ſons of Uzziel; Micah the firſt, and Jeſiah the ſecond. 21. ¶ [r] The ſons of Merari; Mahli, and Muſhi: the ſons of Mahli; Eleazar and [s] Kiſh: 22. And Eleazar died, and [t] had no ſons, but daughters: and their ‡ brethren the ſons of Kiſh [u] took them. 23. [x] The ſons of Muſhi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth, three.

[a] 1 Kings i. 33—39. Chap. xxviii. 5.
[b] Num. xhii. 47.
† Or overſee.
[c] Deut. xvi. 18.
[d] See 2 Chron. xxix. 25. Amos vi. 5.
[e] Exod. vi. 16. Num. xxvi. 57. 2 Chron. viii. 14.
‡ Or diviſions.
[f] Chap. xxvi. 21.
‖ Libni. Chap. vi. 17.
§ Zizah. Ver. 11.
† Heb. Did not multiply ſons, &c.
[g] Exod. vi. 18.
[h] Ibid. 20.

Before Chriſt 1015.

[i] Ex. xxviii. 1. Heb. v. 4.
[k] Deut. xxi. 5.
[l] Num. vi. 23.
[m] See Chap. xxvi. 23—25.
[n] Exod. ii. 22. & xviii. 3, 4.
[o] Chap. xxvi. 24.
‡ Shubael. Chap. xxiv. 20.
[p] Chap. xxvi. 25.
‖ Or firſt.
§ Heb. Highly multiplied.
† Shelometh. Chap. xxiv. 22.
[q] Ibid. 23.
[r] Ibid. 26.
[s] Ibid. 29.
[t] Ibid. 28.
‡ Or kinſmen.
[u] See Num. xxxvi. 6, 8.
[x] Chap. xxiv. 30.

v. 1—23. David having declared Solomon his ſucceſſor, convokes a ſolemn aſſembly to recognize his appointment; and prevent all competition when he ſhould ſleep with his fathers, as he ſhortly expected, being now grown aged and infirm, and this aggravated the crime of Adonijah and his adherents. At this aſſembly, David perfected the ſettlement of the Levites.

1. He numbered them. Thirty-eight thouſand men, a vaſt increaſe ſince the time of Moſes, Numb. iv. 47. Even if we ſuppoſe that thoſe above fifty were now reckoned, who were then omitted? It is a diſtinguiſhed mercy to any people, when God giveth the word, and great is the company of the preachers.

2. David appointed them all their ſeveral employments. Twenty-four thouſand were employed, by a thouſand weekly, in rotation, to ſet forward the work of the temple, kill the ſacrifices, waſh, divide them, keep the temple and all the veſſels clean, and in order, and be aſſiſtants in all the ſervice to the prieſts, &c. Six thouſand were appointed judges and officers, as beſt ſkilled in the laws civil and eccleſiaſtical, and diſtributed through the cities of Iſrael, to maintain peace and execute juſtice. Four thouſand were the porters, a kind of guards, to prevent any unfit perſon from entring into the temple, or going farther than their limits. Four thouſand more were ſingers, divided into choirs, and conſtantly in ſucceſſion praiſing God day and night. Note, (1.) The work will go on well, where every man knows his poſt and buſineſs. (2.) In whatever ſtation a Levite is placed, diligence and zeal in the ſervice of God is his bounden duty.

3. The whole were divided into three claſſes, according to the three ſons of Levi, from whom they deſcended: thus the neareſt relations were employed together. Thoſe who are united in blood, ſhould be more united in love, and give aſſiſtance to each other. The family of Moſes claſſes with common Levites, and has no mark of diſtinction; an evidence of the diſintereſted conduct of their great progenitor. Rehabiah, one of his deſcendants, is remarked for his numerous family, v. 17. Aaron's family appears with chief dignity, conſecrated to God, to miniſter in the moſt holy things. God has a right to chuſe his own ſervants; and it were impious, and with us perjured hypocriſy, for any man to take this honour to himſelf, who is not inwardly moved by the Holy Ghoſt, and called of God as was Aaron.

24. ¶ Theſe were the ſons of [y] Levi after the houſe of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD, [z] from the age of twenty years and upward. 25. For David ſaid, The LORD God of Iſrael hath given reſt unto his people, † that they may dwell in Jeruſalem for ever; 26. And alſo unto the Levites: they ſhall no more carry the tabernacle, nor any veſſels of it for the ſervice thereof. 27. For by the laſt words of David, the Levites were numbred from twenty years old and above. 28. Becauſe their ‡ office was to wait on the ſons of Aaron, [a] for the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD, in the courts, and in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the ſervice of the houſe of God; 29. Both for [b] the ſhew-bread, and [c] for the fine flour for meat-offering, and for [d] the unleavened cakes, and for [e] that which is baked in the ‖ pan, and for that which is fried, and for all manner of [f] meaſure and ſize: 30. And to ſtand every morning to thank and praiſe the LORD, and likewiſe [g] at even: 31. And to offer all burnt-ſacrifices unto the LORD [h] in the ſabbaths, in the new moons, and on the ſet feaſts,

[y] Num. i. 17, 21.
[z] Ibid. iv. 3, & viii. 24 Ezra iii. 8.
† Or, And he dwelleth, &c.
‡ Heb. Station was at the hand of the ſons, &c. Neh. xi. 24
[a] Num. iii. 6.
[b] Exod. xxv. 30.
[c] Lev. vi. 20. Chap. ix. 29, &c.
[d] Lev. ii. 4.
[e] Ibid. 5, 7.
‖ Or flat plate.
[f] Lev. xix. 35.
[g] Pſal. cxxxiv. 1.
[h] Num. x. 10. Pſal. lxxxi. 3.

by number, according to the order commanded unto them continually before the LORD: 32. And that they ſhould keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the holy place, and [i] the charge of the ſons of Aaron their brethren, in the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD.

[i] Num. iii. 6, 9.

v. 24—32. The ark and all the ſacred furniture being no more to be removed, as they had been during their marches through the wilderneſs, David by divine appointment makes an alteration in the age at which the Levites were to begin their miniſtration, from twenty years old and upwards, (See Numb. viii. 24.) And this was the more neceſſary, as the temple ſervice would be much more frequented, than the tabernacle had been at Shiloh or Gibeon. Note, (1.) God proportions our ſtrength to our burdens. (2.) If the harveſt is plenteous, the Lord in mercy will raiſe up labourers.—The particular buſineſs of the attendant Levites, who aſſiſted the prieſts, is here marked out to them. 1. They were to keep the courts and chambers clean, prepare the ſacrifices, and meat and drink-offerings, that the prieſts might have them ready to their hands; and this with exactneſs, according to the weights and meaſures preſcribed. 2. Others, morning and evening, at the time of the daily ſacrifice, offered up praiſes to God, with vocal and inſtrumental muſick. 3. The porters were to take care that nothing came in, or was carried out of the temple, contrary to the law; and to execute the commands of their brethren the prieſts. Note, Let not thoſe whom God hath advanced to honour, grow proud and imperious; but remember, that, though exalted above their brethren, they are ſtill to treat them as brethren.

CHAP. XXIV.

We have here the diſtribution, 1. Of the prieſts, ver. 1—19. 2. Of the Levites, ver. 20—31.

1. NOW theſe are the diviſions of the ſons of Aaron: [a] The ſons of Aaron; Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. 2. But Nadab and Abihu [b] died before their father, and had no children: therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the prieſt's office. 3. And David diſtributed them, both Zadok of the ſons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the ſons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their ſervice. 4. And there were more chief men found of the ſons of Eleazar, than of the ſons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided: Among the ſons of Eleazar there were ſixteen chief men of the houſe of their fathers, and eight among the ſons of Ithamar according to the houſe of their fathers. 5. Thus were they divided [c] by lot, one ſort with another; for the governors of the ſanctuary, and governors of the houſe of God, were of the ſons of Eleazar, and of the ſons of Ithamar. 6. And Shemaiah the ſon of Nethaneel the ſcribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king and the princes, and Zadok the prieſt, and Ahimelech the ſon of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the prieſts and Levites: one † principal houſhold being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar. 7. Now the firſt lot came forth to Jehoiarib, the ſecond to Jedaiah, 8. The third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim, 9. The fifth to Malchijah, the ſixth to Mijamin, 10. The ſeventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to [d] Abijah, 11. The ninth to Jeſhuah, the tenth to Shecaniah, 12. The eleventh to Eliaſhib, the twelfth to Jakim, 13. The thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeſhebeab, 14. The fifteenth to Bilgah, the ſixteenth to Immer, 15. The ſeventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphſes, 16. The nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezekel, 17. The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul, 18. The three and twentieth to Delaiah, the four and twentieth to Maaziah. 19. [e] Theſe were the orderings of them in their ſervice [f] to come into the houſe of the LORD, according to their manner, under Aaron their father, as the LORD God of Iſrael had commanded him.

[a] Lev. x. 1, 6.
[b] Num. iii. 4. & xxvi. 61.
[c] Joſh. xviii. 10. Prov, xvi. 33.
† Heb. Houſe of the father.
[d] Neh. xii. 17. Luke i. 5.
[e] 1 Cor. i. 10.
[f] Chap. ix. 25.

v. 1—19. The prieſts were divided into twenty-four courſes, who came into waiting by turns. The family of Eleazar, being moſt numerous, had ſixteen courſes; Ithamar, only eight. That there might be no diſpute about precedence, God appoints the determination to be by lot, of the order in which they ſhould miniſter, v. 6—18. and theſe courſes, though interrupted probably during the reigns of wicked kings, or in the captivity, yet ſubſiſted ſtill at their return, and till the deſtruction of the ſecond temple. In Luke i. 5. we find John the Baptiſt's father of the courſe of Abijah, v. 10. Note, Order and regularity in God's worſhip muſt be carefully preſerved.

20. ¶ And the reſt of the ſons of Levi were theſe: Of the ſons of Amram; Shubael: of the ſons of † Shubael; Jehdeiah. 21. Concerning [g] Rehabiah: of the ſons of Rehabiah, the firſt was Iſſhiah. 22. Of the Izharites; ‡ Shelomoth: of the ſons of Shelomoth; Jahath. 23. And the ſons of [h] Hebron; Jeriah the firſt, Amariah the ſecond, Jahaziel the third, Jekameam the fourth. 24. Of the ſons of Uzziel; Michah: of the ſons of Michah; Shamir. 25. The brother of Michah was Iſſhiah: of the ſons of Iſſhiah; Zechariah. 26. [i] The ſons of Merari were, Mahli and Muſhi: the ſons of Jaaziah; Beno. 27. ¶ The ſons of Merari by Jaaziah; Beno, and Shoham, and Zaccur, and Ibri. 28. Of Mahli came Eleazar, [k] who had no ſons. 29. Concerning Kiſh: the ſon of Kiſh was Jerahmeel. 30. [l] The ſons of Muſhi; Mahli, and Eder, and Jeremoth. Theſe were the ſons of the Levites, after the houſe of their fathers. 31. Theſe likewiſe [m] caſt lots over againſt their brethren the ſons of Aaron, in the preſence of David the king, and Zadok and Ahimelech, and the chief of the fathers of the prieſts and Levites, even § the principal fathers, over againſt their younger brethren.

† Shebuel. Chap. xxiii. 16.
[g] Chap. xxiii. 17.
‡ Shelomith, Chap. xxiii. 18.
[h] Chap xxiii. 19. & xxvi. 31.
[i] Exod. vi. 19. Chap. xxiii. 21.
[k] Chap. xxiii. 22.
[l] Ibid. 23.
[m] Ver. 5.
§ Heb. The chief againſt his younger brother.

v. 20—31. The Levites, divided into the ſame number of courſes as the prieſts, caſt lots alſo to determine their order of ſervice. When God determined their lot, there would be no room for ſtrife. The prieſts are called their brethren, becauſe, though the Levites were in a ſtation inferior, yet they were employed in the ſame ſacred ſervice, and to be regarded not as ſervants, but as aſſiſtants in their work.

CHAP. XXV.

We have here, 1. The perſons that were to be employed as ſingers, Aſaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, ver. 1. Their ſons, ver. 2—6. and other artiſts, ver. 7. 2. The order in which they were to attend determined by lot, ver. 8—31.

1. MOreover David and the captains of the hoſt ſeparated to the ſervice of the ſons of [a] Aſaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who ſhould propheſy with harps, with pſalteries, and with cymbals: and the number of the workmen, according to their ſervice, was: 2. Of the ſons of Aſaph: Zaccur, and Joſeph, and Nethaniah, and † Aſarelah, the ſons of Aſaph, under the hands of Aſaph, which [b] propheſied ‡ according to the order of the king. 3. Of Jeduthun: the ſons of Jeduthun; Gedaliah, and § Zeri, and Jeſhaiah, Haſhabiah, and Mattithiah, ‖ ſix, under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who propheſied with a harp, to give thanks, and to praiſe the LORD. 4. Of Heman: the ſons of Heman; Bukkiah, Mattithiah, † Uzziel, ‡ Shebuel, and Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, and Romamti-ezer, Joſhbekaſhah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth: 5. All theſe were the ſons of Heman the king's [c] ſeer [d] in the words of God, to lift up the § horn. And [e] God gave to Heman fourteen ſons and three daughters. 6. All theſe were under the hands of their father, [f] for ſong in the houſe of the LORD with cymbals, pſalteries, and harps, for the ſervice of the houſe of God, according to the king's order, to Aſaph, Jeduthun, and Heman. 7. So the number of them, with their brethren, that were inſtructed in the ſongs of the LORD, even all that were cunning, was [g] two hundred fourſcore and eight. 8. ¶ And they caſt lots, ward againſt ward, as well the ſmall as the great, [h] the teacher as the ſcholar. 9. Now the firſt lot came forth for Aſaph to Joſeph, the ſecond to Gedaliah, who with his brethren and ſons were twelve: 10. The third to Zaccur, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 11. The fourth to Izri, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 12. The fifth to Nethaniah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 13. The ſixth to Bukkiah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 14. The ſeventh to Jeſharelah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 15. The eighth to Jeſhaiah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve:

[a] Chap. vi. 33, 39, 44.
† Jeſharelah, Ver. 14.
[b] 1 Cor. xiv. 24.
‡ Heb. By the hands of the king.
§ Izri, Ver. 11.
‖ i. e. With Shimei, mentioned ver. 17.
† Azareel, Ver. 18.
‡ Shubael, Ver. 20.
[c] 1 Sam. ix. 9.
[d] 1 Pet. iv. 11.
§ A kind of muſical inſtrument.
[e] Gen. xxxiii. 5. Pſ. cxxvii. 3.
[f] Col. iii. 16.
[g] Chap. xxiii. 5.
[h] 2 Chron. xxiii. 13.

Before Chriſt 1015.

16. The ninth to Mattaniah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 17. The tenth to Shimei, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 18. The eleventh to Azareel, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 19. The twelfth to Haſhabiah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 20. The thirteenth to Shubael, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 21. The fourteenth to Mattithiah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 22. The fifteenth to Jeremoth, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 23. The ſixteenth to Hananiah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 24. The ſeventeenth to Joſhbekaſhah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 25. The eighteenth to Hanani, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 26. The nineteenth to Mallothi, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 27. The twentieth to Eliathah, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 28. The one and twentieth to Hothir, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 29. The two and twentierh to Giddalti, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 30. The three and twentieth to Mahazioth, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve: 31. The four and twentieth to Romamti-ezer, he, his ſons and his brethren were twelve.

v. 1—31. The courſes of ſingers are here appointed to accompany the prieſts and Levites in their ſervice. Aſaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, or Ethan, were the three great maſters, and their ſons under them, four and twenty, according to the number of courſes. Their ſervice is called prophecying, (See 1 Cor. xi. 4. xiv. 24.) for the ſongs in which they praiſed God were chiefly prophetical of the Meſſiah. A variety of inſtruments were uſed to fill the ſacred chorus, whilſt their hearts and voices joined in the ſongs of the Lord. Muſic is highly pleaſing; but we muſt not loſe the ſenſe in the ſound. Songs of praiſe are no longer harmonious, than whilſt we are making melody in our hearts unto God. Each of theſe twenty-four had eleven aſſiſtant ſingers, of the moſt muſical of their brethren, in all 288; and as four thouſand are before ſaid to be appointed for ſong, either they were divided into claſſes, and followed when theſe principal ſingers led; or they might be employed in teaching the divine hymns of David to the reſt of the people in the country. The ſingers were appointed by lot as before, and we may obſerve many of the younger ſons were preferred before their elders. Note, The younger in years, are often the elder in grace.

CHAP. XXVI.

We have here an account, 1. Of the Levites that were to be porters, ver. 1—19. 2. Of thoſe that were to be treaſurers and ſtorekeepers, ver. 20—28. 3. Of thoſe that were to be officers and judges in the country, ver. 29—32.

1. CONCERNING the diviſions of the porters: Of the Corhites was † Meſhelemiah the ſon of Kore, of the ſons of ‡ Aſaph. 2. And the ſons of Meſhelemiah, were Zechariah the firſt-born, Jediael the ſecond, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth, 3. Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the ſixth, Elioenai the ſeventh. 4. Moreover, the ſons of Obed-edom were Shemaiah the firſt-born, Jehozabad the ſecond, Joah the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth, 5. Ammiel the ſixth, Iſſachar the ſeventh, Peulthai the eighth: [a] for God bleſſed him. 6. Alſo unto Shemaiah his ſon were ſons born, that ruled throughout the houſe of their father: for they were mighty men of valour. 7. The ſons of Shemaiah; Othni, and Rephael, and Obed, Elzabad, whoſe brethren were ſtrong men; Elihu and Semachiah. 8. All theſe of the ſons of Obed-edom: they and their ſons and their brethren, able men for ſtrength for the ſervice, were threeſcore and two of Obed-edom. 9. And Meſhelemiah had ſons and brethren, ſtrong men, eighteen. 10. Alſo [b] Hoſah of the children of Merari had ſons; Simri the chief (for though he was not the firſt-born, yet his father made him the chief). 11. Hilkiah the ſecond, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth: all the ſons and brethren of Hoſah were thirteen. 12. Among theſe were the diviſions of the porters, even among the chief men, having wards one againſt another, to miniſter in the houſe of the LORD. 13. ¶ And they caſt lots § as well the ſmall as the great, according to the houſe of their fathers for every gate. 14. And the lot eaſtward fell to ‖ Shelemiah; then for Zechariah his ſon (a wiſe counſeller) they caſt lots, and his lot came out northward. 15. To Obed-edom ſouthward, and to his ſons, the houſe of † Aſuppim. 16. To Shuppim and Hoſah, the lot came forth weſtward, with the gate Shallecheth, by the cauſey of the going up, ward againſt ward. 17. Eaſtward were ſix Levites, northward four a day, ſouthward four a day, and toward Aſuppim two and two. 18. At ‡ Parbar weſtward, four at the cauſey, and two at Parbar. 19. Theſe are the diviſions of the porters among the ſons of Kore, and among the ſons of Merari.

† Or Shelemiah, Ver. 14.
‡ Ebiaſaph, Chap. vi. 37. & ix. 19.
a Chap. xiii. 14. Pſal. cxxvii. 3. & cxxviii. 1. b Chap. xvi. 38.
§ Heb. As well for the ſmall as for the great. Chap. xxv. 8.
‖ Meſhelemiah, Ver. 1.

Before Chriſt 1015.
† Heb. Gatherings.
c See 1 Kings x. 5. 2 Chron. ix. 4.
‡ A Chaldee word, ſignifying an out-part.

v. 1—19. The porters ſeem to have been divided into the ſame number of courſes as the reſt of their brethren, each poſted at their ſeveral gates by lot. They are ſpoken of as mighty men, ſtrong and able, ſuch as their poſt required, to keep conſtant guard, that no profane intruder might be admitted, nor the ſacred houſe violated. The family of Obed-edom were employed in this office. He was bleſſed with a numerous family, and none more deſerving of keeping the charge of the temple, than he who had ſo chearfully entertained, and diligently waited on, the ark at his own houſe. They who have been faithful in leſſer ſervices, deſerve to be preferred. Simri, one of the ſons of Hoſah, was chief, his elder brother being probably by bodily indiſpoſition incapacitated for the ſervice.

20. And of the Levites, Ahijah was over the treaſures of the houſe of God, and over [d] the treaſures of the † dedicate things. 21. As concerning the ſons of ‡ Laadan: the ſons of the Gerſhonite Laadan, chief fathers, even of Laadan the Gerſhonite, were Jehieli. 22. The ſons of § Jehieli; Zetham, and Joel his brother, which were over the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD. 23. Of the Amramites, and the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites: 24. And [e] Shebuel the ſon of Gerſhom the ſon of Moſes, was ruler of the treaſures. 25. And his brethren by Eliezer; Rehabiah his ſon, and Jeſhaiah his ſon, and Joram his ſon, and Zichri his ſon, and [f] Shelomith his ſon. 26. Which Shelomith and his brethren, were over all the treaſures of the dedicate things, which David the king and the chief fathers, the captains over thouſands and hundreds, and the captains of the hoſt had dedicated. 27. ‖ Out of the ſpoils won in battles, did they dedicate to maintain the houſe of the LORD. 28. And all that Samuel [g] the ſeer, and Saul the ſon of Kiſh, and Abner the ſon of Ner, and Joab the ſon of Zeruiah had dedicated, and whoſoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith, and of his brethren.

d Deut. xii. 11. Chap. xxviii. 12. Mal. iii. 10.
† Heb. Holy things.
‡ Libni, Chap. vi. 17.
§ Jehiel, Chap. xxiii. 8. & xxix. 8.
e Chap. xxiii. 16.
f Ibid. 18.
‖ Heb. Out of the battles and ſpoils.
g 1 Sam. ix. 9.

v. 20—28. In the houſe of God there were great ſtores needed for the daily uſe and ſervice of the altar, veſtments, utenſils, &c. and alſo great treaſures, either offerings of the people, or things which had been dedicated to God by Samuel, David, Saul, Abner, and Joab, chiefly of the ſpoil won in war. Over theſe Ahijah at firſt preſided, but afterwards they were under the care of different perſons. Note, (1.) When God increaſes our ſtores with providential bleſſings, he is entitled to a part at leaſt of the wealth he beſtows. (2.) There is in the church of Chriſt greater treaſures, not indeed of ſilver and gold, for his kingdom is not of this world; but more valuable and durable treaſures, of ſpiritual wiſdom, and divine grace; and not, like theſe, locked up, but freely diſpenſed to every faithful worſhipper, and yet there ſtill remains enough and to ſpare.

29. ¶ Of the Izrahites, Chenaiah and his ſons were for the outward buſineſs over Iſrael, for [h] officers and judges. 30. And of the Hebronites, Haſhabiah and his brethren, men of valour, a thouſand and ſeven hundred were † officers among them of Iſrael on this ſide Jordan weſtward, in all buſineſs of the LORD, and in the ſervice of the king. 31. Among the Hebronites was [i] Jerijah the chief, even among the Hebronites, according to the generations of his fathers. In the fortieth year of the reign of David, they were ſought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour, [k] at Jazer of Gilead. 32. And his brethren, men of valour, were two thouſand and ſeven hundred chief fathers, whom king David made rulers over the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, for every matter pertaining to God, and [l] affairs of the king.

h Chap. xxiii. 4.
† Heb. Over the charge.
i Chap. xxiii. 19.
k See Joſh. xxi. 34, 39.
l 2 Chron. xix. 11.

v. 29—32. The ſervice at Jeruſalem was well provided for; here the buſineſs of the country is alike taken care of. The

Before Chriſt 1015.

Levites had the adminiſtration of juſtice, with the princes and elders of the ſeveral tribes, who may be ſuppoſed not ſo well ſkilled in the law, and in need of their aſſiſtance. All matters relating to God's worſhip alſo, and the king's revenue, came under their care. In the remote tribes beyond Jordan, the greateſt number was ſtationed, where they would be moſt in danger, but by their preſence might be preſerved faithful in the ſervice of God, and loyal to their ſovereign. Theſe regulations employed the laſt year of David, whoſe uſefulneſs ended only with his life. Note, (1.) Whilſt life endures, there is always ſomething to be done for God. (2.) They are like to be a happy people, who are taught to fear God, and honour the king.

CHAP. XXVII.

In this chapter we have the civil liſt, including the military. 1. The twelve captains for every ſeveral month of the year, ver. 1—15. 2. The princes of the ſeveral tribes, ver. 16—24. 3. The officers of the court, ver. 25—34.

1. NOW the children of Iſrael after their number, to wit, the chief fathers and captains of thouſands, and hundreds, and their officers that ſerved the king in any matter of the courſes, which came in and went out month by month, throughout all the months of the year, of every courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 2. Over the firſt courſe for the firſt month, was [a] Jaſhobeam the ſon of Zabdiel: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 3. Of the children of Perez, was the chief of all the captains of the hoſt for the firſt month. 4. And over the courſe of the ſecond month, was † Dodai an Ahohite, and of his courſe was Mikloth alſo the ruler: in his courſe likewiſe were twenty and four thouſand. 5. The third captain of the hoſt for the third month, was Benaiah the ſon of Jehoiada a ‡ chief prieſt: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 6. This is that Benaiah, [b] who was mighty among the thirty, and above the thirty: and in his courſe was Ammizabad his ſon. 7. The fourth captain for the fourth month, was [c] Aſahel the brother of Joab, and Zebadiah his ſon after him: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 8. The fifth captain for the fifth month, was Shamhuth the Izrahite: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 9. The ſixth captain for the ſixth month, was [d] Ira the ſon of Ikkeſh the Tekoite: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 10. The ſeventh captain for the ſeventh month, was [e] Helez the Pelonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 11. The eighth captain for the eighth month, was [f] Sibbecai the Huſhathite, of the Zarhites: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 12. The ninth captain for the ninth month, was [g] Abiezer the Anetothite, of the Benjamites: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 13. The tenth captain for the tenth month, was [h] Mahari the Netophathite, of the Zarhites: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 14. The eleventh captain for the eleventh month, was [i] Benaiah the Pirathonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand. 15. The twelfth captain for the twelfth month, was § Heldai the Netophathite, of Othniel: and in his courſe were twenty and four thouſand.

[a] 2 Sam. xxiii. 8. Chap. xi. 11.
† Dodo. 2 Sam. xxiii 9.
‡ Or, principal officer.
[b] 2 Sam. xxiii. 20, 22, 23. Chap. xi. 22, &c.
[c] 2 Sam. xxiii. 24. Chap. xi. 26.
[d] Chap. xi. 28.
[e] Chap. xi. 27.
[f] 2 Sam. xxi. 18.
[g] Chap. xi. 28.
[h] 2 Sam. xxiii. 28.
[i] Chap. xi. 31.
§ Heled. Chap. xi. 30.

v. 1—15. The military eſtabliſhment was divided into twelve courſes of twenty-four thouſand men, ſerving monthly, amounting in all to 288,000 men. This regulation, though now mentioned, ſeems to have taken place early in David's reign, Aſahel, v. 7. being killed whilſt David reigned in Hebron. Without the expence of a ſtanding army, a vaſt force was thus always ready; a well-ordered militia, the nation's beſt ſecurity. The chief fathers, v. 1. ſeem not to be the real fathers of the ſoldiers, but the general officers, who had the chief ſuperintendance. Benaiah, one of them, is called a chief prieſt, v. 5. but Cohen ſignifies a prince, or ruler, it being hardly probable, that one of that order would be engaged thus in a military life. Note, When we are at peace, it is wiſe to be always ready for war: and eſpecially in our ſpiritual concerns, never to think ourſelves ſo ſafe, as not to keep a conſtant guard and watch againſt our enemies.

16. ¶ Furthermore, over the tribes of Iſrael: the ruler of the Reubenites was Eliezer the ſon of Zichri: of the Simeonites, Shephatiah the ſon of Maachah: 17. Of the Levites, [k] Haſhabiah the ſon of Kemuel: of the Aaronites, Zadok: 18. Of Judah, † Elihu, one of the brethren of David: of Iſſachar, Omri the ſon of Michael: 19. Of Zebulun, Iſhmaiah the ſon of Obadiah: of Naphtali, Jerimoth the ſon of Azriel: 20. Of the children of Ephraim, Hoſhea the ſon of Azaziah: of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh, Joel the ſon of Pedaiah: 21. Of the half-tribe of Manaſſeh in Gilead, Iddo the ſon of Zechariah: of Benjamin, Jaaſiel the ſon of Abner. 22. Of Dan, Azareel the ſon of Jeroham. Theſe were the princes of the tribes of Iſrael. 23. ¶ But David took not the number of them from twenty years old and under: becauſe the LORD had ſaid, he would increaſe Iſrael like to [l] the ſtars of the heavens. 24. Joab the ſon of Zeruiah [m] began to number, but he finiſhed not, becauſe [n] there fell wrath for it againſt Iſrael, neither was the number put in the account of the chronicles of king David. 25. ¶ And over the king's treaſures was Azmaveth the ſon of Adiel: and over the ſtorehouſes in the fields, in the cities, and in the villages, and in the caſtles, was Jehonathan the ſon of Uzziah. 26. And over them that did the work of the field for tillage of the ground, was Ezri the ſon of Chelub. 27. And over the vineyard was Shimei the Ramathite: over ‡ the increaſe of the vineyards for the vine-cellars, was Zabdi the Shiphmite. 28. And over the olive-trees, and the ſycamore-trees, that were in the low plains, was Baal-hanan the Gederite: and over the cellars of oil was Joaſh. 29. And over the herds that fed in Sharon, was Shitrai the Sharonite: and over the herds that were in the valleys, was Shaphat the ſon of Adlai. 30. Over the camels alſo, was Obil the Iſhmeelite: and over the aſſes, was Jehdeiah the Meronothite. 31. And over the flocks, was Jaziz the Hagerite. All theſe were the rulers of the ſubſtance which was king David's. 32. Alſo Jonathan David's uncle was a counſeller, a wiſe man, and a § ſcribe: and Jehiel ‖ the ſon of Hachmoni was with the king's ſons. 33. And [o] Ahithophel was the king's counſeller, and [p] Huſhai the Archite was the king's companion. 34. And after Ahithophel, was Jehoiada the ſon of Benaiah, and Abiathar: and the general of the king's army was [q] Joab.

Before Chriſt 1015.

[k] Chap. xxvi. 30.
† Eliab. 1 Sam. xvi. 6.
[l] Gen. xv. 5.
[m] Chap. xxi. 4.
[n] 2 Sam. xxiv. 15. Chap. xxi. 7.
‡ Heb. That which was of the vineyards.
§ Or ſecretary.
‖ Or Hachmonite.
[o] 2 Sam. xv. 12.
[p] Ibid. 37. & xvi. 17.
[q] Chap. xi. 6.

v. 16—34. 1. Every tribe ſeems to have ſtill a preſident, or prince; who, tho' ſubject to the king, had great authority under him among his brethren. Among theſe we find a ſon of Abner: his father's oppoſition to David prevented not the ſon's preferment.

2. In the numbering of the people, v. 23. David, deſirous only to know the ſtate of his men of war, numbered not thoſe under twenty years of age, for the reaſon given, v. 23. but even the regiſter Joab had taken, was never entered into the book of annals, David having been convinced of his ſin, and unwilling any monument of it ſhould remain. Note, Though our ſins ſhould never be forgotten by us, yet it is deſirable, that the records of them ſhould not remain; leſt poſterity, inſtead of being excited to imitate what is excellent, ſhould ſtumble at what is evil.

3. David's finances were wiſely managed. He had not only a treaſurer to take care of the tribute, and the money brought into his exchequer; but he had vaſt tracts of crown lands, for corn and oil, vineyards, flocks, and herds, over which ſeveral officers were placed; an example of good management to his ſubjects.

4. About his perſon and court were ſelect perſons eminent for their wiſdom. One was preceptor to his children. He knew the advantage of a good education, and would therefore train up his ſons betimes in the way they ſhould go. Others were his counſellors, and, among them, Ahithophel. Huſhai had the diſtinguiſhed honour of being his companion and friend. Note, (1.) A wicked man may be a wiſe counſellor. (2.) Though a good king may find it neceſſary to make uſe of ſuch in his cabinet for council, he will chuſe a better man for his companion and friend.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The account here given of David's end is truly noble, 1. A general convention of the ſtates is ſummoned, ver. 1. 2. Solomon is appointed to the crown, and to build the temple, ver. 2—7. 3. David exhorts Solomon and the people to make religion their buſineſs, ver. 8—10. 4. Delivers to Solomon the model and materials for building the temple, ver. 11—19. 5. Encourages him to undertake it, ver. 20, 21.

1. AND David aſſembled all the princes of Iſrael, [a] the princes of the tribes, and [b] the captains of the

[a] Chap. xxvii. 16.
[b] Ibid. 1, &c.

the companies that miniſtred to the king by courſe, and the captains over the thouſands, and captains over the hundreds, and [c] the ſtewards over all the ſubſtance and † poſſeſſion of the king, ‡ and of his ſons, with the § officers, and with [d] the mighty men, and with all the valiant men unto Jeruſalem. 2. Then David the king ſtood up upon his feet, and ſaid, Hear me, my brethren, and my people, As for me, [e] I had in mine heart to build an houſe of [f] reſt for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and for [g] the footſtool of our God, and had made ready for the building: 3. But God ſaid unto me, [h] Thou ſhalt not build an houſe for my name, becauſe thou haſt been a man of war, and haſt ſhed ‖ blood. 4. Howbeit, the LORD God of Iſrael choſe me before all the houſe of my father, to be king over Iſrael for ever: for he hath choſen [i] Judah to be the ruler; and of the houſe of Judah, [k] the houſe of my father: and among the ſons of my father, [l] he liked me to make me king over all Iſrael: 5. And [m] of all my ſons (for the LORD hath given me many ſons) [n] he hath choſen Solomon my ſon, to ſit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Iſrael. 6. And he ſaid unto me, [o] Solomon thy ſon, he ſhall build my houſe and my courts: for I have choſen him to be my ſon, and I will be his father. 7. Moreover, I will eſtabliſh his kingdom for ever, [p] if he be † conſtant to do my commandments and my judgments, as at this day. 8. Now therefore in the ſight of all Iſrael the congregation of the LORD, and in the audience of our God, keep and ſeek for all the commandments of the LORD your God: that ye may poſſeſs this good land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever. 9. ¶ And thou, Solomon my ſon, [q] know thou the God of thy father, and ſerve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind: for [r] the LORD ſearcheth all hearts, and underſtandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: if thou ſeek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forſake him, he will caſt thee off for ever. 10. Take heed now, for the LORD hath choſen thee to build an houſe for the ſanctuary: be ſtrong and do it.

Before Chriſt 1015.

[c] Chap. xxvii. 25.
† Or cattle.
‡ Or, and his ſons.
§ Or eunuchs.
[d] Chap. xi. 10.
[e] 2 Sam. vii. 2.
[f] Pſ. cxxxii. 5.
[g] Pſ. xcix. 5. & cxxxii. 7.
[h] 2 Sam. vii. 5, 13. 1 Kings v. 3. Chap. xxii. 8.
‖ Heb. Bloods.
[i] Gen. xlix. 8. 1 Sam. xvi. 13. Chap. v. 2. Pſ. lx. 7. & lxxviii. 68.
[k] 1 Sam. xvi. 1.
[l] Ibid. 12.
[m] Chap. xxiii. 1.
[n] Chap. xxii. 9.
[o] 2 Sam. vii. 13, 14. 2 Chron. i. 9.
[p] 1 Kings ii. 3.
† Heb. Strong.
[q] Jer. ix. 24. John xvii. 3.
[r] 1 Sam. xvi. 7. Chap. xxix. 17. Pſ. vii. 9. & cxxxix. 2. Prov. xvii. 3. Jer. xi. 20. & xvii. 10. & xx. 12.

v. 1—10. Sinking under age and infirmities, the good old king makes one laſt effort to addreſs the grand aſſembly he had convened for the ſolemn appointment of his ſucceſſor.

1. He opens his ſpeech with the moſt gracious expreſſions; and whilſt as their king he demands attention, he calls them his brethren, and beloved people, to teſtify the affection he bore them, and to engage a more ready concurrence with his intentions. Note, (1.) Chriſt, the greater king of his Iſrael, is not aſhamed of this endeared relation, Heb. xi. 11. (2.) Reſpect and kindneſs to inferiors will engage their more chearful ſervice.

2. He lets them know his intentions to have built a temple for the ark, the footſtool of God, his preſence being viſible over it between the cherubims; but God, for the reaſons given, chap. xxii. 7, 8. prevented him, and reſerved it for his ſon's reign, who ſhould have leiſure for the vaſt undertaking. However, he had amaſſed vaſt preparations to facilitate the work.

3. He informs them of the divine appointment of Solomon for his ſucceſſor; nor need it ſeem ſtrange to them, that a younger ſon of his family was preferred to this honour. Judah and Jeſſe were younger branches, yet elected of God; and himſelf the youngeſt ſon, yet of ſovereign grace advanced to the kingdom. God has a right to chuſe who ſhall rule his people, and Solomon is appointed to that ſtation of eminence, and ordained to build the glorious temple; and if he approved himſelf faithful to God, as he had begun, the proſperity of his kingdom would be for ever eſtabliſhed. Note, (1.) Every ſon of God, and heir of his kingdom, is an elect veſſel, and reigns not in right of nature, but of grace. (2.) Perſeverance in the path of duty is the only way to make our calling and election ſure.

4. He ſolemnly, in the preſence of God and the congregation, charges them to ſearch what is the will of God, and diligently and faithfully to obey it, which was not only their bounden duty, but alſo their higheſt intereſt, as what would ſecure to them and theirs the poſſeſſion of their glorious inheritance. Note, (1.) If we would follow God faithfully, we muſt ſearch the ſcriptures diligently, that we may know what he would have us to do. (2.) The beſt inheritance we can leave our children, is the example of our piety, and the bleſſing of God promiſed thereupon.

Laſtly, He concludes with a ſtriking exhortation to his ſon; [1.] To know his father's God, to be acquainted with his glorious perfections, and to remember the mercies received from him, as the ſtrongeſt obligation to love and obey him. [2.] To ſerve him in ſincerity and truth, with delight and readineſs. Note, Love to God makes us count none of his commandments grievous. [3.] He urges this exhortation with the conſideration of God's all-ſearching wiſdom, who knows the ſecrets of all hearts, and who rewards and puniſhes with unbiaſſed equity, thoſe who faithfully ſeek him, or thoſe who perfidiouſly forſake him. Note, It is juſt that they who forſake God, ſhould be forſaken by him. [4.] As he was peculiarly honoured, as choſen of God to build the temple, he was more eſpecially called upon to take heed to his ways, that he might walk and pleaſe God, and not be diſcouraged at any difficulties, ſince God, who had appointed him the work, was able to carry him through. Note, (1.) We can never be enough jealous of ourſelves, or confident in God. (2.) When God employs us, we may be ſure he will ſupport us.

Before Chriſt 1015.

11. ¶ Then David gave to Solomon his ſon [s] the pattern of the porch, and of [t] the houſes thereof, and of the treaſuries thereof, and of the upper chambers thereof, and of the inner parlours thereof, and of the place of the mercy-ſeat. 12. And the pattern of all that he had by the ſpirit, of the courts of the houſe of the LORD, and of all the chambers round about, of the treaſuries of the houſe of God, and of [u] the treaſuries of the dedicate things. 13. Alſo for the courſes of the prieſts and the Levites, and for all the work of the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD, and for all the veſſels of ſervice in the houſe of the LORD. 14. He gave of gold by weight, for things of gold, for all inſtruments of all manner of ſervice, ſilver alſo for all inſtruments of ſilver, by weight, for all inſtruments of every kind of ſervice: 15. Even the weight [x] for the candleſticks of gold, and for their lamps of gold, by weight for every candleſtick, and for the lamps thereof: and for the candleſticks of ſilver by weight, both for the candleſtick, and alſo for the lamps thereof, according to the uſe of every candleſtick. 16. And by weight he gave gold [y] for the tables of ſhew-bread, for every table, and likewiſe ſilver for the tables of ſilver; 17. Alſo pure gold for fleſh-hooks, and the bowls, and the cups: and for the golden baſons he gave gold by weight for every baſon: and likewiſe ſilver by weight for every baſon of ſilver: 18. And for the altar of incenſe, refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of [z] the chariot of the cherubims, that ſpread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD. 19. All this, ſaid David, [a] the LORD made me underſtand in writing by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern. 20. And David ſaid to Solomon his ſon, [b] Be ſtrong and of good courage, and do it: fear not, nor be diſmayed, for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee, [c] he will not fail thee, nor forſake thee, untill thou haſt finiſhed all the work for the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD. 21. And behold, the courſes of the prieſts and the Levites, even they ſhall be with thee, for all the ſervice of the houſe of God, and there ſhall be with thee for all manner of workmanſhip, [d] every willing ſkilful man for any manner of ſervice: alſo the princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.

[s] See Exod. xxv. 40. Ver. 19.
[t] 1 Kings vi. 10.
[u] Chap. xxvi. 20.
[x] Exod. xxv. 31. 1 Kings vii. 49.
[y] 2 Chron. iv. 19.
[z] 1 Sam. iv. 4. 1 Kings vi. 23, &c. Pſ. xviii. 10. & lxviii. 17.
[a] See Exod. xxv. 40. & xxvi. 30.
[b] Deut. xxxi. 7, 8. Joſh. i. 6, &c. Chap. xxii. 13.
[c] Joſh. i. 5. Heb. xiii. 5.
[d] Exod. xxxv. 25, 26. & xxxvi. 1, 2.

v. 11—21. We have here,

1. An exact copy given to Solomon of the temple, veſſels, and manner of ſervice in it, either by divine inſpiration communicated to David, or written by the finger of God, as the tables of the law were, v. 19. The cherubims, v. 18. are called the chariot of the cherubims, becauſe God's glorious preſence was manifeſted between them; and in the Pſalms, the angels, whom theſe cherubims repreſented, are called the chariots of God, Pſal. lxviii. 17.

2. That the veſſels might be exact, David weighed the gold and ſilver for each; vaſt and immenſe they were in number and ſize, amounting, according to a jewiſh author, to no leſs than 810,000. Beſides the original golden table and candleſtick, which were in the tabernacle, ten others of the ſame ſort were placed in the temple oppoſite each other. The ſilver candleſticks ſeem for the prieſt's apartments, and the ſilver tables probably for the uſe of the court where the ſacrifices were prepared and offered. Note, When Jeſus, the true temple, appeared among men, his outward form ſeemed not to correſpond to this glorious type; but they who by faith diſcovered the incarnate God, beheld his glory infinitely ſurpaſſing.

3. David repeats his encouragement. No expence, danger, or difficulty, muſt deter him. God being his helper, he might be aſſured of ſucceſs, as David could teſtify by experience; and he might expect ready aſſiſtance from prieſts, princes, and people, whom God would incline to further the work to the utmoſt of their power. Note, (1.) If we have God's promiſes on our ſide, it becomes us to renounce every unbelieving fear. (2.) When God inclines miniſters and people to be hearty in the work, the ſpiritual building riſes gloriouſly.

CHAP. XXIX.

Here, 1. David preſſeth the people to contribute towards the building and furniſhing of the temple, ver. 1—5. 2. They make their preſents accordingly, ver. 6—9. 3. David offers up prayers, praiſes, and ſacrifices to God upon the occaſion, ver. 10—21. 4. Solomon inthroned with great joy and magnificence, ver. 22—25. 5. David departs, ver. 26—30. And it is hard to ſay which ſhines brighter here, the ſetting or the riſing ſun.

1. FUrthermore, David the king ſaid unto all the congregation, Solomon my ſon, whom alone God hath choſen, [a] is yet young and tender, and the work is great: for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God. 2. Now I have prepared with all my might for the houſe of my God, the gold for things to be made of gold, and the ſilver for things of ſilver, and the braſs for things of braſs, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; [b] onyx-ſtones, and ſtones to be ſet, gliſtering ſtones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious ſtones, and marble-ſtones in abundance. 3. Moreover, [c] becauſe I have ſet my affection to the houſe of my God, I have of mine own proper good, of gold and ſilver, which I have given to the houſe of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy houſe, 4. Even three thouſand talents of gold, of the gold of [d] Ophir, and ſeven thouſand talents of refined ſilver, to overlay the walls of the houſes withal: 5. The gold for things of gold, and the ſilver for things of ſilver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hand of artificers. And who then is [e] willing to conſecrate his ſervice this day unto the LORD? 6. ¶ Then [f] the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Iſrael, and the captains of thouſands, and of hundreds, with [g] the rulers over the king's work, offered willingly, 7. And gave for the ſervice of the houſe of God, of gold, five thouſand talents, and ten thouſand drams; and of ſilver, ten thouſand talents; and of braſs eighteen thouſand talents; and one hundred thouſand talents of iron. 8. And they with whom precious ſtones were found, gave them to the treaſures of the LORD, by the hand of [h] Jehiel the Gerſhonite. 9. Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered [i] willingly, becauſe with [k] perfect heart they offered willingly to the LORD: and David the king alſo rejoiced with great joy.

[a] 1 King iii. 7. Chap. xxii. 5. Prov. iv. 1.
[b] Iſa. liv. 11, 12. Rev. xxi. 18, &c.
[c] 2 Cor. v. 14.
[d] 1 Kings ix. 28.
[e] 2 Cor. viii. 12.
[f] Chap. xxvii. 1.
[g] Chap. xxvii. 25, &c.
[h] Chap. xxvi. 21.
[i] Judg. v. 9.
[k] 1 Kings viii. 61.

v. 1—9. Having finiſhed his diſcourſe to Solomon, he addreſſes himſelf to the people, to exhort them to a liberal contribution. The work was great: a palace for God deſerved the utmoſt magnificence: we can never do enough for him. Solomon was young, and therefore their help was the more needful: beginners muſt be encouraged. What he himſelf had done ſhould engage their liberality. He intended not to lay the chief burden on them; he had prepared with his utmoſt might, and led the way; for he had an hearty affection to the ſervice, which made him ſo chearful a giver, and ſo warm an advocate for it; and therefore he might well aſk, Who is willing to conſecrate his ſervice this day unto the Lord? not doubting but they would be as ready immediately to give, as he was to ſollicit. Note, (1.) That is a pleaſing ſervice to God, which is done from hearty affection to him. (2.) When our heart is right, our hand will be open: a niggard ſoul cannot be a child of God. (3.) God loveth a chearful giver. (4.) When we lead the way ourſelves in what is good, we can with confidence ſay, Be ye followers of me. (5.) It is not enough to give ourſelves, but we are bound to ſtir up others alſo to every work of faith, and labour of love. (6.) What we do for God, muſt be done without delay.—The ſucceſs of his exhortation was great. Willingly the princes and people offered a ſum immenſe! amounting, according to Brerewood's computation, to 22,607,500 l. beſides precious ſtones, and of braſs and iron a prodigious weight. The people were happy that they had it to give, and hearts to offer it; and David rejoiced at a liberality which teſtified ſuch real zeal for God's glory, and afforded ſuch a promiſing proſpect for his ſon. Note, (1.) What we beſtow in God's ſervice, brings uſually its own reward in preſent comfort. (2.) Every Chriſtian is happy to ſee a mutual emulation in good works. (3.) It is a joy to God's departing ſaints, to leave the world in the comfortable proſpect of the growing increaſe of God's church.

10. ¶ Wherefore David bleſſed the LORD before all the congregation: and David ſaid, Bleſſed be thou, LORD God of Iſrael our father, for ever and ever. 11. [l] Thine, O LORD, is the greatneſs, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majeſty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth, is thine; thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all. 12. [m] Both riches and honour come of thee, and [n] thou reigneſt over all, and in thine hand is power and might, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give ſtrength unto all. 13. Now therefore, our God, we thank thee, and praiſe thy glorious name. 14. But [o] who am I, and what is my people, [p] that we ſhould † be able to offer ſo willingly after this ſort? for all things come of thee, and [q] of thine own have we given thee. 15. For [r] we are ſtrangers before thee, and ſojourners, as were all our fathers: [s] our days on the earth are as a ſhadow, and there is none abiding. 16. O LORD our God, all this ſtore that we have prepared to build thee an houſe for thine holy name, cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own. 17. I know alſo, my God, that [t] thou trieſt the heart, and [u] haſt pleaſure in uprightneſs. As for me, in the uprightneſs of mine heart I have willingly offered all theſe things: and now have I ſeen with joy, thy people which are preſent here, to offer willingly unto thee. 18. O LORD God of Abraham, Iſaac, and of Iſrael our fathers, [x] keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and [y] prepare their heart unto thee. 19. And [z] give unto Solomon my ſon a perfect heart to keep thy commandments, thy teſtimonies, and thy ſtatutes, and to do all theſe things, and to build the palace [a] for the which I have made proviſion. 20. ¶ And David ſaid to all the congregation, Now [b] bleſs the LORD your God. And all the congregation bleſſed the LORD God of their fathers, and bowed down their heads, and worſhipped the LORD and the king. 21. And they ſacrificed ſacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD on the morrow after that day, even a thouſand bullocks, a thouſand rams, and a thouſand lambs, with their drink-offerings, and ſacrifices in abundance for all Iſrael: 22. And did eat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladneſs, and they made Solomon the ſon of David king [c] the ſecond time, and anointed him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be prieſt.

[l] Mat. vi. 13. 1 Tim. i. 17. Rev. v. 13.
[m] Prov. x. 22. Jam. i. 17.
[n] Dan. vi. 26, 27.
[o] Pſ. cxv. 1. 2 Cor. iii. 5.
[p] Phil. ii. 13.
† Heb. Obtain ſtrength.
[q] 1 Cor. iv. 7.
[r] Pſ. xxxix. 12. Heb. xi. 13. 1 Pet. ii. 11.
[s] Job xiv. 2. Pſ. xc. 9. & cii. 11. & cxliv. 4.
[t] 1 Sam. xvi. 7. Chap. xxviii. 9.
[u] Pſ. li. 6. Prov. xi. 20.
[x] Jer. x. 23.
[y] Prov. xvi. 1.
[z] Pſ. lxxii. 1.
[a] Chap. xxii. 14. & ver. 4.
[b] Pſ. ciii. 1, 20.
[c] 1 Kings i. 35.

v. 10—22. Big with the ſenſe of divine mercy, and filled with joy on the gracious inclinations which appeared in the people, David pours out in thankful adoration his grateful heart before God and this great congregation. Note, Praiſe and thankſgiving are ever our bounden duty; but they eſpecially become departing ſaints of God, ready to enter on the ſervice of everlaſting praiſe.

1. We have here his grateful prayer. [1.] With adoration he begins, bleſſing the name of Iſrael's God, exalting his almighty power, his tranſcendent greatneſs and glory, his ſovereign dominion, and univerſal agency and government: of him and from him came all they poſſeſſed, and to him alone the praiſe of all was due. Note, When we approach God in prayer, our hearts ſhould be impreſſed with a ſenſe of his adorable perfections, that with reverence and godly fear we may bow before him. [2.] With thankfulneſs he aſcribes to God the ability and inclination he had given them to contribute ſo liberally for his ſervice. Note, No works merit any thing at God's hands; but it is a freſh obligation upon ourſelves, that we are inclined or enabled to do good. [3.] With deep humility he mentions their poor imperfect ſervices. Though ſo great a king, ſo good a man, he ſpeaks of himſelf as a worm before God; and of his people, though ſo rich, numerous, and great, as ſtrangers and ſojourners; as creatures of a day, whoſe momentary exiſtence made their greateſt ſervices appear trivial before the eternal God. And what they had offered, was but out of the abundance God had beſtowed, only a part of what was lent them of the Lord. Note, (1.) They who have the deepeſt ſenſe of God's perfections, will have the lowlieſt apprehenſions of themſelves. (2.) Whatever we are enabled to do for God, from him both the holy deſire and the juſt work doth proceed; ſo that boaſting is for ever excluded. (3.) The more we conſider how ſhort our moment is, the greater diligence we ſhould give to fill it with works of faith, and labours of love, which, through Jeſus Chriſt, may redound to the praiſe and glory of God. [4.] He could appeal to God for the ſimplicity of his heart before him, as he was comfortably confident alſo in the people, v. 17. Note, It is a ſolid ſatisfaction to have the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in godly ſincerity we have our converſation in the world. [5.] He begs, that God, as their covenant God, would ever keep alive on the hearts of the people the ſame gracious diſpoſitions, and incline them to his bleſſed ſervice; and that Solomon might poſſeſs an upright heart, be enabled exactly to correſpond with the pattern given him to build God's palace; and, above all, to follow God's holy law, without which the temple-ſervice could profit him nothing. Note, (1.) Our good purpoſes will be of no long continuance, unleſs he who hath excited them, continues to preſerve them; for we have no fund of grace in ourſelves. (2.) This muſt awaken our unceaſing prayers for continual ſtrength to perſevere. (3.) A heart ſincerely fixed on himſelf, is the greateſt bleſſing God can beſtow upon us here below.

Before Christ 1015.

2. As the king enjoined, the people gladly gave their aſſent to this grateful prayer, bowing their heads in token of adoration, and withal paying their reſpects to the king, whom they regarded as the chief human means of their preſent happy ſtate. On this occaſion a great ſacrifice was offered of burnt-offerings in honour of God, and peace-offerings of thankſgiving; on which the whole congregation were nobly feaſted, and rejoiced before the Lord. Solomon now was a ſecond time ſolemnly inveſted with the ſovereign power, as he had been more haſtily before, on Adonijah's aſpiring to the throne; and Abiathar, for his adherence to him, being degraded, Zadok was appointed chief prieſt in his ſtead. Note (1.) Whilſt we bow the head before God, we muſt lift up the heart to him. (2.) Thoſe who in God's hands are made to us the inſtruments of ſpiritual good, we muſt ever love and reſpect. (3.) Holy joy ſhould enliven every act of communion with God. (4.) We have now an unction from the Holy One, but we expect a ſecond more glorious inauguration, when the Son of David ſhall bring his ſaints to ſit down with him on his throne.

23. Then Solomon ſat on [d] the throne of the LORD as king inſtead of David his father, and proſpered, and all Iſrael obeyed him. 24. And [e] all the princes and the mighty men, and all the ſons likewiſe of king David † ſubmitted themſelves unto Solomon the king. 25. And the LORD magnified Solomon exceedingly in the ſight of all Iſrael, and [f] beſtowed upon him ſuch royal majeſty as had not been on any king before him in Iſrael.
26. ¶ Thus David the ſon of Jeſſe reigned over all Iſrael. 27. And [g] the time that he reigned over Iſrael, was forty years; [h] ſeven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jeruſalem. 28.
And he died [i] in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour: and Solomon his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 29.
Now the acts of David the king, firſt and laſt, behold, they are written in the book of Samuel the ſeer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the ſeer. 30. With all his reign and his might, and [k] the times that went over him, and over Iſrael, and over all the kingdoms of the countries.

[d] Iſa. ix. 7. [e] Eccleſ. viii. 2. † Heb. Gave the hand under Solomon. See Gen. xxiv. 2. & xlvii. 29. Ezek. xvii. 18. [f] 1 Kings iii. 13. 2 Chron. i. 12. Eccleſ. ii. 9. [g] 2 Sam. v. 4. 1 Kings ii. 11.

Before Christ 1015.

[h] 2 Sam. v. 5. [i] Chap. xxiii. 1. Job xlii. 17. [k] Dan. ii. 21.

v. 23—30. We have here,

1. Solomon on the throne. It is called the Lord's throne, he being Iſrael's immediate king, ſetting up whom he pleaſed for his vicegerents, preſcribing all their laws, and directing them in all their undertakings. Great proſperity was the natural conſequence therefore, as long as the king continued faithful to him who had appointed him. All the great men of the kingdom, and David's ſons, though elder than Solomon, peaceably acquieſced in the divine appointment, and ſwore fidelity and allegiance to him; ſo that he appeared with diſtinguiſhed ſplendor, and out-ſhone all his predeceſſors. Perhaps his perſon was as majeſtic, as his throne reſplendent, and commanded awe and reſpect from all around him. Note, Since David's Son, the greater than Solomon, now ſits on the throne, it ſhould be our happineſs and honour to ſubmit to his government, and pledge to him our faithful hearts.

2. David in the grave. After a long reign, diſtinguiſhed with glory, and crowned with riches and honour, the good old king, full of days, like a ripe ſheaf in time of harveſt, was gathered to the tomb; and as, during all his greatneſs, that chiefly engaged his deſire, he went to awake up in God's likeneſs, in which alone he hoped to enjoy perfect felicity. For a fuller account of his life and victories, we are referred to the books of Samuel, Nathan, and Gad; either the canonical books of Samuel, the latter of which theſe prophets might have written, or to ſome authentic records that they kept, which, not being divinely inſpired, nor deſigned to be preſerved in the church, are ſince periſhed. Note, (1.) The throne and the tomb are but a ſtep aſunder. This ſtamps vanity on all ſublunary greatneſs, and ſhould quicken us to ſeek a more enduring kingdom. (2.) A good man, however diſtinguiſhed his ſtation, will have enough of this world, and wait with deſire his diſmiſſion to that bleſt abode, where only true joys are to be found.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR; OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT Upon the SECOND BOOK of CHRONICLES.

This book is a continuation of the former, from the beginning of Solomon's reign, to the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon, containing a hiſtory of about 479 years. The kings of Iſrael, after the ſeparation made under Rehoboam, are entirely omitted. The kings of Judah alone, from whom the Meſſiah was to deſcend, are the ſubjects of theſe annals. Much we met with of them in the book of Kings; more anecdotes concerning them are here preſerved. In general, all the good kings were ſucceſsful, the wicked ſeverely puniſhed. The path of duty is the path of bleſſing; but diſobedience to God leads inevitably to miſery. In particular we have, the peaceable reign of Solomon, chap. i—ix. the blemiſhed reign of Rehoboam, chap. x—xii. the ſhort but buſy reign of Abijah, chap. xiii. the long and happy reign of Aſa, chap. xiv—xvi. the pious and proſperous reign of Jehoſhaphat, chap. xvii—xx. the impious and infamous reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah, chap. xxi. xxii. the unſteady reigns of Joaſh and Amaziah, chap. xxiii—xxv. the long and proſperous reign of Uzziah, chap. xxvi. the regular reign of Jotham, chap. xxvii. the prophane and wicked reign of Ahaz, chap. xxviii. the gracious and glorious reign of Hezekiah, chap. xxix—xxxii. the wicked reigns of Manaſſeh and Amon, chap. xxxiii. the reforming reign of Joſiah, chap. xxxiv. xxxv. the deſtructive reigns of his ſons, chap. xxxvi.

Before Chriſt 1015.

CHAP. I.

We have an account, 1. Of Solomon's ſacrifice and prayer, ver. 1—12. 2. Of his commerce for the enriching his ſubjects, ver. 13—17.

[a] 1 Kings iv. 46. [b] Rom. viii. 31. [c] Phil. ii. 9.

1. AND [a] Solomon, the ſon of David, was ſtrengthened in his kingdom, and [b] the LORD his God was with him, and [c] magnified him exceedingly. 2. Then Solomon ſpake unto all Iſrael, to the captains of thouſands, and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Iſrael, the chief of the fathers. 3. So [d] Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at Gibeon, for [e] there was the tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moſes the ſervant of the LORD had made in the wilderneſs. 4. But [f] the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim, to the place which David had prepared for it: for [g] he had pitched a tent for it at Jeruſalem. 5. Moreover, the braſen altar [h] that Bezaleel the ſon of Uri, the ſon of Hur, had made, † he put before the tabernacle of the LORD: and Solomon and the congregation ſought unto it. 6. And Solomon went up thither to the braſen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered a thouſand burnt-offerings upon it. 7. ¶ [i] In that [k] night did God appear unto Solomon, and ſaid unto him, [l] Aſk what I ſhall give thee. 8. And Solomon ſaid unto God, Thou haſt ſhewed great mercy unto David my father, and [m] haſt made me to reign in his ſtead: 9. Now, O LORD God, let thy promiſe unto David my father be eſtabliſhed: for thou haſt made me king over [n] a people, like the duſt of the earth in multitude. 10. [o] Give me now [p] wiſdom and knowledge, that I may go out and come in before this people: for [q] who can judge this thy people, that is ſo great? 11. And God ſaid to Solomon, Becauſe this was in thine heart, and thou haſt not aſked riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet haſt aſked long life; but haſt aſked wiſdom and knowledge for thyſelf, that thou mayeſt judge my people, over whom I have made thee king: 12. [r] Wiſdom and knowledge is granted unto thee, and [s] I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, ſuch as none of the kings have had, that have been before thee, neither ſhall there any after thee have the like.

About 1012. [d] 1 Kings iii. 4, &c. [e] 1 Chron. xxi. 29.

[f] Ibid. xvi. 1.

[g] Ibid. xv. 1. [h] Exod. xxxviii. 1. † Or, was there.

[i] 1 Kings iii. 5. [k] Pſ. xvii. 3.

Before Chriſt 1012.

[l] Mat. vii. 7. John xvi. 23. [m] Dan. ii. 21. [n] Gen. xiii. 16. [o] Jam. i. 5. & iii. 17. [p] Prov. iii. 13—15. & xvi. 16. [q] 2 Cor. ii. 16. & iii. 5.

[r] Mat. vii. 8. 1 John v. 15. [s] Mat. vi. 33. Eph. iii. 20.

v. 1—12. We left Solomon in quiet poſſeſſion of Iſrael's throne. His authority was ſtill more firmly eſtabliſhed by the removal of ſome ſecret enemies, (See 1 Kings ii. 25—36.) and God being evidently with him, his proſperity increaſed.

1. He ſummoned the chief men of Iſrael to attend him at Gibeon, where the tabernacle was; for this he well knew, that having God for his friend, was the only ſure eſtabliſhment of his throne. By his own example alſo he laboured to diffuſe an univerſal attachment to God and his ordinances through his kingdom; kingdom; as being perſuaded that good men would be the moſt loyal ſubjects. There he offered a thouſand burnt-offerings, beſide peace-offerings, and all the aſſembled congregation kept a feaſt with him before the Lord. Note, (1.) Great is the influence of a good magiſtrate's example. (2.) When we begin well, we have half ended. (3.) The more God does for us, the more ſhould we labour to teſtify our gratitude towards him.

Before Chriſt 1012.

2. God appeared to him at night, and bid him aſk and have whatever he choſe. His prayer and happy choice, and God's gracious anſwer we find 1 Kings iii. 5. We may farther obſerve here, (1.) That a man's ſtate is beſt known by the ſecret deſires of his ſoul. (2.) Faith, that through the great ſacrifice enables us to realize eternal things, will make us count all things dung and loſs, compared with ſpiritual graces, and the knowledge of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom. (3.) Our father's mercies are an encouragement to us, to pray and hope for the ſame bleſſing. (4.) The more eminent our predeceſſors, the more earneſtly need we beg, that being in their place, we may be ſtrengthened with equal ability and fidelity for our work. (5.) If we have God's promiſes with us, we may pray in faith, nothing doubting. (6.) God often exceeds our deſires. When ſeeking only his favour, we are content to truſt all our worldly affairs on his Providence, the bleſſing of the Lord ſhall enrich us; and better than all our gains, he will give us a heart to enjoy what he beſtows with thankfulneſs to his glory.

13. ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey, to the high place that was at Gibeon, to Jeruſalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Iſrael. 14. [t] And Solomon [u] gathered chariots and horſemen: and he had a thouſand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thouſand horſemen, which he placed in the chariot-cities, and with the king at Jeruſalem. 15. And [x] the king made ſilver and gold at Jeruſalem as plenteous as ſtones, and cedar-trees made he as the ſycamore-trees that are in the vale for abundance. 16. And [y] Solomon had horſes brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price. 17. And they fetcht up, and brought forth out of Egypt a chariot for ſix hundred ſhekels of ſilver, and an horſe for an hundred and fifty: and ſo brought they out horſes for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their † means.

[t] 1 Kings x. 26, &c.
[u] Deut. xvii. 16.
[x] Ver. 12. Mat. vi. 33.
[y] Chap. ix. 28.
† Heb. Hands.

v. 13—17. When he had waited upon God, he returned to the exerciſe of his royal government. Religious exerciſes muſt never lead us to the neglect, but rather to the more vigorous diſcharge of our ſeveral occupations. Riches quickly began to flow in upon him, by trade with Egypt, and the linen manufactory he eſtabliſhed. Hereby he was enabled to maintain an additional number of forces, and to appear with a ſplendor and dignity greater than had ever been ſeen before in Iſrael. Note, (1.) In the midſt of the greateſt peace, it is wiſe to be prepared for war. (2.) Increaſe of wealth too frequently brings on increaſe of luxury and pride: a man needs a great increaſe of ſpiritual grace and wiſdom to bear being exalted.

CHAP. II.

Here is, 1. Solomon's reſolution to build the temple and a royal palace, and his appointing of labourers to be employed herein, ver. 1, 2, 17, 18. 2. His requeſt to Huram, to furniſh him with artiſts and materials, ver. 3—10. 3. Huram's ready compliance therewith, ver. 11—16.

1. AND Solomon determined to build an houſe for the name of the LORD, and an houſe for his kingdom. 2. And [a] Solomon told out threeſcore and ten thouſand men to bear burdens, and fourſcore thouſand to hew in the mountain, and three thouſand and ſix hundred to overſee them. 3. ¶ [b] And Solomon ſent to Huram the king of Tyre, ſaying, [c] As thou didſt deal with David my father, and didſt ſend him cedars to build him an houſe to dwell therein, even ſo deal with me. 4. Behold, I build an houſe to the name of the LORD my God, to dedicate it to him, and to burn before him † ſweet incenſe, and [d] for the continual ſhew-bread, and [e] for the burnt-offerings morning and evening, on the ſabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on the ſolemn feaſts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Iſrael. 5. And the houſe which I build is great: for [f] great is our God above all gods. 6. But who is able to build him an houſe, [g] ſeeing the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? who am I then that I ſhould build him an houſe, ſave only to burn ſacrifice before him? 7. [h] Send me now therefore a man, cunning to work in gold, and in ſilver, and in braſs, and in iron, and in purple, and crimſon, and blue, and that can ſkill to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jeruſalem, whom David my father [i] did provide. 8. Send me alſo cedar-trees, fir-trees, and [k] algum-trees, out of Lebanon (for I know that thy ſervants can ſkill to cut timber in Lebanon) and behold, my ſervants ſhall be with thy ſervants, 9. Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the houſe which I am about to build, ſhall be ‡ wonderful great. 10. [l] And behold, I will give to thy ſervants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thouſand meaſures of beaten wheat, and twenty thouſand meaſures of barley, and twenty thouſand baths of wine, and twenty thouſand baths of oil.

[a] 1 Kings v. 15. Ver. 18.
[b] 1 Kings v. 2, &c.
[c] 1 Chron. xiv. 1.
† Heb. Incenſe of ſpices.
[d] Exod. xxv. 30. Lev. xxiv. 8.
[e] Num. xxviii. 3, 9. 11.
[f] Exod. xv. 11.
[g] Chap. vi. 18.

Before Chriſt 1012.

[h] Iſa. lx. 10.
[i] 1 Chron. xxii. 3.
[k] 1 Kings x. 11.
‡ Heb. Great and wonderful.
[l] 1 Kings v. 11. 1 Tim. v. 18.

v. 1—10. Solomon being appointed to build God's houſe, and by his wiſdom ſo highly qualified for it, begins to ſet about the glorious ſtructure; and afterwards reſolves to raiſe a palace for himſelf. Note, Let God be always firſt and beſt ſerved. For this purpoſe, he ſends an embaſſage to Hiram, or Huram, king of Tyre, 1 Kings v. 1. whoſe aſſiſtance he wanted in the work. He mentions the kindneſs Hiram had ſhewn to David, as a reaſon for continuing his friendſhip to him his ſon; informs him of his deſign to build the houſe of God, of whoſe glory he ſpeaks moſt highly. The God of Iſrael was above all gods, therefore a temple became him, ſuch as no where elſe could be found: not that the moſt pompous ſtructure could be worthy the infinite God, or his immenſity be circumſcribed by the largeſt palace, ſince the heaven, and heaven of heavens cannot contain him. He pretended only to build a place to worſhip, and ſacrifice before him. The Tyrians being moſt expert workmen, he begs him to ſend him a capital artiſt in engraving and embroidery, who might inſtruct thoſe who were ingenious among his own people: and that he would cut down and convey to him from Lebanon, cedars and other timber; in which ſervice he would ſend his own ſervants, with Hiram's, who were more ſkilled in the buſineſs. In conſideration for which ſervices, he offers to give as wages, and maintenance for Hiram's ſervants, twenty thouſand meaſures of wheat and barley, and as many baths of wine and oil, commodities which Tyre wanted, and in which Canaan abounded. Note, (1.) We ſhould deſire to make our father's friends our own. (2.) They who have the knowledge of the true God themſelves, would fain have others acquainted with him alſo. (3.) Though when we have done our beſt, it is poor and unworthy of God; yet it ſpeaks at leaſt our humble gratitude.

11. ¶ [m] Then Huram the king of Tyre anſwered in writing, which he ſent to Solomon, Becauſe the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them. 12. Huram ſaid moreover, [n] Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael, [o] that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wiſe ſon, † endued with prudence and underſtanding, that might build an houſe for the LORD, and an houſe for his kingdom. 13. And now I have ſent a cunning man (endued with underſtanding) of Huram [p] my fathers; 14. The ſon of a woman of the daughters of [q] Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, ſkilful to work in gold and in ſilver, in braſs, in iron, in ſtone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimſon: alſo to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which ſhall be put to him, with thy cunning men, and with the cunning men of my lord David thy father. 15. Now therefore the wheat, and the barley, the oil, and the wine which my lord hath ſpoken of, let him ſend unto his ſervants: 16. And we will cut wood out of Lebanon, ‡ as much as thou ſhalt need, and we will bring it to thee in floats, by ſea to Joppa, and thou ſhalt carry it up to Jeruſalem. 17. ¶ And Solomon numbred [r] all the ſtrangers that were in the land of Iſrael, after the numbring [s] wherewith David his father had numbred them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thouſand and three thouſand and ſix hundred. 18. And he ſet threeſcore and ten thouſand of them to be bearers [t] of burdens, and fourſcore thouſand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thouſand and ſix hundred overſeers to ſet the people a-work.

[m] 1 Kings v. 7.
[n] Dan. iii. 28.
[o] Pſal. cii. 25. Acts iv. 24. Rev. x. 6.
† Heb. Knowing prudence, &c.
[p] Chap. iv. 16.
[q] 1 Kings vii. 14.
‡ Heb. According to thy need.
[r] 1 Kings ix. 20. Chap. viii. 7.
[s] 1 Chron. xxii. 2.
[t] Ver. 2.

v. 11—17. Hiram was as ready to grant, as Solomon to aſk, and that in the moſt friendly manner; congratulating Iſrael on ſo good a king, and bleſſing God for giving ſo gracious a ſon to to his friend. He ſent him an ingenious artiſt, half an Iſraelite, and therefore more likely to be hearty in the ſervice; undertook to convey the timber to Joppa by ſea, and accepted of the wages propoſed. Note, (1.) The polite manner in which a favour is conferred, doubles the obligation. (2.) The aſſiſtance of the gentiles in building the church, was a figure of their incorporation in the fulneſs of time with the Iſrael of God.

Before Chriſt 1011.

Solomon immediately diſpatched his ſervants to Lebanon, to meet Hiram's. He employed no Iſraelites in ſervile work, but the ſtrangers, which probably by becoming proſelytes, were incorporated among them; whether of the remnant of the old inhabitants, or others. Theſe, to the number of 153,600, David had regiſtered before; and Solomon now ſet them to work for him, and no doubt well paid them for their labour.

CHAP. III.

In this chapter we have, 1. The place and time of building the temple, ver. 1, 2. 2. Its dimenſions and rich ornaments, ver. 3—9. 3. The cherubims in the moſt holy place, ver. 10—13. 4. The vail, ver. 14. 5. The two pillars, ver. 15—17.

[a] 1 Kings vi. 1, &c. [b] Gen. xxii. 2. [c] 1 Chron. xxi. 18.

1. [a] THEN Solomon began to build the houſe of the LORD at Jeruſalem in [b] mount Moriah, [c] where the LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threſhing-floor of Ornan the Jebuſite. 2. And he began to build in the ſecond day of the ſecond month, in the fourth year of his reign. 3. ¶ Now theſe are the things [d] wherein Solomon was † inſtructed for the building of the houſe of God. [e] The length by cubits after the firſt meaſure was threeſcore cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits. 4. And [f] the porch that was in the front of the houſe, the length of it was according to the breadth of the houſe twenty cubits, and the height was an hundred and twenty: and he overlaid it with pure gold. 5. And the greater houſe he cieled with fir-tree, which he over-laid with fine gold, and ſet thereon palm-trees and chains. 6. And he ‡ garniſhed the houſe [g] with precious ſtones for beauty: and the gold was gold of Parvaim. 7. He overlaid alſo the houſe, the beams, the poſts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof with gold, and graved cherubims on the walls. 8. And he made the ‖ moſt holy houſe, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the houſe, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to ſix hundred talents. 9. And the weight of the nails was fifty ſhekels of gold: and he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

[d] 1 Chron. xxviii. xi. † Heb. Founded. [e] 1 Kings vi. 2. [f] Acts iii. 11.

‡ Heb. Covered. [g] Rev. xxi. 18—20.

‖ Heb. Houſe of holineſs of holineſſes.

v. 1—9. The account of the building the temple, we had, 1 Kings vi. more at large. Here we are told the place where it was built, on mount Moriah, where Abraham had offered up Iſaac, the great type of him who was ſignified in all the temple ſervice. David had fixed the ſpot by God's direction, and purchaſed the land of Ornan the Jebuſite. Three years were taken up in needful preparations; on the fourth, Solomon laid the foundation. The dimenſions exactly correſponded with the pattern given him by David, 1 Chron. xxviii. 2. The porch led into the greater houſe, or the holy place; and that into the holieſt of all, within the vail. The whole was covered throughout on the inſide with plates of gold, with golden chains and palm-trees emboſſed; the very nails were fine gold, each of fifty ſhekels weight, or perhaps of that value. In the gold, the precious ſtones were ſet, glittering by the light of the lamps with inconceivable luſtre; yet all this, great and glorious as it was, how poor! compared with that heavenly temple, where every believer conſecrated to God, is not only for a time to miniſter, but for eternity to dwell. See Rev. xxi. 18, 19, 21.

10. And in the moſt holy houſe he made two cherubims † of image-work, and overlaid them with gold. 11. ¶ And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long: one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the houſe: and the other wing was likewiſe five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub. 12. And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the houſe: and the other wing was five cubits alſo, joining to the wing of the other cherub. 13. The wings of theſe cherubims ſpread themſelves forth twenty cubits: and they ſtood on their feet, and their faces were ‡ inward. 14. ¶ And he made [h] the vail of blue, and purple, and crimſon, and fine linen, and ‖ wrought cherubims thereon. 15. Alſo he made before the houſe [i] two pillars of thirty and five cubits § high, and the chapiter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits. 16. And he made chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars, and made [k] an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains. 17. And he [l] reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and he called the name of that on the right hand, † Jachin, and the name of that on the left, ‡ Boaz.

† Or, as ſome think of moveable work.

‡ Or, toward the houſe. Exod. xxv. 20. [h] Mat. xxvii. 51. ‖ Or, cauſed to aſcend.

Before Chriſt 1011.

[i] 1 Kings vii. 15, 21. Jer. lii. 21. § Heb. Long. [k] 1 Kings vii. 20. [l] Ibid. 21.

† i. e. He will eſtabliſh. 2 Sam. vii. 12. Iſa. ix. 7. ‡ i. e. In it is ſtrength. Pſal. xxix. 11. & lxxiii. 26. Iſa. xxvi. 4.

v. 10—17. The cherubims repreſented the angels, bending in adoration towards the mercy-ſeat, to teach us what is their work ſhould be ours. A vail ſeparated the moſt holy place: that diſpenſation was dark, but the vail is done away in Chriſt, and the mercy-ſeat open to every believing ſinner. On this vail cherubims were wrought, or cauſed to aſcend, either raiſed work, or in an aſcending poſture, as if mounting to heaven, whither in our devotions our hearts ſhould ſoar. The two pillars were at the entrance, See 1 Kings vii. 15. Every believer is like theſe, firm and immoveable againſt all enemies; and adorned with divine graces, more precious than wrought gold.

CHAP. IV.

We have here, 1. The brazen altar, ſea, lavers, &c. ver. 1—6. 2. The golden candleſticks, tables, altar of incenſe and veſſels, ver. 7, 8, 19—22.

[a] Ezek. xliii. 13, 16.

[b] 1 Kings vii. 23.

1. MOreover, he made [a] an altar of braſs, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof. 2. ¶ [b] Alſo he made a molten ſea of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compaſs, and five cubits the height thereof, and a line of thirty cubits did compaſs it round about. 3. And under it was the ſimilitude of oxen, which did compaſs it round about: ten in a cubit compaſſing the ſea round about. Two rows of oxen were caſt, when it was caſt. 4. [c] It ſtood upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the weſt, and three looking toward the ſouth, and three looking toward the eaſt: and the ſea was ſet above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward. 5. And the thickneſs of it was an hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, † with flowers of lilies; and it received and held three thouſand baths. 6. ¶ He made alſo [d] ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to waſh in them: ſuch things as they offered for the burnt-offering, they waſhed in them; but the ſea was for the prieſts to waſh in. 7. And [e] he made ten candleſticks of gold [f] according to their form, and ſet them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left. 8. He made alſo ten [g] tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right ſide, and five on the left; and he made an hundred ‡ baſons of gold. 9. ¶ Furthermore [h] he made the court of the prieſts, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with braſs. 10. And he ſet the ſea on the right ſide of the eaſt end, over againſt the ſouth.

[c] Ibid. 25. Jer. lii. 20.

† Or like lily flower.

[d] 1 Kings vii. 38. Zech. xiii. 1. John xiii. 10. John i. 7. [e] 1 Kings vii. 49. [f] Exod. xxv. 31, 40. 1 Chron. xxviii. 12, 19. [g] 1 Kings vii. 48. ‡ Or bowls. [h] 1 Kings vi. 36.

v. 1—10. The making of all theſe veſſels, except the brazen altar, we had, 1 Kings vii. This was four times as wide, and more than thrice as high as that of Moſes. Iſrael being increaſed, and their ſacrifices now likely to be more numerous, a larger altar was needful. According as God increaſes us, we muſt honour him with our ſubſtance. The ſea, and the lavers, were of braſs. Theſe ſtood in the open air without, in the court of the prieſts; within all was gold: the nearer we approach to God, the purer we muſt grow. The golden altar, ten new candleſticks, and as many tables of pure gold, were placed within the holy place, where lights continually burned, where incenſe was daily offered, and the ſhew-bread was placed: all which were ſhadows of good things to come.

1. The brazen altar which ſanctified the gift, where the ſacrifice was accepted, prefigured that Divine Redeemer both altar and ſacrifice; who, by one oblation once offered, obtained eternal redemption for us.

2. The lavers and ſea pointed out that ſanctifying work of the ſpirit of God upon the heart of God's ſpiritual prieſts, cleanſing them from their remaining filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit.

3. The table of ſhew-bread typified the conſtant proviſion which in the goſpel-church ſhould be made for all God's people,

Before Christ 1011.

ple, who ſhould eat and drink before him, to the refreſhing of their ſouls.

4. The candleſticks repreſented the word of goſpel-truth, ſhining as a light in a dark place, and their number the clearer and increaſing diſcoveries God makes of himſelf to his people.

5. The altar of incenſe ſignified that interceſſion Jeſus our high-prieſt makes, who whilſt we are praying without, is ſtanding before the mercy-ſeat, and effectually preſenting our ſupplications, that they may be accepted and anſwered.

[k] 1 Kings vii. 40.
† Or bowls.
‡ Heb. Finiſhed to make.
[l] 1 Kings vii. 41.
[m] Ibid. 20.
‖ Heb. The face.
[n] 1 Kings vii. 27.
§ Or caldrons.
[o] Chap. ii. 13.
† Or braſs made bright, or ſcoured.
[p] 1 Kings vii. 46.
‡ Heb. Cloſeneſs, or thickneſs of the ground.
[q] 1 Kings vii. 48.
[r] Exod. xxv. 30. Lev. xxiv. 6.
[s] Exod. xxvii. 20, 21.
[t] Ibid. xxv. 31, &c.
‖ Heb. Perfections of gold.
§ Or bowls.

11. And [k] Huram made the pots, and the ſhovels, and the † baſons, and Huram ‡ finiſhed the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the houſe of God: 12. To wit, the two pillars, and [l] the pommels, and the chapiters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were on the top of the pillars: 13. And [m] four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapiters, which were upon ‖ the pillars. 14. He made alſo [n] baſes; and § lavers made he upon the baſes; 15. One ſea, and twelve oxen under it: 16. The pots alſo and the ſhovels, and the fleſh-hooks, and all their inſtruments, did Huram [o] his father make to king Solomon for the houſe of the LORD, of † bright braſs. 17. [p] In the plain of Jordan did the king caſt them, in the ‡ clay-ground, between Succoth and Zeredathah. 18. Thus Solomon made all theſe veſſels in great abundance: for the weight of the braſs could not be found out. 19. ¶ And [q] Solomon made all the veſſels that were for the houſe of God, the golden altar alſo, and the tables [r] whereon the ſhew-bread was ſet; 20. Moreover, the candleſticks with their lamps, that they ſhould burn [s] after the manner, before the oracle, of pure gold; 21. And [t] the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs made he of gold, and that ‖ perfect gold. 22. And the ſnuffers, and the § baſons, and the ſpoons, and the cenſers, of pure gold: and the entry of the houſe, the inner doors thereof for the moſt holy place, and the doors of the houſe of the temple, were of gold.

v. 11—22. Huram the great artificer, called his father, v. 16. being the preſident and maſter over all the reſt, finiſhed completely his work. He who gave him underſtanding, gave him ſtrength. Note, The work of grace in the ſoul, the ſpiritual temple, which the Divine Artificer hath begun, he will not fail to complete, till we ſhall be perfected in glory, lacking nothing.

CHAP. V.

We have here, 1. The dedication of the temple, ver. 1—10. 2. The manifeſtation of God's glory thereupon, ver. 11—14.

1004.
[a] 1 Kings vii. 51.
[b] 2 Sam. viii. 11.
[c] 1 Kings viii. 1, &c.
[d] 2 Sam. vi. 12.
1003.
[e] Lev. xxii. 34. Deut. xvi. 13.
[f] Exod. xxxvi. 8.
[g] Num. iv. 15.
[h] 2 Sam. vi. 13.
[i] Luke iv. 47.
[k] Exod. xxvi. 33.
[l] Num. iv. 6.

1. THUS all the work that Solomon made for the houſe of the LORD, was finiſhed; and [a] Solomon brought in all the things, [b] that David his father had dedicated; and the ſilver, and the gold, and all the inſtruments put he among the treaſures of the houſe of God. 2. ¶ [c] Then Solomon aſſembled the elders of Iſrael, and all the heads of the tribes, the chief of the fathers of the children of Iſrael unto Jeruſalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD, [d] out of the city of David, which is Zion. 3. Wherefore all the men of Iſrael aſſembled themſelves unto the king in [e] the feaſt, which was in the ſeventh month. 4. And all the elders of Iſrael came, and the Levites took up the ark. 5. And they brought up the ark, and [f] the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy veſſels that were in the tabernacle, [g] theſe did the prieſts and the Levites bring up. 6. Alſo king Solomon and all the congregation of Iſrael that were aſſembled unto him before the ark, [h] ſacrificed ſheep and oxen, [i] which could not be told nor numbred for multitude. 7. And the prieſts brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD [k] unto his place, to the oracle of the houſe into the moſt holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims. 8. For the cherubims ſpread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the ſtaves thereof above. 9. And [l] they drew out the ſtaves of the ark, that the ends of the ſtaves were ſeen from the ark before the oracle, but they were not ſeen without. And there it is unto this day. 10. There was nothing in the ark ſave [m] the two tables which Moſes put therein at Horeb, † when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Iſrael, when they came out of Egypt.

Before Christ 1003.
[m] Exod. xvi. 35. Deut. x. 5.
† Heb. Or where.

v. 1—10. This ſolemnity we met with, 1 Kings viii. 2. The treaſures his father had dedicated, beſides what were uſed in the building, or for the veſſels, Solomon laid up in the temple for any future occaſion. Our parents pious and charitable bequeſts we muſt carefully diſcharge. The ark he brought up with great ceremony, at a general convention aſſembled for that purpoſe, with all the appurtenances belonging to it, and placed it under the cherubims in the moſt holy place; where it continued to the day the records were written, from whence Ezra made this extract.

The ſacrifices on this occaſion were immenſe, and ſacred feſtal joy was univerſally diffuſed around. Note, (1.) The moſt gorgeous ſtructure, without the preſence of God, is not to be compared with a poor tent, where he is pleaſed to manifeſt his glory. (2.) Wherever the faithful aſſemble, there Jeſus hath promiſed to be in the midſt of them. This ark probably was carried into captivity with the people, and is long ſince loſt, but he is with us always to the end of the world. (3.) When the Divine Spirit is pleaſed to come and take up his abode in our heart, then ſhall we taſte greater joys, unſpeakable and full of glory.

[n] 1 Kings viii. 10.
† Heb. Found.
[o] Exod. xix. x. 15.
[p] 1 Chron. xxv. 1.
[q] Rev. xv. 6.
[r] Pſal. cxxxvi.
[s] Pſal. lxii. 30, 31.
[t] Exod. xl. 34. 1 Cor. xiii. 12. 2 Cor. iii. 18.
[u] Mal. iii. 1, 2.
[x] Ezek. xvi. 10. Col. i. 19.

11. ¶ [n] And it came to paſs when the prieſts were come out of the holy place (for all the prieſts that were † preſent were [o] ſanctified, and did not then wait by courſe. 12. Alſo the Levites which were [p] the ſingers, all of them of Aſaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their ſons, and their brethren; [q] being arayed in white linen, having cymbals and pſalteries, and harps, ſtood at the eaſt end of the altar, and with them an hundred and twenty prieſts, ſounding with trumpets) 13. It came even to paſs as the trumpeters and ſingers were as one, to make one ſound to be heard in praiſing and thanking the LORD; and when they lift up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals, and inſtruments of muſic, and praiſed the LORD, ſaying, [r] For he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever: [s] that then [t] the houſe was filled with a cloud, even the houſe of the LORD; 14. So that [u] the prieſts could not ſtand to miniſter by reaſon of the cloud: for [x] the glory of the LORD had filled the houſe of God.

v. 11—14. Not all the gold or jewels could be compared with the preſence of the celeſtial inhabitant, whoſe glory filled the temple. No ſooner were the prieſts retired, and the ſong of thankſgiving with united voice and inſtruments began to ſound, than lo! the preſent deity appears, anſwering their grateful acknowledgments, that his mercy endureth for ever; teſtifying how pleaſing the work of praiſe was to him, and that he intended to take up his abode with them, as with their fathers in the wilderneſs. The prieſts, who were all aſſembled on this occaſion, with the courſes of Levites and ſingers, were no longer able to miniſter by reaſon of the cloud: a proof of their infirmity, and an intimation of the imperfection of the Levitical prieſthood. Note, (1.) When with united voice we join in prayer and praiſe, then ſhall the cloud of glory be in the midſt of us. (2.) The enduring mercy of God deſerves to be the ſubject of our continual ſongs. (3.) Great as the glory of the firſt temple was, the glory of the ſecond was greater; as favoured with the viſits of Him, in whom dwelt the fulneſs of the godhead bodily.

CHAP. VI.

Here, 1. Solomon encourages the people, and bleſſes God for the fulfilment of his promiſes, ver. 1—11. 2. He begs that all prayers offered up in or towards the temple, may be accepted of God, ver. 12—42.

[a] 1 Kings viii. 12, &c.
[b] Lev. xvi. 2. Pſal. xviii. 11. & xcvii. 2.
† Heb. Eternities. Mat. xvi. 18.
[c] Num. vi. 23, &c. 2 Sam. vi. 18. Luke xxiv. 50.
[d] Pſal. cxv. 18.
[e] Ver. 15. Tit. i. 2.

1. [a] THEN ſaid Solomon, [b] The LORD hath ſaid that he would dwell in thick darkneſs. 2. But I have built an houſe of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for † ever. 3. And the king turned his face, and [c] bleſſed the whole congregation of Iſrael (and all the congregation of Iſrael ſtood) 4. And he ſaid, [d] Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael, who hath with his hands [e] fulfilled that which he ſpake with his mouth to my father David, ſaying, 5. Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt, I choſe no city among all the tribes of Iſrael to build an houſe in, that my name might be there, neither choſe I any man to be a ruler over my people Iſrael: 6. But [f] I have choſen Jeruſalem, that my name might be there, and [g] have choſen David to be over my people Iſrael. 7. [h] Now it was in the heart of David my father to build an houſe for the name of the LORD God of Iſrael. 8. But the Lord ſaid to David my father, Foraſmuch as it was in thine heart to build an houſe for my name, [i] thou didſt well in that it was in thine heart: 9. Notwithſtanding, thou ſhalt not build the houſe, but thy ſon which ſhall come forth out of thy loins, he ſhall build the houſe for my name. 10. The LORD therefore hath performed his word that he hath ſpoken: for I am riſen up in the room of David my father, and am ſet on the throne of Iſrael, [k] as the LORD promiſed, and have built the houſe for the name of the LORD God of Iſrael. 11. And in it have I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, that he made with the children of Iſrael.

v. 1—11. For this, See 1 Kings viii. 12—53. We have only farther to obſerve,

1. That it is our duty to correſpond with the Divine appointment, and earneſtly proſecute the work God hath appointed us.
2. When our eye is ſingle to pleaſe God, we ſhall have comfort in our labours.
3. The fulfilment of God's promiſe is ſure; we have only to be faithful, and we ſhall ſet to our ſeal that God is true.
4. Grateful acknowledgments of God's faithfulneſs muſt be made not only for his honour, but for the encouragement of others to truſt on the ſame faithful God.

12. ¶ [l] And he ſtood before the altar of the LORD, in the preſence of all the congregation of Iſrael, and ſpread forth his hands; 13. (For Solomon had made a braſen ſcaffold of five cubits long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had ſet it in the midſt of the court, and upon it he ſtood, and [m] kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Iſrael, and [n] ſpread forth his hands towards heaven) 14. And ſaid, O LORD God of Iſrael, [o] there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; [p] which keepeſt covenant, and ſheweſt mercy unto thy ſervants, [q] that walk before thee with all their hearts: 15. Thou which haſt kept with thy ſervant David my father, that which thou haſt promiſed him; and ſpakeſt with thy mouth, and haſt fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. 16. Now therefore, O LORD God of Iſrael, keep with thy ſervant David my father that which thou haſt promiſed him, ſaying, [r] There ſhall not fail thee a man in my ſight to ſit upon the throne of Iſrael; [s] yet ſo, that thy children take heed to their way to walk in my law, as thou haſt walked before me. 17. Now then, O LORD God of Iſrael, let thy word be verified, which thou haſt ſpoken unto thy ſervant David. 18. (But [t] will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? [u] behold, heaven, and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much leſs this houſe which I have built!) 19. Have reſpect therefore to the prayer of thy ſervant, and to his ſupplication, O LORD my God, to [x] hearken unto the cry and the prayer which thy ſervant prayeth before thee: 20. That [y] thine eyes may be opened upon this houſe day and night, upon the place whereof [z] thou haſt ſaid, that thou wouldſt put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer, which thy ſervant prayeth † towards this place. 21. Hearken therefore unto the ſupplications of thy ſervant, and of thy people Iſrael, which they ſhall make [a] towards this place: hear thou from thy dwelling-place, even from heaven; and when thou heareſt, [b] forgive. 22. ¶ If a man ſin againſt his neighbour, and ‡ an oath be laid upon him to make him ſwear, and the oath come [c] before thine altar in this houſe: 23. Then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy ſervants, by requiting the wicked, [d] by recompenſing his way upon his own head, and by juſtifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteouſneſs. 24. ¶ And if thy people Iſrael be ‖ put to the worſe before the enemy, [e] becauſe they have ſinned againſt thee; and ſhall return and confeſs thy name, and pray, and make ſupplication before thee § in this houſe: 25. [f] Then hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the ſin of thy people Iſrael, and bring them again unto the land which thou gaveſt to them, and to their fathers. 26. ¶ [g] When the heaven is ſhut up, and there is no rain, becauſe they have ſinned againſt thee; yet if they pray towards this place, and confeſs thy name, and turn from their ſin, [h] when thou doſt afflict them: 27. Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the ſin of thy ſervants, and of thy people Iſrael, [i] when thou haſt taught them [k] the good way, wherein they ſhould walk; and [l] ſend rain upon thy land which thou haſt given unto thy people for an inheritance. 28. ¶ If there be dearth in the land, if there be peſtilence, if there be blaſting, or mildew, locuſts, or caterpillers; if their enemies beſiege them in the cities of their land; whatſoever ſore, or whatſoever ſickneſs there be: 29. Then what prayer, or what ſupplication ſoever ſhall be made of [m] any man, or of all thy people Iſrael, [n] when every one ſhall know his own ſore, and his own grief, and ſhall ſpread forth his hands in this houſe: 30. Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and render unto every man according unto all his ways, whoſe heart thou knoweſt (for [o] thou only knoweſt the hearts of the children of men) 31. That they may fear thee, to walk in thy ways ſo long as they live in the land which thou gaveſt unto our fathers. 32. ¶ Moreover, [p] concerning the ſtranger, which is not of thy people Iſrael, [q] but is come from a far country [r] for thy great name's ſake, and thy mighty hand, and thy ſtretched out arm; if they come and pray in this houſe: 33. Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the ſtranger calleth to thee for; [s] that all the people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doth thy people Iſrael, and may know that † this houſe which I have built, is called by thy name. 34. If thy people go out to war againſt their enemies, by the way that thou ſhalt ſend them, and they pray unto thee toward this city which thou haſt choſen, and the houſe which I have built for thy name: 35. Then hear thou from the heavens their prayer, and their ſupplication, and [t] maintain their cauſe. 36. If they ſin againſt thee (for [u] there is no man which ſinneth not) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and they carry them away captives unto a land far off or near; 37. [x] Yet, if they ‡ bethink themſelves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn, and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, ſaying, [y] We have ſinned, we have done amiſs, and have dealt wickedly; 38. If they [z] return to thee with all their heart, and with all their ſoul, in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and pray toward their land which thou gaveſt unto their fathers, and toward the city which thou haſt choſen, and toward the houſe which I have built for thy name: 39. Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling-place, their prayer and their ſupplications, and [a] maintain their cauſe, and forgive thy people which have ſinned againſt thee. 40. Now, my God, let (I beſeech thee) thine eyes be open, and let thine ears be attent unto the prayer ‖ that is made in this place. 41. Now therefore, [b] ariſe, O LORD God, into thy reſting-place, thou, and the ark of thy ſtrength: [c] let thy prieſts, O LORD God, be clothed with ſalvation, and [d] let thy ſaints rejoice in goodneſs. 42. O LORD God, turn not away the face of thine [e] anointed: [f] remember the mercies of David thy ſervant.

v. 12—42. The whole of this prayer we had, 1 Kings viii. except the two laſt verſes. We may farther learn here,

1. That this temple was figurative of the Lord Jeſus, thro' whom alone our ſupplications and ſervices find any acceptance with God.
2. To love, honour and fear this holy God of power, faithfulneſs, mercy, and incomprehenſible glory.
3. To be impreſſed with a ſenſe of his heart-ſearching-eye, that no allowed evil may be harboured in us.
4. That man at beſt is but a poor ſinner, v. 36. and no ſinleſs perfection under the ſun.
5. Though we are only driven to God by our diſtreſſes, yet he will not even ſo reject us, v. 26—28.

Before Chriſt 1003.

[f] Deut. xii. 11. Pſal. cxxxii. 13.
[g] Hoſ. iii. 5.
[h] 2 Sam. vii. 3, &c.
[i] 2 Cor. viii. 12.
[k] 1 Chron. xxviii. 5.
[l] 1 Kings viii. 22, &c.
[m] Pſal. xcv. 6. & xcix. 5. Dan. vi. 10. Mark i. 40. Luke xxii. 41.
[n] Ezra ix. 5. 1 Tim. ii. 8.
[o] Exod. xv. 11.
[p] Dan. ix. 4.
[q] Gen. xvii. 1. Exod. xx. 6. Pſal. cxvi. 9.
[r] 2 Sam. vii. 12. 1 Kings vi. 12. Luke i. 33.
[s] Pſal. cxxxii. 12.
[t] Ibid. cxiii. 5, 6. Acts vii. 49.
[u] Chap. ii. 6. Iſa. lxvi. 1. Acts xvii. 24.
[x] Dan. ix. 17, &c.
[y] Pſal. xxviii. 18. Dan ix. 18.
[z] Deut. xii. 11.
† Or in this place. Ver. 21.
[a] Dan. vi. 10.
[b] Pſal. lxxxv. 2, 3.
‡ Heb. He require an oath of him.
[c] Mat. xxiii. 18.
[d] Deut. xxv. 1.
‖ Heb. Smitten.
[e] Deut. xxxii. 25.

Before Chriſt 1003.

§ Or towards. Ver. 29.
[f] Lev. xxvi. 40, &c.
[g] Deut. xxviii. 23.
[h] Chap. xxxiii. 12. Hoſ. v. 15.
[i] Pſal. xciv. 12. Iſa. xxvi. 9.
[k] Prov. vi. 23. Iſa. xxxv. 8. 2 Pet. ii. 21.
[l] Jam. v. 18.
[m] Ezek. xxii. 30.
[n] 1 Kings viii. 38.
[o] Pſal. xi. 4. Jer. xvii. 10.
[p] Ruth ii. 10, &c.
[q] Mat. ii. 1. Acts viii. 27.
[r] Joſh. ii. 9. Eſth. viii. 17.
[s] Pſal. lxvii. 2.
† Heb. Thy name is called this houſe.
[t] Iſa. xxxvii. 21, 36.
[u] Prov. xx. 9. Eccleſ. vii. 20. Jam. iii. 2. 1 John i. 8.
[x] Lev. xxvi. 41.
‡ Heb. Bring back to their heart.
[y] Luke xv. 18.
[z] Jer. xxix. 12—14.
[a] Ver. 35. Zech. i. 15.
‖ Heb. Of this place.
[b] Pſal. cxxxii. 8—10.
[c] 1 Tim. iv. 16.
[d] Neh. ix. 25. Iſa. lxi. 10.
[e] 1 Kings i. 39. or Pſal. ii. 2.
[f] Pſal. cxxxii. 1. Iſa. lv. 3.

6. Though we may not for the ſake of our prayers, expect to be heard of God, yet aſſuredly not without them, v. 29.

7. There is no difference between Jew or Gentile, Barbarian, Scythian, bond or free; but whoſoever in faith, calls on the name of the Lord, ſhall be ſaved.—The prayer cloſes with two verſes out of the Pſalms: no words ſo expreſſive as thoſe God's ſpirit hath dictated. He begs the conſtant reſidence of God among them; his bleſſing upon the miniſters of the ſanctuary, to enable them to ſave their own ſouls, and be inſtruments of ſalvation to the people; and the abiding conſolations of his ſpirit with all his ſaints, making them rejoice in the experience of his goodneſs. He finiſhes with pleading the covenant mercies of his father, and thoſe ſhewed himſelf whom God had anointed: Or this may refer emphatically to the effectual interceſſion of the Meſſiah, whom God always heareth, and in whoſe ſure mercies we may confidently place our hopes for time and for eternity.

CHAP. VII.

We have here, 1. Solomon's ſacrifice conſumed by fire from heaven, and the temple filled with God's glory, ver. 1—3. 2. The ſolemnities of the feaſt continued for fourteen days, ver. 4—11. 3. God's appearance to Solomon in a viſion of the night, ver. 12—22.

1. NOW [a] when Solomon had made an end of praying, [b] the fire came down from heaven, and conſumed the burnt-offering and the ſacrifices; and [c] the glory of the LORD filled the houſe. 2. And [d] the prieſts could not enter into the houſe of the LORD, becauſe the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's houſe. 3. And when all the children of Iſrael ſaw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the houſe, they bowed themſelves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worſhipped, and praiſed the LORD, ſaying, [e] For he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. 4. ¶ Then the king and all the people offered ſacrifices before the LORD. 5. [f] And king Solomon offered [g] a ſacrifice of [h] twenty and two thouſand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thouſand ſheep: ſo the king and all the people dedicated the houſe of God. 6. And the prieſts waited on their offices: the Levites alſo with inſtruments of muſic of the LORD, which David the king had made to praiſe the LORD, becauſe his mercy endureth for ever, when David praiſed by their † miniſtry: and [l] the prieſts ſounded trumpets before them, and all Iſrael ſtood. 7. Moreover, Solomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the houſe of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings, becauſe the braſen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings, and the meat-offerings, and the fat. 8. ¶ Alſo at the ſame time Solomon kept [k] the feaſt ſeven days, and all Iſrael with him, a very great congregation, from the entring in of Hamath, unto the river of Egypt. 9. And in the eighth day they made a ‡ ſolemn aſſembly; for they kept the dedication of the altar ſeven days, and the feaſt ſeven days. 10. And on the three and twentieth day of the ſeventh month, he ſent the people away into their tents, [l] glad and merry in heart for the goodneſs that the LORD had ſhewed unto David and to Solomon, and to Iſrael his people. 11. [m] Thus Solomon finiſhed the houſe of the LORD, and the king's houſe: and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the houſe of the LORD, and in his own houſe, he proſperouſly effected.

[a] Dan. ix. 20.
[b] Lev. ix. 24. Judg. vi. 21. 1 Kings xviii. 38.
[c] Ibid. 11. Chap. v. 14.
[d] Chap. v. 13. Rev. xv. 8.
[e] Chap. v. 13. Pſal. cxxxvi.
[f] 1 Kings viii. 62, &c.
[g] Rom. xii. 1.
[h] Mic. vi. 7.
† Heb. Hand.
[l] Chap. v. 12.
[k] Lev. xxiii. 34.
‡ Day of reſtraint. Lev. xxiii. 36.
[l] Pſal. cvii. 1, 2. & cxxxvi. 1, &c.
[m] 1 Kings ix. 1.

v. 1—11. A glorious anſwer was given to Solomon's fervent prayer. Fire from heaven, either diſtinct from the former, or iſſuing from the cloud which had filled the houſe, conſumed the ſacrifices. Struck with the awful ſight, the people reverentially bowed and worſhipped, and regarding it as a token of God's eſpecial favour, adored his goodneſs and never-ending mercy. A vaſt multitude of ſacrifices fed this ſacred fire, which was maintained continually. The prieſts and Levites with diligence and zeal diſcharged their offices; the ſingers, with the pſalms and inſtruments David appointed, ſet forth God's praiſes, v. 6. the people with delight and joy feaſted before the Lord fourteen days; and Solomon enjoyed the peculiar ſatisfaction of ſeeing the labours of his hands accepted and proſperous; an encouragement never to be weary of ſerving ſo great and ſo good a maſter. Note, (1.) The fire which once broke forth on Jeſus our ſacrifice, though terrible to behold, ſpeaks God now for ever reconciled to believing ſinners, as having taken one for all. (2.) When God hath kindled the fire of divine love in our hearts, it becomes us to feed it with the continual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe, and whilſt it thus is kept burning, we are aſſured our ſacrifice is accepted. (3.) A ſinner conſcious of his deſerts, is aſhamed and confounded before a holy God. (4.) We can never be in any ſituation, in which praiſe is not our bounden duty. As long as we are out of hell, we muſt ever ſay, He is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. (5.) They who delight in God's worſhip, will never count the time long they ſpend in his ſervice. (6.) All our proſperity in our undertakings muſt be aſcribed wholly to the Divine bleſſing; and when we make God's glory our firſt concern, we may confidently expect it.

12. ¶ And [n] the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and ſaid unto him, [o] I have heard thy prayer, and have choſen this place to myſelf, for an houſe of ſacrifice. 13. [p] If I ſhut up heaven that there be no rain, or if [q] I command the locuſts to devour the land, or if I ſend peſtilence among my people; 14. If my people which are called by my name, [r] ſhall humble themſelves, and [s] pray, and [t] ſeek my face, and [u] turn from their wicked ways: then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their ſin, and will heal their land. 15. Now [x] mine eyes ſhall be open, and mine ears attent unto the prayer † that is made in this place. 16. For now have I choſen and ſanctified this houſe, that my name may be there for ever: and mine eyes and mine heart ſhall be there perpetually. 17. And as for thee, if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and ſhalt obſerve my ſtatutes and my judgments: 18. Then will I eſtabliſh the throne of thy kingdom, [y] according as I have covenanted with David thy father, ſaying, There ſhall not fail thee a man to be ruler in Iſrael. 19. [z] But if ye turn away and forſake my ſtatutes and my commandments which I have ſet before you, and ſhall go and ſerve other gods, and worſhip them: 20. [a] Then will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and [b] this houſe which I have ſanctified for my name, will I caſt out of my ſight, and will make it to be a proverb and a by-word among all nations. 21. And this houſe which is high, ſhall be an aſtoniſhment to every one that paſſeth by it; [c] ſo that he ſhall ſay, [d] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land and unto this houſe? 22. And it ſhall be anſwered, [e] Becauſe they forſook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worſhipped them, and ſerved them: [f] therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

[n] 1 Kings ix. 2, &c.
[o] Pſal. x. 17. & lxv. 2. Dan. ix. 23. Mat. vii. 8.
[p] Deut. xxviii. 23.
[q] Joel i. 4, 12.
[r] Jam. iv. 9, 10.
[s] Ezek. xxxvi. 37. Mat. vii. 7.
[t] Iſa. xlv. 19.
[u] Ezek. xviii. 27. xxxiii. 11.
[x] Deut. xi. 12. Chap. vi. 20, 40.
† Heb. Of this place.
[y] 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c.
[z] 1 Sam. xii. 21. Pſal. lxxxix. 30.
[a] 2 Kings xvii. 20.
[b] Ibid. xxv. 9. Jer. vii. 14.
[c] Lam. ii. 15.
[d] Deut. xxix. 24. Jer. xxii. 8.
[e] Jer. ii. 13.
[f] Chap. xxxvi. 16, 17. Lam. i. 8, 18.

v. 12—22. God's ſecond gracious viſit to Solomon we had before, 1 Kings ix. He expreſsly grants all the particulars he had prayed for. Whenever the people, according as he had ſpoken, ſhould return in penitence and prayer, their ſin ſhould immediately be pardoned, and their ſufferings removed. He conſents to make this houſe his abode for ever, and to eſtabliſh his kingdom to the lateſt poſterity, provided he approved himſelf faithful; but warns him withal, that if he or they (as it was too poſſible, and they were too prone to do) ſhould turn aſide after other gods, and be unfaithful in his covenant, then they might expect no protection from this temple, their land ſhould be waſted, the people deſtroyed, and the ſanctuary made deſolate, and ſuch terrible judgments overtake them, as ſhould aſtoniſh their heathen neighbours, and even make them reflect with juſt reproach on their apoſtacy. Note, (1.) If God is ſo gracious, let us beware not to grieve him. Our hearts are deceitful and deſperately wicked, and we need fear for ourſelves continually. (2.) Whenever God engages the heart in humiliation to return to him, it is a ſign there is ſtill mercy in ſtore.

CHAP. VIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The cities Solomon built, ver. 1—6. 2. The workmen he employed, ver. 7—10. 3. The palace he built for his wife, ver. 11. 4. The order he put the temple-ſervice into, ver. 12—16. 5. The trading he had with foreign countries, ver. 17, 18.

991.

1. AND it came to paſs ([a] at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built the houſe of the LORD,

[a] 1 Kings ix. 10, &c.

Before Christ 991.

LORD, and his own houſe) 2. That the cities which Huram had reſtored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and cauſed the children of Iſrael to dwell there. 3. And Solomon went to Hamath-zobah, and prevailed againſt it. 4. And he built [b] Tadmor in the wilderneſs, and all the ſtore-cities, which he built in Hamath. 5. Alſo he built Beth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars: 6. And Baalath, and all the ſtore-cities, that Solomon had, and all the chariot-cities, and the cities of the horſemen, and all † that Solomon deſired to build in Jeruſalem, and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.
7. ¶ As for all the people that were left of the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebuſites, which were not of Iſrael; 8.
But of their children who were left after them in the land, whom the children of Iſrael conſumed not; them did Solomon make [c] to pay tribute, until this day. 9.
But of the children of Iſrael did Solomon make no ſervants for his work: but they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horſemen.
10. And theſe were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even [d] two hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people. 11. ¶ And Solomon [e] brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David, unto the houſe that he had built for her: for he ſaid, My wife ſhall not dwell in the houſe of David king of Iſrael, becauſe the places are ‡ holy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

[b] 1 Kings ix. 18, &c.
† Heb. The deſire of Solomon, which he deſired to build. 1 Kings ix. 1. Eccleſ. ii. 10.
[c] 1 Kings v. 13. & ix. 21.
[d] 1 Kings ix. 23.
[e] Ibid. iii. 1. & vii. 8. & ix. 24.
‡ Heb. Holineſſes.

v. 1—11. The only warlike expedition Solomon was engaged in, we have in v. 3. reducing to his obedience Hamath-zobah, which ſeems to have revolted. His buildings, to which his genius led him, ſtill went forward, the beautifying and ſtrengthening his kingdom was a work well worthy ſo great a prince; and the old inhabitants of the land, now brought under tribute and proſelyted, afforded him a number of workmen without employing the nobler free-born Iſraelites. Having built a palace for his wife, the daughter of Pharaoh, he removed her from the city of David, where ſhe had before her reſidence. For though probably a proſelyte herſelf, many of her Egyptian ſervants might retain the idols and iniquities of Egypt; and a place which had been favoured with the ark of God, and ſo long the ſeat of worſhip, where David prayed and ſung before the Lord, ought not to be profaned by ſuch inhabitants. Note, (1.) Though we ſhould avoid ſuperſtitious reverence for places, yet what hath been once ſacred to God in reſpect to him, ought not to be treated as a common thing. (2.) They who marry into ſtrange families, will find a burden and a ſnare from the evil manners of their wife's friends and relations, with whom they become neceſſarily connected.

12. ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD, on the altar of the LORD, [f] which he had built before the porch: 13. Even after a certain rate [g] every day, offering according to the commandment of Moſes on the ſabbaths, and on the new moons, and on the ſolemn feaſts, [h] three times in the year, even in the feaſt of unleavened bread, and in the feaſt of weeks, and in the feaſt of tabernacles. 14. ¶ And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, [i] the courſes of the prieſts to their ſervice, and [k] the Levites to their charges, to praiſe and miniſter before the prieſts, as the duty of every day required: [l] the porters alſo by their courſes, at every gate: for † ſo had David the man of God commanded. 15. And they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the prieſts and Levites, concerning any matter, or concerning the treaſures. 16. Now all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the houſe of the LORD, and until it was finiſhed: [m] ſo the houſe of the LORD was perfected. 17. ¶ Then went Solomon to Ezion-geber, and to [n] Eloth, at the ſea-ſide in the land of Edom. 18. And [o] Huram ſent him by the hands of his ſervants, ſhips, and ſervants that had knowledge of the ſea; and they went with the ſervants of Solomon to Ophir, and took thence [p] four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

[f] 1 Kings viii. 64.
[g] Exod. xxix. 38.
[h] Ibid. xxiii. 14. Deut. xvi. 6.
[i] 1 Chron. xxiv. 1.
[k] Ibid. xxv. 1.
[l] Ibid. ix. 17. & xxvi. 1.
† Heb. So was the commandment of David.
[m] 1 Kings ix. 25.
[n] Deut. ii. 8. 2 Kings xiv. 22.
[o] Chap. ix. 10, 13.
[p] 1 Kings ix. 28.

v. 12—18. Solomon had not only built a temple for the honour of God, but took care to continue waiting upon God there in his inſtituted ways. Building churches will do a man no good, if his ſpirit be not engaged in the ſervice of the ſanctuary.

1. The temple work was exactly carried on according to the Divine preſcription, v. 13. and the courſes of prieſts and Levites in waiting according to David's inſtitution. Note, Regular and ſtated returns of worſhip are carefully to be obſerved.

2. Solomon's trade flouriſhed. He viſited his ſea-ports in perſon; and with the aſſiſtance of Hiram's mariners, made a very ſucceſsful voyage to Ophir; See 1 Kings ix. 26. Note, (1.) The maſter's eye is moſt neceſſary over his own affairs. (2.) Men brave every danger of the ſeas for the gold of Ophir, and ſhall we be leſs ſollicitous to ſecure the more enduring treaſures of grace and glory?

CHAP. IX.

Here is, 1. The honour which the queen of Sheba did to Solomon, ver. 1—12. 2. Many inſtances given of the riches and ſplendor of Solomon's court, ver. 13—28. 3. The concluſion of his reign, ver. 29—31.

1. [a] AND when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon, ſhe came [b] to prove Solomon with hard queſtions at Jeruſalem, with a very great company, and camels that bare ſpices, and gold in abundance, and precious ſtones: and when ſhe was come to Solomon, ſhe communed with him of all that was in her heart. 2. And Solomon told her all her † queſtions:
and there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not. 3. And when the queen of Sheba had ſeen [c] the wiſdom of Solomon, and the houſe that he had built,
4. And the meat of his table, and [d] the ſitting of his ſervants, and the ‡ attendance of his miniſters, and their apparel, his cup-bearers alſo, and their apparel, and ‖ his aſcent by which he went up into the houſe of the LORD; [e] there was no more ſpirit in her. 5. And ſhe ſaid to the king, It was a true report which I heard in mine own land, of thine acts, and of thy wiſdom:
6. Howbeit, I believed not their words, until I came and mine eyes had ſeen it: and behold, the one half of the greatneſs of thy wiſdom was not told me: for [f] thou exceedeſt the fame that I heard. 7. [g] Happy are thy men, and happy are theſe thy ſervants, which ſtand continually before thee, and [h] hear thy wiſdom.
8. [i] Bleſſed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee [k] to ſet thee on his throne, to be king for the LORD thy God: becauſe thy God loved Iſrael, to eſtabliſh them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, to do judgment and juſtice. 9. And [l] ſhe gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of ſpices great abundance, and precious ſtones: neither was there any ſuch ſpice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon. 10. And [m] the ſervants alſo of Huram, and the ſervants of Solomon, which brought gold from Ophir, brought algum-trees, and precious ſtones. 11. And the king made of the algum-trees § terriſes to the houſe of the LORD, and to the king's palace, and harps and pſalteries for ſingers: and there were none ſuch ſeen before in the land of Judah. 12.
And king Solomon [n] gave to the queen of Sheba all her deſire, whatſoever ſhe aſked, beſides that which ſhe had brought unto the king: ſo ſhe turned, and went away to her own land, ſhe and her ſervants.

[a] 1 Kings x. 1, &c. Mat. xii. 42.
[b] Prov. i. 5. & xiii. 20. Luke xi. 31.
† Heb. Words.
[c] Prov. viii. 14. Mat. xii. 42. Col. ii. 3.
[d] Rev. iii. 21.
‡ Heb. Standing.
‖ Heb. Or the burnt-offerings in the houſe.
[e] Mat. vii. 28.
[f] 1 Cor. ii. 9.
[g] Pſal. lxxxiv. 4.
[h] Prov. viii. 34.
[i] Chap. v. 7.
[k] Iſa. ix. 6. Luke i. 32.
[l] Pſal. lxxii. 10. 15.
[m] Ibid. i. 3.
§ Heb. Highways.
[n] Eph. iii. 20.

v. 1—12. This ſtory hath been conſidered, 1 Kings x. It remains only to obſerve, (1.) That they who know the value of Divine truth, will count no pains too great to ſearch after it. (2.) They are truly great, whoſe piety and zeal for God diſtinguiſh them. (3.) Whatever gifts we enjoy, they are lent us for the edifying of the body of Chriſt, and to be employed diligently. (4.) We have abundant cauſe to bleſs God for the uſeful inſtruments he is pleaſed to raiſe up for the ſervice of his church, and eſpecially for thoſe who have been made inſtruments of good to our own ſouls. (5.) Great ſouls are ever generous. (6.) Though for a time abſence from home may be needful and profitable, yet we muſt, whatever pleaſing engagements intervene, remember that there is our poſt, and haſten our return.

13. ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year, was ſix hundred and threeſcore and ſix talents of gold; 14. Beſides that which chapmen and merchants brought: and [o] all the kings of Arabia, and governors of the country, brought gold and ſilver to Solomon. 15. ¶ [p] And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: ſix hundred ſhekels of beaten gold went to one target. 16. And three hundred ſhields made he of beaten gold: three hundred ſhekels of gold went to one ſhield: and the king put them in the houſe of the foreſt of Lebanon. 17. ¶ Moreover the king made a great [q] throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold. 18. And there were ſix ſteps to the throne, with a foot-ſtool of gold, which were faſtned to the throne, and † ſtays on each ſide of the ſitting-place, and two lions ſtanding by the ſtays. 19. And twelve lions ſtood there on the one ſide and on the other, upon the ſix ſteps. There was not the like made in any kingdom. 20. ¶ And all the drinking-veſſels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the veſſels of the houſe of the foreſt of Lebanon were of pure gold: ‡ none were of ſilver; it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon. 21. For the king's ſhips went to Tarſhiſh with the ſervants of Huram: every three years once came the ſhips of Tarſhiſh, bringing gold and ſilver, ivory, and apes, and ‖ peacocks. 22. And king Solomon [r] paſſed all the kings of the earth in riches and wiſdom. 23. ¶ And all the kings of the earth ſought the preſence of Solomon, to hear his wiſdom that God had put in his heart. 24. And they brought every man his preſent, veſſels of ſilver and veſſels of gold, and raiment, harneſs and ſpices, horſes and mules, a rate year by year. 25. ¶ And Solomon had [s] four thouſand ſtalls for horſes and chariots, and twelve thouſand horſemen, whom he beſtowed in the chariot-cities, and with the king at Jeruſalem. 26. ¶ And [t] he reigned over all the kings from the river, even unto the land of the Philiſtines, and to the border of Egypt. 27. And the king [u] made ſilver in Jeruſalem as ſtones, and cedar-trees made he as the ſycamore-trees, that are in the low plains in abundance. 28. And [x] they brought unto Solomon horſes out of Egypt, and out of all lands. 29. ¶ Now [y] the reſt of the acts of Solomon, firſt and laſt, are they not written in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of [z] Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the viſions of [a] Iddo the ſeer, againſt Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat? 30. And Solomon reigned in Jeruſalem over all Iſrael forty years. 31. And Solomon ſlept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father, and § Rehoboam his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[o] Pſal. lxxii. 10.
[p] 1 Kings x. 16, &c.

v. 13—31. 1. Solomon appears in the zenith of his grandeur. Wealth flowing in upon him like a river; ſurrounding potentates courting his favour with the moſt noble preſents, and eager to hear his wiſdom; and his magnificence, palaces, guards, throne, &c. all tended to excite the admiration of his neighbours, and the reverence of his ſubjects. Note, (1.) Great was the glory of Solomon, but our Prince of Peace ſhines with glory infinitely more tranſcendent; before his throne all human magnificence vaniſhes, as the ſtars loſe their luſtre before the meridian ſun. (2.) It will be our happineſs as well as duty to pay our grateful homage at his feet; and offer not the gold of Arabia, but that more valuable preſent, our bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, a living ſacrifice, holy and acceptable, which is our reaſonable ſervice.

2. Solomon is laid low in the grave. Mors æquâ pede pulſat, &c. No greatneſs bars death from entring. A veil is here drawn over his former miſcarriages, of which no doubt he had repented; and which being forgiven, ſhall not be mentioned any more againſt him. His ſun ſets in glory, but his crown deſcends to a ſon, whoſe folly quickly tarniſhes all this greatneſs. Note, (1.) The faults of great good men ſhould be forgotten, and their virtues remembred for imitation. (2.) One fooliſh ſon will quickly run out all the acquiſitions of his wiſe and illuſtrious anceſtors.

CHAP. X.

We have here, 1. The application of the tribes to Rehoboam, on his acceſſion, ver. 1—4. 2. The good counſel he rejected, and the bad advice he followed, ver. 5—15. 3. The revolt of ten tribes thereupon, ver. 16—19.

1. [a] AND Rehoboam went to Shechem: for to Shechem were all Iſrael come to make him king. 2. And it came to paſs when Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat (who was in Egypt, [b] whither he had fled from the preſence of Solomon the king) heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt. 3. And they ſent and called him: ſo Jeroboam and all Iſrael came and ſpake to Rehoboam, ſaying, 4. [c] Thy father made our yoke grievous, now therefore eaſe thou ſomewhat the grievous ſervitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will ſerve thee. 5. And he ſaid unto them, Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed. 6. ¶ And king Rehoboam took counſel [d] with the old men that had ſtood before Solomon his father, while he yet lived, ſaying, What counſel give ye me, to return anſwer to this people? 7. And they ſpake unto him ſaying, If thou be † kind to this people, and pleaſe them, and [e] ſpeak good words to them, they will be thy ſervants for ever. 8. But he forſook the counſel which the old men gave him, and took counſel with the young men that were brought up with him, that ſtood before him. 9. And he ſaid unto them, What advice give ye, that we may return anſwer to this people, which have ſpoken to me, ſaying, Eaſe ſomewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us? 10. And the young men that were brought up with him, ſpake unto him, ſaying, Thus ſhalt thou anſwer the people that ſpake unto thee, ſaying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it ſomewhat lighter for us: thus ſhalt thou ſay unto them, My little finger ſhall be thicker than my father's loins. 11. For whereas my father put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke: my father chaſtiſed you with whips, but I will chaſtiſe you with ſcorpions.

v. 1—11. After what has been ſaid on this chapter in 1 Kings xii. we have only to add, (1.) That men are readier to complain of the leaſt expence the wants of government call for, than to acknowledge how indebted they are for the mercies and protection they enjoy. (2.) Young heads are too hot to be wiſe counſellors. (3.) A ſoft anſwer diſarms thoſe, whom oppoſition makes only more furious.

12. [f] So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, ſaying, Come again to me on the third day. 13. And the king anſwered them † roughly; and king Rehoboam forſook the counſel of the old men, 14. And anſwered them after the advice of the young men, ſaying, My father made your yoke heavy, [g] but I will add thereto: my father chaſtiſed you with whips, but I will chaſtiſe you with ſcorpions. 15. So the king hearkned not unto the people, [h] for the cauſe was of God, that the LORD might perform his word [i] which he ſpake by the hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat. 16. ¶ And when all Iſrael ſaw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people anſwered the king, ſaying, What portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in [k] the ſon of Jeſſe: [l] every man to your tents, O Iſrael: and now, David, ſee to thine own houſe. So all Iſrael went to their tents. 17. But as for the children of Iſrael that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them. 18. Then king Rehoboam [m] ſent Hadoram that was over the tribute, and the children of Iſrael ſtoned him with ſtones, that he died: but king Rehoboam ‡ made ſpeed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jeruſalem. 19. And Iſrael rebelled againſt the houſe of David unto this day.

v. 12—19. The ill effects of Rehoboam's ſeverity appear in the revolt of the ten tribes; See 1 Kings xii. They who drive too furiouſly, overturn themſelves. He rejected the good advice, and deſerved to be given up to his folly. God's counſel thus was fulfilled, v. 15. though Rehoboam hath only himſelf to blame for his loſs. It was a mercy God left him yet a part of his father's dominions, and that all had not revolted. But God in wrath ſtill remembers mercy, and doth not give us all the chaſtiſement our iniquities deſerve.

CHAP. XI.

We have here, 1. A ſtop put to Rehoboam's deſign to reduce the ten tribes, by a meſſage from God, ver. 1—4. 2. His ſucceſsful endeavours to preſerve the two tribes that remained, ver. 5—12. 3. The reſort of the prieſts and Levites to him, ver. 13—17. 4. An account of his wives and children, ver. 18—23.

1. [a] AND when Rehoboam was come to Jeruſalem, he gathered of the houſe of Judah and Benjamin,

---

Before Chriſt 991.

[q] Pſal. ix. 7. Rev. xx. 11.

† Heb. Hands.

‡ Or there was no ſilver in them.

‖ Or Parrots.

[r] Chap. i. 12. Num. xxiv. 7. 1 Tim. iv. 8.

[s] Deut. xvii. 16.

[t] Pſal. lxxii. 8. Dan. vii. 14. 1 Tim. vi. 15.

[u] Chap. i. 12, 15. Mat. vi. 33.

[x] 1 Kings x. 28. Chap. i. 16.

[y] 1 Kings xi. 41.

[z] Ibid. 29.

[a] Chap. xii. 15. & xiii. 22.

975.

§ Heb. Rechabbam; i. e. The enlargement of the people. Chap. x. 16.

[a] 1 Kings xii. 1, &c.

[b] Ibid. xi. 40.

Before Chriſt 975.

[c] 1 Kings iv. 7. & v. 13.

[d] Job xxxii. 7.

† Heb. For good.

[e] Prov. xv. 1.

[f] 1 Kings xii. 12, &c.

† Heb. Hardly. Eccleſ. ii. 19.

[g] Prov. xii. 13. & xviii. 7.

[h] Chap. xxv. 20. Pſal. lxxxi. 12. Amos iii. 6.

[i] 1 Kings xi. 31.

[k] 1 Sam. xxii. 7.

[l] 2 Sam. xx. 1.

[m] 1 Kings v. 14.

‡ Heb. Strengthened himſelf.

[a] 1 Kings xii. 21, &c.

Before Chriſt 975.

jamin, an hundred and fourſcore thouſand choſen men which were warriors, to fight againſt Iſrael, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam. 2. But the word of the LORD came to [b] Shemaiah the man of God, ſaying, 3. Speak unto Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon king of Judah, and to all Iſrael in Judah and Benjamin, ſaying, 4. Thus ſaith the LORD, [c] Ye ſhall not go up, nor fight againſt your brethren: return every man to his houſe, for this thing is done of me. And they obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going againſt Jeroboam. 5. ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jeruſalem, and [d] built cities for defence in Judah. 6. He built even Beth-lehem, and Etam, and Tekoa, 7. And Beth-zur, and Shoco, and Adullam, 8. And Gath, and Mareſhah, and Ziph, 9. And Adoraim, and Lachiſh, and Azekah, 10. And Zorah, and Aijalon, and Hebron, which are in Judah, and in Benjamin, fenced cities. 11. And he fortified the ſtrong-holds, and put captains in them, and ſtore of victual, and of oil and wine. 12. And in every ſeveral city he put ſhields and ſpears, and made them exceeding ſtrong, having Judah and Benjamin on his ſide.

[b] Chap. xii. 15.
[c] Exod. ii. 13. Acts vii. 26.
[d] Chap xiv. 6.

v. 1—12. Though Rehoboam had been unſucceſsful in his attempt to reduce the people by fair words, chap. x. 18. he reſolved to try the ſword before Jeroboam was ſtrengthened in his kingdom: and he ſoon raiſed out of Judah and Benjamin a formidable force. But,

1. On the prophet's warning, he diſbanded them, v. 4. Note, It is vain to reſiſt Divine decrees. Oppoſition will only iſſue in our greater confuſion.

2. He fortified his country, weakened by ſuch a defection; and as many of the loyal Iſraelites, as well as the Levites, v. 13. choſe to live under his government, they might be fixed in ſome of the cities he built. Note, When our loſs is irrecoverable, it is our wiſdom to make the beſt uſe of what remains.

974.

13. ¶ And the prieſts and the Levites that were in all Iſrael, reſorted to him out of all their coaſts. 14. (For the Levites left [e] their ſuburbs, and their poſſeſſion, and came to Judah and Jeruſalem: for [f] Jeroboam and his ſons had caſt them off from executing the prieſt's office unto the LORD. 15. And [g] he ordained him prieſts for the high places, and [h] for the devils, and for the calves which he had made.) 16. And [i] after them out of all the tribes of Iſrael, ſuch as [k] ſet their hearts to ſeek the LORD God of Iſrael, came to Jeruſalem, to ſacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers. 17. So they ſtrengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon ſtrong, three years: [l] for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon. 18. ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the ſon of David to wife, and Abihail the daughter of Eliab the ſon of Jeſſe: 19. Which bare him children: Jeuſh, and Shamariah, and Zaham. 20. And after her, he took [m] Maachah the daughter of Abſalom, which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith. 21. And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Abſalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took eighteen wives, and threeſcore concubines, and begat twenty and eight ſons, and threeſcore daughters) 22. And Rehoboam [n] made Abijah the ſon of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among his brethren: for he thought to make him king: 23. And he dealt wiſely, and [o] diſperſed of all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto every fenced city: and he gave them victual in abundance: and he deſired † many wives.

[e] Num. xxxv. 2.
[f] Chap. xiii. 9.
[g] 1 Kings xii. 31. & xiii. 33. & xiv. 9. Hoſ. xiii. 2.
[h] Lev. xvii. 7.
[i] Chap. xv. 9. & xxx. 11, 18.
[k] Pſal. lxix. 32.
[l] Chap. xii. 1.
[m] See Chap. xiii. 2.
[n] See Deut. xxi. 15, &c.
[o] See Gen. xxv. 6. Chap. xxi. 3.
† Heb. A multitude of wives.

v. 13—23. We have here,

1. The noble conduct of the prieſts and Levites. Since their country was become idolatrous, and they were no more permitted to exerciſe their ſacred functions at home, or to go up in courſe to Jeruſalem, they quitted their cities, and the lands aſſigned them; rather chuſing to ſuffer any hardſhips, than be debarred from God's ſervice, which they valued above all poſſeſſions. Their brethren of Judah gladly received and entertained them. Note, (1.) The enjoyment of the free exerciſe of our religion cannot be too dearly purchaſed. (2.) Better is it to beg our bread from door to door with a good conſcience, than by baſe compliances ſecure eaſe and affluence. (3.) They who for the ſake of God forſake all, ſhall one day find themſelves no loſers. (4.) They ſhould be received with open arms, and treated with every kindneſs, who ſuffering for conſcience-ſake, ſeek among us a refuge from perſecution.

Before Chriſt 974.

2. Many pious Iſraelites followed their example, and rather choſe to forſake all, than be deſtitute of the paſtors thus driven from them. Note, (1.) They who know the value of their ſouls, will prefer the care of them to every conſideration. (2.) When God's miniſters are perſecuted and caſt out, we muſt ſtill adhere to them, and ſhare with them in weal and woe. (3.) Trying ſeaſons of perſecution ſerve to ſeparate the precious from the vile.

3. Iſrael loſt, and Judah gained exceedingly by them. They added not only ſtrength by their numbers, but more by the bleſſing which attended them. Three years they walked in the way of David, but afterwards Rehoboam, and they led by his example, grievouſly turned aſide, and loſt thereby the Divine protection. Note, (1.) All perſecution is as impolitic as it is wicked. (2.) We can only expect ſupport, while we continue faithful to God. (3.) Many a refugee in the place of his aſylum, hath found greater danger from eaſe and peace, than from the ſword of the perſecutor.

4. Rehoboam following the unjuſtifiable example of his fathers, greatly multiplied his wives, and increaſed his family. However, he choſe to match among his brethren, and thoſe chiefly of the ſeed royal, and took not ſtrange wives, as Solomon. Abijah his ſon, by Maachah the daughter of Abſalom, (not the ſon of David, See 1 Kings xv. 2. and xiii. 2.) was appointed his ſucceſſor, and his other ſons diſperſed in the ſeveral cities of Judah and Benjamin, as perſons he could confide in.

CHAP. XII.

Here, 1. Rehoboam and Judah, for their iniquity, are ſold into the hands of Shiſhak king of Egypt, ver. 1—4. 2. They repent at the preaching of a prophet, ver. 5, 6. 3. God thereupon turns from his anger, yet leaves them under the marks of his diſpleaſure, ver. 7—12. 4. A general character is given of Rehoboam's reign: his death, ver. 13—16.

972.

1. AND it came to paſs when [a] Rehoboam had eſtabliſhed the kingdom, and had ſtrengthned himſelf, [b] he forſook the law of the LORD, and [c] all Iſrael with him. 2. [d] And it came to paſs, that in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, Shiſhak king of Egypt came up againſt Jeruſalem ([e] becauſe they had tranſgreſſed againſt the LORD) 3. With twelve hundred chariots, and threeſcore thouſand horſemen: and the people were without number that came with him out of Egypt; the Lubims, the Sukkiims, and the Ethiopians. 4. And [f] he took the fenced cities which pertained to Judah, and came to Jeruſalem. 5. ¶ Then came Shemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah that were gathered together to Jeruſalem becauſe of Shiſhak, and ſaid unto them, Thus ſaith the LORD, [g] Ye have forſaken me, and therefore have I alſo left you in the hand of Shiſhak. 6. Whereupon the princes of Iſrael, and the king humbled themſelves, and they ſaid, The LORD is righteous. 7. And [h] when the LORD ſaw that they humbled themſelves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, ſaying, They have humbled themſelves, therefore I will not deſtroy them, but I will grant them † ſome deliverance, and my wrath ſhall not be poured out upon Jeruſalem by the hand of Shiſhak. 8. Nevertheleſs, [i] they ſhall be his ſervants; that they may know my ſervice, and the ſervice of the kingdoms of the countries. 9. So Shiſhak king of Egypt came up againſt Jeruſalem, and took away the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD, and [k] the treaſures of the king's houſe, he took all: he carried away alſo [l] the ſhields of gold which Solomon had made. 10. Inſtead of which king Rehoboam made ſhields of braſs, and committed them to the hands of the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's houſe. 11. And when the king entred into the houſe of the LORD, the guard came and fet them, and brought them again into the guard-chamber. 12. And when he humbled himſelf, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not deſtroy him altogether: [m] and alſo in Judah things went well.

[a] Chap. xi. 17.
[b] Deut. xxxii. 15.
[c] Prov. xxix. 12.
971.
[d] 1 Kings xiv. 25, &c.
[e] Judg. ii. 14.
[f] Jer. v. 10.
[g] Chap. xv. 2.
[h] 1 Kings xxi. 29.
† Heb. A little while.
[i] Iſa. xxvi. 13.
[k] Prov. xxiii. 5.
[l] Chap. ix. 15.
[m] Hoſ. xi. 12.

v. 1—12. Short was the gleam of ſun-ſhine, which brightened the firſt years of Rehoboam's government.

1. He forſook the law of God, and Judah followed his example. Their ſin is recorded, 1 Kings xiv. 22—24. Now the kingdom was ſtrengthened, they not only caſt off the fear of man, man, but of God. Note, Proſperity is the common cauſe of the ruin of men's ſouls.

Before Christ 971.

2. God left them not unpuniſhed. Shiſhak king of Egypt, in the fifth year of Rehoboam invaded the land, and eaſily took the fenced cities, in which Rehoboam had repoſed his confidence. Note, Human ſupports will prove but refuges of lies, when God's favour is withdrawn.

3. In this diſtreſs God ſends a prophet to the king and princes, aſſembled probably in council, to enforce the providence for their conviction and humiliation, v. 5. Note, (1.) The word of God comes with peculiar force, when joined with awakening providences. (2.) It is vain to conſult about our defence, if we continue unhumbled for our ſins.

4. The prophet's word was attended with deep effects. Conviction ſeized their hearts, and they confeſſed the judgment of God juſt. Note, A ſinner is never truly humbled, till he juſtifies God in his ſufferings.

5. God, on their humiliation, ſends his prophet again to comfort them. Though corrected, they ſhould not be conſumed. God ſhould prevent the threatened ruin of Jeruſalem; but they would for a time ſmart for their wickedneſs, and prove, under an Egyptian yoke, how bad a choice they had made, when they rejected God for their maſter. Note, (1.) God waits to be gracious: the moment we return in penitence, as prodigal ſons, his bowels, as a father, yearn over us. (2.) God makes us often ſmart in the fleſh for it, even when the guilt of our ſin is done away. (3.) They who count God a hard maſter, and the perfect freedom of his ſervice burdenſome, will find the ſlavery to their luſts, and the wages of ſin, a miſerable exchange.

6. Shiſhak, reſtrained of God, after plundering the country, and carrying off the ſhields of gold, and all the treaſures of Rehoboam, which David and Solomon had amaſſed, retired into Egypt; and the king, ſtripped of his grandeur, was forced to ſubſtitute ſhields of braſs in their ſtead. Note, The greateſt conquerors are reſtrained by an inviſible arm, who gives them their commiſſion, which they cannot exceed.

7. On Shiſhak's return, and Rehoboam's repentance, God had mercy on Judah; the ravaged country recovered; and religion, that was decayed, again revived and flouriſhed. Things went well in Judah; or, in Judah there were good things. Bad as the times had been, there was a remnant according to the election of grace. Note, (1.) In the worſt days, God has his faithful few. (2.) The judgments which learn us righteouſneſs, are mercies in diſguiſe.

13. ¶ So king Rehoboam ſtrengthened himſelf in Jeruſalem, and reigned: for [n] Rehoboam was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned ſeventeen years in Jeruſalem, the city which the LORD had choſen out of all the tribes of Iſrael, to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah an Ammoniteſs. 14. And he did evil, becauſe he † prepared not his heart to ſeek the LORD. 15. Now the acts of Rehoboam, firſt and laſt, are they not written in the book of Shemaiah the prophet, and [o] of Iddo the ſeer, concerning genealogies? And there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually. 16. And Rehoboam ſlept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David; and ‡ Abijah his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[n] 1 Kings xiv. 21.

† Or fixed.

[o] Chap. ix. 29.

958.

‡ Abijam. 1 Kings xiv. 31.

v. 13—16. On Shiſhak's retiring, Rehoboam recovered ſtrength, and fortified Jeruſalem againſt any future attacks. His wars with Jeroboam were continued to the end of his reign: though no pitched battle was fought, there were conſtant acts of hoſtility on the borders. His humiliation ſeems to have been of no long continuance. His heart was not right with God, v. 14. he did not ſeek to him for advice, or pray for his aſſiſtance; at leaſt, he was not truly engaged in the ſervice, when he pretended to do ſo. His reign continued ſeventeen years, and then his ſon, too like himſelf, ſucceeded him. Note, (1.) If our heart is not engaged truly in the ſervice of God, all is nought. (2.) Though judgments may bring a man to his knees, nothing but divine grace can turn the ſoul to God.

CHAP. XIII.

Here are, 1. The armies brought into the field by Abijah and Jeroboam, ver. 3. 2. The remonſtrance which Abijah made before the battle, ſetting forth the juſtice of his cauſe, ver. 4—12. 3. The diſtreſs which Judah was brought into by the policy of Jeroboam, ver. 13, 14. 4. The victory they obtained, notwithſtanding, by the power of God, ver. 15—20. 5. The concluſion of Abijah's reign, ver. 21, 22.

958.

[a] 1 Kings xv. 1.

1. [a] NOW in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam, began Abijah to reign over Judah. 2. He reigned three years in Jeruſalem: (his mother's name alſo was [b] Michaiah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah) and there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam. 3. And Abijah ſet the battle in array, with an army of valiant men of war, even four hundred thouſand choſen men: Jeroboam alſo ſet the battle in array againſt him with eight hundred thouſand choſen men, being mighty men of valour. 4. ¶ And Abijah [c] ſtood up upon mount Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and ſaid, Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Iſrael, 5. Ought you not to know, that [d] the LORD God of Iſrael gave the kingdom over Iſrael to David for ever, even to him and to his ſons [e] by a covenant of ſalt? 6. Yet Jeroboam the ſon of Nebat, the ſervant of Solomon the ſon of David, is riſen up, and [f] hath rebelled againſt his lord. 7. And there are gathered unto him vain men, [g] the children of Belial, and have [h] ſtrengthened themſelves againſt Rehoboam the ſon of Solomon, when Rehoboam was young and tender-hearted, and could not withſtand them. 8. And now ye think to withſtand the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the ſons of David; and ye be a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves [i] which Jeroboam made you for gods. 9. [k] Have ye not caſt out the prieſts of the LORD, the ſons of Aaron, and the Levites, and [l] have made you prieſts after the manner of the nations of other lands? [m] ſo that whoſoever cometh to † conſecrate himſelf with a young bullock and ſeven rams, the ſame may be a prieſt of them that are no gods. 10. But as for us, the LORD is our God, and we have not forſaken him; and the prieſts which miniſter unto the LORD, are the ſons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their buſineſs. 11. And [n] they burn unto the LORD every morning and every evening burnt-ſacrifices and ſweet incenſe: [o] the ſhew-bread alſo ſet they in order upon the pure table, and the candleſtick of gold with the lamps thereof, [p] to burn every evening: for we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forſaken him. 12. And behold, [q] God himſelf is with us for our captain, and [r] his prieſts with ſounding trumpets to cry alarm againſt you: O children of Iſrael, [s] fight ye not againſt the LORD God of your fathers, for you ſhall not proſper.

Before Chriſt 957.

[b] See 1 Kings xv. 2. Chap. xi. 20.

957.

[c] Pſ. cxx. 7. Rom. xii. 18.

[d] 2 Sam. vii. 12, &c.

[e] Numb. xviii. 19.

[f] 1 Kings xi. 26.

[g] Deut. xiii. 13.

[h] Chap. xii. 13.

[i] 1 Kings xii. 28. Hoſ. viii. 6.

[k] Chap. xi. 14, 15.

[l] 1 Kings xii. 31.

[m] Exod. xxix. 35.

† Heb. Fill his hand. See Exod. xxix. 1. Lev. viii. 2.

[n] Chap. ii. 4.

[o] Lev. xxiv. 6.

[p] Exod. xxvii. 21. Lev. xxiv. 3.

[q] Rom. viii. 31.

[r] Num. x. 8.

[s] Acts v. 39.

v. 1—12. Abijah is ſcarce fixed on the throne, before we find him involved in a dangerous war. Perhaps Jeroboam thought to take advantage of him on his acceſſion, as unprepared, and unable to withſtand him.

1. Immenſe armies on both ſides were drawn into the field, but the men of Iſrael twice as many as thoſe of Judah. The forces were unequal; but what was wanting in number, was more than ſupplied by the juſtice of Abijah's cauſe.

2. Abijah, if poſſible to prevent bloodſhed, obtains a parley, and tries by force of argument to prevail, rather than by the ſword. He ſought not conqueſt, but would gladly part in peace. Every method of accommodation ſhould be tried, before we have recourſe to war, or the law, where generally much is loſt on both ſides, and little gained by either. Abijah with his party being on mount Ephraim, and Jeroboam and his party within hearing, he expoſtulates with him, [1.] On the injuſtice of Jeroboam's deſign. His former rebellion againſt his father was perfidious and baſe: he had taken advantage of his weakneſs, during the infancy of his government,: and, ſupported by men apoſtate from God, and ſons of Belial, had withdrawn ten tribes from their allegiance: yet, not ſatisfied with this, in oppoſition to the divine promiſes, v. 5. he now was impiouſly attempting to diſpoſſeſs David's ſucceſſors of the little which was left, and, in ſo doing, fighting againſt God, v. 8. by whom the kings of Judah reigned. Note, (1.) Ambition is never ſatisfied. (2.) Succeſs emboldens ſinners. (3.) Proſperous iniquity is but a ſhort-lived joy. [2.] He warns him of the danger to which he expoſed himſelf. What could he hope, an apoſtate, an idolater, a perſecutor, who had calves for his god, and the vileſt of the people for his prieſts. Little could his numerous army profit him in ſuch a caſe, whilſt Abijah boaſts of Judah's fidelity to the great Jehovah; conſtant and exact in his worſhip at home; ſupported and ſtrengthened by him, as the captain of their hoſt; animated by his miniſters ſounding the ſilver trumpets, the earneſt of certain victory. Wiſely therefore he perſuades him to deſiſt from war, and not think to fight againſt the God of their fathers, ſince in ſuch caſe ruin inevitable awaited him. Abijah's own character we find, 1 Kings xv. 3. was not of the beſt; yet he maintained God's worſhip; and though his own ſtate was evil, his kingdom was under God's protection. Note, (1.) They who have God for their enemy, will find all human efforts vain. (2.) It is juſt in God to give up thoſe to ruin, who apoſtatize from his ſervice.

Before Chriſt 957.

(3.) Diligent obſervance of God's inſtituted ordinances will bring its own reward. (4.) A good cauſe gives men courage; and how much more the preſence and ſupport of the great God. (5.) Fair warning of their danger leaves ſinners inexcuſable in their obſtinacy.

t Ver. 16. Prov. xxi. 30.
u Ver. 15. Pſ. cxx. 1.
x Chap. xiv. 12.
y Pſ. iii. 8.
z Pſ. xxxiii. 16.
a 1 Chron. v. 20. Pſ. xxi. 2, 3.
b Joſh. xv. 9.
c 1 Kings xiv. 20.
d 2 Sam. iii. 1.
955.
† Or commentary.
e Chap. xii. 15.

13. ¶ But Jeroboam [t] cauſed an ambuſhment to come about behind them: ſo they were before Judah, and the ambuſhment was behind them. 14. And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and [u] they cried unto the LORD, and the prieſts ſounded with the trumpets. 15. Then the men of Judah gave a ſhout: and as the men of Judah ſhouted, it came to paſs, that [x] God ſmote Jeroboam and all Iſrael before Abijah and Judah. 16. And the children of Iſrael fled before Judah: and God [y] delivered them into their hand. 17. And Abijah and his people ſlew them with a great ſlaughter: ſo there fell down ſlain of Iſrael [z] five hundred thouſand choſen men. 18. Thus the children of Iſrael were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, [a] becauſe they relied upon the LORD God of their fathers. 19. And Abijah purſued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeſhanah with the towns thereof, and [b] Ephrain with the towns thereof. 20. [c] Neither did Jeroboam recover ſtrength again in the days of Abijah: And the LORD ſtruck him, and he died. 21. ¶ But [d] Abijah waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives, and begat twenty and two ſons, and ſixteen daughters. 22. And the reſt of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his ſayings, are written in the † ſtory of the prophet [e] Iddo.

v. 13—22. They who are devoted to deſtruction, are deaf to admonition.

1. Jeroboam, perhaps whilſt Abijah was ſpeaking, took the advantage to plant an ambuſcade behind him; and, inſtead of anſwering his reaſoning, produced, as he concluded, the weightier argument of the longeſt ſword.

2. Abijah and his ſervants put the battle in array; but no ſooner was the front engaged, than a cry in the rear alarmed and terrified him. In deep diſtreſs they cried to the Lord, Save, or we periſh! and, truſting all on his hands, endure the ſhock. The prieſts with trumpets ſounded, inſpiring more than mortal courage; and loud the men of Judah ſhout as for victory, ruſh on their foes, diſpirited, and ſmitten of God with panic fear. A havock terrible enſued, ſuch as no other hiſtory affords in any one battle: five hundred thouſand men lay dead on the field. Note, (1.) God often leaves his people to fall into the moſt imminent danger, to awaken their cries, to exerciſe their faith, and make his deliverance of them more glorious. (2.) If we are enabled to truſt upon God, then ſhall we not be moved. (3.) The prayer of faith, and the ſhout of victory, are inſeparable. (4.) Civil wars and diſputes among brethren are uſually moſt bitter and bloody.

3. Abijah purſued his blow in the recovery of part of the revolted cities, particularly Beth-el, from whence Jeroboam had either withdrawn the calf, or Abijah had not zeal enough to deſtroy it. We find it ſtill there, 2 Kings x. 29.

4. Death, ſoon after this, removed them both from the throne, to give an account of their government to the King of kings. Jeroboam, weakened with his defeat, and ſmitten of God with ſickneſs, perhaps broken-hearted through pride and vexation on his loſſes, lingred for a while, and then died as miſerably, as he had lived wickedly. Mark the end of thoſe men who forſake God. Abijah, ſtrengthened by his acquiſitions, and bleſſed with a numerous family, waxed mighty; but his greatneſs was ſhort-lived, (ſuch is the fate of all ſublunary poſſeſſions); he ſoon ſlept with his fathers; and in the book of Iddo, a farther account of his wars, private character, and ſayings, were recorded, which is long ſince periſhed. Note, The preſervation of the inſpired writings from the ravages of time, is a ſingular inſtance of divine providence, that with thankfulneſs we are bound to acknowledge.

CHAP. XIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. Aſa's pious reign, ver. 1—5. 2. His policy, ver. 6—8. 3. His victory over a great army of Ethiopians, ver. 9—15.

955.
a 1 Kings xv. 8, &c.
b Chap. xv. 17.
c Ezek. xx. 18. 1 Pet. i. 18.

1. SO [a] Abijah ſlept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David, and Aſa his ſon reigned in his ſtead: in his days the land was quiet ten years. 2. And Aſa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God. 3. For he took away the altars of the ſtrange gods, and [b] the high places, and [c] brake down the images, and [d] cut down the groves: 4. [e] And commanded Judah to ſeek the LORD God of their fathers, and to do the law, and the commandment. 5. Alſo he took away out of all the cities of Judah, the high places and the † images: and the kingdom was quiet before him. 6. ¶ And he built fenced cities in Judah: for the land had reſt, and he had no war in thoſe years; becauſe the LORD had given him reſt. 7. Therefore he ſaid unto Judah, Let us build theſe cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; becauſe we have ſought the LORD our God, we have ſought him, and he hath given us reſt on every ſide: ſo they built and proſpered. 8. And Aſa had an army of men that bare targets and ſpears, out of Judah three hundred thouſand, and out of Benjamin, that bare ſhields and ‡ drew bows, two hundred and fourſcore thouſand: all theſe were mighty men of valour.

Before Chriſt 955.
d 1 Kings xi. 7.
e Joſh. xxii. 5.
† Heb. Sun-images.
‡ Heb. Trod the bow. 1 Chron. v. 18. & viii. 40.

v. 1—8. Abijah left the crown at his deceaſe to a worthy ſucceſſor, whoſe piety and proſperity are here recorded.

1. His character was excellent. His eye was ſingle to pleaſe God, and he met with his approbation and bleſſing; and ſo ſhall we, when, like him, our only great and prevailing concern is to do that which is right in the eyes of the Lord.

2. He gave a ſtriking proof of the uprightneſs of his heart, in his zeal for God's ſervice. No ſooner was he come to the crown, than he aboliſhed every monument of idolatry, which had remained ſince the days of Solomon, and had received the royal ſanction, or at leaſt was connived at during the laſt reigns. And this reformation he carried through all his dominions, bringing back the people to the ſervice of the temple, which, though kept up, had been grievouſly neglected; and to the obſervance of God's laws, about which they had become too careleſs. No foreign enemy diſturbed him, and none of his own ſubjects dared oppoſe him. Note, (1.) However difficult or dangerous it may appear to repreſs the torrent of iniquity, zeal for God, and dependance upon his ſupport, will work wonders. (2.) Every body can do ſomething for God; but magiſtrates and miniſters are eſpecially called upon to labour for the eſtabliſhment of pure religion.

3. Aſa improved the peace he enjoyed for the ſtrengthening his kingdom, as well as reforming it. Acknowledging with thankfulneſs the mercy he enjoyed, which he regarded as the bleſſing of the fidelity they had ſhewed, he ſtirs up his chief men to aſſiſt him in fortifying the cities; and, tho' in profound tranquillity, prepared for what might happen, by keeping his militia in conſtant exerciſe, conſiſting of 300,000 men of Judah, and 280,000 of Benjamin, differently armed for the various methods of attack, at a diſtance, or in cloſe fight. Note, (1.) Peace is a moſt unſpeakable bleſſing, for which we can never be enough thankful. (2.) Proſperity, the reward of fidelity, is doubly ſweet. (3.) They who ſtay themſelves on God, ſhall find abiding reſt to their ſouls. (4.) We may expect trials; however calm the ſcene at preſent be, it is our wiſdom to be armed and watchful.

941.
f Chap. xvi. 8.
g Pſ. xxxiii. 16. Iſa. viii. 9, 10.
h Joſh. xv. 44.
i Chap. xiii. 14.
k 1 Sam. xiv. 6. Pſ. lxii. 11.
l 1 Sam. xvii. 45. Pſ. lxxi. 16. Prov. xviii. 10.
m Chap. xiii. 15.
† Heb. Broken.
n Gen. xxxv. 5. Chap. xvii. 10.

9. ¶ And [f] there came out againſt them Zerah the Ethiopian, with an hoſt of [g] a thouſand thouſand, and three hundred chariots, and came unto [h] Mareſhah. 10. Then Aſa went out againſt him, and they ſet the battle in aray in the valley of Zephathah at Mareſhah. 11. And Aſa [i] cried unto the LORD his God, and ſaid, LORD, [k] it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we reſt on thee, and [l] in thy name we go againſt this multitude: O LORD, thou art our God, let not man prevail againſt thee. 12. So [m] the LORD ſmote the Ethiopians before Aſa, and before Judah, and the Ethiopians fled. 13. And Aſa and the people that were with him purſued them unto Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themſelves, for they were † deſtroyed before the LORD, and before his hoſt; and they carried away very much ſpoil. 14. And they ſmote all the cities round about Gerar, for [n] the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they ſpoiled all the cities, for there was exceeding much ſpoil in them. 15. They ſmote alſo the tents of cattle, and carried away ſheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jeruſalem.

v. 9—15. Clouds overcaſt the brighteſt day. We have here,

1. Aſa in trouble. A vaſt army of Ethiopians and their confederates threaten to ſwallow him up. The waves of the ſea are thus permitted often to rage horribly, that the Lord, who dwelleth on high, may make his power more mightily to appear.

Before Chriſt 941.

2. His prayer; fervent, humble, believing. He drew near to God as his covenant-God, in whoſe favour and regard he had a ſure intereſt; perſuaded of his almighty power, againſt which numbers ſignified nothing; dependent on his ſupport, and pleading his own glory now engaged, which would be diſhonoured, if mortal man ſhould prevail againſt his cauſe and people. Note, (1.) When we can ſay in prayer My God, we ſhall be heard. (2.) There is no might that can prevail againſt the Lord. (3.) We need not fear the faces of the mighty: man is but a worm: if God be for us, who ſhall be againſt us?

3. His prayer was crowned with victory. The enemy in confuſion fled, ſmitten of God with terrible diſmay; and Aſa and his forces purſued them with great ſlaughter; ſtormed the cities of their confederates, whither they had run for ſhelter, ſtruck with a panic fear, and unable to reſiſt; and plundered their camp, the cities, and the country, carrying away immenſe ſpoils, and vaſt droves of cattle.

CHAP. XV.

We have here, 1. Aſa met by a prophet on his triumphant return, and encouraged to proceed in his reformation, ver. 1—7. 2. The effect of this meſſage: the removal of idolatry; the covenant renewed with God; the ſpoil dedicated to God; and the great peace thereupon, ver. 8—19.

1. AND [a] the ſpirit of God came upon Azariah the ſon of Oded. 2. And he went out to meet Aſa, and ſaid unto him, Hear ye me, Aſa, and all Judah and Benjamin, [b] the LORD is with you while ye be with him; and [c] if ye ſeek him, he will be found of you; but [d] if ye forſake him, he will forſake you. 3. Now [e] for a long ſeaſon Iſrael hath been without the true God, and [f] without a teaching prieſt, and without law. 4. But [g] when they in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Iſrael, and ſought him, he was found of them. 5. And [h] in thoſe times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries. 6. And [i] nation was deſtroyed of nation, and city of city: for God did vex them with all adverſity. 7. [k] Be ye ſtrong therefore, and let not your hands be weak: [l] for your work ſhall be rewarded.

[a] 2 Pet. i. 21.
[b] Jam. iv. 8.
[c] Ver. 4, 15. 1 Chron. xxviii. 9. Chap. xxxiii. 12, 13. Mat. vii. 7.
[d] Chap. xxiv. 20.
[e] Hoſ. iii. 4.
[f] Lev. x. 11.
[g] Deut. iv. 29.
[h] Judg v. 6.
[i] Chap. xii. 15. & xiii. 17.
[k] 1 Cor. xvi. 13.
[l] Pſ. lviii. 11. 1 Cor. xv. 58. Heb. vi. 10.

v. 1—7. Not ſo much to congratulate their victory, as to admoniſh them of the right improvement they ſhould make of it, the prophet Azariah met the victor hoſt returning.

1. He let them know, that the continuance of their proſperity depended upon their perſeverance in well-doing. God was now evidently among them; and while they continued to ſeek his favour, ſo long they might be aſſured of his protection; but, if they forſook him, the conſequences would be fatal. Note, None ever ſeek God's face in vain; while they who forſake him, forſake their own mercies.

2. He ſets before them the dangerous conſequences of departure from God, in the experience of their nation during the days of the judges, when they forſook the true God for Baal and Aſhtaroth; neglected their divinely-appointed prieſts, and paid no regard to the law, every man doing what was right in his own eyes, and therefore were enſlaved by ſtrangers, and harraſſed within by plunderers and civil diſſenſions, v. 5, 6. yet, when they cried to God, he delivered them. Thus others ſufferings ſhould be our warnings: for this purpoſe they are recorded.—Some refer this to the preſent ſtate of Iſrael through Jeroboam's idolatry; others interpret it as prophetical of what would be their caſe hereafter; but the firſt ſenſe ſeems moſt agreeable to the prophet's intention.

3. He exhorts the king and people therefore to be zealous for God, and aſſures them, as they had now found by experience, their labour ſhould meet an abundant recompence. Note, Steady perſeverance is ſure to win the crown of life eternal.

8. And when Aſa heard theſe words, and the prophecy of Oded the prophet, he took courage, and put away the † abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities [m] which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed the altar of the LORD, that was before the porch of the LORD. 9. And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the ſtrangers with them out of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, and out of Simeon: (for [n] they fell to him out of Iſrael in abundance [o] when they ſaw that the LORD his God was with him) 10. So they gathered themſelves together at Jeruſalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Aſa. 11. And [p] they offered unto the LORD ‡ the ſame time, of [q] the ſpoil which they had brought, ſeven hundred oxen, and ſeven thouſand ſheep. 12. And they entred into a covenant to ſeek the LORD God of their fathers, with all their heart, and with all their ſoul; 13. [r] That whoſoever would not ſeek the LORD God of Iſrael [s] ſhould be put to death, whether ſmall or great, whether man or woman. 14. And they [t] ſware unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with ſhouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets. 15. And all Judah rejoiced at the oath: for they had ſworn with all their heart, and ſought him with their whole deſire, and he was found of them: and the LORD gave them reſt round about. 16. ¶ [u] And alſo concerning Maachah [x] the § mother of Aſa the king, he removed her ‖ from being queen, becauſe ſhe had made an idol in a grove: and Aſa cut down her idol, and ſtamped it, and [y] burnt it at the brook Kidron. 17. But [z] the high places were not taken away out of Iſrael: nevertheleſs, [a] the heart of Aſa was perfect all his days. 18. ¶ And [b] he brought into the houſe of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himſelf had dedicated, ſilver, and gold, and veſſels. 19. And there was no more war unto † the five and thirtieth year of the reign of Aſa.

† Heb. Abominations. 2 Kings xxiii. 13.
[m] Chap. xiii. 19.
[n] Chap. xi. 16.
[o] Zech. viii. 23.

Before Chriſt 941.

[p] Chap. xiv. 15.
‡ Heb. In that day.
[q] Chap. xiv. 13.
[r] Exod. xxii. 20.
[s] Deut. xiii. 5, 9, 15.
[t] Neh. x. 29.
[u] 1 Kings xv. 13, &c.
[x] Deut. xxxiii. 9. Zech. xiii. 3.
§ i. e. Grandmother. 1 Kings xv. 2, 10.
‖ Heb. From the queen.
[y] Exod. xxxii. 20.

940.

[z] Lev. xxvi. 30. Deut. xii. 13, 14.
[a] Chap. xvi. 7, 10, 12.
[b] 1 Kings vii. 51. & xv. 15.
† i. e. From the diviſion of the kingdom; for it was but the 15th of Aſa's reign. So Chap. xvi. 1.

v. 8—19. Encouraged by his victory, but more by the prophet's exhortation, Aſa zealouſly renewed the work of reformation.

1. He ſought out and extirpated every abomination which yet remained, or had crept in ſince the beginning of his reign, or that was found in the cities of Iſrael which he had taken; nor ſpared his own grandmother, though a queen, but deſtroyed her image, cut down her grove, degraded her from her ſtation, and removed her from court. Note, No greatneſs of ſtation, or nearneſs of relation, muſt lead us to partiality, or connivance at ſin.

2. He convoked a great aſſembly to Jeruſalem, not only of Judah and Benjamin, but of the Iſraelites who had come over to him on his victory, from a conviction of the bleſſing of God that was upon him. This convocation was held probably at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, when Aſa repaired the altar, the braſs of which might have been damaged by long uſe, and offered numerous ſacrifices of the ſpoil they had taken. Mercies received deſerve returns of grateful praiſe.

3. The people aſſembled, ſolemnly renewed the dedication of themſelves to God as his people, and, by the ceremony of paſſing through the divided calf, confirmed their covenant with the God of their fathers, engaging to ſeek him with all their heart and ſoul, in ſincerity and truth, to worſhip him according to his inſtitutions, and execute judgment upon all idolaters, according to his law: and, to ſtrengthen the bond, they ſware aloud, as happy in their preſent reſolution, to be faithful, and with trumpets, cornets, and ſhouting for joy, celebrated the auſpicious day of their return to God. Note, (1.) Solemn ſurrenders of ourſelves to God, though binding us to nothing but what was before our duty, may be uſeful to affect our own minds with the ſenſe of our obligations. (2.) That ſervice is only pleaſing to God, in which the heart is truly engaged. (3.) It were happy for us, could we always preſerve that gracious frame of mind which ſometimes we enjoy. (4.) The ſervice of God, when the ſoul is truly engaged, brings its own comfort and reward along with it.

4. Aſa now brought in the dedicate treaſures into the temple, which his father had laid aſide for this purpoſe, and he had increaſed. It is but juſtice to render unto God the things that are God's: the due return we owe for mercies, is to preſent God with a part of the wealth he beſtows.

5. Peace hereupon enſued for many years; and, though ſome hoſtilities continued on the borders, (See 1 Kings xv. 16.) yet in general the nation had reſt from war; a preſent reward for their fidelity. For though the high places ſtill remained, thoſe at leaſt that, before the temple was built, were uſed as places of ſacrifice to the Lord, yet Aſa's heart was perfect all his days. Note, (1.) A perfect man is not a ſinleſs man. (2.) He who knows our ſimplicity, for Jeſus's ſake pities and pardons our infirmities.

CHAP. XVI.

Here is, 1. Aſa's fooliſh treaty with Benhadad, ver. 1—6. 2. The reproof which God ſent him by a prophet, ver. 7—9. 3. Aſa's diſpleaſure againſt the prophet, ver. 10. 4. His ſickneſs and death, ver. 11—14.

Before Chriſt 940.

1. IN [a] the ſix and thirtieth year of the reign of Aſa, [b] Baaſha king of Iſrael came up againſt Judah, and built Ramah, [c] to the intent that he might let none go out, or come in to Aſa king of Judah. 2. Then Aſa brought out ſilver and gold, out of the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD, and of the king's houſe, and ſent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at Damaſcus, ſaying, 3. [d] There is a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have ſent thee ſilver and gold; go, [e] break thy league with Baaſha king of Iſrael, that he may depart from me. 4. And [f] Ben-hadad hearkned unto king Aſa, and ſent the captains of his armies againſt the cities of Iſrael; and they ſmote Ijon, and Dan, and Abal-maim, and all the ſtore-cities of Naphtali. 5. And it came to paſs when Baaſha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work ceaſe. 6. Then [g] Aſa the king took all Judah, and they carried away the ſtones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baaſha was a building, and he built therewith Geba and Mizpah.

a See chap. xv. 19.
b 1 Kings xv. 17, &c. c 1 Kings xii. 27.
d Judg. ii. 2.
e Iſa. xxxi. 1.
f 1 Tim. vi. 10.
g 1 Kings xv. 22.

v. 1—6. The event here recorded we had 1 Kings xv. The ſix and thirtieth year of Aſa is reckoned from the diviſion of the kingdoms, which is no more than the ſixteenth of his reign. The expedient Aſa took to divert Baaſha was unjuſtifiable and ſinful: it ſhewed diſtruſt of God, led Ben-hadad into a perfidious breach of his league, and all the miſchiefs which enſued lay at Aſa's door; whilſt himſelf, with half the expence probably, and without robbing God's temple, might, in dependance on his aſſiſtance, have much more nobly ſucceeded againſt Baaſha. Note, (1.) The ſtrongeſt believers are ſometimes ſhaken. (2.) Wrong expedients may ſucceed to extricate us from preſent trouble, but we ſhall be made to ſmart for uſing them afterwards.

7. ¶ And at that time [h] Hanani the ſeer came to Aſa king of Judah, and ſaid unto him, [i] Becauſe thou haſt relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is the hoſt of the king of Syria eſcaped out of thine hand. 8. [k] Were not the Ethiopians and the Lubims a huge hoſt, with very many chariots and horſemen? yet becauſe thou didſt rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand. 9. For [l] the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, † to ſhew himſelf ſtrong in the behalf of them whoſe heart is perfect towards him. Herein thou haſt done fooliſhly; therefore [m] from henceforth thou ſhalt have wars. 10. Then Aſa was [n] wroth with the ſeer, and put him in a priſon-houſe; for he was in a rage with him, becauſe of this thing. And Aſa oppreſſed ſome of the people the ſame time. 11. ¶ And behold, [o] the acts of Aſa, firſt and laſt, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Iſrael. 12. And Aſa in the thirty and ninth year of his reign, was diſeaſed in his feet, until his diſeaſe was exceeding great: yet in his diſeaſe [p] he ſought not to the LORD, but to the phyſicians. 13. ¶ And Aſa ſlept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign. 14. And they buried him in his own ſepulchres, which he had ‡ made for himſelf in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled [q] with ſweet odours, and divers kinds of ſpices prepared by the apothecaries art: and they made [r] a very great burning for him.

h 1 Kings xvi. 1. Chap. xix. 2.
i Iſa. xxxi. 1. Jer. xvii. 5. k Chap. xiv. 9.
l Job xxxiv. 21. Prov. v. 21. & xv. 3. Jer. xvi. 17. & xxxii. 19. Zech. iv. 10.
† Or ſtrongly to hold with them, &c. m 1 Kings xv. 32.
n Pſ. cxli. 5.
o 1 Kings xv. 23.
p 1 Chron. x. 14.
914.
‡ Heb. Digged.
q Gen. l. 2.
r Chap. xxi. 19.

v. 7—14. Aſa now probably pleaſed himſelf in the ſucceſs of his policy; but God embittered his joys.

1. By Hanani the prophet he ſends him a ſevere rebuke for his diſtruſt of God, and dependance upon an arm of fleſh, which was to change a rock for a reed: and the experience of his paſt deliverance, v. 8. was an aggravation of his ſin, eſpecially when the promiſes of the ſame providential care engaged him to truſt upon that ſtrong arm that would ever be ſtretched out for the protection of thoſe who leaned upon it. And herein alſo his folly was as great as his ſin: he loſt the glory he might have gotten by victory over the confederate hoſts of Syria and Iſrael, and entailed upon himſelf the wars he thus ſought to avoid. Note, (1.) Diſtruſt of God's power and love is exceeding diſpleaſing to him. (2.) The more we have experienced his mercy in time paſt, the more ſinful is it to diſtruſt him in preſent trials. (3.) All our departures from God ariſe from the infidelity of our hearts. Tuſh, God ſhall not ſee, and the Lord hath forſaken the earth, are at the bottom of every evil. (4.) The very means we uſe unlawfully to avert approaching danger, often ſerve to bring it more heavily upon us. (5.) All the wiſdom of the ſinner will at laſt appear the moſt egregious folly.

Before Chriſt 914.

2. Far from ſubmitting with penitent ſhame to the juſt rebuke, the angry king vents his rage on the prophet, caſts him into priſon, or, as ſome think, puts him in the ſtocks, as if his faithfulneſs was criminal; and becauſe, probably, the people eſpouſed the prophet's cauſe, and encouraged him in his ſufferings, he wreaked his vengeance upon them in oppreſſive fines, or corporal puniſhments. Note, (1.) Paſſion, and impatience of reproof, in a good man, are exceeding ſinful, and will end in bitter groans. (2.) They who know their own hearts, need be jealous, leſt their deſperate wickedneſs break forth. (3.) Faithful reprovers muſt expect to meet ſevere rebuffs. (4.) The priſon-houſe is often the preferment of God's zealous miniſters. (5.) We are called upon to ſupport God's perſecuted prophets, though by ſo doing we may be involved in their ſufferings.

3. Aſa grew diſeaſed in the laſt years of his life: either the gout, or ſome œdematous ſwelling, ſeized his feet, and he languiſhed for a while in great miſery; a juſt rebuke for his injury to the prophet. In his diſeaſe he placed more dependance on his phyſicians than on God, and was more ſollicitous for their aſſiſtance, than to obtain God's bleſſing upon it. So apt are we ſtill to be looking to man more than to God for help. This alſo was the more criminal, if, as ſome have conjectured, theſe were heathens, a kind of conjurers, who dealt in charms and amulets.

4. Medicine, without God's bleſſing, is no elixir of life. Death mocked at his confidence, and brought him to the grave. In reſpect for the good things he had done for Iſrael, the people gave him a moſt ſumptuous funeral, and the clods of the valley were made ſweet unto him. The good report afterwards made of him gives us ground to believe he lamented his ſin, and was forgiven. Note, Though the beſt of men have their blemiſhes, their memory is deſervedly had in honour. Let their infirmities ſleep in their graves, and their virtues rouſe us to an imitation of them.

CHAP. XVII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Jehoſhaphat's acceſſion to the throne, ver. 1, 2, 5. 2. His perſonal piety, ver. 3, 4, 6. 3. His labour to promote religion in his kingdom, ver. 7—9. 4. The mighty ſway he bore among his neighbours, ver. 10, 11. 5. The great ſtrength of his kingdom, ver. 12—19.

1. [a] AND † Jehoſhaphat his ſon reigned in his ſtead, and ſtrengthened himſelf againſt Iſrael. 2. And he placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and ſet gariſons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Aſa his father had taken. 3. And [b] the LORD was with Jehoſhaphat, becauſe he walked in the firſt ways ‡ of his father David, and ſought not unto Baalim; 4. But ſought to the LORD God of his father, and walked in his commandments, and not after the doings of Iſrael: 5. Therefore [c] the LORD ſtabliſhed the kingdom in his hand, and all Judah brought to Jehoſhaphat preſents, and [d] he had riches and honour in abundance. 6. And his heart was § lift up in the ways of the LORD: moreover he took away the high places and groves out of Judah. 7. ¶ Alſo in the third year of his reign he ſent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Michaiah, to teach in the cities of Judah. 8. And with them he ſent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nethaniah, and Zebadiah, and Aſahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Eliſhama, and Jehoram, [e] prieſts. 9. And they taught in Judah, and [f] had the book of the law of the Lord with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah, and [g] taught the people.

a 1 Kings xxii. 41, &c.
† i. e. The Lord is judge.
b Chap. xv. 2. Rom. viii. 31.
‡ Or, of his father and of David.
c 2 Sam. vii. 25.
d Chap. i. 15. Mat. vi. 33.
§ i. e. enlarged and animated. Pſ. cxix. 32.
912.
e Mal. ii. 7.
f Iſa. viii. 20.
g Chap. xxxv. 3.

v. 1—9. Jehoſhaphat no ſooner comes to the throne, than we ſee the dawnings of a glorious reign.

1. He ſtrengthened his kingdom, by placing ſtrong gariſons in the cities of Judah, and thoſe his father had recovered from Iſrael, and prepared againſt that danger which Ahab's growing power ſeemed to threaten.

2. Religion was his great concern. He copied after the beſt of his predeceſſors in their beſt days, ſuch as were the firſt of David, before the matter of Uriah, and the numbering the people, had blotted his fair copy. Faithful to the worſhip of God, he abhorred all idols: the law of God was his rule of duty, and Iſrael's apoſtacy rendered his fidelity more ſingular and exemplary.. Inſpired with holy zeal, his heart with delight and ſincerity was engaged for God; and no difficulties deterred him from

Before Chriſt 914.

from the path of duty. The idols and groves, that in the declining days of Aſa might have been ſet up again, he utterly deſtroyed, with all the high places, where they ſtill offered ſacrifices to theſe abominations. Note, (1.) In the faireſt human pattern there will be found imperfections; but there is a Son of David, more than man, who hath ſet us a ſpotleſs example, that we ſhould follow his ſteps. (2.) Fidelity in God's ſervice is the ſtability of a nation. (3.) A lively ſoul on wings of faith and love mounts up to God, riſes ſuperior to every difficulty, and looks down upon every thing, beſides his favour, as altogether vanity.

3. He not only removed the temptations to ſin, but took care to inſtruct the people in the path of duty. Ignorance of God's law had greatly prevailed, and to oblige them merely to conform to his reformation, without grounding them on the true foundation of God's word, promiſed little ſtability. The Levites and prieſts therefore are ſent in progreſs through the cities of Judah, with the book of the law, to explain and inforce the commandments of God; and ſeveral princes accompanied them, in order to engage the people to hear them, and give countenance to theſe preachers by their weight and influence. Note, (1.) It is a bleſſed thing, when princes countenance faithful miniſters. Though they cannot make men true converts, their example and authority will induce them to attend. (2.) They who are ſent to teach, muſt ſee they take the pure word of God along with them. A true preacher wiſhes for nothing in his hand but his bible. (3.) Religion is a reaſonable ſervice. Conviction, not compulſion, or education, can only make a man a Chriſtian.

4. The bleſſing of God attended his labours. The Lord was with him; or, as the Targum generally expreſſes it, "the word of the Lord," the divine Logos, to whom all things are committed, ſtrengthened him in his labours, and eſtabliſhed his kingdom. His people, charmed with his government, liberally ſent their preſents to him; and, abounding in riches and honour, his heart, far from being intoxicated by proſperity, was lift up in greater love and thankfulneſs to the gracious giver. Note, (1.) Piety God often here rewards with proſperity. (2.) Worldly comforts are then truly bleſſings, when, as the ſteps of Jacob's ladder, they raiſe our hearts to heaven.

10. ¶ And [h] the fear of the LORD fell upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, ſo that they made no war againſt Jehoſhaphat. 11. Alſo ſome of the Philiſtines brought Jehoſhaphat preſents, and tribute ſilver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, ſeven thouſand and ſeven hundred rams, and ſeven thouſand and ſeven hundred he-goats. 12. ¶ And Jehoſhaphat waxed great exceedingly; and he built in Judah, † caſtles and cities of ſtore. 13. And he had much buſineſs in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jeruſalem. 14. And theſe are the numbers of them according to the houſe of their fathers: Of Judah, the captains of thouſands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour, three hundred thouſand. 15. And ‡ next to him was Jehoanan the captain, and with him two hundred and fourſcore thouſand. 16. And next him was Amaſiah the ſon of Zichri, [i] who willingly offered himſelf unto the LORD; and with him two hundred thouſand mighty men of valour. 17. And of Benjamin; Eliada a mighty man of valour, and with him armed men, [k] with bow and ſhield, two hundred thouſand. 18. And next him was Jehozabad, and with him an hundred and fourſcore thouſand, ready prepared for the war. 19. Theſe waited on the king, beſides [l] thoſe whom the king put in the fenced cities, throughout all Judah.

[h] Gen. xxxv. 5. Chap. xiv. 14.
† Or palaces.
‡ Heb. At his hand.
[i] Judg. v. 2, 9. Pſ. cx. 3. Acts ii. 41.
[k] 1 Chron. xii. 2.
[l] Ver. 2.

v. 10—19. Like the light of the morning, which ſhineth more and more, ſo did Jehoſhaphat's glory increaſe.

1. Feared by his enemies, as beloved by his ſubjects, the neighbouring princes offered not to moleſt him, whilſt thoſe of Philiſtia and Arabia courted his favour, either by a voluntary preſent, or exact payment of the tribute which Aſa had impoſed on them, See chap. xiv. 14. God had put an awe upon them of the majeſty of his king in Zion. Note, God hath acceſs to the ſpirits of men, and by ſecret, yet irreſiſtible influence, can bow them to his ſovereign will.

2. His military preparations greatly advanced. Whilſt he reformed the people, he fortified their ramparts, and built new caſtles and ſtore-cities, ſtrengthening them within and without againſt their enemies. Under five chief officers an immenſe army was enliſted. Probably all the able men in the country were enrolled, and regularly muſtered, though not drawn out, except in caſe of neceſſity: and this may eaſily account for the greatneſs of their number, if we conſider alſo the long peace they had enjoyed, the acceſſion of Iſraelites to them, and eſpecially the bleſſing of Abraham, which no doubt was eminently fulfilled. Amaſiah, one of the officers, is mentioned with an honourable mark of diſtinction, v. 16. a volunteer, that ſerved for the glory of God, not for the ſake of pay. Such patriots are ſcarce.

Before Chriſt 912.

CHAP. XVIII.

Here is, 1. The alliance Jehoſhaphat contracted with Ahab, ver. 1, 2. 2. An expedition againſt Ramoth-gilead propoſed, ver. 3. 3. Their conſulting with the prophets, falſe and true, before they went, ver. 4—27. 4. Their defeat, Jehoſhaphat's danger, and Ahab's death, ver. 28—34.

1. NOW [a] Jehoſhaphat had riches and honour in abundance, and [b] joined affinity with Ahab. 2. And after certain years, [c] he went down to Ahab to Samaria: and Ahab killed ſheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and perſuaded him to go up with him to Ramoth-gilead. 3. And Ahab king of Iſrael ſaid unto Jehoſhaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he anſwered him, [d] I am as thou art, and my people as thy people, and we will be with thee in the war.

[a] 1 Sam. ii. 30. Mat vi. 33. 1 Tim. iv. 8.
897.
[b] 2 Kings viii. 18.
[c] 1 Kings xxii. 2, &c.
[d] 2 Kings iii. 7. Prov. xiii. 20. Eph. v. 11.

v. 1—3. Jehoſhaphat's growing greatneſs made the king of Iſrael probably deſirous of his alliance, and Jehoſhaphat too readily conſented. An Iſraelitiſh princeſs ſeemed an eligible match for his ſon, and he might hope to make ſome advantage of it, by recovering the houſe of Iſrael to the ſervice of God, or the kingdom to his poſterity. The connection, however, proved dangerous to himſelf, and ruinous to his family. The firſt bad effect produced by it, was his involving himſelf in a war with the Syrians, in complaiſance to Ahab, who, having nobly entertained him at Samaria, drew him in to be his auxiliary for the recovery of Ramoth-gilead. Note, (1.) Marriages founded on pride and worldly mindedneſs cannot fail of bringing miſery along with them. (2.) The ſtrongeſt expreſſions of friendſhip from a wicked man, are to be ſuſpected; at bottom he means to ſerve only himſelf.

4. ¶ And Jehoſhaphat ſaid unto the king of Iſrael, [e] Enquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to day. 5. Therefore the king of Iſrael gathered together of prophets four hundred men, and ſaid unto them, Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or ſhall I forbear? And they ſaid, Go up; for [f] God will deliver it into the king's hand. 6. But Jehoſhaphat ſaid, [g] Is there not here a prophet of the LORD beſides, that we might enquire of him? 7. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto Jehoſhaphat, There is yet one man by whom we may enquire of the LORD: [h] but I hate him, for he never propheſieth good unto me, but always evil: the ſame is Micaiah the ſon of Imla. And Jehoſhaphat ſaid, Let not the king ſay ſo. 8. And the king of Iſrael called for one of his † officers, and ſaid, Fetch quickly Micaiah the ſon of Imla. 9. And the king of Iſrael and Jehoſhaphat king of Judah, ſat either of them on his throne, clothed in their robes, and they ſat in a ‡ void place at the entring in of the gate of Samaria, and all the prophets propheſied before them. 10. And Zedekiah the ſon of Chenaanah, [i] had made him horns of iron, and ſaid, Thus ſaith the LORD, With theſe thou ſhalt puſh Syria, until § they be conſumed. 11. And all the prophets propheſied ſo, ſaying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, [k] and proſper: for the LORD ſhall deliver it into the hand of the king. 12. And the meſſenger that went to call Micaiah, ſpake to him, ſaying, Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king with ‖ one aſſent: [l] let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and ſpeak thou good. 13. And Micaiah ſaid, As the LORD liveth, [m] even what my God ſaith, that will I ſpeak. 14. And when he was come to the king, the king ſaid unto him, Micaiah, ſhall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or ſhall I forbear? And he ſaid, [n] Go ye up, and proſper, and they ſhall be delivered into your hand. 15. And the king ſaid to him, How many times ſhall I adjure thee that thou ſay nothing but the truth to me, in the name of the LORD? 16. Then he ſaid, [o] I did ſee all Iſrael ſcattered upon the mountains, as ſheep that have no ſhepherd: and the LORD ſaid, [p] Theſe have no maſter; let them return therefore every man to his houſe in peace. 17. (And the king of Iſrael ſaid to Jehoſhaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would not propheſy good unto me, but evil?) 18. Again he ſaid, Therefore hear the word of the LORD, I ſaw [q] the LORD ſitting upon his throne, and all the [e] Judg. i. 1. 1 Sam. xxiii. 2.

[f] Ezek. xiii. 7.
[g] 2 Kings iii. 11.
[h] 1 Kings xx. 43. & xxi. 20. Gal. iv. 16. 2 Tim. iv. 3.
† Or eunuchs.
‡ Or floor.
[i] Jer. xxvii. 2.
§ Heb. Thou conſume them.
[k] Ver. 31—34.
‖ Heb. One mouth. Hoſ. vi. 9. Rev. xvii. 17.
[l] Exod. xxiii. 2.
[m] Jer. xxiii. 28. 1 Cor. xi. 23.
[n] 1 Kings xviii. 27. Eccleſ. xi. 9. Lam. iv. 21. Amos iv. 4, 5.
[o] Zeck. xiii. 7.
[p] Jer. xx. 28.
[q] Job i. 6. Iſa. vi. 1. Dan. vii. 9, 10.

Before Chriſt 897.

hoſt of heaven ſtanding on his right hand, and on his left. 19. And the Lord ſaid, Who ſhall entice Ahab king of Iſrael, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one ſpake ſaying after this manner, and another ſaying after that manner. 20. Then there came out [r] a ſpirit, and ſtood before the LORD, and ſaid, I will entice him. And the LORD ſaid unto him, Wherewith? 21. And he ſaid, I will go out and [s] be a lying ſpirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD ſaid, Thou ſhalt entice him, and thou ſhalt alſo prevail: go out, and do even ſo. 22. Now therefore behold, [t] the LORD hath put a lying ſpirit into the mouth of theſe thy prophets, and the LORD hath ſpoken evil againſt thee. 23. Then Zedekiah the ſon of Chenaanah came near, and [u] ſmote Micaiah upon the cheek, and ſaid, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me, to ſpeak unto thee? 24. And Micaiah ſaid, Behold, thou ſhalt ſee on that day, when thou ſhalt go into an † inner chamber to hide thyſelf. 25. Then the king of Iſrael ſaid, [x] Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joaſh the king's ſon: 26. And ſay, Thus ſaith the king, [y] Put this fellow in the priſon, and [z] feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I return in peace. 27. And Micaiah ſaid, [a] If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD ſpoken by me. And he ſaid, [b] Hearken all ye people.

[r] Job i. 6.
[s] John viii. 44. 2 Theſ. ii. 9, 11. 1 John iv. 1. Rev. xii. 11.
[t] Job xii. 16. Iſa. xix. 14. Ezek. xiv. 9. Rom. i. 24.
[u] Jer xx. 2. Mar. xiv. 65. Acts xxiii. 2.
† Heb. A chamber within a chamber.
1 Kings xx. 30.
[z] 1 Kings xix. 10. Rev. ii. 10.
[y] Chap. xxv. 16.
[z] Pſ. lxxx. 6.
[a] Num xvi. 29. Iſa. xliv. 26.
[b] Mic. i. 2.

v. 4—27. For this, ſee 1 Kings xxii. We may only farther remark, (1.) How needful it is to conſult God in all our ways. (2.) When for worldly ends we maintain fellowſhip with thoſe who are enemies to God, for fear of offending, we ſhall hear often what we dare not rebuke, and countenance by our preſence what we were bound to condemn. (3.) Faithful prophets are few, falſe prophets numerous. It becomes us to beware of following the multitude, and attach ourſelves to the faithful few. (4.) They who love prophets that propheſy ſmooth things, and hate plain dealing, are juſtly given up to their own deluſions. (5.) Suffering for the truth's ſake, is the hereditary portion of God's miniſters. (6.) The day is coming, when the deſpiſed word of God's prophets ſhall be fulfilled, and their enemies too late will wonder and periſh.

28. So the king of Iſrael, and Jehoſhaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead. 29. And the king of Iſrael ſaid unto Jehoſhaphat, [c] I will diſguiſe myſelf, and will go to the battle, but put thou on thy robes. So the king of Iſrael diſguiſed himſelf, and they went to the battle. 30. Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, ſaying, Fight ye not with ſmall or great, ſave only with the king of Iſrael. 31. And it came to paſs, when the captains of the chariots ſaw Jehoſhaphat, that they ſaid, It is the king of Iſrael: therefore [d] they compaſſed about him to fight: but Jehoſhaphat [e] cried out, and [f] the LORD helped him, and God moved them to depart from him. 32. For it came to paſs, that when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Iſrael: they turned back again from † purſuing him. 33. And a certain man drew a bow at ‡ a venture, and ſmote the king of Iſrael between the joints § of the harneſs: therefore he ſaid to his chariot-man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayſt carry me out of the hoſt, for I am wounded. 34. And the battle increaſed that day: howbeit, the king of Iſrael ſtayed himſelf up in his chariot againſt the Syrians, until the even: and about the time of the ſun going down, [g] he died.

[c] Ver. 30. Job v. 13. Pſ. xii. 2. Prov. xxi. 30.
[d] Prov. xiii. 20.
[e] Ex. xiv. 15. 1 Kings xvii. 20.
[f] Pſ. xlvi. 1.
† Heb. After him.
‡ Heb. In his ſimplicity.
§ Heb. and between the breaſt-plate.
[g] Ver. 16.

v. 28—34. Ahab pretends to honour Jehoſhaphat, but in fact to expoſe him; ſo deceitful are the kiſſes of an enemy: but God turns his wicked devices on his own head. Jehoſhaphat by divine interpoſition eſcapes, whilſt Ahab falls in his diſguiſe, and his armour is no protection from the arrow God ſhoots againſt the perſecutors. Man in vain contrives to eſcape, when God hath determined his fall. There is neither counſel nor might againſt the Lord.

CHAP. XIX.

We have here, 1. Jehoſhaphat's return in peace to Jeruſalem, ver. 1. 2. The reproof given him for his league with Ahab, ver. 2, 3. 3. The great care he took thereupon to reform his kingdom, ver. 4. 4. The inſtructions he gave to his judges, ver. 5—11.

Before Chriſt 890.

1. AND Jehoſhaphat the king of Judah returned to his houſe in peace to Jeruſalem. 2. And Jehu the ſon of Hanani [a] the ſeer went out to meet him, and ſaid to king Jehoſhaphat, Shouldſt thou [b] help the ungodly, and [c] love them that hate the LORD? therefore is wrath upon thee from before the LORD. 3. Nevertheleſs, there are good things found in thee, in that [d] thou haſt taken away the groves out of the land, and haſt prepared thine heart to ſeek God. 4. And Jehoſhaphat dwelt at Jeruſalem: and he † went out again through the people, from Beerſheba to mount Ephraim, and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

[a] 1 Sam. ix. 9.
[b] Chap. xviii. 3.
[c] Pſ. cxxxix. 21.
[d] Chap. xvii. 4, 6.
896.
† Heb. Returned and went out.

v. 1—4. Imminent was the danger Jehoſhaphat had eſcaped, yet through mercy he arrives at his houſe in peace, whilſt Ahab was left dead at Samaria. Note, Providential eſcapes from danger deſerve to be deeply and gratefully remembered. But tho' God ſuffered him not to fall in battle, he goes not without a juſt rebuke for his folly.

1. Jehu the ſon of Hanani is ſent, nor fears to deliver his meſſage, though his father's ſufferings, chap. xvi. 10. admoniſhed him of his danger. He expoſtulates with him on the evil of his conduct; Ought ſuch a man as he to help an idolater and perſecutor? or join in affinity and friendſhip with ſuch a hater of God as Ahab? He threatens him therefore with the diſpleaſure of God. War was his choice, and war he ſhould have; and that Jehoram, whom he had matched ſo wickedly, prove a deadly ſcourge to his family. But as there were good things found in him, and his heart was found with God, he is not finally caſt off, or rejected. Note, (1.) We muſt never make thoſe our friends, who are the enemies of God. (2.) Every diſobedient ſinner is at bottom a hater of God. (3.) God's wrath reſpecting the eternal conſequences of ſin may be removed, when, for our correction, our preſent ſufferings may be grievous. (4.) God is not unrighteous to forget the works of faith, and labours of love.

2. The rebuke was received with ſilence, and the effect of it gracious. He no more viſited his idolatrous neighbours, but ſtaid at home to mind his own concerns: and as he had been told by the prophet, God approved of what he had done for the reformation of the people, he ſought to carry it ſtill on by a progreſs through his dominions, to engage them to ſeek the God of their fathers, and to bring back thoſe who had departed from him, perhaps emboldened by ſeeing his connections with Ahab. Note, (1.) A good man eſteems rebuke the moſt friendly office. (2.) When we have, though undeſignedly, encouraged others to do evil, we cannot but be ſollicitous to recover them from the error of their ways. (3.) The commendations of good men ſhould quicken us to greater zeal and diligence in the cauſe of God.

5. ¶ And he ſet judges in the land throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city; 6. And ſaid to the judges, Take heed what ye do: for [e] ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, [f] who is with you in the judgment. 7. Wherefore now, let the fear of the LORD be upon you, take heed, and do it: for [g] there is no iniquity with the LORD our God, [h] nor reſpect of perſons, nor taking of gifts. 8. ¶ Moreover, in Jeruſalem did Jehoſhaphat ſet of the Levites, and of the prieſts, and of the chief of the fathers of Iſrael, for the judgment of the LORD, and for controverſies, when they returned to Jeruſalem. 9. And he charged them, ſaying, Thus ſhall ye do in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart. 10. And [i] what cauſe ſoever ſhall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, between blood and blood, between law and commandment, ſtatutes and judgments, ye ſhall even warn them that they treſpaſs not againſt the LORD, and [k] ſo wrath come upon you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye ſhall not treſpaſs. 11. And behold, Amariah the chief prieſt is over you in [l] all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the ſon of Iſhmael, the ruler of the houſe of Judah, for all the king's matters: alſo the Levites ſhall be officers before you. † Deal courageouſly, and the LORD ſhall be with the good.

[e] Deut. i 17.
[f] Pſ. lxxxii. 1. Eccleſ. v. 8.
[g] Deut. xxxii. 4. Rom. ix. 14.
[h] Deut. x. 17. Job xxxiv. 19. Acts x. 34. Col. iii. 25.
[i] Deut. xvii. 8.
[k] Num. xvi. 46.
[l] 1 Chron. xxvi. 30.
† Heb. Take courage and do.

v. 5—11. To preſerve the people in the careful obſervance of the divine ordinances, and to provide for the equitable adminiſtration of juſtice,

1. Jehoſhaphat placed judges in every city, with a ſolemn charge, to take heed to the diligent diſcharge of their office, with all circumſpection and impartiality; and eſpecially to have the fear of God upon their minds, the great preſervative from all injuſtice. And this he urges, becauſe they acted as God's

Before Chriſt 896.

vicegerents; would be directed by him, if they looked up to him, or be detected if they judged iniquitouſly: and as no bribe, or reſpect of perſons, found place before him, they muſt ſhew no favour, nor receive gifts. Note, The impartial diſtribution of juſtice is among the greateſt bleſſings a nation can enjoy.

2. He eſtabliſhed a ſupreme court of judicature at Jeruſalem, on his return from the progreſs he had made. It conſiſted of prieſts and Levites, as moſt ſkilled in the law; and the chief fathers, thoſe moſt diſtinguiſhed for their ſtation, men of age and experience, with inferior officers, who ſaw the ſentence executed, v. 11. under the high-prieſt, as preſident in eccleſiaſtical cauſes, and Zebadiah in the matters of civil government. To this court all caſes of murder or manſlaughter were referred, and appeals made from the inferior judges in difficult caſes of controverſy, where the law ſeemed dubious. Jehoſhaphat enjoins them to act faithfully and conſcientiouſly, as men fearing God, and judging righteouſly. They muſt warn the people of the great evil of ſin in general; of the danger of falſe witneſs, and of ſtubborn diſobedience againſt the law; and, undiſmayed by any man's greatneſs, impartially adminiſter juſtice; that ſo they might deliver their own ſouls, and not treſpaſs againſt God: the iſſue of which upright conduct would be God's bleſſing upon them. Note, (1.) Ability and integrity are eſſential qualities of a good judge. (2.) Magiſtrates are chargeable with the crimes they connive at, or neglect to puniſh. (3.) They who have courage to act for God, will find his ſupports and bleſſing carrying them through every danger.

CHAP. XX.

We have here, 1. Jehoſhaphat's diſtreſs from an invaſion, ver. 1, 2. 2. The pious courſe he and the people took for their ſafety, ver. 3–13. 3. A promiſe given them of victory, ver. 14—17. 4. Their thankful reception of it, ver. 18—21. 5. The overthrow of their enemies, ver. 22—25. 6. Their ſolemn thankſgiving for this victory, ver. 26—30. 7. The clouds that darkened his ſetting ſun, ver. 31—37.

1. IT came to paſs after this alſo, that [a] the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them other beſide the Ammonites, [b] came againſt Jehoſhaphat to battle. 2. Then there came ſome that told Jehoſhaphat, ſaying, There cometh a great multitude againſt thee from beyond the ſea on this ſide Syria, and behold, they be in [c] Hazazon-tamar, which is Engedi. 3. And Jehoſhaphat [d] feared, and ſet himſelf to [e] ſeek the LORD, and proclaimed a faſt throughout all Judah. 4. And Judah gathered themſelves together, to aſk help of the LORD: even out of all the cities of Judah they came to ſeek the LORD: 5. ¶ And Jehoſhaphat ſtood in the congregation of Judah and Jeruſalem, in the houſe of the LORD, before the new court, 6. And ſaid, O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou God in heaven? and [f] ruleſt not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and [g] in thine hand is there not power and might, ſo that none is able to withſtand thee? 7. Art not thou [h] our God, [i] who didſt drive out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Iſrael, and gaveſt it to the ſeed of Abraham [k] thy friend for ever? 8. And they dwelt therein, and have built thee a ſanctuary therein for thy name, ſaying, 9. [l] If when evil cometh upon us, as the ſword, judgment, or peſtilence, or famine, we ſtand before this houſe, and in thy preſence, (for thy name is in this houſe) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help. 10. And now behold, the children of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, [m] whom thou wouldſt not let Iſrael invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but [n] they turned from them, and deſtroyed them not: 11. Behold, I ſay, how they reward us, [o] to come to caſt us out of thy poſſeſſion, which thou haſt given us to inherit. 12. O our God, wilt thou not judge them? [p] for we have no might againſt this great company that cometh againſt us: neither know we what to do, but [q] our eyes are upon thee. 13. And all Judah ſtood before the LORD, [r] with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

[a] Joſh. ix. 1. Pſ. lxxxiii. 5, &c.
[b] Chap. xix. 2.
[c] Gen. xiv. 7.
[d] Chap. xix. 2.
[e] Pſ. xxxiv. 4.
[f] Dan. iv. 35.
[g] 1 Chron. xxix. 12. Mat. vi. 13.
[h] Gen. xvii. 7.
[i] Pſ. xliv. 2.
[k] Iſa. xli. 8. Jam. ii. 23.
[l] 1 Kings viii. 33, 37. Chap. vi. 28.
[m] Deut. ii. 4, 9, 19.
[n] Num. xx. 21.
[o] Pſ. lxxxiii. 12. Jer. xviii. 20.
[p] Deut. xxxii. 36.
[q] Pſ. xxv. 15. & cxxiii. 1, 2. & cxli. 8. Jonah ii. 4.
[r] Deut. xxix. 11.

v. 1—13. Little did Jehoſhaphat apprehend, in the midſt of the pious and uſeful eſtabliſhments in which he was engaged, the threatning ſtorm which hung over him. Note, When we are moſt faithful, we may be involved in uncommon difficulties, God permitting our faith to be tried, that it may appear to praiſe, and honour, and glory.

1. The Moabites, Ammonites, and their confederates, aſſemble their forces, and march to the borders of Judah, before intelligence is brought of their deſigns; ſo ſudden and unexpected was the attack. Note, Whilſt we are on this ſide the grave, we are never ſafe.

2. Terrified at the danger, and fearing leſt the wrath he had deſerved, chap. xix. 2. was about to overtake him, in deep humiliation the king ſet himſelf earneſtly to ſeek the Lord; proclaimed a faſt throughout Judah, that they might together mourn over the ſins which had provoked their God: and, at his command, all Judah aſſembled; not ſo much as warriors, to oppoſe their enemies; but as penitents, to avert the divine diſpleaſure, without which every effort would be vain; and with their wives and children, as in deep diſtreſs, appeared at the temple, before the new court, probably the court of the prieſts lately repaired, to aſk help of the Lord. Note, (1.) In national calamities, national faſts are highly expedient, that a ſinful people, humbled before a holy God, may find mercy in his ſight. (2.) The danger which drives us to God, will not deſtroy us.

3. Jehoſhaphat's prayer on the occaſion is remarkable. In the midſt of the congregation he lift up his eyes to heaven, and cried unto the God of their ſalvation. He addreſſes God as their covenant God, the ground of all their hopes; aſcribes to him that univerſal ſovereignty and almighty power, which now he truſts God will diſplay for their reſcue. He pleads the gift God had made to Abraham of the land, as an argument for continuing them in poſſeſſion; and the promiſe he had given them, 1 Kings ix. 3. of hearing and anſwering the prayers, that in diſtreſs they ſhould offer before his holy temple. He urges the ingratitude of their enemies, whom Iſrael had of old, at God's command, left unmoleſted; and their injuſtice, in attempting to diſpoſſeſs them of their divinely-appointed inheritance. Into God's hands, the righteous judge, he therefore refers the cauſe; unable to withſtand this ſudden invaſion, deſtitute of help and counſel, he looks up to him who alone can ſave, earneſtly deſiring, and humbly expecting, to ſee the ſalvation of God. Note, (1.) Whilſt we have a God of mercy to flee to, let us never deſpair. (2.) The cries of the oppreſſed will enter into the ears of the righteous Judge. Woe to thoſe who provoke them. (3.) The more entirely we are taken off from every ſelf-dependance in the view of our wants and wretchedneſs, the ſurer we are to find mercy in time of need. (4.) Whilſt the eye of faith and hope looks upward, underneath us will be the everlaſting arms.

14. ¶ Then upon Jahaziel the ſon of Zechariah, the ſon of Benaiah, the ſon of Jeiel, the ſon of Mattaniah, a Levite of the ſons of Aſaph, [s] came the Spirit of the LORD in the midſt of the congregation: 15. And he ſaid, Hearken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and thou king Jehoſhaphat, Thus ſaith the LORD unto you, [t] Be not afraid, nor diſmayed by reaſon of this great multitude; for [u] the battle is not yours, but God's. 16. To-morrow go ye down againſt them: behold, they come up by the † cliff of Ziz, and ye ſhall find them at the end of the brook, before the wilderneſs of Jeruel. 17. [x] Ye ſhall not need to fight in this battle; ſet yourſelves, [y] ſtand ye ſtill, and ſee the ſalvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jeruſalem: fear not, nor be diſmayed; to-morrow go out againſt them, for [z] the LORD will be with you. 18. And Jehoſhaphat [a] bowed his head, with his face to the ground: and all Judah, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem fell before the LORD, worſhipping the LORD. 19. And the Levites of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, ſtood up [b] to praiſe the LORD God of Iſrael with a loud voice on high.

Before Chriſt 896.

[s] Num. xi. 25, 26. & xxiv. 2. Chap. xxiv. 20.
[t] Exod. xiv. 13. Iſa. xxxvii. 6.
[u] Exod. xiv. 14. Ver. 17.
† Heb. Aſcent.
[x] Ver. xxiv.
[y] Exod. xiv. 13.
[z] Num. xiv. 9.
[a] So Exod. iv. 31.
[b] Ver. 1°. Pſ. lx. 6.

v. 14—19. Swift is the anſwer ſent from God. Jahaziel, a Levite of the ſons of Aſaph, filled with the ſpirit of prophecy, in the midſt of the congregation foretels the approaching victory.

1. He bids them lift their drooping heads, and not be afraid: the cauſe is God's, and he will appear for them. He fixes the time and place, when and where they ſhould meet the enemy, not to fight, but to be ſpectators of the glorious victory God would give them. Note, (1.) Unbelieving fear muſt be ſuppreſſed and oppoſed, as diſhonourable to God. (2.) They who go forth at the word of God againſt their ſpiritual enemies, ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God.

2. The meſſage was received by the king and people with humble thankfulneſs and adoration. They doubted not the promiſe, and ſhouted, as ſure of victory. Note, Faith realizes the unſeen things, and can enable us to rejoice in future promiſes, as equally ſecure with preſent poſſeſſions.

Before Chriſt 896.

c Iſa. vii. 9.
d Iſa. xxviii. 16.
e 1 Chron. xvi. 29.
f Ibid. 34. Pſ. cxxxvi. 1.
g 1 Chron. xvi. 41.
† Heb. In ſinging and praiſe.
h Judg. vii. 22. 1 Sam. xiv. 20.
‡ Or, ſmote one another.
i Exod. xiv. 30.
§ Heb. There was no eſcaping. Pſ. l. 22.
|| i. e. Bleſſing.
‡ Heb. Head.
k Neh. xii. 43.
l Gen. xxxv. 5. Chap. xiv. 14. & xvii. 10.
m Job xxxiv. 29.

20. ¶ And they roſe early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderneſs of Tekoa: and as they went forth, Jehoſhaphat ſtood, and ſaid, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jeruſalem, [c] Believe in the LORD your God, [d] ſo ſhall you be eſtabliſhed; believe his prophets, ſo ſhall ye proſper. 21. And when he had conſulted with the people, he appointed ſingers unto the LORD, and [e] that ſhould praiſe the beauty of holineſs, as they went out before the army, and to ſay, [f] Praiſe the LORD, [g] for his mercy endureth for ever. 22. ¶ And when they began † to ſing and to praiſe, [h] the LORD ſet ambuſhments againſt the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come againſt Judah, and they ‡ were ſmitten. 23. For the children of Ammon and Moab ſtood up againſt the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to ſlay and deſtroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to deſtroy another. 24. And when Judah came toward the watch-tower in the wilderneſs, they looked unto the multitude, and behold, [i] they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and § none eſcaped. 25. And when Jehoſhaphat and his people came to take away the ſpoil of them, they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and precious jewels (which they ſtript off for themſelves) more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the ſpoil, it was ſo much. 26. ¶ And on the fourth day they aſſembled themſelves in the valley of Berachah; for there they bleſſed the LORD: therefore the name of the ſame place was called, The valley of || Berachah, unto this day. 27. Then they returned every man of Judah and Jeruſalem, and Jehoſhaphat in the ‡ fore-front of them, to go again to Jeruſalem with joy: for [k] the LORD had made them to rejoice over their enemies. 28. And they came to Jeruſalem with pſalteries, and harps, and trumpets, unto the houſe of the LORD. 29. And [l] the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of thoſe countries, when they had heard that the LORD fought againſt the enemies of Iſrael. 30. So the realm of Jehoſhaphat was quiet; for [m] his God gave him reſt round about.

v. 20—30. The order of battle beſpoke the temper of the combatants, and their confidence in God.

1. Jehoſhaphat, as the army paſſed in review before him, encourages their truſt in God, and the word of his prophet, with aſſurance of ſucceſs; and, with the advice of his council, inſtead of the mighty men of valour, they appointed the ſingers to lead the van, and charge their foes, not with the arm of fleſh, but with the ſharp two-edged ſword of God's praiſes in their mouths, as if the victory was already gotten, and the triumphant ſong begun. Note, (1.) Unſhaken faith is certain victory. (2.) Praiſe is a mighty weapon to overcome our ſpiritual foes.

2. The event exceeded their expectations. No ſooner was the ſong of praiſe begun, than the Lord ſet ambuſhments, either the angelic hoſts his miniſters, ſay ſome, or their own ambuſhments, ſay others, that, infatuated of God, fell upon their army; which bred ſuch confuſion, and apprehenſion of treachery, that each man's ſword was againſt his fellow; the Moabites and Ammonites againſt the Edomites, and then againſt each other. Note, (1.) Though the enemies of God's people aſſemble themſelves, they ſhall be broken to pieces. (2.) God can make thoſe the inſtruments of mutual deſtruction, who are leagued againſt his choſen. (3.) Diviſion produces ruin, wherever it ariſes.

3. On the approach of Jehoſhaphat's army towards the watch-tower, which probably ſtood on the cliff of Ziz, and overlooked the plain beneath, behold, it was covered with carcaſes, and not a living foe remained. Immenſe ſpoils loaded the people: three days they were employed in collecting them; on the fourth, the whole army aſſembled, with the king at their head, and kept a day of ſolemn thankſgiving on the field of victory, giving it a name to perpetuate the memorial of the mercy; and returned to Jeruſalem, as they had come from thence, with increaſing joy, and with louder ſongs of praiſe, for the amazing interpoſition of God they had experienced. Note, (1.) Praiſe is all the tribute we poor worms can pay, and God accepts our gratitude, as a more welcome ſacrifice than a hecatomb. (2.) The memory of paſt mercies ought to be preſerved for the encouragement of future generations.

4. The effect of this glorious victory was peace in their borders. Their neighbours heard and trembled, nor dared provoke thoſe for whom God ſo eminently appeared; and all was quiet at home, under Jehoſhaphat's happy government. Note, They who have God for their protector, will be kept in peace, and no evil ſhall come nigh their dwellings.

Before Chriſt 896.

n 1 Kings xxii. 41, &c. o 1 Kings xv. 11.
p See Chap. xvii. 6.
† Heb. Words.
q 1 Kings xvi. 1, 7.
896.
r Chap. xix. 2.
‡ At firſt he was unwilling. 1 Kings xxii. 49.
s 1 Kings ix. 26.
t Chap. xv. 2. & xix. 2.
u 1 Kings xxii. 48.

31. ¶ [n] And Jehoſhaphat reigned over Judah: he was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. 32. And he walked in [o] the way of Aſa his father, and departed not from it, doing that which was right in the ſight of the LORD: 33. Howbeit, [p] the high places were not taken away; for as yet the people had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers. 34. Now the reſt of the acts of Jehoſhaphat, firſt and laſt, behold, they are written in the † book of Jehu the ſon of Hanani, [q] who is mentioned in the book of the kings of Iſrael. 35. ¶ And after this [r] did Jehoſhaphat king of Judah join himſelf with Ahaziah king of Iſrael, who did very wickedly: 36. And ‡ he joined himſelf with him to make ſhips to go to Tarſhiſh: and they made the ſhips in [s] Ezion-gaber. 37. Then Eliezer the ſon of Dodavah of Mareſhah, propheſied againſt Jehoſhaphat, ſaying, [t] Becauſe thou haſt joined thyſelf with Ahaziah, the LORD hath broken thy works. And [u] the ſhips were broken, that they were not able to go to Tarſhiſh.

v. 31—37. Jehoſhaphat's conduct in general was excellent and exemplary, but the ſacred hiſtorian ſpares not his faults: two of them are here recorded.

1. The ſuffering the high places to remain, where ſacrifices to God had been offered before the temple was built, and to which the people ſtill reſorted, in oppoſition to the divine command, Deut. xii. 5—7.

2. That, after the danger he had run, and the reproof he had received for his connection with Ahab, he joined in league with Ahaziah his ſon, taking him in as partner in a voyage to Tarſhiſh. But he ſmarted for it. A prophet was ſent to rebuke him for his folly and perverſeneſs, and to predict the ſtorm which deſtroyed their navy in the port. We find, 1 Kings xxii. 49. that theſe warnings had their deſired effect, to break off the evil alliance. Note, (1.) They who are connected with the wicked, will fare the worſe for them. (2.) It is a great gain, when our providential loſſes turn us from the path of evil.

CHAP. XXI.

Here is, 1. Jehoram's elevation to the throne, ver. 1—3. 2. The wicked courſe he took to eſtabliſh himſelf in it, ver. 4. 3. The idolatries, and other crimes that he was guilty of, ver. 5, 6, 11. 4. The prophecy of Elijah againſt him, ver. 12—15. 5. The revolt of his ſubjects from him, ver. 8, 10 and the ſucceſs of his enemies againſt him, ver. 16, 17. 6. His miſerable ſickneſs, and inglorious death and burial, ver. 18—20. 7. The preſervation of the houſe of David for all this, ver. 7.

889.
† i. e. alone.
About 891.
a Gen. xxv. 6.
‡ i. e. Made him his partner in it. See note on 1 Kings xxii. 50.
b Deut. xxi. 17. Judg. ix. 5.
c Hab. ii. 12.
d 2 Kings viii. 17, &c.
§ i. e. In conſort the ſecond time.
e 1 Kings xvi. 30, 31.
f Gen. vi. 2—5.
g 2 Sam. vii. 13.
h Tit. i. 2.
|| Or Lamp. 1 Kings xi. 36. Pſal. cxxxii. 11, &c.
About 888.
i Gen. xxvii. 40.
† Heb. Hand.

1. NOW Jehoſhaphat ſlept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and Jehoram his ſon † reigned in his ſtead. 2. And he had brethren the ſons of Jehoſhaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all theſe were the ſons of Jehoſhaphat king of Iſrael. 3. And [a] their father gave them great gifts of ſilver and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but ‡ the kingdom gave he to Jehoram, [b] becauſe he was the firſt-born. 4. Now when Jehoram was riſen up to the kingdom of his father, he ſtrengthened himſelf, and [c] ſlew all his brethren with the ſword, and divers alſo of the princes of Iſrael. 5. ¶ [d] Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began § to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jeruſalem. 6. And he walked in the way of the kings of Iſrael, [e] like as did the houſe of Ahab: for [f] he had the daughter of Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD. 7. Howbeit the LORD would not deſtroy the houſe of David, [g] becauſe of the covenant that he had made with David, and [h] as he promiſed to give a || light to him, and to his ſons for ever. 8. ¶ In his days [i] the Edomites revolted from under the † dominion of Judah, and made themſelves a king. 9. Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he roſe up by night, and ſmote the Edomites, which compaſſed him in, and the captains of the chariots. 10. So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of

Before Christ 889.

Judah unto this day. The ſame time alſo did Libnah revolt from under his hand; [k] becauſe he had forſaken the LORD God of his fathers. 11. Moreover, [l] he made high places in the mountains of Judah, and [m] cauſed the inhabitants of Jeruſalem to commit fornication, and compelled Judah thereto.

k Chap. xv. 2.
l Exod. xxxiv. 13. Deut. vii. 5. & xii. 3.
m Rev. ii. 20.

v. 1—11. Jehoſhaphat's death opened the ſucceſſion to the unworthy Jehoram, whom, during his life-time, he had aſſociated with him in the government, whilſt he had provided for his other children by governments and rich preſents, that they might appear becoming their royal birth. Note, Though the eldeſt ſon be entitled to the double portion, it is unjuſt, for the ſake of making one great, to deprive the reſt of their due proportion.

1. Jehoram's reign opened with the moſt bloody and unnatural murder of his brethren, leſt any of them, more pious than himſelf, ſhould oppoſe the idolatry he intended to introduce; and the princes of Iſrael, the great men who had ſettled in Judah under Jehoſhaphat, were maſſacred, becauſe probably they refuſed to comply with his abominable innovations, or remonſtrated againſt his crimes. Note, (1.) Ambition is deaf to the cries of nature or humanity. (2.) Tyrants ever rule in fear, and all their precautions ſhew the tormented ſtate of their own minds. (3.) Kingdoms ſupported by blood-ſhed are in a tottering condition.

2. Thoſe whom he feared as his oppoſers being removed, he throws off the maſk, and eſtabliſhes groſs and bare-faced idolatry, like Ahab his father-in-law; not only inviting the people by his countenance, but compelling them by force to frequent his idolatrous ſacrifices. What a curſe on a land is a wicked king!

3. God's hand ſoon overtook him in judgments; his tributary Edom revolted, and his ſubjects in Libnah rebelled: nor, though he obtained a victory over Edom, could he reduce them to obedience. See 2 Kings viii. 17—22.

4. For David's ſake, God would not utterly conſume this wicked king and his houſe. His promiſes ſtood firm amidſt Jehoram's provocations.

12. ¶ And there came † a writing to him from Elijah the prophet, ſaying, Thus ſaith the LORD God of David thy father, Becauſe thou haſt not walked in [n] the ways of Jehoſhaphat thy father, nor in [o] the ways of Aſa king of Judah, 13. But haſt walked in the way of the kings of Iſrael, and haſt made Judah and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem to go [p] a whoring, [q] like to the whoredoms of the houſe of Ahab, and alſo [r] haſt ſlain thy brethren of thy father's houſe, which were better than thyſelf: 14. Behold, with a great plague will the LORD ſmite thy people, and thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods. 15. And [s] thou ſhalt have great ſickneſs by diſeaſe of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out, by reaſon of the ſickneſs day by day. 16. ¶ Moreover, the LORD ſtirred up againſt Jehoram the ſpirit of the Philiſtines, and of the Arabians that were near the ‡ Ethiopians. 17. And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and carried away all the ſubſtance that was found in the king's houſe, and [t] his ſons alſo, and his wives; ſo that there was never a ſon left him, ſave § Jehoahaz the youngeſt of his ſons. 18. ¶ And after all this [u] the LORD ſmote him in his bowels with an incurable diſeaſe. 19. And it came to paſs that in proceſs of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reaſon of his ſickneſs; ſo he died of ſore diſeaſes: And his people made no burning for him, like [x] the burning of his fathers. 20. Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned in Jeruſalem eight years, and departed ‖ without being deſired: howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the ſepulchres of the kings.

† Which muſt have been wrote before his death, tho' not ſent till now.
n Chap. xvii. 3.
o Chap. xiv. 2.
p Exod. xxxiv. 15. Deut. xxxi. 16.
q 1 Kings xvi. 31—33.
r Ver. 4.
s Ver. 18. Deut. xxviii. 59.
‡ Heb. Cuſhites.
t Chap. xxii. 1.
§ Or Ahaziah, Chap. xxii. 1. or Azariah, Chap. xxii. 6.
886.
u Ver. 15.
x Chap. xvi. 14.
884.
‖ Heb. Without deſire. Prov. x. 7. Jer. xxii. 18.

v. 12—20. Elijah appears to have been tranſlated ſeven years before this; but by the ſpirit of prophecy foreſeeing the abominations of Jehoram, he ſeems to have left this letter with Eliſha, or ſome other, to be ſent to Jehoram at this time.

1. He reproaches him with his iniquities, in imitation of Iſrael's ſins, and his forſaking the ways of his pious forefathers, to whom he was the greateſt ſcandal. Tyranny, idolatry, and murder, are particularly charged upon him, and judgment pronounced for theſe crimes. Ruin ſhould overtake his family and people; and, ſmitten of God by a diſeaſe terrible and loathſome, he ſhould linger out the remains of his life, without eaſe or remedy. Note, Diſeaſes are God's ſcourges: he can ſoon make thoſe who are by their crimes a burden to the earth, a burden to themſelves.

Before Christ 884.

2. The warning being diſregarded, the accompliſhment of the threatning was ſpeedy. [1.] The Arabians, ſtirred up of God, made an irruption into Judah; plundered the king's palace, either that at Jeruſalem, or it may be ſome palace in the country, where the court at that time was; ſlew all his ſons but one, chap. xxvii. 1. and carried away his wives captives, except Athaliah, who eſcaped. [2.] A diſeaſe, painful as incurable, ſeized him, rendered him incapable of recovering his loſſes, and, robbed of every domeſtic comfort, without hope in God, under his curſe in body and ſoul, he lingred two long years, and then thoſe bowels, that yearned not over his brethren, fell out, and he died. Note, The ſick bed of a ſinner is among the moſt miſerable ſcenes on this ſide hell. The body tormented with pain, death ſtanding with terrible aſpect before him, horror of conſcience increaſing every pang, and a fearful looking for judgment, already waking up the gnawing worm that never dies.

3. He died unlamented, and was buried with diſgrace. Glad to be rid of ſuch a monſter, they carried him to a common grave, as unworthy a place in the ſepulchre of his anceſtors; and, as his memory was odious, they burnt no ſweet ſpices over him, leaving the loathſome corpſe, an emblem of the more loathſome ſoul. Note, Tyrants, when alive, though feared, will be hated; and, when dead, will be branded with infamy.

CHAP. XXII.

We have here, 1. Ahaziah's wicked life, and untimely death, ver. 1—9. 2. Athaliah murders all the ſeed-royal, and uſurps the throne, ver. 10—12.

1. AND the inhabitants of Jeruſalem made [a] Ahaziah his youngeſt ſon, king in his ſtead: for [b] the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp, had ſlain all the eldeſt. So Ahaziah the ſon of Jehoram king of Judah reigned. 2. Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jeruſalem: his mother's name alſo was Athaliah [c] the daughter of Omri. 3. He alſo walked in the ways of the houſe of Ahab: for his mother was his counſeller to do wickedly. 4. Wherefore he did evil in the ſight of the LORD, like the houſe of Ahab: for they were his counſellers after the death of his father, [d] to his deſtruction. 5. ¶ He walked alſo after their counſel, and went with Jehoram the ſon of Ahab king of Iſrael, to war againſt Hazael king of Syria, at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians ſmote Joram. 6. And [e] he returned to be healed in Jezreel, becauſe of the wounds † which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And Azariah the ſon of Jehoram king of Judah, went down to ſee Jehoram the ſon of Ahab at Jezreel, becauſe he was ſick. 7. And [f] the deſtruction of Ahaziah was of God by coming to Joram: for when he was come, he went out with Jehoram againſt Jehu the ſon of Nimſhi, whom the LORD had anointed [g] to cut off the houſe of Ahab. 8. And it came to paſs, that when Jehu was executing judgment upon the houſe of Ahab, and [h] found the princes of Judah, and the ſons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that miniſtred to Ahaziah, he ſlew them. 9. And he ſought Ahaziah: and they caught him (for he was hid ‡ in Samaria) and brought him to Jehu: and when they had [i] ſlain him, they buried him, becauſe (ſaid they) he is the ſon of Jehoſhaphat, who ſought the LORD with all his heart. So the houſe of Ahaziah had no power to keep ſtill the kingdom.

884.
a 2 Kings viii. 24, &c.
b Chap. xxi. 17.
c Ibid. 6.
d 1 Kings xii. 15.
e 1 Kings viii. 29. & ix. 15.
† Heb. Wherewith they wounded him.
f 1 Kings xii. 15.
g Ibid. ix. 7.
h Ibid. x. 13.
‡ i. e. At Megiddo in the kingdom of Samaria. 1 Kings ix. 27.
i Prov. xii. 20. Rev. xviii. 4.

v. 1—9. Ahaziah, called Jehoahaz, the name being the ſame in ſignification, who alone had eſcaped the maſſacre of the Arabians, ſucceeded his father at the age, it is ſaid, of forty-two, or rather at twenty-two, See 2 Kings viii. 26. Various methods have been deviſed to reconcile this difficulty; but the moſt natural, and indeed the only ſatisfactory ſolution, is to acknowledge an error in the tranſcriber, the Hebrew numerals for 22 and 42 being very liable to be miſtaken. The Syriac and Arabic verſions, with ſome copies of the Septuagint, read it twenty-two.

The account we have here of Ahaziah is bad, very bad. He was influenced by the worſt of counſellors, an idolatrous mother, and his wicked relations of the houſe of Ahab; the conſequence of which was, that, inſtead of taking warning by his father's miſerable end, he continued, after his death, in the ſame evil ways, and followed the abominations of the houſe of Ahab, to the deſtruction both of body and ſoul. Forgetting the danger Jehoſhaphat had run in a former expedition againſt Ramoth-gilead, he conſents to join with the king of Iſrael in attacking attacking it, where Joram being wounded, and returning to be cured at Jezreel: thither Ahaziah, appointed to deſtruction, went to viſit him, and met his death with Joram, from the ſword of Jehu. Yet in reſpect to his grandfather, they ſhewed his corpſe reſpect, and gave leave for his honourable interment in the ſepulchre of his fathers; See 2 Kings ix. 28. Note, (1.) The moſt unhappy ſituation for a young man, is to be under the influence of wicked adviſers. (2.) They whom God dooms to ruin, cannot fly from their deſtiny. (3.) The companion of wicked men juſtly periſhes with them.

Before Christ 884.

[k] 2 Kings xi. 1, &c. [l] Rev. xvii. 6.

10. ¶ [k] But when Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, ſaw that her ſon was dead, ſhe aroſe, and [l] deſtroyed all the ſeed royal of the houſe of Judah. 11. But Jehoſhabeath the daughter of the king, took Joaſh the ſon of Ahaziah, and ſtole him from among the king's ſons that were ſlain, and put him and his nurſe in a bed-chamber. So Jehoſhabeath the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of Jehoiada the prieſt (for ſhe was the ſiſter of Ahaziah) hid him from Athaliah, ſo that ſhe ſlew him not. 12. And he was with them [m] hid in the houſe of God ſix years, and [n] Athaliah reigned over the land.

[m] Pſal. xxvii. 5. & xxxi. 20. [n] Mal. iii. 15.

v. 10—12. Never was the promiſe made to David, to human view, more in danger of failing. The monſter Athaliah, to uſurp the throne, deſtroys all her grand-children, and the whole ſeed-royal of Judah: one babe only of a year old, as a brand from the burning, is ſnatched from the maſſacre by the care of his aunt, the wife of Jehoiada. Note, Vain is every attempt of earth or hell to defeat the word of truth; one jot or tittle of it ſhall never fail.

CHAP. XXIII.

After ſix years uſurpation, 1. Jehoiada ſets up the rightful heir, ver. 1—11. 2. Slays the uſurper, ver. 11—15. 3. Reforms the kingdom, ver. 16—21.

8-8.

[a] 2 Kings iv, &c.

1. [a] AND in the ſeventh year Jehoiada ſtrengthned himſelf, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the ſon of Jehoram, and Iſhmael the ſon of Jehohanan, and Azariah the ſon of Obed, and Maaſeiah the ſon of Adaiah, and Eliſhaphat the ſon of Zichri, into covenant with him. 2. And they went about in Judah, and [b] gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Iſrael, and they came to Jeruſalem. 3. And all the congregation [c] made a covenant with the king in the houſe of God: and he ſaid unto them, Behold, the king's ſon ſhall reign, [d] as the LORD hath ſaid of the ſons of David. 4. This is the thing that ye ſhall do: [e] A third part of you entring on the ſabbath of the prieſts and of the Levites, ſhall be porters of the † doors; 5. And [e] a third part ſhall be at the king's houſe; [e] and a third part at the gate of the foundation: and all the people ſhall be in the courts of the houſe of the LORD. 6. But let none come into the houſe of the LORD, ſave the prieſts, and [f] they that miniſter of the Levites, they ſhall go in, for they are ‡ holy: but all the people ſhall keep the watch of the LORD. 7. And the Levites ſhall compaſs the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand, and whoſoever elſe cometh into the houſe, he ſhall be put to death: but be you with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out. 8. So the Levites and all Judah did according to all things that Jehoiada the prieſt had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the ſabbath, with them that were to go out on the ſabbath: for Jehoiada the prieſt diſmiſſed not [g] the courſes. 9. Moreover, Jehoiada the prieſt delivered to the captains of hundreds, ſpears and bucklers, and ſhields, that had been king David's, which were in the houſe of God. 10. And he ſet all the people (every man having his weapon in his hand) from the right ‖ ſide of the § temple, to the left ſide of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about. 11. Then they brought out the king's ſon, and put upon him the crown, and [h] gave him the teſtimony, and made him king: and Jehoiada and his ſons anointed him, and ſaid, † God ſave the king.

[b] Pſal. cxii. 5. Mat. x. 16. [c] Neh. ix. 38. [d] 1 Sam. vii. 13. Chap. vi. 16. & vii. 18. & xxi. 7. [e] Luke i. 8, 9. † Heb. Threſholds. [f] 1 Chron. xxiii. xxviii. xxix. ‡ Heb. Holineſs. [g] 1 Chron. xxiii. xxiv. xxv. & xxvi. ‖ Heb. Shoulder. § Heb. Temple. [h] Deut. xvii. 18. † Heb. Let the King live. Pſal. lxxii. 15.

v. 1—11. Six years the uſurped dominion of Athaliah laſted; but by the prudence and courage of Jehoiada, ſhe is hurled from her bloody throne, and the rightful heir reſtored, 2 Kings xi. 4.

Before Christ 878.

12. ¶ [i] Now when Athaliah heard the noiſe of the people running and praiſing the king, ſhe came to the people into the houſe of the LORD. 13. And ſhe looked, and behold, the king ſtood [k] at his pillar, at the entring in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king; and [l] all the people of the land rejoiced, and [m] ſounded with trumpets, alſo the ſingers with inſtruments of muſic; and ſuch as taught to ſing praiſe. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and ſaid, [n] Treaſon, treaſon. 14. Then Jehoiada the prieſts brought out the captains of hundreds that were ſet over the hoſt, and ſaid unto them, Have her forth of the ranges: and whoſo followeth her, [o] let him be ſlain with the ſword. For the prieſt ſaid, Slay her not in the houſe of the LORD. 15. So they laid hands on her; and when ſhe was come to the entring of the horſe-gate, by the king's houſe, [p] they ſlew her there. 16. ¶ And Jehoiada made a covenant between him, and [q] between all the people, and [r] between the king, that they ſhould be the LORD's people. 17. Then all the people went to the houſe of Baal, and [s] brake it down, and brake his altars, and his images in pieces, and [t] ſlew Mattan the prieſt of Baal before the altars. 18. Alſo Jehoiada appointed the offices of the houſe of the LORD by the hand of the prieſts the Levites, [u] whom David had diſtributed in the houſe of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the LORD, [x] as it is written in the law of Moſes, with rejoicing and with ſinging, [y] as it was ordained by David. 19. And he ſet the porters at the gates of the houſe of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing, ſhould enter in. 20. And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the houſe of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's houſe, and ſet the king upon the throne of the kingdom. 21. And [z] all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had ſlain Athaliah with the ſword.

[i] 2 Kings xi. 13, &c. [k] 2 Kings xxiii. 3. [l] Prov. xi. 10. Rev. xix. 1, 2. [m] Num. x. 10. [n] 1 Kings xviii. 17, 18. Mat. vii. 5. Rom. ii. 1, 3. [o] Rev. xiv. 9, 10. & xix. 20. [p] Judg. i. 7. Mat. vii. 2. Rev. xviii. 6. [q] Rom. xiii. 3, 4. [r] 2 Sam. xxiii. 3. [s] 2 Kings x. 27. [t] Deut. xiii. 9. 1 Kings xviii. 40. Cant. ii. 15. Zech. xiii. 3. [u] 1 Chron. xxiv. 1. [x] Num. xxviii. 2. [y] 1 Chron. xxvi. 1. [z] Eſth. viii. 15. Pſal. lviii. 10. Prov. xi. 10.

v. 12—21. Athaliah's impotent attempt haſtens her ruin: the people were too tired of her government to afford her any aſſiſtance; ſhe fell therefore a juſt ſacrifice to the manes of her murdered family. Joy and gladneſs now ſpread through the land; the king and people, by Jehoiada as mediator, renew their covenant with God and each other; and as the firſt-fruits of their zeal, Baal's hated worſhip is deſtroyed, and regularity and order reſtored to the houſe of God. Thus was this happy revolution effected ſo proſperouſly and ſpeedily, and once more the ſeed of David poſſeſſed in peace the throne of their anceſtors. Note, (1.) The throne of David ſhall never be vacant; one king for ever reigns upon it, whom none of his enemies can gainſay or reſiſt: happy they who are ſpiritually the ſubjects of his government. (2.) Let kings conſider the maintenance of God's holy religion and virtue, as the great ſtability of their crown.

CHAP. XXIV.

Joaſh's end ill correſponded with his gracious beginning. 1. While Jehoiada lived he did well, and repaired the temple, ver. 1—14. 2. After his death, he ſhook off his profeſſion, ſet up the worſhip of Baal, ver. 15—18. tho' warned to the contrary, ver. 19. and put Zechariah the prophet to death, for reproving him for it, ver. 20—22. 3. The Syrians invaded him, ver. 23—24. 4. He was ſtruck with ſore diſeaſes, ſlain by his ſervants, and buried under a mark of infamy, ver. 25—27.

1. [a] JOaſh was ſeven years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years in Jeruſalem: his mother's name alſo was Zibeah of Beer-ſheba. 2. And Joaſh [b] did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, all the days of Jehoiada the prieſt. 3. And Jehoiada took for him two wives, and he begat ſons and daughters. 4. ¶ And it came to paſs after this, that Joaſh was minded to repair the houſe of the LORD. 5. And he gathered together the prieſts and the Levites, and ſaid to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and gather of all Iſrael money to repair the houſe of your God from year to year, and ſee that ye haſte the matter: howbeit the Levites haſtened it not. 6. And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and ſaid unto him, Why haſt thou not required of the Levites to bring in out of Judah and out of Jeruſalem, the collection, [c] according to the commandment of Moſes the ſervant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Iſrael, for the tabernacle of witneſs? 7. For [d] the ſons of Athaliah that wicked woman, had broken up the houſe of God, and alſo [e] all the dedicate things of the houſe of the LORD did they beſtow upon Baalim. 8. And at the king's commandment they made [f] a cheſt, and ſet it without, at the gate of the houſe of the LORD. 9. And they made a † proclamation through Judah and Jeruſalem, to bring in to the LORD, the collection that Moſes the ſervant of God laid upon Iſrael in the wilderneſs. 10. And all the princes, and all the people rejoiced, and brought in, and caſt into the cheſt, until they had made an end. 11. Now it came to paſs, that at what time the cheſt was brought unto the king's office, by the hand of the Levites; and when they ſaw that there was much money: the king's ſcribe, and the high-prieſt's officer, came and emptied the cheſt, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance. 12. And the king and Jehoiada [g] gave it to ſuch as did the work of the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD, and hired maſons and carpenters to repair the houſe of the LORD, and alſo ſuch as wrought iron and braſs, to mend the houſe of the LORD. 13. So the workmen wrought, and ‡ the work was perfected by them, and they ſet the houſe of God in his ſtate, and ſtrengthened it. 14. And when they had finiſhed it, they brought the reſt of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made [h] veſſels for the houſe of the LORD, even veſſels to miniſter, and to offer withal, and ſpoons, and [h] veſſels of gold and ſilver: and they offered burnt-offerings in the houſe of the LORD continually, all the days of Jehoiada.

[a] 2 Kings xii. 1, &c. [b] Chap. xxv. 2.

856.

Before Chriſt 856.

[c] Exod. xxx.
[d] Chap. xxi. 17.
[e] Hoſ. ii. 8.
[f] Mark xii. 41.
† Heb. Voice.
[g] Mat. x. 10.
‡ Heb. The healing of the work went up by their hand.
[h] 1 Kings vii. 50.
[i] 2 Kings xii. 13.

v. 1—14. Under Jehoiada's influence, Joaſh continued to reign with credit and honour. See 2 Kings xii. 1. We may add to what was there obſerved,

1. How great a mercy it is for young people, when they fall into good hands.

2. That to be adviſed and influenced by age and experience, ſhews the trueſt wiſdom.

3. Many a fair profeſſion hath no root at bottom. The religion that is put on, through prejudice of education, or maintained purely by the influence of others, will, when theſe reſtraints are removed, be eaſily ſhook off; or if the form ſtill continues, it can but more fatally deceive thoſe who are deſtitute of the power of godlineſs.

4. Many a commendable action, as Joaſh's repairing the temple, hath appeared in thoſe, who being ſtill in the fleſh, cannot pleaſe God; though their zeal is a juſt reproof of the backwardneſs of better men.

850.

15. ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and [k] was full of days when he died; an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died: 16. And they buried him in the city of David [l] among the kings, [m] becauſe he had done good in Iſrael, both towards God, and [n] towards his houſe. 17. Now [o] after the death of Jehoiada, came the princes of Judah, and made obeiſance to the king: then the king hearkned unto them. 18. And [p] they left the houſe of the LORD God of their fathers, and ſerved groves and idols: and [q] wrath came upon Judah and Jeruſalem for this their treſpaſs. 19. Yet [r] he ſent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD, and they teſtified againſt them [s] but they would not give ear. 20. And the ſpirit of God came upon Zechariah the ſon of Jehoiada the prieſt, which ſtood above the people, and ſaid unto them, Thus ſaith God, Why tranſgreſs ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot proſper? [t] becauſe ye have forſaken the LORD, he hath alſo forſaken you. 21. And they conſpired againſt him, and [u] ſtoned him with ſtones, at the commandment of the king, [x] in the court of the houſe of the LORD. 22. Thus Joaſh the king remembred not the kindneſs which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but ſlew his ſon: and when he died, he ſaid, The LORD look upon it, and [y] require it. 23. ¶ And it came to paſs at the end of the year, that [z] the hoſt of Syria came up againſt him: and they came to Judah and Jeruſalem, and deſtroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and ſent all the ſpoil of them unto the king of † Damaſcus. 24. For the army of the Syrians [a] came with a ſmall company of men, and the LORD delivered a very great hoſt into their hand, becauſe they had forſaken the LORD God of their fathers: ſo they executed judgment againſt Joaſh. 25. And when they were departed from him (for they left him in great [b] diſeaſes) his own ſervants conſpired againſt him, [c] for the blood of the ſons of Jehoiada the prieſt, and ſlew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, [d] but they buried him not in the ſepulchres of the kings. 26. And theſe are they that conſpired againſt him; Zabad the ſon of Shimeath an Ammoniteſs, and † Jehozabad the ſon of ‡ Shimrith a Moabiteſs. 27. ¶ Now concerning his ſons, and [e] the greatneſs of the burdens laid upon him, and the ‖ repairing of the houſe of God, behold, they are written in the § ſtory of the book of the kings. And Amaziah his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[k] Gen. xxxv. 29. 1 Chron. xxiii. 1.
[l] 1 Sam. ii. 30. Prov. x. 7.
[m] Heb. vi. 10.
[n] Chap. xxiii. 18.
[o] Acts xx. 29.
[p] 2 Tim. iv. 10.
[q] Judg. v. 8. Chap. xix. 2. & xxviii. 13.
[r] Chap. xxxvi. 15.
[s] Neh. ix. 26. Zech. vii. 11, 12.

840.
[t] Deut. xxix. 25. & xxxi. 16, 17. Chap. xv. 2.
[u] Mat. xxi. 35. Acts vii. 58. & xiv. 19.
[x] Mat. xxiii. 35.
[y] Gen. ix. 6

839.
[z] 2 Kings xii. 17, &c.

Before Chriſt 839.

† Heb. Darmeſk.
[a] Deut. xxxii. 30. Iſa. xxx. 17.
[b] 2 Kings viii. 29.
[c] Ver. xxi.
[d] Prov. x. 7.
† Jozacher.
‡ Shomer. 2 Kings xii. 21.
[e] Ibid. 18.
‖ Heb. Founding.
§ Or commentary.

v. 15—27. How ſad the apoſtacy of the unhappy Joaſh! The ſun that roſe ſo bright, here ſets eclipſed in darkneſs.

1. Jehoiada dies. Long had God ſpared his uſeful life, during ſix reigns before Joaſh. His character was exemplary, and his laſt works greater than his firſt. In reſpect to his memory, the people, ſenſible of their deep obligations to him, honoured him with a ſepulchre among the kings of Judah; but whilſt they thus reſpected his corps, they quickly forgat his counſel. Note, (1.) A long life is a bleſſing, when thus employed in the cauſe of God. (2.) They who in life have been moſt uſeful, deſerve after death the moſt honourable remembrance. (3.) The departure of a great good man, is a national affliction. (4.) They who continue to reverence the memory of great and good reformers, often grievouſly degenerate from their practice and precepts.

2. The princes of Judah, never truly changed, though conforming to the reformation, ſeize the preſent favourable opportunity; and with obſequious flattery gaining the king's ear, eaſily prevail on him to reſtore idolatry, and to plant again thoſe groves which he had deſtroyed. Note, (1.) Many conform to religion when it is faſhionable, who are glad to get the firſt opportunity to throw off the reſtraint. (2.) Flatterers about the throne, are often the ruin of the prince. (3.) Falſe converſion iſſues quickly in fatal apoſtacy.

3. God left not himſelf without witneſs. His prophets, commiſſioned from him, rebuked this ſhameful idolatry, and particularly Zachariah, the worthy ſon of the great Jehoiada, ſtood up, moved by the Holy Ghoſt, and plainly and ſeriouſly reminded them of the perverſeneſs of their ways, and the danger thereby incurred. Note, (1.) Miniſters muſt be faithful to men's ſouls. (2.) In times of great degeneracy, great zeal is needful to oppoſe the torrent of ungodlineſs. (3.) In the worſt of days, God will not want ſome witneſſes for him. (4.) They who hate to be reformed, ſhall at leaſt be left without excuſe.

4. Vile was the treatment theſe holy men received. In general they deſpiſed their admonitions; and as Zechariah's reproof, though mild and gentle, particularly exaſperated them, at the inſtigation of the princes, and by the command of the king, the people raiſed a tumult, even in the Lord's houſe, and ſtoned him to death between the porch and the altar; neither reſtrained by the ſacredneſs of the place or perſon, daringly defying his warnings, and ungratefully forgetting the innumerable obligations they owed his pious father. Note, (1.) God's miniſters who are zealous for the truth, muſt expect to ſuffer for it. (2.) Ingratitude is amongſt the greateſt ſins. (3.) They are ripe for ruin, who fill up the meaſure of their iniquities with the perſecution of God's prophets.

5. The dying martyr foretells the vengeance of God, which was ready to overtake them; not deſiring it might come out of a ſpirit of revenge, but predicting its certainty from the ſpirit of prophecy. Note, (1.) God will avenge the blood of his ſaints. (2.) Though we may not wiſh to avenge ourſelves, we cannot but deſire the manifeſtation of God's juſtice, and the vindication of his injured honour.

6. God ſoon aroſe to judgment. A ſmall army of Syrians vanquiſhed the more numerous hoſts of Joaſh, plundered his capital, ſlew his princes, and left him lingring either under the wounds they had given him, or ſome diſeaſe which had ſeized him; but what they left unfiniſhed, his own ſervants accompliſhed: a conſpiracy was formed, and they ſlew him on his bed. And ſince he had degenerated ſo greatly from his anceſtors, they judged him unworthy to ſleep in their ſepulchres. Thus juſtly did God require blood for blood, and laid on him the heavy burdens his iniquities had provoked. Note, (1.) Woe unto any people, when God hath forſaken them; they cannot but fall an eaſy prey to every invader. (2.) Nothing but blood can ſatisfy for blood. (3.) They who lie down under the wrath of God, will feel the intolerable burden to eternity. (4.) Let apoſtates from the truth behold and tremble at Joaſh's miſerable end.

Before Chriſt 839.

CHAP. XXV.

1. Amaziah revenges his father's death, ver. 1—4. 2. Obſerves the command of God, ver. 5—10. 3. Conquers the Edomites, ver. 11, 12, 13. 4. Worſhips the gods of Edom, ver. 14, 15, 16. 5. Challenges the king of Iſrael, but ſmarts for it, ver. 17—24. 6. Ends his days ingloriouſly, ver. 25—28.

1. [a] AMAZIAH was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jeruſalem. 2. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, [b] but not with a perfect heart. 3. ¶ Now it came to paſs, when the kingdom was eſtabliſhed to him, that [c] he ſlew his ſervants [d] that had killed the king his father. 4. But he ſlew not their children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Moſes, where the LORD commanded, ſaying, [e] The fathers ſhall not die for the children, neither ſhall the children die for the fathers, but every man ſhall die for his own ſin. 5. ¶ Moreover, Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them captains over thouſands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houſes of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbred them [f] from twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thouſand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle ſpear and ſhield. 6. He hired alſo an hundred thouſand mighty men of valour out of Iſrael, for an hundred talents of ſilver. 7. But there came a man of God to him, ſaying, O king, let not the army of Iſrael go with thee: for [g] the LORD is not with Iſrael, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim. 8. But if thou wilt go, do it, be ſtrong for the battle: God ſhall make thee fall before the enemy: for [h] God hath power to help, and to caſt down. 9. And Amaziah ſaid to the man of God, But what ſhall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the † army of Iſrael? And the man of God anſwered, [i] The LORD is able to give thee much more than this. 10. Then Amaziah ſeparated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go ‡ home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled againſt Judah, and they returned home in ‖ great anger. 11. ¶ And Amaziah ſtrengthned himſelf, and led forth his people, and [k] went to the valley of ſalt, and ſmote of the children of Seir ten thouſand. 12. And other ten thouſand left alive, did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and caſt them down from the top of the rock, that they were broken all in pieces. 13. ¶ But the ſoldiers of the army which Amaziah ſent back, that they ſhould not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria, even unto Beth-horon, and ſmote three thouſand of them, and took much ſpoil.

[a] 2 Kings xiv. 1, &c.
[b] Hoſ. x. 2. Jam. i. 8. Rev. iii. 16.
[c] Gen. ix. 6. Num. xxxv. 33.
[d] Chap. xxiv. 25.
[e] Deut. xxiv. 16. Ezek. xviii. 4. 20.
[f] Num. i. 18.
[g] 1 Kings xii. 28. Iſa. xxviii. 1. Hoſ. v. 13, 14.
[h] Judg. vii. 7. Chap. xiv. 11.
† Heb. Hand.
[i] Prov. x. 22.
‡ Heb. To their place.
‖ Heb. Heat of anger.
827.
[k] 2 Kings xiv. 7.

v. 1—13. Amaziah's reign we had before, 2 Kings xiv. His lukewarm temper in religion, and his execution of his father's murderers were there recorded; his expedition againſt Edom is here more at large deſcribed.

1. He collected his own forces, which we find greatly diminiſhed under the three laſt reigns. To ſtrengthen them therefore, he hired an 100,000 auxiliaries out of Iſrael.

2. God, by a prophet, rebukes him for deſiring Iſrael's aſſiſtance, whoſe forces being under the Divine diſpleaſure, would weaken inſtead of ſtrengthening his army. If he hopes to proſper therefore, he is commanded to diſband them immediately. God with fewer forces can caſt down his foes before him; and theſe offenſive auxiliaries, if retained, will but inſure his overthrow. Note, (1.) Multitudes profit nothing, when God is our foe. (2.) Connection with God's enemies, is the way to bring his curſe on our enterprizes.

3. Amaziah with ſome reluctance at laſt conſents, unwilling at firſt to loſe the hundred talents with which he had hired the Iſraelites, but encouraged by the promiſes of the prophet that he ſhould be no loſer by his compliance. Note, (1.) Worldly-mindedneſs is apt to raiſe many objections againſt the precepts of ſelf-denial. (2.) They who are content to truſt God, will never have cauſe to regret it. He will more than repay whatever he calls us to part with for his ſake.

4. When he had diſmiſſed the Iſraelites, he advanced into Idumea, and obtained a compleat victory; ſlew 10,000 on the ſpot, and executed, with terrible ſeverity, 10,000 captives which fell into his hands. What induced him to exerciſe this cruelty is not recorded.

5. The diſbanded army reſented highly the affront put upon them. Ungodly as they were, they could not bear to be treated as ſuch; and in their return, miſerably ravaged a part of Judah, and ſlew three thouſand men, in revenge for their diſappointment of the ſpoil of Edom. Note, (1.) Thoſe who have no concern about religion, feel their pride hurt to be treated as irreligious. (2.) Though we ſuffer for what is well done, we ought not to be diſcouraged.

Before Chriſt 826.

14. ¶ Now it came to paſs, after that Amaziah was come from the ſlaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and ſet them up [l] to be his gods, and [m] bowed down himſelf before them, and burned incenſe unto them. 15. Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled againſt Amaziah, and he ſent unto him a prophet, which ſaid unto him, [n] Why haſt thou ſought after the gods of the people, [o] which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand? 16. And it came to paſs as he talked with him, that the king ſaid unto him, Art thou made of the king's counſel? [p] forbear; why ſhouldſt thou be ſmitten? Then the prophet [q] forbare, and ſaid, I know that [r] God hath determined to deſtroy thee, becauſe thou haſt done this, and haſt not hearkned unto my counſel.

[l] Chap. xxviii. 23.
[m] Exod. xx. 5.
[n] Pſal. xcvi. 5.
[o] Ver. 11.
[p] Iſa. xxx. 10. 2 Tim. iv. 3.
[q] Hoſ. iv. 17.
[r] 1 Sam. ii. 25. Chap. xxxvi. 16.

v. 14—16. What infatuation, what ſottiſh ſtupidity! To leave the ſervice of the conquering Jehovah, for the idols of a vanquiſhed foe. We have,

1. The reproof given to the idolatrous king. Juſtly was God diſpleaſed, and ſends his prophet to reaſon with him on his folly, v. 15. Note, They who depart from God, act as unwiſely as wickedly.

2. With indignation he received the mild rebuke; inſolently rejects his warning as impertinent, bids him hold his peace, or threatens him with Zechariah's fate. Note, (1.) The ſoul that hateth reproof is brutiſh. (2.) Prophets muſt not wonder if their kindeſt notices are thus inſolently returned.

3. The prophet perceiving his labour fruitleſs, retires; leaving however behind him a ſolemn notice of that approaching ruin, which his hardned obſtinacy provoked. Note, They who comfort themſelves in having removed their troublers, will quickly feel by their puniſhments, how little cauſe they have to rejoice in their ſucceſs.

826.

17. ¶ [s] Then Amaziah king of Judah took advice, and ſent to Joaſh the ſon of Jehoahaz, the ſon of Jehu king of Iſrael, ſaying, [t] Come, let us ſee one another in the face. 18. And Joaſh king of Iſrael ſent to Amaziah king of Judah, ſaying, [u] The thiſtle that was in Lebanon, ſent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, ſaying, Give thy daughter to my ſon to wife: and there paſſed by a wild beaſt that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thiſtle. 19. Thou ſayeſt, Lo, thou haſt ſmitten the Edomites, and [x] thine heart lifteth thee up to boaſt: abide now at home, [y] why ſhouldſt thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou ſhouldſt fall, even thou, and Judah with thee? 20. But Amaziah [z] would not hear, [a] for it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, becauſe they ſought after the gods of Edom. 21. So Joaſh the king of Iſrael went up, and they ſaw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at Beth-ſhemeſh, which belongeth to Judah. 22. And Judah was † put to the worſe before Iſrael, and they fled every man to his tent. 23. And Joaſh the king of Iſrael [b] took Amaziah king of Judah, the ſon of Joaſh, the ſon of Jehoahaz, at Beth-ſhemeſh, and brought him to Jeruſalem, and brake down the wall of Jeruſalem, from the gate of Ephraim to the ‡ corner-gate; four hundred cubits. 24. And he took all the gold, and the ſilver, and all the veſſels that were found in the houſe of God, with Obed-edom, and the treaſures of the king's houſe, the ‖ hoſtages alſo, and returned to Samaria. 25. ¶ And Amaziah the ſon of Joaſh king of Judah, lived after the death of Joaſh ſon of Jehoahaz king of Iſrael, fifteen years. 26. Now the reſt of the acts of Amaziah, firſt and laſt, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Iſrael? 27. ¶ Now after the time that Amaziah did turn away § from following the LORD, they made a conſpiracy againſt him in Jeruſalem, and he fled to Lachiſh: but they ſent to Lachiſh after him and ſlew him there. 28. And they brought him

[s] 2 Kings xiv. 8, &c.
[t] Prov. vii. 14. & xviii. 6. & xx. 3.
[u] Judg. ix. 8.
[x] Chap. xxvi. Prov. xiii. 10. Hab. ii. 4.
[y] Luke xiv. 31.
[z] 1 Sam. ii. 25.
[a] Chap. xxii. 7.
† Heb. Smitten.
[b] Prov. xvi. 18.
‡ Heb. Gate that looketh out. Zech. xiv. 10.
‖ Heb. Sons of pledge.
810.
§ Heb. From after.

Before Chriſt 810.

him upon horſes, and buried him with his fathers in the city of Judah.

v. 17—28. Amaziah's pride and fall were before recorded, 2 Kings xiv. Urged on by evil counſellors, inſtead of adviſing with God's prophet, and juſtly hurried to his ruin, as the puniſhment of his apoſtacy from God, he firſt was enſlaved by the king of Iſrael, and then ſlain by a conſpiracy of his own ſervants, from whom he in vain attempted to flee; they purſued him to Lachiſh, and there murdered him. Note, (1.) They who reject the counſel of God, are juſtly given up to be deluded and deſtroyed. (2.) However wicked the inſtruments may be who are employed, God is righteous in his judgments.

CHAP. XXVI.

Here is, 1. The good character of Uzziah, ver. 1—5. 2. His great proſperity, ver. 6—15. 3. His preſumption in invading the prieſt's office, for which he was ſtruck with a leproſy unto the day of his death, ver. 16—23.

1. [a] THEN all the people of Judah took † Uzziah, who was ſixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah. 2. He built Eloth, and reſtored it to Judah, after that the king ſlept with his fathers. 3. Sixteen years old was Uzziah when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and two years in Jeruſalem: his mother's name alſo was Jecoliah of Jeruſalem. 4. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, [b] according to all that his father Amaziah did. 5. And he ſought God [c] in the days of Zechariah, who [d] had underſtanding in the viſions of God: and [e] as long as he ſought the LORD, God made him to proſper. 6. And he went forth and warred againſt the Philiſtines, and brake down the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Aſhdod, and built cities about Aſhdod, and among the Philiſtines. 7. And [f] God helped him againſt the Philiſtines, and againſt the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims. 8. And the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah, and his name ſpread abroad, even to the entring in of Egypt, for he ſtrengthned himſelf exceedingly. 9. Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jeruſalem [g] at the corner-gate, and at the valley-gate, and at the turning of the wall, and † fortified them. 10. Alſo he built towers in the deſert, and digged many wells, for he had much cattle, both in the low-country, and in the plains: huſbandmen alſo, and vine-dreſſers in the mountains, and in ‖ Carmel: for he loved § huſbandry. 11. Moreover, Uzziah had an hoſt of fighting men that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account, by the hand of Jeiel the ſcribe, and Maaſeiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains. 12. The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour, were two thouſand and ſix hundred. 13. And under their hand was † an army, three hundred thouſand and ſeven thouſand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king againſt the enemy. 14. And Uzziah prepared for them throughout all the hoſt, ſhields and ſpears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and [h] ſlings to caſt ſtones. 15. And he made in Jeruſalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers, and upon the bulwarks, to ſhoot arrows and great ſtones withal: and his name ‡ ſpread far abroad, for [i] he was marvellouſly helped till he was ſtrong.

[a] 2 Kings xv. 1, &c.
† i. e. The power of God. He is called Azariah, 2 Kings xiv. 21.
[b] Chap. xxv. 2.
[c] Ibid. xxiv. 2.
[d] Gen. xli. 15. Dan. i. 17. & ii. 19. & x. 1.
[e] 1 Sam. ii. 30. Chap. xv. 2.
800.
[f] Pſal. iii. 8.
[g] Chap. xxv. 23.
† Or repaired.
‖ Or fruitful fields.
§ Heb. Ground.
† Heb. The power of an army, or a powerful army.
[h] Judg. xx. 16.
‡ Heb. Went forth.
[i] Pſal. xviii. 30.

v. 1—15. Uzziah followed the beſt ways of his father Amaziah, and under the influence of Zechariah, a man favoured with prophetic viſions, or deeply converſant with the writings of the prophets before him, kept cloſe to the worſhip of the true God, and proſpered in all his undertakings.

1. He was victorious in all his battles. God enabled him to vanquiſh the Philiſtines and Arabians, and ſeize their country. The Ammonites fearing his arms, ſued humbly to obtain his favour with preſents, and his ſpreading fame overawed the neighbouring nations. Note, As long as we cleave to God, he will help us againſt all our foes.

2. He repaired and fortified Jeruſalem; the wall of which in his father's time had been broken down; and built cities or garriſons in the conquered countries; and places for the protection of his cattle in the wilderneſs; for he abounded in flocks and herds, and was a great lover of huſbandry, an employment and amuſement not unworthy the greateſt king.

Before Chriſt 800.

3. He kept up a great army, ready for any emergency, parties of which were ſent out againſt the neighbouring people, who made inroads on the borders; the reſt ſerved to garriſon the cities. They were well armed, men of great courage, and provided with warlike engines, whether for defending or aſſaulting beſieged cities. Such forces and mighty preparations for war exceedingly ſtrengthened his kingdom, and made him feared and reſpected.

16. ¶ But [k] when he was ſtrong, his heart was lifted up to his deſtruction: for he tranſgreſſed againſt the LORD his God, and went into the temple of the LORD, to burn incenſe upon the altar of incenſe. 17. And Azariah the prieſt went in after him, and with him fourſcore prieſts of the LORD that were valiant men: 18. And they withſtood Uzziah the king, and ſaid unto him, [l] It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incenſe unto the LORD, but [m] to the prieſts the ſons of Aaron that are conſecrated to burn incenſe: go out of the ſanctuary, for thou haſt treſpaſſed, [n] neither ſhall it be for thine honour from the LORD God. 19. Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a cenſer in his hand to burn incenſe: and [o] while he was wroth with the prieſts, [p] the leproſy even roſe up in his forehead before the prieſts in the houſe of the LORD from beſide the incenſe-altar. 20. And Azariah the chief prieſt, and all the prieſts looked upon him, and behold he was leprous in his forehead, and they thruſt him out from thence, yea, [q] himſelf haſted alſo to go out, becauſe the LORD had ſmitten him. 21. And [r] Uzziah the king was [s] a leper unto the day of his death, and [t] dwelt in a ſeveral houſe being a leper, for he was cut off from the houſe of the LORD: and Jotham his ſon was over the king's houſe, judging the people of the land. 22. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Uzziah, firſt and laſt, [u] did Iſaiah the prophet the ſon of Amoz write. 23. [x] So Uzziah ſlept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they ſaid, He is a leper: and † Jotham his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[k] Deut. xxxii. 15. Prov. iv. 23.
765.
[l] Num. xvi. 40. & xviii. 7. 1 Kings xiii. 1. Heb. v. 4.
[m] Exod. xxx. 7.
[n] James iv. 6.
[o] Num. xi. 33. Dan. iv. 31.
[p] Num. xii. 10.
[q] Eſth. vi. 12.
[r] 2 Kings xv. 5.
[s] Num. xii. 10.
[t] Lev. xiii. 46. Num. v. 2.
[u] Iſa. i. 1.
[x] Ibid. vi. 1.
758.
† i. e. The perfection of the Lord, or the Lord is perfect.

v. 16—23. Puffed up with the proſperity to which he was advanced, Uzziah blots his fair character, by an act of daring intruſion into the prieſts office. So buſy a ſin is pride, and ſo ready to creep into the hearts of truly pious men.

1. He would offer incenſe upon the golden altar, and enter that holy place, to which all acceſs was forbidden, except to the prieſts alone: and as his tranſgreſſion was wilful and obſtinate, his ſin was great againſt the Lord.

2. Azariah the high-prieſt, with fourſcore of his brethren, bravely oppoſed the profane attempt; not by violence, but by a ſerious remonſtrance. They urge the king to an immediate departure from the place into which he had intruded, warn him of the tranſgreſſion he had already committed, remind him of the unlawfulneſs of the ſervice he intended, and threaten him with the danger to which he was expoſed; far from contributing to his honour, it would end in his perpetual ſhame and diſgrace. Note, (1.) God's inſtitutions are ſacred; it is at our peril if we violate them. (2.) They who at all hazard will gratify their pride, often bring themſelves to deſerved ſhame.

3. Uzziah, far from ſubmitting, was angry at the remonſtrance, and refuſed to quit his cenſer. Note, The wiſeſt and juſteſt rebuke, often exaſperates the wilful.

4. God therefore appeared to decide the controverſy. The leproſy, foul and incurable, ſeized him, and the marks of it appeared viſible in his forehead: emboldened hereby, the prieſts hurried him forth from the holy place; and far from reſiſting, the ſtroke he felt bowed his ſtubborn heart, and he haſted to be gone, leſt worſe evils ſhould overtake him. And now no more dares he approach God's houſe; nay, he is excluded from his own palace whilſt he lives, and from the ſepulchre of his anceſtors when he dies: a puniſhment admirably ſuited to his ſin, and to deter others from imitating ſo bad an example. Note, (1.) They who will not ſubmit to admonition, ruſh on their ruin. (2.) When we feel God's diſpleaſure, it is madneſs to perſiſt: humiliation is the only door of eſcape which remains. (3.) Though our iniquity may be pardoned of God, ſome ſins leave a diſgrace among men which is indelible.

CHAP. XXVII.

Jotham ſucceeded his father Uzziah. We have here, 1. The date and continuance of his reign, ver. 1—8. 2. The general good character of it, ver. 1—6. The proſperity of it, ver. 3, 4, 5. 4. The period of it, ver. 7—9.

Before Christ 758.

1. [a] JOTHAM was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned ſixteen years in Jeruſalem: his mother's name alſo was Jeruſhah the daughter of Zadok. 2. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, [b] according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit [c] he entred not into the temple of the LORD. And [d] the people did yet corruptly. 3. He built the high gate of the houſe of the LORD, and on the wall of † Ophel he built much. 4. Moreover, he built cities in the mountains of Judah, and in the foreſts he built caſtles and towers. 5. ¶ He fought alſo with the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed againſt them. And the children of Ammon gave him the ſame year an hundred talents of ſilver, and ten thouſand meaſures of wheat, and ten thouſand of barley. ‡ So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the ſecond year and the third. 6. So Jotham became mighty, becauſe he ‖ prepared his ways before the LORD his God. 7. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Iſrael and Judah. 8. He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned ſixteen years in Jeruſalem. 9. ¶ And Jotham ſlept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[a] 2 Kings xv. 32.
[b] Chap. xxvi. 4.
[c] Ibid. 16.
[d] 2 Kings xv. 35.
† Or the tower. Neh. iii. 26. & xi. 21.
‡ Or this.
‖ Or eſtabliſhed. Chap. xix. 3.

v. 1—9. The reign of Jotham was pious and proſperous.

1. He copied the beſt of his father's ways, and avoided his wickedneſs. His heart was right with God, and he endeavoured diligently to walk and pleaſe him: but the people followed not his good example; either he wanted zeal to reſtrain them, or they were too headſtrong to be with-held. Note, (1.) It is wiſe to avoid the rocks on which others have ſplit. (2.) They are inexcuſable who ſlight the advantages they enjoy, and refuſe to be reformed.

2. His proſperity went hand in hand with his piety; he fortified his dominions, built new cities, ſubdued the Ammonites, and brought them under tribute for three years, and becauſe he had choſen God's ways, he became mighty under his protection.

3. Too ſoon for his people he finiſhed his happy reign: farther particulars of which were recorded in the annals of Judah long ſince periſhed. The unworthy ſon who ſucceeded him, made the loſs of ſuch a king more ſenſibly felt and lamented by every true Iſraelite.

CHAP. XXVIII.

We have here, 1. Ahaz's wickedneſs, ver. 1—4. His diſtreſs from the kings of Syria and Iſrael, ver. 5—8. 3. The army of Iſrael reproved for afflicting Judah, ver. 9—11. and the impreſſion it made upon them, ver. 12—15. 4. Ahaz's ſufferings from the Edomites, ver. 16, 17. the Philiſtines, ver. 18, 19. and the Aſſyrians, ver. 20, 21. 5. The continuance of his idolatry notwithſtanding, ver. 22—25. 6. His death and burial, ver. 26, 27.

742.

1. [a] AHAZ was twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned ſixteen years in Jeruſalem: but he did not that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, like David his father. 2. For [b] he walked in the ways of the kings of Iſrael, and made alſo molten images for Baalim. 3. Moreover, he burnt incenſe in the valley of the ſon of Hinnom, and [c] burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had caſt out before the children of Iſrael. 4. He ſacrificed alſo, and burnt incenſe [d] in the high places, and on the hills, and [e] under every green tree. 5. [f] Wherefore the LORD his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria, and they ſmote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to † Damaſcus: and he was alſo delivered into the hand of the king of Iſrael, who ſmote him with a great ſlaughter.

[a] 2 Kings xvi. 2, &c.
[b] Chap. xxi. 6.
[c] Lev. xviii. 21. Pſal. cvi. 37.
[d] Lev. xxvi. 30.
[e] Deut. xii. 2.
[f] Judg. ii. 14. iv. 2. & vi. 1.
† Heb. Darmeſek.

v. 1—5. Ahaz, the degenerate ſon of a pious father, no ſooner came to the crown, than he ſunk into every abomination, following the ways of wicked Iſrael, and ſerving Baalim as the heathens around him: yea, ſo mad was he upon his idols, that he ſpared not his own children, but burnt them in honour of Moloch. Swift vengeance overtook him. The hoſts of Syria defeated his army, plundered his country, and captivated his people; and Iſrael ſeconded the blow with a very great ſlaughter. Note, They who ſell themſelves to work wickedneſs, ſhall ſurely receive the wages of their ſin in condign ſuffering.

Before Chriſt 741.

6. ¶ For [g] Pekah the ſon of Remaliah ſlew in Judah an hundred and twenty thouſand in one day, which were all † valiant men; [h] becauſe they had forſaken the LORD God of their fathers. 7. And Zichri a mighty man of Ephraim ſlew Maaſeiah the king's ſon, and Azrikam the governor of the houſe, and Elkanah that was next to the king. 8. And the children of Iſrael carried away captive of their brethren, two hundred thouſand women, ſons and daughters, and took alſo away much ſpoil from them, and brought the ſpoil to Samaria. 9. But a prophet of the LORD was there, whoſe name was Oded: and he went out before the hoſt that came to Samaria, and ſaid unto them, Behold, [i] becauſe the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have ſlain them in a rage [k] that reacheth up unto heaven. 10. And now ye purpoſe to keep under the children of Judah and Jeruſalem for [l] bond-men, and bond-women unto you: [m] but are there not with you, even with you, ſins againſt the LORD your God? 11. Now hear me therefore, and deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: for the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you. 12. Then certain of the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the ſon of Johanan, Berechiah the ſon of Meſhillemoth, and Jehizkiah the ſon of Shallum, and Amaſa the ſon of Hadlai, ſtood up againſt them that came from the war: 13. And ſaid unto them, Ye ſhall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended againſt the LORD already, ye intend to add more to our ſins and to our treſpaſs: for our treſpaſs is great, and there is fierce wrath againſt Iſrael. 14. So the armed men left the captives and the ſpoil, before the princes and all the congregation. 15. And the men [n] which were expreſſed by name, roſe up, and took the captives, and with the ſpoil clothed all that were naked among them, and arayed them, and ſhod them, and [o] gave them to eat and to drink, and [p] anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon aſſes, and brought them to Jericho, [q] the city of palm trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

[g] 2 Kings xv. 27.
† Heb. Sons of valour.
[h] Chap. xv. 2.
[i] Pſal. lxix. 26. Iſa. x. 5. & xlvii. 6. Ezek. xxv. 12, 15. Obad. x, &c. Zech. i. 15.
[k] Ezra ix. 6.
[l] Lev. xxv. 39, 42.
[m] Jer. xxv. 29.
[n] Ver. 12.
[o] Prov. xxv. 21. Rom. xii. 20.
[p] Luke x. 34.
[q] Deut. xxxiv. 43. Judg. i. 16.

v. 6—15. Wicked inſtruments are often made the ſcourges of righteous vengeance.

1. Triumphant Iſrael tramples down the ſtrength of treacherous Judah. One hundred and twenty thouſand men fall by the ſword, and double that number of women and children are led away captive. The king's ſon and his principal officers fell in the battle, and the country is ravaged and plundered. When God is departed, all our defence is gone.

2. The Lord ſends a prophet to the people of Iſrael to rebuke the ſeverity with which they had ſtained their victory. He met them on their return to Samaria, and warns them from God. The victory they had obtained was not the effect of their valour or goodneſs, but God's wrath againſt Judah. Cruel was the ſlaughter they had made, and which cried to God for vengeance againſt them; and hard the bondage, which as an iron yoke they would lay on their brethren: but let them conſider their own ſins, and be confounded, and juſtly fear a return of greater ſeverity on themſelves. To avert which, he enjoins them inſtantly to releaſe their captives, elſe the fierce wrath of God would quickly overtake them. Note, (1.) Cruelty to an enemy is a great crime: even in a juſt war much blood-guiltineſs may lie at our door. (2.) They who are ſenſible of their own ſins, will be moſt compaſſionate to the ſufferings of others. (3.) Bleſſed are the merciful, for they ſhall obtain mercy.

3. The princes ſtruck with this divine admonition, immediately interpoſed with the men of war, inſiſted the captives ſhould be brought no farther, warned them of the anger of God againſt their cruelty, and confeſſing how much ſin already lay upon them, reſolved not to add this to the meaſure of it, the enſlaving their brethren. Overcome by the remonſtrance, the men of war nobly yielded up both priſoners and ſpoil; and with tender care and liberal proviſion, the princes took care ſafely to carry them to Jericho, that they might thence return to their own homes. Note, (1.) It is better to take warning late than never. (2.) The victory of ſelf-denial, is greater than the necks of vanquiſhed foes. (3.) They who are mighty ſhould be merciful; this is their greateſt honour.

740.

16. ¶ At that time [r] did king Ahaz ſend unto the kings of Aſſyria [s] to help him. 17. For [t] again the Edomites had come and ſmitten Judah, and carried away † captives.

[r] 2 Kings xvi. 7.
[s] Jer. xvii. 5.
[t] Lev. xxvi. 18.
† Heb. A captivity.

captives. 18. [u] The Philiſtines alſo had invaded the cities of the low-country, and of the ſouth of Judah, and had taken Beth-ſhemeſh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shocho, with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo alſo and the villages thereof: and they dwelt there. 19. For the LORD brought Judah low, becauſe of Ahaz king of Iſrael; for [x] he made Judah naked, and tranſgreſſed ſore againſt the LORD. 20. And [y] Tilgath-pilneſer king of Aſſyria came unto him, and [z] diſtreſſed him, but ſtrengthned him not. 21. For Ahaz took away a portion out of the houſe of the LORD: and out of the houſe of the king, and of the princes, and [a] gave it unto the king of Aſſyria: but he helped him not. 22. ¶ And [b] in the time of his diſtreſs did he treſpaſs yet more againſt the LORD: this is that king Ahaz. 23. For [c] he ſacrificed unto the gods of Damaſcus, which ſmote him: and he ſaid, Becauſe the gods of the kings of Syria [d] help them, therefore will I ſacrifice to them, that they may help me: but they were the ruin of him and of all Iſrael. 24. And Ahaz gathered together the veſſels of the houſe of God, and [e] cut in pieces the veſſels of the houſe of God, and [f] ſhut up the doors of the houſe of the LORD, and he made him altars in every corner of Jeruſalem. 25. And in every ſeveral city of Judah he made high places to ‡ burn incenſe unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers. 26. ¶ Now the reſt of his acts, and of all his ways, firſt and laſt, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Iſrael. 27. And Ahaz ſlept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jeruſalem: but they brought him not into the ſepulchres of the kings of Iſrael: and Hezekiah his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

Before Christ 740.
[u] Ezek. xvi. 27, 57.
[x] Exod. xxxii. 25.
[y] 2 Kings xv. 29.
[z] Iſa. xxxi. 1, 2.
[a] 2 Kings xii. 18. & xviii. 6.
[b] Iſa. i. 5. 2 Tim. iii. 13.
[c] 2 Kings xvi. 12.
739.
[d] Pſal. cxv. 4, &c. Hab. i. 11.
[e] 2 Kings xvi. 14.
[f] Chap. xxix. 3.
‡ Or offer.

v. 16—27. When a ſtate is weakned and ſinking, the meaneſt foe ſpurns at it. Sin had left the land naked, expoſed to every invader, and unable to reſiſt. Edom and Philiſtia joined Syria and Iſrael in their ravages; the cities are taken, the inhabitants led captive, and Ahaz reduced to deep diſtreſs. We have here,

1. The unſucceſsful attempt he made to extricate himſelf from his difficulties. By impoveriſhing himſelf, and emptying his treaſures, as well as robbing the houſe of God, and fleecing the princes, he engaged the king of Aſſyria, to make a diverſion in his favour, but he received no benefit from him, for his auxiliaries diſtreſſed him as much as his enemies. Note, They who forſake God, muſt needs be diſappointed in every other confidence.

2. The aggravated wickedneſs of this infatuated king. Unmoved by all God's judgments, he hardned his heart in idolatry; grew worſe under theſe reproofs, and inſtead of repenting of his ſins, he added to his ſtrange gods; ſhut up the temple, defaced and deſtroyed the veſſels; and inſtead of one altar, ſet up multitudes in every corner of Jeruſalem, to ſacrifice to the idols of Syria, as if the ſucceſs of the Syrians were owing to their influence, and he hoped to be helped by them: but alas! found to his coſt, that he only haſtned his own and his people's ruin. This is that Ahaz, a monſter of iniquity, and branded in the book of God with everlaſting infamy. Note, When judgments harden, inſtead of humbling, the caſe ſeems very deſperate.

3. God was graciouſly pleaſed to rid the kingdom of this heavy plague, and in the midſt of his days cut down this wicked king. Nor would the men of Judah ſuffer him to lie among his godly progenitors, but caſt him into a common grave, an intimation of that awful and eternal ſeparation, that after death ſhall be made between the righteous and the wicked.

CHAP. XXIX.

Hezekiah's godly reign we may with pleaſure a ſecond time peruſe. Here is, 1. His exhortation to the prieſts and Levites, on reſtoring the temple-ſervice, ver. 1—11. 2. The care the Levites took to cleanſe the temple, ver. 12—19. 3. A ſolemn revival of God's neglected ordinances, ver. 20—36.

1. [a] HEZEKIAH began to reign when he was five and twenty years old, and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jeruſalem: and his mother's name was Abijah the daughter of [b] Zechariah. 2. And he did that which was right in the ſight of the LORD, [c] according to all that David his father had done. 3. ¶ He in the firſt year of his reign, in the firſt month, [d] opened the doors of the houſe of the LORD, and repaired them. 4. And he brought in the prieſts, and the Levites, and gathered them together in the eaſt-ſtreet. 5. And ſaid unto them, Hear me, ye Levites, [e] ſanctify now yourſelves, and ſanctify the houſe of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthineſs out of the holy place. 6. For our fathers have treſpaſſed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forſaken him, and [f] have turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and turned their backs. 7. Alſo [g] they have ſhut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incenſe, nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place, unto the God of Iſrael. 8. [h] Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jeruſalem, and he hath delivered them to † trouble, to aſtoniſhment, and to [i] hiſſing, as ye ſee with your eyes. 9. For lo, [k] our fathers have fallen by the ſword, and our ſons, and our daughters, and our wives are in captivity for this. 10. Now it is in mine heart [l] to make a covenant with the LORD God of Iſrael, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us. 11. My ſons, ‡ be not now negligent: for the LORD hath [m] choſen you to ſtand before him, to ſerve him, and that you ſhould miniſter unto him, and ‖ burn incenſe.

[a] 2 Kings xviii. 1, &c.
[b] Chap. xxvi. 5.
[c] 1 Kings xv. 5.
726.
[d] Chap. xxviii. 24.

Before Christ 726.
[e] Exod. xix. 10, 15. 1 Chron. xv. 12.
[f] Jer. ii. 27. Ezek. viii. 16.
[g] Chap. xxviii. 24.
[h] Ibid. 5, 19.
† Heb. Commotion. Deut. xxviii. 25.
[i] 1 Kings ix. 8.
[k] Lev. xxvi. 17. Chap. xxviii. 5, 6, 8.
[l] 2 Kings xi. 4.
‡ Or be not deceived, or are not. 1 Cor. iii. 10.
[m] Deut. viii. 14. & xviii. 2, 6.
‖ Or offer ſacrifices.

v. 1—11. No ſooner is the crown devolved to Hezekiah, than with unremitting zeal he ſets himſelf to repair the late deſolations of God's houſe, and recover the people from their dreadful apoſtacy. His heart was right with God, as David's, and religion his firſt and great concern. Happy the land that hath ſuch a king.

1. He opens and repairs the doors of God's houſe, where of late had neither been incenſe or offering. Probably though no public ſervice had been maintained there, the ſacred fire was ſtill preſerved.

2. He convokes the prieſts and Levites, who ſeem to have too much correſponded with the ſad changes of the laſt reign, and to have teſtified little zeal for a reformation: in this auguſt aſſembly, he laments the evils of their fathers, their neglect of God and his ſervice, and juſtly aſcribes thereto all the miſeries they had ſuffered, and under which they yet groaned. He declares his own intentions to join himſelf ſolemnly in covenant with God, and admoniſhes them heartily to aſſiſt him in the reſtoration of God's worſhip, and the reformation of the people. As prieſts and Levites, they were eſpecially obliged to purify their own ſouls, and ſhew zeal and diligence for others; the honour God had put on them, ſhould quicken them in his ſervice; and as the father of his people, he addreſſes them as ſons, by every endearing entreaty, engaging them to that which was ſo evidently their duty. Note, (1.) They who neglect God's ordinances, declare thereby their apoſtacy from him. The perſons, the family who neglect the lamp of God's word, and offer no daily incenſe of prayer and praiſe, cannot but be in a ſtate of terrible guilt. (2.) There is no way of averting God's fierce anger, but by a penitent return to him in his inſtituted way. (3.) When God ſtirs up our heart to deſire to return, then there is hope. (4.) It is in vain to attempt reforming others, till we have firſt begun with our own ſouls. (5.) A negligent miniſter is a moſt criminal character.

12. ¶ Then the Levites aroſe, Mahath the ſon of Amaſai, and Joel the ſon of Azariah, of the ſons of the Kohathites: and the ſons of Merari; Kiſh the ſon of Abdi, and Azariah the ſon of Jehalelel: and of the Gerſhonites; Joah the ſon of Zimmah, and Eden the ſon of Joah: 13. And the ſons of Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and [n] of the ſons of Aſaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah: 14. And of the ſons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the ſons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel. 15. And they gathered their brethren, and ſanctified themſelves, and came according to the commandment of the king, † by the words of the LORD, to cleanſe the houſe of the LORD. 16. And the prieſts went into the inner part of the houſe of the LORD, to cleanſe it, and brought out all the uncleanneſs that they found in the temple of the LORD, into the court of the houſe of the LORD. And the Levites took it to carry it out abroad [o] into the brook Kidron. 17. Now they began on the firſt day of the firſt month to ſanctify, and on the eighth day of the month, came they to the porch of the LORD: ſo they ſanctified the houſe of the LORD in eight days, and in the ſixteenth day of the firſt month they made an end. 18. Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and ſaid, [n] 1 Chron. xxv. 1, 2.

† Or in the buſineſs of, &c. Chap. x. 12.
[o] Deut. ix. 21.

We have cleanſed all the houſe of the LORD, and the altar of burnt-offering, with all the veſſels thereof, and the ſhew-bread table, with all the veſſels thereof. 19. Moreover, all the veſſels [p] which king Ahaz in his reign did caſt away in his tranſgreſſion, have we prepared and ſanctified, and behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

[p] Chap. xxviii. 24.

v. 12—19. The firſt ſervice neceſſary was the thorough cleanſing of the houſe of the Lord, which had been ſo long neglected, and to which with diligence and earneſtneſs the principal Levites then addreſſed themſelves, according to the commandment of the king, and agreeably to God's will, gathering their brethren, and united in the ſame work: many hands and zeal for the cauſe made great diſpatch. In eight days they had thoroughly purged the houſe, and brightened the veſſels of ſervice; in eight more the courts were cleanſed, and the filth was carried to the brook Kidron, that ran at the foot of the hill on which the temple was built. Thus began the happy year; and Hezekiah with pleaſure heard that all things were ready for renewing the interrupted worſhip of God. Note, (1.) Much may be done in a ſhort time, when we are truly engaged in the work. (2.) When zealous miniſters lead the way, they provoke their brethren to jealouſy. (3.) If they were ſo careful to purge the temple from filth, how much more ſo ſhould we be, who are conſecrated prieſts unto God, to cleanſe the temple of our hearts from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, that God alone may be exalted there?

20. ¶ Then Hezekiah the king roſe [q] early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the houſe of the LORD. 21. And [r] they brought ſeven bullocks, and ſeven rams, and ſeven lambs, and ſeven he-goats, for [r] a ſin-offering for the kingdom, and for the ſanctuary, and for Judah: and he commanded the prieſts, the ſons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the LORD. 22. So they killed the bullocks, and the prieſts received the blood, and [s] ſprinkled it on the altar: likewiſe when they had killed the rams, they ſprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed alſo the lambs, and they ſprinkled the blood upon the altar. 23. And they brought † forth the he-goats for the ſin-offering, before the king and the congregation, and [t] they laid their hands upon them: 24. And the prieſts killed them, and they made [u] reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, [x] to make an atonement for all Iſrael: for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and the ſin-offering ſhould be made for all Iſrael. 25. And [y] he ſet the Levites in the houſe of the LORD with cymbals, with pſalteries, and with harps, [z] according to the commandment of David, and of Gad the king's ſeer, and Nathan the prophet: [a] for ſo was the commandment ‡ of the LORD ‡ by his prophets. 26. And the Levites ſtood with [b] the inſtruments of David, and the prieſts [c] with the trumpets: 27. And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar: and when the burnt offering began, [d] the ſong of the LORD began alſo with the trumpets, and with the inſtruments [e] ordained by David king of Iſrael. 28. And all the congregation worſhipped, and ‖ the ſingers ſang, and the trumpeters ſounded: and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finiſhed. 29. And when they had made an end of offering, [f] the king and all that were preſent with him, bowed themſelves and worſhipped. 30. Moreover, Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to ſing praiſe unto the LORD, with the words of David, and [g] of Aſaph the ſeer: and they ſang praiſes with gladneſs, and they bowed their heads and worſhipped. 31. Then Hezekiah anſwered and ſaid, Now ye have § conſecrated yourſelves unto the LORD, come near and bring ſacrifices and [h] thank-offerings into the houſe of the LORD. And the congregation brought in ſacrifices and thank-offerings, and as many as were of a free heart burnt-offerings. 32. And the number of the burnt-offerings which the congregation brought, was threeſcore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all theſe were for a burnt-offering to the LORD. 33. And the conſecrated things were ſix hundred oxen and three thouſand ſheep. 34. But the prieſts were too few, ſo that [i] they could not ſlay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore [k] their brethren the Levites † did help them till the work was ended, and until the other prieſts had ſanctified themſelves: for the Levites [l] were more upright in heart, to ſanctify themſelves than the prieſts. 35. And alſo the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with [m] the fat of the peace-offerings, and [n] the drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. So the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD was ſet in order. 36. And [o] Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done ſuddenly.

[q] Gen. xxii. 3. Exod. xxiv. 4. Pſal. cxix. 60.
[r] 1 Chron. xv. 26. Lev. iv. 3, 14.
[s] Lev. viii. 14, &c. Hebr. ix. 21, 22.
† Heb. Near.
[t] Lev. iv. 15, 24.
[u] Gal. iii. 13. Col. i. 20.
[x] Rom. iii. 25.
[y] 1 Chron. xvi. 4. & xxv. 6.
[z] 1 Chron. xxiii. 5. & xxv. 1. Chap. viii. 14.
[a] Chap. xxx. 12.
‡‡ Heb. By the hand of, &c.
[b] 1 Chron. xxiii. 5. Amos vi. 5.
[c] Num. x. 10.
[d] Pſal. cxxvi. 1.
[e] Chap. xxiii. 18.
‖ Heb. They ſang the ſong.
[f] Chap. xx. Ver. 28.
[g] Pſal. l. Title.
§ Heb. Filled your hand.
[h] Lev. vii. 12.
[i] Ibid. i. 5, 6.
[k] Chap. xxxv. 11.
† Heb. Strengthened them.
[l] Chap. xxx. 3.
[m] Exod. xxix. 13.
[n] Lev. xxiii. 13.
[o] 1 Chron. xxix. 9.

v. 20—36. No ſooner is the houſe ready, than Hezekiah is eager to be there. Early the next morning he aroſe, ſummoned the rulers to attend him, and went up to the courts of God's ſanctuary.

1. He opened the ſervice with ſacrifices of atonement for the people in general; all ranks and degrees having been greatly offenders; and king, prieſts and people alike culpable. One goat was only appointed, but in the view of their great tranſgreſſions, and the long neglect of ſacrifices, they offered ſeven; the king and people ſolemnly confeſſing their iniquities, and laying their hands on the heads of their ſacrifices. Note, (1.) There is no returning to God without the atoning blood of Jeſus; repentance without that, could profit us nothing. (2.) They who by faith lay their hands on their redeemer, transferring all their guilt to him, ſhall find him a Saviour to the uttermoſt.

2. Burnt-offerings of thankſgiving accompanied the ſacrifices of atonement. When God is reconciled, praiſe and thankfulneſs are our bounden duty.

3. Whilſt the offerings were burning, the Levites were, according to the diſpoſition of David, praiſing God with inſtruments of muſick; and the king and people now emboldened to draw near the throne of grace, repeatedly bowed the head, and worſhipped. Note, All our praiſes and prayers are then acceptable when they aſcend in the name of Jeſus Chriſt, and in the virtue of his one oblation once offered.

4. As the miniſtrations were renewed, Hezekiah exhorts the people liberally to ſupply God's altar, and to draw near to him as his reconciled people: nor were they backward to receive the exhortation, but willingly, according to their abilities, brought, the more generous, burnt-offerings which were wholly conſumed, and others peace-offerings in abundance, on part of which themſelves feaſted. Note, (1.) They who love God's altar, will delight to ſupport the ſervice. (2.) Paſt neglect ſhould quicken us to more abundant diligence.

5. The prieſts were not ſufficient to offer the ſacrifices, many of them had been defiled with idols, and might be ſuſpended from their office; others wanted zeal for the ſervice, and neglected to ſanctify themſelves. The Levites in general had been more upright, and many of them were now employed in helping to ſlay the ſacrifices, for want of more prieſts to whom that office properly belonged: and this, though not according to the law, was from the neceſſity of the caſe, diſpenſed with. Note, (1.) They who ſhould be the firſt to encourage the revival of godlineſs, to their ſhame are often the laſt. (2.) When the heart is upright and zealous for God, and they whoſe duty it is to labour in the miniſtry are negligent, God will not blame what men may call irregularity in the ſervice.

6. It was matter of univerſal joy to ſee the bleſſed change. The king and people could not but obſerve the hand of God, preparing and diſpoſing them ſo readily to join in the ſervice; and the expedition and eaſe with which the work was done, was a farther manifeſtation of the Divine bleſſing upon them. Note, They who ſet about God's work, though at firſt the difficulties appear arduous and inſurmountable, will often find the mountain before Zerubbabel become a plain. God has men's hearts in his hand, and can bow the moſt ſtubborn to ready compliance.

CHAP. XXX.

We have here, 1. A ſolemn paſſover appointed to be obſerved, ver. 1—5. 2. The invitation Hezekiah ſent to Judah and Iſrael to come to keep it, ver. 1, 6—12. 3. The joyful celebration of it, ver. 13—27.

1. AND Hezekiah ſent to all Iſrael and Judah, and wrote letters alſo to Ephraim and Manaſſeh, that they ſhould come to the houſe of the LORD [a] at Jeruſalem, to keep [b] the paſſover unto the LORD God of Iſrael. 2. For the king had taken counſel, and his princes and all the congregation in Jeruſalem, to keep the paſſover [c] in the ſecond month. 3. For they could not keep it [d] at that time, [e] becauſe the prieſts had not ſanctified themſelves ſufficiently, neither had the people gathered themſelves together to Jeruſalem. 4. And the thing † pleaſed the king, and all the congregation. 5. So they eſtabliſhed a decree, to make proclamation throughout all Iſrael, from Beer-ſheba even to Dan, that they

[a] Deut. xvi. 5, 6.
[b] 1 Cor. v. 7.
[c] Num. ix. 10, 11.
[d] Exod. xii. 18. Lev. xxiii. 5.
[e] Chap. xxix. 34.
† Heb. Was right in the eyes of, &c.

they ſhould come to keep the paſſover unto the LORD God of Iſrael at Jeruſalem: for they had not done it of a long time in ſuch ſort as it was written. 6. So the poſts went with the letters from the king and his princes throughout all Iſrael and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, ſaying, Ye children of Iſrael, [f] turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iſrael, [g] and he will return to the remnant of you, [h] that are eſcaped out of the hand of the kings of Aſſyria. 7. And [i] be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which treſpaſſed againſt the LORD God of their fathers, [k] who therefore gave them up to deſolation, as ye ſee. 8. Now be ye not ſtiff-necked [l] as your fathers were, but ‡ yield yourſelves unto the LORD, and enter into his ſanctuary, which he hath ſanctified for ever: and ſerve the LORD your God, that the fierceneſs of his wrath may turn away from you. 9. For [m] if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children [n] ſhall find compaſſion before them that lead them captive, ſo that they ſhall come again unto this land: for [o] the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him. 10. So the poſts paſſed from city to city, through the country of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, even unto Zebulun: but [p] they laughed them to ſcorn, and mocked them. 11. Nevertheleſs, [q] divers of Aſher and Manaſſeh, and of Zebulun, humbled themſelves, and came to Jeruſalem. 12. Alſo in Judah, [r] the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king, and of the princes, [s] by the word of the LORD.

v. 1—12. The engagements which employed them in the firſt ordering the ſervice, the fewneſs of the prieſts which were prepared, and the diſtance of the people to whom proper notice could not be given, cauſed the time appointed for the paſſover in the firſt month to elapſe. But Hezekiah was very unwilling to neglect the ſolemn ordinance, and therefore, as the law had made proviſion, Numb. ix. 11. that thoſe perſons who were unavoidably prevented, might keep it in the ſecond month, he thought, with the advice of his nobles, that this was equally applicable to the whole congregation. Therefore,

1. He ſends meſſengers with circular letters, not only through Judah, but the cities of Iſrael. He wanted them not to return under his government, but to ſeek the favour of that God whom they had forſaken. He exhorts them to embrace the preſent opportunity, and by an unfeigned ſurrender of themſelves to God, continue no longer rebellious and ſtiff-necked as their fathers, leſt their obſtinacy ſhould iſſue in their ruin. Severe had been the corrections that for their apoſtacy they had endured; a ſmall remnant of them only now remained. Their ſufferings at leaſt ſhould make them wiſe, and engage them to ſeek the ſlighted ſanctuary of God: and highly it was their intereſt, as well as duty, for by no other means could they hope to avert the fierce wrath of God gone forth againſt them. But if now they humbled themſelves, God would remember his covenant with their fathers, and ſhew himſelf gracious and merciful according to the promiſes, and not turn his face from them in anger, but lift up the light of his countenance to comfort them, and reſtore their brethren from captivity. Note, (1.) It is never too late for the ſinner to return, whilſt the calls of grace ſound in his ears, and the promiſes afford a ground of hope. (2.) Nothing can prove the deſperate ſtubbornneſs of the ſinner's heart, ſo much as his inſenſibility to the gracious invitations of God. (3.) Impenitence perſiſted in, muſt neceſſarily be fatal. (4.) When we have done all we can to beſeech men by the mercies of God to return to him, if they obſtinately refuſe, their blood then is on their own heads; we are free.

2. The meſſengers meet with very different entertainment. The king of Iſrael gave them no obſtruction in the execution of their commiſſion; but the people of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, and the reſt in general, not only ſlighted the meſſage, but derided the meſſengers. Some however felt the weighty contents of the letters, and with deep humiliation before God for their paſt abominations, gladly embrace the opportunity of coming to Jeruſalem to keep the paſſover. The men of Judah were happily more unanimous; God bowed their hearts, as the heart of one man, to come according to God's word, and the king's command, to the ſolemn feſtival. Note, (1.) It is no uncommon thing for the meſſengers of God to be mocked for their meſſage ſake. (2.) Their diſeaſe ſeems very deſperate, who thus impiouſly reject the only method of cure. (3.) Of the multitudes to whom the goſpel is preached, few, comparatively, receive it. (4.) It is a comfort to God's miniſters, that ſome at leaſt hear and fear. (5.) When God brings a ſinner to humiliation, then there is hope. (6.) If any man is inclined or enabled to return to God, this muſt be acknowledged as his gift.

[f] Ezek. xxxiii. 11. Joel ii. 12.
[g] 1 Sam. ii. 30. Chap. xv. 2..
[h] 2 Kings xv. 19, 29.
[i] Ezek. xx. 18.
[k] Chap. xxix. 8.
[l] Exod. xxxii. 9.
‡ Heb. Give the hand unto, &c. 1Chron. xxix. 24. Ezra x. 19.
[m] Chap. vii. 14.
[n] Pſ. cvi. 46.
[o] Exod. xxxiv. 6.
[p] Chap. xxxvi. 16.
[q] So Chap. xi. 16. Ver. 18. Acts xvii. 34.
[r] Pſ. cx. 3.
[s] Exod. xii. 6.

13. ¶ And there aſſembled at Jeruſalem much people, to keep the feaſt of unleavened bread in the ſecond month, a very great congregation. 14. And they aroſe and took away [t] the altars that were in Jeruſalem, and all the altars for incenſe took they away, and caſt them into the brook Kidron. 15. Then they killed the paſſover on the fourteenth day of the ſecond month: and the prieſts and the Levites [u] were aſhamed, and ſanctified themſelves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the houſe of the LORD. 16. And they ſtood in their place after their manner, [x] according to the law of Moſes the man of God: the prieſts ſprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites. 17. For there were many in the congregation that were not ſanctified: [y] therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the paſſovers, for every one that was not clean, to ſanctify them unto the LORD. 18. For [z] a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, Iſſachar, and Zebulun, [a] had not cleanſed themſelves, yet did they eat the paſſover, otherwiſe than it was written: but Hezekiah prayed for them, ſaying, The good LORD pardon every one 19. That prepareth his heart to ſeek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleanſed according to [b] the purification of the ſanctuary. 20. And the LORD hearkned to Hezekiah, [c] and healed the people.

v. 13—20. A vaſt congregation being aſſembled on the fourteenth day of the ſecond month,

1. They prepared for the celebration of the paſſover, by removing every idol altar that was found in Jeruſalem. Note, When we truly return to God, it will be our care to put away iniquity from us.

2. The zeal of the people ſhamed the prieſts and Levites, and ſtirred them up with earneſtneſs to ſanctify themſelves, that they might be ready for their work; the Levites to bring, and the prieſts to ſprinkle the blood of the ſacrifices. Note, (1.) The hope of the ſinner is this blood of ſprinkling. (2.) Others zeal ſhould provoke us to jealouſy.

3. Becauſe many maſters of families were ceremonially unclean, the Levites killed the paſſover for them; yet were they admitted to eat it, though they were not prepared according to the divine preſcription.

4. Hezekiah, who obſerved the irregularity, failed not to cry to God to pardon it. The ſhortneſs of the notice permitted not thoſe who in ſincerity deſired to pleaſe God, to be cleanſed according to the purification of the ſanctuary; therefore he prays the good Lord that it might be forgiven. Note, (1.) If our ſouls are ſimply deſirous to ſeek God, he will pity and pardon our infirmities. (2.) In our beſt approaches to God, ſomething ſtill is wanting: we attain not to all that meaſure of love, and zeal, and purity, which God's ſervice requires. (3.) Therefore, amidſt all our other petitions, we ſhould never forget to beg forgiveneſs for the evil which cleaves to the beſt things we do.

5. In anſwer to Hezekiah's prayers, God healed the breach their ſin had made, and graciouſly embraced them in the arms of his pardoning mercy.

21. And the children of Iſrael that were preſent at Jeruſalem, [d] kept the feaſt of unleavened bread ſeven days with great gladneſs: and the Levites and the prieſts praiſed the LORD day by day, ſinging with † loud inſtruments unto the LORD. 22. And Hezekiah ſpake ‡ comfortably unto all the Levites [e] that taught the good knowledge of the LORD; and they did eat throughout the feaſt ſeven days, offering peace-offerings, and making confeſſion to the LORD God of their fathers. 23. And the whole aſſembly took counſel to keep [f] other ſeven days; and they kept other ſeven days with gladneſs. 24. For Hezekiah king of Judah § did [g] give to the congregation a thouſand bullocks, and ſeven thouſand ſheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thouſand bullocks, and ten thouſand ſheep; and a great number of prieſts ſanctified themſelves. 25. And all the congregation of Judah, with the prieſts and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Iſrael, and the ſtrangers that came out of the land of Iſrael, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced. 26. So there was great joy in Jeruſalem; for ſince the time of Solomon the ſon of David, king of Iſrael, there was not the like in Jeruſalem. 27. ¶ Then the prieſts the Levites aroſe, and [h] bleſſed the people; and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to ‖ his holy dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

[t] Chap. xxviii. 24.
[u] Chap. xxix. 34.
[x] Num. xviii. 7.
[y] Chap. xxix. 34.
[z] Ver. 11.
[a] Num. xix. 20. See Pſ. li. 17. 1 Cor. xi. 28.
[b] Exod. xii. 43, &c.
[c] Pſ. ciii. 3. Iſa. lvii. 18.
[d] Exod. xii. 15. Lev. xxiii. 6, &c. 1 Cor. v. 7, 8.
† Heb. Inſtruments of ſtrength.
‡ Heb. To the heart. Iſa. xl. 2.
[e] Chap. xxxv. 3.
[f] See 1 Kings viii. 65.
§ Heb. Lifted up, or offered.
[g] See Chap. xxxv. 7, 8.
[h] Num. vi. 23.
‖ Heb. The habitation of his holineſs. Pſ. lxviii. 5.

v. 21—27. The ſeven days of unleavened bread followed the paſſover, and they were ſpent in ſacrifices and holy joy before the Lord. Hezekiah nobly ſupplied the altar with a thouſand bullocks, and ſeven thouſand ſheep, for peace-offerings, and the people with proviſion; and the princes, quickned by his zeal, emulated his example. The Levites, comforted and encouraged by the king, diligently inſtructed the people in the good word of God, aſſiſted them in their devotions, whilſt they confeſſed their ſins, and acknowledged the undeſerved mercy they now experienced; and every day they praiſed God in pſalms, and made melody in their hearts unto God. Great was the joy of all the aſſembly; and, happy in the ſervice, they prolonged it ſeven days more, and then parted, after the prieſts had pronounced the benediction, and God from heaven ratified the bleſſing. Note, (1.) They who are great, are called eſpecially to be generous. (2.) When we appear before God, it becomes us to rejoice in his mercy. (3.) A word of comfortable encouragement is the wages due to faithful labourers. (4.) In all our approaches to God, confeſſion of ſin ought never to be forgotten. (5.) They who truly love God's ſervice, will not think any time ſpent in it long. (6.) When God's miniſters bleſs in his name, he will confirm their word, and beſtow the benediction they pronounce.

CHAP. XXXI.

We have here, 1. The deſtruction of the remainders of idolatry, ver. 1. 2. The miniſters of the ſanctuary employed and provided for, ver. 2—10. 3. Commiſſioners appointed for the due diſtribution of what was brought in for their maintenance, ver. 11—19. 4. Hezekiah's ſincerity in all his undertakings, ver. 20, 21.

1. NOW when all this was finiſhed, all Iſrael that were † preſent, went out to the cities of Judah, [a] and brake the images in pieces, and [b] cut down the groves, and [c] threw down the high places, and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim alſo and Manaſſeh, until they had utterly deſtroyed them all. Then all the children of Iſrael returned every man to his poſſeſſion into their own cities. 2. ¶ And Hezekiah appointed [d] the courſes of the prieſts and the Levites after their courſes, every man according to his ſervice, the prieſts and [e] Levites for burnt-offerings, and for peace-offerings, to miniſter and to give thanks, and to praiſe in the gates of the tents of the LORD. 3. He appointed alſo [f] the king's portion of his ſubſtance, for the burnt-offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt-offerings, and the burnt-offerings for the ſabbaths, and for the new moons, and for the ſet feaſts, [g] as it is written in the law of the LORD. 4. Moreover, he commanded the people that dwelt in Jeruſalem, [h] to give the portion of the prieſts and the Levites, that they might be encouraged [i] in the law of the LORD. 5. ¶ And as ſoon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Iſrael brought in abundance [k] the firſt-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and ‡ honey, and of all the increaſe of the field, and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly. 6. And concerning the children of Iſrael and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they alſo brought in the tithe of oxen and ſheep, and [l] the tithe of holy things which were conſecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them § by heaps. 7. In the third month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finiſhed them [m] in the ſeventh month. 8. And when Hezekiah and the princes came and ſaw the heaps, they bleſſed the LORD and his people Iſrael. 9. Then Hezekiah queſtioned with the prieſts and the Levites concerning the heaps. 10. And Azariah the chief prieſt of the houſe of Zadok, anſwered him, and ſaid, [n] Since the people began to bring the offerings into the houſe of the LORD, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for [o] the LORD hath bleſſed his people; and that which is left is this great ſtore.

† Heb. Found.
[a] 2 Kings xviii. 4. Chap. xiv. 3.
[b] Exod. xxxiv. 13.
[c] Deut. vii. 5.
[d] 1 Chron. xxiii. 6. & xxiv. 1.
[e] Num. viii. 19.
[f] See 1 Chron. xxix. 3.
[g] Numb. xxviii. & xxix.
[h] So Neh. xiii. 10, 11. 1 Cor. ix. 14.
[i] Iſa. viii. 20.
[k] Exod. xxii. 29.
‡ Or dates.
[l] Lev. xxvii, 30. Deut xiv. 28.
§ Heb. heaps heaps.
[m] Exod. xxiii. 16.
[n] Mal. iii. 10, 11.
[o] Hag. ii. 19.

v. 1—10. The gracious impreſſion God had made on the people's hearts ended not with the ordinance from whence they came, but they continued to make their profiting appear,

1. In the deſtruction of every idolatrous relick, not only in Judah, but alſo in Ephraim and Manaſſeh; out of thoſe cities at leaſt, from whence the people came up to Jeruſalem: and when this good work was done, they returned in peace every man to his own houſe. Note, (1.) It is comfortable returning to our home, when we carry along with us the bleſſing of God: (2.) They who truly cleave to God, have their hearts ſet againſt all ſin, without one allowed reſerve.

2. Hezekiah took care that the ſervice which was begun, ſhould be regularly carried on. The prieſts, Levites, and ſingers, in their ſeveral courſes, were appointed to miniſter before the Lord, and their maintenance provided for. He himſelf ſet the example, by appropriating a part of his revenue for the ſtated offerings, morning and evening, on the new moons, ſabbaths, and feſtivals; and he commanded his people to contribute to ſo good a work, for the encouragement of God's miniſters in their labours. Note, (1.) The ſupport of a godly miniſtry will be the care of wiſe and pious princes. (2.) They deſerve to be encouraged, who labour in the word and doctrine. (3.) God never intended any drones ſhould be fed in his hive. (4.) Whether we want or abound here, we know, if we are faithful, we cannot at laſt loſe our reward.

3. The people very readily obeyed the king's command: their firſtlings, tithes, and offerings were brought; and what was more than the prieſts and Levites could uſe, was laid on heaps, from the beginning to the end of harveſt. The quantity attracted the king's enquiry, and the high-prieſt informed him of God's bleſſing on the people, and that theſe juſt dues afforded them a plentiful maintenance, and enough for winter's ſtore. For ſuch mercies the king and princes bleſſed the Lord, and commended the people for their readineſs and faithful contribution. Note, (1.) None were ever loſers by a conſcientious rendering to God the things that are God's. (2.) Whatever good appears, God muſt be acknowledged as the bleſſed author of it. (3.) They who do well, deſerve commendation. (4.) The ſoul that hath profited by God's miniſters, will never grudge them a maintenance.

11. ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare † chambers in the houſe of the LORD; and they prepared them, 12. And brought in the offerings, and the tithes, and the dedicate things faithfully: over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next. 13. And Jehiel, and Azaziah, and Nahath, and Aſahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Iſmachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overſeers ‡ under the hand of Cononiah, and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the houſe of God. 14. And Kore the ſon of Imnah the Levite, the porter toward the eaſt, was over the free-will-offerings of God, to diſtribute the oblations of the LORD, and the moſt holy things. 15. And § next him were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeſhua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in [p] the cities of the prieſts, in their ‖ ſet office, to give to their brethren by courſes, as well to the great as to the ſmall. 16. Beſide their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entreth into the houſe of the LORD, † his daily portion for their ſervice in their charges, according to their courſes; 17. Both to the genealogy of the prieſts by the houſe of their fathers, and the Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges, by their courſes: 18. And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their ſons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their [q] ſet office they ſanctified themſelves in holineſs. 19. Alſo of the ſons of Aaron the prieſts, which were in [r] the fields of the ſuburbs of their cities, in every ſeveral city, the men that were expreſſed by name, to give portions to all the males among the prieſts, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies, among the Levites. 20. ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and [s] wrought that which was good and right and truth before the LORD his God. 21. And in every work that he began in the ſervice of the houſe of God, and in the law and in the commandments to ſeek his God, he did it with all his heart, and [t] proſpered.

† Or, ſtore-houſes.
‡ Heb. At the hand.
§ Heb. At his hand.
[p] Joſh. xxi. 9, &c.
‖ Or, truſt. Ver. 18.
† Heb. The portion for the things of a day in his day.
[q] Ver. 16.
[r] Lev. xxv, 34. Num. xxxv. 2.
[s] 2 Kings xx. 3.
[t] Prov. iii. 9, 10. Mal. iii. 10. Mat. vi. 33. 1 Tim. iv. 8.

v. 11—21. We have here,

1. The care which Hezekiah took of the tithes, and the equitable diſtribution of them. Keepers were appointed; chambers fitted up in the court of the temple, to lay up the ſtores; and whilſt they who in courſe waited in the temple, with their ſons from three years old and upwards, were entirely provided for, that they might wait on the Lord without diſtraction, they who lived in the cities or villages were not neglected; but every one received a proportionate ſupply, according to the largeneſs of their families. Note, (1.) Wiſe œconomy is the way to ſecure abiding plenty. (2.) They who wait upon the Lord with diligence, may confidently truſt him for a proviſion. (3.) Miniſters families, as well as themſelves, ſhould be conſidered, and taken care of. (4.) The unequal diſtribution of church revenues nues is a great evil. How unjuſt is it, that one ſhould loll in affluence and indolence, whilſt a laborious brother ſcarce eats bread from the altar at which he ſerves?

Before Chriſt 714.

> Pudet hæc opprobria nobis,
> Et dici potuiſſe, et non potuiſſe refelli.

2. Hezekiah's univerſally excellent character is remarked. All his people ſhared his pious regard: God had his heart; he was zealouſly affected in his bleſſed ſervice, and went through with it without declenſion, or wearineſs; and, as the effect of ſuch perſeverance, proſperity attended all his undertakings. Note, When our heart is truly ſincere in God's ſervice, we ſhall ſee with comfort the fruit of our labours.

CHAP. XXXII.

This chapter concludes the hiſtory of the reign of Hezekiah. 1. He fortifies himſelf, his city, and the minds of his people, againſt Sennacherib, ver. 1—8. 2. Sennacherib ſends him a meſſage, ver. 9—19. 3. Hezekiah's prayer is anſwered in the total rout of the Aſſyrian army, ver. 20—23. 4. Hezekiah's ſickneſs and recovery; his ſin and humiliation; with the honours that attended him living and dead, ver. 24—33.

1. AFTER theſe things and the eſtabliſhment thereof [a] Sennacherib king of Aſſyria came, and entred into Judah, and encamped againſt the fenced cities, and thought to † win them for himſelf. 2. And when Hezekiah ſaw that Sennacherib was come, and that ‡ he was purpoſed to fight againſt Jeruſalem: 3. He took counſel with his princes and his mighty men, to ſtop the waters of the fountains which were without the city: and they did help him. 4. So there was gathered much people together, who ſtopt all the fountains, and the brook that § ran through the midſt of the land, ſaying, Why ſhould the kings of Aſſyria come, and find much water? 5. Alſo [b] he ſtrengthned himſelf, and built up all the wall [c] that was broken, and raiſed it up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired [d] Millo in the city of David, and made ‖ darts and ſhields in abundance. 6. And he ſet captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the ſtreet of the gate of the city, and ſpake † comfortably to them, ſaying, 7. [e] Be ſtrong and courageous, be not afraid nor diſmayed for the king of Aſſyria, [f] nor for all the multitude that is with him: for [g] there be more with us than with him. 8. With him is [h] an arm of fleſh, but [i] with us is the LORD our God, to help us and to fight our battles. And the people ‡ reſted themſelves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

[a] 2 Kings xviii. 13, &c. Iſa. xxxvi. 1, &c.
† Heb. To break them up.
‡ Heb. His face was to war.
§ Heb. Overflowed.
[b] Iſa. xxii. 9.
[c] Chap. xxv. 23.
[d] 2 Sam. v. 9.
‖ Or ſwords.
† Heb. To their heart.
[e] 1 Cor. xvi. 13.
[f] Pſ. xxxiii. 16.
[g] 2 Kings vi. 16. 1 John iv. 4.
[h] Jer. xvii. 5.
[i] Chap. xiii. 12. Rom. viii. 31.
‡ Heb. Leaned.

v. 1—8. We might have expected all would be peace and ſafety after theſe good things Hezekiah had done; but behold, a dreadful ſtorm ariſes. We may be in the way of duty, yet expoſed to ſevere ſufferings. It was happy Hezekiah was not interrupted, before he had well proceeded in his work; and now having God's bleſſing, he is better prepared to meet his violent foe.

1. Sennacherib the king of Aſſyria invades his country, and with an army that threatned to ſwallow him up. His father had lately ſubdued Iſrael, and he hoped to find Judah as eaſy a prey.

2. Hezekiah, who perceived his deſign againſt Jeruſalem, not having forces to meet him in the field, prepares wiſely for the ſiege he expected, by endeavouring to cut off all ſupplies of water from the beſiegers, ſtrengthening the city with new fortifications, and providing abundance of military weapons. Note, When danger threatens, it is prudent to prepare for it. We muſt truſt God above all means, but never tempt him in the neglect of them.

3. The good king aſſembles the people, and, whilſt he marſhals them under proper officers, encourages their hearts, and comforts them, that they may not think of ſurrender, but bravely ſtand in the evil day. The danger was great, and required boldneſs and courage; yet they need not be diſmayed at this mighty and numerous hoſt. Angelic legions, if needful, more numerous, ſhould protect them; and, above all, God was with them, in power almighty, in faithfulneſs unchangeable; and therefore they might confidently expect the victory over their enemies. Note, (1.) Strong faith ſilences fear. (2.) No foes can ſtand before him who is the Captain of our ſalvation, and having already vanquiſhed for us ſin, death, and hell, will make us more than conquerors over them.

About 710.

9. ¶ [k] After this did Sennacherib king of Aſſyria ſend his ſervants to Jeruſalem (but he himſelf laid ſiege againſt Lachiſh, and all his power with him) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jeruſalem, ſaying, 10. Thus ſaith Sennacherib king of Aſſyria, [l] Whereon do ye truſt, that ye abide in † the ſiege in Jeruſalem? 11. Doth not Hezekiah perſuade you to give over yourſelves to die by famine and by thirſt, ſaying, [m] The LORD our God ſhall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Aſſyria? 12. [n] Hath not the ſame Hezekiah taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jeruſalem, ſaying, Ye ſhall worſhip before one altar, and burn incenſe upon it? 13. Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? [o] were the gods of the nations of thoſe lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand? 14. [p] Who was there among all the gods of thoſe nations, that my fathers utterly deſtroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, [q] that your God ſhould be able to deliver you out of mine hand? 15. Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor perſuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no God of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand and out of the hand of my fathers: [r] how much leſs ſhall your God deliver you out of mine hand? 16. And his ſervants ſpake yet more againſt the LORD God, and againſt his ſervant Hezekiah. 17. [s] He wrote alſo letters to rail on the LORD God of Iſrael and to ſpeak againſt him, ſaying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, ſo ſhall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand. 18. Then they [t] cried with a loud voice in the Jews ſpeech unto the people of Jeruſalem, that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them, that they might take the city. 19. And they ſpake againſt the God of Jeruſalem as againſt the gods of the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man. 20. And for this cauſe [u] Hezekiah the king, and [u] the prophet Iſaiah the ſon of Amoz, prayed, and cried to heaven. 21. ¶ And the LORD ſent an angel, [x] which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Aſſyria: ſo he returned with ſhame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the houſe of his god, [y] they that came forth of his own bowels, ſlew him there with the ſword.

[k] 2 Kings xviii. 17, &c. Iſa. xxxvi. 2, &c.

Before Chriſt 710.

[l] Pſ. xlii. 3. & lxxi. 11. & lxxviii. 19.
† Or, the ſtrong hold.
[m] Jer. xli. 23.
[n] Chap. xxxi. 1. & xxxii. 12.
[o] Deut. xxxii. 31. Pſal. cxv. 2—8.
[p] 2 Kings xix. 12.
[q] Rev. xiii. 6.
[r] Exod. v. 2. Dan. iii. 15.
[s] 2 Kings xix. 9, &c. Iſa. xxxvii. 9, &c.
[t] 1 Sam. xvii. 18.
[u] 2 Kings xix. 4, 15.
[x] 2 Sam. xxiv. 16.
[y] Tobit i. 21.

v. 9—21. This account we had before more at large, 2 Kings xviii, xix. The ſubſtance is here ſhortly ſummed up, of Sennacherib's blaſphemy, Hezekiah's prayer, and God's gracious interpoſition to ſave him. It may teach us, (1.) The enmity of the natural heart againſt God and his people. (2.) The great enemy of ſouls eſpecially labours to diſcourage us, knowing, that till our faith is ſhaken, we cannot be moved. (3.) Railing and abuſe are poor arguments, and ſinners will find ſhortly their own tongues ſhall fall upon them. (4.) Prayer in every diſtreſs, is the way to the door of hope. (5.) God covers the proud with confuſion, and turns againſt themſelves the ſword they draw againſt others.

22. Thus the LORD ſaved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Aſſyria, and from the hand of all other, and † guided them on every ſide. 23. And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jeruſalem, and [z] preſents to Hezekiah king of Judah: ſo that he was magnified in the ſight of all nations from thenceforth.

† i. e. As a ſhepherd his ſheep. Pſ. xxiii. 1. & lxxvii. 20.
[z] Chap. xvii. 5.

v. 22, 23. Such a wonderful deliverance alarmed the neighbour nations, and they with preſents courted his favour, who had God ſo evidently for his friend. God thus protected them from every enemy, and guided and guarded them, as a ſhepherd doth his flock. How happy, how honourable, how ſafe the ſoul, that dwells thus under the ſhadow of the Almighty!

24. ¶ [a] In thoſe days Hezekiah was ſick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he ſpake unto him, and he gave him a ſign. 25. But Hezekiah [b] rendred not again according to the benefit done unto him, for [c] his heart was lifted up; therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jeruſalem. 26. Notwithſtanding [d] Hezekiah humbled himſelf for the † pride of his heart (both he and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem) ſo that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the

About 714.
[a] 2 Kings xx. 1, &c. Iſa. xxxviii. 1, &c.
[b] Pſ. lxxviii. 11. & cvi. 12, 13.
[c] Hab. ii. 4.
[d] Jer. xxvi. 19.
† Heb. Lifting up.

days

Before Chriſt 714.

days of Hezekiah. 27. ¶ And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himſelf treaſuries for ſilver and for gold, and for precious ſtones, and for ſpices, and for ſhields, and for all manner of ‡ pleaſant jewels. 28. Store-houſes alſo for the increaſe of corn, and wine, and oil; and ſtalls for all manner of beaſts, and cotes for flocks. 29. Moreover, he provided him cities, and poſſeſſions of flocks, and herds in abundance, for [e] God had given him ſubſtance very much. 30. [f] This ſame Hezekiah alſo ſtopped the upper water-courſe of Gihon, and brought it ſtraight down to the weſt-ſide of the city of David. And Hezekiah proſpered in all his works. 31. ¶ Howbeit, in the buſineſs of the ambaſſadors of the princes of Babylon, who ſent unto him [g] to enquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God left him [h] to try him, [i] that he might know all that was in his heart. 32. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Hezekiah, and his ‖ goodneſs, behold, [k] they are written in the viſion of Iſaiah the prophet, the ſon of Amoz, and [l] in the book of the kings of Judah and Iſrael. 33. And Hezekiah ſlept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefeſt of the ſepulchres of the ſons of David: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem [m] did him honour at his death: and Manaſſeh his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

‡ Heb. Inſtruments of deſire.
[e] 1 Chron. xxix. 12. Prov. x. 22.
[f] Ver. 4.
713.
[g] 2 Kings xx. 12. Iſa. xxxix. 1.
[h] Gen. xxii. 1. Job i. 12.
[i] Gen. xxii. 12. John ii. 25.
‖ Heb. Kindneſſes.
[k] Iſa. xxxvi—xxxix.
[l] 2 Kings xviii—xx.
[m] Prov. x. 7.

v. 24—33. Hezekiah's reign concludes glorioufly, notwithſtanding the fall which is here recorded.

1. Hezekiah's ſickneſs and recovery, more largely treated of before, are here but juſt mentioned. But,

2. His ſin and recovery have ſeveral particulars more than in 2 Kings xx. [1.] The embaſſy of the king of Babylon was intended not ſo much to congratulate him on his recovery, or his victory, as to enquire into the wonder of the ſun's going back at the prophet's word. [2.] He did not ſuitably improve his mercies, but inſtead of being humbled before God, grew proud on the inſtances of his favour, and the honour and reſpect paid him by the neighbouring nations. Note, (1.) Tho' we can never repay the obligations we owe to God, the tribute he expects is at leaſt a grateful heart. (2.) Pride is the buſy ſin: even God's gifts and graces may afford a handle for ſelf-complacence. We need ever pray that God would cloath us with humility. [3.] God in this inſtance left him to his own heart, to convince him how weak and wretched he muſt be, if but a moment deſtitute of his ſupport. [4.] His ſin provoked the Divine diſpleaſure. Pride in God's people is eſpecially offenſive to him. [5.] His humiliation, in which the people joined him, prevented the immediate execution of the threatned judgments. Note, (1.) Heart ſins muſt be repented of, or they will deſtroy us. (2.) When God gives a ſpirit of humiliation, it is a proof of his reconciliation.

3. Hezekiah's days ended proſperouſly. His riches and treaſures were greatly increaſed. The ſupply of the city with water from the ſtream of Gihon, is remarked among his noble works; many other of which, as well as a farther account of his goodneſs, are written in the books of Iſaiah and Kings. At laſt death removed him to a better crown, and the people, afflicted with the loſs of ſo great and good a king, ſhewed him every diſtinguiſhed honour, by laying him in the nobleſt ſepulchre of his fathers, burning ſpices, and lamenting him with no feigned grief. Note, They who have lived reverenced and reſpected, will in death be juſtly lamented.

CHAP. XXXIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Manaſſeh's idolatry, ver. 1—10. 2. His captivity under the king of Aſſyria, ver. 11. 3. His repentance and proſperity, ver. 12—14. 4. His reformation, ver. 15—17. 5. The concluſion of his reign, ver. 18—20. 6. Ammon ſucceeds him, reigns wickedly, and is ſlain by his ſervants, ver. 21—25.

698.

1. [a] MANASSEH was twelve years old when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and five years in Jeruſalem: 2. But did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD, [b] like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had caſt out before the children of Iſrael. 3. ¶ For he † built again the high places, [c] which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and [d] made groves, and [e] worſhipped all the hoſt of heaven, and ſerved them. 4. Alſo [f] he built altars in the houſe of the LORD, whereof the LORD had ſaid, [g] In Jeruſalem ſhall my name be for ever. 5. And he built altars for all the hoſt of heaven, in the two courts of the houſe of the LORD. 6. And [h] he cauſed his children to paſs through the fire in the valley of the ſon of Hinnom: alſo [i] he obſerved times, and uſed enchantments, and uſed witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar ſpirit, and with wizards: he ‡ wrought much evil in the ſight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger. 7. And he ſet a carved image (the idol which he had made) in the houſe of God, of which God had ſaid to David, and to Solomon his ſon, [k] In this houſe, and in Jeruſalem, which I have choſen before all the tribes of Iſrael, will I put my name for ever. 8. [l] Neither will I any more remove the foot of Iſrael from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; [m] ſo that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law, and the ſtatutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moſes. 9. So [n] Manaſſeh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem to err, and to do worſe than the heathen, whom the LORD had deſtroyed before the children of Iſrael. 10. And the LORD ſpake to Manaſſeh, and to his people: [o] but they would not hearken.

[a] 2 Kings xxi. 1, &c.
[b] Deut. xviii. 9, 10.
† Heb. Returned and built. Eccleſ. ii. 19.
[c] Chap. xxxi. 1.
[d] Deut. xvi. 21.
[e] Ibid. xvii. 3. Jer. xxxii. 34.
[f] Deut. xii. 11. Chap. vi. 6. & vii. 16.

Before Chriſt 676.

[h] Lev. xviii. 21. Chap. xxviii. 3. Ezek. xxiii. 37.
[i] Lev. xix. 26, 31. Deut. xviii. 10.
‡ Heb. Multiplied to do evil. Amos iv. 4.
[k] 1 Kings viii. 29. & ix. 3. Pſal. cxxxii. 14.
[l] 2 Sam. vii. 10.
[m] Lev. xxvi. 14.
[n] Prov. xxix. 12.
[o] John xv. 22. Jam. iv. 17.

v. 1—10. Manaſſeh's wicked beginning was before obſerved, 2 Kings xxi. Idolatrous, profane, abandoned to every evil, and ſtriving as if to root out the name of the Lord, that it ſhould be no more had in remembrance: hardned againſt reproof, and not content to be vile himſelf, compelling his people to worſe abominations than ever the heathen committed. Note, (1.) The work of reformation is difficultly accompliſhed, the eſtabliſhment of wickedneſs readily complied with. (2.) Could many a good father return from their graves, their hearts would break to ſee the abominations of their ungodly children. (3.) God leaves not the worſt without ſome checks of conſcience, or reproofs from his word, but they ruſh determinately on their ruin.

11. ¶ [p] Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the hoſt of the king of Aſſyria, which took Manaſſeh [q] among the thorns, and [r] bound him with fetters, and [s] carried him to Babylon. 12. And when he was [t] in affliction, he beſought the LORD his God, and humbled himſelf greatly before the God of his fathers, 13. And prayed unto him, and [u] he was entreated of him, and heard his ſupplication, and brought him again to Jeruſalem into his kingdom. Then Manaſſeh [x] knew that the LORD he was God. 14. Now after this, he built a wall without the city of David, on the weſt-ſide of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entring in at the fiſh-gate, and compaſſed [y] about Ophel, and raiſed it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah. 15. And [z] he took away the ſtrange gods, and the idol out of the houſe of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the houſe of the LORD, and in Jeruſalem, and caſt them out of the city. 16. And he repaired the altar of the LORD, and ſacrificed thereon peace-offerings, and [a] thank-offerings, and [b] commanded Judah to ſerve the LORD God of Iſrael. 17. Nevertheleſs, [c] the people did ſacrifice ſtill in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only. 18. ¶ Now the reſt of the acts of Manaſſeh, and † his prayer unto his God, and the words of [d] the ſeers that [e] ſpake to him in the name of the LORD God of Iſrael, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Iſrael. 19. His prayer alſo, and how God was entreated of him, and all his ſin, and his treſpaſs, and the places wherein he built high places, and ſet up groves and graven images before he was humbled: behold, they are written among the ſayings of the ſeers. 20. ¶ So Manaſſeh ſlept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own houſe: and Amon his ſon reigned in his ſtead.

[p] Deut. xxviii 36.
[q] 2 Sam. xxiii. 6.
[r] Pſal. cvii. 10, 11.
[s] 2 Kings xx. 18.
[t] Job xxxvi. 7—10. Mic. vi. 9. Luke xv. 16—18.
[u] Iſa. i. 18. 1 Tim. i. 13, 15.
676.
[x] Dan. iv. 25.
[y] Chap. xxvii. 3.
[z] Iſa. xxx. 22. Ezek. xxxvi. 25. Hoſ. xiv. 8.
[a] Lev. vii. 12.
[b] Luke xxii. 32.
[c] 1 Kings xv. 14.
† There is one ſaid to be his in the Apocrypha.
[d] 1 Sam. ix. 9.
[e] Deut. xviii. 19.

v. 11—20. Though God bear long and is kind, he will make inquiſition at laſt.

1. The king of Babylon, now the conqueror of Aſſyria, advances, and having born down all before him, drags forth the wicked Manaſſeh from a thicket of thorns, whither he had fled to hide himſelf; and binding him in fetters, carries him captive to Babylon. Now Hezekiah's treaſures were given for a prey, and the people received the juſt ſcourge of their faithleſs apoſtacy.

2. What all former warnings never effected, this heavy affliction brought about. In his miſery, Manaſſeh thought upon God, and with deep humiliation cried for mercy. Happy priſon! How infinitely better to him, than the defiled palaces of

Before Chriſt 643.

Zion. Note, (1.) Sanctified afflictions are among the greateſt mercies. (2.) They who remember in trouble their own evil ways, will feel the bitterneſs of them, and groan being burdened. (3.) No caſe ſo deſperate as to exclude hope, whilſt there is yet acceſs to the throne of grace.

3. God had compaſſion upon him, and inclined the heart of the king of Babylon to pity and reſtore him to his loſt dignity. Note, (1.) The vileſt of ſinners need not deſpair, when Manaſſeh is pardoned. (2.) When our miſery drives us to God, he will not refuſe to help us. (3.) The prayer of penitence never yet returned without the anſwer of peace.

4. Made wiſe by paſt experience, he now knew that the Lord alone was God, whoſe rod he had felt, and whoſe mercy he had taſted: therefore, with deteſtation of his former abominations, every idol is deſtroyed out of God's houſe; his ruined altar repaired; his ſacrifices and ſervice reſtored; and the people brought back from their idolatry. The high places indeed were not taken away; but though on them they ſtill ſacrificed, it was to the Lord Jehovah only. Note, (1.) Where the heart is truly converted, there will be a thorough change in the conduct. (2.) The worſhip of God is among the firſt concerns of the awakened ſoul. (3.) When we are brought to a ſenſe of our own ſins, we ſhall zealouſly labour to recover thoſe whom we have ſeduced, or emboldened to tranſgreſs by our own ill examples.

5. In conſequence of his unfeigned repentance, God ſtrengthened him in his kingdom; Jeruſalem was fortified, and the cities of Judah garriſoned. Without God all defences are vain: if he be with us, his name is a ſtrong tower; the righteous flieth unto it, and are ſafe.

6. Manaſſeh no more revolted from God. The ſun that roſe ſo eclipſed, ſet with ſplendor. Accounts of his wickedneſs and repentance were preſerved in the books of the kings of Iſrael, and the writings of the ſeers, who had ſpoken to him in the name of the Lord. He rejected their meſſage indeed at firſt, but afterwards acknowledged his guilt and ſhame, and wiſhed it to be perpetuated for a warning to others. He was buried privately, probably at his own deſire, as a mark of humiliation, and left his throne to his ungodly ſon and ſucceſſor Amon. Note, (1.) Though God hath forgiven our ſin, to our laſt hour we need remember, and be confounded at the review of it. (2.) They who are true penitents, are moſt willing to take ſhame to themſelves for their ſins.

[f] 2 Kings 21. ¶ [f] Amon was two and twenty years old when
xxi. 19, &c. he began to reign, and reigned two years in Jeruſalem. 22. But he did that which was evil in the ſight of [g] Ver. 2—7. the LORD, [g] as did Manaſſeh his father: for Amon ſa-Ezek. xx. crificed unto all the carved images, which Manaſſeh his 18. father had made, and ſerved them; 23. And humbled
[h] Ver. 12. not himſelf before the LORD, [h] as Manaſſeh his father † Heb. Multiplied had humbled himſelf; but Amon † treſpaſſed more and treſpaſs. Ver. 6. 2 more. 24. And his ſervants conſpired againſt him, and Tim. iii. 13. [i] ſlew him in his own houſe. 25. ¶ But the people of 641. [i] Job xv. 32, the land [k] ſlew all them that had conſpired againſt king
33. Pſ. lv. 23. Amon, and the people of the land made Joſiah his ſon [k] Judg. i. 7. king in his ſtead.
Mat. vii. 2.

v. 21—25. Amon copied the worſt of his father's wicked ways. The images which Manaſſeh had caſt out, and ſhould have deſtroyed, he reſtored. More mad upon his idols, than even his unhappy father, and incorrigible in his ſin, he never like him repented. Short was his career of impiety: in two years he fell by a conſpiracy of his own ſervants, and left the kingdom to the laſt good king of Judah. Note, (1.) Final impenitence ſeals up the ſoul under eternal ruin. (2.) That which is evil, is much eaſier copied, than what is good. (3.) It is a mercy to a land, when wicked magiſtrates are quickly cut off from it.

CHAP. XXXIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. A general account of Joſiah's character, ver. 1, 2. 2. His zeal to root out idolatry, ver. 3—7. and to repair the temple, ver. 8—13. 3. The book of the law found, with the good uſe made of it, ver. 14—28. 4. The law read to the people, and their covenant renewed with God, ver. 29—33.

640.
[a] 2 Kings xxii. 1, &c. 1. [a] JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to [b] Deut. v. reign, and he reigned in Jeruſalem one and thirty
32. Prov. iv. 27. years. 2. And he did that which was right in the ſight
633. [c] Eccleſ. xii. of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his fa-
1. 2 Tim. iii. 15. ther, and [b] declined neither to the right hand nor to the [d] Chap. xv. 2. left. 3. ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign, [c] while he
629. was yet young, he began [d] to ſeek after the God of David [e] 1 Kings xiii. 2. his father: and in the twelfth year he began to [e] purge Judah and Jeruſalem from the high places and the groves, Before Chriſt 629.
and the carved images, and the molten images. 4. And [f] they brake down the altars of Baalim in his preſence; [f] Exod. xxiii.
and the † images that were on high above them he cut 24. Deut.
down, and the groves, and the carved images, and the vii. 5, 25. † Or, Sun-molten images he brake in pieces, and made duſt of them, images.
and [g] ſtrowed it upon the graves of them that had ſa- [g] 2 Kings crificed unto them. 5. And [h] he burnt the bones of the xxiii. 6.
prieſts upon their altars, and cleanſed Judah and Jeruſa- [h] 1 Kings xiii. 2.
lem. 6. And ſo did he in the cities of Manaſſeh and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their mattocks round about. 7. And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images [i] into powder, and cut down all the [i] Deut. ix.
idols throughout all the land of Iſrael, he returned to 21.
Jeruſalem.

v. 1—7. Joſiah began very young to reign, and probably, during his minority, things continued as his ungodly father had left them: but in his ſixteenth year God was pleaſed graciouſly to work upon his heart; and, notwithſtanding the bad education he may be ſuppoſed to have had, he then began to ſeek the Lord; and when, in the twelfth year of his reign, he took the reins of government into his own hands, he reſolutely ſet himſelf to purge out the abominations of his kingdom. Nor did he merely remove them, as Manaſſeh, but utterly deſtroyed them; reduced the idols and groves to duſt, and caſt it on the graves of the dead; defiled the altars with burning the dead bones of their prieſts upon them, and then beat them in pieces; and this reformation he carried on not only through Judah, but through the cities of Iſrael, that, ſince the captivity, came under his government, going round himſelf to ſee the work accompliſhed. Note, (1.) Thoſe whom God chuſes, he generally calls in the days of youth. There are, comparatively, few aged converſions. (2.) The buſineſs the maſter himſelf attends, will be well done.

8. ¶ [k] Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when 623.
he had purged the land, and the houſe, he ſent Shaphan [k] 2 Kings the ſon of Azaliah, and Maaſeiah the governor of the ci- xxii. 3, &c. ty, and Joah the ſon of Joahaz the recorder, [l] to repair [l] Chap. xxix.
the houſe of the LORD his God. 9. And when they 4.
came to Hilkiah the high-prieſt, [m] they delivered the [m] Chap.
money that was brought into the houſe of God, which xxiv. 5.
the Levites that kept the doors, had gathered of the hand of Manaſſeh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Iſrael, and of all Judah and Benjamin, and they returned to Jeruſalem. 10. And they put it in the hand of the workmen, that had the overſight of the houſe of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the houſe of the LORD, to repair and mend the houſe: 11. Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn ſtone, and timber for couplings, and to floor the houſes which the kings of Judah had deſtroyed. 12. And the men did the work † faithfully: † Heb. In and the overſeers of them were Jahath, and Obadiah, truth. 2 Kings xii.
the Levites, of the ſons of Merari; and Zechariah, and 15. Neh. vii.
Meſhullam, of the ſons of the Kohathites, to ſet it for- 2.
ward; and other of the Levites, all that could ſkill of inſtruments of muſick. 13. Alſo they were over the bearers of burdens, and were overſeers of all that wrought the work in any manner of ſervice: and of the Levites, there were ſcribes, and officers, and porters.

v. 8—13. When the houſe of God was thorougly purged, and he had returned from his progreſs through his dominions, (which he ſeems to have repeated, 2 Kings xxiv. 4, 20. after the temple-ſervice was re-eſtabliſhed) he gave orders for the repair of the Lord's houſe, whom he had choſen for his God. By his command money was collected, workmen of approved fidelity hired, and officers of the Levites appointed to ſee the work well done. Note, (1.) A ruinous church is a ſad ſymptom of an irreligious people. (2.) An honeſt labourer is a worthy character.

14. ¶ And when they brought out the money that was brought into the houſe of the LORD, Hilkiah the prieſt found [n] the book of the law of the LORD [n] Deut. xxxi. given by † Moſes. 15. And Hilkiah anſwered and ſaid 24, 26. 2 Kings xxii.
to Shaphan the ſcribe, I have found the book of the law 8, &c. in the houſe of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered † Heb. The hands of the book to Shaphan: 16. And Shaphan carried the Moſes.
book to the king, and brought the king word back again, ſaying, All that was committed to thy ſervants, they do it.

it. 17. And they have ‡ gathered together the money that was found in the houſe of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overſeers, and to the hand of the workmen. 18. Then Shaphan the ſcribe told the king, ſaying, Hilkiah the prieſt hath given me a book, And Shaphan [o] read § it before the king. 19. And it came to paſs when the king had heard [p] the words of the law, that he [q] rent his clothes. 20. And the king commanded Hilkiah and Ahikam the ſon of Shaphan, and || Abdon the ſon of Micah, and Shaphan the ſcribe, and Aſaiah a ſervant of the king's, ſaying, 21. Go, [r] enquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are left in Iſrael, and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, becauſe our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book. 22. And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah [s] the propheteſs, the wife of Shallum, the ſon of Tikvath, the ſon of Haſrah, keeper of the † wardrobe; (now ſhe dwelt in Jeruſalem, in the ‡ college) and they ſpake to her to that effect. 23. ¶ And ſhe anſwered them, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael, Tell ye the man that ſent you to me, 24. Thus ſaith the LORD, Behold, [t] I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even [u] all the curſes that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah: 25. [x] Becauſe they have forſaken me, and have burned incenſe unto other gods, that they might [y] provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; [z] therefore my wrath ſhall be poured out upon this place, and ſhall not be quenched. 26. And [a] as for the king of Judah, who ſent you to enquire of the LORD, ſo ſhall ye ſay unto him, Thus ſaith the LORD God of Iſrael concerning the words which thou haſt heard, 27. Becauſe [b] thine heart was tender, and [c] thou didſt humble thyſelf before God, when thou heardſt his words againſt this place, and againſt the inhabitants thereof, and humbledſt thyſelf before me, and didſt rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee alſo, ſaith the LORD. 28. Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and [d] thou ſhalt be gathered to thy grave [e] in peace, neither ſhall thine eyes ſee all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the ſame. So they brought the king word again.

v. 14—28. We have remarked upon this paſſage, 2 Kings xxii. 8—20. It may be further obſerved, (1.) That tenderneſs of heart in hearing God's word is a gracious ſymptom of a choſen veſſel. (2.) God's providence in thus preſerving his written word is, even to this hour, matter of thankfulneſs. (3.) When God gives us his book, let us not be negligent to examine it. Wilful ignorance is wilful ſin. (4.) To tremble at God's word, and, under conviction of our ſins, to humble our ſouls before him, is the way to obtain mercy; whilſt wrath certain and terrible awaits the hardened ſinner.

29. ¶ [f] Then the king ſent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jeruſalem. 30. And the king went up into the houſe of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, and the prieſts, and the Levites, and [g] all the people great and ſmall: and he read in their ears all [h] the words of the book of the covenant, that was found in the houſe of the LORD. 31. And [i] the king ſtood in his place, and made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his teſtimonies, and his ſtatutes, with all his heart and with all his ſoul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book. 32. And he cauſed all that were † preſent in Jeruſalem and Benjamin to [k] ſtand to it. And the inhabitants of Jeruſalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers. 33. And [l] Joſiah took away all the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Iſrael, and made all that were preſent in Iſrael to ſerve, even to ſerve the LORD their God. And [m] all his days they departed not ‡ from following the LORD, the God of their fathers.

v. 29—33. Concerned for his people, as for himſelf, Joſiah aſſembles them to hear the words of God's book, and, by his example and command, engages them to renew their covenant with God. And what he ſo faithfully began, all his days he perſevered in; ſo that publicly, and in profeſſion, the ſervice of God was diligently maintained. But with many, with far the greateſt part, the reformation, as appears by the prophets Jeremiah, Zephaniah, and Ezekiel, was hypocritical, and their ſins exceedingly aggravated, that with ſo good an example before them, and ſuch means of grace, they choſe their own deluſions, and were unfaithful to their covenant. Note, (1.) The great concern of a good king will be to make his ſubjects acquainted with God's word. (2.) We are bound by every tie of duty to cleave to God; but unleſs he binds our heart to him with the cords of his grace, all other bonds, or vows, or covenants, will be ineffectual. (3.) They who reſiſt the means of grace, and continue unchanged under a preached goſpel, fill up moſt grievouſly the meaſure of their iniquities.

‡ Heb. Caſt, or melted.
[n] 2 Kings xxii. 9.
[o] Deut. xvii. 19. Joſh. i. 8. Jer. xxxvi. 21.
§ Heb. in it before the face of, &c.
[p] Deut. xvii. 19. & xxviii. 3—68.
[q] Joel ii. 13.
|| Achbor, 2 Kings xxii. 12.
[r] Acts xvi. 30.
[s] Exod. xv. 20. Judg. iv. 4.
† Heb. Garments.
‡ Or ſecond court.
[t] Chap. xxxvi. 6, 17. Iſa. v. 5.
[u] Lev. xxvi. 15—39. Deut. xxviii. 24, 26. Dan. ix. 12.
[x] Chap. xv. 2.
[y] Pſ. cxv. 4. Iſa. ii. 8. Mic. v. 13.
[z] Jer. xv. 1.
[a] Iſa. iii. 10.
[b] Pſ. li. 17.
[c] Lev. xxvi. 40, 42. Prov. xxviii. 13. Iſa. lvii. 15.
[d] Chap. xxxv. 24.
[e] Pſ. xxxvii. 37. Iſa. lvii. 2.
[f] 2 Kings xxiii. 1, &c.
[g] Neh. viii. 1, 3.
[h] Ver. 15.
[i] 2 Kings xi. 14. & xxiii. 3.
† Heb. Found.
[k] Eccleſ. viii. 2.
[l] 2 Kings xxiii. 4—20.
[m] Joſh. xxiv. 31. Judg. ii. 7.
‡ Heb. From after.

CHAP. XXXV.

We have here, 1. The religious obſervance of the paſſover, according to the law, ver. 1—19. 2. Joſiah's raſhneſs in engaging with the king of Egypt, ver. 20—23. 3. The lamentation at his funeral, ver. 24—27.

1. [a] MOREOVER, Joſiah kept a paſſover unto the LORD in Jeruſalem: and [b] they killed the paſſover on the fourteenth day of the firſt month. 2. And he ſet the prieſts [c] in their charges, and [d] encouraged them to the ſervice of the houſe of the LORD, 3. And [e] ſaid unto the Levites [f] that taught all Iſrael, which were holy unto the LORD, Put the holy ark in the houſe which Solomon the ſon of David king of Iſrael did build; [g] it ſhall not be a burden upon your ſhoulders: ſerve now the LORD your God, and his people Iſrael. 4. And prepare yourſelves by the houſes of your fathers, after your courſes, [h] according to the writing of David king of Iſrael, and [i] according to the writing of Solomon his ſon. 5. And ſtand in the holy place according to the diviſions of the † families of the fathers of your brethren the ‡ people, and after the diviſion of the families of the Levites. 6. So kill the paſſover and [k] ſanctify yourſelves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD, by the hand of Moſes. 7. And Joſiah [l] gave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the paſſover-offerings, for all that were preſent, to the number of thirty thouſand, and three thouſand bullocks: theſe were of the king's ſubſtance. 8. And his princes [m] gave willingly unto the people, to the prieſts and to the Levites: Hilkiah and Zechariah, and Jehiel, rulers of the houſe of God, gave unto the prieſts for the paſſover-offerings, two thouſand and ſix hundred ſmall cattle, and three hundred oxen. 9. Conaniah alſo, and Shemaiah, and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Heſhabiah, and Jehiel, and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, gave unto the Levites for paſſover-offerings, § five thouſand ſmall cattle, and five hundred oxen. 10. So the ſervice was prepared, and the prieſts ſtood in their place, and the Levites in their courſes, according to the king's commandment. 11. And they killed the paſſover, and the prieſts [n] ſprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites [o] flayed them. 12. And they [p] removed the burnt-offerings, that they might give according to the diviſions of the families of the || people, to offer unto the LORD as it is written in the book of Moſes: and ſo did they with the oxen. 13. And [q] they roaſted the paſſover with fire, according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings ſod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and divided them ſpeedily among all the people. 14. And afterward they made ready for themſelves, and for the prieſts: becauſe the prieſts the ſons of Aaron were buſied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themſelves and for the prieſts the ſons of Aaron. 15. And the ſingers the ſons of Aſaph were in their † place, [r] according to the commandment of David, and Aſaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's ſeer; and [s] the porters waited at every gate; they might not depart from their ſervice; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them. 16. So all the ſervice of the LORD was prepared the ſame day, to keep the paſſover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Joſiah. 17. And the children of Iſrael that were preſent,

[a] 2 Kings xxiii. 21, &c.
[b] Exod. xii. 6. Num. ix. 11.
[c] Numb. xviii. 5.
[d] Chap. xxxi. 4.
[e] Col. iv. 17.
[f] Mal. ii. 7.
[g] 1 Chron. xxiii. 26.
[h] 1 Chron. xxiii—xxvi.
[i] Chap. viii. 14.
† Heb. houſe.
‡ Heb. Sons of the people.
[k] Chap. xxix. 5, 15. & xxx. 3, 5.
[l] Chap. xxx. 24.
[m] 2 Cor. ix. 7.
§ In all, 3,800 bullocks, and 37,600. ſmall cattle.
Pſ. li. 16, 17. Mic. vi. 7, 8.
[n] Chap. xxix. 22. Heb. ix. 21, 22.
[o] Chap. xxix. 34.
[p] Lev. iii. 10, 11.
|| Heb. Sons of the people.
[q] Exod. xii. 8, 9.
† Heb. Station.
[r] 1 Chron. xxv. 1, &c.
[s] Ibid. ix. 17, 18. & xxvi. 14.

Before Chriſt 623.

‡ Heb. Found.
[t] Exod. xii. 15. 1 Cor. v. 8.
[u] 2 Kings xxiii. 22.

‡ preſent, kept the paſſover at that time, and [t] the feaſt of unleavened bread ſeven days. 18. And [u] there was no paſſover like to that kept in Iſrael, from the days of Samuel the prophet, neither did all the kings of Iſrael keep ſuch a paſſover as Joſiah kept, and the prieſts and the Levites, and all Judah and Iſrael that were preſent, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem. 19. In the eighteenth year of the reign of Joſiah was this paſſover kept.

v. 1—19. The paſſover being among the moſt ſolemn ordinances God had inſtituted, Joſiah, having removed every known abomination, prepares to keep it with great devotion.

1. He ſet the prieſts in their courſes, encouraged them to diligence and fidelity in their work; commanded the ark, which, during the repairs of the temple, had probably been removed, to be replaced; enjoined the Levites, who taught the people, to exerciſe with zeal their miniſtry for the glory of God, and the good of his Iſrael; and, in order thereunto, he exhorts them to ſanctify themſelves, that they might be fitted for the work, and prepare their brethren for the ſolemnity of the paſſover, by their admonitions, inſtructions, and directions how to kill and order the lamb according to the law of Moſes. Note, (1.) Zealous magiſtrates will ſtir up miniſters to their work. (2.) They who would prepare others for God's ſervice, muſt firſt ſet the example of that holineſs they preach. (3.) Encouragement is very needful, where miniſters meet ſo many difficulties.

2. The king and his princes, with the chief of the prieſts, liberally contributed on this occaſion; the king giving 30,000 lambs for thoſe poor families who came to keep the paſſover, and 3000 bullocks for ſacrifices of peace-offerings, to feaſt upon during the ſeven days. The great officers of God's houſe alſo provided handſomely for their poorer brethren, that the feaſt might be kept with affluence and gladneſs. Note, (1.) They who are hearty in the ſervice of men's ſouls, grudge no expence. (2.) Though we muſt beware not to make men hypocrites for the ſake of advantage, yet it becomes us to encourage thoſe who are ſincere. (3.) They who enjoy the largeſt revenues of the church, are eſpecially called upon liberally to diſtribute them for the ſupport of their poorer brethren.

3. The whole was conducted with great exactneſs and regularity. The prieſts and Levites diſcharged their office diligently, delivering out the paſcal lambs to the ſeveral families, after ſprinkling the blood on the altar. Theſe were roaſted whole, according to God's ordinance; and the peace-offerings, that belonged to the offerers, they boiled and divided among thoſe to whom the king had given the oxen for ſacrifice. And when they had ſerved the people, the prieſts and Levites prepared the paſſover for themſelves, ſome of their body being appointed for this ſervice, whilſt the reſt were buſy in their miniſtrations in the temple, or employed in praiſing God, or watching at the gates. Thus was this remarkable paſſover kept, like unto which there was none from the days of the judges, ſo exact was their obſervance, and ſo ſingular the liberality of the king and the prieſts. Note, (1.) Let not thoſe who miniſter to others, forget the great concern of their own ſouls. (2.) It is not the greatneſs of the gift, but the temper of the offerer, that makes the ſervice honourable and acceptable.

610.

† Heb. Houſe.
[x] 2 Kings xxiii. 29.
‡ Heb. What is it to me and thee? 2 Sam. xvi. 10. Mat. viii. 29.
§ Heb. Of my war.
[y] 2 Kings xviii. 25.
[z] 1 Kings xxii. 30.
[a] 1 Eſd. i. 28.
[b] Zech. xii. 11.

20. ¶ After all this, when Joſiah had prepared the † temple, [x] Necho king of Egypt came up to fight againſt Carchemeſh by Euphrates: and Joſiah went out againſt him. 21. But he ſent ambaſſadors to him, ſaying, ‡ What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not againſt thee this day, but againſt the houſe § wherewith I have war: for [y] God commanded me to make haſte, forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he deſtroy thee not. 22. Neverthleſs Joſiah would not turn his face from him, but [z] diſguiſed himſelf that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho [a] from the mouth of God, and came to fight in [b] the valley of Megiddo. 23. And the archers ſhot at king Joſiah; and the king ſaid to his ſervants, Have me away, for I am ſore wounded. 24. His ſervants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the ſecond chariot that he had, and they brought him to Jeruſalem, and [c] he died, and was buried in one of the ſepulchres of his fathers: and all Judah and Jeruſalem [d] mourned for Joſiah. 25. ¶ And Jeremiah [e] lamented for Joſiah, and all the ſinging-men, and the ſinging-women ſpake of Joſiah in their lamentations to this day, and made them an ordinance in Iſrael: and behold, they are written in the lamentations. 26. Now the reſt of the acts of Joſiah, and his ‖ goodneſs, according to that which was written in the law of the LORD, 27. And his deeds firſt and laſt, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Iſrael and Judah.

[c] Pſ. xxxvi. 6. Eccleſ. ix. 2.
[d] Zech. xii. 11.
[e] Lam. iv. 20.
‖ Heb. Kindneſſes. Chap. xxxii. 32.

v. 20—27. After all this, we might have expected to hear the ſingular proſperity of Judah; but alas! in juſt diſpleaſure for their hypocriſy and unprofitableneſs, God removes from them their good king, and with him dies all this appearance of godlineſs.

Before Chriſt 610.

1. He imprudently went out to battle againſt Necho king of Egypt, who was on his march againſt the king of Aſſyria. Fain would he have perſuaded him to deſiſt, by his ambaſſadors, aſſuring him he meant nothing hoſtile againſt Judah; that the expedition he had undertaken was at God's command; and therefore, if he perverſely oppoſed him, he would ſuffer for it. Notwithſtanding, Joſiah credited him not, and, neglecting to enquire of God, reſolved to oppoſe him. The battle was fought near Megiddo; and though the king of Judah, for greater ſafety, had diſguiſed himſelf, the archers wounded him, and he quickly died in his chariot. Note, (1.) In an unjuſt cauſe we may not hope to proſper. (2.) When we have fair warning, our death lies at our own door. (3.) If we neglect to enquire of God, no wonder we involve ourſelves in miſchief.

2. His death exceedingly afflicted the nation. Jeremiah the prophet eſpecially lamented the loſs, foreſeeing the evils that would follow; and the people in mournful poems annually commemorated his unhappy fall. Though they had not heartily joined him in his fidelity when alive, they felt their loſs of him when dead, and ſtrove to honour his memory. Note, (1.) When our bleſſings are removed, we are then often led to lament too late our folly and ſin in not improving them. (2.) God's prophets, who ſee the approaching evils, cannot but mourn for poor ſinners who provoke them.

CHAP. XXXVI.

We have here the unhappy reigns, 1. Of Jehoahaz, ver. 1—4. 2. Of Jehoiakim, ver. 5—8. 3. Of Jehoiachin, ver. 9, 10. 4. Of Zedekiah, ver. 11. under whom the deſolations for ſin came upon the people, ver. 12—21. 5. The proclamation of Cyrus for their return after their long captivity, ver. 22, 23.

610.
[a] 2 Kings xxiii. 30, &c.
† Shallum, 1 Chron. iii. 15. Jer. xxii. 11.
[b] Ezek. xix. 3, 4.

1. THEN [a] the people of the land took † Jehoahaz the ſon of Joſiah, and made him king in his father's ſtead in Jeruſalem. 2. Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jeruſalem. 3. And the king of Egypt [b] put him down at Jeruſalem, and condemned the land in an hundred talents of ſilver and a talent of gold. 4. And the king of Egypt made Eliakim his brother king over Judah and Jeruſalem, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And Necho took Jehoahaz his brother, and [c] carried him to Egypt. 5. ¶ Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jeruſalem: and [d] he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD his God. 6. [e] Againſt him came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in fetters to carry him [f] to Babylon. 7. Nebuchadnezzar alſo carried off [g] the veſſels of the houſe of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon. 8. Now the reſt of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Iſrael and Judah: and ‡ Jehoiachin his ſon reigned in his ſtead. 9. ¶ [h] Jehoiachin was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jeruſalem, and he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD. 10. And when the year was expired, king Nebuchadnezzar ſent, and brought him to Babylon, with the § goodly veſſels of the houſe of the LORD, and made ‖ Zedekiah his brother king over Judah and Jeruſalem.

[c] Jer. xxii. 10—12.
610.
[d] Jer. xxii. 13. & xxvi. 23. & xxxvi. 26.
606.
[e] 2 Kings xxiv. 1, &c.
[f] Jer. xxii. 18, 19. & xxxvi. 30.
[g] 2 Kings xxiv. 13. Dan. i. 2.
‡ Called Jechoniah, 1 Chron. iii. 16. & Coniah, Jer. xxii. 24.
599.
[h] 2 Kings xxiv. 8, &c.
§ Heb. At the return of the year.
‖ Heb. Veſſels of deſire.
† Or Mattaniah, 2 Kings xxiv. 17.

v. 1—10. Theſe ſhort and evil reigns were the forerunners of the kingdom's ruin.

1. Jehoahaz, ſet up by the people, was quickly dethroned, and carried captive into Egypt, by Necho, provoked at his father's oppoſition. He reigned but three months, yet long enough to give a ſufficient ſpecimen of his evil conduct.

2. Jehoiakim, the tributary of the king of Egypt, continued eleven years governor of the impoveriſhed country, yet more abundantly weakened by his wickedneſs, when he fell into the hands of the king of Babylon, and died in chains, after ſeeing Jeruſalem and the temple plundered, and the ſacred veſſels gone into captivity.

3. His ſon, who ſucceeded him at eighteen years of age, rather than eight, (See 2 Kings xxiv. 8.) ſhewed, though young, the evil that was in his heart; and, after a ſhort reign of three months and ten days, was depoſed by the king of Babylon, and Zedekiah, the laſt of the kings of Judah, advanced to the throne.

Thus

Before Christ 509.

Thus did the nation haſtily change her kings; and, not being admoniſhed by the repeated warnings, vengeance came upon them to the uttermoſt.

11. ¶ [i] Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jeruſalem. 12. And he did that which was evil in the ſight of the LORD his God, and humbled not himſelf before Jeremiah the prophet, ſpeaking from the mouth of the LORD. 13. And he alſo rebelled againſt king Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him [k] ſwear by God, but he [l] ſtiffned his neck and hardned his heart from turning unto the LORD God of Iſrael. 14. ¶ Moreover, all the chief of the prieſts and the people tranſgreſſed very much, after all the abominations of the heathen, and polluted the houſe of the LORD which he had hallowed in Jeruſalem. 15. And [m] the LORD God of their fathers ſent to them by † his meſſengers, riſing up betimes, and ſending; becauſe he had compaſſion on his people, and on his dwelling-place: 16. But [n] they mocked the meſſengers of God, and deſpiſed his words, and miſuſed his prophets, until the wrath of the LORD aroſe againſt his people, till there was no ‡ remedy. 17 Therefore he brought upon them [o] the king of the Chaldees, who ſlew their young men with the ſword, in the houſe of their ſanctuary, and had no compaſſion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that ſtooped for age: he gave them all into his hand. 18. And all the veſſels of the houſe of God, great and ſmall, and the treaſures of the houſe of the LORD, and the treaſures of the king, and of his princes; all theſe he brought to Babylon. 19. And [p] they burnt the houſe of God, and brake down the wall of Jeruſalem, and [q] burnt all the palaces thereof with fire, and deſtroyed all the goodly veſſels thereof. 20. And them that had eſcaped from the ſword, carried he away to Babylon: where [r] they were ſervants to him and his ſons, until the reign of the kingdom of Perſia; 21. To fulfil the word of the LORD [s] by the mouth of Jeremiah, until [t] the land had enjoyed her ſabbaths: for as long as ſhe lay deſolate, [u] ſhe kept ſabbath, to fulfil threeſcore and ten years.

[i] 2 Kings xxiv. 18. Jer. lii. 1, &c.

[k] Ezek. xvii 16, 19.

[l] 2 Kings xvii. 14.

[m] Jer. xxv. 3, 4. & xxxv. 15.

† Heb. The hand of his meſſengers.

[n] Chap. xxx. 10. Jer. v. 12, 13. Mat. xxi. 35.

‡ Heb. Healing.

590.

[o] 2 Kings xxv. 1, &c.

588.

[p] 2 Kings xxv. 9. Pſal. lxxix. 1. Jer. vii. 14.

[q] Jer. xxxix. 8.

[r] Ibid. xxvii. 7.

[s] Ibid. xxv. 9, 12. & xxvi. 6, 7. & xxix. 10.

[t] Lev. xxvi. 34, 35, 43.

[u] Lev. xxv. 4, 5.

v. 11—21. Behold the deſolations of Zion! the beautiful temple lies in ruins, the line of confuſion is ſtretched over the palaces of Jeruſalem: O ſin, what a bitter and evil thing art thou! We have here,

1. Zedekiah's rebellion againſt the king of Babylon. Tho' he had ſolemnly ſworn to ſerve him, he violated perfidiouſly his engagements, and obſtinately refuſed ſubmiſſion, notwithſtanding all Jeremiah's warnings and entreaties. Note, (1.) Oaths are ſacred things, God will not ſuffer them to be broken with impunity. (2.) They who will not bow, muſt break.

2. He rebelled alſo againſt God, nor paid regard to the admonitions of Jeremiah, nor humbled himſelf before him. We need not fear who is our enemy, if God be our friend; but who ever hardned his heart againſt him and proſpered?

3. The prieſts and people univerſally fell into idolatry; they who ſhould have been the firſt to reſtrain others, were the ringleaders in the wickedneſs, and even in the temple their abominations were ſet up. In vain the compaſſionate Lord God of their fathers, unwilling they ſhould periſh, ſent them repeated warnings, and his prophets with diligence and zeal roſe early up to teſtify againſt their ſins; they mocked at his counſel, and would have none of his reproof; ill uſed his prophets, and treated them with ſcorn and contempt, and the hand of the prieſts was chief in the tranſgreſſion. Note, (1.) God leaves not the ſinner, till all the methods of his grace have been ineffectual, and his wilful heart refuſes to be reformed. (2.) God's true prophets are earneſt and aſſiduous in their word; woe to thoſe againſt whom they complain, all day long have we ſtretched out our hands to a diſobedient and gainſaying people. (3.) When God viſits for ſin, no charge will lie heavier than for a ſlighted goſpel. (4.) God's miniſters, when employed in the kindeſt offices, are often grievouſly miſuſed; but let them not be diſcouraged, they ſhall be glorious though Iſrael be not gathered. (5.) Worldly and wicked prieſts in every age have been the moſt inveterate enemies of God's faithful prophets and preachers. (6.) They who ill-uſe the miniſters of God, ſeek to render their labours ineffectual, and their perſons contemptible, know not what wrath they treaſure up againſt their ſouls.

Before Christ 536.

4. The conſequence of his conduct was ruin to the uttermoſt. After a terrible ſiege, See 2 Kings xxv. the city was taken by ſtorm, and ſacked; no ſanctuary protected young or old; even the temple was filled with the carcaſes of the ſlain; the ſacred houſe ſtripped of all its ornaments, the palaces plundered, the temple burnt, the city raſed to its foundations, the few that were left from the ſword enſlaved and inſulted, dragged to Babylon to weep in vain over the mournful remembrance of their paſt and preſent miſeries; their country ravaged and deſolate, and left to enjoy thoſe ſabbaths which they profanely refuſed to obſerve: and ſeventy years the iron bondage laſted, till the kingdom of Perſia roſe upon the ruins of their conquerors, and the daughter of Babylon, waſted with miſery, drank of the cup of wrath which ſhe had put into the hands of the nations. Note, (1.) The more we ſee of the miſeries ſin produces, the more ſhould we fear to provoke a holy God. (2.) When the rod hath done its office, it will be broken or burned. God, though he afflicts his people, will not be wroth for ever.

536.

22. ¶ [x] Now in the firſt year of Cyrus king of Perſia (that the word of the LORD [y] ſpoken by the mouth of Jeremiah, [z] might be accompliſhed) [a] the LORD ſtirred up the ſpirit of Cyrus king of Perſia, that he made a † proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it alſo in writing, ſaying, 23. Thus ſaith Cyrus king of Perſia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath [b] the LORD God of heaven given me, and [c] he hath charged me to build him an houſe in Jeruſalem which is in Judah: [d] who is there among you of all his people? [e] the LORD his God be with him, and let him go up.

[x] Ezra i. 1, &c.

[y] Jer. xxv. 12. & xxix. 10.

[z] Heb. x. 23.

[a] Iſa. xliv. 28.

† Heb. Voice.

[b] Dan. ii. 21.

[c] Iſa. xliv. 28.

[d] Zech. ii. 6, 7.

[e] Rom. viii. 31.

v. 22, 23. Theſe verſes conclude the book of Chronicles, and begin the book of Ezra, which ſeems to ſpeak the ſame hand author of both. They mention the prophecy of Jeremiah now exactly accompliſhed by the decree of Cyrus; and after the dark and diſmal night of ſeventy years captivity, the dawnings of the returning day appear, and there is yet hope in their end. They afford us, in the moſt afflicted circumſtances of God's church, encouragement to wait ſtill upon God, and truſt in his mercy. And thus alſo when the dark and ſilent grave ſhall ſeem to ſwallow up the ruins of mortality, the believer may ſtill, dependant on the promiſe, look forward with confidence, and expect a glorious return from his captivity in a reſurrection day.

The End of the CHRONICLES.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of EZRA.

The hiſtory of this book is the accompliſhment of Jeremiah's prophecy concerning the return of the Jews out of Babylon, at the end of ſeventy years, and a type of the accompliſhment of the prophecies of the Apocalypſe, concerning the deliverance of the goſpel church out of the New Teſtament Babylon. It relates the difficulties they met with, on their return to Jeruſalem, and the care taken of their genealogies, and this for the ſake of the expected Meſſiah. The author is generally allowed to be Ezra, and the book univerſally admitted as canonical.

CHAP. I.

Before Chriſt 536.

In this chapter we have, 1. The proclamation of Cyrus for the releaſe of the Jews and the building of the temple in Jeruſalem, ver. 1—4. 2. The return of many thereupon, ver. 5, 6. 3. The veſſels of the temple that were reſtored, ver. 7—11.

1. [a] NOW in the firſt year of Cyrus king of Perſia, (that the word of the LORD [b] by the mouth of Jeremiah [c] might be fulfilled) [d] the LORD ſtirred up the ſpirit of Cyrus king of Perſia, that [e] made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it alſo in writing, ſaying, 2. Thus ſaith Cyrus king of Perſia, [f] The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth, and [g] he hath charged me to build him an houſe at Jeruſalem, which is in Judah. 3. [h] Who is there among you of all his people? [i] his God be with him, and let him go up to Jeruſalem, which is in Judah, and build the houſe of the LORD God of Iſrael ([k] he is the God) which is in Jeruſalem. 4. And whoſoever remaineth in any place where he ſojourneth, let the men of his place † help him with ſilver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beaſts, beſides the free-will-offering for the houſe of God that is in Jeruſalem.

[a] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22.
[b] Jer. xxv. 12. & xxix. 10.
[c] Heb. x. 23.
[d] Pſal. cvi. 46. Prov. xvi. 7.
[e] Rev. xii. 16.
[f] Dan. ii. 21.
[g] Iſa. xliv. 28.
[h] Zech. ii. 6, 7.
[i] Rom. viii. 31.
[k] Deut. xxxii. 31. Dan. ii. 47. & iii. 29. & iv. 37.
† Heb. Lift him up.

v. 1—4. The ſeventy years of captivity now drew to their period, and the drooping hope of God's captive people began to revive on the conqueſt of their oppreſſors by Cyrus, ſo long before propheſied of by name to be their deliverer; nor did he fail their expectations: for no ſooner had he ſubdued the Babyloniſh empire, than he iſſued out an edict for the reſtoration of the Jewiſh people. Probably he had been informed of the prophecies of Iſaiah, and convinced, as appears by the proclamation, of the glory of Iſrael's God, attributed his great ſucceſſes to his bleſſing, and diligently ſought to correſpond with his orders. The Lord ſtirred up his ſpirit, he looked upon himſelf as obliged to build his temple, according to the prophetic word, and therefore whilſt he gives a general leave to the Jews to return, enjoins his ſubjects every where to aſſiſt them, that they who were poor, might be furniſhed with neceſſaries for their journey, and a comfortable ſettlement when they came into their own land. And hereto eſpecially the richer Jews, who choſe to continue ſtill in Babylon, were called to contribute, and if they went not themſelves, to help their brethren, and ſend their free-will-offerings to Jeruſalem. Note, (1.) Not one jot or tittle of God's word can fail; though the accompliſhment of his promiſes ſeems long, it is ſure at the appointed time. (2.) When the length of our ſufferings is ready to make us deſpair of their end, God cauſes light to riſe up in the darkneſs, and there is hope in the end. (3.) The greateſt kings are under the Divine government; God hath acceſs to the ſpirits of men, and can incline them to ſerve his purpoſes. (4.) Whatever good deſire is ſtirred up in our hearts, we muſt acknowledge it the gift of God. (5.) God is the diſpoſer of the kingdoms of the world: they are truly wiſe and great who ſee his hand in their proſperity, and deſire to advance his glory in the ſtation to which he hath exalted them. (6.) They who have a love for the temple, will gladly open their hand in liberal contribution, for the furtherance of ſo good a work.

Before Chriſt 536.

5. ¶ Then roſe up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the prieſts and the Levites, with all them [l] whoſe ſpirit God had raiſed to go up, to build the houſe of the LORD which is in Jeruſalem. 6. And [m] all they that were about them, ſtrengthned their hands with veſſels of ſilver, with gold, with goods, and with beaſts, and with precious things, beſides all that was [n] willingly offered. 7. ¶ [o] Alſo Cyrus the king brought forth the veſſels of the houſe of the LORD, [p] which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jeruſalem, and had put them in the houſe of his god,: 8. Even thoſe did Cyrus king of Perſia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treaſurer, and numbred them unto † Sheſhbazzar the prince of Judah. 9. And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thouſand chargers of ſilver, nine and twenty knives, 10. Thirty baſons of gold, ſilver baſons of a ſecond ſort four hundred and ten, and other veſſels a thouſand. 11. [q] All the veſſels of gold and of ſilver, were five thouſand and four [l] Neh. ii. 12. Prov. xvi. 1. Phil. ii. 13.

[m] Exod. xi. 36. Rev. xii. 16.
[n] Pſal. cx. 3.
[o] Chap. vi. 5.
[p] 2 Kings xxiv. 13. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7.
† i. e. Joy in tribulation.
[q] Rom. ix. 23. 2 Tim. ii. 19, 20.

Before Chriſt 536.

four hundred. All theſe did Sheſhbazzar bring up with them of the captivity, that were brought up from Babylon unto Jeruſalem.

v. 5—11. In conſequence of the proclamation, we have here a ſtirring among the dry bones, and the ſpirit of life breathing upon them, to ariſe and return to their own land.

1. Judah and Benjamin were the firſt to lead the way; the chief fathers of their families aſſembled, and the prieſts and Levites, zealous for the re-eſtabliſhment of the ſervice of God, readily embraced the permiſſion given them. A thouſand difficulties were indeed in their way; by their long abode in Babylon, many were now comfortably ſettled; they were utter ſtrangers to the land whither they were going, and could expect to find there nothing but ruin and deſolation; not ſo much as a houſe to cover their heads; yet all theſe things diſcouraged them not: God animated their hearts with deſire for his temple's reſtoration at Jeruſalem, and filled them with a noble love of liberty. Note, (1.) When God's ſervice requires to be ſet forwards, his miniſters ſhould be the firſt to promote it. (2.) The Lord muſt raiſe up our heart, or elſe our earth-born ſouls will chuſe their reſt in Babylon. (3.) The goſpel, like this proclamation, calls forth the ſinner from his bondage; and though the way to the glorious land of life and liberty is difficult, as many as are ſupported by the arms of Almighty Grace dare truſt their all with God, and boldly go forth: whilſt others, diſheartned by the proſpect of danger, refuſe to follow the Divine mandate, and live and die the ſervants of corruption.

2. The Chaldeans liberally aſſiſted the returning Iſraelites, and they who ſtayed at Babylon willingly offered of their ſubſtance for the furtherance of the temple of God, whilſt Cyrus, their great benefactor, nobly reſtores to them all the veſſels which Nebuchadnezzar had carried to Babylon, and placed in the temple of his idol gods. Theſe were delivered up to Sheſhbazzar, ſuppoſed to be the ſame with Zerubbabel, who, though in captivity, was dignified with the honour of prince of Judah. Note, (1.) God can make thoſe who have no part themſelves in his kingdom, contribute to its ſupport, and aſſiſt in the furtherance of his ſervice. (2.) Though the veſſels of mercy ſeem for a ſeaſon undiſtinguiſhed from the reſt of the world, in the ſervice of their idol maſters, yet God knoweth thoſe that are his, and will in his time ſeparate and purify them for himſelf, as veſſels fit and meet for the maſter's uſe.

CHAP. II.

We have here a catalogue of thoſe that returned from Babylon, ver. 1. 1. The leaders, ver. 2. 2. The people, ver. 3—35. 3. The prieſts, Levites, and retainers to the temple, ver. 36—63. 4. The ſum total, with an account of their retinue, ver. 64—67. 5. Their offerings to the ſervice of the temple, ver. 68, 69, 70.

1. NOW [a] theſe are the children of [b] the province that went up out of the captivity, of thoſe which had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away unto Babylon, and came again unto Jeruſalem and Judah, every one unto his city; 2. Which came with Zerubbabel: Jeſhua, Nehemiah, † Seraiah, ‡ Reelaiah, Mordecai, Bilſhan, || Mizpar, Bigvai, § Rehum, Baanah. The number of the men of the people of Iſrael. 3. The children of Paroſh, two thouſand an hundred ſeventy and two. 4. The children of Shephatiah, three hundred ſeventy and two. 5. The children of Ara, [c] ſeven hundred ſeventy and five. 6. The children of [d] Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeſhua and Joab, two thouſand eight hundred and twelve. 7. The children of Elam, a thouſand two hundred fifty and four. 8. The children of Zattu, nine hundred forty and five. 9. The children of Zaccai, ſeven hundred and threeſcore. 10. The children of † Bani, ſix hundred forty and two. 11. The children of Bebai, ſix hundred twenty and three. 12. The children of Azgad, a thouſand two hundred twenty and two. 13. The children of Adonikam, ſix hundred ſixty and ſix. 14. The children of Bigvai, two thouſand fifty and ſix. 15. The children of Adin, four hundred fifty and four. 16. The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight. 17. The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and three. 18. The children of ‡ Jorah, an hundred and twelve. 19. The children of Haſhum, two hundred twenty and three. 20. The children of || Gibbar, ninety and five. 21. The children of Beth-lehem, an hundred twenty and three. 22. The men of Netophah, fifty and ſix. 23. The men of [e] Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight. 24. The children of § Azmaveth, forty and two. 25. The children of Kirjath-arim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, ſeven hundred and forty and three. 26. The children of Ramah and Gaba, ſix hundred twenty and one. 27. The men of Michmas, an hundred twenty and two. 28. The men of Beth-el and Ai, two hundred twenty and three. 29. The children of Nebo, fifty and two. 30. The children of Magbiſh, an hundred fifty and ſix. 31. The children of the other [f] Elam, a thouſand two hundred fifty and four. 32. The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty. 33. The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, ſeven hundred twenty and five. 34. The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five. 35. The children of Senaah, three thouſand and ſix hundred and thirty.

[a] Neh. vii. 6, &c. 1 Eſd. v. 7, &c.
[b] Chap. v. 8.
† Azariah. Neh. vii. 7.
‡ Or Raamiah.
|| Or Miſpereth.
§ Or Nehum.
[c] Neh. vii. 10.
[d] Ibid. 11.
† Binnui. Neh. vii. 15.
‡ Hariph. Neh. vii. 24.
|| Gibeon. Neh. vii. 25.
[e] Jer. xi. 21, 23.
§ Beth-azmaveth. Neh. vii. 28.
[f] See Ver. 7.

v. 1—35. We have here an account of the people who returned from the captivity: a poor remnant! compared with the thouſands of Iſrael in their former better days; yet it was a great mercy that any were yet left, and ſuffered to return. They are called children of the province, for to ſuch was the kingdom of Judah now reduced. They are reckoned according to the towns where they formerly reſided, and the anceſtors from whence they ſprung. Their leaders were Zerubbabel, and Jeſhua the high-prieſt. Nehemiah and Mordecai, mentioned v. 2. were different men from thoſe, whoſe names were afterwards ſo diſtinguiſhed; unleſs we ſuppoſe that after ſeeing the firſt colony ſettled, they returned again to Babylon. Note, (1.) It is a diſtinguiſhing mercy to be found written among thoſe who go up from the captivity of ſin, under our Prince and Prieſt Jeſus, the Captain of our ſalvation. (2.) They who are eminent in their zeal for God's cauſe, deſerve that their names ſhould be recorded to their honour.

36. ¶ The prieſts: the children of [g] Jedaiah, of the houſe of Jeſhua, nine hundred ſeventy and three. 37. The children of [h] Immer, a thouſand fifty and two. 38. The children of [i] Paſhur, a thouſand two hundred forty and ſeven. 39. The children of [k] Harim, a thouſand and ſeventeen. 40. ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeſhua, and Kadmiel, of the children of † Hodaviah, ſeventy and four. 41. ¶ The ſingers: the children of Aſaph, an hundred twenty and eight. 42. ¶ The children of the porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, in all, an hundred thirty and nine. 43. ¶ [l] The Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of Haſhupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 44. The children of Keros, the children of ‡ Siaha, the children of Padon, 45. The children of Lebanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Akkub. 46. The children of Hagab, the children of || Shalmai, the children of Hanan, 47. The children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, 48. The children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazzam, 49. The children of Uzza, the children of Paſeah, the children of Beſai, 50. The children of Aſnah, the children of Mehunim, the children of § Nephuſim, 51. The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur, 52. The children of † Bazluth, the children of Mehida, the children of Harſha, 53. The children of Barkos, the children of Siſera, the children of Thamah, 54. The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha. 55. ¶ The children of [m] Solomon's ſervants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of ‡ Peruda, 56. The children of Jaalah, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 57. The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of || Ami. 58. All [n] the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's ſervants, were three hundred ninety and two. 59. And theſe were they which went up from Tel-melah, Tel-harſa, Cherub, Addan, and Immer: but they could not ſhew their father's houſe, and their § ſeed, whether they were of Iſrael: 60. The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, ſix hundred fifty and two. 61. ¶ And of the children of the prieſts: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai (which took a wife of the daughters of [o] Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called after their name): 62. Theſe ſought their regiſter among thoſe that were reckoned by genealogy, but they were not found: [p] therefore † were they, as polluted, [g] 1 Chron. xxiv. 7.

[h] Ibid. 14.
[i] Ibid. ix. 12.
[k] Ibid. xxiv. 8.
† Judah. Chap. iii. 9. Or Hodevah. Neh. vii. 43.
[l] 1 Chron. ix. 2.
‡ Or Sia. Neh. vii 47.
|| Or Shamlai.
§ Or Nephiſheſhim.
† Bazlith. Neh. vii. 54.
[m] 1 Kings ix. 21.
‡ Perida. Neh. vii. 57.
|| Amon. Neh. vii. 59.
[n] Joſh. ix. 21, 27. 1 Chron. ix. 2.
§ Pedigrees.
[o] 2 Sam. xvii. 27.
[p] Num. iii. 10.
† Heb. They were polluted from the prieſthood.

Before Chriſt 536.

polluted, put from the prieſthood. 63. And the ‡ Tirſhatha ſaid unto them, that they ſhould not eat of the moſt holy things, till there ſtood up a prieſt with [q] Urim and with Thummim.

‡ Or governor. See Neh. viii. 9.
[q] Exod. xxviii. 30. Num. xxvii. 21.

v. 36—63. We have here a farther account of thoſe who returned. The prieſts, under four chief fathers, were near a tenth part of the whole. Their zeal for the ſervice made them more ready to improve the preſent opportunity. The Levites, once ſo numerous, 1 Chron. xxiii. 3. were now but few. The Nethinims, aſſiſtants to the Levites, ſuppoſed to be the deſcendants of the Gibeonites, whom Joſhua appointed for the meaner offices of the tabernacle, to hew wood and draw water; and the children of Solomon's ſervants, who were the old inhabitants of Canaan, but being proſelyted, were employed by him in building the temple, See 1 Kings ix. 20. Theſe, to the number of three hundred and ninety-two, joined the returning colony: beſides which, many went up from ſome of the cities of Babylon, who, though Jews, had loſt their genealogies: and many who paſſed for children of the prieſts, but were rejected by the Tirſhatha, or governor, Zerubbabel, from miniſtring, becauſe they could not prove their lineal deſcent from Aaron. One of theſe, by a marriage into the family of the famed Barzillai, ambitious of having his children reckoned of that ſtock, neglected his prieſtly genealogy, and therefore now was excluded from the privileges and honour he had deſpiſed. The excluſion however was not final; they hoped ſome high-prieſt would ariſe with Urim and Thummim, from whoſe illuminations theſe defects might be repaired. Note, (1.) They who count the miniſtry a diſparagement, are unworthy of the office. (2.) The great high-prieſt with Urim and Thummim hath appeared, not to fix Jewiſh genealogies, but to conſecrate to himſelf faithful prieſts among all the nations of the world.

64. ¶ [r] The whole congregation together, was forty and two thouſand three hundred and threeſcore, 65. Beſides their ſervants and their maids, of whom there were ſeven thouſand three hundred thirty and ſeven: and there were among them two hundred ſinging-men and ſinging-women. 66. Their horſes were ſeven hundred thirty and ſix: their mules two hundred forty and five: 67. Their camels, four hundred thirty and five: their aſſes, ſix thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty. 68. ¶ And ſome of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the houſe of the LORD which is at Jeruſalem, offered freely for the houſe of God to ſet it up in his place: 69. [s] They gave after their ability unto [t] the treaſure of the work, threeſcore and one thouſand drams of gold, and five thouſand pound of ſilver, and one hundred prieſts garments. 70. [u] So the prieſts and the Levites, and ſome of the people, and the ſingers and the porters, and the Nethinims, dwelt in their cities, and all Iſrael in their cities.

[r] Neh. vii. 66.
[s] 2 Cor. viii. 3.
[t] 1 Chron. xxvi. 20.
[u] Chap. vi. 16, 17.

v. 64—70. The ſum total of thoſe who returned to Judea, amounted to 42,360; above 12,000 more than are above particularly ſpecified: probably theſe were of the other tribes, whoſe genealogies had been loſt.——Their retinue appears but mean, their ſervants few, and their beaſts of burden ſcarce more than would ſuffice for their baggage, ſo that they muſt have taken their tedious journey on foot. Among their ſervants two hundred ſinging men and women are reckoned, either kept for the recreation of the richer ſort among them, or employed with mournful lamentations, to awaken a ſenſe of their deſolations. When they were come to Jeruſalem, they viſited their beautiful houſe, though in ruins; and grieving to ſee it in the duſt, generouſly contributed, according to their abilities, for its reſtoration. They were not rich now, as in David's days, but their deep poverty abounded to the riches of their liberality, and made the gift more acceptable. The whole contribution in gold and ſilver amounted to about 75,000l. with an hundred prieſts garments for the ſervice of the temple, as ſoon as it ſhould be ready. Part of them fixed immediately at Jeruſalem; the reſt were diſtributed into the ſeveral cities where their forefathers had been ſeated. Note, (1.) God's houſe and ſervice lie neareſt upon the heart of a faithful Iſraelite. (2.) It is not the greatneſs of the gift, but the temper of the giver, that ſtamps a value on the donation. (3.) What is ſpent in God's bleſſed work, though ſpared out of our poverty, will return again with abundant intereſt.

CHAP. III.

We have here the gracious beginnings of thoſe who returned from captivity. 1. They ſet up an altar, offered ſacrifices upon it, kept the feaſts, and contributed towards the rebuilding of the temple, ver. 1—7. 2. They laid the foundation of it with a mixture of joy and ſorrow, ver. 8—13. Though a day of ſmall things, this was not to be deſpiſed, Zech. iv. 10.

Before Chriſt 536.

1. AND [a] when the ſeventh month was come, and the children of Iſrael were in the cities, the people gathered themſelves together as one man to Jeruſalem. 2. Then ſtood up † Jeſhua the ſon of Jozadak, and his brethren the prieſts, and ‡ Zerubbabel the ſon of ‖ Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Iſrael, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, [b] as it is written in the law of Moſes the man of God. 3. And they ſet the altar upon his baſes (for fear was upon them, becauſe of the people of thoſe countries) and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD, even [c] burnt-offerings, morning and evening. 4. [d] They kept alſo the feaſt of tabernacles, [e] as it is written, and [f] offered the daily burnt-offerings by number, according to the cuſtom, as § the duty of every day required; 5. And afterward offered [g] the continual burnt-offering, both of the new-moons and of all the ſet feaſts of the LORD that were conſecrated, and of every one [h] that willingly offered a free-will-offering unto the LORD. 6. From the firſt day of the ſeventh month began they to offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD: but the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid. 7. They gave money alſo unto the maſons, and to the carpenters, and meat, and drink, and oil unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, [i] to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the ſea of Joppa: [k] according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Perſia.

[a] 1 Eſd. v. 4.
† Joſhua. Hag. i. 1. Zech. iii. 1.
‡ Zorobabel the ſon of Salathiel. Mat. i. 12. Luke iii. 27.
[b] Deut. xii. 5.
[c] Num. xxviii. 3, 4.
[d] Neh. viii. 17.
[e] Exod. xxiii. 16.
[f] Num. xxix. 12, &c.
§ Heb. The matter of a day in his day.
[g] Exod. xxix. 38—42. Num. xxviii. 6.
[h] Chap. ii. 68.
[i] 2 Chron. ii. 16.
[k] Chap. vi. 3.

v. 1—7. Scarce were they ſettled in their ſeveral poſſeſſions, before,

1. They with one conſent aſſembled at Jeruſalem, at the approach of the ſeventh month, to conſult together about carrying on the work of God, and beginning the ſervice of the ſanctuary. Amidſt all their other cares, many and perplexing as they muſt have been, God's glory was their chief concern. Note, All is likely to end well with us, when we are careful thus to begin with God.

2. The high-prieſt, his brethren, and the chief princes hereupon ſet up the altar in the ſame place it had ſtood, perhaps the old baſes might remain: though they could not quickly rear the temple, they would not till then defer the ſervice of the altar. Note, (1.) When we cannot enjoy all the ordinances we deſire, we ſhould be the more diligent to improve thoſe in our power. Wherever we are, at leaſt we need not want an altar for prayer and praiſe. (2.) They who are diſtinguiſhed in ſtation, ſhould adorn it by the eminence of their zeal for God.

3. The reaſon given for their ſollicitude to begin God's worſhip, was the fear of their enemies, who hated them, and failed not to oppoſe their deſigns. Note, (1.) The beſt defence is God's favourable preſence. (2.) We muſt not be frightned out of our religion: man's threatnings ſhould only quicken our prayers.

4. No ſooner was the altar reared, but they began to offer their ſacrifices, on the firſt day of the ſeventh month, which was the feaſt of blowing of trumpets. From thenceforward, they continued the daily ſacrifice, and kept the appointed feaſts in their ſeaſon, though the foundation of the temple was not laid. Note, (1.) We muſt make the beſt of what we enjoy, and do what we can when we cannot do all we would. (2.) Every day we are required to offer the ſacrifice of a grateful heart.

5. Beſides the inſtituted ſacrifices, they offered alſo free-will-offerings. Tho' they could ill ſpare them from their little ſtock of cattle, yet they concluded they ſhould be never the poorer for what burned on God's altar.

6. They began to make preparations for building the temple, laying out the money they had collected to the proper workmen, and engaging thoſe of Tyre and Zidon to ſupply them with materials, according to the grant Cyrus had made them. Thus a ſecond time did they aſſiſt in rearing a temple for God. Note, Many help to build God's houſe, whoſe names, it is to be feared, are not found in his book of life. They ſerve his intereſts only, becauſe they thereby promote their own.

535.

8. ¶ Now in the ſecond year of their coming unto the houſe of God at Jeruſalem, in the ſecond month, began Zerubbabel the ſon of Shealtiel, and Jeſhua the ſon of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the prieſts and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jeruſalem; and [l] appointed the Levites from twenty years old and upward, to ſet forward the work of the houſe of the LORD. 9. Then ſtood [m] Jeſhua

[l] 1 Chron. xxiii. 24, 27.
[m] Chap. ii. 40.

Before Chriſt 535.

ſhua with his ſons, and his brethren, Kadmiel and his ſons, the ſons of † Judah ‡ together, to ſet forward the workmen in the houſe of God: the ſons of Henadad, with their ſons, and their brethren the Levites. 10. And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, [n] they ſet the prieſts in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites the ſons of Aſaph, with cymbals, to praiſe the LORD, after [o] the ordinance of David king of Iſrael. 11. And [p] they ſung together by courſe, in praiſing and giving thanks unto the LORD; [q] becauſe he is good, [r] for his mercy endureth for ever towards Iſrael. And all the people ſhouted with a great ſhout, when they praiſed the LORD, becauſe the foundation of the houſe of the LORD was laid. 12. [s] But many of the prieſts and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had ſeen the firſt houſe, when the foundation of this houſe was laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice, and many ſhouted aloud for joy: 13. So that the people could not diſcern the noiſe of the ſhout of joy, from the noiſe of the weeping of the people: for the people ſhouted with a loud ſhout, and the noiſe was heard afar off.

† Hodoviah. Chap. ii. 40.
‡ Heb. As one.
[n] 1 Chron. xvi. 5, 6.
[o] Ibid. vi. 31. xvi. 7. & xxv. 1.
[p] Exod. xv. 21. 2 Chron. vii. 3. Neh. xii. 24.
[q] 1 Chron. xvi 34.
[r] Ibid 41. Jer. xxxiii. 11.
[s] Hag. ii. 3. Zech. iv. 10. Job viii. 7. Mat. xiii. 31.

v. 8—13. Though the work was great, their hearts were eager upon it, and therefore the preparations went on briſkly.

1. In the ſecond month of the ſecond year the foundation was laid; ſeven months the materials were preparing; and then they without delay began to build. Note, (1.) If church work is ſlow, it is becauſe they who are engaged in it, care not for the worſhip. (2.) What our hand findeth to do for God, we muſt do it with our might.

2. Zerubbabel and Jeſhua, and his brethren the prieſts and Levites, forwarded with zeal the ſervice: and of the Levites, officers were appointed to look over the workmen. Note, The eye which overſees, is as neceſſary as the hand that builds.

3. When the foundation was laid, the prieſts with trumpets, and the Levites with cymbals, praiſed God in the Euchariſtic hymn, the burden of which was, for his mercy endureth for ever, See Pſal. cxxxvi. Note, The never failing mercy of God is juſt matter of everlaſting praiſe, and we can be in no circumſtance and condition in which we are not bound to acknowledge this precious truth.

4. Very different emotions on this occaſion were awakened in the boſoms of the ſpectators; the younger part, who had never ſeen the former temple, beheld with delight the glorious fabric riſing to their view, whilſt the more aged fathers could not but look back to the magnificence of the ancient houſe, and weep to behold the change. It was now about fifty-four years, according to the moſt received computation, ſince Solomon's temple was deſtroyed, and many of thoſe who were returned from the captivity might well remember it. The voice of weeping and ſhouting thus was blended together, but the ſhouting prevailed, and was heard at a diſtance, the mourning only was heard at home. Note, (1.) It is matter of joy to ſee revivals of religion, though they come not up to thoſe in the days of our fathers. (2.) Even in our joys, ſome drops of ſorrow will mingle: it will only be pure when we come to the better temple. (3.) The world ſhould hear a chriſtian's joys loudeſt: though we ſometimes mourn through manifold temptations, theſe ſorrows are beſt confined to our own boſoms, or communicated to a faithful friend, leaſt we diſhearten the feeble, or bring up an ill report on the good ways of our God.

CHAP. IV.

The work of God ſoon met with oppoſition. 1. The Samaritans, becauſe refuſed admiſſion among them, ſeek to diſcourage them, ver. 1—5. 2. They preſent a memorial againſt it, baſely miſrepreſenting the deſign, ver. 6—16. 3. The king of Perſia by an edict ſtops the building, ver. 17—24.

1. NOW when [a] the adverſaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the † children of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Iſrael: 2. Then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and ſaid unto them, Let us build with you, for [b] we ſeek your God, as ye do, and we do ſacrifice unto him, ſince the days of Eſar-haddon king of Aſſur, [c] which brought us up hither. 3. But Zerubbabel and Jeſhua, and the reſt of the chief of the fathers of Iſrael, ſaid unto them, [d] You have nothing to do with us, to build an houſe unto our God, but we ourſelves together will build unto the LORD God of Iſrael, [e] as king Cyrus the king of Perſia hath commanded us. 4. Then the people of the land [f] weakned the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled them in building, 5. And hired counſellors againſt them, [g] to fruſtrate their purpoſe all the days of Cyrus king of Perſia, even until the reign of Darius king of Perſia.

[a] Ver. 7, 8, 9. 1 Eſd. v. 66.
† Heb. Sons of the tranſportation.
[b] 2 Kings xvii 29.
[c] Ibid 24. Ver. 10.
[d] Neh. ii. 20.
[e] Chap. i. 1, &c.
[f] Rev. xii. 13.

Before Chriſt 534.

[g] Pſal. ii. 1.

v. 1—5. Whoever ſets his heart zealouſly to ſerve God, muſt expect oppoſition. Chriſt's church is never built, but Satan rages. No ſooner do Zerubbabel and the children of the captivity (for yet the ſcars of this yoke were not healed) begin to build, than the Samaritans put obſtructions in their way: they were the people who had been ſettled in Iſrael by the king of Aſſyria; and by the teaching of one of Jeroboam's prieſts, had eſtabliſhed a mixed religion of the ſervice of Jehovah, together with their own dunghill deities. Note, Pretenders to religion, are generally the bittereſt enemies to true godlineſs.

1. They firſt, under pretence of joining in the work, deſired to be incorporated among them, profeſſing to ſerve the ſame God; but they were liars, and meant only to ſow diſcord, or to mar the ſervice by introducing their own mungrel worſhip, and then better have no temple. Note, We may not believe every ſpirit; the darkeſt deſigns lurk often under the faireſt profeſſions.

2. The chief of the fathers, with Zerubbabel and Jeſhua, aware of their deſign, refuſed any connection with them, reſolved to keep united among themſelves; and whilſt the law of God enjoined them to ſeparate themſelves from the nations, the king's commiſſion authoriſed them. Note, (1.) Nothing ſo dangerous as bad connections. (2.) It is prudent to make uſe of our privileges as men, when they ſerve as a barrier to guard our religion.

3. The failure of this plot diſcouraged not their reſtleſs foes; at home they ſought to diſcourage the building, by ridiculing the attempt, or threatning to fall upon them, or preventing the neceſſary ſupplies from Tyre. Whilſt by bribing the counſellors, who were about the perſons of the king of Perſia's governors, or the great men at his court, they ſought to retard or ſtop the work, and this they continued till the reign of Darius. Note, (1.) The devil and his ſervants are reſtleſs in their attempts; the people of God may expect no truce. (2.) Many a wicked counſellor, for the ſake of the fee, little cares how bad the cauſe is, he is engaged in.

529.

6. And in the reign of † Ahaſuerus, in the beginning of his reign, wrote they unto him an accuſation againſt the inhabitants of Judah and Jeruſalem. 7. And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote Biſhlam, Mithridath, Tabeel, and the reſt of their ‡ companions unto Artaxerxes king of Perſia: and the writing of the letter was written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue. 8. Rehum the chancellor, and Shimſhai the ‖ ſcribe, wrote a letter againſt Jeruſalem to Artaxerxes the king, in this ſort: 9. Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimſhai the ſcribe, and the reſt of their companions; [h] the Dinaites, the Apharſathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharſites, the Archevites, the Babylonians, the Suſanchites, the Dehavites, and the Elamites. 10. And [i] the reſt of the nations whom the great and noble Aſnapper brought over and ſet in the cities of Samaria, and the reſt that are on this ſide the river, and § at ſuch a time. 11. ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they ſent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king, Thy ſervants the men on this ſide the river, and at ſuch a time. 12. Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us, are come unto Jeruſalem, building [k] the rebellious and the bad city, and [l] have ſet up the walls thereof, and † joined the foundations. 13. Be it known now unto the king, that if this city be builded, and the walls ſet up again, then will they not pay toll, tribute, and cuſtom, and ſo thou ſhalt endamage the revenue of the kings. 14. Now becauſe we ‡ have maintenance from the king's palace, and it was not meet for us to ſee the king's diſhonour: therefore we have ſent and certified the king, 15. That ſearch may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: [m] ſo ſhalt thou find in the book of the records, and know that this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have moved ſedition ‖ within the ſame of old time: for which cauſe was this city deſtroyed. 16. We certify the king, that if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof ſet up, by this means thou ſhalt have no portion on this ſide the river.

† Heb. Ahaſhveroſh
‡ Heb. Societies. Ver. 9, 17.
‖ Or ſecretary.
[h] 2 Kings xvii. 30, 31.
[i] Ver. 2.
§ Chald. Cheeneth. Ver. 11, 17. Chap. vii. 12.
[k] Amos vii. 10. Luke xxiii. 2. Acts xxiv. 5.
[l] Neh. i. 3. Pſal. lii. 2.
† Chald. ſowed together.
‡ Chald. Are ſalted with the ſalt of the palace.
[m] Eſth. iii. 8.
‖ Chald. In the midſt thereof.

v. 6—16. No ſooner was Cyrus, the profeſſed friend of the Jewiſh people, aſleep in the grave, and Ahaſuerus or Artaxerxes (ſuppoſed to be the Cambyſes of the heathen hiſtorians) advanced vanced to the throne of Perſia, than the enemies of God's people determined to improve the opportunity. Happy were it, if the church's friends were as watchful to ſerve her intereſts, as her enemies to do her miſchief.

Before Christ 522.

1. The general deſign was to render them odious to the government, by repreſenting them a turbulent, ſeditious people; and the vouchers for the accuſation were the Samaritan governors, whom the king of Perſia had appointed, backed and ſupported by all the colonies of different nations ſettled in Samaria. Note, (1.) Lying accuſations are the lot of all God's people. (2.) When godlineſs is to be oppreſſed, ſubſcriptions will not be wanting to ſupport any charge, however malicious or unjuſt. (3.) The many join in the general cry, uſually without knowing why or wherefore.

2. The particulars of the letter are here recited, and ſhew as much of the old ſerpent's cunning and malice, as we might expect to find. [1.] To ingratiate themſelves, and obtain the eaſier credit, they profeſs a high zeal for the king's honour, and deep gratitude for the maintenance or ſalaries they received from him, and therefore could not unconcerned ſee his government injured. Note, Pretended fears of danger to the ſtate, are a common plea for the oppreſſion of God's people. [2.] They brand the Jews as a people infamouſly diſloyal, call Jeruſalem the rebellious and bad city, which had in all time paſt been dangerous to kings and provinces; and for the confirmation of their aſſertion, appeal to the records which contained Zedekiah's rebellion. Note, (1.) The enemies of God's people will not ſpare hard names; and the moſt are ſo eaſily influenced, that they conclude a bad name muſt imply a bad thing. (2.) Dangerous deſigns are often imputed to God's people, when they of all others mean to be quiet in the land. (3.) If once an evil thing hath been done by profeſſors of religion an age ago, they are ſure to have it laid it at their door ever after, however much they diſapprove and condemn it. (4.) When men deſire occaſion to ſtumble, the devil will not fail to ſupply them with it. [3.] They make a moſt lying report of the ſtate of Jeruſalem, and give a moſt malicious inſinuation of the conſequences: they declare the walls of the city are ſet up, when it does not appear that a ſtone had been taken from the rubbiſh, the temple alone engaged them; and that it was ſoon to be feared there would be a general revolt of all the conquered provinces on this ſide the Euphrates, encouraged by the example of the Jews, to the diſmembering his kingdom, and the great loſs of his revenue. Note, They who ſet their heart againſt God's people, heſitate not at lies; groſs or improbable as they are, the world is ready to ſwallow them; as they ſay, throw dirt enough, and ſome will ſtick.

17. ¶ Then ſent the king an anſwer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimſhai the ſcribe, and to the reſt of their companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the reſt beyond the river, Peace, and at ſuch a time. 18. The letter which ye ſent unto us, hath been plainly read before me. 19. And I commanded, and ſearch hath been made, and it is found, that [n] this city of old time hath † made inſurrection againſt kings, and that rebellion and ſedition have been made therein. 20. [o] There have been mighty kings alſo over Jeruſalem, which have ruled over all countries [p] beyond the river; and toll, tribute, and cuſtom [q] was paid unto them. 21. ‡ Give you now commandment to cauſe theſe men to ceaſe, and that this city be not builded, untill another commandment ſhall be given from me. 22. Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why ſhould damage grow to the hurt of the kings? 23. ¶ Now when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimſhai the ſcribe, and their companions, they went up [r] in haſte to Jeruſalem unto the Jews, and made them to ceaſe by ‖ force and power. 24. Then ceaſed the work of the houſe of God, which is at Jeruſalem. So it ceaſed unto the ſecond year of the reign of Darius king of Perſia.

n 2 Kings xxiv. 1. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13.
† Chald. Lifted up itſelf.
o 1 Kings iv. 21.
p 1 Chron. xviii. 3.
q 2 Sam. viii. 2. 2 Chron. xvii. 11. & xxvi. 8. & xxxii. 23.
‡ Chald. Make a decree.
r Prov. iv. 16.
‖ Chald. Arm.

v. 17—24. God in wiſdom ſometimes permits innocence to be oppreſſed, and ſuffers the lying miſrepreſentations of the enemies of his people to prevail. But the day is coming when the lying lips ſhall be put to ſilence, and they who have loved as well as made a lie, ſhall lie down together in the pit.

1. The king, without ſending perſons on the ſpot to make enquiry, credits the repreſentations which his counſellors that had been hired probably ſtrenuouſly reported (for in a court what will not gold do?) and having found in the records Zedekiah's and Jehoiakim's ſtruggle for liberty, and that former kings of Jeruſalem had extended their dominions to the river Euphrates, he readily concludes that the danger was imminent, and bids an immediate ſtop be put to building the city, and appoints his governors in Samaria to ſee his orders executed. Note, It is a hard matter for kings, beſet with courtiers and flatterers, to know the truth.

Before Christ 520.

2. With delight and eagerneſs their enemies run to execute, yea to exceed their orders. They were only enjoined to cauſe the Jews to ceaſe building the city that was never begun; however this was eaſily conſtrued to extend to the temple; and having power on their ſide, there could be no reſiſtance: thus the work continued at a ſtand till the ſecond year of Darius Hyſtaſpes. Note, (1.) Nothing gives greater pleaſure to a carnal world, than the ſuppreſſion of God's cauſe and truth. (2.) Patient ſubmiſſion under unjuſt oppreſſion, is a hard leſſon. (3.) Though for a while God permits wicked men and oppreſſors to ride over our heads, their triumphing is but for a moment.

CHAP. V.

Here is, 1. The building renewed, ver. 1, 2. 2. The governors treat them more mildly, and make a fairer repreſentation of the matter to the king, ver. 3—17.

1. [a] THEN the prophets, [b] Haggai the prophet, and [c] Zechariah the ſon of Iddo, propheſied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jeruſalem, in the name of the God of Iſrael, even unto them. 2. Then roſe up [d] Zerubbabel the ſon of Shealtiel, and Jeſhua the ſon of Jozadak, and began to build the houſe of God which is at Jeruſalem: and with them were the prophets of God [e] helping them.

a 1 Eſd. vi. 1. b Hag. i. 1.
c Zech. i. 1.
d Chap. iii. 2.
e Eccleſ. iv. 11.

v. 1, 2. About fifteen years the building ſeems to have continued at a ſtand, till God by his prophets rouſed the people to the work.

1. The perſons ſent of God were Haggai and Zechariah, whoſe prophecies are preſerved. They propheſied unto them, or againſt them; reproved them for their lukewarmneſs, and provoked them to renew the building. Note, (1.) Miniſters muſt be faithful reprovers, and urge the ſluggiſh builders to their work. (2.) When God raiſes up zealous preachers of his word, then there is hope the wall will be built.

2. The effect of their prophecy was ſoon evident. Zerubbabel and Jeſhua immediately ſet themſelves to the work, and the prophets helped them; ſo that the people once more with vigour began to build. Note, (1.) They who are firſt in ſtation, ſhould be firſt to promote every good work. (2.) The help of the prophets is the moſt eſſential part towards the eſtabliſhment of the ſpiritual church: though a good magiſtrate can do much, a good miniſter can do more.

3. ¶ At the ſame time came to them Tatnai, governor on this ſide the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and ſaid thus unto them, Who hath commanded you to build this houſe, and to make up this wall? 4. [f] Then ſaid we unto them after this manner, What are the names of the men that make this building? 5. But [g] the eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, that [h] they could not cauſe them to ceaſe, till the matter came to Darius: and then they returned anſwer by letter concerning this matter. 6. ¶ The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this ſide the river, and Shethar-boznai, and [i] his companions the Apharſachites, which were on this ſide the river, ſent unto Darius the king: 7. They ſent a letter unto him, wherein was written thus; Unto Darius the king, all peace. 8. Be it known unto the king that we went into the province of Judea, to the houſe of [k] the great God, which is builded with † great ſtones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth faſt on, and proſpereth in their hands. 9. Then aſked we thoſe elders, and ſaid unto them thus, Who commanded you to build this houſe, and to make up theſe walls? 10. We aſked their names alſo, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them. 11. And thus they returned us anſwer, ſaying, [l] We are the ſervants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the houſe [m] that was builded theſe many years ago, which a great king of Iſrael builded, and ſet up. 12. But after that [n] our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, he gave them into the hand of [o] Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon the Chaldean, who deſtroyed this houſe, and carried the people away into Babylon. 13. But [p] in the firſt year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, the ſame king Cyrus made a decree to build this houſe of God. 14. And [q] the veſſels alſo of gold and ſilver of the houſe of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jeruſalem, and

f Ver. 10.
g 2 Chron. xvi. 9.
h Phil. i. 28.
519.
i Chap. iv. 7.
k Deut. x. 17.
† Chald. Stones of rolling.
l Mat. x. 32.
m 1 Kings vi. 2, &c.
n 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16, 17. Iſa. lx. 2.
o 2 Kings xxiv. 2. & xxv. 8.
p Chap. i. 1.
q Chap. i. 7, 8. & vi. 5.

and brought them into the temple of Babylon, thoſe did Cyrus the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, [r] whoſe name was Sheſhbazzar, whom he had made ‡ governor: 15. And ſaid unto him, Take theſe veſſels, go carry them into the temple that is in Jeruſalem, and let the houſe of God be builded in his place. 16. Then came the ſame Sheſhbazzar, and laid the foundation of the houſe of God which is in Jeruſalem. And ſince that time even until now, hath it been in building, [s] and yet it is not finiſhed. 17. Now therefore, if it ſeem good to the king, [t] let there be ſearch made in the king's treaſurehouſe, which is there at Babylon, whether it be ſo that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this houſe of God at Jeruſalem, and let the king ſend his pleaſure to us concerning this matter.

[r] Hag. i. 14. & ii. 2, 21.
‡ Or Deputy.
[s] Chap. vi. 14.
[t] Chap. vi. 1, 2.

v. 3—17. No ſooner began the work to revive, than the jealouſy of their neighbours began to appear.

1. The governors of Samaria, who had ſucceeded the former in their office, probably at the beginning of the new reign of Darius, immediately enquired into the authority on which the Jews proceeded. They were not however afraid or aſhamed to produce their charter, and to give in the names of the principal authors of this good work; God encouraging them, and ſtrengthening them to perſevere, till the matter came before Darius, to whom they appealed. Note, (1.) If God's eye be upon us for good, we need not fear what man can do unto us. (2.) The comfortable preſence of God ſhould quicken and enliven us to greater diligence in his ſervice.

2. The governors Tatnai and Shethar-boznai hereupon diſpatched a letter to the king, informing him of what was doing, and deſiring his directions; and herein they acted with much greater candor and honeſty than their predeceſſors, repreſenting the true ſtate of the fact. After wiſhing the king proſperity and all earthly happineſs, they inform him, that they had viſited the province of Judea, and obſerved there a magnificent ſtructure raiſing to the great God whom the Jews worſhipped, which was carried on with aſſiduity and zeal; that, on enquiring into the authority on which they preſumed thus to act, they received for anſwer, That this houſe, which a great king among them had formerly erected, and for their ſins God had ſuffered Nebuchadnezzar to deſtroy, Cyrus had given them a commiſſion to rebuild, and reſtored to them withal the veſſels which had been carried to Babylon; in conſequence of which, they had proceeded under the direction of Sheſhbazzar, their prince; and that ever ſince they had been at work upon it, though, by reaſon of the interruptions they had met, it was not yet finiſhed. They beg therefore, if the king pleaſed, ſearch might be made in the records, reſpecting the truth of this decree in their favour, and that he would inform them of his pleaſure in the matter. Note, (1.) We ſhould ever reflect with ſhame on the ſins which have provoked God's viſitations. (2.) If the people of God can but obtain a fair hearing, they need not fear for their cauſe. (3.) Many an unjuſt ſentence hath gone forth againſt the faithful, not ſo much from malice in the magiſtrate, as from the miſinformation of their enemies. (4.) Truth, tho' long ſuppreſſed, will uſually at laſt prevail.

CHAP. VI.

We have here, 1. A recital of Cyrus's decree for the building of the temple, ver. 1—5. 2. That decree enforced by a new order from Darius, ver. 6—12. 3. The finiſhing of the temple thereupon, ver. 13—15. 4. The ſolemn dedication of it, ver. 16—18. 5. The celebration of the paſſover, ver. 19—22.

1. THEN Darius the king made a decree, and [a] ſearch was made in the houſe of the † rolls, where the treaſures were laid up in Babylon. 2. And there was found at ‡ Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written: 3. In the firſt year of Cyrus the king, the ſame Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the houſe of God at Jeruſalem, Let the houſe be builded, the place where they offered ſacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be ſtrongly laid, the height thereof threeſcore cubits, and the breadth thereof threeſcore cubits. 4. [b] With three rows of great ſtones, and a row of new timber: and [c] let the expences be given out of the king's houſe. 5. And alſo [d] let the golden and ſilver veſſels of the houſe of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jeruſalem, and brought unto Babylon, be reſtored, and brought again unto the temple which is at Jeruſalem, every one to his place, and place them in the houſe of God. 6.
[e] Now therefore Tatnai, governor beyond the river, She-thar-boznai, and your companions the Apharſachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence:
7. Let the work of this houſe of God alone, let the governor of the Jews, and the elders of the Jews, build this houſe of God in his place. 8. Moreover, I make a decree, what ye ſhall do to the elders of theſe Jews, for the building of this houſe of God: that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expences be given unto theſe men, that they be not § hindered. 9. And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt-offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, ſalt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the prieſts which are at Jeruſalem, let it be given them day by day without fail: 10. [f] That they may offer ſacrifices of ‖ ſweet ſavours unto the God of heaven, and [g] pray for the life of the king and of his ſons.
11. Alſo I have made a decree, that [h] whoſoever ſhall alter this word, let the timber be pulled down from his houſe, and being ſet up, let him be † hanged thereon, and [i] let his houſe be made a dunghil for this. 12.
And the God [k] that hath cauſed his name to dwell there deſtroy all kings and people that ſhall put to their hand, to alter and to deſtroy this houſe of God which is at Jeruſalem: I Darius have made a decree, [l] let it be done with ſpeed.

[a] Chap. v. 17. 1 Eſd. vi. 23.
† Chald. Books.
‡ Or, Ecbatana, or, in a coffer.
[b] 1 Kings vi. 36.
[c] Chap. vii. 20.
[d] Chap. i. 7, 8. & v. 14.
[e] Pſ. lxxvi. 10. Prov. xxi. 30.
§ Chald. Made to ceaſe.
[f] Chap. vii. 23. Jer. xxix. 7.
‖ Chald. Reſt.
[g] 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2.
[h] Dan. iii. 29.
† Chald. Deſtroyed.
[i] Dan. ii. 5.
[k] Pſ. cxxxii. 14.
[l] Rev. xii. 16.

v. 1—12. We have here,

1. Search made, in conſequence of the application, after the original record in the houſe of the rolls, and it was found in Achmetha, thought to be Ecbatana, the ſummer reſidence of the kings of Babylon; and it contained not only a commiſſion for building the houſe, but a command to the governors to furniſh out of the revenue all neceſſary materials; which privilege it ſeems the Jews either generouſly waved, or the change of affairs at court prevented their receiving the benefit of this order. Note, (1.) Diligent enquiry after truth is neceſſary, in order to adminiſter impartial juſtice. (2.) It is prudent often to decline making uſe of thoſe offers, which the generoſity of our friends may put in our power.

2. Darius, hereupon perfectly ſatisfied, confirms the edict in its full extent. As probably the interruption the work had met with from the malice of the former governors now appeared, he charges them to give the Jews no let or moleſtation; commands them to furniſh all neceſſary materials for the building, and the ſacrifices and offerings they needed, out of the revenues; ſpeaks with deep reſpect of Iſrael's God, and puts a high value on the prayers of this favoured people, low as they were now reduced. He enforces the decree with the penalty of death on any man who dared counteract it; Let him be hanged on the beams of his own houſe, and let it be made a dunghil to perpetuate the infamy: and, as highly zealous for the honour of that glorious God, whoſe preſence had formerly ſo diſtinguiſhed this houſe, and he ſuppoſes would again, he denounces a curſe on the king or people, that ſhould ever after attempt to alter the worſhip, or deſtroy the temple. He concludes with commanding immediate execution of his orders. Note, (1.) The Lord can overrule the malice of the church's enemies, and bring good out of their evil deſigns. (2.) They are, through God's good providence, often made inſtrumental in carrying on the work of God, who have themſelves neither part nor lot in the matter. (3.) Whilſt we are enabled to truſt all our concerns with God, he hath the hearts of the greateſt in his power, and will overrule them for the purpoſes of his own glory. (4.) If kings knew the efficacy of the prayers of God's people, they would be careful to ſecure an intereſt in them. (5.) Thoſe, whom God hath ſet in authority over us, we are bound to pray for, though heathens or oppreſſors; and how much more, when truly defenders of the faith, and really nurſing fathers to the church. (6.) The curſe denounced will ſurely fall on all the enemies of God's ſpiritual temple. They who fight againſt that, deſtroy their own ſouls.

13. ¶ Then Tatnai, governor on this ſide the river, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had ſent, [m] ſo they did ſpeedily.
14. [n] And the elders of the Jews builded, and they proſpered through the propheſying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the ſon of Iddo; and they builded, and finiſhed it, according to the commandment of the God of Iſrael, and according to the † commandment of [o] Cyrus and [p] Darius, and [q] Artaxerxes king of Perſia.
15. And this houſe was finiſhed on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the ſixth year of the [m] Eſth. vi. 11. Job. v. 12, 13.

[n] Chap. v. 1.
† Chald. Decree.
[o] Chap. i. 1. & v. 13. & Ver. 3.
[p] Chap. iv. 14.
[q] Chap. vii. 1.

515.

Before Chriſt 519.

reign of Darius the king. 16. ¶ And the children of Iſrael, the prieſts and the Levites, and the reſt of the children of the ‡ captivity, kept [r] the dedication of this houſe of God with Joy. 17. And [s] offered at the dedication of this houſe of God, an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a ſin-offering for all Iſrael, twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Iſrael. 18. And they ſet the prieſts in their diviſions, and the Levites in their courſes, for the ſervice of God, which is at Jeruſalem; [t] as it is written in the book of Moſes. 19. And the children of the captivity kept the paſſover [u] upon the fourteenth day of the firſt month. 20. For the prieſts and the Levites were purified together, all of them were pure, and killed the paſſover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the prieſts, and [x] for themſelves. 21. And the children of Iſrael which were come again out of captivity, and all ſuch as had ſeparated themſelves unto them, from [y] the filthineſs of the heathen of the land, to ſeek the LORD God of Iſrael, did eat, 22. And kept the feaſt of [z] unleavened bread ſeven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and [a] turned the heart of the king of Aſſyria unto them, to ſtrengthen their hands in the work of the houſe of God, the God of Iſrael.

‡ Chald. Tranſportation.
[r] 1 Kings viii. 63. 2 Chron. vii. 5.
[s] Chap. viii. 35.
[t] Num. iii. 6. & viii. 9.
[u] Exod. xii. 6.
[x] Heb. vii. 27.
[y] Chap. ix. 11.
[z] 1 Cor. v. 8.
[a] Prov. xxi. 1. John xix. 11.

v. 13—22. When the obſtacles were removed, and the encouragements to labour ſo many, the work went on briſkly. We have here,

1. The finiſhing the temple. The governors dared no longer obſtruct the work, but, though it may be with reluctance, were immediately obliged to comply with the king's orders; whilſt the prophets Haggai and Zechariah pleaded theſe mercies they enjoyed, as an argument of God's bleſſing, and an obligation diligently to improve them; ſo that in four years the temple was compleatly finiſhed. Note, (1.) Every mercy we enjoy ſhould be improved as an argument for increaſing diligence in God's ſervice. (2.) Though the work of God in the ſoul meets with many obſtructions, and ſometimes for a while ſeems at a ſtand, or on the decline, he will not ſuffer it to fail, but will revive it in the midſt of the years, and perfect what he hath begun, till the top-ſtone be laid with ſhouting, crying, Grace, grace unto it. (3.) The grand means God makes uſe of for the perfecting of the ſaints, is the miniſtry of the word.

2. The ſolemn dedication of it. The prieſts and Levites being ſet in their ſeveral courſes, according to the law of Moſes, they offered liberal ſacrifices to God on the occaſion. As there were many, not only of Benjamin and Judah, but of the other tribes joined with them, a ſin-offering of twelve he-goats was offered for the congregation; and now through the blood of atonement having obtained reconciliation, though ſtill ſome marks of bondage continued upon them, yet with great gladneſs they rejoiced to ſee the long diſcontinued temple-worſhip once more happily revived. Note, (1.) The great concern of the returning ſinner is to obtain remiſſion of ſin. (2.) When the atoning blood is ſprinkled on the conſcience, that fills the ſoul with peace and joy in believing. (3.) Revivals of God's bleſſed worſhip and ſervice are the heart-felt rejoicing of every faithful Iſraelite.

3. The next month they kept the paſſover with great ſolemnity and exactneſs, a memorial of their eſcape from Egypt, and now of their repeated deliverance from Babylon, the ſecond houſe of their bondage. The prieſts and Levites, unanimous to purify themſelves, to a man were ready for their functions, and killed the paſſover for their brethren, as well as themſelves. Not only the people who had returned from Babylon, but many proſelytes from the heathen, who had renounced their idolatry, and were circumciſed, joined with them; and ſeven days with univerſal gladneſs they kept the feaſt of unleavened bread, God comforting their hearts, and making them happy in the protection and encouragement they received from the king. Note, (1.) All true converts to Chriſt fail not to feed upon him in the feaſt he has inſtituted, in memory of the deliverance wrought for them by his dying love. (2.) Purity in the miniſters of God's ordinances is moſt conducive to the comfort and profiting of them: under ſuch miniſtrations a bleſſing may be expected. (3.) When we draw near to God, we are called to put off all filthineſs, and ſuperfluity of naughtineſs; to ſeparate ourſelves from the ways of a wicked world; and to renounce our former company, and join ourſelves to God's people. (4.) Thoſe who wait upon God in his ways, he cauſes to rejoice. He is the well-ſpring of all ſpiritual comfort, and out of his fulneſs we ſhall receive. (5.) When God becomes our portion, he can make thoſe we feared as enemies, our faſt friends.

Before Chriſt 458.

CHAP. VII.

Here is, 1. The lineage and character of Ezra, ver. 1—6. 2. His commiſſion from Artaxerxes, and journey to Jeruſalem, ver. 7—26. 3. His grateful acknowledgment of the mercy, ver. 27, 28.

1. NOW [a] after theſe things, in the reign of [b] Artaxerxes king of Perſia, [c] Ezra the ſon of [d] Seraiah, the ſon of Azariah, the ſon of Hilkiah, 2. The ſon of Shallum, the ſon of Zadok, the ſon of Ahitub, 3. The ſon of Amariah, the ſon of Azariah, the ſon of Meraioth, 4. The ſon of Zerahiah, the ſon of Uzzi, the ſon of Bukki, 5. The ſon of Abiſhua, the ſon of Phinehas, the ſon of Eleazar, the ſon of Aaron the chief prieſt: 6. This Ezra went up from Babylon, and he was [e] a ready ſcribe in the law of Moſes, which the LORD God of Iſrael had given: and the king granted him all his requeſt, [f] according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him. 7. And [g] there went up ſome of the children of Iſrael, and of the prieſts, and [h] the Levites, and the ſingers, and the porters, and [i] the Nethinims, unto Jeruſalem, in the ſeventh year of Artaxerxes the king. 8. And he came to Jeruſalem in the fifth month, which was in the ſeventh year of the king. 9. For upon the firſt day of the firſt month began he to go up from Babylon, and on the firſt day of the fifth month, [k] came he to Jeruſalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him. 10. For Ezra had [l] prepared his heart to ſeek the law of the LORD, and [m] to do it, and [n] to teach in Iſrael ſtatutes and judgments.

[a] 1 Eſd. viii. 1.
[b] Neh. ii. 1.
[c] 1 Chron. vi. 3—14.
[d] 2 Kings xxv. 18.
[e] Ver. 11, 21. Pſ. xlv. 1.
[f] Ver. 9. Chap. viii. 22, 31.
[g] Zech. ii. 6, 7.
[h] Chap. viii. 15, &c.
[i] Chap. ii. 43.
[k] Prov. iii. 6.
[l] 1 Sam. vii. 3.
[m] John xiii. 17.
[n] 1 Tim. iii. 2. & iv. 16.

v. 1—10. Ezra ſeems, ſoon after the dedication of the temple, to have returned to court, whether to give an account of their proceedings, or to complain of the backwardneſs of the governors to ſupply them according to the king's commiſſion, or to invite more of his brethren to return, ſince their beginnings were now ſo proſperous. We have,

1. His genealogy. He was a prieſt, and nearly allied, probably uncle, to Jeſhua the high-prieſt. The omiſſions in his genealogical line may be ſupplied out of 1 Chron. vi. 7—10.

2. His character anſwered his high birth. He was eminent for his learning, eſpecially in the law of God; and as eminent for his practice. His knowledge was not barren and unfruitful; it engaged him to fidelity in doing God's will, whilſt he earneſtly ſought deeper diſcoveries of it; and he was zealouſly communicative of his ſpiritual wiſdom, in order to teach others how to walk and pleaſe God. Note, (1.) Of all learning, ſcripture learning is moſt deſirable: none beſide can make us wiſe to ſalvation. (2.) They who would know God's truth, muſt ſearch for it as for ſilver. Idleneſs and ignorance are neceſſarily connected. (3.) That is truly profitable knowledge, which is employed in the inſtruction of others in the good ways of our God. (4.) They who practiſe what they teach, can ſpeak with greater confidence, and may expect ſucceſs. Little can be hoped from the ſcribe that ſits in Moſes's ſeat, who ſaith, and doth not.

3. Having executed his commiſſion ſucceſsfully at the Perſian court, he returned to Jeruſalem, bringing along with him a number of his brethren, who hearing the proſperity of Zion, were deſirous to ſhare in it. Though the journey was long, God's preſence and providence comforted and ſtrengthened them, and they arrived ſafe, after four months travel, at Jeruſalem. Note, God's merciful providence is continually to be acknowledged in all our goings out, and comings in: every mercy we enjoy comes from his good hand.

11. ¶ Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the prieſt, the ſcribe, even a ſcribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his ſtatutes to Iſrael. 12. Artaxerxes [o] king of kings, Unto Ezra the prieſt, † a ſcribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, and [p] at ſuch a time. 13. I make a decree, that all they of the people of Iſrael, and of his prieſts and Levites in my realm, which are minded [q] of their own free will to go up to Jeruſalem, go with thee. 14. Foraſmuch as thou art ſent of the king, and of [r] his ſeven counſellers, to enquire concerning Judah and Jeruſalem, according to the law of thy God which is in thine hand: 15. And to carry the ſilver and gold, which the king and his counſellers have freely offered unto the God of Iſrael, [s] whoſe habitation

[o] Ezek. xxvi. 7. Dan. ii. 37.
† Or, a perfect ſcribe of the law of the God of heaven, peace, &c.
[p] Chap. iv. 10.
[q] Pſ. cx. 3.
[r] Eſth. i. 14.
[s] 2 Chron. vi. 2. & xxix. 6.

Before Chriſt 458.

t Chap. viii. 35.

u Chap. vi. 9.

tation is in Jeruſalem. 16. And [t] all the ſilver and gold that thou canſt find in all the province of Babylon, with the free-will offering of the people, and of the prieſts, offering willingly for the houſe of their God, which is in Jeruſalem: 17. That [u] thou mayſt buy ſpeedily with this money, bullocks, rams, lambs, with their meat-offerings, and their drink-offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the houſe of your God, which is in Jeruſalem. 18. And whatſoever ſhall ſeem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the reſt of the ſilver and gold, that do after the will of your God. 19. The veſſels alſo that are given thee, for the ſervice of the houſe of thy God, thoſe deliver thou before the God of Jeruſalem. 20. And whatſoever more ſhall be needful for the houſe of thy God, which thou ſhalt have occaſion to beſtow, beſtow it out of the king's treaſure-houſe. 21. And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treaſurers which are beyond the river, that whatſoever Ezra the prieſt, the ſcribe of the law of the God of heaven, ſhall require of you, it be done ſpeedily; 22. Unto ‡ an hundred talents of ſilver, and to an hundred § meaſures of wheat, and to an hundred baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and ſalt without preſcribing how much. 23. Whatſoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the houſe of the God of heaven: for [x] why ſhould there be wrath againſt the realm of the king and his ſons? 24. Alſo we certify you, that touching any of the prieſts, and Levites, ſingers, porters, Nethinims, or miniſters of this houſe of God, it ſhall not be lawful to impoſe toll, tribute, or cuſtom upon them. 25. And thou, Ezra, after the wiſdom of thy God, that is in thine hand, [y] ſet magiſtrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, [z] all ſuch as know the laws of thy God, and [a] teach ye them that know them not. 26. And whoſoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed ſpeedily upon him, whether it be unto death, or to ‖ baniſhment, or to confiſcation of goods, or to impriſonment.

‡ About 375,000 pounds.

§ Chald. Cors.

x Chap. x. 6.

y Exod. xviii. 21, 22.

z Mal. ii. 7. Mat. xiii. 52. Tit. i. 9.

a 2 Chron. xvii. 7.

‖ Chald. Rooting out.

v. 11—26. We have here the honourable commiſſion addreſſed to Ezra the ſcribe, from the king of Babylon, whoſe dominions were ſo extenſive, that he aſſumed the title of King of kings.

1. He gives full liberty to all the Jews in his dominions to return to their own land, under the leading of Ezra, who is conſtituted chief inquiſitor into the affairs of the Jewiſh people, and authorized to take care, that the law of God in all things may be obſerved among them.

2. He ſends by him a noble preſent from himſelf and his princes, with veſſels of ſilver and gold, to be employed in the ſervice of the temple, as Ezra and his brethren ſaw moſt adviſeable; and authoriſes him to collect from the Jews, who continued to reſide in Babylon, whatever free-will offerings they choſe to ſend to the houſe of God at Jeruſalem, to be laid out according to the will of God. Note, (1.) The revealed will of God muſt be the conſtant ſtandard of our conduct. (2.) They who are employed in ſuch truſts of public money, need be men of tried integrity.

3. He gives him a large order upon his governors, for whatever more might be wanting for the ſervice of God; to maintain which, he would grudge no expence, knowing how much his intereſt it was to engage him as a friend, and how dangerous by neglect to provoke him as an enemy. Note, (1.) How will the ſollicitude of a heathen king to obtain God's favour, riſe up in judgment to reprove the negligence and careleſsneſs of profeſſed Chriſtians? (2.) They who are zealous in the cauſe of God, will have generous hearts, and open hands.

4. He exempts all the miniſters of the ſanctuary, from the higheſt to the loweſt, from tribute, as an honourable mark of diſtinction. However now they may be ſlighted, once even heathen kings thought they ought to be had in honour.

5. Ezra is empowered to nominate magiſtrates, ſkilled in God's law, over his own people, that no heathen judge might have juriſdiction among them. They were to adminiſter juſtice, and inſtruct the ignorant; and all pains and penalties were put in their power, to puniſh the diſobedient, even to priſon or death. Note, (1.) Magiſtrates muſt not bear the ſword in vain. (2.) Among the greateſt temporal bleſſings, is an impartial adminiſtration of juſtice, according to the law of God.

27. ¶ [b] Bleſſed be the LORD God of our fathers, [c] which hath put ſuch a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the houſe of the LORD, which is in Jeruſalem: 28. And [d] hath extended mercy unto me, before the king and his counſellers, and before all the king's mighty princes: and [e] I was ſtrengthened as [f] the hand of the LORD my God was upon me, and I gathered together out of Iſrael, chief men to go up with me.

b 1 Chron. xxix. 10.

c Chap. vi. 22. Prov. xxi. 1. Phil. ii. 13. Jam. i. 17.

Before Chriſt 458.

d Chap. ix. 9.

e Pſal. cxxxviii. 3. 2 Tim. iv. 17.

f Chap. vii. 18.

v. 27, 28. With grateful acknowledgment Ezra interrupts the ſtory, to offer up one pious thankful ejaculation to his merciful God.

1. For the gracious commiſſion, which the Lord had put into the king's heart to give him. Note, (1.) In all our bleſſings we muſt look above men and means to the great Author of all grace. (2.) If there be a good deſire put into the heart, we may be aſſured it is from above.

2. For the ſupport and ſtrength he had been ſupplied with in negociating this ſervice. Note, Whatever abilities or natural fortitude we poſſeſs, we muſt aſcribe all our ſucceſs not to ourſelves, but the ſupports of God's good grace.

3. For the company God gave him, inclining his brethren, and the chief of them, to go with him. Note, (1.) It is not our perſuaſions as miniſters, but God's powerful operative grace upon the heart, which can engage any man to quit this Babylon of the world, to travel to Zion the mount of God. (2.) It is matter of moſt unſpeakable thankfulneſs to miniſters, when their preaching is made effectual to the engaging men's hearts to follow Chriſt and his goſpel.

CHAP. VIII.

We have here, 1. The company that went with Ezra to Jeruſalem, ver. 1—20. 2. The ſolemn faſt which they kept, to implore God's preſence with them in their journey, ver. 21—23. 3. The treaſure committed to the prieſts, with a ſolemn charge, ver. 24—30. 4. God's bringing them ſafe to Jeruſalem, ver. 31, 32. 5. The faithful delivery of the treaſures, ver. 33, 34. 6. Sacrifices offered, ver. 35. 7. Their commiſſions to the king's lieutenants delivered, ver. 36.

1. [a] THESE are now the chief of their fathers, and this is the genealogy of them that went up with me from Babylon, in the reign of Artaxerxes the king. 2. Of the ſons of Phinehas; Gerſhom: of the ſons of Ithamar; Daniel: of the ſons of David; [b] Hattuſh. 3. Of the ſons of Shechaniah, of the ſons of [c] Pharoſh; Zechariah: and with him were reckoned by genealogy of the males, an hundred and fifty. 4. Of the ſons of Pahath-moab; Elihoenai the ſon of Zerahiah, and with him two hundred males. 5. Of the ſons of Shechaniah; the ſon of Jahaziel, and with him three hundred males. 6. Of the ſons alſo of Adin; Ebed the ſon of Jonathan, and with him fifty males. 7. And of the ſons of Elam; Jeſhaiah the ſon of Athaliah, and with him ſeventy males. 8. And of the ſons of Shephatiah; Zebadiah the ſon of Michael, and with him fourſcore males. 9. Of the ſons of Joab; Obadiah the ſon of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen males. 10. And of the ſons of Shelomith; the ſon of Joſiphiah, and with him an hundred and threeſcore males. 11. And of the ſons of Bebai; Zechariah the ſon of Bebai, and with him twenty and eight males. 12. And of the ſons of Azgad; Johanan the † ſon of Hakkatan, and with him an hundred and ten males. 13. And of the laſt ſons of Adonikam, whoſe names are theſe, Eliphelet, Jeiel, and Shemaiah, and with him threeſcore males. 14. And of the ſons alſo of Bigvai; Uthai, and ‡ Zabbud, and with them ſeventy males. 15. ¶ And I gathered them together to [d] the river that runneth to Ahava; and there § abode we in tents three days: and [e] I viewed the people, and the prieſts, and found there [f] none of the ſons of Levi. 16. Then ſent I for Eliezer, for Ariel, for Shemaiah, and for Elnathan, and for Jarib, and for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meſhullam, chief men; alſo for Joiarib, and for Elnathan, men of underſtanding. 17. And I ſent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief, at the place Caſiphia, and I ‖ told them what they ſhould ſay unto Iddo, and to his brethren the Nethinims, at the place Caſiphia, that they ſhould bring unto us miniſters for the houſe of our God. 18. And by [g] the good hand of our God upon us, they brought us a man of underſtanding, of the ſons of Mahli, the ſon of Levi, the ſon of Iſrael, and Sherebiah, with his

a 1 Eſd. viii. 28.

b 1 Chron. iii. 22.

c Chap. ii. 3, &c.

† Or, youngeſt ſon.

‡ Or Zaccur, as ſome read.

d Pſal. cxxxvii. 1.

§ Or pitched.

e Prov. xxvii. 23. Acts xx. 28. 1 Pet. v. 2.

f Chap. vii. 7. Ver. 2.

‖ Heb. Put words in their mouth. 2 Sam. xiv. 3, 19.

g Chap. vii. 28.

Before Chriſt 458.

ſons and his brethren, eighteen; 19. And Haſhabaiah, and with him Jeſhaiah of the ſons of Merari, his brethren and their ſons, twenty; 20. [h] Alſo of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the ſervice of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of whom were expreſſed by name.

[h] See Chap. ii. 43.

v. 1—20. The proclamation of Artaxerxes having given the Jews full liberty to return to their own land, we have here the muſter-roll of thoſe who accepted the proffered liberty.

1. The volunteers in this ſervice were 1496; among them, ſeveral of great name. Many of the former families alſo followed their brethren, and all the ſons of Adonikam now left Babylon for Jeruſalem. Note, If our relations have led the way towards the good land, let it provoke us to jealouſy, and to caſt in our lot with them. Pity it is, houſes ſhould be divided, and any dear relatives chuſe to ſtay behind, rather than go with us to the heavenly Jeruſalem.

2. At a general review on New-year's day, among all this company no Levite was found. Ezra could not but be grieved at ſuch a vacancy, and, as they came not of their own accord, ſends eleven of the principal people to Iddo, who was chief over them, at Caſiphia, (a ſtreet ſo called probably at Babylon, where they reſided together), that he might provide miniſters for the houſe of God. Note, They who are backward to their duty muſt be ſtirred up to it. If miniſters are negligent, they are to be put in mind, that they take heed to their miniſtry.

3. The application ſucceeded: thirty-eight Levites, under three principal leaders, offered themſelves for the ſervice, and two hundred and twenty Nethinims accompanied them, whoſe names were honourably inſerted in the regiſter. This Ezra juſtly aſcribes to God's gracious interpoſition, inclining and diſpoſing the hearts of his miniſters to undertake the ſervice.

21. ¶ Then I [i] proclaimed a faſt there, at the river Ahava, that [k] we might afflict ourſelves before our God, [l] to ſeek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our ſubſtance. 22. For [m] I was aſhamed to require of the king a band of ſoldiers and horſemen, to help us againſt the enemy in the way: becauſe we had ſpoken unto the king, ſaying, [n] The hand of our God is upon all them for good, that ſeek him, but his power and [o] his wrath is againſt all them that forſake him. 23. So we faſted, and beſought our God for this, and [p] he was intreated of us.

[i] 2 Chron. xx. 3.
[k] Lev. xvi. 29.
[l] Jer. l. 4, 5.
[m] So 1 Cor. ix. 15.
[n] 1 Chron. xvi. 10.
[o] 2 Chron. xv. 2.
[p] Mat. vii. 7.

v. 21—23. Dangerous and tedious was the journey they were about to undertake, and they had to fear from their enemies, the Arabs, and Samaritans. Therefore they proclaim a faſt, to humble their ſouls for their ſins, and entreat God to direct their way aright, and preſerve them and theirs. They might indeed have procured a guard; but Ezra, jealous for the honour of God, in whom, before the king, he had expreſſed his firm confidence, as the protector of his people, and the deſtroyer of his enemies, would rather meet the danger, dependent on his care, than give the leaſt occaſion of offence by ſuch an application. And their prayers procured a better guard than legions of armed men; for God was intreated of them, and covered them with the ſhadow of his wing. Note, (1.) It becomes us ever to be jealous for the honour of God, and rather expoſe ourſelves to difficulty, than give any occaſion of ſtumbling to others. (2.) They who humbly ſeek God, dependent on his care, will find him a very preſent help in trouble.

24. ¶ Then I ſeparated twelve of the chief of the prieſts, Sherebiah, Haſhabiah, and ten of their brethren with them, 25. And [q] weighed unto them [r] the ſilver, and the gold, and the veſſels, even the offering of the houſe of our God, which the king, and his counſellers, and his lords, and all Iſrael there preſent, had offered. 26. I even weighed unto their hand, ſix hundred and fifty talents of ſilver, and ſilver veſſels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents: 27. Alſo twenty baſons of gold, of a thouſand drams, and two veſſels of † fine copper, ‡ precious as gold. 28. And I ſaid unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD, [s] the veſſels are holy alſo, and the ſilver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers. 29. [t] Watch ye, and keep them until ye weigh them before the chief of the prieſts, and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Iſrael at Jeruſalem, in the chambers of the houſe of the LORD. 30. So took the prieſts and the Levites the weight of the ſilver and the gold, and the veſſels, to bring them to Jeruſalem unto the houſe of our God.

[q] Chap. i. 7.
[r] Chap. vii. 15, 16.
† Heb. Yellow, or ſhining braſs.
‡ Or deſirable.
[s] Num. iv. 4.
[t] Luke xii. 37, 38. Acts xx. 31. 1 Tim. iv. 16.

v. 24—30. Before they ſet forth on their journey, Ezra appointed twelve prieſts and as many Levites, to take the charge of the treaſures and veſſels which were conſecrated to God's ſervice, with which they, as holy men employed in the ſervice of God alſo, were the fitteſt to be entruſted, till they came to Jeruſalem, where they might be produced according to their preſent weight, and their care and fidelity approved before the prieſts and chief fathers, and their brethren at Jeruſalem. Note, (1.) They who have the care of holy things, ought themſelves to be holy men. (2.) They who are entruſted with the money of the public, or the contributions devoted to charitable uſes, need be exact in their accounts, that they may, without ſuſpicion of diſhoneſty, miniſter the abundance entruſted with them. (3.) They who have the care of immortal ſouls, thoſe veſſels of mercy, infinitely more precious than gold and ſilver, need take heed, and watch always over the flock, of which the Holy Ghoſt hath made them overſeers; that when the chief ſhepherd ſhall appear, they may with comfort and confidence give an account of their ſtewardſhip.

Before Chriſt 458.

31. ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava, on the twelfth day of [u] the firſt month, to go unto Jeruſalem: and [x] the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of ſuch as lay in wait by the way. 32. And [y] we came to Jeruſalem, and abode there three days. 33. ¶ Now on the fourth day was the ſilver and the gold, and the veſſels weighed in the houſe of our God, by the hand of Merimoth the ſon of Uriah the prieſt, and with him was Eleazer the ſon of Phinehas, and with them was Jonabad the ſon of Jeſhua, and Noadiah the ſon of Binnui, Levites: 34. By number, and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time. 35. Alſo the children of thoſe that had been carried away which were come out of the captivity, [z] offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Iſrael, twelve bullocks for all Iſrael, ninety and ſix rams, ſeventy and ſeven lambs, twelve he-goats for a ſin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD. 36. ¶ And they delivered the king's commiſſions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this ſide the river, and [a] they furthered the people, and the houſe of God.

[u] Chap. vii. 9.
[x] Chap. vii. 6, 28.
[y] Neh. ii. 11.
[z] Chap. vi. 17. Rom. xii. 1.
[a] Chap. vii. 16. Rev. xii. 16.

v. 30—36. After a long journey of four months, we have here,

1. Their ſafe arrival at Jeruſalem, under the gracious conduct of a preſerving God, notwithſtanding all the wiles of their enemies. Note, (1.) None who truly ſet their faces towards glory, ever periſh by the way. Though their enemies are mighty, many, and crafty, God will break through every ſnare, and make them more than conquerors. (2.) Whenever we return ſafe from a journey, or a voyage, let us never forget the tribute of grateful acknowledgement for the mercy.

2. The faithful delivery of the dedicate treaſures and veſſels for the Lord's houſe into the hands of the chief prieſts and Levites, appointed to receive them, in tale and weight, exact as they were committed to Sherebiah and his brethren, and the receipt of them recorded to their honour. Note, It will be a happy day, when we give up our truſt to Jeſus, if we can hear him ſay, Well done, good and faithful ſervant.

3. No ſooner are they arrived, than their firſt care is to compaſs God's altar, and offer there their ſacrifices: a ſin-offering of atonement, to make peace with God, and burnt-offerings of thankſgiving for all Iſrael, now once more united in the ſame happy ſervice, and under the ſame leader. Note, When our perſons are accepted through the atoning blood, our ſervice becomes acceptable, a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmell, well-pleaſing to God.

4. Ezra delivered the commiſſions to the king's lieutenants in the neighbouring provinces, who, ſeeing the king's pleaſure, contributed as they were required to the ſupport of the people, and the houſe of God. Thus can God make his people's foes bow down at their feet, and know that he hath loved them.

CHAP. IX.

The ſun hath his ſpots; the beſt churches, in their beſt days, are not perfect. I have a few things againſt thee, Rev. ii. 20. We have here, 1. A complaint brought to Ezra of the people's ſtrange wives, ver. 1, 2. 2. The great trouble it gave him and others, ver. 3, 4. 3. His deep contrition and prayer to God on this occaſion, ver. 5—15.

457.

1. NOW [a] when theſe things were done, the princes came to me, ſaying, The people of Iſrael, and [b] the prieſts, and the Levites [c] have not ſeparated themſelves

[a] 1 Eſd. viii. 68.
[b] Mat. xxiii. 3. Rom. ii. 18, 21.
[c] Exod. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3, 4.

ſelves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebuſites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. 2. For [d] they have taken of their daughters for themſelves, and for their ſons: ſo that the holy ſeed have mingled themſelves with the people of thoſe lands: yea, the hand of the princes, and rulers hath been chief in this treſpaſs. 3. And when I heard this thing, [e] I rent my garment and my mantle, and pluckt off the hair of my head, and of my beard, and [f] ſat down aſtoniſhed. 4. Then were aſſembled unto me every one [g] that trembled at the words of the God of Iſrael, becauſe of the tranſgreſſion of thoſe that had been carried away, and I ſat aſtoniſhed until the evening ſacrifice.

[d] Mal. ii. 11.
[e] Job i. 20.
[f] Pſal. cxliii. 4. 2 Cor. vii. 11.
[g] Chap. x. 3. Iſa. lxvi. 2.

v. 1—4. All things appeared very fair and promiſing, but there were concealed abominations, which ſome of the princes, zealous for the honour of God, diſcovered and complained of.

1. They informed Ezra, as the perſon ſet in authority over them, of the ſtrange marriages which the people had contracted with the heathen; and that the prieſts and Levites, who ſhould have been the firſt to reprove ſuch wickedneſs, were equally concerned, and the princes and rulers chief in this treſpaſs; to the great diſhonour of God's law, and of their nation, as well as thereby expoſing themſelves and their children to the peril of idolatry. Note, (1.) To be unequally yoked with unbelievers, is the readieſt way to apoſtatize from God. (2.) When princes lead the way in evil, and prieſts, inſtead of remonſtrating againſt it, comply with and copy after them, no marvel iniquity among the people reigns triumphant: ſurely theſe ſhall receive the greater damnation. (3.) They who are zealous for God's honour, cannot ſee ſin committed without grief, and deſire to reſtrain it.

2. The information deeply affected the pious Ezra; in diſtreſs he rent his cloaths, plucked off his hair, and ſat down aſtoniſhed at the baſe ingratitude of the people, and trembling for the conſequences. Note, (1.) Though careleſs ſinners have no concern about their own ſouls, their zealous paſtors mourn over, and tremble for them. (2.) The ſins of profeſſors have eſpecial aggravations, and as they bring the greateſt diſhonour upon God, they awaken the deepeſt grief and indignation of the faithful.

3. Ezra's affecting grief ſoon drew to him at the temple, where he ſeems to have been, all thoſe who like him reverentially trembled before God, and feared for the conſequences of the people's ſin. Note, (1.) The word of God is an awful thing to the true-hearted Iſraelite; he trembles before it for himſelf, leaſt he ſhould offend, and for others, whom he ſees offending. (2.) We are bound to ſtrengthen the hands of thoſe, and to join with them, who zealouſly deſire to purge out every abomination from the congregation of the Lord.

5. ¶ And at the evening ſacrifice, I aroſe up from my † heavineſs, and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and [h] ſpread out my hands unto the LORD my God, 6. And ſaid, O my God, [i] I am aſhamed, and bluſh to lift up my face to thee, my God: for [k] our iniquities are increaſed over our head, and [l] our treſpaſs is grown up unto the heavens. 7. Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great treſpaſs unto this day, and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our prieſts, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the ſword, to captivity, and to a ſpoil, and to confuſion of face, as it is this day. 8. And now for a little ſpace, grace hath been ſhewed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to eſcape, and to give us a ‡ nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage. 9. For [m] we were bondmen, yet [n] our God hath not forſaken us in our bondage, but [o] hath extended mercy unto us in the ſight of the kings of Perſia, to give us a reviving to ſet up the houſe of our God, and to repair the deſolations thereof, and to give us [p] a wall in Judah and in Jeruſalem. 10. And now, O our God, what ſhall we ſay after this? for we have forſaken thy commandments, 11. Which thou haſt commanded by thy ſervants the prophets, ſaying, The land unto which ye go to poſſeſs it, is an unclean land, with the filthineſs of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it ‖ from one end to another, with their uncleanneſs. 12. Now therefore [q] give not your daughters unto their ſons, neither take their daughters unto your ſons, [r] nor ſeek their peace, or their wealth for ever: that ye may be ſtrong, and eat the good of the land, and [s] leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever. 13. And after all that is come upon us, for our evil deeds, and for our great treſpaſs, ſeeing that [t] thou our God haſt puniſhed us leſs than our iniquities deſerve, and haſt given us ſuch deliverance as this: 14. [u] Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of theſe abominations? wouldſt thou not be angry with us till thou hadſt conſumed us, ſo that there ſhould be no remnant nor eſcaping? 15. O LORD God of Iſrael, [x] thou art righteous, for we remain yet eſcaped, as it is this day: behold, [y] we are before thee in our treſpaſſes: for [z] we cannot ſtand before thee, becauſe of this.

† Or affliction.
[h] 1 Kings viii. 54.
[i] Rom. vi. 21.
[k] Pſal. xxxviii. 4. Dan. ix. 5.
[l] Gen. xviii. 20. 2 Chron. xxviii. 9. Jonah i. 2. Rev. xviii. 5.
‡ Heb. Pin. Iſa. xxii. 23.
[m] Neh. ix. 36.
[n] Pſal. cxxxvi. 23.
[o] Chap. vii. 28.
[p] Iſa. v. 2. Zech. ii. 5.
‖ Heb. From mouth to mouth. 2 Kings xxi. 16.
[q] Exod. xxiii. 32. Deut. vii. 3.
[r] Deut. xxiii. 6.
[s] Prov. xiii. 22. & xx. 7.
[t] Pſal. ciii. 10. Lam. iii. 22.
[u] John v. 14.
[x] Neh. ix. 33.
[y] Pſal. xxxii. 5.
[z] Rom. iii. 20, 23.

v. 5—15. Deep was Ezra's diſtreſs; long it continued; till the time of evening ſacrifice he ſat aſtoniſhed on the ground: then when the lamb went to the altar, he roſe; and in the hope of this atoning blood, the only refuge of the miſerable, with deep abaſement of body and ſoul he poured out his penitent confeſſions and humbling acknowledgments before God.

1. He approaches God as his covenant God, and therefore encouraged, deſperate as the caſe almoſt ſeemed, to draw near unto him. Note, (1.) There can be no true prayer, where faith doth not lead us to God as our reconciled God in Chriſt. (2.) Our repentance will ever be moſt deep and humbling, when we have the ſureſt confidence in the pardoning mercy of God. See Ezek. xvi. 61—63.

2. With ſhame and confuſion of face he appears before him, bluſhing to think of the baſeneſs and diſobedience of the people. Note, (1.) Holy ſhame will cover us in the view of our tranſgreſſion. (2.) We ſhall bluſh for thoſe who take no ſhame to themſelves. (3.) Though we can ſay my God, we ſhall the more loath ourſelves for our ingratitude againſt him.

3. He confeſſes the greatneſs and aggravations of their ſins. Though not perſonally in the tranſgreſſion, he looks on himſelf as involved in the national guilt. Like the ſtormy billows, their iniquities were ready to overwhelm them: heaped up as mountain on mountain, they reached to the clouds, and cried for vengeance; long continued, and like hereditary diſeaſes more inveterate, tranſmitted from ungodly fathers to ungodly children; neither the ſevere corrections they had ſuffered had reclaimed them, nor the late aſtoniſhing mercies which he enlarges upon, conſtrained them to return to God. Their deliverance was recent; the pure effect of God's mere grace; the favour great, that they were permitted to eſcape from the houſe of their priſon; greater, that they ſhould be fixed in God's holy place Jeruſalem; greateſt of all, that they ſhould ſee the temple raiſed, and the glorious worſhip of God reſtored, as light riſing up in the darkneſs to revive them, after the long night of their captivity. Notwithſtanding all theſe favours to prove ungrateful, what an aggravation of their tranſgreſſions! Note, (1.) True penitents go to the bottom, and bring forth the worſt they can ſay of themſelves; they deſire not to hide, but to confeſs their iniquities. (2.) Every ſin increaſes in malignity, according to the means and mercies we have ungratefully abuſed.

4. He appears at a loſs what apology to make; or rather as if almoſt aſhamed to aſk God for any farther forgiveneſs, the ſin was ſo wilful againſt a precept ſo evident and clear.

5. He acknowledges all their paſt puniſhments to be leſs than their iniquities deſerved; and expreſſes his juſt apprehenſions leaſt this repeated provocation ſhould weary out God's patience, and bring upon them final and utter extirpation. Note, (1.) In every affliction it becomes us to acknowledge God's mercy as well as juſtice, and to own while we are out of hell, that we have leſs, unſpeakably leſs ſufferings than our ſins deſerve. (2.) It is juſtly to be feared that they are near reprobacy, whom neither corrections humble, nor mercies conſtrain.

6. With entire ſatisfiedneſs in God's righteouſneſs, however he ſhould deal with them, he refers their miſerable caſe to him, if yet there might be hope, renouncing every plea, juſtifying God if he ſhould utterly conſume them, and lying down as ſelf-condemned before him, to hear their doom; deſerving wrath to the uttermoſt, but if yet ſpared, would ſtand monuments of the aſtoniſhing mercy, and tranſcendantly rich and ſovereign grace of God. Note, When we caſt our ſouls as deſperate upon God, juſtifying him in all his judgments againſt us, and glorifying his righteouſneſs, he will not, cannot thruſt us from him: his bowels yearn, his pity moves, and magnifying his mercy upon us, where ſin hath abounded, there, ſaith he, ſhall grace much more abound.

CHAP. X.

In this chapter we have, 1. The deep humiliation of the people for marrying ſtrange wives, ver. 1. 2. Shechaniah's propoſal to put them away, ver. 2—4. 3. The oath whereby the great men bound themſelves to ſtand to it, ver. 5, 6. 4. A general aſſembly called, ver. 7—9. 5. Their agreement to the reformation, ver. 10—14.

Before Christ 457.

10—14. 6. Commiſſioners appointed to enquire who were guilty in this reſpect, ver. 14—17. 7. A liſt of their names, ver. 18—44.

a 1 Eſd. viii. 91.
b Pſal. xxxii. 5. Prov. xxviii. 13. 1 John i. 9, 10.
c 1 Kings viii. 30. & ix. 3. d 2 Chron. xx. 3.
† Heb. A great weeping.
e Chap. ix. 2. Neh. xiii. 23.
f Chap. ix. 4.
g Deut. vii. 3.
h Joſh. vii. 10.
i Iſa. xxxv. 3, 4.
k Neh. v. 12.

1. NOW [a] when Ezra had prayed, and when he had [b] confeſſed, weeping and caſting himſelf down [c] before the houſe of God, there aſſembled unto him out of Iſrael, a very great congregation of men, and [d] women, and children: for the people wept † very ſore. 2. And Shechaniah the ſon of Jehiel, one of the ſons of Elam, anſwered and ſaid unto Ezra, We have treſpaſſed againſt our God, and [e] have taken ſtrange wives, of the people of the land: yet now there is hope in Iſrael concerning this thing. 3. Now therefore let us make a covenant with our God, to put away all the wives, and ſuch as are born of them, according to the counſel of my lord, and of thoſe [f] that tremble at [g] the commandment of our God, and let it be done according to the law. 4. [h] Ariſe: for this matter belongeth unto thee; we alſo will be with thee: [i] be of good courage, and do it. 5. Then aroſe Ezra, and made the chief prieſts, the Levites, and all Iſrael to [k] ſwear that they ſhould do according to this word: and they ſware.

v. 1—5. Great is the influence of one good man. No ſooner was Ezra's deep concern noiſed abroad, than we find,

1. The congregation aſſembled before the houſe of God, men, women, and children, and whilſt they beheld him thus weeping over their ſins, their eye affected their heart, and they wept ſore for themſelves, brought to a deep conviction of the great evil which they had committed. Note, It is very affecting when miniſters weep over their flocks; their tears are often more moving than their words.

2. When nothing but the ſound of weeping is heard, as if there was no hope, the voice of Shechaniah, like a good angel, revives the diſconſolate hearts of Ezra and the people. He owns the guilt which was evidently upon them, and in which his own family, v. 26. was deeply involved, but he encourages them not to deſpair. The caſe, though bad, was not utterly deſperate; a remedy might yet be found for the inveterate diſeaſe, and God pardon their paſt tranſgreſſion. He adviſes therefore without delay, that they ſhould ſolemnly engage to put away their ſtrange wives, and the children begotten of them; and that if Ezra, with thoſe who tremble at God's word, zealouſly proſecuted the matter, as he exhorts them, they would find enough to ſupport them, and the affair however difficult yet practicable. Note, (1.) In the deepeſt diſtreſſes, let us never deſpair. (2.) When our ſin is ſeen and felt, however terrible and diſcouraging the views, there is then hope. (3.) It is a great mercy in times of ſoul-dejection, to have one to ſupport our fainting hearts. (4.) However dear our ſins are, we muſt not ſtick at parting with them, elſe there is indeed no hope. (5.) That which ſeems deſperate to the dejected, the ſpirit of a courageous Iſraelite can bring about. To have a good heart in times of difficulties, is more than half to have overcome them.

3. Ezra immediately ſtruck in with the propoſal ſo agreeable to his deſires, and diſdained not to be encouraged by an inferior. On the ſpot he engaged the chief prieſts and Levites, and the aſſembled congregation, upon oath to ſtand by him, and thereto they conſented: thus the matter got into a happy train for its accompliſhment.

l 1 Eſd. ix. 1.
m Neh. xiii. 5.
† Heb. Devoted.
‡ Or excommunicated. John ix. 22.
n See 1 Sam. xii. 18.
§ Heb. Showers.
o Prov. xxviii. 13.
p Rom. xii. 2.
q See 1 Cor. vii. 12.

6. ¶ [l] Then Ezra roſe up from before the houſe of God, and went into [m] the chamber of Johanan the ſon of Eliaſhib: and when he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water: for he mourned becauſe of the tranſgreſſion of them that had been carried away. 7. And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jeruſalem, unto all the children of the captivity, that they ſhould gather themſelves together unto Jeruſalem; 8. And that whoſoever would not come within three days, according to the counſel of the princes and the elders, all his ſubſtance ſhould be † forfeited, and himſelf ‡ ſeparated from the congregation of thoſe that had been carried away. 9. ¶ Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin, gathered themſelves together unto Jeruſalem within three days: it was the ninth month, on the twentieth day of the month, and [n] all the people ſat in the ſtreet of the houſe of God, trembling becauſe of this matter, and for the § great rain. 10. And Ezra the prieſt ſtood up, and ſaid unto them, Ye have tranſgreſſed, and have taken ſtrange wives to increaſe the treſpaſs of Iſrael. 11. Now therefore [o] make confeſſion unto the LORD God of your fathers, and [p] do his pleaſure: and [q] ſeparate yourſelves from the people of the land, and from the ſtrange wives. 12. Then all the congregation anſwered, and ſaid with a loud voice, As thou haſt ſaid, ſo muſt we do. 13. But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to ſtand without, neither is this a work of one day or two: for we ‖ are many that have tranſgreſſed in this thing. 14. Let now our rulers of all the congregation ſtand, and let all them which have taken ſtrange wives in our cities, come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us.

Before Christ 457.

‖ Or, Have greatly offended in this thing.

v. 6—14. Ezra, determined neither to eat nor drink till he ſaw this unhappy affair in a way to be redreſſed, went to Johanan's chamber, a perſon of note who reſided at the temple, and there probably a counſel was held; on the breaking up of which, the following proclamation went forth:

1. A general aſſembly of all the children of the captivity is ſummoned to attend within three days, on pain of forfeiture of lands and goods to the treaſury of God, and excommunication from the church and congregation of Iſrael.

2. The ſummons was univerſally obeyed: the people aſſembled in the ſtreet that led to the temple, trembling for the penalties which might be inflicted on them for their diſobedience, and yet more deeply through fear of God's diſpleaſure, as the ſign of which they interpreted the great and unuſual rain that now fell; as if the angry heavens loured over their guilty ſouls, and threatned a freſh deluge of wrath to ſweep them away. Note, Trembling conſciences are ready to interpret every providence as a token of evil.

3. Ezra addreſſed the aſſembled congregation, ſetting before them the heinous guilt they were under, endeavouring to bring them to a penitent ſenſe and confeſſion of it, and engaging them to put away their ſtrange and idolatrous wives. Note, That is no real repentance, which is extorted by force; it muſt proceed from conviction.

4. The people, convinced of the neceſſity of complying with his exhortation, conſented to the expedient; but as multitudes were culpable, and it would require time to examine every caſe, and the violent rain at preſent ſo greatly incommoded them; therefore they propoſe, that perſons be particularly appointed to take cognizance of the matter with their judges and elders of every city, that thus the matter might be thoroughly cured, and impartial juſtice done, in order that the wrath, which they acknowledge they had provoked, might be averted from them. Note, (1.) No man parts with his ſins, till he ſees he is undone and loſt if he perſeveres in them. Conviction muſt precede converſion. (2.) When we truly return to God, he will return to us, and cauſe all his anger to ceaſe.

r See Ge. vii. 1.
† Or, ſtood againſt this matter.
456.
s 1 K x. 15.
t Mat. 8.
u Lev.
x Lev. y See Ch ii.

15. ¶ [r] Only Jonathan the ſon of Aſahel, and Jahaziah the ſon of Tikvah, † were employed about this matter: and Meſhullam, and Shabbethai the Levite helped them. 16. And the children of the captivity did ſo: and Ezra the prieſt, with certain chief of the fathers, after the houſe of their fathers, and all of them by their names were ſeparated, and ſat down in the firſt day of the tenth month to examine the matter. 17. ¶ And they made an end with all the men that had taken ſtrange wives, by the firſt day of the firſt month. 18. ¶ And among the ſons of the prieſts, there were found that had taken ſtrange wives: namely, of the ſons of Jeſhua the ſon of Jozadak, and his brethren; Maaſeiah, and Eliezar, and Jarib, and Gedaliah. 19. And [s] they gave their hands, that [t] they would put away their wives; and [u] being guilty, they offered [x] a ram of the flock for their treſpaſs. 20. And of the ſons of [y] Immer; Hanani and Zebadiah. 21. And of the ſons of Harim; Maaſeiah, and Elijah, and Shemaiah, and Jehiel, and Uzziah. 22. And of the ſons of Paſhur; Elioenai, Maaſeiah, Iſhmael, Nethaneel, Jozabad, and Elaſah. 23. Alſo of the Levites; Jozabad, and Shimei, and Kelaiah, (the ſame is Kelita) Pethahiah, Judah, and Eliezer. 24. Of the ſingers alſo; Eliaſhib: and of the porters; Shallum, and Telem, and Uri. 25. Moreover, of Iſrael: of the ſons of Paroſh; Ramiah, and Jeziah, and Malchiah, and Miamim, and Eleazar, Malchijah, and Benaiah. 26. And of the ſons of Elam; Mattaniah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jeremoth, and Eliah. 27. And of the ſons of Zattu; Elioenai, Eliaſhib, Mattaniah, and Jeremoth, and Zabad, and Aziza. 28. Of the ſons alſo of Bebai; Jehohanan, Hananiah, Zabbai, and Athlai. 29. And of the ſons of Bani; Meſhullam, Malluch, and Adaiah, Jaſhub, and Sheal, and Ramoth. 30. And of the ſons of Pahath-moab;

Adna,

Before Chriſt 456.

Adna, and Chelal, Benaiah, Maaſeiah, Mattaniah, Bezaleel, and Binnui, and Manaſſeh. 31. And of the ſons of Harim; Eliezer, Iſhijah, Malchiah, Shemaiah, Shimeon, 32. Benjamin, Malluch, and Shemariah. 33. Of the ſons of Haſhum; Mattenai, Mattathah, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jeremai, Manaſſeh, and Shimei. 34. Of the ſons of Bani; Maadai, Amram, and Uel, 35. Benaiah, Bedeiah, Chelluh, 36. Vaniah, Meremoth, Eliaſhib, 37. Mattaniah, Mattenai, and Jaaſau, 38. And Bani, and Binnui, Shimei, 39. And Shelamiah, and Nathan, and Adaiah, 40. † Machnadebai, Shaſhai, Sharai, 41. Azareel, and Shelemiah, Shemariah, 42. Shallum, Amariah, and Joſeph. 43. Of the ſons of Nebo, Jeiel, Mattathiah, Zabad, Zebina, Jadau, and Joel, Benaiah. 44. All theſe had taken ſtrange wives: and ſome of them had wives by whom they had children.

† Some read, Mabnadebai.

v. 15—44. Ezra having conſented to the reaſonable propoſal of the people, they were diſmiſſed for the time, and commiſſioners appointed to hear and determine.

1. The perſons delegated to prepare the matter for the judges, were Jonathan and Jahaziah, aſſiſted by two Levites; though the words will bear an oppoſite ſenſe, that theſe ſtood againſt this matter; oppoſed it, either the ſeparation deſigned, or the method of procedure.

2. Ezra, with the chief of the fathers, decided on the caſes brought before them, wholly giving themſelves up to this buſineſs, till in about three months they had compleated it. Note, They who have the cauſe of God at heart, ſpare neither time nor pains to ſerve it.

Before Chriſt 456.

3. They who were found guilty, ſubmitted to put away their wives, no doubt taking becoming care for their proviſion. Among the offenders were found ſome even of the high-prieſt's family, who, as eſpecially guilty, ſolemnly engaged to divorce their ſtrange wives; and, conſcious of their ſin, offered a treſpaſs-offering, as confeſſing their iniquity, and crying for mercy. Many other prieſts and Levites, with other Iſraelites, to the amount of about 113, who were convicted of tranſgreſſing, put away their ſtrange wives; and many of them had children by them, which made the ſeparation more irkſome. It is generally ſuppoſed, the children were not diſmiſſed with their mothers, but educated in the knowledge of the God of Iſrael. Note, (1.) When they who ſhould be patterns of goodneſs to others, offend themſelves, their example is grievouſly infectious. (2.) The people of God may for a while, yea for a long ſeaſon, backſlide, but God will not ſuffer them to periſh in their iniquities, but will pluck them as brands from the burning; tho' ſuch uſually paſs through the deepeſt diſtreſs of ſoul, when the backſlider in heart is filled with his own way, and often go down to their graves in darkneſs, mourning over the bitter remembrance of their unfaithfulneſs.

THE

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of
NEHEMIAH.

This book, called in ſome verſions the ſecond of Ezra, is the continuation of the hiſtory of the Jews, during the twelve years of Nehemiah's government, who obtained a commiſſion from Artaxerxes to go to Jeruſalem, chap. i, ii. and, by his zeal and pious adminiſtration, greatly furthered the fortifying Jeruſalem, in oppoſition to the enemies who obſtructed it, chap. iii, iv. vi. Redreſſed the people's grievances, chap. v. Stirred up a ſpirit of religion among them, chap. viii, ix, x. Peopled Jeruſalem, chap. vii, xi, xii. Reformed their abuſes, chap. xiii. and brought their affairs into a more proſperous and flouriſhing ſituation. With this book the hiſtorical ſcripture of the Old Teſtament cloſes.

Before Chriſt 445.

CHAP. I.

We have here, 1. Nehemiah at court, inquiſitive about his brethren at Jeruſalem, ver. 1, 2. 2. Much affected at hearing their diſtreſſes, and with faſting and prayer applying to God thereupon, ver. 3, 4. 3. His prayer recorded, ver. 5—11.

1. THE words of Nehemiah the ſon of Hachaliah. And it came to paſs in the month Chiſleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shuſhan the palace, 2. That Hanani one of my brethren came, he and certain men of Judah: and I aſked them concerning the Jews that had eſcaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jeruſalem. 3. And they ſaid unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province, are in great affliction and reproach: [a] the wall of Jeruſalem alſo is [b] broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire. 4. ¶ And it came to paſs when I heard theſe words, that [c] I ſat down and [d] wept, and mourned certain days, and [e] faſted and prayed before the God of heaven,

[a] Chap. ii. 17.
[b] 2 Kings xxv. 10.
[c] Zeph. iii. 18.
[d] Rom. xii. 15. 1 Cor. xii. 26.
[e] Joel ii. 12.

v. 1—4. Nehemiah, though nobly advanced at court, and honoured with a manſion in the palace of Shuſhan, ſtill bore on his heart the welfare of Zion, and ſtill preferred Jeruſalem's proſperity before his chief joy. Note, God has ſometimes his friends, even in the palace; and though a court is uſually a ſoil too unfavourable to religious concerns, he can make monuments of ſovereign grace even in Nero's houſhold.

1. Nehemiah, on the viſit of ſome of his brethren to Babylon, probably to ſollicit ſome favour in behalf of the Jews, earneſtly enquires after Jeruſalem, and the returned captives who dwelt in it; but receives an afflicting narrative of their wretched ſituation: the city lying in its deſolations, and the people under diſtreſs, inſulted, oppreſſed, and reproached by their more powerful neighbours. Note, (1.) We muſt not in our advancement forget ourſelves, and grow ſtrange to our brethren, becauſe poor or afflicted. (2.) The perſecution of God's people, that diſcourages the unfaithful, awakens the greater zeal and concern of ſuch as are true-hearted.

Before Chriſt 445.

2. The melancholy account affected the good Nehemiah: the tears ran down his cheeks, and in affliction for days he faſted and prayed before the God of heaven, that he would remember their miſery, and return to them in mercy. Note, (1.) In ſeaſons of public or private calamities, faſting and weeping ſhould accompany our prayers. (2.) It is a relief to the oppreſſion of our own ſpirit, when with tears we can pour our complaints into the boſom of a compaſſionate God. (3.) Whilſt we have a God in heaven to go to, our deepeſt diſtreſſes are not deſperate.

5. And ſaid, I beſeech thee, [f] O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that [g] keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him and obſerve his commandments: 6. Let thine ear now be attentive, and [h] thine eyes open, that thou mayſt hear the prayer of thy ſervant, which I pray before thee now, [i] day and night, for the children of Iſrael thy ſervants, and confeſs the ſins of the children of Iſrael, which we have ſinned [k] againſt thee: both I, and my father's houſe have ſinned. 7. We have dealt very corruptly againſt thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the ſtatutes, nor the judgments which thou commandedſt thy ſervant Moſes. 8. [l] Remember, I beſeech thee, the word that thou commandedſt thy ſervant Moſes, ſaying, [m] If ye tranſgreſs, I will ſcatter you abroad among the nations: 9. But [n] if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them; [o] though there were of you caſt out unto the uttermoſt part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have choſen to ſet my name there. 10. Now [p] theſe are thy ſervants, and thy people, [q] whom thou haſt redeemed by thy great power, and by thy ſtrong hand. 11. O LORD, I beſeech thee, let now thine ear

[f] Dan. ix. 4.
[g] Exod. xx. 6.
[h] 1 Kings viii. 29. Pſ. xxxiv. 15.
[i] Luke xviii. 1.
[k] Pſ. li. 4.
[l] Iſa. xliii. 26.
[m] Lev. xxvi. 39. Deut. iv. 25, &c.
[n] Joel ii. 17.
[o] Deut. xxx. 4.
[p] Dan. ix. 15.
[q] Exod. xiii. 9.

Before Chriſt 445.

ear be attentive to the prayer of thy ſervant, and to the prayer of thy ſervants, [r] who deſire to fear thy name: and proſper, I pray thee, thy ſervant this day, and grant him mercy in the ſight of [s] this man. For I was the king's cup-bearer.

[r] Iſa. xxvi. 8. Heb. xiii. 18.
[s] Pſ. ix. 20.

v. 5—11. Nehemiah's prayer, here recorded, ſpeaks the gracious temper of his ſoul.

1. He draws near to God with reverence and godly fear, yet mixed with filial confidence, as to the great God, terrible in judgments, yet faithful to his promiſes, and never failing thoſe who truſt him. Note, (1.) There is a reverential fear of God, which is perfectly conſiſtent with the moſt enlarged love towards him. (2.) They who experience the love of God in their ſouls, may comfortably conclude the ſtability of his covenant with them.

2. He humbly prays God would graciouſly hear the prayer, which zeal for his glory dictated, and ſee the deſires of his heart, which his grace excited. Note, When God pours out upon us the ſpirit of grace and ſupplication, we may aſſuredly conclude, he will hear and anſwer us.

3. He penitently confeſſes their ſins, that juſtly had brought down theſe afflictions upon them; taking ſhame to himſelf, among the reſt, for having added to the provocation. Note, Confeſſion of ſin ſhould have a place in every prayer.

4. He pleads for mercy and pardon, urging, as the ground of his hope, the divine promiſe God had given by Moſes, that whenever they returned to him, wherever diſperſed, or however diſtreſſed, he would return to them, (See Deut. xxx. 1—5.) and ſuch was now their earneſt deſire and prayer. They were ſtill God's people, and what he had done for them of old, encouraged his hope, that he would yet redeem them from the hand of their preſent enemy; for which purpoſe he particularly begs God would proſper his intentions, and grant him favour that day in the ſight of this man, the king, whoſe cup-bearer he was. Note, (1.) As we ſee the fulfilment of God's threatnings, we may conclude the fulfilment of God's promiſes. (2.) The moſt reviving pleas in prayer are drawn from God's faithful word, wherein he hath cauſed us to put our truſt. (3.) Tho' we are not worthy to be called God's people, yet, when we return with penitential prayer, he will not diſclaim the relation. (4.) The greateſt kings are but dying men, and worms of earth, and their hearts are in God's hand, to turn them according to the good pleaſure of his own will.

CHAP. II.

We have here, 1. Nehemiah's ſadneſs taken notice of by the king, his enquiries into the cauſe, and the commiſſion given him, ver. 1—8. 2. His journey to Jeruſalem, ver. 9—11. 3. His ſucceſs in engaging the people to rebuild the walls, ver. 12—18. 4. The oppoſition he met with, ver. 19, 20.

445.

1. AND it came to paſs in the month Niſan, in the twentieth year of [a] Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and [b] I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime ſad in his preſence. 2. Wherefore the king ſaid unto me, Why is thy countenance ſad, ſeeing thou art not ſick? [c] this is nothing elſe but ſorrow of heart. Then I was very ſore afraid, 3. And ſaid unto the king, [d] Let the king live for ever: [e] why ſhould not my countenance be ſad, when the city, the place of my fathers ſepulchres, lieth waſte, and the gates thereof are conſumed with fire? 4. Then the king ſaid unto me, For what doſt thou make requeſt? So [f] I prayed to the God of heaven. 5. And I ſaid unto the king, If it pleaſe the king, and if thy ſervant have found favour in thy ſight, that thou wouldſt ſend me [g] unto Judah, unto the city of my father's ſepulchres, that I may build it. 6. And the king ſaid unto me, (the † queen alſo ſitting by him) For how long ſhall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? [h] So it pleaſed the king to ſend me, and I ſet him [i] a time. 7. Moreover, I ſaid unto the king, If it pleaſe the king, let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over, till I come into Judah; 8. And a letter unto Aſaph, the keeper of the king's foreſt, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which appertained to the houſe, and for the wall of the city, and for the houſe that I ſhall enter into. And [k] the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

[a] Ezra vii. 1.
[b] Chap. i. 11.
[c] Prov. xv. 13.
[d] 1 Kings i. 31. Dan. ii. 4. & vi. 6, 21.
[e] See 1 Sam. iv. 20, 21.
[f] As Exod. xiv. 15. 1 Sam. i. 13.
[g] See Pſal. cii. 14.
† Heb. Wiſe.
[h] See Chap. i. 11. Pſ. lxv. 2.
[i] Chap. v. 14. & xiii. 6.
[k] Ezra v. 5. & vii. 6, 9, 23. Ver. 18.

v. 1—8. Four months in ſecret Nehemiah lamented and prayed over his afflicted country, and now his turn in waiting probably being come, he is called to attend the king as his cup-bearer, where we find,

1. His ſadneſs. The grief of his heart affected his countenance; and, though a courtier, he could not, or perhaps ſought not, to diſſemble his ſorrows.

2. The king immediately obſerved, as he preſented the cup, the unuſual ſadneſs which appeared viſible in his aſpect, and kindly enquired after the cauſe, as he perceived it was not ſickneſs, but ſome inward ſorrow that dejected him. Note, (1.) A kind ſollicitude for thoſe who ſerve us, becomes every maſter towards his ſervants. (2.) There is a bitterneſs of heart that changes the countenance more than ſickneſs; and a burden of ſin and ſorrow, more heavy to be borne than that of pain or diſeaſe.

3. He, with great reſpect, informs the king of the cauſe of his grief. He owns he was afraid at the king's enquiry, either, leſt he ſhould be angry at him for appearing ſad in his preſence, or refuſe him the requeſt he was about to make. He therefore wiſely prefaced his apology with dutiful wiſhes for the king's proſperity, then owns the deſolations of Jeruſalem lay heavy on his mind, and hopes the king would not think his ſorrows unreaſonable, whilſt the afflictions of his native land, where ſlept his pious anceſtors, could not but beget in his heart tender ſympathy. Note, (1.) Inordinate fear of man is apt to overtake us. (2.) When we take in hand God's work, we cannot but be deeply concerned for the ſucceſs. (3.) The afflictions of God's church and people draw forth the ſympathetic tear from every friend of Zion. (4.) In our paſſage through this mortal vale, the beſt of men muſt expect to meet dark and gloomy days. (5.) There is a King who minutes our ſorrows, and will not ſuffer us to mourn long, without a word of kind conſolation.

4. The king perceiving the meaning of theſe ſorrows, and his fear to aſk, kindly bids him make his requeſt. Note, Chriſt our king hath given us an unlimited promiſe, and ſhall we be backward to make our requeſts known unto him?

5. Encouraged by this condeſcenſion, he lifts up his heart to God for power to ſpeak aright, and a bleſſing on his requeſt; a warm ejaculation fled to the throne of grace, and God ſtrengthened and proſpered him. He begs permiſſion to rebuild his native city, a convoy to guard him ſafe, and an order upon the governors to ſupply him with neceſſaries for the work. Note, (1.) Whatever we ſet about, let prayer prepare the way. (2.) Frequent ejaculations tend to preſerve the ſpirituality of our temper. (3.) Nothing is too much to aſk when we come to Jeſus, who will do for us exceeding abundantly above all we can aſk or think.

6. The king conſented he ſhould go; but, unwilling to part with him long, engages him to return within a ſtipulated time. The queen, who providentially was now preſent, probably ſtood his friend, and he had peculiar reaſon that day to acknowledge the good hand of God in his ſucceſs. Note, (1.) The prayer of faith never returns in vain. (2.) Providential help is often given, which we little expected; and friends raiſed up of God in our difficulties, unknown to us before. (3.) Whatever mercy we receive, let God's good hand be acknowledged with thankfulneſs.

9. ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river: and gave them the king's letters. (Now the king had ſent captains of the army, and horſemen with me. 10. When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the ſervant the Ammonite, heard of it, [l] it grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to ſeek the welfare of the children of Iſrael. 11. So [m] I came to Jeruſalem, and was there three days. 12. ¶ And [n] I aroſe in the night, I and ſome few men with me, neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jeruſalem: neither was there any beaſt with me, ſave the beaſt that I rode upon. 13. And I went out by night, by [o] the gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to [p] the dung-port, and viewed the walls of Jeruſalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were conſumed with fire. 14. Then I went on to [q] the gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool: but there was no place for the beaſt that was under me to paſs. 15. Then went I up in the night by [r] the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entred by the gate of the valley, and ſo returned. 16. And the rulers [s] knew not whither I went, or what I did, neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the prieſts, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the reſt that did the work. 17. ¶ Then ſaid I unto them, Ye ſee the diſtreſs that we are in, how Jeruſalem lieth waſte, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire: come and let us build up the [l] See Num. xxii. 3. Eſt. v. 13. Prov. xxvii. 4. Acts xiii. 45.

[m] Ezra viii. 32.
[n] Pſ. cxix. 60. Rom. xii. 11.
[o] 2 Chron. xxvi. 9.
[p] Chap. iii. 13.
[q] Chap. iii. 15.
[r] 2 Sam. xv. 23.
[s] Eccleſ. iii. 7.

the wall of Jeruſalem, that we be [t] no more a reproach. 18. Then I told them of [u] the hand of my God which was good upon me; and alſo the king's words that he had ſpoken unto me. And they ſaid, Let us riſe up and build. So they ſtrengthned their hands for this good work. 19. But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah [x] the ſervant the Ammonite, and Geſhem the Arabian heard it, [y] they laughed us to ſcorn, and deſpiſed us, and ſaid, What is this thing that ye do? [z] will ye rebel againſt the king? 20. Then anſwered I them, and ſaid unto them, The God of heaven, he will proſper us; therefore we his ſervants will ariſe and build: but [a] you have no portion, nor right, [b] nor memorial in Jeruſalem.

v. 9—20. The king having permitted Nehemiah to go, and given him an order upon the governors, grants him withal an honourable eſcort to protect him. Note, Each child of God, whom the king of heaven delights to honour, is attended with mightier angelic guards. We have here,

1. The vexation of Tobiah and Sanballat, the enemies of the Jews, on hearing of Nehemiah's journey, and the deſign of it. Note, Every favour ſhown the ſervants of God, awakens the envy, and provokes the rage of a wicked world.

2. The ſurvey Nehemiah took of the ſtate of the walls. He reſted on his arrival three days, and by night, with a few ſelect perſons for ſecreſy, that the deſign he was forming might not be known, or counteracted, went round the walls to obſerve the breaches, and what repairs would be needful. Note, (1.) Secreſy and ſilence are very neceſſary, when our enemies are ſo ready to take the alarm. The wiſdom of the ſerpent is uſeful, when joined to the innocence of the dove. (2.) A well-ſettled plan of procedure is the way to enſure ſucceſs in every enterprize.

3. The diſcovery he made to the rulers, of his commiſſion. He aſſembled them, intimated the ruinous ſtate of the city, and the reproach which their defenceleſs ſtate brought on them from their wicked neighbours; then informed them of God's good providence in advancing him at court, giving him favour with the king, and produced his commiſſion for repairing their deſolations, encouraging them hereupon to ſet about the work. Quickened by ſuch an exhortation, they eagerly ſeize the opportunity, and ſtrengthen each other immediately to ariſe and build the wall. Note, (1.) A good miniſter, or magiſtrate, that is active and zealous, will find many ready to ſecond his labours, who themſelves had not courage to lead. (2.) They who would work heartily for God, muſt begin out of hand. Delays are dangerous.

4. The oppoſition the work met. Their old and ſworn foes derided their attempts, and maligned their intentions; but Nehemiah, undiſmayed, and confident in God's bleſſing, deſpiſed their taunts, and perſiſted in the work; nor would ſuffer theſe Samaritans to have any portion or lot among them. Note, (1.) Every arrow of invenomed malice, deriſion, ſlander, and threatning, will be ſhot againſt God's ſaints; but they are clad in armour weapon-proof. (2.) Inſtead of being diſcouraged, we ſhould be quickened by oppoſition: if God proſper us, we need not fear.

CHAP. III.

In this chapter we have the building the wall, the order of the work, the names of the builders, and their proſperous concluſion, ver. 1—32.

1. THEN [a] Eliaſhib the high prieſt roſe up with his brethren the prieſts, and they built [b] the ſheep-gate, they ſanctified it, and ſet up the doors of it; [c] even unto the tower of Meah they ſanctified it, unto the tower of [d] Hananeel. 2. And † next unto him builded [e] the men of Jericho: and next to them builded Zaccur the ſon of Imri. 3. But [f] the fiſh-gate did the ſons of Haſſenah build, who alſo laid the beams thereof, and [g] ſet up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. 4. And next unto them repaired Meremoth the ſon of Urijah the ſon of Koz: and next unto them repaired Meſhullam the ſon of Berechiah, the ſon of Meſhezabeel: and next unto them repaired Zadok the ſon of Baana. 5. And next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles [h] put not their necks to the work of their Lord. 6. Moreover, [i] the old gate repaired Jehoiadah the ſon of Paſeah, and Meſhullam the ſon of Beſodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and ſet up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. 7. And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the throne of the governor on this ſide the river. 8. Next unto him repaired Uzziel the ſon of Harhaiah, of the goldſmiths: next unto him alſo repaired Hananiah the ſon of one of the apothecaries, and they fortified Jeruſalem [k] unto the broad wall. 9. And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the ſon of Hur, the ruler of the half part of Jeruſalem. 10. And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the ſon of Harumaph, even over againſt his houſe: and next unto him repaired Hattuſh the ſon of Haſhabniah. 11. Malchijah the ſon of Harim, and Haſhub the ſon of Pahath-moab, repaired the ‡ other piece, [l] and the tower of the furnaces. 12. And next unto him repaired Shallum the ſon of Haloheſh, the ruler of the half part of Jeruſalem, he and [m] his daughters. 13. [n] The valley-gate repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of Zanoah; they built it, and ſet up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thouſand cubits on the wall unto the dung-gate. 14. But the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the ſon of Rechab, the ruler of part of Beth-haccerem: he built it, and ſet up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof. 15. But [o] the gate of the fountain repaired Shallun the ſon of Col-hozeh, the ruler of part of Mizpah: he built it, and covered it, and ſet up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of [h] the pool of Siloah by the king's garden, and unto the ſtairs that go down from the city of David. 16. After him repaired Nehemiah the ſon of Azbuk, the ruler of the half part of Beth-zur, unto the place over againſt the ſepulchres of David, and to [q] the pool that was made, and unto the houſe of the mighty. 17. After him repaired the Levites, Rehum the ſon of Bani: next unto him repaired Haſhabiah the ruler of the half part of Keilah, in his part. 18. After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the ſon of Henadad, the ruler of the half part of Keilah. 19. And next to him repaired Ezer the ſon of Jeſhua, the ruler of Mizpah, another piece over againſt the going up to the armory, at the turning of the wall. 20. After him Baruch the ſon of § Zabbai, [r] earneſtly repaired the other piece, from the turning of the wall, unto the door of the houſe of Eliaſhib the high prieſt. 21. After him repaired Meremoth the ſon of Urijah, the ſon of Koz, another piece, from the door of the houſe of Eliaſhib, even to the end of the houſe of Eliaſhib. 22. And after him repaired the prieſts, the men of the plain. 23. After him repaired Benjamin, and Haſhub, over againſt their houſe: after him repaired Azariah, the ſon of Maaſeiah, the ſon of Ananiah, by his houſe. 24. After him repaired Binnui the ſon of Henadad, another piece, from the houſe of Azariah, unto the turning of the wall, even unto the corner. 25. Palal the ſon of Uzai, over againſt the turning of the wall, and the tower which lieth out from the king's high houſe, that was by [s] the court of the priſon: after him, Pedaiah the ſon of Paroſh. 26. Moreover, [t] the Nethinims dwelt in ‖ Ophel, † unto the place over againſt [u] the water-gate toward the eaſt, and the tower that lieth out. 27. After them the Tekoites repaired another piece, over againſt the great tower that lieth out, even unto the wall of Ophel. 28. [x] From above the horſe-gate repaired the prieſts, every one over againſt his houſe. 29. After them repaired Zadok the ſon of Immer, over againſt his houſe: after him repaired alſo Shemaiah, the ſon of Shechaniah, the keeper of the eaſt-gate. 30. After him repaired Hananiah the ſon of Shelemiah, and Hanun the ſixth ſon of Zalaph, another piece: after him repaired Meſhullam the ſon of Berechiah, over againſt his chamber. 31. After him repaired Malchiah, the goldſmith's ſon, unto the place of the Nethinims, and of the merchants over againſt the gate Miphkad, and to the ‡ going up of the corner. 32. And between the going up of the corner unto the ſheep-gate, repaired the goldſmiths and the merchants.

v. 1—32. The work being reſolved upon, we have here the diſtribution of it. Holy emulation warmed their hearts, and zeal for the public welfare quickened their labour.

---

[t] Chap. i. 3.

[u] Ver. 8.

[x] Prov. xxx. 22.

[y] See Job xxx. 1. Pſ. xliv. 13, 14. Jer. xx. 7, 8. Heb. xi. 36.

[z] Chap. vi. 6

[a] Ezra iv. 3. Acts viii. 21.

[b] Rev. xxi. 27.

[a] Chap. xii. 10.

[b] John v. 2.

[c] Chap. xii. 39.

[d] Jer. xxxi. 38.

† Heb. At his hand.

[e] Ezra ii. 34.

[f] Chap. xii. 39. Zeph. i. 10.

[g] See Chap. vi. 1. & vii. 1.

[h] Judg. v. 23.

[i] Chap. xii. 39.

[k] Chap. xii. 38.

‡ Heb. Second meaſure.

[l] Chap. xii. 38.

[m] See Exod. xxxv. 25. Phil. iv. 3.

[n] Chap. ii. 13.

[o] Chap. ii. 14.

[p] John ix.

[q] 2 Kings xx. 20.

§ Or, Zaccai.

[r] Rom. xii. 11.

[s] Jer. xxxii. 2. & xxxiii. 1. & xxxvii. 21.

[t] Ezra ii. 43.

‖ Or, the tower. 2 Chron. xxvii. 3.

† i. e. Repaired unto, &c.

[u] Chap. viii. 1. & xii. 37.

[x] 2 Kings xi. 16. 2 Chron. xxiii. 15. Jer. xxxi. 40.

‡ Or, corner-chamber.

1. The high prieſt with his brethren led the way, beginning at the ſheep-gate, through which the ſacrifices went to the temple; and when they had finiſhed their portion, they ſanctified it by prayer and thankſgiving, for the aſſiſtance God had given them. Note, (1.) Miniſters of God ſhould ſhow among the foremoſt zeal for his glory, and diligence in his ſervice. (2.) Our common employments ſhould be ſanctified by prayer and thankſgiving. (3.) They who look up to God for help, will be enabled to finiſh the work he hath given them to do.

2. The reſt zealouſly followed ſo good an example; and not only the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, but thoſe of the neighbouring cities and villages, chearfully lent their hand to the work. Rulers, and people of all trades and occupations, aſſiſted. None were too great to think themſelves debaſed by labouring; none ſo little, but that they could contribute ſomething to the general good. The nobles of Tekoa alone refuſed their aſſiſtance, and therefore a juſt brand of infamy ſtands for ever on their memory. Note, (1.) Unanimity in a good cauſe is the ſureſt token of ſucceſs. (2.) Every man hath ſomething to do for God according to his ſtation and abilities: none are ſo little as to be uſeleſs; none ſo great, as to be above the work of the Lord.

3. Shallum's daughters are honourably mentioned, as aſſiſting in this good work. Though they could not themſelves handle the trowel, they could hire aſſiſtance, and provide materials. Good women in every age have been great helpers in the cauſe of God.

4. One of the builders is noted for his zeal, v. 20. another, though the ſixth ſon, is remarked as more honourable than his brethren, v. 30. who ſeem not to have like him engaged in the ſervice. Note, (1.) When the work is God's, we cannot be too zealouſly affected. (2.) The bleſſing of God doth not always follow the birthright: the younger ſon is often the better man.

5. Some, who had finiſhed their firſt portion, having done ſooner than their brethren, undertook a ſecond, v. 4—21. 5—27. When we affect the ſervice, we ſhall not merely conſider how much we muſt do to ſave our credit, but do all we can, becauſe we love the cauſe.

CHAP. IV.

God's work muſt needs meet oppoſition from a wicked world. 1. Their enemies mocked and ridiculed them, and they anſwered with their prayers, ver. 1—6. 2. By the vigilance and courage of Nehemiah, their attempt to interrupt the work is defeated, ver. 7—23.

1. BUT it came to paſs that [a] when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and [b] took great indignation, and [c] mocked the Jews. 2. And he ſpake before his brethren, and the army of Samaria, and ſaid, What do [d] theſe feeble Jews? will they fortify themſelves? will they ſacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the ſtones out of the heaps of the rubbiſh which are burnt? 3. Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he ſaid, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he ſhall even break down their ſtone-wall. 4. [e] Hear, O our God, for we are deſpiſed: and [f] turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity: 5. And [g] cover not their iniquity, and let not their ſin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders. 6. So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people [h] had a mind to work.

[a] Chap. ii. 10.
[b] Acts v. 17.
[c] Chap. ii. 19.
[d] 1 Cor. i. 27.
[e] Pſ. cxxiii. 2, 3.
[f] Prov. iii. 34.
[g] Pſ. lxix. 27, 28. & cix. 14, 15. Jer. xviii. 23.
[h] Pſ. cx. 3.

v. 1—6. Never did the cauſe of God begin to proſper, but the enemies of God began to malign and reſiſt it. Let us never be diſcouraged if we ſee this old enmity revive.

1. Sanballat and Tobiah, the ſworn enemies of the Jews, no ſooner have intelligence of the deſign, than, vexed at the heart, they ſet themſelves to oppoſe it. They treat the feeble Jews with ſcorn, ridicule the attempt as impracticable; mock the hopes they entertained, that they ſhould finiſh the work, and dedicate it with ſacrifice; and Tobiah wittily repreſents their contemptible efforts, as if the wall was ſo low, a fox might leap over it, and the materials ſo weak, that his feet would throw down their building. Note, (1.) Ridicule and contempt are ſome of the ſharp arrows in the world's quiver, which they never fail to throw at God's faithful labourers. (2.) Though many pretend to mock and deſpiſe the work of God, at heart they are grieved, and fear whereunto this will grow. (3.) One wicked man encourages another; but though ſcoffers make their bands ſtrong, God will cover them ſhortly with confuſion.

2. Nehemiah prays againſt the revilings of his enemies; and, if he can intereſt God's regard for him, little cares for their oppoſition, which he knows God will then turn to their own ſhame. Note, (1.) The way to anſwer the ſcorn of the world, is by carrying our caſe to the Lord our God: he heareth, and judgeth. (2.) They who would be Chriſt's ſervants, muſt expect the world's ill word and abuſe. (3.) Though we may not, from a ſpirit of private revenge, pray againſt men's oppoſition, we cannot but wiſh God would glorify himſelf, and vindicate his own cauſe in the confuſion of all his enemies. (4.) They who diſcourage the hearts of God's faithful labourers, treaſure up a peculiar meaſure of wrath againſt the day of wrath.

3. The people, more encouraged by Nehemiah's prayer, than deterred by their enemies abuſe, raiſed the wall all round the city to half its height, for their hearts were in the work. Note, (1.) Much may be done in a little while, when all are hearty in lending their aſſiſtance. (2.) We need not fear the revilings of men, when we are aſſured of the bleſſing of God upon our labours.

7. ¶ But it came to paſs, that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and [i] the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Aſhdodites heard that the walls of Jeruſalem † were made up, and that the breaches began to be ſtopped, then [k] they were very wroth, 8. And [l] conſpired all of them together, to come and to fight againſt Jeruſalem, and to hinder it. 9. ‡ Nevertheleſs, [m] we made our prayer unto our God, and [n] ſet a watch againſt them day and night, becauſe of them. 10. And Judah ſaid, [o] The ſtrength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbiſh, ſo that [p] we are not able to build the wall. 11. And our adverſaries ſaid, [q] They ſhall not know, neither ſee, till we come in the midſt among them, and ſlay them, and cauſe the work to ceaſe. 12. And it came to paſs that when the Jews which dwelt by them, came, they ſaid unto us ten times, § From all places, whence ye ſhall return unto us, they will be upon you. 13. ¶ [r] Therefore ſet I ‖ in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even ſet the people after their families, with their ſwords, their ſpears, and their bows. 14. And I looked, and roſe up, and ſaid unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the reſt of the people, [s] Be not ye afraid of them: remember the LORD [t] which is great and terrible, and [u] fight for your brethren, your ſons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houſes. 15. And it came to paſs when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and [x] God had brought their counſel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

[i] Chap. ii. 19.
† Heb. Aſcended.
[k] Gen. iii. 15.
[l] See 2 Chron. xx. 1. Mark v. 9.
‡ Or, therefore.
[m] Pſ. l. 15.
[n] Mat. xxvi. 41.
[o] See Num. xxxii. 9.
[p] Num. xiii. 31.
[q] Pſ. lvi. 6.
§ Or, From all places ye muſt return to us. Or, From all places we come, that ye may return to us.
[r] Pſ. cxii. 5.
‖ Heb. From the lower parts of the places.
[s] Num. xiv. 9.
[t] Exod. xv. 3.
[u] So 2 Sam. x. 12. Pſ. cxxii. 8.
[x] Job v. 12, &c.

v. 7—15. When ſecret reviling prevented not the progreſs of the building, by open force they prepared to reſiſt it.

1. Sanballat and Tobiah engaged the Arabians, Ammonites, and Aſhdodites, to aſſiſt them, and join their forces to attack the Jews, whoſe piety they alike hated, and whoſe growing proſperity they envied. To cruſh them therefore in the bud, they in great wrath formed a league, ſecretly contriving to fall upon the builders before they were apprized of their danger, and there to maſſacre them, unarmed and unprepared; the conſequence of which muſt needs be the interruption of the building. Note, (1.) The hatred of the wicked is a deadly hatred, that thirſteth for the precious life. Perſecutors of God's people are ever cruel. (2.) When God's cauſe is to be oppreſſed, they who were never ſo much at variance among themſelves, will cordially unite their forces againſt this hated object. (3.) Though craft and power be with the enemies of God's church, he that ſitteth above the heavens mocks at their impotent attempts.

2. The faintheartedneſs of ſome of the men of Judah was as great a diſcouragement, as the threatnings of the Samaritans. Wearied with the ſervice, diſheartened at the difficulties, and deſpairing of ſucceſs, they are ready to ceaſe their efforts, as if tired out, and unable longer to ſupport the fatigue. Note (1.) Whilſt without are fightings, within will often be fears. (2.) Unbelieving Iſraelites are a greater hindrance than infidel enemies.

3. Intelligence was brought of their enemies deſigns, either by friends, who wiſhed them to be prepared, or by falſe-hearted Jews, gained over by the Samaritans, who ſought to diſcourage their brethren; as it may be rendered, inſtead of, from all places whence ye ſhall return unto us, they will be upon you; from all places we come, that ye may return to us: ſave yourſelves from danger, return every man to his city, and leave the work alone. Note, (1.) Though the counſels of the wicked are never ſo ſecret, cret, God can detect and diſappoint them. (2.) Falſe friends are more dangerous than open enemies.

Before Chriſt 445.

4. Nehemiah bravely and prudently provided againſt the impending danger. To God he firſt committed their caſe, in fervent prayer for direction and ſupport; then placed a proper guard, ſome behind the wall, where it was loweſt, and others on the higher part, or towers, whence they could moſt incommode the enemy. And, as he perceived them in conſternation, he encourages them to truſt on God, their almighty aid, whoſe arm could eaſily baffle their foes; and animates them to fight, from the conſideration that their all was at ſtake, and on their courage the ſafety of all depended. Note, (1.) In every diſtreſs our firſt recourſe ſhould be to God. (2.) Every prudent human means muſt be diligently uſed in dependance on him. (3.) Nothing inſpires the heart of a believer with ſuch courage, as the views of that almighty grace engaged for his ſupport.

5. The enemy hearing their deſign diſcovered, and the preparations made to receive them, deſiſted from their enterprize, and the work again happily went forward. Note, Experience of God's care over us ſhould engage our increaſing fidelity and zeal in his ſervice.

16. And it came to paſs from that time forth, that the half of my ſervants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the ſpears, the ſhields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the houſe of Judah. 17. They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with thoſe that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon. 18. For the builders, every one had his ſword girded † by his ſide, and ſo builded: and he that ſounded the trumpet was by me. 19. ¶ And I ſaid unto the nobles and to the rulers, and to the reſt of the people, The work is great and large, and we are ſeparated upon the wall, one far from another. 20. In what place therefore ye hear the ſound of the trumpet, reſort ye thither unto us: [y] our God ſhall fight for us. 21. So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the ſpears, from the riſing of the morning, till the ſtars appeared. 22. Likewiſe at the ſame time, ſaid I unto the people, Let every one with his ſervant lodge within Jeruſalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day. 23. So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my ſervants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, ‡ ſaving that every one put them off for waſhing.

† Heb. On his loins.

y Exod. xiv. 14, 25. Deut. i. 30. Rom. viii. 31.

‡ Or, every one went with his weapon for water; as Judg. v. 11.

v. 16—23. Though the preſent ſtorm was blown over, Nehemiah took care to be always prepared for any unforeſeen attack. Security is dangerous: it becomes the ſoldier of Chriſt to be continually on his guard.

1. Half Nehemiah's guards were ready accoutred continually, whilſt the other half worked on the wall, and relieved each other. Every builder had his ſword on his thigh, and his weapons ready at hand, that at a moment's warning he might be ready. Their rulers alſo ſtood behind them to encourage them, and Nehemiah kept a trumpeter near him, that at any approach of danger, on the ſignal given, they might immediately aſſemble in a body where he was. Note, (1.) They who labour for God, ever need the ſword of the ſpirit, that they may be ready armed againſt every enemy. (2.) Union among Chriſtians is their great ſtability. (3.) They who are diſtinguiſhed in ſtation, gifts, or office, muſt be encouragers of others by their zeal and examples.

2. To ſtrengthen them againſt any ſurprize by night, Nehemiah cauſed all the country labourers to lodge in the city, that they might be at hand in caſe of attack. As for himſelf and his attendants, they never put off their cloathes, unleſs to change, or to waſh for any ceremonial uncleanneſs. From the dawn of day to the twilight they held their ſpears; and at night, whilſt ſome kept guard, the reſt were ready at a moment's call. Note. (1.) As we are ever in danger, we muſt watch always: our ſpiritual enemies neither ſleep nor ſlumber. (2.) Any hardſhip will the good ſoldier of Jeſus Chriſt chearfully endure, when called to it for the glory of God, and the ſervice of immortal ſouls.

CHAP. V.

Foreign foes being diſappointed, Nehemiah ſets himſelf to redreſs domeſtic grievances. 1. The poor complain of their debts and oppreſſions, ver. 1—5. 2. Nehemiah expoſtulates with the oppreſſors, ver. 6—13. And 3. ſets them an example of compaſſion and tenderneſs, ver. 14—19.

1. AND [a] there was a great cry of the people, and of their wives, againſt [b] their brethren the Jews. 2. For there were that ſaid, We, our ſons, and our daughters are many: therefore [c] we take up corn for them, that we may eat and live. 3. Some alſo there were that ſaid, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houſes, that we might buy corn, becauſe of the dearth. 4. There were alſo that ſaid, We have borrowed money for [d] the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards. 5. Yet now [e] our fleſh is as the fleſh of our brethren, our children as their children: and lo, we bring into [f] bondage our ſons and our daughters, to be ſervants, and ſome of our daughters are brought unto bondage already, neither is it in our power to redeem them: for other men have our lands and vineyards.

a Iſa. v. 7.
b Lev. xxv 35. Deut. xv. 7. Jam. ii. 6, 15.

Before Chriſt 445.

c Hag. i. 6.
d Ezra vii. 24.
e Iſa. lviii. 7.
f Lev. xxv. 39.

v. 1—5. We heard but late the cry of fear, becauſe of the enemy without; here we have the cry of the poor, becauſe of the oppreſſor within. Two cauſes had contributed to their poverty and diſtreſs, the dearth of their land, and the tribute ſtill lying on them which muſt be paid. To ſatisfy the cravings of hunger for themſelves and families, as well as the relentleſs demands of the tax-gatherers, they were obliged not only to mortgage their lands and vineyards, but to ſell their children, tho' of the ſame ſtock and family as the richeſt, to relieve their wants, without the power of redemption, becauſe of the growing debt from the uſury exacted by their hard-hearted brethren. Note, (1.) Among the moſt unhappy ſituations in life, we may juſtly reckon being in debt without power to pay. (2.) It is cruel to take advantage of our brethren's diſtreſs, and to make their yoke heavier by uſurious exactions. (3.) When times are hard, the wants of the poor cry for relief: it becomes us to have our ears open to their application, and our hand ready to relieve their wants. (4.) Let thoſe who grind the faces of the poor, tremble at their cries, which enter into the ears of a compaſſionate God. (5.) The diſtreſs of his family is more grievous to a tender parent, than his own.

6. ¶ And [g] I was very angry, when I heard their cry, and theſe words. 7. Then † I conſulted with myſelf, and [h] I rebuked the nobles and the rulers, and ſaid unto them, [i] You exact uſury every one of his brother. And I ſet a great aſſembly againſt them. 8. And I ſaid unto them, We, after our ability, [k] have redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were ſold unto the heathen; and will you even ſell your brethren? or ſhall they be ſold unto us? Then held they their peace, and found nothing to anſwer. 9. Alſo I ſaid, It is not good that ye do; ought ye not to walk [l] in the fear of our God, [m] becauſe of the reproach of the heathen our enemies? 10. I likewiſe, and my brethren, and my ſervants might exact of them money and corn: I pray you [n] let us leave off this uſury. 11. [o] Reſtore, I pray you, to them even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houſes, alſo the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine and the oil, that ye exact of them. 12. Then ſaid they, We will reſtore them, and [p] will require nothing of them; ſo will we do as thou ſayeſt. Then I called the prieſts, and [q] took an oath of them, that they ſhould do according to this promiſe. 13. Alſo [r] I ſhook my lap, and ſaid, So God ſhake out every man from his houſe, and from his labour, that performeth not this promiſe, even thus be he ſhaken out, and emptied. And [s] all the congregation ſaid, Amen, and praiſed the LORD. And the people [t] did according to this promiſe.

g Eph. iv. 26.
† Heb. My heart conſulted in me.
h 1 Tim. v. 20.
i Exod. xxii. 25. Lev. xxv. 36.
k Lev. xxv. 48.
l Lev. xxv. 36.
m 2 Sam. xii. 14. Rom. ii. 24. 1 Pet. ii. 12.
n Pſ. xv. 5. Ezek. xviii. 8.
o Lev. vi. 4. Luke xix. 8.
p Luke vi. 35.
q Ezra x. 5. Jer. xxxiv. 8, 9.
r Mat. x. 14. Acts xiii. 51. & xviii. 6.
s As Deut. xxvii. 15, &c. t Pſ. l. 14.

v. 6—13. With tender ſympathy for his brethren's diſtreſſed caſe, the good Nehemiah defers not to ſeek immediate redreſs. It was of more importance to ſecure the God of the poor deſtitute for their friend, than to dwell in a city that had bars and gates.

1. He was angry. A holy indignation warmed his heart; yet, not haſty in his ſpirit, he bethought him how beſt the grievance might be redreſſed. Note, (1.) We may be angry without offending, when ſin, and not the perſon of the ſinner, is the object of our diſpleaſure. (2.) Before we rebuke, we ſhould deliberate, that we may ſpeak not the language of paſſion, but the word of meekneſs.

2. He openly rebukes the nobles, who had been the authors of the oppreſſion; called an aſſembly to determine upon the caſe; or engaged the people in a body to bring in their complaints, that the offenders might be convicted, and the abuſe reformed. Note, (1.) No man is too great to be above the reproof of a faithful miniſter. (2.) Popular complaints, when juſt, demand ſpeedy redreſs.

3. He remonſtrates with them on the evil of their conduct; not merely to reform them by his authority, but to awaken their conſciences to a ſenſe of ſin. They were their brethren, and therefore entitled to peculiar tenderneſs: many of them had been but lately redeemed from their heathen maſters, to whom, at Babylon, and the countries around, they had been ſold; and to bring them again into bondage would be very cruel. They who did ſuch things muſt needs be deſtitute of the fear of God. Himſelf, and thoſe with them, had ſhewn them a better example: beſides, nothing would give the heathen around them greater cauſe for reproach. Therefore he intreats them to immediate reſtitution of the mortgaged lands and houſes, and to deſiſt from their exorbitant uſury. Note, (1.) The relation we ſtand in to each other as brethren ſhould engage our compaſſions. (2.) They who are once God's redeemed people, ought never more to return into bondage. (3.) They who have a zeal for God's cauſe, will be tenderly careful to bring no reproach upon it. (4.) A worldly-minded and niggardly profeſſor is the greateſt ſcandal to religion. (5.) When we have done ill, it becomes us to labour to undo it. There can be no ſimplicity towards God, without reſtitution to the oppreſſed. (6.) They who themſelves ſet a good example, can ſpeak with greater confidence. (7.) It is a wiſe man's maxim to entreat where he may command, and ſeek to engage a compliance, rather than uſe compulſion.

4. As they could not anſwer his remonſtrance, and profeſſed their readineſs to comply with his requeſt, the prieſts are called to adminiſter an oath to them, and with a ſolemn execration to bind them to be faithful thereto. Nor were they backward, but added their ready Amen to the oath he exacted, and praiſed the Lord, both thoſe who were relieved, for the mercy they had received; and they who had yielded up the mortgaged lands, that God had given them ſuch a heart; and their performance was as punctual, as the oath was ſolemn. Note, (1.) It is a mercy when a wiſe rebuke finds an obedient ear. (2.) An oath is ſacredly to be fulfilled: the perjured God will judge.

14. ¶ Moreover, from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year, [u] even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, [x] I and my brethren have not eaten the bread of the governor. 15. But the former governors that had been before me, were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, beſide forty ſhekels of ſilver, yea even their ſervants bare rule over the people: but ſo did not I, [y] becauſe of the fear of God. 16. Yea, alſo I continued in the work of this wall, [z] neither bought we any land: and all my ſervants were gathered thither unto the work: 17. Moreover, [a] there were at my table an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, beſides thoſe that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us. 18. Now that which was prepared for me daily, was one ox, and ſix choice ſheep: alſo fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days ſtore of all ſorts of wine: yet for all this required not I the bread of the governor, becauſe the bondage was heavy upon this people. 19. [b] Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people.

[u] Chap. xiii. 6.
[x] 1 Cor. ix. 4, 15.
[y] Prov. xvi. 6.
[z] See Acts xx. 33.
[a] 1 Pet. iv. 9.
[b] Chap. xiii. 22.

v. 14—19. Nehemiah's uprightneſs was a ſevere reproof to the rulers oppreſſion; and he relates it not as priding himſelf in it, but as giving them an example.

1. They who were between Zerubbabel and him, had been maintained at the public expence in a table, and daily ſalary of between four and five pounds; beſides that, they ſuffered their ſervants to domineer, and, by perquiſites extorted from the people, made themſelves grievouſly chargeable. Note, (1.) It is the ſcandal and ſhame of governors to fleece the people, to enrich themſelves. (2.) They who connive at their ſervants inſolence and rapaciouſneſs, are chargeable with all the evil they commit.

2. Nehemiah himſelf had done very differently. Far from receiving wages, or enriching himſelf by purchaſes, or ſuffering his ſervants to be burdenſome, he had freely executed the office of governor; maintained himſelf and houſhold out of his own eſtate; employed all his people without hire or reward; and, becauſe he ſaw the heavy bondage which the people ſtill laboured under, he kept an open table for the reception of an hundred and fifty gueſts daily, beſides entertaining all the ſtrangers who came to them. And this he aſcribes to the fear of God, which influenced his conduct, and engaged him to this conſcientious diſcharge of his office. Note, (1.) True patriots are ever above ſelfiſh views, and rather generouſly ſpend their own, than rapaciouſly plunder the public. (2.) That which we do not through pride or love of fame, but through the fear of God, will be an acceptable ſervice. (3.) It becomes us in times of private or public diſtreſs, generouſly to remit even our juſt dues. (4.) True hoſpitality is as commendable, as the extravagant luxury of great mens tables is blameable.

3. He makes his prayer to God for a remembrance, not as pleading deſert, but expecting the reward of grace. God, who had diſpoſed his heart for the ſervice, would, he knew, recompenſe theſe labours of love. Note, What we generouſly expend in God's ſervice, we cannot loſe by: though we ſhould now receive no return, if he remember us for good, that will be an abundant recompence.

CHAP. VI.

We have here, 1. The treacherous deſigns of Sanballat diſappointed, ver. 1—4. 2. His malignant letter diſregarded, ver. 5. 3. The falſe prophets baffled, ver. 10—14. 4. The work finiſhed, notwithſtanding the treachery of ſome Jews, ver. 15—19.

1. NOW it came to paſs, [a] when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and Geſhem the Arabian, and the reſt of our enemies heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein; ([b] though at that time I had not ſet up the doors upon the gates), 2. That Sanballat and Geſhem [c] ſent unto me, ſaying, Come, let us meet together in ſome one of the villages in the plain of [d] Ono: but [e] they thought to do me miſchief. 3. And [f] I ſent meſſengers unto them, ſaying, I am doing a great work, ſo that I cannot come down: why ſhould the work ceaſe, whilſt I leave it, and come down to you? 4. Yet they ſent unto me four times after this ſort; and I anſwered them after the ſame manner.

[a] Chap. ii. 10, 19.
[b] Chap. iii. 3.
[c] Prov. xxvi. 24, 25.
[d] 1 Chron. viii. 12.
[e] Pſ. xxxvii. 12.
[f] Mat. x. 16.

v. 1—4. The reſtleſs enemies of God's people could not bear to ſee the work ſo proſperous, without attempts to hinder and obſtruct it; and therefore they lay a ſnare to take off Nehemiah, the great promoter of the work, by inviting him to a friendly conference in one of the villages of Benjamin. But ſuſpecting ſome plot, or having received ſome intelligence of their deſign, he refuſed to go, pleading the urgency of his work as his excuſe for not meeting them. Four ſeveral times this propoſal was made, and as often rejected with the ſame anſwer. Note, (1.) The propoſals of known enemies ſhould be weighed with jealous caution. (2.) When we have buſineſs which calls, viſits of compliment and civility muſt be poſtponed. (3.) Repeated ſollicitations to do what is evil, or imprudent, ſhould meet with repeated denials.

5. Then ſent Sanballat his ſervant unto me, in like manner, the fifth time, with an open letter in his hand: 6. Wherein was written; [g] It is reported among the heathen, and † Gaſhmu ſaith it, that thou and the Jews [h] think to rebel: for which cauſe thou buildeſt the wall, that thou mayeſt be their king, according to theſe words. 7. And thou haſt alſo appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jeruſalem, ſaying, There is a king in Judah: and now ſhall it be reported to the king according to theſe words. Come now therefore, and let us take counſel together. 8. Then I ſent unto him, ſaying, There are no ſuch things done as thou ſayeſt, but [i] thou feigneſt them out of thine own heart. 9. For they all made us afraid, ſaying, [k] Their hands ſhall be weakned from the work, that it be not done. ‡ Now therefore, O God, ſtrengthen my hands.

[g] Jer. xx. 10.
† Geſhem, Ver. 1, 2.
[h] Ezra iv. 13. Chap. ii. 19.
[i] Pſ. lii. 2.
[k] 2 Tim. i. 7.
‡ Or, Now therefore I will ſtrengthen, &c.

v. 5—9. When one deſign miſcarries, Sanballat contrives another: ſince he cannot ſeduce him from the work, he ſeeks to terrify him.

1. He ſends a letter, intimating the information which Geſhem, or Gaſhmu, had given, and deſiring a conference thereupon; pretending friendſhip, as if, ſhould the report ſpread, of his intention to rebel, and make himſelf king, the conſequence might be dangerous. Note, (1.) Fair profeſſions of friendſhip often cloak foul deſigns. (2.) It is an old plot of the enemies of God's people, to repreſent them as ſeditious, and make them obnoxious to the government.

2. Nehemiah eaſily ſaw the deſign was to weaken his hands, and therefore, whilſt he denies the accuſation, and lays the invention at the door of his enemy, he looks to God to ſtrengthen him, and then his foes may rage in vain. Note, (1.) No lies, or malevolent reports, ſhould weaken our hands from the work of God. (2.) They who have almighty power engaged for them, may look up to God and be comforted; he will uphold them. (3.) The more the enemy rages, the more ſhall God's ſtrength be perfected in our weakneſs.

10. After-

Before Chriſt 445.

10. Afterwards I came unto the houſe of Shemaiah the ſon of Delaiah, the ſon of Mehetabeel, who was ſhut up; and [l] he ſaid, Let us meet together in the houſe of God, within the temple, and let us ſhut the doors of the temple; for they will come to ſlay thee, yea in the night will they come to ſlay thee. 11. And I ſaid, [m] Should ſuch a man as I flee? and who is there, that being as I am, would go into the temple to ſave his life? I will not go in. 12. And lo, I perceived that God had not ſent him, but that [n] he pronounced this propheſy againſt me; for Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him. 13. Therefore was he hired, that I ſhould be afraid, and do ſo, and ſin, and that they might have matter for an evil report, that they might reproach me. 14. [o] My God, think thou upon Tobiah and Sanballat, according to theſe their works, and on [p] the propheteſs Noadiah, and the reſt of the prophets, that would have put me in fear.

l Mat. vii. 15.
m Prov. xxviii. 1.
n Ezek. xiii. 22.
o Chap. xiii. 25.
p Ezek. xiii. 17. Rev. ii. 20.

v. 10—14. Deſpairing of ſucceſs by his own contrivances, Sanballat, by bribes, engages ſome of the Jews to betray Nehemiah. The plot laid was under pretence of zeal for his ſafety, which was in danger, to induce him to take refuge in the temple, which was both unlawful for him, as not being a prieſt, and would immediately diſcourage the workmen, and give juſt ſuſpicion that the former accuſations were true. The perſon employed was Shemaiah, a pretended propheteſs, Noadiah, and others. Nehemiah ſeems to have had a good opinion of Shemaiah, and to have come to conſult him on the difficulties and dangers to which he was expoſed; and he, to put him in fear, let him know his life was in danger that very night, unleſs he ſecured himſelf in the temple. But Nehemiah with ſcorn rejected the cowardly ſtep to which he was adviſed, ſo unbecoming a man of his ſtation and character. The advice, ſo contrary to God's glory, detected the lying prophet; and Nehemiah ſoon diſcovered Sanballat at the bottom of this plot, deſigning to draw him into ſin, and thereby blacken his character, and hurt his influence. For ſuch wickedneſs he referred their judgment to God, who would ſurely viſit for theſe things. Note, (1.) The treachery of pretended friends is more to be feared, than the oppoſition of profeſſed foes. (2.) Satan's miniſters often wear the garb of God's prophets. We muſt not believe every ſpirit, but try the ſpirits, whether they are of God. (3.) When God's cauſe is at ſtake, our very life muſt not be dear unto us. (4.) It is better to brave the greateſt dangers than commit the leaſt ſin. (5.) The devil's deſign in tempting us to ſin, is not only to wound our own ſouls, but to bring reproach upon our holy profeſſion. (6.) The deepeſt laid ſchemes for his people's hurt, God can diſappoint to his enemies confuſion. (7.) Wo to that ſinner, whoſe iniquity is marked before God, and whoſe judgment lingereth not.

15. ¶ So [q] the wall was finiſhed, in the twenty and fifth day of the month Elul, in fifty and two days. 16. And it came to paſs, that when all our enemies heard thereof, and all the heathen that were about us ſaw theſe things, they were much caſt down in their own eyes: for [r] they perceived that this work was wrought of our God. 17. ¶ Moreover, in thoſe days the nobles of Judah [s] ſent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them. 18. For there were many in Judah ſworn unto him, becauſe he was the ſon-in-law of Shechaniah the ſon of Arah; and his ſon Johanan had taken the daughter of Meſhullam, the ſon of Berechiah. 19. Alſo they reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my † words to him: and Tobiah ſent letters to put me in fear.

q Prov. xxi. 30.
r Pſ. cxxvi. 2.
s Lam. i. 2. Mic. vii. 5, 6.
† Or, matters.

v. 15—19. If God bleſs, then we ſhall be bleſſed in ſpite of every enemy. We have here,

1. The wall finiſhed, to the great diſmay and vexation of their neighbours, in fifty-two days. God's hand evidently appeared in the work, and therefore all oppoſition was impotent and vain. Note, (1.) When we are hearty in God's ſervice, much may be done in a little time. (2.) The enemies of God's people ſhall be made to ſee and own his care over them. (3.) When God will work, none can let it.

2. The treacherous correſpondence carried on between Tobiah and ſome of the nobles, and many of the people of Judah; ſo ungrateful were they to Nehemiah, and ſo falſe to the intereſts of their own country. Tobiah and his ſon had both married Jewiſh wives; therefore their families were intimately connected with him; ſpoke handſomely of him to Nehemiah, as a man worthy his regard; and when he utterly diſclaimed all connection with him, they reported all he ſaid to Tobiah, who ſeeing Nehemiah fixed, deſpaired of ingratiating himſelf, and tried by letters to intimidate him. Note, (1.) Nobility is no proof againſt baſeneſs and bribery. The greateſt men of a ſtate are often the betrayers of it. (2.) Intimate familiarity, and connection with the ungodly, cannot but tend to corrupt our own ſouls. (3.) Though the enemy threaten never ſo high, we need not fear whilſt God is on our ſide.

Before Chriſt 444.

CHAP. VII.

The city being fortified, we have here, 1. A conſtant guard appointed, ver. 1—4. 2. A review of the people, in order to ſupply the city with inhabitants, ver. 5—73.

1. NOW it came to paſs when the wall was built, and [a] I had ſet up the doors, and the porters, and the ſingers, and the Levites were appointed, 2. That I gave my brother [b] Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jeruſalem: 3. (for he was a faithful man, and [c] feared God above many). And I ſaid unto them, Let not the gates of Jeruſalem be opened, until the ſun be hot; and while they ſtand by let them ſhut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over againſt his houſe. 4. Now the city was † large and great: but the people were few therein, and the houſes were not builded.

a Chap. vi. 1.
b Chap. i. 2.
c Exod. xviii. 21.
About 444.
† Heb. Broad in ſpaces.

v. 1—4. The wall being finiſhed, and the gates ſet up, the Levites, porters, and ſingers, who had aſſiſted at the work, returned to their ſervice in the temple; and Nehemiah being, as is generally ſuppoſed, obliged to return for a ſeaſon to Babylon, (from whence he came afterwards, and for twelve years preſided over the Jewiſh ſtate) he endeavours to provide for their ſafety during his abſence. His brother Hanani, and Hananiah, a man eminent for his fear of God, are appointed to take care of the city, which, though walled, was thinly peopled, and the houſes in general lay in ruins; and as he had juſt cauſe to ſuſpect the deſigns of the enemy, to prevent ſurprize, he appoints a guard of the inhabitants to watch the city by night, each againſt his own houſe; enjoins the governors to ſee the gates carefully ſhut at evening, and not to be opened till the ſun had been ſome time riſen, that if any ambuſh was laid near the city, it might be diſcovered. Note, (1.) They who are eminent for the fear of God above many, are the fitteſt to be truſted with any public charge, becauſe they will make conſcience of fulfilling it. (2.) They who would be always ſafe, muſt always be upon their guard. (3.) Every man's family is his great concern: he hath need well watch over them night and day, if he would preſerve them from the deſtroyer.

5. ¶ And [d] my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy: and I found a regiſter of the genealogy of them which came up at the firſt, and found written therein, 6. [e] Theſe are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of thoſe that had been carried away, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jeruſalem, and to Judah, every one unto his city; 7. Who came with Zerubbabel: Jeſhua, Nehemiah, † Azariah, ‡ Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilſhan, Miſpereth, Bigvai, Nehum, Baanah; the number, I ſay, of the men of the people of Iſrael, was this; 8. The children of Paroſh, two thouſand an hundred ſeventy and two. 9. The children of Shephatiah, three hundred ſeventy and two. 10. The children of Arah, ſix hundred fifty and two. 11. The children of Pahath-moab, of the children of Jeſhua and Joab, two thouſand and eight hundred and eighteen. 12. The children of Elam, a thouſand two hundred fifty and four. 13. The children of Zattu, eight hundred forty and five. 14. The children of Zaccai, ſeven hundred and threeſcore. 15. The children of § Binnui, ſix hundred forty and eight. 16. The children of Bebai, ſix hundred twenty and eight. 17. The children of Azgad, two thouſand three hundred twenty and two. 18. The children of Adonikam, ſix hundred threeſcore and ſeven. 19. The children of Bigvai, two thouſand threeſcore and ſeven. 20. The children of Adin, ſix hundred fifty and five. 21. The children of Ater of Hezekiah, ninety and eight. 22. The children of Haſhum, three hundred twenty and eight. 23. The children of Bezai, three hundred twenty and four. 24. The children of ‖ Hariph, an hundred and twelve.

d 2 Cor. iii. 5.
e Ezra ii. 1, &c.
About 536.
† Seraiah.
‡ Reelaiah, Ezra ii. 2.
§ Bani, Ezra ii. 10.
‖ Jorah, Ezra ii. 18.

Before Chriſt 536.

twelve. 25. The children of † Gibeon, ninety and five. 26. The men of Beth-lehem and Netophah, an hundred fourſcore and eight. 27. The men of Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight. 28. The men of ‡ Beth-azmaveth, forty and two. 29. The men of § Kirjath-jearim, Cephirah, and Beeroth, ſeven hundred forty and three. 30. The men of Ramah and Gaba, ſix hundred twenty and one. 31. The men of Michmas, an hundred and twenty and two. 32. The men of Beth-el and Ai, an hundred twenty and three. 33. The men of the other Nebo, fifty and two. 34. The children of [f] the other Elam, a thouſand two hundred fifty and four. 35. The children of Harim, three hundred and twenty. 36. The children of Jericho, three hundred forty and five. 37. The children of Lod, Hadid, and Ono, ſeven hundred twenty and one. 38. The children of Senaah, three thouſand nine hundred and thirty. 39. ¶ The prieſts: the children of [g] Jedaiah, of the houſe of Jeſhua, nine hundred ſeventy and three. 40. The children of [h] Immur, a thouſand fifty and two. 41. The children of [i] Paſhur, a thouſand two hundred forty and ſeven. 42. The children of [k] Harim, a thouſand and ſeventeen. 43. ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeſhua, of Kadmiel, and of the children of ‖ Hodevah, ſeventy and four. 44. ¶ The ſingers: the children of Aſaph, an hundred forty and eight. 45. ¶ The porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, an hundred thirty and eight. 46. ¶ The Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of Haſhupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 47. The children of Keros, the children of † Sia, the children of Padon, 48. The children of Lebana, the children of Hagaba, the children of ‡ Shalmai, 49. The children of Hanan, the children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, 50. The children of Reaiah, the children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, 51. The children of Gazzam, the children of Uzza, the children of Phaſeah, 52. The children of Beſai, the children of Meunim, the children of § Nephiſheſim, 53. The children of Bakbuk, the children of Hakupha, the children of Harhur, 54. The children of ‖ Bazlith, the children of Mehida, the children of Harſha, 55. The children of Barkos, the children of Siſera, the children of Tamah, 56. The children of Neziah, the children of Hatipha. 57. ¶ The children of Solomon's ſervants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of † Perida, 58. The children of Jaala, the children of Darkon, the children of Giddel, 59. The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of ‡ Amon. 60. All the Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's ſervants, were three hundred ninety and two. 61. [l] And theſe were they which went up alſo from Tel-melah, Tel-hareſha, Cherub, § Addon, and Immer: but they could not ſhew their father's houſe, nor their ‖ ſeed, whether they were of Iſrael. 62. The children of Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, ſix hundred forty and two. 63. ¶ And of the prieſts: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of [m] Barzillai, which took one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite to wife, and was called after their name. 64. Theſe ſought their regiſter among thoſe that were reckoned by genealogy, but it was not found: [n] therefore were they, as polluted, put from the prieſthood. 65. And the † Tirſhatha ſaid unto them, that they ſhould not eat of the moſt holy things, till there ſtood up a prieſt with [o] Urim and Thummim. 66. ¶ [p] The whole congregation together, was forty and two thouſand three hundred and threeſcore, 67. Beſide their man-ſervants, and their maid-ſervants, of whom there were ſeven thouſand three hundred thirty and ſeven: and they had two hundred forty and five ſinging-men, and ſinging-women. 68. Their horſes, ſeven hundred thirty and ſix: their mules, two hundred forty and five: 69. Their camels, four hundred thirty and five: ſix thouſand ſeven hundred and twenty aſſes. 70. ¶ And ‡ ſome of the chief of the fathers gave unto the work: [q] the Tirſhatha gave to the treaſure a thouſand drams of gold, fifty baſons, five hundred and thirty prieſts garments. 71. And ſome of the chief of the fathers gave to the treaſure of the work, twenty thouſand drams of gold, and two thouſand and two hundred pound of ſilver. 72. And that which the reſt of the people gave, was twenty thouſand drams of gold, and two thouſand pound of ſilver, and threeſcore and ſeven prieſts garments. 73. [r] So the prieſts, and the Levites, and the porters, and the ſingers, and ſome of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Iſrael, dwelt in their cities; and when the ſeventh month came, the children of Iſrael were in their cities.

† Gibbar, Ezra ii. 20.
‡ Azmaveth, Ezra ii. 24.
§ Kirjath-arim, Ezra ii. 25.
[f] Ver. 12.
[g] 1 Chron. xxiv. 7.
[h] Ibid. 14.
[i] Ibid. ix. 12. & xxiv. 9.
[k] Ibid. xxiv. 8.
‖ Hodaviah, Ezra ii. 40. & Judah, Ezra iii. 9.
† Siaha, Ezra ii. 44.
‡ Shalmai.
§ Nephuſim, Ezra ii. 50.
‖ Bazluth, Ezra ii. 52.
† Peruda, Ezra ii. 55.
‡ Ami, Ezra ii. 58.
[l] Ezra ii. 59.
§ Addan.
‖ Or pedigrees, Ezra ii. 59.
[m] 2 Sam. xvii. 27.
[n] Num. iii. 10.
† Or, Governor.
[o] Exod. xxviii. 30. Num. xxvii. 21.
[p] Ezra ii. 64.
‡ Heb. Part.
[q] Chap. viii. 4.
[r] Ezra ii. 70.

v. 5—73. Jeruſalem being ſo thinly peopled, Nehemiah contrives to repleniſh it with inhabitants; for which purpoſe, having aſſembled the rulers and people, he reviews the old regiſter of thoſe who came out of captivity, that he might ſee what families originally belonged to Jeruſalem, but were now diſperſed in the country, in order to bring them back to fix their dwelling there. He acknowledges the deſign was from God, to whom every gracious motion is to be aſcribed: if any thing good be in our hearts, it is his work, and to him ſhould the praiſe be given. The regiſter here recited is nearly the ſame with that, Ezra xi. 6—67. The ſmall variation in the numbers may be probably owing to that having been taken in Babylon, this, after they arrived at Jeruſalem. Some perhaps that at firſt gave in their names to go, went back; whilſt others, though they ſtuck out till the laſt, when they ſaw the camp moving, reſolved to follow it. Note, There will be ever ſome that lay their hand to the plow, and look back: the Lord keep us from that number.—The contributions, v. 70. are ſo different from Ezra xi. 68, 69. that it ſeems not the ſame, but ſome additional offering made afterwards. They who have God's work at heart, will not only give according to their power, but, as he increaſes their ſtore, will renew their grateful tribute.

CHAP. VIII.

The work being finiſhed, their firſt leiſure is employed, as it ought, in attending to God's law. 1. Ezra, at the people's requeſt, reads and expounds it, ver. 1—8. 2. Nehemiah encourages them to rejoice on the occaſion, ver. 9—12. 3. The ſolemn obſervance of the feaſt of tabernacles, ver. 13—18.

444.

1. AND [a] all the people gathered themſelves together as one man, into the ſtreet that was before [b] the water-gate, and they ſpake unto Ezra [c] the ſcribe, to bring the book of the law of Moſes, which the LORD had commanded to Iſrael. 2. And Ezra the prieſt [d] brought the law before the congregation, [e] both of men and women, and all that could hear with underſtanding, [f] upon the firſt day of the ſeventh month. 3. And he [g] read therein before the ſtreet that was before the water-gate, from the morning until mid-day, before the men and the women, and thoſe that could underſtand; and [h] the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law. 4. And Ezra the ſcribe ſtood upon a † pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpoſe, and beſides him ſtood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Orijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaſeiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand Pedaiah, and Miſhael, and Malchiah, and Haſhum, and Haſhbadana, Zechariah, and Meſhullam. 5. And Ezra opened the book in the ſight of all the people, (for he was above all the people) and when he opened it, all the people ſtood up: 6. And Ezra bleſſed the LORD the great God: and all the people anſwered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands: and [i] they bowed their heads, and worſhipped the LORD with their faces to the ground. 7. Alſo Jeſhua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaſeiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites cauſed the people to [k] underſtand the law, and the people ſtood in their place. 8. So they read in the book, in the law of God diſtinctly, and gave the ſenſe, and cauſed them to underſtand the reading.

[a] Ezra iii. 1.
[b] Chap. iii. 26.
[c] Ezra vii. 6.
[d] Deut. xxxi. 11.
[e] Gal. iii. 28.
[f] Lev. xxiii. 24. 1 Kings viii. 2.
[g] Acts xiii. 15. & xv. 21.
[h] Luke xix. 1. Acts xvi. 14.
† Heb. Tower.
[i] As 2 Chron. xx. 18.
[k] Mat. xxiv. 15.

v. 1—8. It was not the reſtoration of the temple ſervice, nor the rebuilding the ruined wall, which was their great protection. Obedience was better than ſacrifice, and fidelity to God a ſtronger barrier than the loftieſt towers. The people here ſeem to be ſenſible of this.

1. A great congregation aſſembled at the feaſt of trumpets, on the firſt day of the ſeventh month, when the new year began, the day they had ſet up and dedicated the altar at their return from

Before Christ 444.

from captivity; and probably ever ſince, on that account, had kept the feaſt with greater ſolemnity. Men, women, and children, who were arrived at years of underſtanding, came: the place of aſſembly, for convenience, was the large ſtreet which led to the water-gate; and there Ezra, with his aſſiſtants, v. 4. at their deſire, aſcending a pulpit, or wooden turret, that he might be better heard, brought forth the law of God, to be read and expounded to the congregation. Note, (1.) We have reaſon to be thankful for commodious places for our religious aſſemblies; not but that the prayer of faith, and the preaching of the goſpel, are acceptable ſervices in every place. (2.) They who ſerve God themſelves, cannot but be ſollicitous that their families ſhould ſerve him too. (3.) Nothing ſo needful in the education of our children, as early to acquaint them with the word of God. (4.) It is a pleaſure to preach the word to thoſe who deſire to hear, and hunger and thirſt after it.

2. With great ſolemnity Ezra opened the awful book, whilſt the eyes of the people were fixed upon him. He began with a devout benediction, adoring the great God for the diſtinguiſhing mercy they enjoyed in theſe oracles of divine truth; to which the people joined their hearty Amen, worſhipping with reverential humiliation this glorious Lord. He then proceeded with his aſſiſtants, the prieſts and Levites, by turns to read and expound the moſt uſeful parts of the law, from morning till noon; either commenting upon it, to force and explain it; or as ſome have thought, tranſlating it into the Chaldee tongue, as that was become by their captivity more familiar to them than the Hebrew. Note, (1.) When we addreſs ourſelves to prayer on the word, the frame of our minds need be ſolemn and reverential, conſidering that God with whom we have to do. (2.) The reading of the word of God ought never to be omitted in the aſſembly of God's ſaints. (3.) When we carry our bibles into the pulpit, it contains an admonition to us, that we ſpeak according thereunto, and an appeal to them, as deſiring to be judged thereby. (4.) Preaching the word is among the greateſt means of grace; and they who zealouſly ſeek the ſalvation of men's ſouls, will not tire of the work. A ſhort ſermon is a mark of a cold heart. (5.) Among all the abominations of the church of Rome, none is more diabolical, than the ſecreting the ſcriptures from the people. (6.) They who are appointed to teach the knowledge of the ſcripture, ſhould ſtudy rather to ſpeak diſtinct and plain, that they may be underſtood, than elegantly, to be admired. (7.) Expoſition of the ſcripture is highly uſeful, not only to open what is abſtruſe, but to enforce on the conſcience what is plain and evident.

3. The people with fixed attention ſtood up to hear, and unwearied with the length of the time, hung upon the preacher's lips. Note, (1.) That ſermon is likely to be effectual, when the audience is thus ſolemnly attentive. (2.) They who reliſh the word of God, will never think the time long which is ſpent in hearing it.

9. ¶ [l] And Nehemiah which is the † Tirſhatha, and Ezra the prieſt the ſcribe, and [m] the Levites that taught the people, ſaid unto all the people, [n] This day is holy unto the LORD your God, [o] mourn not nor weep: for [p] all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law. 10. Then he ſaid unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the ſweet, and [q] ſend portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for [r] this day is holy unto our Lord: neither be ye ſorry, for the joy of the LORD is your ſtrength. 11. So the Levites ſtilled all the people, ſaying, [s] Hold your peace, for the day is holy, neither be ye grieved. 12. And all the people went their way to eat and to drink, and to ſend portions, and to make great mirth, becauſe they had underſtood the words that were declared unto them.

[l] Ezra ii. 63. Chap. x. 1.
† Or governor.
[m] 2 Chron. xxxv. 3. Ver. 8.
[n] Num. xxix. 1.
[o] Deut. xvi. 14, 15. Eccleſ. iii. 4.
[p] 2 Kings xxii. 19. Iſa. lxvi. 2. Hab. iii. 16. Acts ii. 37.
[q] Eſth. ix. 19, 22. Rev. xi. 10.
[r] Lev. xxiii. 24.
[s] Exod. xiv. 14.

v. 9—12. The word of God is quick and powerful, and ſharp as a two-edged ſword. We ſee here,

1. The deep impreſſion it made upon the hearers hearts. Conſcious of manifold breaches, and trembling before a holy God, they all wept. Their hearts were tender, and they could not but tremble at his awful word, which denounced eternal death on every tranſgreſſion. Note, The law brings a terrible meſſage to the conſcience; if the goſpel were not to afford us relief, we muſt lie down in everlaſting mournings.

2. Nehemiah and Ezra obſerved the deep effect the word had taken; and though no doubt they were glad to ſee them mourn for their ſins, yet it being a day of rejoicing before the Lord, they endeavour to ſtay the people's ſorrows with kind encouragement. They muſt not grieve inordinately: even ſorrow for ſin may be exceſſive. They enjoin them therefore to refrain from tears, and keep a holy feaſt to the Lord, with liberal and charitable diſtributions to the poor, and joy in God as their ſtrength; joy that enlivens and encourages the heart to every good word and work, and raiſes up the ſoul above fear and deſpondency. Note, (1.) It is a pleaſing part of a miniſter's duty to comfort thoſe that mourn. (2.) They who ſow in tears, fail not to reap in joy. (3.) Whilſt the Lord is pleaſed to cover our tables with affluence, let us never forget to draw out our ſoul to the hungry: the greateſt comfort of abundance is to do good with it. (4.) Holy joy will quicken us for every duty, and ſtrengthen us for every conflict.

3. The people hereupon dried up their tears; and underſtanding the great and precious promiſes made to repentant Iſrael, rejoiced in hope of finding favour with their juſtly offended God. Note, (1.) Though the ſcriptures pierce like a ſword the heart of a ſinner, they contain that balm which can cure the wound. (2.) A clear knowledge of God's word is the way to ſound and abiding conſolation.

13. ¶ And on the ſecond day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the prieſts and the Levites, unto Ezra the ſcribe, † even to underſtand the words of the law. 14. And they found written in the law, which the LORD had commanded by Moſes, that [t] the children of Iſrael ſhould dwell in booths, in the feaſt of the ſeventh month: 15. And that [u] they ſhould publiſh and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jeruſalem, ſaying, Go forth unto the mount, and [x] fetch olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written. 16. ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themſelves booths, every one upon the roof of his houſe, and in their courts, and in the courts of the houſe of God, and in the ſtreet of the water-gate, and in [y] the ſtreet of the gate of Ephraim. 17. And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity, made booths, and [z] ſat under the booths: for ſince the days of Jeſhua the ſon of Nun, unto that day, had not the children of Iſrael done ſo: and [b] there was very great gladneſs. 18. Alſo [c] day by day, [d] from the firſt day unto the laſt day, he read in the book of the law of God: and they kept the feaſt ſeven days, and on the eighth day was a ſolemn aſſembly, according unto the manner.

† Or that they might inſtruct in the words of the law. Mat. xiii. 52. 1 Pet. iv. 11.
[t] Lev. xxiii. 34. Deut. xiii. 16.
[u] Lev. xxiii. 4.
[x] Ibid. 40.
[y] 2 Kings xiv. 13. Chap. xii. 39.
[z] Heb. xi. 13.
[a] 2 Chron. v. 3. Ezra iii. 4.
[b] 2 Chron. xxx. 21.
[c] Deut. xxx. 10, &c.
[d] Lev. xxiii. 36.

v. 13—18. The word, which the preceding day had ſo much engaged their attention, and affected their hearts, is again applied to. The chief of the elders, prieſts, and Levites, eſpecially ſollicitous to underſtand the law, aſſembled before Ezra, that he might explain what was obſcure or difficult. Note, (1.) They who are appointed to inſtruct others, need uſe double diligence to underſtand the mind of God themſelves. (2.) Converſe with the oracles of God, affords a daily delightful entertainment to the faithful ſouls.—The conſequence of this renewed attendance upon God's word, was

1. A diſcovery of a long-neglected ordinance, the feaſt of tabernacles. As the time approached, Ezra probably ſelected that portion of ſcripture to remind them of it, and to direct them in the obſervance of it. Note, (1.) A word ſpoken in ſeaſon, how good is it? (2.) Careful reading God's word, will convince us of many negligences and ignorances.

2. A proclamation is made for the obſervance of it, both at Jeruſalem and the other cities, v. 15.

3. The ſolemnity is moſt religiouſly obſerved. Since the days of Joſhua, had not ſuch a feaſt been kept with ſuch exactneſs, holy joy, and daily diligent and ſerious attendance on the word of God. Note, (1.) They who have their hearts right with God, will be diligent and ſerious obſervers of all his inſtitutions. (2.) Our leiſure hours will be ever moſt comfortably and profitably employed in the oracles of truth. (3.) When we are waiting on God in the way of his ordinances, he will meet us in them, and fill our hearts with joy and gladneſs.

CHAP. IX.

We have here, 1. A ſolemn faſt obſerved, ver. 1—3. 2. The prayer offered, and the ſolemn reſolution made on that occaſion, ver. 4—38.

1. NOW in the twenty and fourth day of [a] this month, the children of Iſrael were aſſembled with faſting, and with ſackclothes, [b] and earth upon them. 2. And [c] the ſeed of Iſrael ſeparated themſelves from all † ſtrangers, and ſtood and [d] confeſſed their ſins, and [e] the iniquities of their fathers. 3. And they ſtood up in their place, and [f] read in the book of the law of the LORD their God, one fourth part of the day, and another fourth part they confeſſed, and worſhipped the LORD their God.

[a] Chap. viii. 2.
[b] Joſh. vii. 6. 1 Sam. iv. 12. Job ii. 12.
[c] Ezra x. 11. Chap. xiii. 3—30.
† Heb. Strange children.
[d] Prov. xxviii. 13.
[e] Chap. i. 6.
[f] Chap. viii. 7, 8.

Before Chriſt 444.

v. 1—3. Their feaſt of gladneſs is here ſucceeded by a day of ſolemn humiliation. Whilſt we are rejoicing in the confidence of God's reconciliation, we ſtill need to remember our own evil ways, and abhor ourſelves.

1. Every outward expreſſion of ſorrow beſpoke the inward affliction of their ſouls for ſin, whilſt they appeared in the courts of the temple, as penitents before God. Note, There are ſeaſons, when, without oſtentation, we may appear unto men to faſt.

2. They put away their ſtrange wives, in token of the ſincerity of their humiliation. Some had kept them probably in ſecret, notwithſtanding the former reformation, or had ſince relapſed into the ſame evil. Note, As long as allowed ſin is harboured, communion with God is impoſſible, and the appearance of repentance but hypocriſy.

3. They ſpent the whole day in religious exerciſes. Three hours they ſpent in hearing God's law, and as many in prayer and confeſſion; and this probably both morning and afternoon. Note, The more we are converſant in God's word, the more deeply ſhall we ſee cauſe to lament over the evil of our fallen hearts.

4. ¶ Then ſtood up upon the † ſtairs of the Levites, Jeſhua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God. 5. Then the Levites, Jeſhua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Haſhabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, ſaid, Stand up, and [g] bleſs the LORD your God for ever and ever; and bleſſed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe. 6. Thou, even thou art LORD alone, [h] thou haſt made heaven, [i] the heaven of heavens with [k] all their hoſt, the earth and all things that are therein, the ſeas and all that is therein, and [l] thou preſerveſt them all, and the hoſt of heaven worſhippeth thee. 7. Thou art the LORD the God, [m] who didſt chooſe Abram, and broughteſt him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and [n] gaveſt him the name of Abraham, 8. And [o] foundeſt his heart faithful before thee, and [p] madeſt a covenant with him, to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebuſites, and the Girgaſhites, to give it, I ſay, to his ſeed, and haſt performed thy words, for thou art righteous: 9. [q] And didſt ſee the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and [r] heardeſt their cry by the Red ſea: 10. And [s] ſhewedſt ſigns and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his ſervants, and on all the people of his land: for thou kneweſt that [t] they dealt proudly againſt them: [u] ſo didſt thou get thee a name, as it is this day. 11. And [x] thou didſt divide the ſea before them, ſo that they went through the midſt of the ſea on the dry land, and their perſecutors thou threweſt into the deeps, [y] as a ſtone into the mighty waters. 12. Moreover [z] thou leddeſt them in the day by a cloudy pillar; and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they ſhould go. 13. [a] Thou cameſt down alſo upon mount Sinai, and ſpakeſt with them from heaven, and gaveſt them right judgments, and ‡ true laws, good ſtatutes, and commandments. 14. And [b] madeſt known unto them thy holy ſabbath, and commandedſt them precepts, ſtatutes, and laws, by the hand of Moſes thy ſervant: 15. And [c] gaveſt them bread from heaven for their hunger, and [d] broughteſt forth water for them out of [e] the rock for their thirſt, and promiſedſt them [f] that they ſhould go in to poſſeſs the land, which thou hadſt ‖ ſworn to give them. 16. But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and [g] hardned their necks, and hearkned not to thy commandments. 17. And refuſed to obey, [h] neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didſt among them: but hardned their necks, and in their rebellion [i] appointed a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art § a God ready to pardon, [k] gracious and merciful, ſlow to anger, and of great kindneſs, and forſookeſt them not. 18. Yea, [l] when they had made them a molten calf, and ſaid, This is thy god that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations: 19. Yet thou in thy manifold mercies, forſookeſt them not in the wilderneſs: [m] the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to ſhew them light, and the way wherein they ſhould go. 20. [n] Thou gaveſt alſo thy good Spirit to inſtruct them, and [o] withheldeſt not thy manna from their mouth, and [p] gaveſt them water for their thirſt. 21. Yea, [q] forty years didſt thou ſuſtain them in the wilderneſs, ſo that they lacked nothing; [r] their clothes waxed not old, and their feet ſwelled not. 22. Moreover, thou gaveſt them kingdoms and nations, and didſt divide them into corners: ſo they poſſeſſed [s] the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heſhbon, and [t] the land of Og king of Baſhan. 23. [u] Their children alſo multipliedſt thou as the ſtars of heaven, and broughteſt them into the land, concerning which thou hadſt promiſed to their fathers, that they ſhould go in to poſſeſs it. 24. So the children went in and poſſeſſed the land, and [x] thou [y] ſubdueſt before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gaveſt them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them † as they would. 25. And they took ſtrong cities and a [z] fat land, and poſſeſſed houſes full of all goods, wells digged, vineyards, and olive-yards, and fruit-trees in abundance, ſo they did eat, and were filled, and [a] became fat, and delighted themſelves in thy great goodneſs. 26. Nevertheleſs they were diſobedient, and rebelled againſt thee, and [b] caſt thy law behind their backs, and [c] ſlew thy prophets which teſtified againſt them, to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations. 27. Therefore [d] thou deliveredſt them into the hand of their enemies who vexed them: and [e] in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardeſt them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies [f] thou gaveſt them ſaviours, who ſaved them out of the hand of their enemies. 28. But [g] after they had reſt, they ‡ did evil again before thee: therefore lefteſt thou them in the hand of their enemies, ſo that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardeſt them from heaven, and many times didſt thou deliver them, [h] according to thy mercies: 29. And [i] teſtifiedſt againſt them, that thou mighteſt bring them again unto thy law: yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but ſinned againſt thy judgments ([k] which if a man do, he ſhall live in them) and ‖ withdrew the ſhoulder, and hardned their neck, and would not hear. 30. Yet many years [l] didſt thou forbear them, and [m] teſtifiedſt againſt them by thy Spirit [n] in thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: [o] therefore gaveſt thou them into the hand of the people of the lands. 31. Nevertheleſs, for thy great mercies ſake, [p] thou didſt not utterly conſume them, nor forſake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God. 32. Now therefore our God, [q] the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who keepeſt covenant and mercy; let not all the trouble ſeem little before thee, that hath come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our prieſts, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, ſince the time of the kings of Aſſyria, unto this day. 33. Howbeit, [r] thou art juſt in all that is brought upon us: for thou haſt done right, but we have done wickedly: 34. [s] Neither have our kings, our princes, our prieſts, nor our fathers kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments, and thy teſtimonies wherewith thou didſt teſtify againſt them. 35. For they have not ſerved thee in their kingdom, and [t] in thy great goodneſs that thou gaveſt them, and in the large and fat land which thou gaveſt before them, neither turned they from their wicked works. 36. Behold, [u] we are ſervants this day, and for the land that thou gaveſt unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof, and the good thereof, behold we are ſervants in it. 37. And it yieldeth much increaſe unto the kings whom thou haſt ſet over us, becauſe of our ſins: alſo they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleaſure, and we are in great diſtreſs. 38. And becauſe of all this, [x] we make a ſure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and prieſts § ſeal unto it.

v. 4—38. The congregation being aſſembled, we have here the names of the chief perſons employed to lead the devotions of the people, and to be engaged in the word of God, together with the prayer which was probably compoſed by Ezra on the occaſion; and as ſo great a number of people could be ſcarcely ſuppoſed capable of hearing in one congregation, they might be divided into ſeveral, each with a Levite at their head; and yet thus uniting in the ſame humbling confeſſion and ſupplication, with one voice as well as one heart glorifying God.

---

† Or ſcaffold. Chap. viii. 4.

[g] Pſal. ciii. 1, 2, 22.

[h] Gen. i. 1. Rev. xiv. 7.

[i] Deut. x. 14. 1 Kings viii. 27.

[k] Gen. ii. 1.

[l] Heb. i. 3.

[m] Gen. xii. 1.

[n] Ibid. xvii. 5.

[o] Ibid. xv. 6.

[p] Ibid. xii. 7. & xv. 18. & xvii. 7, 8.

[q] Exod. ii. 25. & iii. 7.

[r] Exod. xiv. 10.

[s] Ibid. Chap. vii—xiv.

[t] Exod. xviii. 11.

[u] Ibid. ix. 16.

[x] Ibid. xiv. 21, 22.

[y] Ibid. xv. 5, 10.

[z] Ibid. xiii. 21.

[a] Ibid. xix. 20. & xx. 21.

‡ Heb. Laws of truth.

[b] Exod. xx. 8.

[c] Ibid. xvi. 14, 15.

[d] Ibid. xvii. 6. Num. xx. 9, &c.

[e] 1 Cor. x. 4.

[f] Deut. i. 8.

‖ Heb. Lift up thine hand to give them. Num. xiv. 30.

[g] Exod. xxxii. 9.

[h] Pſal. cvi. 7, 13.

[i] Num. xiv. 4.

§ Heb. A God of pardons.

[k] Exod. xxxiv. 6. Num. xiv. 18. Pſal. lxxxvi. 5, 15.

[l] Exod. xxxii. 4.

[m] Ibid. xiii. 22. Num. xiv. 14.

Before Chriſt 444.

[n] Num. xi. 17. Iſa. lxiii. 11.

[o] Exod. xvi. 15. Joſh. v. 12.

[p] Exod. xvii. 6.

[q] Deut. ii. 7.

[r] Ibid. viii. 4. & xxix. 5.

[s] Num. xxi. 25.

[t] Ibid. 35.

[u] Gen. xxii. 17.

[x] Pſal. xliv. 3.

[y] Joſh. xi. 16, &c.

† Heb. According to their will.

[z] Ezek. xx. 6.

[a] Deut. xxxii. 15.

[b] 1 Kings xiv. 9.

[c] Ibid. xviii. 4. & xix. 10. 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 21.

[d] Judg. ii. 14. & iii. 8, &c.

[e] Zech. xiii. 9.

[f] Judg. ii. 18. & iii. 9.

[g] Deut. xxxii. 15.

‡ Heb. Returned to do evil.

[h] Lam. iii. 22.

[i] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15.

[k] Lev. xviii. 5. Ezek. xx. 11. Rom. x. 5. Gal. iii. 12.

‖ Heb. Gave a withdrawing ſhoulder. Zech. vii. 11.

[l] Rom. ii. 4. 2 Pet. iii. 9.

[m] 2 Kings xvii. 13.

[n] 1 Pet. i. 11.

[o] Iſa. v. 5. & xlii. 24.

[p] Jer. iv. 27.

[q] Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7.

[r] Deut. xxxii. 4. Dan. ix. 14.

[s] Ibid. 8.

[t] Rom. ii. 4, 5.

[u] Deut. xxxii. 48. Ezra ix. 9.

[x] Chap. x. 29.

§ Heb. Are at the ſealing.

1. They open their prayer with ſolemn adoration, to the ſelf-exiſtent Jehovah, the great creator and preſerver of all, the only worthy object of worſhip in heaven and earth, and whoſe tranſcendant excellencies and unutterable glories infinitely exceed all the praiſes that men or angels can offer, v. 5, 6.

2. They recite, with deep gratitude, the manifold mercies this great and gracious God had beſtowed on them from the days of old, particularly the call and election of Abraham their great progenitor, and the performance of the covenant eſtabliſhed with him and his ſeed. Abraham was by grace enabled to be faithful, and God had rewarded that fidelity in the accompliſhment of all his promiſes to him and his poſterity. Out of Egypt had God alſo wonderouſly delivered them, to the confuſion and deſtruction of their enemies: through the wilderneſs had he led them ſafe from danger; never forſook them amidſt their multiplied provocations; provided them liberal ſupplies for all their wants; and by daily miracles, fed and guided them in the way to the promiſed land, v. 9—12, 15—21. On Sinai he deſcended to promulge his law, ſo holy, juſt, and good, to inſtitute his gracious ordinances, particularly the ſabbath; the diſtinguiſhing token of his ſeparation of them to himſelf, v. 13, 14. Before them the Canaanites, though ſo mighty and numerous, had been expelled, and their rich land given them to poſſeſs, where every earthly bleſſing abounded, v. 22, 25. There they forſook God, and provoked him with their iniquities, yet his patience endured: he ſent them warnings, he received them whenever they turned to him: he multiplied his pardons, he raiſed them up judges to deliver them from their enemies, and recover them from their backſlidings: yea, though after all they had proved hardned and rebellious, yet to that day God had not utterly forſaken them, for his mercy endureth for ever, v. 26—31. All theſe inſtances of the divine goodneſs, whilſt they deſerved the moſt thankful acknowledgment, aggravated the evil of their ſins; yet the paſt experience afforded them preſent hope, if they ſhould, as now, ſeek to the God who is ever ready to pardon, merciful and gracious. Note, (1.) The goodneſs of God is the great argument to lead us to repentance. (2.) In the midſt of our deepeſt humiliations, we ſhould never forget to mention the mercies for which we are indebted. (3.) Without ſome views of God's rich grace, the ſenſe of our ſins would be ready to ſink us into deſpair.

3. Amidſt their thankful acknowledgments, they interſperſe their abaſing confeſſions, as every mercy they had received aggravated the guilt of their ſins. From the beginning, the proud hearts of their fathers were too ſtubborn to bow in humble obedience: ingratitude, diſtruſt, diſcontent, rebellion, idolatry, impudent oppoſition to God's prophets, contempt, perſecution, murder; and repeated relapſes into the like abominations, after repeated vows, and repeated deliverances: all theſe things had marked the black catalogue of their father's crimes; nor were they leſs culpable. We have done wickedly, v. 33. and joined in the like provocations, the effects of which they were now ſuffering, juſt returned from the houſe of their priſon, and ſtill bearing the galling yoke of ſervitude upon their necks. v. 36, 37. Note, (1.) True penitents ſearch out the aggravations of their ſins, and ſeek not to exculpate themſelves, but to juſtify God. (2.) Pride is at the root of all our evil. (3.) When we follow our father's ſins, it is juſt in God to viſit their iniquities upon us. (4.) As the ſervice of God is perfect freedom, revolt from it will bring the ſoul into the moſt abject ſlavery.

4. They put up a word of petition, v. 32. ſo ſhort, as if they were afraid to aſk for mercy, who were conſcious how little they deſerved it; acknowledging the righteouſneſs of God in all they had ſuffered, only they preſume to beg that he would look upon their affliction, and ſay at laſt, It is enough. God, as the great and terrible God, might juſtly utterly deſtroy them; but as the merciful covenant-keeping God, v. 32. there was yet hope, and they were emboldened to pray. Note, (1.) The deepeſt and moſt dejecting views of our ſins muſt not drive us from God in deſpondence, but to him in humble prayer. (2.) Remember me in mercy, is all a ſinner can ſay for himſelf. (3.) The covenant eſtabliſhed with our glorious head Chriſt Jeſus, affords hope, when every thing within and without us preaches deſpair.

5. As the concluſion of their prayer, they profeſs their ſolemn return to God; in writing renew their engagements to be faithful, and the princes, prieſts, and Levites ſubſcribe the bond, as a teſtimony againſt themſelves, and promiſe to their utmoſt to ſee it obſerved by the people. Note, True penitents not only confeſs their ſins, but through God's grace purpoſe, and are enabled to renounce them.

CHAP. X.

We have in this chapter, 1. The names of thoſe that ſet their hands and ſeals to the covenant, ver. 1—27. 2. An account of thoſe who ſignified their conſent and concurrence, ver. 28, 29. 3. The covenant itſelf, and the articles of it, ver. 29—39.

1. NOW thoſe † that ſealed were [a] Nehemiah the ‡ Tirſhatha, [b] the ſon of Hachaliah, and Zidkijah.
2. [c] Seraiah, Azariah, Jeremiah, 3. Paſhur, Amariah, Malchijah, 4. Hattuſh, Shebaniah, Malluch,
5. Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah, 6. Daniel, Ginnethon,
Baruch. 7. Meſhullam, Abijah, Mijamin, 8. Maaziah, Bilgai, Shemaiah: theſe were the prieſts. 9. And the Levites: both Jeſhua the ſon of Azaniah, Binnui of the ſons of Henadad, Kadmiel; 10. And their brethren, Shebaniah, Hodijah, Kelita, Pelaiah, Hanan, 11. Micha, Rehob, Haſhabiah, 12. Zaccur, Sherebiah, Shebaniah, 13. Hodijah, Bani, Beninu. 14. The chief of the people; [d] Paroſh, Pahath-moab, Elam, Zatthu, Bani, 15. Bunni, Azgad, Bebai, 16. Adonijah, Bagvai, Adin, 17. Ater, Hizkijah, Azzur,
18. Hodijah, Haſhum, Bezai, 19. Harip, Anathoth, Nebai, 20. Magpiaſh, Meſhullam, Hezir, 21. Meſhezabeel, Zadock, Jaddua, 22. Pelatiah, Hanan, Anaiah, 23. Hoſhea, Hananiah, Haſhub, 24. Halloheſh, Pileha, Shobek, 25. Rehum, Haſhabnah, Maaſeiah, 26. And Ahijah, Hanan, Anan, 27. Malluch, Harim, Baanah. 28. ¶ [e] And the reſt of the people, the prieſts, the Levites, the porters, the ſingers, the Nethinims, and [f] all they that had ſeparated themſelves from the people of the lands, unto the law of God, their wives, their ſons, and their daughters, every one having knowledge, and having underſtanding: 29. They clave to their brethren, their nobles, and [g] entred into a curſe, and into an oath, to walk in God's law, which was ‖ given by Moſes the ſervant of God, and to obſerve and do all the commandments of the LORD our Lord, and his judgments and his ſtatutes: 30. And that [h] we would not give our daughters unto the people of the land, nor take their daughters for our ſons: 31. And if the people of the land bring ware, or any victuals on the ſabbath-day, to ſell, that [i] we would not buy it of them on the ſabbath, or on the holy-day; and that we would leave [k] the ſeventh year, and the [l] exaction of every debt.

† Heb. At the ſealings.
[a] Chap. viii. 9.
‡ Or governor.
[b] Chap. i. 1.
[c] Chap. xii. 1—21.
[d] Ezra ii. 3, &c. Chap. vii. 8, &c.
[e] Ezra ii. 43.
[f] Ibid. ix. 1. Chap. xiii. 3.
[g] Deut. xxix. 12. Chap. v. 12, 13. Pſal. cxix. 106.
‖ Heb. By the hand of, &c.
[h] Exod. xxxiv. 16. Deut. vii. 3.
[i] Exod. xx. 10. Lev. xxiii. 3. Deut. v. 12. Chap. xiii. 15, &c.
[k] Exod. xxiii. 10, 11. Lev. xxv. 4.
[l] Deut. xv. 2. Chap. v. 12. Iſa. lviii. 6.

v. 1—31. As in prayer they had engaged to join themſelves anew to God, we have here the perſons who ſubſcribed, and the particulars of their engagement.

1. The perſons who ſubſcribed were the chief of the fathers, with Nehemiah the governor, and the chief of the prieſts and Levites; the perſons who by duty and office were moſt eſpecially obliged to ſet the good example, and to uſe their influence to engage the people to the ſervice of their covenant God; and to this deed of their rulers the people expreſſed their ſolemn conſent; Jews and proſelytes, women and children, all who were come to years of underſtanding, binding their ſouls under an awful imprecation to abide by the engagements they had entered into. Note, (1.) In every good work they who are higheſt in dignity, ſhould be the firſt to lead. (2.) They who teach others what is right, muſt commend by their practice the word they preach, and ſhew themſelves examples of all that is praiſe-worthy. (3.) When we give up ourſelves to God, it becomes us to take heed to the ſimplicity and ſincerity of our hearts before him, leaſt raſh engagements involve our ſouls in guilt.

2. The covenant they entered into, was in general, a careful obſervance of all God's commands and inſtitutions, which was before their bounden duty, and now declared to be their hearty choice: and particularly a ſeparation of themſelves from all forbidden intercourſe with the heathen nations; a door at which moſt of their abominations had crept in: the ſtrict obſervance of the ſabbath day, the great token of their peculiarity as a people ſet apart for God's ſervice; the obſervance of the ſabbatical year, when the ground was to reſt, and the diſcharge of their debtors at that time freely, according to Deut. xv. 2. Note, (1.) A faithful heart will have reſpect to all God's commandments. (2.) Peculiar guard need be placed over thoſe temptations which we have ſeen to be the occaſion of others falls, and proved moſt dangerous to ourſelves. (3.) A careful obſervance of God's ſabbaths is a chief means to preſerve us in a conſtant courſe of fidelity in his ſervice.

32. Alſo we made ordinances for us, to charge ourſelves yearly with the third part of a ſhekel, for the ſervice of the houſe of our God, 33. For [m] the ſhewbread, and for the continual meat-offering, and for the continual burnt-offering, [n] of the ſabbaths, of the new-moons,

[m] Lev. xxiv. 5, &c. 2 Chron. ii. 4.
[n] See Num. Chap. xxviii. & xxix.

moons, for the ſet feaſts, and for the holy things, and for the ſin-offerings, to make an atonement for Iſrael, and for all the work of the houſe of our God, 34. And we caſt the lots among the prieſts, the Levites, and the people, [o] for the wood-offering, to bring it into the houſe of our God, after the houſes of our fathers, at times appointed year by year, to burn upon the altar of the LORD our God, [p] as it is written in the law: 35. And [q] to bring the firſt-fruits of our ground, and the firſt-fruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, unto the houſe of the LORD: 36. Alſo the firſt-born of our ſons and of our cattle, ([r] as it is written in the law) and the firſtlings of our herds, and of our flocks, to bring to the houſe of our God, unto the prieſts that miniſter in the houſe of our God: 37. [s] And that we ſhould bring the firſt-fruits of our dough, and our offerings, and the fruit of all manner of trees, of wine, and of oil, unto the prieſts, to the chambers of the houſe of our God, and [t] the tithes of our ground unto the Levites, that the ſame Levites might have the tithes in all the cities of our tillage. 38. And the prieſt the ſon of Aaron, ſhall be with the Levites, [u] when the Levites take tithes: and the Levites ſhall bring up the tithe of the tithes unto the houſe of our God, to the chambers, into the treaſure-houſe. 39. For the children of Iſrael, and the children of Levi, [x] ſhall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the veſſels of the ſanctuary, and the prieſts that miniſter, and the porters, and the ſingers: and [y] we will not forſake the houſe of our God.

[o] Chap. xiii. 31.
[p] Lev. vi. 12.
[q] Exod. xxiii. 19. & xxxiv. 26. Lev. xix. 23.
[r] Exod. xiii. 2, 12, 13. Lev. xxvii. 27. Num. xviii. 15, 16.
[s] Lev. xxiii. 17. Num. xv. 19. & xviii. 12, &c. Deut. xviii. 4. & xxvi. 2.
[t] Lev. xxvii. 30. Num. xviii. 21, &c.
[u] Num. xviii. 26.
[x] Deut. xii. 6, 11.
[y] Chap. xiii. 11. Pſal. xvii. 4. Heb. x. 25.

v. 32—39. As the diligent and exact obſervance of the temple-worſhip would moſt effectually engage them to continue faithful to God, according to their vows, we have here,

1. A general contribution agreed upon of the third part of a ſhekel, about ten pence annually, to be employed in purchaſing the neceſſary proviſion for God's table and altar. Note, Few or none are ſo poor, but if they have a love of God's ſervice, they will be able and willing to contribute their mite, for the maintenance of a goſpel miniſtry.

2. They agreed by lot, in turn to provide the wood for God's altar as it was needed, that there might be a regular and conſtant ſupply.

3. They engaged, according to the law, for the exact payment of their firſt-fruits, tythes, and redemption-money, and whatever was appointed for the maintenance of thoſe who miniſtred at the altar. Out of the tythes paid the Levites, a tenth was ſeparated for the prieſts maintenance, v. 38. Theſe being depoſited in the chambers of the temple, afforded a proviſion for thoſe who miniſtred at the temple; and engaged them not to forſake the houſe of God, whilſt their diligent miniſtration there would keep the people alſo from forſaking it. Note, They who have lying on them the great care of men's ſouls, need have no other care about a worldly proviſion.

CHAP. XI.

We have here, 1. Nehemiah's care to people Jeruſalem, ver. 1, 2. 2. The principal perſons that reſided there, of Judah and Benjamin, ver. 3—9. Of the prieſts and Levites, ver. 10—19. 3. The ſeveral cities and villages of Judah and Benjamin, that were peopled by the reſt of their families, ver. 20—36.

1. AND the rulers of the people dwelt at Jeruſalem: the reſt of the people alſo caſt lots, to bring one of ten, to dwell in Jeruſalem [a] the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities. 2. And the people bleſſed all the men [b] that willingly offered themſelves to dwell at Jeruſalem. 3. ¶ [c] Now theſe are the chief of the province that dwelt in Jeruſalem: but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his poſſeſſion in their cities, to wit, Iſrael, the prieſts, and the Levites, and [d] the Nethinims, and [e] the children of Solomon's ſervants. 4. And [f] at Jeruſalem dwelt certain of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin: of the children of Judah; Athaiah the ſon of Uzziah, the ſon of Zechariah, the ſon of Amariah, the ſon of Shephatiah, the ſon of Mahalaleel, of the children of [g] Perez; 5. And Maaſeiah the ſon of Baruch, the ſon of Colhozeh, the ſon of Hazaiah, the ſon of Adaiah, the ſon of Joiarib, the ſon of Zechariah, the ſon of Shiloni. 6. All the ſons of Perez that dwelt at Jeruſalem, were four hundred threeſcore and eight † valiant men. 7. And theſe are the ſons of Benjamin, Sallu the ſon of Meſhullam, the ſon of Joed, the ſon of Pedaiah, the ſon of Kolaiah, the ſon of Maaſeiah, the ſon of Ithiel, the ſon of Jeſaiah. 8. And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine hundred twenty and eight. 9. And Joel the ſon of Zichri was their overſeer: and Judah the ſon of Senuah was ſecond over the city. 10. [h] Of the prieſts: Jedaiah the ſon of Joiarib, Jachin. 11. Seraiah the ſon of Hilkiah, the ſon of Meſhullam, the ſon of Zadok, the ſon of Meraioth, the ſon of Ahitub, was the ruler of the houſe of God. 12. And their brethren that did the work of the houſe, were eight hundred twenty and two: and Adaiah the ſon of Jehoram, the ſon of Pelaliah, the ſon of Amzi, the ſon of Zechariah, the ſon of Paſhur, the ſon of Malchiah, 13. And his brethren chief of the fathers, two hundred forty and two: and Amaſhai, the ſon of Azareel, the ſon of Ahaſai, the ſon of Meſhillemoth, the ſon of Immer, 14. And their brethren mighty men of valour, an hundred twenty and eight: and their overſeer was Zabdiel, the ſon † of one of the great men. 15. Alſo [i] of the Levites: Shemaiah the ſon of Haſhub, the ſon of Azrikam, the ſon of Haſhabiah, the ſon of Bunni. 16. And Shabbethai, and Jozabad of the chief of the Levites ‖ had the overſight of the outward buſineſs of the houſe of God. 17. And Mattaniah the ſon of Micha, the ſon of § Zabdi, the ſon of Aſaph, was the principal to begin the thankſgiving in prayer: and Bakbukiah the ſecond among his brethren, and Abda the ſon of Shammua, the ſon of Galal, the ſon of Jeduthun. 18. All the Levites in [k] the holy city, were two hundred fourſcore and four. 19. Moreover, the porters, Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren that kept † the gates, were an hundred ſeventy and two.

[a] Ver. 18. Mat. iv. 5. & xxvii. 53.
[b] Judg. v. 9. Pſal. cx. 3.
[c] 1 Chron. ix. 2.
[d] Ezra ii. 43.
[e] Ibid. 55.
[f] 1 Chron. ix. 3.
[g] Gen. xxxviii. 29.
† Heb. Men of activity.
[h] 1 Chron. ix. 10, &c.
† Or of Haggedolim.
[i] 1 Chron. ix. 14, &c.
‖ Heb. Were over. 1 Chron. xxvi. 29.
§ Zichri. 1 Chron. ix. 15.
[k] 1 Kings xi. 19. Ver. 1. Iſa. lii. 1.
† Heb. At the gates.

v. 1—19. Jeruſalem, the holy city, though now walled, and the temple ſervice carried on, was but thinly inhabited. Probably an abode there was judged moſt dangerous, as againſt this place the enemies of God's people chiefly levelled their deſigns; and alſo leſs could be got here, than by farming or merchandiſe in the country. Note, (1.) The fear of man deters many from dwelling in the holy city. (2.) Selfiſh ends and private advantages, are generally more powerful inducements than God's glory, and the intereſts of his church and people. To remedy this evil, we have here the ſteps taken to repleniſh it with inhabitants:

1. The rulers of the people, with their families and attendants, fixed there, as the duty of their office required, and as an encouragement to others to follow their examples. Note, (1.) They whom God diſtinguiſhes with honour, ſhould diſtinguiſh themſelves by zeal for his cauſe. (2.) A great and good example is very prevalent.

2. Many voluntarily offered themſelves, and received the deſerved commendations of their brethren, who could not but praiſe that generous ſelf-denial they cared not to imitate. Note, (1.) Many more will commend what is excellent than copy it. (2.) They who for God's glory forego their own advantage, ſhall never loſe their reward.

3. The remainder were ſupplied by lot; every tenth man, with his family, being appointed to reſide there. Thus the city was inhabited. As it originally belonged to Judah and Benjamin conjointly, they chiefly reſided there, though the greater number of the latter: moſt of the prieſts took up their abode there, as the place of their ſervice: ſome of the Levites alſo dwelt there, though fewer in number; the reſt being diſperſed as teachers in the other towns and villages. Of ſome of the prieſts it is remarked, they were mighty men of valour, which was the more needful, as they might be called to defend the temple with their ſword, as well as to miniſter in the ſervice. One of the Levites is ſaid to have the overſight of the outward buſineſs, repairs, collecting contributions, &c. Another, v. 17. was precentor, to begin the thankſgiving in prayer. Note, (1.) Order in the temple is eſpecially needful. (2.) Praiſe is a noble part of divine worſhip.

20. ¶ And the reſidue of Iſrael, of the prieſts and the Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance. 21. But [l] the Nethinims dwelt in † Ophel: and Ziha and Giſpa were over the Nethinims. 22. The overſeer alſo of the Levites at Jeruſalem, was Uzzi the ſon of Bani, the ſon of Haſhabiah, the ſon of Mattaniah, the ſon of Micha: of the ſons of Aſaph, the ſingers were over the buſineſs of the houſe of God. 23. For [m] it was the king's commandment concerning them, that a ‡ certain portion ſhould be for the ſingers, due [l] Chap. iii. 26.

† Or the tower.
[m] Ezra vi. 8, 9. & vii. 20, &c.
‡ Or ſure ordinance.

due for every day. 24. And Pethahiah the ſon of Meſhezabeel, of the children of [n] Zerah, the ſon of Judah, was at the king's hand in all matters concerning the people. 25. And for the villages, with their fields, ſome of the children of Judah dwelt at [o] Kirjath-arba, and in the villages thereof, and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof, and at Jekabzeel, and in the villages thereof, 26. And at Jeſhua, and at Moladah, and at Beth-phelet, 27. And at Hazar-ſhual, and at Beer-ſheba, and in the villages thereof, 28. And at Ziklag, and at Mekonah, and in the villages thereof, 29. And at En-rimmon, and at Zareah, and at Jarmuth, 30. Zanoah, Adullam, and in their villages, at Lachiſh, and the fields thereof, at Azekah, and in the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Beer-ſheba, unto the valley of Hinnom. 31. The children alſo of Benjamin, ‖ from Geba, dwelt § at Michmaſh, and Aija, and Beth-el, and in their villages, 32. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, 33. Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim, 34. Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat, 35. Lod, and Ono, [p] the valley of craftſmen. 36. And of the Levites, were diviſions in Judah, and in Benjamin.

v. 20—36. The holy city being furniſhed with inhabitants, we have here an account of the diſpoſition of the reſidue of the people. The Nethinims, whoſe ſervice required their being near the temple, dwelt on the wall of the city; See 2 Chron. xxvii. 3. The chief of the Levites alſo dwelt at Jeruſalem, that he might direct and regulate the affairs of his order. The ſons of Aſaph were engaged in the work of praiſe, and maintained by the kings of Perſia out of their treaſury. One of the deſcendants of Zerah was at the king's hand in all matters concerning the people; the perſon through whom all petitions or applications were made; or perhaps appointed to ſettle any diſputes that might ariſe between the king's officers and the people, about the taxes paid into, or ſtipends paid out of the royal treaſury. All the reſt of the people of Judah and Benjamin, with the Levites, were diſtributed in the cities and villages, enjoying once more in peace the heritage of Iſrael. Happy for them if they had learnt, by paſt experience, to improve their mercies; but the prophecy of Malachi, who now flouriſhed, ſhews that they were too like their forefathers; and therefore long ſince have they been caſt out of this good land, now barren and deſolate for the iniquity of thoſe who dwelt therein.

CHAP. XII.

We have here, 1. The names of the prieſts and the Levites that came up with Zerubbabel, ver. 1—9. 2. The ſucceſſion of the high-prieſts, ver. 10, 11. 3. The names of the next generation of the other chief-prieſts, ver. 12—21. 4. The eminent Levites that were in Nehemiah's time, ver. 22—26. 5. The ſolemnity of dedicating the wall of Jeruſalem, ver. 27—43. 6. The ſettling of the offices of the prieſts and Levites in the temple, ver. 44—47.

1. NOW [a] theſe are the prieſts and the Levites that went up with Zerubbabel the ſon of Shealtiel, and Jeſhua: [b] Seraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra, 2. Amariah, † Malluch, Hattaſh, 3. ‡ Shechaniah, ‖ Rehum, § Meremoth, 4. Iddo, † Ginnetho, [c] Abijah, 5. ‡ Miamim, ‖ Maadiah, Bilgah, 6. Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah, 7. § Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah: theſe were the chief of the prieſts, and of their brethren in the days of [d] Jeſhua. 8. Moreover the Levites: Jeſhua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, which was over † the thankſgiving, he and his brethren. 9. Alſo Bakbukiah, and Unni, their brethren, were over againſt them in the watches. 10. ¶ And Jeſhua begat Joiakim, Joiakim alſo begat Eliaſhib, and Eliaſhib begat Joiada. 11. And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua. 12. And in the days of Joiakim, were prieſts, the chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah: of Jeremiah, Hannaniah: 13. Of Ezra, Meſhullam: of Amariah, Jehohanan: 14. Of Melicu, Jonathan: of Shebaniah, Joſeph: 15. Of Harim, Adna; of Meraioth, Helkai: 16. Of Iddo, Zechariah: of Ginnethon, Meſhullam: 17. Of Abijah, Zichri: of Miniamin, of Moadiah, Piltai: 18. Of Bilgah, Shammua: of Shemaiah, Jehonathan: 19. And of Joiarib, Mattenah: of Jedaiah, Uzzi: 20. Of Sallai, Kallai: of Amok, Eber: 21. Of Hilkiah, Haſhabiah: of Jedaiah, Nethaneel. 22. ¶ The Levites in the days of Eliaſhib, Joiahah, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers; alſo the prieſts, to the reign of ‡ Darius the Perſian. 23. The ſons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in ‖ the book of the chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the ſon of Eliaſhib. 24. And the chief of the Levites: Haſhabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeſhua the ſon of Kadmiel; with their brethren over againſt them, to praiſe and to give thanks, [e] according to the commandment of David the man of God, [f] ward over againſt ward. 25. Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meſhullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters keeping the wards, at the § threſholds of the gates. 26. Theſe were in the days of Joiakim, the ſon of Jeſhua, the ſon of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the prieſt, the ſcribe.

v. 1—26. The names of great and good men deſerve to be had in remembrance, and lateſt poſterity are bound to bleſs God for their examples, as they may alſo reap much of the fruit of their labours.

The firſt of thoſe here mentioned went up at firſt with Zerubbabel and Jeſhua from Babylon. Jeremiah and Ezra here mentioned, are not ſuppoſed to be the famous prophet and ſcribe; the firſt being probably dead, and the latter arrived afterwards. One of the Levites was over the thankſgiving, ordered the matters of the choir, and ſaw that the ſervice of praiſe was regularly performed. The watches of the Levites, v. 9. relieved each other by turns, in the temple-ſervice. Ver. 10, begins the ſucceſſion of the high-prieſts from Jeſhua, through five generations; this ſeems to be added by ſome other hand, as Nehemiah can ſcarce be ſuppoſed to ſurvive Eliaſhib. Jaddua is probably the Jaddus mentioned by Joſephus, who met Alexander advancing to Jeruſalem, and obtained ſuch favours from him, on ſhewing him the prophecies of Daniel. Ver. 11, recounts the next generation who ſucceeded their fathers in the days of Joiakim, and trod in their ſteps; worthy ſons of worthy anceſtors. God's church ſhall not want miniſters, whilſt the head of the church ever lives to preſide over it. Ver. 22, begins another generation, in the days of Eliaſhib: they were Levites, perhaps more eminent for their gifts or graces than the prieſts, and therefore mentioned with honour. Some of them ſingers, others porters, according to David's diviſion, but though in the inferior offices of the temple, their piety, zeal, abilities, and diligence rendered them conſpicuous.

27. ¶ And at [g] the dedication of the wall of Jeruſalem, they ſought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jeruſalem, to keep the dedication with gladneſs, [h] both with thankſgiving, and with ſinging with cymbals, pſalteries, and with harps. 28. And the ſons of the ſingers gathered themſelves together, both out of the plain country round about Jeruſalem, and from the villages of Netophathi, 29. Alſo from the houſe of Gilgal, and out of the fields of Geba, and Azmaveth: for the ſingers had builded them villages round about Jeruſalem. 30. And the prieſts and the Levites [i] purified themſelves, and purified the people, and [k] the gates, and the wall. 31. Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, [l] whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward [m] the dung-gate: 32. And after them went Hoſhaiah, and half of the princes of Judah, 33. And Azariah, Ezra, and Meſhullam, 34. Judah and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah, 35. And certain of the prieſts ſons [n] with trumpets: namely, Zechariah the ſon of Jonathan, the ſon of Shemaiah, the ſon of Mattaniah, the ſon of Michaiah, the ſon of Zaccur, the ſon of Aſaph: 36. And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with [o] the muſical inſtruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the ſcribe before them. 37. And at [p] the fountain-gate which was over-againſt them, they went up by [q] the ſtairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the houſe of David, even unto [r] the water-gate eaſtward. 38. And the other company of them that gave thanks, went over againſt them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond [s] the tower of the furnaces, even unto [t] the broad-wall: 39. And from above [u] the gate of Ephraim, and above [x] the old gate, and above [y] the fiſh-gate, and [z] the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the ſheep-gate: and they ſtood ſtill in [a] the priſon-gate.

Before Chriſt 444.

[n] Gen. xxxviii. 30.

[o] Joſh. xv. 13, &c.

‖ Or of Geba.

§ Or to Michmaſh.

[p] 1 Chron. iv. 14.

[a] Ezra ii. 1. 536.

[b] Chap. x. 2—8.

† Melicu.

‡ Shebaniah. Ver. 14.

‖ Harim.

§ Meraioth. Ver. 15.

† Ginnethon. Ver. 16.

[c] Luke i. 5.

‡ Miniamin.

‖ Moadiah. Ver. 17.

§ Sallai. Ver. 20.

[d] Ezra iii. 2. Hag. i. 1. Zech. iii. 1.

† i. e. The pſalm of thankſgiving

Before Chriſt 536.

‡ i. e. The laſt of that name and monarchy. Dan. viii. 20, 21.

‖ Heb. The words of days. 1 Chron. ix. 14, &c.

[e] 1 Chron. xxiv.—xxvi.

[f] Ezra iii. 11.

§ Or treaſuries, or aſſemblies.

[g] Deut. xx. 5. Pſal. xxx. Title.

[h] 1 Chron. xxv. 6.

[i] Exod. xix. 10, 15.

[k] 2 Chron. xxix. 16.

[l] Ver. 38.

[m] Chap. ii. 13. & iii. 13.

[n] Num. x. 8.

[o] 1 Chron. xxiii. 5.

[p] Chap. ii. 14.

[q] Chap. iii. 15.

[r] Chap. iii. 26. & viii. 1, 3, 16.

[s] Chap. iii. 11.

[t] Ibid. 8.

[u] Ibid. viii. 16.

[x] Ibid. iii. 6.

[y] Ibid. 3.

[z] Ibid. 1.

[a] Ibid. 31.

Before Chriſt 445.

40. So ſtood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the houſe of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me: 41. And the prieſts; Eliakim, Maaſeiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah with trumpets: 42. And Maaſeiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the ſingers † ſang loud, with Jezrahiah their overſeer. 43. Alſo that day they offered great ſacrifices, and [b] rejoiced: for [c] God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives alſo and the children rejoiced: ſo that the joy of Jeruſalem was heard even afar off.

† Heb. Made their voice to be heard.
[b] Eph. v. 19. Col. iii. 16.
[c] Pſ. iv. 7.

v. 27—43. The wall being finiſhed, and the gates ſet up, notwithſtanding all the malice of their foes, we have the ſolemn dedication of the whole to God. Senſible that their ſecurity was not walls and bulwarks, but the favour of the Lord of Hoſts, they would commend all to his protection, and devote to his glory the work of their hands; whilſt with grateful thankſgivings they acknowledge the ſupport he had afforded in the concluſion of the work, undertaken in dependance on his bleſſing. For this purpoſe,

1. The Levites from the country were ſummoned to attend, and with their brethren the prieſts having purified themſelves by the neceſſary ablutions, or ſprinkling the water of purification, Numb. viii. 6—21. they purified the people, the walls, and gates probably with the ſame ceremony, as typical of that blood of ſprinkling which purges our conſciences from dead works, and having cleanſed our ſouls from ſin, reſtores us to the holy uſe and enjoyment of all God's creatures.

2. They made a ſolemn proceſſion in two companies, who ſeparating, ſurrounded the whole city, and met at the temple, ſinging and praiſing God as they went, with inſtruments of muſic.

3. They there offered great ſacrifices, and rejoiced before God; all the people, even the women and children, uniting their voices in loud ſhouts of praiſe, ſo that the ſound was heard afar off. Note, (1.) The mouths of babes and ſucklings ſhould be taught to liſp God's praiſes, for this would be the ſweeteſt muſic in his ears. (2.) They who have received great mercies from God, are bound to rejoice before him with great joy, to his glory, as well as their own comfort.

44. ¶ [d] And at that time were ſome appointed over the chambers for the treaſures, for the offerings, for the firſt-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them out of the fields of the cities the portions † of the law for the prieſts and Levites: for Judah rejoiced for the prieſts, and for the Levites that waited. 45. And both the ſingers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification, [e] according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his ſon. 46. For in the days of David [f] and Aſaph, of old, there were chief of the ſingers, and ſongs of praiſe and thankſgiving unto God. 47. And all Iſrael in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the ſingers, and the porters ‡ every day his portion, and they § ſanctified holy things unto the Levites, and [g] the Levites ſanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

[d] Chap. xiii. v. 12.
† i. e. Appointed by the law.
[e] 1 Chron. xxv. & xxvi.
[f] Ibid. xxv. 1, &c. 2 Chron. xxix. 30.
‡ Heb. The portion of a day in his day.
§ i. e. Set apart.
[g] Numb. xviii. 26.

v. 44—47. The good effects of this holy joy appear in the gracious diſpoſitions here mentioned. The prieſts and Levites in their ſeveral functions with diligence and zeal diſcharged their miniſtrations: the people appeared highly ſatisfied in them, and bleſſed God for them; and as a freſh teſtimony of their reſpect, eſpecial care was taken for their liberal maintenance; overſeers appointed for collecting their tythes and dues, and the diſtribution made to the porters and ſingers, who conſtantly attended the temple-worſhip. The Levites portion of tythes is aſſigned them, and the tenth of theſe ſeparated for the prieſts proviſion. Note, When miniſters labour in the word and doctrine, they will be chearfully and liberally ſupported; but no wonder if men grudge that idlers ſhould fatten on the ſpoil of flocks they never fed.

CHAP. XIII.

How ſoon do corruptions creep in after the greateſt reformations! In Nehemiah's abſence matters ſoon went wrong, and, at his return, many grievances cried aloud for redreſs. Therefore, 1. He expels from the congregation the mixed multitude of Moabites and Ammonites, and particularly Tobiah, from his abode in the temple, ver. 1—9. 2. He ſecures the maintenance of the prieſts and Levites, ver. 10—14. 3. He reſtrains the profanation of the ſabbath, ver. 15—22. 4. He redreſſes the growing miſchief of marrying ſtrange wives, ver. 23—31.

Before Chriſt 445.

1. ON that day [a] they read in the book of Moſes in the audience of the people; and therein was found written, [b] that the Ammonite and the Moabite ſhould not come into the congregation of God for ever; 2. Becauſe they met not the children of Iſrael with bread and with water, [c] but hired Balaam againſt them, that he ſhould curſe them: howbeit, [d] our God turned the curſe into a bleſſing. 3. Now it came to paſs [e] when they had heard the law, that [f] they ſeparated from Iſrael all the mixed multitude. 4. ¶ And before this, Eliaſhib the prieſt, † having the overſight of the chamber of the houſe of our God, was allied unto Tobiah: 5. And he had prepared for him a great chamber, [g] where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincenſe, and the veſſels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, (‡ which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the ſingers, and the porters) and the offerings of the prieſts. 6. [h] But in all this time was not I at Jeruſalem: for [i] in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon, came I unto the king, and after certain days § obtained I leave of the king: 7. And I came to Jeruſalem, and underſtood of the evil that Eliaſhib did for Tobiah, [k] in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the houſe of God. 8. And it grieved me ſore, therefore I caſt forth all the houſhold-ſtuff of Tobiah out of the chamber. 9. Then I commanded, and they cleanſed the chambers; and thither brought I again the veſſels of the houſe of God, with the meat-offering, and the frankincenſe.

[a] Chap. ix. 3.
[b] Deut. xxiii. 3, 4.
[c] Num. xxii. 5.
[d] Deut. xxiii. 5. Pſ. cix. 28.
[e] Pſ. xix. 7.
[f] Chap. ix. 2. & x. 28.
† Heb. Being ſet over.
[g] Chap. xii. 44.
‡ Heb. The commandment of the Levites.
[h] See Exod. xxxii. 1. Mat. xiii. 25.
433.
[i] Chap. v. 14.
§ Or, I earneſtly requeſted.
[k] Ver. 1.

v. 1—9. Nehemiah's back was ſcarcely turned, before great abominations crept in, which called for his ſpeedy return, and required all his zeal and authority to redreſs.

1. The people had joined in affinity with ſtrangers, Ammonites and Moabites, in direct oppoſition to the Divine injunctions, Deut. xxiii. 3—5. This portion therefore of God's law he cauſed to be read to them; and, convinced of their ſin and duty, they ſeparated themſelves from theſe ſinful connections. Note, (1.) The people of God muſt keep from evil company, if they would avoid the ways of wickedneſs. (2.) When God's word convinces us of ſin, we cannot be too eager to get rid of the ſerpent from our boſom.

2. The high-prieſt himſelf had led the way to the evil, and been the chief in the tranſgreſſion, having contracted affinity with Tobiah, an avowed enemy of God's people, and in direct oppoſition to the expreſs command, Lev. xxi. 14. Not content with this, he had received him into the temple; fitted up for him a noble apartment, by caſting down the partitions of the ſtore-chambers; and he who ought not to be admitted into the congregation, hath his abode in the midſt of the very ſanctuary. But no ſooner did Nehemiah, at his return, underſtand this vile tranſaction, than with holy indignation he ſet himſelf to diſpoſſeſs the uſurper, and reſtore theſe hallowed chambers to their proper uſe; grieved that a prieſt, a high-prieſt, ſhould bring ſuch diſhonour upon his high vocation. Tobiah is inſtantly ejected; his goods, as polluted, caſt out of the temple; the chambers cleanſed from the pollution they had contracted from ſuch profane intruſion, by the water of purification; and the veſſels and ſtores, which had been removed, again repoſited in their appointed places. Note, (1.) The higher a man's ſtation, and the holier his office, the more ſcandalous are his ſins. (2.) No dignity muſt plead exemption from rebuke. They who ſin before all, ſhould be put to ſhame before all. (3.) When we would cleanſe the temple of our hearts, the world's ſtuff, and the moſt precious iniquities, muſt be caſt out with abhorrence. (4.) Unleſs our hearts be ſprinkled with atoning blood, they never can be prepared for the reception of the ſacred treaſures of divine grace.

10. ¶ And I perceived that [l] the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the ſingers that did the work, were fled every one to [m] his field. 11. Then [n] contended I with the rulers: and ſaid, [o] Why is the houſe of God forſaken; And I gathered them together, and ſet them in their † place. 12. [p] Then brought all Judah the tythe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil; unto the ‡ treaſuries. 13. And I made treaſurers over the treaſuries, Shelemiah the prieſt, and Zadok the ſcribe, and of the Levites, [l] Mal. iii. 8.

[m] Numb. xxxv. 2.
[n] Ver. 17, 25.
[o] Chap. x. 39.
† Heb. Standing.
[p] Chap. xii. 44.
‡ Or, ſtorehouſes.

Levites, Pedaiah : and next to them was Hanan the ſon of Zaccur, the ſon of Mattaniah ; for they were counted [q] faithful, and their office was to diſtribute unto their brethren. 14. [r] Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my § good deeds that I have done for the houſe of my God, and for the offices thereof.

q Chap. vii. 2. 1 Cor. iv. 2.
r Chap. v. 19. Ver. 22, 31. Heb. vi. 10.
§ Heb. Kindneſſes.

v. 10—14. One corruption generally makes way for another, and the high-prieſt's ill example could not but have the worſt influence on the people.

1. The tythes had not been given the Levites : either they were embezzled, or the people neglected to bring them in ; the conſequence of which was, the Levites were forced to ſeek a maintainance from their farms, inſtead of the temple : or perhaps, their attention to their worldly concerns, and neglect of their divinely-appointed ſervice, occaſioned the evil. The people might well judge they deſerved not to eat what they refuſed to earn.

2. Nehemiah expoſtulates with the magiſtrates hereupon, for ſuffering ſuch abuſe, whoſe care it ſhould have been to ſee the ſervice obſerved, and the due proviſion made for the miniſters of the ſanctuary. Magiſtrates muſt anſwer it to God, for neglecting the truſt repoſed in them. He ſummons therefore the Levites to return to their poſt ; engages the people to pay their juſt dues ; and appoints faithful men to make an equitable diſtribution of them, that ſo there might be no want, nor interruption in the ſacred ſervice. Note, (1.) Negligent paſtors ſhould be admoniſhed to take heed to their miniſtry. (2.) When the workman ſhews himſelf worthy of his hire, his maintenance will be no longer counted burdenſome.

3. He looks up to God for that reward which he expected not from man ; not claiming it indeed as a matter of merit, but begging God's favourable acceptance of his well-meant duty ; and God is not unrighteous to forget our works of faith, and labours of love ; they ſhall be remembered to the everlaſting comfort of God's people.

15. ¶ In thoſe days ſaw I in Judah ſome [s] treading wine-preſſes on the ſabbath, and bringing in ſheaves, [t] and lading aſſes ; as alſo wine, grapes, and figs, and [t] all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jeruſalem on the ſabbath-day : and I teſtified againſt them in the day wherein they ſold victuals. 16. There dwelt men of Tyre alſo therein, which brought fiſh, and all manner of ware, and ſold on the ſabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jeruſalem. 17. [u] Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and ſaid unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the ſabbath-day ? 18. [x] Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city ? yet ye † bring more wrath upon Iſrael, by profaning the ſabbath. 19. And it came to paſs, that when the gates of Jeruſalem [y] began to be dark before the ſabbath, I commanded that the gate ſhould be ſhut, and charged that they ſhould not be opened till after the ſabbath : and ſome of my ſervants ſet I at the gates, that there ſhould no burden be brought in on the ſabbath-day. 20. So the merchants and ſellers of all kind of ware, lodged without Jeruſalem once or twice. 21. Then I teſtified againſt them, and ſaid unto them, Why lodge ye ‡ about the wall ? if ye do ſo again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the ſabbath. 22. And I commanded the Levites, that [z] they ſhould cleanſe themſelves, and that they ſhould come and keep the gates, to ſanctify the ſabbath-day. [a] Remember me, O my God, concerning this alſo, and ſpare me according to the § greatneſs of thy mercy.

s Exod. xxxiv. 20.
t t Exod. xx. 10. Jer. xvii. 21.
u Ver. 11.
x Jer. xvii. 23.
† Heb. Add fierce wrath.
y Lev. xxiii. 32.
‡ Heb. Before the wall?
z Chap. xii. 30.
a Ver. 14, 31.
§ Or multitude.

v. 15—22. Another grievous offence is here remarked and remedied.

1. The ſabbath had been greatly polluted, in oppoſition to the moſt expreſs commands, Exod. xxxiv. 21. Deut. v. 14. Jer. xvii. 21. They trod their wine-preſſes, gathered in their corn, worked their beaſts of burden, trafficked in the markets, bought and ſold, and turned the Lord's day into a day of merchandize ; the conſequence of which conduct could not but be fatal to the manners of the people, and beget a total neglect of God and religion. Note, Irreligious neglect of the Lord's day is the proof of an abandoned temper, and the way to perdition of body and ſoul.

2. Nehemiah zealouſly ſet himſelf to reform ſo groſs a profanation. He rebuked ſeverely the people who committed the evil, and remonſtrated againſt the rulers who connived at it ; admoniſhing them of the dire effects of ſuch a conduct in their fathers, and warning them of the aggravated guilt they incurred, and the wrath they provoked. Note, (1.) Public ſins deſerve ſharp rebukes. (2.) Connivance at ſin in others, makes us partakers with them in guilt. (3.) The kindeſt office we can do our neighbour, is to endeavour to convince him of his danger, and pluck him as a brand from the burning.

3. Whilſt he uſed the arguments of perſuaſion, as a good man, he employed the power he was inveſted with, as a magiſtrate, to reſtrain the open tranſgreſſion of God's law. On the approach of the ſabbath at evening he commanded the city gates to be ſhut, and guarded by his own ſervants, till the next evening, when the ſabbath ended ; and during this time no burdens might enter, and only thoſe be admitted who came to worſhip. The Tyrians, who, as uſual, had come with their merchandize, he ſhut out, and commanded to depart ; and when they again returned, he threatned, if they continued this conduct, to lay hold of them, and puniſh or impriſon them, the fear of which ſoon made them deſiſt from coming. And whilſt his ſervants kept the gates of the city, he charged the Levites to have the ſame care of the gates of the temple, and ſee that no impure or profane perſons were ſuffered to enter there. Note, (1.) Magiſtrates muſt not bear the ſword in vain. (2.) If the laws were faithfully put in execution, though it could not convert men's hearts, yet open vice muſt hide its head. (3.) When faithful miniſters join active magiſtrates, much may be hoped from their united labours.

4. He cries to God for a gracious remembrance in this thing, and for that mercy, without which his duty would deſtroy him. Though we may rejoice in our ſervices, as evidences of our fidelity, we muſt ever remember the iniquity which cleaves to our holieſt things ; and, renouncing all ſelf-dependance, caſt our ſouls as ſinners on God's free mercy to us in Chriſt Jeſus.

23. ¶ In thoſe days alſo ſaw I Jews that [b] had married wives of Aſhdod, of Ammon, and of Moab : 24. And † their children ſpake half in the ſpeech of Aſhdod, and could not ſpeak in the Jews language, but according to the language ‡ of each people. 25. And I contended with them, and [c] curſed them, and ſmote certain of them, and pluckt off their hair, and [d] made them ſwear by God, ſaying, Ye ſhall not give your daughters unto their ſons, nor take their daughters unto your ſons, or for yourſelves. 26. Did not Solomon king of Iſrael ſin by theſe things ? yet [e] among many nations was there no king like him, [f] who was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Iſrael : nevertheleſs, [g] even him did outlandiſh women cauſe to ſin. 27. Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to tranſgreſs againſt our God, in marrying ſtrange wives ? 28. And one of the ſons of Joiada, the ſon of Eliaſhib the high-prieſt, was ſon-in-law to Sanballat the Horonite : therefore I chaſed him from me. 29. [h] Remember them, O my God, § becauſe they have defiled the prieſthood, and [i] the covenant of the prieſthood, and of the Levites. 30. Thus cleanſed I them from all ſtrangers, and [k] appointed the wards of the prieſts and the Levites, every one in his buſineſs : 31. And for the wood-offering, at times appointed, and for [l] the firſt-fruits. [m] Remember me, O my God, for good.

b Ezra ix. 2. Chap. x. 30. 2 Cor. vi. 14.
† Or, Half of their children ſpake, &c.
‡ Heb. Of people and people.
c Chap. v. 13.
d Chap. x. 29, 30.
e 1 Kings iii. 13.
f 2 Sam. xii. xii. 24.
g 1 Kings xi. 1, &c.
h Chap. vi. 14. 2 Tim. iv. 14.
§ Heb. For the defilings.
i 1 Sam. ii. 30. Mal. ii. 4.
k Chap. xii. 1, &c. l Chap. x. 34.
m Ver. 14, 22.

v. 23—31. Nehemiah, like a faithful ſervant, deſires to make thorough work, and to leave no evil unredreſſed. We have here,

1. The ſin which had been committed, the taking ſtrange wives, and the bad effects of ſuch marriages. The children followed their mothers tongue, and ſpoke the language of Aſhdod, Ammon, and Moab, and not the Jews language ; the conſequence of which neceſſarily led them to adopt their mothers manners and religion, as they learned their tongue. Note, (1.) The evil of one parent's example is more eaſily copied, than the piety of the other. (2.) Marriages with unbelievers cannot but entail the more dangerous ſnares on our offspring. (3.) It is a pity the ſons of God's covenant people ſhould ſpeak the language of Aſhdod, and corrupt communication ſhould proceed out of their mouths.

2. The methods Nehemiah took to remedy the evil. He plainly warned them of their ſin ; produced the caſe of Solomon, to admoniſh them of the fatal influence of ſuch conduct ; declared his ſolemn reſolution, as a magiſtrate, never to connive at ſuch abominations ; denounced God's judgments againſt them, if they perſiſted ; corrected the moſt guilty, according to law, Deut. xxv. 2. by ſcourging, and plucked off their hair, as a mark of infamy ; obliging them to put away theſe ſtrange wives, and ſolemnly engage, by an oath, never to return to them. And, to ſhow how reſolute he was not to ſpare the greateſt, he expelled from the prieſthood and the city a grandſon of of the high-prieſt, for having married the daughter of Sanballat, and refuſing to put her away. Note, (1.) The rocks which have endangered the ſhipwreck of other good men, we muſt remember and avoid. (2.) The examples of the falls of thoſe who were once high in grace, ſhould lead us to tremble for ourſelves. (3.) It is not enough to ſuppreſs the outward offence againſt human laws; magiſtrates muſt ſeek to impreſs men's conſciences with the ſenſe of the evil of their doings againſt the law of God. (4.) They who make themſelves vile by their ſins, deſerve a brand of infamy to be ſtamped upon them. (5.) Better cut off a mortified limb, than, by ſparing it, endanger the corruption of the whole body. (6.) When we have once put away our abominations, we muſt ſolemnly, thro' grace, reſolve never more to return to them.

Before Chriſt 433.

3. Having purged out the old leaven, he ſeeks to reſtore order to the ſervice, which had ſuffered by theſe abuſes. The prieſts and Levites are appointed to their ſeveral work in their ſeveral courſes, and ſome employed to provide the fuel for the altar, and the tythes for the maintainance of the miniſters, that both might be ſupplied. Note, It is not enough that we ceaſe to do evil, we muſt learn alſo to do well.

4. He concludes with a prayer againſt the tranſgreſſors, who continued impenitent, and by the defilement of the prieſthood brought eſpecial reproach on their profeſſion, that God would remember and puniſh them, either by way of correction to reform them, or of deſtruction, for a warning to others; and for himſelf he begs, that a gracious God would remember him for good, bleſſing him in theſe his labours with ſucceſs, bleſſing his own ſoul with increaſing meaſures of his good ſpirit, and finally bringing him to receive his recompenſe at the reſurrection of the juſt.

Before Chriſt 433.

* * *

THE

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;

OR, A

PRACTICAL COMMENT

Upon the BOOK of

ESTHER.

This book, which the Jews hold in the higheſt eſteem, was probably compoſed by Mordecai. It contains a narrative of a horrid plot, to cut off at a ſtroke, all the Jews which were diſperſed through the provinces of Babylon, but God diſappointed the wicked deſign, and turned it to the deſtruction of the contriver. It is obſervable, that the name of God is not once mentioned throughout the volume, but the finger of God is evidently ſeen extricating the Jews from their difficulties, and encouraging by their example, the faith and hope of his people in their deepeſt diſtreſſes; ſhewing how attentive he is to their prayers, and that as he exalteth the lowly, thoſe who walk in pride he is able to abaſe. The memorial of this ſignal mercy is ſtill kept up by the Jews, in the obſervance of the feaſt of Purim, chap. ix. 20. inſtituted on this occaſion. The tranſactions of this book contain a hiſtory of about ten years, from the third to the tenth of Ahaſuerus, chap. i. 3. and iii. 7.

CHAP. I.

Before Chriſt 483.

Long before Haman's plot was laid, we have here the providential introduction of Eſther to court, who was deſigned as the inſtrument to defeat it. 1. Ahaſuerus feaſts all his great men, ver. 1—9. 2. In anger he divorceth his queen, becauſe ſhe would not come to him when ſent for, ver. 10—22.

1. NOW it came to paſs in the days of [a] Ahaſuerus, (this is Ahaſuerus which reigned from India even unto Ethiopia, [b] over an hundred and ſeven and twenty provinces) 2. That in thoſe days, when the king Ahaſuerus ſat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in Shuſhan the palace, 3. In the third year of his reign he made [c] a feaſt unto all his princes, and his ſervants; the power of Perſia and Media, [d] the nobles and princes of the provinces being before him. 4. When he ſhewed the riches of his glorious kingdom, and the honour of his excellent majeſty, many days, even an hundred and fourſcore days. 5. And when theſe days were expired, the king made a feaſt unto all the people that were preſent in Shuſhan the palace, both unto great and ſmall, ſeven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace. 6. Where were white, green, and † blue hangings, faſtned with cords of fine linen, and purple, to ſilver rings, and pillars of marble: [e] the beds were of gold and ſilver, upon a pavement ‡ of red, and blue, and white, and black marble. 7. And they gave them drink in veſſels of gold, (the veſſels being divers one from another) and ‖ royal wine in abundance, according to the § ſtate of the king. 8. And the drinking was according to the law: none did compel: for ſo the king had appointed to all the officers of his houſe, that they ſhould do according to every man's pleaſure. 9. Alſo Vaſhti the queen made a feaſt for the women in the royal houſe which belonged to king Ahaſuerus.

[a] Ezra iv. 6. Dan. ix. 1.
[b] Pſal. xvii. 14. & xxxvii. 35. Dan. vi. 1.
[c] 1 Tim. iv. 4.
[d] Luke xiv. 13.
† Or violet.
[e] Chap. vii. 8. Ezek. xxiii. 41. Amos ii. 8. & vi. 4.
‡ Or of porphyry, and marble, and alabaſter, and ſtone of blue colour.
‖ Heb. Wine of the kingdom.
§ Heb. Hand.

v. 1—9. Which of the kings of Perſia Ahaſuerus was, is difficult to determine. The moſt probable opinion ſeems to fix on Xerxes, who ſucceeded Darius Hyſtaſpis. We have here,

1. An account of his vaſt empire, extending over 127 provinces; conſiderably increaſed ſince the time of Cyrus, Dan. vi. 1. and now reached the ſummit of its grandeur.

2. To diſplay his magnificence, he made a moſt ſumptuous feaſt during 180 days ſucceſſively, entertaining his princes and great men; and when theſe were ended, for ſeven days more he feaſted all the people, ſmall and great, in the court of the garden of the palace, which was adorned with the moſt gorgeous tapeſtry and hangings, the pavement was marble of the moſt exquiſite beauty, the beds on which they lay were maſſy gold and ſilver, and all the veſſels gold, of various and moſt curious workmanſhip. The nobleſt wine plentifully flowed, and every gueſt was welcome, but none compelled to drink. Note, (1.) There is no evil in the ſplendor of a court, or the elegance of a royal table; the evil lies in the abuſe of theſe things. (2.) Let the ſobriety of a heathen feaſt confound the ſottiſh cuſtoms of our entertainments; where repeated healths, as they are called, drown the ſenſes in drunkenneſs, and the ſoul in perdition and deſtruction.

3. The queen in her palace entertained her ladies at the ſame time, according to the eaſtern manner, where the women never mix in company, but are always kept ſeparate from the men.

10. ¶ On the ſeventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, [f] Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the ſeven † chamberlains that ſerved in the preſence of Ahaſuerus the king, 11. [g] To bring Vaſhti the [f] Chap. vii. 9.

† Or eunuchs.
[g] Ver. 12. Prov. xx. 1.

the queen before the king, with the crown royal, to ſhew the people and the princes her beauty: for ſhe was † fair to look on. 12. But the queen Vaſhti [h] refuſed to come at the king's commandment by his chamberlains:
therefore was the king [i] very wroth, and his anger burned in him. 13. ¶ Then the king ſaid to the wiſe men, [k] which knew the times, (for ſo was the king's manner towards all that knew law and judgment:
14. And the next unto him was Carſhena, Shether, Admatha, Tarſhiſh, Meres, Marſena, and Memucan, [l] the ſeven princes of Perſia and Media, [m] which ſaw the king's face, and which ſat the firſt in the kingdom) 15. What ſhall we do unto the queen Vaſhti, according to law, becauſe ſhe hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahaſuerus, by the chamberlains? 16.
And Memucan anſwered before the king and the princes, Vaſhti the queen hath not done wrong to the king only, but alſo to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahaſuerus. 17. For this deed of the queen ſhall come abroad unto all women, ſo that they ſhall [n] deſpiſe their huſbands in their eyes, when it ſhall be reported, The king Ahaſuerus commanded Vaſhti the queen to be brought in before him, but ſhe came not. 18. Likewiſe ſhall the ladies of Perſia and Media ſay this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen.
Thus ſhall there ariſe too much contempt and wrath.
19. If it pleaſe the king, let there go a royal commandment from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Perſians and the Medes, that ‡ it be not altered, that Vaſhti come no more before king Ahaſuerus, and let the king give her royal eſtate § unto another that is better than ſhe. 20. And when the king's decree which he ſhall make, ſhall be publiſhed throughout all his empire (for it is great) all [o] the wives ſhall give to their huſbands honour, both to great and ſmall. 21. And the ſaying † pleaſed the king and the princes, and the king did according to the word of Memucan: 22. For he ſent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, [p] that every man ſhould bear rule in his own houſe, and ‡ that it ſhould be publiſhed according to the language of every people.

Before Chriſt 483.
† Heb. Good of countenance.
[h] Col. iii. 18.
[i] Eph. iv. 26, 27.
[k] 1 Chron. xii. 32.
[l] Ezra vii. 14.
[m] 2 Kings xxv. 19.
[n] Eph. v. 33.
‡ Heb. Paſs not away. Chap. viii. 8. Dan. vi. 8, 12.
§ Heb. Unto her companion.
[o] 1 Pet. iii. 5.
† Heb. Was good in the eyes of, &c.
[p] Eph. v. 22, 23.
‡ Heb. That one ſhould publiſh it according to the language of his people.

v. 10—22. The end of carnal mirth is commonly heavineſs. The laſt day of Ahaſuerus's jollity cloſes with vexation.

1. In the heat of wine, during the laſt day of the feaſt, having diſplayed all his other magnificence, he reſolved that his beautiful queen ſhould appear in public, with her royal crown, and cloſe with her majeſtic preſence this grand entertainment.

2. The chamberlains, or eunuchs, who were diſpatched to the queen, met with a reſolute denial. She thought it an indignity to be thus expoſed, and therefore proudly refuſed to come.

3. The refuſal highly exaſperated the monarch, and before his company he could not with-hold his anger, but raſhly reſolved to be revenged of her. His counſellors are called, his princes conſulted, that in ſo unuſual a caſe he might know what, according to law, he might do; for, though a king, he thought not himſelf above it. Note, (1.) Family quarrels, and before company too, are very grievous, and damp the joy of any entertainment. (2.) It is eaſier to govern a kingdom, than to rule over our own ſpirit. (3.) It is well for a kingdom, when princes profeſs ſuch a veneration for the law.

4. Memucan, in the name of the reſt, propoſes his opinion, that Vaſhti ſhould be divorced for her diſobedience. As the quarrel was public, it would be dangerous to the peace of families, if wives were permitted thus to deſpiſe their huſbands commands; and the queen's example would afford a dangerous precedent; while ſome condign puniſhment on one ſo great would for ever engage obedience from all inferiors throughout the kingdom, and ſecure to every man the rule of his own houſe. Note, Where women invert the ordinance of God, refuſe to be in ſubjection, and graſp at dominion, there will be confuſion, and every evil work.

5. The advice was readily embraced, an edict inſtantly iſſued through the kingdom, and Vaſhti divorced. Thus, however wrong the ſteps were which brought on this quarrel, the peace of the kingdom was greatly ſecured by this edict, and, through Divine Providence, a way opened for Eſther to the throne. Thus can God bring good ſtill out of evil, and make mens ſins and follies ſubſervient to the purpoſes of his own glory.

CHAP. II.

We have here, 1. Eſther advanced to be queen, ver. 1—20. 2. A plot againſt the king's life diſcovered by Mordecai, ver. 21—23.

1. AFTER theſe things, when the wrath of king Ahaſuerus was appeaſed, he remembred Vaſhti, and what ſhe had done, and [a] what was decreed againſt her. 2. Then ſaid the king's ſervants, that miniſtred unto him, Let there be fair young virgins ſought for the king. 3. And let the king appoint officers in [b] all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shuſhan the palace, to the houſe of the women, unto the † cuſtody of Hege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women, and let their things for purification be given them:
4. And let the maiden which pleaſeth the king, be queen inſtead of Vaſhti. And the thing pleaſed the king, and he did ſo. 5. ¶ Now in Shuſhan the palace, there was a certain Jew, whoſe name was Mordecai, the ſon of Jair, the ſon of Shimei, the ſon of Kiſh, a Benjamite: 6. [c] Who had been carried away from Jeruſalem, with the captivity which had been carried away with ‡ Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away. 7. And he § brought up Hadaſſah (that is Eſther) [d] his uncle's daughter, for ſhe had neither father nor mother, and the maid was ‖ fair and beautiful, whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) took for his own daughter. 8. ¶ So it came to paſs when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shuſhan the palace, to the cuſtody of Hegai, that Eſther was brought alſo unto the king's houſe, to the cuſtody of Hegai keeper of the women. 9. And the maiden pleaſed him, and [e] ſhe obtained kindneſs of him, and he ſpeedily gave her things for purification, with † ſuch things as belonged to her, and ſeven maidens which were meet to be given her out of the king's houſe, and he preferred her and her maids unto the beſt place of the houſe of the women. 10. [f] Eſther had not ſhewed her people nor her kindred: for Mordecai had charged her that ſhe ſhould not ſhew it. 11. And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's houſe to know ‡ how Eſther did, and what ſhould become of her. 12. ¶ Now when every maid's turn was come, to go in to king Ahaſuerus, after that ſhe had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women (for ſo were the days of their purifications accompliſhed, to wit, ſix months with oil of myrrh, and ſix months with ſweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women) 13. Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatſoever ſhe deſired was given her, to go with her out of the houſe of the women, unto the king's houſe. 14. In the evening ſhe went, and on the morrow ſhe returned into the ſecond houſe of the women to the cuſtody of Shaaſhgaz, the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: ſhe came in unto the king no more, except the king delighted in her, and that ſhe were called by name.
15. ¶ Now when the turn of [g] Eſther, the daughter of Abihail, the uncle of Mordecai (who had taken her for his daughter) was come to go in unto the king, ſhe required nothing, but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women appointed: and Eſther obtained favour in the ſight of all them that looked upon her. 16. So [h] Eſther was taken unto king Ahaſuerus, into his houſe royal, in the tenth month (which is the month Tebeth) in the ſeventh year of his reign.
17. And the king loved Eſther above all the women, and ſhe obtained grace and § favour in his ſight more than all the virgins: ſo that he ſet the ‖ royal crown upon her head, and [i] made her queen inſtead of Vaſhti.
18. Then the king made a great feaſt unto all his princes and his ſervants, even Eſther's feaſt, and he made a † releaſe to the provinces, and [k] gave gifts according to the ſtate of the king. 19. And when the virgins were

Before Chriſt 483.
[a] Chap. i. 19.
[b] Chap. i. 1.
† Heb. Hand.
482.
[c] 2 Kings xxiv. 14, 15. Jer. xxiv. 1.
‡ Or, Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxiv. 6.
§ Heb. Nouriſhed.
[d] Ver. 15.
‖ Heb. Fair of form, and good of countenance.
[e] So Dan. i. 9.
† Heb. Her portions.
[f] Ver. 20.
‡ Heb. The peace of Eſther.
481.
[g] Ver. 7.
[h] Pſ. cxiii. 7, 8.
479.
§ Or, kindneſs.
‖ Heb. Crown of the kingdom.
[i] 1 Sam. ii. 8.
† Heb Reſt.
[k] Pſ. lxviii. 8.

Before Christ 481. gathered together the ſecond time, then Mordecai ſat in the king's gate. 20. [l] Eſther had not yet ſhewed her [l] Ver. 10. kindred, nor her people; as Mordecai had charged her:
for Eſther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when ſhe was brought up with him.

v. 1—20. The advancement of Eſther is here recorded, with the various ſteps of Divine Providence, which led to this wonderful event.

1. The king ſoon repented of the raſhneſs that in his wine he had committed, and with deep regret parted with his beauteous queen, that by an unalterable law he muſt ſee no more. Note, What is done haſtily in anger, often gives cauſe to long and bitter remorſe.

2. The courtiers, to divert the king's melancholy, and by ſome new object to obliterate the remembrance of Vaſhti, propoſe to him the collecting of the moſt beautiful damſels in his dominions, that out of them he might ſelect the moſt agreeable, to reign in the ſtead of the divorced queen. Note, In kings courts, enough watch the monarch's eye, and appear ready miniſters to all his pleaſures.

3. The king approved the propoſal, and Hege, the king's chamberlain, or eunuch, was appointed to take charge of them, and after a year for purification, that their native beauty might be heightened by the charms of art, they were then in turn to be brought to the king; and if they pleaſed him not, they returned to be ſhut up in the ſeraglio, whilſt the favoured virgin was to be choſen queen.

4. Among thoſe that were collected at Shuſhan was a Jeweſs, named Eſther; an orphan, brought up under the care of her couſin-german Mordecai, a Benjamite, whoſe anceſtor had been carried away from Jeruſalem at the captivity of Jeconiah. As he in tenderneſs had ſhewed himſelf a father to her, and with daily ſollicitude enquired after her welfare, ſhe, in obedience, behaved as a dutiful child, obſervant of his directions. He had bid her conceal her parentage, as it might be an objection to her advancement; and as ſhe was born in Shuſhan, no queſtions probably were aſked of her country, and ſhe paſſed for one of Perſian extraction. Note, (1.) They who ſhow to orphans parental tenderneſs, ſhould meet with the grateful return of filial duty and affection. (2.) Though we may never tell a lie, we are not always obliged to ſpeak all we know.

5. The manners, as well as the beauty of this damſel, exceedingly ingratiated her to the keeper of the women, and he ſhewed her eſpecial regard and kindneſs. When her turn came to be introduced to the king, ſhe required no ornaments; her native beauty was ſufficient diſtinction. She no ſooner appeared, than all who ſaw, admired her; and the king, charmed with her perſon, determined to fix on her head the imperial diadem. Behold a captive, a Jew, an orphan, now exalted to the royal throne of Perſia! Thus God can work, and raiſe the poor from the duſt, to ſet them among princes.

6. At the coronation of Eſther a royal feaſt is made, which ſhe graced with her preſence, which Vaſhti had refuſed. To heighten the general joy, a releaſe of taxes was publiſhed thro' the provinces, and royal gifts beſtowed. Though a ſecond collection of virgins was made, Eſther ſeems to have continued unrivalled in the king's affections; and Mordecai now was advanced to ſome honourable poſt at court, probably thro' Eſther's influence, who retained the ſame reſpect and deference for his advice, and changed not her manners with her ſtation, though ſhe had ſtill continued to conceal, as Mordecai directed, her kindred and people. Note, (1.) No change of ſtation ſhould make us forget our benefactors. (2.) Younger perſons ſhew their wiſdom in being guided by the counſel of their more aged and experienced friends.

About 478. 21. ¶ In thoſe days (while Mordecai ſat in the king's gate) two of the king's chamberlains, Bigthan and Te-† Heb. Threſhold. reſh, of thoſe which kept the † door, were wroth, and ſought to lay hand on the king Ahaſuerus: 22. And the thing was known to Mordecai, who told it unto Eſther the queen; and Eſther certified the king thereof in Mordecai's name. 23. And when inquiſition was made of the matter, it was found out: therefore they [m] See Mal. iii. 16. were both hanged on a tree: and [m] it was written in [n] Chap. vi. 1. [n] the book of the chronicles before the king.

v. 21—23. We have here,

1. A plot formed againſt the king's life by two of his ſervants, whom he had diſguſted. Monarchs ſtand on a dangerous eminence: how many of theſe have gone down murdered to the grave! Let them learn juſtice, and to rule with equity, that they may engage the affections as well as the ſubmiſſion of their ſubjects.

2. The plot was diſcovered by Mordecai, for treaſons uſually tranſpire; and, as a loyal ſubject, he communicates his intelligence through Eſther to the king. Inquiſition is made, the traitors convicted and hanged, and a record entered of the faithful ſervice he had performed. Note, (1.) God has ſtrange ways of bringing treaſons and bloody deſigns to light. (2.) Concealment of any plot againſt the ſovereign or ſtate, is highly criminal. (3.) May every traitor meet a like reward. (4.) Good ſervices done us deſerve to be recorded, that they may be remembered long, and recompenſed.

Before Christ 478.

CHAP. III.

Here, 1. Haman becomes the king's favourite, ver. 1. 2. Mordecai refuſeth to do him honour, ver. 2—4. 3. Haman for this vows to be revenged upon all the Jews, ver. 5, 6. 4. He obtains an order from the king to have them all maſſacred, ver. 7—13. 5. This order is diſperſed through the kingdom, ver. 14, 15.

1. AFTER theſe things did king Ahaſuerus [a] pro- About 474.
mote Haman the ſon of Hammedatha [b] the [a] Pſ. xii. 8. Mal. iii. 15.
Agagite, and advanced him, and ſet his ſeat above all [b] 1 Sam. xv. 8.
the princes that were with him. 2. And all the king's ſervants that were in the king's gate, bowed, and reverenced Haman; for the king had ſo commanded concerning him: but Mordecai [c] bowed not, [d] nor did him [c] Deut. xxv. 17.
reverence. 3. Then the king's ſervants which were in [d] Pſ. xv. 4.
the king's gate, ſaid unto Mordecai, Why tranſgreſſeſt thou the king's commandment? 4. Now it came to paſs, when they ſpake daily unto him, and [e] he hearkned [e] Prov. xix. 27.
not unto them, that they told Haman, to ſee whether Mordecai his matters would ſtand; for he had told them that he was a Jew. 5. And when Haman ſaw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman [f] full of wrath. 6. And he thought [f] See Dan. iii. 19.
ſcorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had ſhewed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman ſought [g] to deſtroy all the Jews that were through- [g] Pſ. lxxxiii. 4.
out the whole kingdom of Ahaſuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

v. 1—6. The people of God muſt not long expect the ſunſhine of proſperity. Though they had a queen on the throne, and a friend at court, a ſtorm ariſes, which threatens to ſwallow them up with univerſal deſtruction.

1. Haman, an Agagite, ſome think a deſcendant of Agag the king of Amalek, the hereditary enemy of the Jews, others, a Perſian of this name, is advanced to the firſt poſt of honour, becomes the king's favourite, and receives, at his command, ſuch adoration and reverence as approached idolatry.

2. The riſing ſun is univerſally worſhipped by the fawning courtiers; and as preferment could be hoped for only thro' the favourite's intereſt, all men bowed down before him. Mordecai alone could not conform to the extravagant honours paid him; not envious of his advancement, or proudly diſreſpectful, but conſcientiouſly with-held from ſuch impious adoration. In vain his fellow-ſervants adviſe compliance, or remonſtrate on the danger of refuſal: he chuſes rather to loſe his office, or life itſelf, rather than wound his conſcience. Note, No conſideration muſt ſway or influence us to comply with what is evil. Better incur the wrath of princes, than offend the King of kings; better hazard life, than loſe body and ſoul in hell.

3. Haman was ſoon informed of this obſtinate diſreſpect, and that this Jew pleaded religion as the reaſon for refuſing this adoration to a mortal man. His pride fired at the notice, and he reſolves to wreak his vengeance not only on him, but on all his nation. Note, (1.) The reſentment of favourites hath been often fatal to the worthieſt ſubjects; but uſually in the end they are made to drink of the cup they had mixed for others. (2.) Inſolent pride begets unrelenting cruelty: woe to thoſe who dare offend ſuch.

7. ¶ In the firſt month (that is the month Niſan) in 474.
the twelfth year of king Ahaſuerus, [h] they caſt Pur, [h] Chap. ix. 24.
that is, the lot before Haman, from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is the month Adar. 8. ¶ And Haman † ſaid unto king Aha- † Or, had ſaid. ſuerus, There is a certain people ſcattered abroad, and diſperſed among the people, in all the provinces of thy kingdom, and [i] their laws are divers from all people, [i] Ezra iv. 13. Acts xvi. 20.
neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not ‡ for ‡ Heb. Meet, or equal.
the king's profit to ſuffer them. 9. If it pleaſe the king, let it be written that they may be deſtroyed: and I will § pay ten thouſand talents of ſilver to the hands of § Heb. Weigh.
thoſe that have the charge of the buſineſs, to bring it into

Before Chriſt 474.

into the king's treaſuries. 10. And the king [k] took [l] his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the ſon of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews ‖ enemy. 11. And the king ſaid unto Haman, The ſilver is given to thee, the people alſo, to do with them [m] as it ſeemeth good to thee. 12. [n] Then were the king's ſcribes called on the thirteenth day of the firſt month, and there was written according to all that Haman had commanded unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province, according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; [o] in the name of king Ahaſuerus was it written, and ſealed with the king's ring. 13. And the letters were ſent by poſts into all the king's provinces, to deſtroy, to kill, and to cauſe to periſh all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, [p] in one day, even upon [q] the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, (which is the month Adar) and [r] to take the ſpoil of them for a prey. 14. The copy of the writing for a commandment to be given in every province, was publiſhed unto all people, that they ſhould be ready againſt that day. 15. The poſts went out, [s] being haſtned by the king's commandment, and the decree was given in Shuſhan the palace: and the king and Haman [t] ſat down to drink, but [u] the city Shuſhan was perplexed.

[k] Gen. xli. 42.
[l] Chap. viii. 2, 8.
‖ Or, Oppreſſor.
[m] Pſ. lxxiii. 7.
[n] Chap. viii. 9.
[o] See 1 Kings xxi. 8.
[p] Chap. viii. 12, &c.
[q] 2 Mac. xv. 36.
[r] Chap. viii. 11.
[s] Rom. iii. 15.
[t] John xvi. 20.
[u] Chap. viii. 15.

v. 7—15. Urged on by impatience of revenge, the wicked Haman concerts his black deſign, and obtains the moſt favourable proſpect of ſucceſs.

1. By miſrepreſentations he obtains of the king full licence to execute his bloody purpoſe. He deſcribes the Jews as a people vile and deſpicable, vagabonds and fugitives, different in their manners from all the king's ſubjects, traiterous in principle, and dangerous to the ſtate: that it would be highly advantageous for the kingdom not to ſuffer them, but to deſtroy them root and branch. And, leſt the revenue might ſeem to ſuffer by the loſs of the tribute they paid, he offers ten thouſand talents, near four millions of our money, to reimburſe the king's treaſury. The king, without enquiry, eaſily conſented to the favourite's requeſts; ſacrifices the people to his will; remits the offer of the ten thouſand talents; and, as a token of his regard and affection, gives him the ring from his finger, or perhaps the royal ſignet, as a mark of his implicit confidence, that he might iſſue whatever order concerning the matter he thought fit. Note, (1.) The people of God have been often traduced as deſpicable, and repreſented as dangerous; and becauſe their holy manners correſpond not with a wicked world, their ſingularity is treated as deſign, and their religion counted rebellion. (2.) If Chriſtians were not firſt dreſſed up as monſters, their enemies could not ſo eaſily worry and deſtroy them. (3.) Revenge is ſo ſweet, that wicked men ſtick at nothing to gratify it.

2. Having obtained the king's conſent, (as the 8th verſe may be rendered, Now Haman had ſaid unto the king, &c.) he next conſults his diviners to fix the lucky moment for the maſſacre. In order for this the lot is caſt, and ſo Divine Providence ordered it, that it fell on the twelfth month; ſo that eleven months were given for the diſappointment of the wicked device: and, notwithſtanding his malice and haſte, Haman's ſuperſtition prevailed, and he waited for the auſpicious day. Note, God has ſecret ways of diſappointing the deſigns of his people's enemies, and making them abortive, by the very means they uſe to enſure ſucceſs.

3. The time being fixed, the bloody edict is drawn, ſealed, and diſpatched into all the provinces, and the thirteenth of the twelfth month is the fatal day. How many times have the enemies of God's church and people thought their prey thus ſecure; but he that ſitteth on the heavens laugheth them to ſcorn.

4. The meſſengers in haſte being gone, Haman and the king ſit down at the feſtal board, where wine and revelry ſhut out from the royal breaſt all thoughts of the bloody ſcene ready to commence. But though they were merry, the city was perplexed, the poor Jews in terror, thoſe who befriended them intereſted in their danger, and the moſt indifferent ſhocked at the barbarity of the order, and dreading the conſequence of ſuch a promiſcuous ſlaughter. Note, (1.) Kings are often the greateſt ſtrangers to their people's ſituation. (2.) In times of public calamity, merriment and feaſting are moſt unſuitable.

CHAP. IV.

In this chapter, 1. The Jews weep and mourn on account of this edict, ver. 1—4. 2. Eſther enquires the cauſe, ver. 5—7. 3. Mordecai informs her, and begs her to intercede with the king, ver. 8, 9. 4. She objects the danger; yet, at Mordecai's requeſt, reſolves to venture, after a three days ſolemn faſt, ver. 10—17.

1. WHEN Mordecai perceived [a] all that was done, Mordecai rent his clothes, and put on ſackcloth [b] with aſhes, and went out into the midſt of the city, and cried with a loud and bitter cry: 2. And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with ſackcloth. 3. And in every province whitherſoever the king's commandment, and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and faſting, and [c] weeping, and wailing, and † many lay in ſackcloth and aſhes. 4. ¶ So Eſther's maids and her ‡ chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved, and ſhe ſent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his ſackcloth from him: but he received it not.

[a] Chap. iii. 8—11.
[b] Joſh. vii. 6. Ezek. xxvii. 30.
[c] Pſ. xlii. 5.
† Heb. Sackcloth and aſhes were laid under many. Iſa. lviii. 5. Dan. ix. 3.
‡ Or, Eunuchs.

v. 1—4. No ſooner was the bloody edict noiſed abroad, than terror and diſtreſs ſeized on the unhappy victims.

1. Mordecai, as moſt nearly concerned, and the innocent cauſe of all the evil, rent his cloaths, and with an exceeding bitter cry, which beſpoke his anguiſh, went forth into the city, to alarm his countrymen, and affect them with a ſenſe of their danger. And though none cloathed with ſackcloth might by law appear in the king's court, all ſuch unwelcome objects being baniſhed from the royal preſence; yet he came before the gate, that Eſther might ſome way be made acquainted with their deep calamity. Note, A good man feels and laments the heavy ſtrokes of Providence, whilſt with humble reſignation he ſubmits to the rod.

2. The ſorrow ſoon ſpread through every province whither the decree was ſent, and nothing was heard but weeping and wailing. At laſt, the notice of it reached the queen, and Mordecai's diſconſolate appearance, to whom ſhe might have ſhown particular marks of her favour, was reported to her, and grieved her exceedingly. Having heard he was in ſackcloth, ſhe ſent him new apparel; but he refuſed it, nor would appear out of the habit of a mourner, whilſt the cauſe of his diſtreſs ſubſiſted. Note, They who are united under one head, Chriſt Jeſus, cannot but ſympathize with every fellow-member that ſuffers.

5. Then called Eſther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, [d] to know what it was, and why it was. 6. So Hatach went forth to Mordecai, unto the ſtreet of the city which was before the king's gate. 7. And Mordecai told him of all that had happened unto him, and of [e] the ſum of the money that Haman had promiſed to pay to the king's treaſuries for the Jews, to deſtroy them. 8. Alſo he gave him the copy of the writing of the decree that was given at Shuſhan to deſtroy them, to ſhew it unto Eſther, and to declare it unto her, and to charge her that ſhe ſhould go in unto the king, to make ſupplication unto him, and to make requeſt before him for her people. 9. And Hatach came and told Eſther the words of Mordecai. 10. ¶ Again Eſther ſpake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai: 11. All the king's ſervants and the people of the king's provinces do know, that whoſoever, whether man or woman, ſhall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, [f] there is one law of his to put him to death, except ſuch [g] to whom the king ſhall hold out the golden ſcepter, that he may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king theſe thirty days. 12. And they told to Mordecai Eſther's words. 13. Then Mordecai commanded to anſwer Eſther, Think not with thyſelf that thou ſhalt eſcape in the king's houſe, more than all the Jews. 14. For if thou altogether holdeſt thy peace at this time, then [h] ſhall there † enlargement and deliverance ariſe to the Jews from another place, [i] but thou and thy father's houſe ſhall be deſtroyed: and [k] who knoweth, whether thou art come to the kingdom for ſuch a time as this? 15. ¶ Then Eſther bade them return Mordecai this anſwer. 16. Go, gather together all the Jews that are ‡ preſent in Shuſhan, and faſt ye for me, and neither eat nor drink [l] three days night or day: I alſo and my maidens will faſt likewiſe, and [m] ſo will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and [n] if I periſh, I periſh. 17. So Mordecai went his way, and did according to all that Eſther had commanded him.

[d] Rom. xii. 15. Heb. xiii. 3.
[e] Chap. iii. 9.
[f] Dan. ii. 9.
[g] Chap. v. 2. & viii. 4.
[h] See Gen. xxii. 8.
† Heb. Breathing.
[i] See Judg. v. 23.
[k] See Ezek. i. 16.
‡ Heb. Found.
[l] See Chap. v. 1.
[m] See 2 Kings vii. 4.
[n] See Gen. xliii. 14.

v. 5—17. As yet Eſther ſeems to have had but an imperfect knowledge of the cauſe of Mordecai's affliction; and as it was impoſſible, by the cuſtom of Perſia, to have a perſonal conference with him, ſhe ſends Hatach, a truſty eunuch, to enquire and report the particulars. Hereupon,

1. Mordecai relates the whole of the matter; tranſmits, by the eunuch, a copy of the decree, and charges her by all means to uſe her utmoſt influence to get it reverſed, by undeceiving the king with regard to the miſrepreſentations of Haman. Note, Could truth but find its way to the royal ear, much of the people's miſeries would be relieved.

2. Eſther returns, by the ſame meſſenger, an anſwer to Mordecai's requeſt. Uncalled, to appear in the royal preſence, was death by the Perſian law, except the king ſtretched out the golden ſceptre; nor were the queens excepted from it: and, for ſome time paſt, the king ſeems to have neglected her, which would make the eſſay more dangerous, and therefore ſhe rather wiſhes him to ſeek ſome other advocate, than expoſe her to the peril of imminent death. Note, (1.) The King of kings is not thus inacceſſible; whoſoever will, may come unto him boldly with every requeſt, and are ſure never to be denied. (2.) God in his providence permits the moſt diſcouraging circumſtances, in order to exerciſe the faith, and brighten the crown of the redeemed.

3. Mordecai leſſens not his importunity by the danger which Eſther ſuggeſted to him. He let her know, that if her kindred fell, ſhe muſt not hope to eſcape; that he fully believed God would ſtand by them, and ſhe would loſe the honour of being their deliverer, if ſhe declined this ſervice; nay, that God would viſit upon her and her father's houſe ſuch a cowardly refuſal, and, whilſt the reſt eſcaped, they would be left to periſh: and he concludes with ſuggeſting, that her advancement was ordered for this great purpoſe, and that ſhe was therefore bound to correſpond with the deſigns of God herein. Note, (1.) If we have faith to truſt God, he will never fail us. (2.) They who through unbelieving fear decline the path of duty, are juſtly given up to the danger they ſeek thus ſinfully to ſhun. (3.) It is good to obſerve the leadings of providence, and correſpond with what appears to be the deſign of God, in placing us in ſuch a ſtation, or circumſtance.

4. Determined at laſt, Eſther reſolves at all hazards to make the eſſay: but firſt ſhe enjoined Mordecai, and all the Jews in Shuſhan, to ſpend three days in prayer and faſting, whilſt ſhe did the ſame in the palace, to humble their ſouls for the ſins which provoked theſe threatned judgments, and to ſeek God's favour and bleſſing on her attempt, who alone could incline the king's heart to grant her ſuit. Putting her life in her hand, ſhe then reſolved to go to the king: ſhe could but periſh. Note, (1.) In all our diſtreſſes there is a throne of grace open, and a God who heareth prayer. (2.) When we are truly humbled under our ſins, we may hope God will deliver us from our afflictions. (3.) Whilſt we are deſiring the prayers of others, let us not forget to be importunate for ourſelves. (4.) When we can truſt God with all, then all is ſafe.

CHAP. V.

Here, 1. Eſther proves ſucceſsful in her application, and is honoured with the king's preſence at her banquet, ver. 1—8. 2. Haman, ſtill more enraged at Mordecai, prepares a gallows for his execution, ver. 9—14.

1. NOW it came to paſs [a] on the third day, that Eſther put on her royal apparel, and ſtood in [b] the inner court of the king's houſe, over againſt the king's houſe: and the king ſat upon his royal throne in the royal houſe, over againſt the gate of the houſe. 2. And it was ſo, when the king ſaw Eſther the queen ſtanding in the court, that [c] ſhe obtained favour in his ſight: and [d] the king held out to Eſther the golden ſceptre that was in his hand: ſo Eſther drew near, and touched the top of the ſcepter. 3. Then ſaid the king unto her, [e] What wilt thou, queen Eſther? and what is thy requeſt? [f] it ſhall be even given thee, to the half of the kingdom. 4. And [g] Eſther anſwered, If it ſeem good unto the king, [h] let the king and Haman come this day unto the banquet that I have prepared for him. 5. Then the king ſaid, Cauſe Haman to make haſte, that he may do as Eſther hath ſaid: ſo the king and Haman came to the banquet that Eſther had prepared. 6. ¶ And [i] the king ſaid unto Eſther at the banquet of wine, [k] What is thy petition? and it ſhall be granted thee: and what is thy requeſt? even to the half of the kingdom it ſhall be performed. 7. Then anſwered Eſther, and ſaid, My petition and my requeſt is; 8. If I have found favour in the ſight of the king, and if it pleaſe the king to grant my petition, and to perform my requeſt, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I ſhall prepare for them, and I will do to-morrow as the king hath ſaid.

[a] Chap. iv. 16.
[b] Chap. iv. 11. & vi. 4.
[c] Prov. xxi. 1. Eſth. xv. 7.
[d] Chap. viii. 4.
[e] John xvi. 24.
[f] See Mar. vi. 23.
[g] Prov. xxix. 11.
[h] Mat. x. 16.
[i] Chap. vii. 2.
[k] Chap. ix. 12.

v. 1—8. On the third day, when their prayers and faſting had come up for a memorial before God,

1. Eſther boldly approaches the royal throne, dreſſed in royal apparel, meet for the preſence of the king. Having in faith and prayer commended herſelf to God, ſhe could with confidence meet the danger.

2. The king no ſooner perceived her ſtanding in the inner court, than God, who hath in his hands the hearts of kings, inclined him to ſhew her the greateſt kindneſs and regard. He ſtretches out the ſceptre, as an aſſurance to her of life, and encourages her to propoſe her requeſt, (which ſuch an unuſual appearance of the queen ſpoke to be of importance) and it ſhould be granted. Note, (1.) They who venture all for God, will find him able to do for them unſpeakably better than their moſt ſanguine hopes. (2.) The ſinner that draws near the throne of the eternal King, ſhall find a like favourable acceptance; his fears ſhall vaniſh, his pardon be ſealed, his petitions granted, and this exceeding abundantly above all he can aſk or think.

3. As it ſeemed not yet a fit occaſion to open her deſign, ſhe only humbly entreats the king's preſence with Haman to her banquet. There ſhe would try his kind regard to her; revive the affection that had ſeemed to ſubſide; watch the favourable moment when his heart was open; and charge Haman to his face with the wickedneſs he meditated. The requeſt is inſtantly granted: Haman is ſent for, and happy, no doubt, in this honourable diſtinction. There the king again bids her aſk, and renews his promiſe of granting her requeſt. Another day ſhe begs his company, and then the important ſecret ſhall be diſcloſed; hoping thus to engage his increaſing affection, and the more ſurely to obtain her requeſt. Note, To watch the favourable moment is the way to enſure ſucceſs.

9. ¶ Then went Haman forth that day, [l] joyful, and with a glad heart: but when Haman ſaw Mordecai in the king's gate, that [m] he ſtood not up, nor moved for him, he was [n] full of indignation againſt Mordecai. 10. Nevertheleſs Haman refrained himſelf, and when he came home, he ſent and † called for his friends, and Zereſh his wife. 11. And Haman told them of [o] the glory of his riches, and [p] the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein [q] the king had promoted him, and how he had advanced him above the princes and ſervants of the king. 12. Haman ſaid moreover, [r] Yea Eſther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that ſhe had prepared, but myſelf; and to-morrow am I invited unto her alſo with the king. 13. Yet all this availeth me nothing, ſo long as I ſee Mordecai the Jew ſitting at the king's gate. 14. ¶ Then ſaid Zereſh his wife, and all his friends unto him, Let a ‡ gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and [s] to-morrow ſpeak thou unto the king, that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleaſed Haman, and he cauſed the gallows to be made.

[l] Amos vi. 13.
[m] Pſ. xv. 4.
[n] Chap. iii. 5. Prov. xxi. 24.
† Heb. Cauſed to come.
[o] Dan. iv. 30, 31. Chap. vii. 10.
[p] Chap. ix. 10.
[q] Chap. iii. 1.
[r] Obad. 3. Chap. vii. 6.
‡ Heb. Tree. Chap. vii. 9.
[s] Rom. iii. 15.

v. 9—14. Little thought Haman, how deceitful was the honour of which he boaſted, or how vain the revenge he meditated.

1. He departs from the banquet highly elated with the honour ſhown him, and more with the renewal of the invitation; flattering himſelf, that now he was equally the favourite of the king and queen, and reigned without a rival in their regard. Note, When pride is wound up to the higheſt pitch, the fall, like Lucifer's, is more terrible.

2. Mordecai ſtill perſevered in refuſing him the adoration he demanded. Notwithſtanding the danger which threatned, he dared not, by mean and ſinful compliances, ſeek to avert it; in conſcious uprightneſs ſecure, and only ſollicitous to keep a conſcience void of offence. Note, They who are careful to pleaſe God, need not fear or care who are diſpleaſed with them for ſo doing.

3. Haman's boſom ſwelled with indignation: he could not bear this contempt, as he regarded it, without the deepeſt anguiſh; and though he refrained himſelf in the view of the revenge he meditated, this troubled his repoſe, and made all his enjoyments taſteleſs. His riches, his family, his advancement at court, all are nothing in his eyes, whilſt Mordecai lives, and his revenge is ſuſpended. Note, (1.) Pride and diſcontent create us numberleſs miſeries, and rob us of the enjoyment of all our mercies. (2.) The curſe of God is often viſible on the wicked in the midſt of all their poſſeſſions.

4. Haman diſcloſed his complaints to his wife and friends, and they cheriſh the malignity of his heart, and propoſe a ſpeedy gratification of his revenge. That a gallows ſhould be erected fifty cubits high, before his own door, that all might ſee the miſcreant, and himſelf be delighted with the execution; that on the morrow, he would early get the death warrant ſigned, nor wait for the general maſſacre, but hang Mordecai without delay; and thus with greater delight he might go to the queen's banquet, and meet no more that unwelcome foe at court. The thing pleaſed Haman, and is no ſooner ſpoke than done; but little thought the builder for whom this gallows was erected. Note, When the expectation of the ſinner is greateſt, then ruin and death eternal are at the door.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter, 1. The king makes Haman do honour to Mordecai for diſcovering a plot againſt his life, ver. 1—11. 2. Haman's friends forebode his doom, ver. 12—14.

1. [a] ON that night † could not the king ſleep, and he commanded to bring [b] the book of records of the chronicles; and they were read before the king. 2. And it was found written, that [c] Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Tereſh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who ſought to lay hand on the king Ahaſuerus. 3. And the king ſaid, [d] What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then ſaid the king's ſervants that miniſtred unto him, There is nothing done for him.

[a] Pſal. xxxiii. 18. & xlvi. 1.
† Heb. The king's ſleep fled away.
[b] Chap. ii. 23.
[c] Ibid. 21.
[d] Gal. vi. 9.

v. 1—3. How vain are all human contrivances! How eaſily can God diſappoint the devices of his enemies to their confuſion! He hath acceſs to the ſpirits of men; and by means unſeen, but irreſiſtible, will accompliſh all his pleaſure. Mordecai as little dreamt of the honour which was deſigned him, as of the deſtruction threatned him; and Haman as little ſuſpected his morning viſit to court would be attended with ſuch conſequences. We have here,

1. The king, reſtleſs on his bed; his ſleep was fled: for he who ſeals up the eye-lids, had forbidden his to cloſe. To amuſe the tedious hour, and perhaps to try this expedient to lull his wakeful eyes to loſt repoſe, he calls for the book of records, and ſo God ordained that the portion fixed upon was the detection of that dangerous conſpiracy, to which Mordecai had been ſo inſtrumental. Note, The minuteſt circumſtances may be pregnant with the greateſt events; the opening at a particular leaf of this book, conduced eminently to the preſervation of the Jewiſh people, and in them of God's whole church in all future ages.

2. The remembrance of the ſervice naturally excited enquiry about the honour and advancement of the perſon who had ſo well deſerved it; and it appeared he had been overlooked and neglected: nor was he advanced to any higher poſt than what he had held at court before. Note, (1.) The greateſt ſervices are often forgotten and unrewarded. (2.) In courts, modeſt merit is uſually overlooked, whilſt forward flatterers thruſt themſelves into the ſeat of honour. (3.) When we remember the kindneſſes which have been done us, the longer we have neglected to recompenſe them, the deeper ſhould we count our arrears, and the more diligently diſcharge them.

4. ¶ And the king ſaid, Who is in the court? (now Haman was come into the outward court of the king's houſe, [e] to ſpeak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him) 5. And the king's ſervants ſaid unto him, Behold, Haman ſtandeth in the court. And the king ſaid, Let him come in. 6. So Haman came in: and the king ſaid unto him, What ſhall be done unto the man † whom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour, more than to myſelf?) 7. And Haman anſwered the king, For the man whom the king delighteth to honour, 8. Let the royal apparel be brought ‡ which the king uſeth to wear, and [f] the horſe that the king rideth upon; and the crown royal which is ſet upon his head: 9. And let this apparel and horſe be delivered to the hand of one of the kings moſt noble princes, that they may aray the man withal, whom the king delighteth to honour, and bring him on horſeback through the ſtreet of the city, and [g] proclaim before him, Thus ſhall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour. 10. Then the king ſaid to Haman, Make haſte, and take the apparel, and the horſe, as thou haſt ſaid, and do even ſo to Mordecai the Jew, that ſitteth at the king's gate: ‖ let nothing fail of all that thou haſt ſpoken. 11. Then took Haman the apparel, and the horſe, and arayed Mordecai, and brought him on horſeback through the ſtreet of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus ſhall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

[e] Job v. 13. Pſal. ii. 4.
† Heb. In whoſe honour the king delighteth.
‡ Heb. Wherewith the king clotheth himſelf.
[f] 1 Kings i. 33.
[g] Gen. xli. 43.
‖ Heb. Suffer not a whit to fail.

v. 4—11. Probably when the deſign of God's providence was anſwered, the king ſlept in peace; but no ſooner awaked in the morning, than he is ſollicitous to honour the neglected Mordecai.

1. He makes enquiry who was in the court; and who ſhould be there but Haman, early attending on the king, big with impatience to ſee Mordecai on the gallows, and not doubting to ſucceed eaſily in his petition; him the king commands to be introduced, little ſuſpecting the deſign of his maſter, and probably counting it a happy circumſtance that he was called for.

2. No ſooner is Haman introduced, than the king propoſes a queſtion to him, v. 6. which ſelf-love ſtrongly interpreted in his own favour, and therefore he laviſhly adviſes to heap the moſt ſignal diſtinctions on the man whom the king delighted to honour. He preſcribes the royal apparel to adorn him, the royal crown to be ſet upon his head, the king's own horſe to carry him, and one of the chief of the princes as his footman and herald to lead his horſe, and proclaiming the king's delight in the favoured perſon, to command univerſal reverence and obeyſance. Note, (1.) Pride and ambition are never ſatisfied with the moſt accumulated honours. (2.) Self-conceit, and a high opinion of ourſelves, is a moſt dangerous rock, againſt which we cannot too carefully guard. (3.) It ſhould be the delight of kings, and all in authority, to beſtow honour on the deſerving, and to encourage thoſe who do well.

3. The king expreſſed his approbation of the advice, and Haman expected with rapture the iſſue; when how aſtoniſhed to hear the name of Mordecai as the honoured perſon, and himſelf fixed on to lead his horſe, and proclaim his high deſerts.

4. The mandate muſt be obeyed, and Haman, however ſtung with envy and grief, is obliged to comply. Mordecai is apparelled, his horſe ready, and Haman the herald of his honour. If ſuch be the dignity of him whom man will have exalted, what ſhall be their portion whom the eternal king delights to honour?

12. ¶ And Mordecai [h] came again to the king's gate: but Haman [i] haſted to his houſe, mourning, and [k] having his head covered. 13. And Haman told Zereſh his wife and all his friends, every thing that had befallen him. Then ſaid his wiſe men, and Zereſh his wife unto him, If Mordecai be of the ſeed of the Jews, before whom thou haſt begun to fall, [l] thou ſhalt not prevail againſt him, but ſhalt ſurely fall before him. 14. And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and haſted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Eſther had prepared.

[h] Pſal. cxxxi 1.
[i] 2 Chron. xxvi. 20.
[k] 2 Sam. xv. 30. Jer. xiv. 4.
[l] Zech. xii. 3.

v. 12—14. With very different ſenſations theſe two returned; the one to his place at court, the other to his houſe in the city. Mordecai thankful and comforted, receiving the favour done him as a token for good, that God would blaſt the deſigns of his inveterate enemy. Haman covered with confuſion, ſtung with envy, and mourning as under the bittereſt affliction; thus will God render tribulation to thoſe who trouble his people, but to us who are troubled, reſt with him.

1. Haman unboſoms his griefs to his wife and friends. Uſually the communicating our afflictions is a relief, here it tended to aggravate their burden. For,

2. They prove miſerable comforters, and read his doom inſtead of ſoothing his complaints. They foreſee the diſappointment of all his ſchemes: Mordecai is of the ſeed of the Jews, and no weapon formed againſt them can proſper; they predict his own fall in the ſtruggle, and heighten his diſtreſs into deſpair; what had happened was but the earneſt of what would enſue. Note, (1.) It is in vain fighting againſt thoſe whom God protects. (2.) Falling favourites hurry downwards faſt. (3.) Sad preſages of approaching ruin, often ſeize the ſinner before deſtruction comes upon him to the uttermoſt.

3. Haman's grief probably made him dilatory, and he foreboded now no good from the banquet in which he had ſo lately gloried. The eunuchs are ſent to haſten him, and he goes; where we ſhall find him, in the next chapter, receiving the judgment he had ſo well deſerved.

CHAP. VII.

At the ſecond banquet, 1. Eſther petitions for her life, and the life of her people, ver. 1—4. 2. She accuſes Haman as the author of the plot, ver. 5, 6. 3. The king hereupon orders him to be hanged on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai, which was done accordingly, ver. 7—10.

1. SO the king and Haman came to † banquet with Eſther the queen. 2. And the king ſaid again to Eſther, on the ſecond day, [a] at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition, queen Eſther? and it ſhall be granted thee: and what is thy requeſt? and it ſhall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom. 3. Then Eſther the queen anſwered and ſaid, If I have found favour in thy ſight, O king, and if it pleaſe the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my requeſt. 4. For [b] we are ſold, I and my people, to be deſtroyed, to be ſlain, and to periſh: but if we had been ſold for bond-men and bond-women, I had held my tongue, although the enemy [c] could not coun-tervail the king's damage. 5. ¶ Then the king Aha-ſuerus anſwered and ſaid unto Eſther the queen, Who is he? and where is he that durſt preſume in his heart to do ſo? 6. And Eſther ſaid, ‡ The adverſary and enemy is this wicked Haman. Then Haman was afraid ‖ before the king and the queen.

† Heb. Drink.
[a] Chap. v. 6.
[b] Ibid. iii. 9. & iv. 7.
[c] Chap. iii. 9.
‡ Heb. The man, the adverſary.
‖ Heb. At the preſence of.

v. 1—6. The banquet again is ready, and the noble gueſts ſeated; and now the king the third time demands the petition, and renews the ſolemn promiſe to grant it. Hereupon,

1. Eſther preſents an unexpected requeſt. She ſought no honour for herſelf, or poſts at court for her friends; more than theſe was at ſtake her life, and the life of her people; theſe ſhe begs may be granted them, and the dire decree reverſed that threatned their fearful doom. Had it extended no farther than ſervitude, ſhe had in ſilence ſubmitted; but ſo cruel a maſſacre was not only inhuman, but would be a loſs to the government, for which the 10,000 talents of Haman could make poor ſatisfaction. Note, (1.) Perſecution is not only impious in the ſight of God, but highly detrimental to the ſtate, where nothing can repair the loſs of induſtrious ſubjects. (2.) When bodily life is at ſtake, how ſollicitous are we to obtain deliverance; when the eternal life of body and ſoul is in danger, ſhall we be leſs importunate?

2. With aſtoniſhment the king hears the ſtrange petition, and with impatient eagerneſs demands who dared attempt ſo vile a deed. Probably in his cups the decree had been obtained, at leaſt he little ſuſpected his queen was involved in it. Note, (1.) That is often done raſhly and thoughtleſsly, at which on a moment's cool reflection we cannot but be ſhocked. (2.) Many ſeem amazed at the wickedneſs of others, who overlook the ſame, or greater it may be, in themſelves.

3. Haman is accuſed as the contriver of this diabolical ſcheme: to his face the queen charges him with his malicious deſign, and conſcious guilt fills him with fear and trembling, before the enraged king, whom he had drawn into the ſnare. Note, If the terror of human majeſty offended, overwhelms the traitor with horror and diſmay, what will the ſinner feel when arraigned at the bar of God, and ſelf-convicted before the eternal judge and king?

7. And the king ariſing from the banquet of wine in his wrath, went into the palace-garden; and Haman ſtood up to make requeſt for his life to Eſther the queen: for [d] he ſaw that there was evil determined a-gainſt him by the king. 8. Then the king returned out of the palace garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was fallen upon [e] the bed whereon Eſther was. Then ſaid the king, Will he force the queen alſo before me in the houſe? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they [f] covered Haman's face.
9. And [g] Harbonah, one of the chamberlains, ſaid before the king, Behold alſo the gallows fifty cubits high, [h] which Haman had made for Mordecai, who had ſpoken good for the king, ſtandeth in the houſe of Haman. Then the king ſaid, Hang him thereon.
10. So they hanged Haman on the gallows [i] that he had prepared for Mordecai. Then was the king's wrath pacified.

[d] Prov. xvi. 14.
[e] Chap. i. 6.
[f] Job ix. 24.
[g] Chap. i. 10.
[h] Ibid. v. 14.
[i] Pſal. xv. & x. 2. Prov. xi. 6.

v. 7—10. We have here,

1. The king riſing in fury, and retiring to the garden of the banqueting-houſe, that he might compoſe his ruffled ſpirits, and deliberate on Haman's puniſhment. Note, (1.) Judges muſt be cool in their deciſions, and however glaring or aggravated the offence, preſerve their temper towards the criminal. (2.) It is very difficult to reſtrain the firſt burſt of ſudden and heinous provocation.

2. Haman perceived by the king's abrupt departure, his ruin determined; and with abject ſubmiſſion falls at the queen's feet, to beg his life at her hands. Note, (1.) The moſt haughty in proſperity, are uſually the moſt dejected in adverſity. (2.) The enemies of God's people, however proud and inſolent, muſt one day bow at their feet.

3. The king returning, found him at Eſther's feet; and filled with prejudice, interprets his moſt innocent, nay commendable humiliation, into a deſign atrociouſly criminal. Note, When a man's character is proved to be infamous and abandoned, every motion creates ſuſpicion.

4. No ſooner is Haman's ruin evident, than they who late adored him, are ready to hurry him down the precipice; ſo ſlippery are high places, and ſo precarious kings' favour. The King of kings is not thus changeable in his regards. They cover his face, as a perſon unworthy the royal preſence, or as a malefactor prepared for execution: and one of them who had called Haman in the morning to the banquet, acquaints the king with the gallows erected at the door, deſigned for that loyal ſubject Mordecai, to whoſe fidelity the king had owed his life. Hereupon inſtantly the king orders his execution, and on this very gallows: a righteous ſentence, and juſt retaliation. Note, (1.) With more terrible confuſion will the ſinner's face be covered in the great day of the wrath of the Lamb. (2.) The miſchievous often fall themſelves into the pit they have digged for others.

5. The execution is no ſooner ordered than done. Haman hangs a ſpectacle and warning to all the children of pride; and now juſtice is ſatisfied, the king's anger ſubſides.

CHAP. VIII.

We have here, 1. Mordecai's advancement, ver. 1, 2. 2. An edict granted, at Eſther's interceſſion, to render the former abortive, ver. 3—14. 3. The joy of the Jews thereupon, ver. 15—17.

1. ON that day [a] did the king Ahaſuerus give the houſe of Haman the Jews enemy, unto Eſther the queen: and Mordecai came before the king; for Eſther had told [b] what he was unto her. 2. And the king took off [c] his ring which he had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And Eſther [d] ſet Mordecai over the houſe of Haman.

[a] Job xxvii. 16. Prov. xiii. 22.
[b] Chap. ii. 7.
[c] Ibid. iii. 10.
[d] Pſal. xxxix. 6. Prov. xx. 21.

v. 1, 2. Juſt execution having been performed on the perſon of the wicked Haman, we have here,

1. The diſpoſal of his eſtate, which, as forfeited, the king beſtows on the queen. The ten thouſand talents which were offered, as the price of blood, become the property of thoſe whoſe lives were marked out for a prey.

2. Mordecai is highly advanced. Though before the queen had concealed her kindred, ſhe thinks it a proper ſeaſon now to own her relation and obligations to Mordecai, whoſe good ſervices had already ſo highly recommended him to the king; but this more eſpecially engaged the royal favour to him. He is immediately introduced; and, as a token of the warmeſt regard, the king preſents him with the ring from his finger, and thus he becomes in the king's favour and dignity the worthy ſucceſſor of the wicked Haman. To his truſt alſo the queen commits the management of the forfeited eſtate: thus completely were the tables changed; the wickedneſs of the wicked was upon him, and the wealth of the ſinner laid up for the juſt. Note, (1.) This world is a changing ſcene, kings favour precarious, and riches make themſelves wings and fly away. Let it admoniſh us to ſecure his favour, whoſe regards are unchangeable, and thoſe riches which are abiding, even eternal in the heavens. (2.) God's providence often in this world diſplays the juſtice of his government.

3. ¶ And Eſther ſpake yet again before the king, and fell down at his feet, and † beſought him with tears, to put away the miſchief of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had deviſed againſt the Jews. 4.
Then [e] the king held out the golden ſcepter toward Eſther. So Eſther aroſe, and ſtood before the king,
5. And ſaid, If it pleaſe the king, and if I have found favour in his ſight, and the thing ſeem right before the king, and I be pleaſing in his eyes; let it be written to reverſe the ‡ letters deviſed by Haman the ſon of Hammedatha the Agagite, which he wrote to deſtroy
the † Heb. She wept and beſought him.

[e] Chap. iv. 11. & v. 2.
‡ Heb. Device.

Before Chriſt 474.

the Jews which are in all the king's provinces; 6. For [f] how can I ‖ endure to ſee the evil that ſhall come unto my people? or how can I endure to ſee [g] the deſtruction of my kindred? 7. ¶ Then the king Ahaſuerus ſaid unto Eſther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, Behold, [h] I have given Eſther the houſe of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, becauſe he laid his hand upon the Jews. 8. Write ye alſo for the Jews, as it liketh you, in the king's name, and ſeal it with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and ſealed with the king's ring, [i] may no man reverſe. 9. [k] Then were the king's ſcribes called at that time [l] in the third month (that is the month Sivan) on the three and twentieth day thereof, and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are [m] from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and ſeven provinces, unto every province [n] according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language. 10. And he [o] wrote in the king Ahaſuerus name, and ſealed it with the king's ring, and ſent letters by poſts on horſeback, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries: 11. Wherein the king granted the Jews, which were in every city, to gather themſelves together, and to ſtand for their life, to deſtroy, to ſlay, and to cauſe to periſh all the power of the people and province, that would aſſault them, both little ones, and women, and [p] to take the ſpoil of them for a prey: 12. [q] Upon one day, in all the provinces of king Ahaſuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar. 13. The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was publiſhed unto all people, and that the Jews ſhould be ready againſt that day to avenge themſelves on their enemies. 14. So the poſts that rode upon mules and camels went out, being haſtned, and preſſed on by the king's commandment; and the decree was given at Shuſhan the palace.

[f] Neh. ii. 3. Jer. ix. 1. Amos vi. 6.
‖ Heb. Be able that I may ſee.
[g] Chap. vii. 4.
[h] Ver. 1.
[i] Chap. i. 19. Dan. vi. 8, 12, 15.
[k] Chap. iii. 12.
[l] Pſal. xxx. 5.
[m] Chap. i. 1.
[n] Ibid. 22. & iii. 12.
[o] Ibid.
[p] Chap. ix. 10, 15.
[q] Chap. iii. 13. & ix. 1.

3—14. Though Haman was hanged, and his ſubſtance given for a ſpoil, the edict was ſtill in force, and the Jews expoſed to ruin from their remaining enemies. Therefore,

1. Eſther again appears before the king; though uncalled, yet confident of his regards, the golden ſcepter bids her be comforted, and ſhe humbly preſents her petition: with tears ſhe pleads the danger of her kindred and people, and the inſupportable grief of ſeeing them maſſacred. With deep ſubmiſſion, repreſents the caſe to the king, and hopes the bloody edict may be reverſed, which Haman, by miſrepreſentations, had obtained. Note, (1.) Though we have juſtice on our ſide, yet as inferiors it becomes us to uſe entreaty. (2.) Some men's miſchief ſurvives them; they murder even after death, by the pernicious writings and ſentiments they have propagated. (3.) Our advancement muſt never make us forget our poor relations, or be unconcerned for their diſtreſſes.

2. The king kindly received her requeſt, and inſtantly prepares to counteract the miſchief of the former decree. By a fundamental law of the kingdom, the writing which was ſealed with the king's ſignet was irreverſible; but he gives Mordecai full permiſſion to draw up another decree, in direct oppoſition to the former, impowering the Jews to ſtand on their defence, to deſtroy their enemies who ſhould aſſault them, and take their goods for a ſpoil. The king's ſcribes therefore are ſummoned, the order iſſued under the king's ſeal, and couriers diſperſed with all haſte, on the ſwifteſt beaſts, to diſperſe the decree, both to relieve the Jews from the deep anxiety that for more than two months they had endured, as well as encourage them to prepare againſt their foes, and to make the king's favour towards them known. Note, When we have done wrong, we cannot too ſoon endeavour to prevent, to the utmoſt of our power, the miſchievous conſequences which may enſue.

15. ¶ And Mordecai went out from the preſence of the king, in royal apparel of † blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple; and [r] the city of Shuſhan rejoiced and was glad: 16. The Jews had [s] light and gladneſs, and joy and honour. 17. And in every province, and in every city, whitherſoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladneſs, [t] a feaſt and a good day: and many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

† Or voilet.
[r] Chap. iii. 15. Prov. xxix. 2.
[s] Pſal. xcvii. 11.
[t] Chap. ix. 19, 22.

v. 15—17. When the Lord pleaſes to work, how ſoon can he gives beauty for aſhes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garments of praiſe for the ſpirit of heavineſs! We have here,

1. Mordecai in royal apparel, robed in purple and fine linen, with a coronet of gold upon his head. A great diſtinction this, but poor, compared with the brighter robes with which the King of glory ſhall array his favourites, and put on their heads a crown of glory which fadeth not away.

2. A general joy was diffuſed around on his advancement: the city promiſed themſelves proſperity under his wiſe and juſt adminiſtration: the Jews with gladneſs heard the unexpected tidings of deliverance; and whilſt with exultation they rejoiced, the people around them now perceiving the court favour towards them, paid them all honour and reſpect. Note, (1.) A happy change of adminiſtration from bad men and bad meaſures, is a truly national joy. (2.) The anguiſh and ſorrow a chriſtian ſometimes feels, only ſerves to heighten his joy, when the Lord turns and refreſhes him, and brings him from the depths of the earth again.

3. A great acceſſion of converts was made to the Jewiſh church on this occaſion. The evident finger of God ſeen in their deliverance, their preſent happy and proſperous eſtate, and the fear of the power with which they were inveſted, wrought upon multitudes, who, to avoid their reſentment, or to obtain court favour, or perhaps from better motives of Divine conviction, became proſelytes. Note, When the church is in proſperity, profeſſors are numerous, but the faithful are proved in adverſity.

CHAP. IX.

As both decrees continued in force, we have here, 1. The conteſt and victory of the Jews over their enemies on the appointed day, ver. 1—19. 2. The memory of it preſerved by an annual feaſt, ver. 20—32.

1. NOW [a] in the twelfth month (that is the month Adar) on the thirteenth day of the ſame, [b] when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them) 2. [c] The Jews gathered themſelves together in their cities throughout all the provinces of the king Ahaſuerus, to lay hand on ſuch as ſought their hurt; and no man could withſtand them: [d] for the fear of them fell upon all the people. 3. And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and † officers of the king, helped the Jews: becauſe [e] the fear of Mordecai fell upon them. 4. For Mordecai was great in the king's houſe, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai [f] waxed greater and greater. 5. Thus the Jews [g] ſmote all their enemies with the ſtroke of the ſword, and ſlaughter and deſtruction, and did what they would unto thoſe that hated them. 6. And in Shuſhan the palace the Jews ſlew and deſtroyed five hundred men. 7. And Parſhandatha, and Dalphon, and Aſpatha, 8. And Poratha, and Adaliah, and Aridatha, 9. And Parmaſhta, and Ariſai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha, 10. [h] The ten ſons of Haman, the ſon of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, ſlew they; but [i] on the ſpoil laid they not their hand. 11. On that day the number of thoſe that were ſlain in Shuſhan the palace, was brought before the king. 12. ¶ And the king ſaid unto Eſther the queen, The Jews have ſlain and deſtroyed five hundred men in Shuſhan the palace, and the ten ſons of Haman; what have they done in the reſt of the king's provinces? now [k] what is thy petition? and it ſhall be granted thee: or what is thy requeſt further? and it ſhall be done. 13. Then ſaid Eſther, If it pleaſe the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shuſhan, to do to morrow alſo according unto this day's decree, and [l] let Haman's ten ſons be hanged upon the gallows. 14. And the king commanded it ſo to be done; and the decree was given at Shuſhan, and they hanged Haman's ten ſons. 15. For the Jews that were in Shuſhan, gathered themſelves together on the fourteenth day alſo of the month Adar, and

[a] Chap. viii. 12.
[b] Ibid. iii. 13.
[c] Ibid. viii. 11.
[d] Exod. xxiii. 27.
† Heb. Thoſe that did the buſineſs for the king.
[e] Gen. xxxv. 5.
[f] 2 Sam. iii. 1. Prov. iv. 18.
[g] Deut. xxxii. 35. 2 Theſ. i. 6.
[h] Job xviii. 19. & xxvii. 14. Pſal. xxi. 10.
[i] Chap. viii. 11.
[k] Ibid. v. 6. & vii. 2.
[l] 2 Sam. xxi. 6.

and ſlew three hundred men at Shuſhan; but [m] on the prey they laid not their hand. 16. But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces, gathered themſelves together, and ſtood for their lives, and had reſt from their enemies, and ſlew of their foes [n] ſeventy and five thouſand; but they laid not their hands on the prey. 17. On the thirteenth day of the month Adar, and on the fourteenth day of the ſame, reſted they, and made it a day of [o] feaſting and gladneſs. 18. But the Jews that were at Shuſhan, aſſembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof: and on the fifteenth day of the ſame they reſted, and made it a day of feaſting and gladneſs. 19. Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar, [p] a day of gladneſs and feaſting, and a good day, and of [q] ſending portions one to another.

[m] Ver. 10.
[n] Pſal. xlvi. 8.
[o] Deut. xvi. 11, 14.
[p] Chap. viii. 17.
[q] Neh. viii. 10, 12.

v. 1—19. The day now approached when the great controverſy between the Jews and their enemies muſt be decided; both being countenanced by law, and therefore at full liberty to uſe their utmoſt efforts.

1. The enemies of the Jews, not diſcouraged by the repulſe their chieftain had met with, prepared to revenge his death. The ſons of Haman and his friends ſupported the faction, and hoped by numbers ſtill to cruſh theſe feeble Jews, notwithſtanding the hand of God ſo evidently had appeared for their protection. Note, (1.) God often infatuates his enemies to their own deſtruction. (2.) Obſtinate revenge is deaf to admonition.

2. The Jews aſſembled in their own defence; not deſiring bloodſhed, but prepared to repel force by force. Note, Though ſome injuries muſt be born ſubmiſſively, it is often both lawful and becoming to ſtand up in ſelf-defence.

3. The governors of the provinces aſſiſted them. By theſe oppoſite decrees left at liberty, they choſe to ſide with thoſe who had now evidently the king's ear and favour; Mordecai's greatneſs overawed them; and as through him they could only now hope for advancement, they will curry favour with his friends. Note, Many are friends to God's people for the ſake of advantage, who have no regard for their religion.

4. The conſequence of the conteſt was a deciſive victory, in favour of the Jews. God had ſtruck their enemies with a panic, ſo that though they aſſembled themſelves, it was only as ſheep for the ſlaughter. Seventy-five thouſand of their foes fell in the different provinces, on the 13th of Adar, and even in the royal city Shuſhan five hundred, together with Haman's ten ſons; who, whilſt they ſought to avenge their father, periſhed in the attempt. The 14th, the Jews every where reſted, and kept a great feaſt for their deliverance, except at Shuſhan; where, at Eſther's requeſt, the ten ſons of Haman were hanged in terrorem, and another day was given the Jews to be avenged of their enemies, and execute God's judgments on the inveterate foes of his church and people. Three hundred more were ſlain on that day, and then they reſted alſo on the 15th, and kept a feaſt with great gladneſs. The ſpoil of their enemies, though given them for a prey, they nobly refuſed; as they aimed at nothing but ſelf-preſervation, and rather choſe to recommend themſelves to the king's favour, by leaving it to go into the royal treaſury, than they enrich themſelves. Note, (1.) The people of God ſhould ever appear diſintereſted. (2.) God's rich mercies demand our praiſes, and ſhould warm our hearts with love and joy.

20. ¶ And Mordecai [r] wrote theſe things, and ſent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahaſuerus, both nigh and far, 21. To ſtabliſh this among them, that they ſhould keep [s] the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the ſame yearly: 22. As the days wherein the Jews reſted from their enemies, and the month [t] which was turned unto them from ſorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day: that they ſhould make them days of feaſting and joy, and of [u] ſending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor. 23. And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them. 24. Becauſe Haman the ſon of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had deviſed againſt the Jews to deſtroy them, and [x] had caſt Pur (that is, the lot) to † conſume them, and to deſtroy them: 25. But [y] when Eſther came before the king, he commanded by letters, that his wicked device which he deviſed againſt the Jews, [z] ſhould return upon his own head, and that he and his ſons ſhould be hanged on the gallows. 26. Wherefore they called theſe days Purim, after the name of ‡ Pur: therefore for all the words of [a] this letter, and of that which they had ſeen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them, 27. The Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their ſeed, and upon all ſuch as joined themſelves unto them, ſo as it ſhould not fail, that they would keep theſe two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed time every year: 28. And [b] that theſe days ſhould be remembred and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that theſe days of Purim ſhould not fail from among the Jews, nor the memorial of them periſh from their ſeed. 29. Then Eſther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with all ‖ authority, to confirm this ſecond letter of Purim. 30. And he ſent the letters unto all the Jews, to the hundred twenty and ſeven provinces of the kingdom of Ahaſuerus, [c] with words of peace and truth: 31. To confirm theſe days of Purim in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew, and Eſther the queen had enjoined them, and as they had decreed for § themſelves and for their ſeed, [d] the matters of the faſtings and their cry. 32. And the decree of Eſther confirmed theſe matters of Purim, and it was written in the book.

[r] Pſal. lxxviii. 6.
[s] 2 Mac. xv. 36.
[t] Pſal. xxx. 11.
[u] Neh. viii. 10.
[x] Chap. iii. 7.
† Heb. Cruſh.
[y] Ver. 13, 14. Chap. vii. 5. &c. & viii. 3, &c.
[z] Chap. vii. 10.
‡ i. e. Lot.
[a] Ver. 20.
[b] Pſal. cxii. 2.
‖ Heb. Strength.
[c] Acts xv. 29.
§ Heb. Their ſouls.
[d] Chap. iv. 16.

v. 20—32. Deliverances ſo great, deſerve to be had in everlaſting remembrance. We have here the method taken to perpetuate the memorial of this ſignal mercy.

1. Mordecai wrote the tranſactions of thoſe days, or probably this whole hiſtory, wherein the various ſteps of Divine interpoſition ſo evidently appeared, and diſperſed copies of it far and near throughout the provinces. Note, The written word is a mercy for which we can never enough be thankful.

2. He commanded the anniverſary of this great tranſaction to be kept as a feaſt throughout their generations; to which the Jews gladly conſented, as a means to perpetuate to the lateſt poſterity, a ſenſe of God's mercies towards their forefathers, to awaken their thankfulneſs, encourage their dependance upon the ſame gracious protection, and to declare the mighty efficacy of prayer in time of need. They called the feaſt Purim, in remembrance of the lots which Haman caſt: two days it continued, or as a Jewiſh writer ſays, the villages obſerved it on the 14th, the walled towns on the 15th, according to the days on which they reſted from the ſlaughter of their enemies. Proſelytes, as well as natural Jews, were bound to the obſervance of it, which was kept with great joy, mutual entertainments, congratulations, and liberal diſtributions to the poor. The feaſt hath not yet ceaſed, but the celebration of it hath degenerated from ſacred joy and thankfulneſs, into carnal exceſs and indulgence; as muſt be the caſe with the moſt holy feſtivals, where the profeſſors of religion preſerve the ſhadow, whilſt they have loſt the ſubſtance. Note, (1.) Paſt interpoſitions of God's providence in behalf of his people, ſhould be an encouragement to his people in every preſent diſtreſs. (2.) A holy feaſt muſt be kept in a holy manner. It is the ſcandal and reproach of every religion, to ſee exceſs conſecrated as devotion: and what a ſhame to the name of Chriſtian, to have the birth of the holy Jeſus, the ſufferings of the immaculate Lamb of God, and the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, celebrated by bacchanalian entertainments; and thoſe ſacred ſeaſons, when moſt peculiarly we are called to thankful adoration and holy joy, moſt peculiarly marked with lawleſs revelry, thoughtleſs diſſiſipation, gaming, drunkenneſs, lewdneſs, and every abomination. Is this the feaſt that God hath choſen? pudet hæc opprobria.

CHAP. X.

In this ſhort chapter we are told, 1. Ahaſuerus's greatneſs, ver. 1, 2. 2. Mordecai's advancement, and his kindneſs to his nation, ver. 2, 3.

1. AND the king Ahaſuerus laid a tribute upon the land, and upon the iſles of the ſea. 461.
2. And all the acts of his power, and of his might, and the declaration of the greatneſs of Mordecai, whereunto the king † advanced him, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Media and Perſia? 3. For Mordecai the Jew was next unto king Ahaſuerus, and great among the Jews, and accepted † Heb. Made him great.

Before Christ 468.

of the multitude of his brethren, [a] ſeeking the wealth of his people, and ſpeaking peace to all his ſeed.

[a] Neh. ii. 10.

v. 1—3. We have here the concluſion of the book of Eſther; for though in the Greek copies ſix other chapters are added, they are rejected as apocryphal. We are here informed,

1. That Ahaſuerus laid a general tribute on all his dominions. Either the tribute he had remitted, chap. ii. 18. or if, as is ſuppoſed, this was Xerxes, his expenſive expeditions made it neceſſary to repleniſh his treaſury. In arbitrary governments, the king's will is law; bleſſed be God for the enjoyment of liberty and property.

2. The greatneſs of this mighty monarch was at large recorded in the chronicles, or records of his kingdom, where Mordecai's name alſo bore a diſtinguiſhed place, and reflected honour upon the maſter to whom he owed his advancement.

3. Mordecai, good as he was great, approved himſelf by every act of kindneſs and favour to his countrymen. His honours had not changed his manners; he was courteous and kind to all his brethren, and his deſire to ſerve them ſeemed but to increaſe with his ability. Univerſally reſpected and beloved, his greatneſs procured no envy; whilſt the multitude of his brethren were deeply ſenſible, that for all their happineſs and proſperity they were indebted to his kindneſs and protection. Note, He is truly great, whoſe power and dignity are employed for the public good.

Before Christ 468.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of JOB.

THE book of Job is the firſt of thoſe ſtiled Poetical, and appears to be the moſt antient of them all, and, probably, even prior to the book of Geneſis; it being moſt generally ſuppoſed, that he was a near deſcendant of Uz, Nahor's firſt-born, Abraham's brother, Gen. xxii. 21. in whoſe family the true religion was kept up, Gen. xxxi. 53. His age alſo ſeems to ſpeak him before Moſes's time, when man's life was ſhortned to ſeventy years; whereas Job lived an hundred and forty years after his reſtoration. No mention is made of the giving law, though more antient tranſactions, as the deluge, and deſtruction of Sodom, are referred to; and tradition of former times appears as yet to have been the only repoſitory of truth. It ſhould ſeem alſo, that no other idolatry had as yet crept in, but of the ſun and moon; and that ſacrifices were not confined to one family, but every father was a prieſt in his own houſe; arguments which ſpeak the moſt remote antiquity.

Some have fancied that the whole was a mere apologue, and not a real hiſtory; but Ezekiel, xiv. 14. leaves no more doubt of the reality of ſuch a man as Job, than of Noah or Daniel; and the apoſtle James, v. 11. is very expreſs to the point. Beſides, the names of his friends and family, his country, ſubſtance, and a variety of particulars, all ſerve to prove the ſtory not fabulous, but authentic.

Various have been the conjectures about the author of this hiſtory, ſome aſcribing it to Moſes, others to Solomon, Ezra, &c. but Job himſelf ſeems moſt likely to have preſerved and publiſhed theſe memoirs, which ſo nearly related to himſelf. Certain however it it, whoever wrote them, they were given by inſpiration from God, and ſtamped with Divine authority, as appears from James v. 11. chap. v. 13. compared with 1 Cor. xiv. 19. chap. v. 17. compared with Heb. xii. 5. Accordingly, this book hath been ever received among the Jews, as belonging to the oracles of God.

The great deſign of the book, which is full of the moſt ſublime ſentiments and expreſſions, appears to be,

1. To convince us of the inſufficiency of all human righteouſneſs, the deep corruption of the human nature, and the neceſſity of a better righteouſneſs than our own, if ever we would be juſt before God.

2. To aſſert and explain the doctrine of a particular providence; to anſwer the objections which ariſe from the afflictions of good men; to urge ſubmiſſion to all God's diſpenſations, and patient waiting, without murmuring, the iſſue of every temptation.

3. To diſplay the glory of God in his adorable perfections, his abſolute ſovereignty, inflexible juſtice, unſearchable wiſdom, irreſiſtible power, and infinite goodneſs; to exalt him as the Creator, Governor, and Judge of all; and to lay every mouth in the duſt in ſilence before him.

4. To preſent us with an illuſtrious type of our Divine Saviour, firſt ſuffering, then exalted; ſunk under the depths of adverſity then riſing to the pinnacle of glory.

The book gives a ſhort hiſtory of Job, and the afflictions he ſuffered; but is chiefly taken up in ſeveral dialogues between himſelf and friends, to whoſe charges he replies; whilſt Elihu, at the cloſe, as moderator of the diſpute, takes up the argument, and God himſelf at laſt determines the queſtion.

The chief argument which his three friends principally inſiſt upon, is the conſtant bleſſedneſs and proſperity of the righteous, and the miſery of the wicked; from whence they would infer, that his ſins muſt neceſſarily be the cauſe of his afflictions; and, as his ſufferings were great, conſequently his ſins, though ſecretly committed, muſt be great alſo. They ſeem to look at no diſtribution of rewards and puniſhments hereafter, but conclude, that the preſent diſpenſations of Divine Providence are ever correſpondent to men's deſerts.

Job appears firm in his replies, conſcious of his integrity reſpecting the accuſations laid againſt him; maintaining his innocence, and appealing to his whole conduct for the exemplarineſs of his converſation: ſo far was he from acknowledging what they ſuggeſted, that he had by ſome particular acts of ſin brought theſe judgments upon himſelf. Herein he was right, and they cruelly cenſorious. His fault was, that he had too high an opinion of his own righteouſneſs; and however comparatively perfect his way might be before men, he did wrong to appeal to God for a trial, as if able to ſtand the Divine ſcrutiny. This ſhewed him unacquainted with the depths of corruption in his fallen nature, and not enough ſenſible of God's purity, and his own pollution. Hence aroſe his hard thoughts of God at times, and his impatience under the ſufferings, which, though he confeſſed himſelf a ſinner, he was at firſt unwilling to acknowledge that he had deſerved.

Elihu then ariſes, a wiſer reaſoner than had ſpoken, juſtly diſpleaſed with Job's friends for their raſh and uncharitable judgment, and for condemning Job, whilſt their arguments were evidently mere ſuppoſitions, and utterly inconcluſive; yet far from juſtifying Job's ſelf-righteouſneſs and impatience. He allows all Job's profeſſions may be true, and he neither a hypocrite nor notorious ſinner; yet at God's bar he could not ſtand: His ſovereignty, wiſdom, purity, juſtice, and his other adorable perfections were ſuch, that to arraign his proceedings were preſumption; to murmur againſt any of his diſpenſations, rebellion; every high thought of his own righteouſneſs, ignorance of his fallen nature; and every afflictive diſpenſation, ſo far from being hard, unjuſt, or unkind, was leſs than his iniquity deſerved, and graciouſly deſigned to humble, prove, and do him good, as well as glorify God.

God himſelf at laſt appears. Elihu had ſilenced Job, but God's ſpeech lays him in the duſt. The diſplay of his own wiſdom, power, and righteouſneſs, convinces Job of his ignorance, weakneſs, and ſinfulneſs; brings him to ſelf-abaſement and ſelf-abhorrence; and when the purpoſes of the afflicting providences were thus anſwered, he that rides on the whirlwind rebuked the ſtorm. The viciſſitude was ſudden and wonderful, and the proſperity and happineſs of Job far exceeded all his adverſity and miſery. So true it is, that the trial of our faith will ſurely iſſue in praiſe, and honour, and glory.

Before Chriſt 1520.

CHAP. I.

We have here, 1. Job's piety, ver. 1. 2. His proſperity, ver. 2, 3. 3. His concern for his children's ſpiritual welfare, ver. 4, 5. 4. Satan's malice againſt him, and the permiſſion he obtained to try his conſtancy, ver. 6—12. 5. The troubles that befel him, ver. 13—19. and, 6. His exemplary patience under them, ver. 20—22.

1. THERE was a man in the land of [a] Uz, whoſe name was [b] Job, and that man was [c] perfect and upright, and one that feared God, and [d] eſchewed evil. 2. And [e] there were born unto him ſeven ſons and three daughters. 3. [f] His † ſubſtance alſo was ſeven thouſand ſheep, and three thouſand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred ſhe-aſſes, and a very great houſhold: ſo that this man was the greateſt of all the ‡ men of the eaſt.

[a] Gen. x. 23. or xxii. 21.
[b] Ezek xiv. 14. Jam. v. 11.
[c] Chap. ii. 3.
[d] Prov. xvi. 6.
[e] Pſ. cxxviii. 3.
[f] Mat. vi. 33.
† Or, cattle.
‡ Heb. Sons of the eaſt.

v. 1—3. We have here the character and greatneſs of that venerable patriarch Job.

1. He was a native of Uz, ſuppoſed to be that part of Arabia that bordered on Chaldea. His name is by ſome interpreted, one hated, as his ſufferings ſeemed to ſpeak; others derive it from a word ſignifying to deſire, as if he was the deſire of his parents, though he lived to curſe the day of his birth: ſo uncertain are all our promiſed joys.

2. His piety was remarkable and eminent, and the more ſo, probably, becauſe of the generally abounding wickedneſs. He was a perfect man, not in an abſolute ſenſe, as his conduct ſhewed; but one who was in God's ſight without ſpot, as accepted in the Saviour, and whoſe heart was ſincere and upright before him. No allowed guile was entertained within, nor known evil indulged in his converſation: one that feared God, continually influenced by a regard to his holy will, and diligently engaged in the exerciſes of his worſhip; and eſchewed evil, or departed from evil, as abominable in the ſight of God, and carefully abſtained not only from the open acts, but from the appearances of evil.

3. His proſperity was ſingular as his piety, v. 2, 3. His children were numerous, his houſhold large, and his ſubſtance vaſt in flocks and herds, wherein at that time the riches of men conſiſted; ſo that in all the eaſt there was none ſo great as Job. Note, (1.) Though it is not common, it is not impoſſible, to be very great and very good; abounding in the riches of earth, yet more repleniſhed with riches of grace from heaven. (2.) Worldly poſſeſſions are then valuable bleſſings, when in their hands who ſtudy to make them ſubſervient to the intereſts of God, and the good of mankind.

4. And his ſons went and feaſted in their houſes, [g] every one his day, and ſent and called for their three ſiſters, to eat and to drink with them. 5. And it was ſo, when the days of their feaſting were gone about, that Job ſent and [h] ſanctified them, and roſe up early in the morning, and [i] offered burnt-offerings, according to the number of them all: for Job ſaid, [k] It may be that my ſons have ſinned, and † curſed God in their hearts. Thus did Job ‡ continually.

[g] Pſ. cxxxiii. 1.
[h] Exod. xix. 10.
[i] Chap. xlii. 8.
[k] 1 Cor. xi. [illegible]
† Heb. Bleſſed. So 1 Kings xxi. 10, 13. Ver. 11. Chap. ii. 9.
‡ Heb. All the days. Gal. vi. 9.

v. 4, 5. Though children are generally coveted among the firſt bleſſings, yet it is their conduct and behaviour which ſtamp them with real value; elſe they are troubles inſtead of comforts. Job had not only a pleaſing number of both ſexes, but,

1. He ſaw all his ſons happily ſettled in the world; and though each had his ſeparate family, yet they lived together in that harmony, which is ſo deſirable and uncommon among brethren. At ſtated times they viſited each other in turn; invited their ſiſters to join in their entertainment; and round the feſtal board, not of intemperate luxury, or hateful exceſs, but of affluence, crowned with the divine bleſſing, rejoiced in the gifts of God, and thanked him for a heart richly to enjoy their mercies. Note, (1.) There is no evil in entertaining our friends, or making a feaſt in our own houſe, whilſt in the fear and love of God we eat our bread with a chearful heart. (2.) Brethren and near relations are eſpecially bound to cultivate mutual love.

2. He continued to watch over them with pious care and holy jealouſy, and they continued to pay him all dutiful reſpect and ſubmiſſion, and readily joined with him in his ſolemn exerciſes of devotion. When therefore the days of their feaſting were ended, fearing leſt in the midſt of youthful mirth they had ſinned, and ſome irregularity might have been committed; or curſed God in their hearts, that is, had entertained ſome unbecoming apprehenſion of God, or his providence, or been guilty of ſome neglect in their religious ſervices, he ſends to ſanctify them, enjoins them to prepare for the ſacrifice he was about to offer in their behalf; to examine themſelves, and ſeriouſly reflecting on the paſt days, to bring their humble confeſſions before the God of mercy, and lay their ſins on the head of the beaſt, the type and figure of that one great ſacrifice, which ſhould be offered for the ſins of the world. Accordingly, early in the morning he aroſe, and offered for each a ſacrifice of atonement, whilſt they attended, and joined in the holy worſhip, expecting remiſſion of ſin through the atoning blood: and thus did Job continually, or every year, after every cloſe of their annual circuit of entertainment: a remarkable inſtance of his paternal care and deep godlineſs, and an evidence alſo of the true ſeriouſneſs of his children, who ſo readily joined in the ſacred ſervice. Note, (1.) In the midſt of mirth and feaſting we are in danger of forgetting God and godlineſs, and need a double guard over our hearts. (2.) Every thing is beautiful in its ſeaſon. There is a time to laugh, but let our mirth be innocent, and never indiſpoſe us for, or detain us from, the neceſſary returns of prayer. (3.) Job's example ſhould be every parent's pattern; not rigidly ſevere, yet watchfully jealous over their children for good. (4.) They who ſerve God truly, ſerve him continually. (5.) We ſee from the beginning, the grand point of true religion conſiſted in the vicarious ſubſtitution of the beaſt for the ſinner. The goſpel thus was preached to them, even as unto us.

6. ¶ Now [l] there was a day when [m] the ſons of God came to [n] preſent themſelves before the LORD, and † Satan came alſo among them. 7. And the LORD

ſaid

[l] Chap. ii. 1.
[m] Chap. xxxviii. 7. or Gen. vi. 2.
[n] 1 Kings xxii. 19. Mat. xviii. 10.
† i. e. The adverſary. See 1 Kings xxii. 21. 1 Chron. xxi. 1. Zech. iii. 1. Rev. xii. 10.

Before Chriſt 1520.

ſaid unto Satan, Whence comeſt thou? Then Satan anſwered the LORD, and ſaid, [o] From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. 8. And the LORD ſaid unto Satan, Haſt thou ‡ conſidered my ſervant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and eſcheweth evil? 9. Then Satan anſwered the LORD, and ſaid, Doth Job fear God for nought? 10. Haſt not thou made [p] an hedge about him, and about his houſe, and about all that he hath on every ſide? [q] thou haſt bleſſed the work of his hands, and his ſubſtance is increaſed in the land. 11. But [r] put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and § he will curſe thee to thy face. 12. And the LORD ſaid unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power, [s] only upon himſelf put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the preſence of the LORD.

[o] Chap. ii. 2. Mat. xii. 43. 1 Pet. v. 8.
‡ Heb. Set thy heart upon him?
[p] Pſ. xxxiv. 7. Zech. ii. 5.
[q] Prov. x. 22.
[r] Chap. ii. 5. Iſa. viii. 21.
§ Heb. If he curſe thee not to thy face.
[s] 1 Cor. x. 12.

v. 6—12. We have ſeen Job great and good, and, to appearance, moſt firmly eſtabliſhed; but this is a changing world, and nothing is ſure to us beneath the ſun. His piety and proſperity could not but provoke the envy of the devil, who waited impatiently for an occaſion to gratify his malice upon this holy happy man. We have here,

1. Satan appearing among the ſons of God. Some apply this to the angels, returning from their ſervices here below, to receive new orders from the eternal Majeſty, and Satan as an intruder daring to appear, or as a criminal ſummoned to attend. But it is rather to be underſtood of God's people, who had their ſolemn ſeaſons of devotion before the inſtitution of the ſabbath; and even in their aſſemblies, the devil, who is yet permitted to range about the earth, finds a place, and watches, ſeeking whom he may devour. Note, We are not ſafe from temptation, or the ſuggeſtions of Satan, even upon our knees; but let not that diſcourage us from continual waiting upon God.

2. God's enquiry, whence he came: not as unacquainted with his walks or deſigns, but as reſenting his bold intruſion there; or to lead him to what he ſaw was his malicious purpoſe concerning Job. Though the way wherein ſpirits thus converſe be myſterious, I ſee not therefore why the reality of it ſhould be queſtioned, nor any need to ſuppoſe this tranſaction merely allegorical. Note, Many thruſt themſelves in among God's worſhipping people, whoſe malicious and wicked tempers, and bad deſigns even in the houſe of prayer, make them in God's ſight as hateful as Satan himſelf.

3. Satan's anſwer, v. 7. which may be conſtrued as the boaſt of pride, as though the earth was his own, and he ſtalked over the vaſt circumference, as a king in progreſs through his dominions; or it may refer to his reſtleſs miſery, that ſuffers him no where to find eaſe; or to his indefatigable diligence in his helliſh work of tempting and deſtroying the ſons of men. Note, There is one who ever wakes and watches, and no time or place is ſecured from his ſnares: how wakeful then and watchful need we be, that we enter not into temptation.

4. God queſtions him concerning Job. Haſt thou conſidered my ſervant Job, obſerved his piety, or ſet thine heart upon him, to do him ſome miſchief? I know thou haſt. God calls him my ſervant, the moſt honourable of all titles, and expreſſive of his high approbation of Job's fidelity in his ſervice, that there is none like him in the earth; not only in the land of Uz, but probably among the ſons of men, his fellow was not found for true piety; a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and eſcheweth evil, as was before aſſerted, v. 1. Such a character could not but awaken Satan's malice, and God knew what was his preſent deſign upon him. Note, (1.) God knows all the devices of the wicked one, and will diſappoint them. (2.) They who approve themſelves faithful ſervants to him, will find him a faithful God to them, to preſerve them from the ſnares of the devil.

5. Satan's baſe inſinuation and propoſal. He had nothing whereof to accuſe him; his character was allowedly ſincere and upright, but by a ſly interrogation, Doth Job ſerve God for nought? he would inſinuate, that his views were mercenary, and his ſervice at bottom hypocritical. He enumerates, v. 10. with a kind of envious grief, the many and ſingular mercies he enjoyed, and therefore would infer, that if Job ſerved God, he was well paid for it; but let God ſtrip him of his worldly comforts, and he would ſoon ſee an alteration. He will curſe thee to thy face; or rather the words imply an imprecation, If he doth not curſe thee to thy face, then let me ſuffer the damnation of a lying tongue. Such a ſevere trial Satan hoped would ſhake his fidelity; at leaſt, his own malice would be gratified in Job's miſery. Note, (1.) The commendations of others in the ears of envy grate harſh diſcord. (2.) Worldly ends and mercenary motives are ſtill made, by Satan's inſtruments, the accuſations againſt thoſe whoſe conduct affords no evil thing juſtly to ſay of them. They cannot prove them vile like themſelves, therefore they will call them hypocrites. (3.) A ſly queſtion often conveys the vileſt inſinuation. (4.) They who uſe imprecations and oaths in common, ſhew with what maſter they have been, though even the devil here ſpeaks with more reſerve than many profane ſwearers, who openly blaſpheme God, and invocate horrid vengeance on their ſouls.

6. God permits the trial he ſuggeſted: All that he hath is in thy power. And this he doth, not to gratify Satan's malice, or as doubting of Job's integrity, but to confound the devil, to make Job's graces appear more eminent, and to glorify the greatneſs of his own power and love in his ſupport and ſalvation. Only upon himſelf put not forth thy hand. The devil's power is limited: he who permits his wickedneſs, ſaith to him, Hitherto mayeſt thou come, and no farther; and this ſhould ever encourage the children of God againſt deſpair.

7. Satan immediately proceeds to put in force the permiſſion he had received, eager to do miſchief, and hoping, it may be, to prevail againſt this holy man, who ſat ſecure, and little apprehended the impending ſtorm. Note, Every moment we are in jeopardy, nor can foreſee what is plotting againſt us by the prince of the power of the air.

Before Chriſt 1520.

13. ¶ And there was a day when his ſons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldeſt brother's houſe: 14. And there came a meſſenger unto Job, and ſaid, The oxen were plowing, and the aſſes feeding beſide them: 15. And the Sabeans fell upon them, and took them away, yea, they have ſlain the ſervants with the edge of the ſword, and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee. 16. While he was yet ſpeaking, there came alſo another, and ſaid, † The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burnt up the ſheep, and the ſervants, and conſumed them, and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee. 17. While he was yet ſpeaking, there came alſo another, and ſaid, The Chaldeans made out three bands, and ‡ fell upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and ſlain the ſervants with the edge of the ſword, and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee. 18. While he was yet ſpeaking, there came alſo another, and ſaid, Thy ſons and thy daughters [t] were eating and drinking wine in their eldeſt brother's houſe: 19. And behold, there came [u] a great wind from the wilderneſs, and ſmote the four corners of the houſe, and it fell upon the young men, and they are dead, and I only am eſcaped alone to tell thee.

† i. e. A great fire.
‡ Heb. Ruſhed.
[t] Luke xxi. 34.
[u] Eph. ii. 2.

v. 13—19. We have here,

1. The deceitful calm which preceded the terrible ſtorm. The days of feaſting were begun, the tillage going forward, the cattle grazing in fat paſtures, and peace and proſperity ſeemed to reign in all Job's houſe. Note, In our happieſt eſtate we need ever rejoice with trembling.

2. The ſudden ſtorm ariſes, and ſucceſſive meſſengers bring the moſt doleful tidings, each on the other's heels purſuing, till the laſt compleats the wretched tale, and adds to the univerſal deſtruction of his ſubſtance, the utter deſolations of his family. His cattle and ſervants at plow are attacked by a roving band of Sabeans, the men ſlain, the oxen and aſſes taken; his ſheep, with the ſhepherds, burnt up with lightning; his camels ſeized, and his ſervants ſlaughtered by the Chaldeans; and, laſt and worſt of all, his children buried together under the ruins of their elder brother's houſe, ſtruck by the reſiſtleſs whirlwind. Afflictions ſo many, great, and aggravated, in which not only the hand of man appeared, but the fire of God was employed, that they ſeemed to beſpeak his diſpleaſure, and the vanity of all that integrity and uprightneſs he had ſo carefully maintained. Note, (1.) Sudden and unexpected ſtrokes are apt to ruffle the moſt compoſed temper. (2.) The children of God muſt not count it ſtrange, if evil upon evil purſues them; it is not to deſtroy, but to prove them. (3.) There are great deeps in God's providential dealings, which now we cannot fathom. (4.) If the devil had but permiſſion, he could ſoon arm his inſtruments for our deſtruction; but he is bound. (5.) The loſs of a child is a bitter trial, their ſudden death more afflictive, but to loſe many, all, at once, in the midſt of gayety, and after every other earthly comfort was gone, this to nature would ſeem quite inſupportable; but what cannot Divine grace enable us to bear? Are any thus afflicted, let them remember the patience of Job.

20. [x] Then Job aroſe, and [y] rent his mantle, and [z] ſhaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worſhipped. 21. And ſaid, [a] Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked ſhall I return thither: the LORD gave, and [b] the LORD hath taken away; [c] bleſſed be the name of the LORD. 22. [d] In all this Job ſinned not, nor † charged God fooliſhly.

[x] 2 Sam. xviii. 33.
[y] Gen. xxxvii. 29, 34.
[z] Iſa. xv. 2.
[a] Eccleſ. v. 15. 1 Tim. vi. 7.
[b] Mat. xx. 15.
[c] Iſa. xxiv. 15.
[d] Chap. ii. 10.
† Or, attributed folly to God.

v. 20—22. Behold the awful change that one ſhort day hath made; the greateſt man of the eaſt ſtripped of every comfort, naked and deſtitute. Well may we ſay of all this world, Vanity of vanities, all is vanity. Yet hath not Satan gained the leaſt advantage; the darker the ſcene, the brighter ſhine the graces of the holy ſufferer.

1. He felt with deepeſt ſenſibility the afflicting tidings, and with the moſt expreſſive ſigns of bitter anguiſh rent his cloaths, and ſhaved his head, and fell upon the ground. His grief was great; and was there not a cauſe? yet no indecent rage, no raſh extravagance appears: he felt as a man, he mourned as a believer. Note, (1.) Religion never requires ſtoical apathy, but patient ſubmiſſion. (2.) Mourning for the dead is the tribute we owe to humanity, only let us not ſorrow as thoſe who have no hope.

2. His reſignation and piety appear moſt diſtinguiſhed. He worſhipped: far from being driven to curſe God, as Satan vaunted he would, he bleſſes the hand that ſmote him, and humbly ſubmits to the divine diſpoſal. He ſaid, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and brought nothing into this world, and naked ſhall I return thither, to the duſt from whence I came, and can carry nothing out of the world: if God therefore pleaſes to ſtrip him of all, he is but as he was born, and as he muſt be when he dies. He acknowledges God's ſovereign right to all he poſſeſſed; The Lord gave, out of his undeſerved bounty, and, when he pleaſes, may reſume his gifts: the Lord hath taken away, nor have we any thing to complain of: they were his own, and that he hath lent them to us ſo long, deſerves our thankful acknowledgment; bleſſed be the name of the Lord. Note, (1.) No afflictions muſt indiſpoſe us for God's worſhip; the more we feel, the more we need his grace to ſupport us. (2.) The conſideration of the near approach of death, when we muſt be ſtripped of all, ſhould wean our affections from a periſhing world. (3.) Every bleſſing is God's gift, and every ſuffering from his hand, whatever inſtrument is employed. This therefore ſhould make us acknowledge him in all, bleſs the gracious giver for the loan, and reſtore it without murmuring, whenever he demands it. (4.) Whatever we loſe, enough is left to deſerve our thankfulneſs, and to engage our praiſe. (5.) Where God beſtows a ſpirit of meekneſs, and patient ſubmiſſion, he leaves a greater bleſſing behind, than any outward thing of which his providence deprives us.

3. God bears teſtimony to Job's gracious diſpoſition. In all this he ſinned not: his grief was not exceſſive, his patience was exemplary, and his faith unſhaken: nor charged God fooliſhly; did not blaſpheme, as Satan hoped, nor arraign the wiſdom, mercy, or goodneſs of God in this afflictive diſpenſation. Note, In great trials God gives great grace, and then we can do all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening us.

CHAP. II.

The firſt trial diſappointed the tempter, and magnified the ſufferer; but Satan will not yet deſiſt. 1. He moves for another trial, ver. 1—5. 2. God permits it, ver. 6. 3. Satan ſmites him with a very painful and loathſome diſeaſe, ver. 7, 8. 4. His wife tempts him to curſe God, but he reſiſts the temptation, ver. 9, 10. 5. His friends come to condole with, and to comfort him, ver. 11—13.

1. [a] AGAIN there was a day, when the ſons of God came to preſent themſelves before the LORD, and Satan came alſo among them to preſent himſelf before the LORD. 2. And the LORD ſaid unto Satan, From whence comeſt thou? And Satan anſwered the LORD, and ſaid, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. 3. And the LORD ſaid unto Satan, Haſt thou conſidered my ſervant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and eſcheweth evil? and [b] ſtill he holdeth faſt his integrity, although thou movedſt me againſt him, to † deſtroy him [c] without cauſe. 4. And Satan anſwered the LORD, and ſaid, Skin for ſkin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life. 3. But put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his fleſh, and he will [d] curſe thee to thy face. 6. And the LORD ſaid unto Satan, Behold, he is in thine hand, ‡ but ſave his life.

[a] Chap. i. 6, &c.
[b] Heb. xi. 35.
† Heb. Swallow him up.
[c] Chap. ix. 17.
[d] Chap. i. 5.
‡ Or, only.

v. 1—6. Reſtleſs is our helliſh foe, and diſappointment but ſharpens his rage, and makes him return more furious to the attack. Though proved a liar, he perſiſts in his accuſations, and pretends another trial at leaſt will yet prove Job a hypocrite. They who hate God's people will ſubmit to no evidence, but lie on in ſpite of conviction. We have,

1. Another ſolemn aſſembly of the ſons of God, and Satan with hardened impudence appearing among them, filled with the ſame inveterate malice againſt the faithful ſufferer. The ſame enquiries, and the ſame anſwers, introduce the great point in diſpute, the integrity of Job; and now it might be expected, that on the iſſue of his own propoſal he would own God's character of Job juſt, and take ſhame for his infamous inſinuation concerning his hypocriſy; ſeeing, ſaith God, he ſtill holdeth faſt his integrity, although thou movedſt me againſt him, to deſtroy him without cauſe: he riſes higher under every preſſure, and gains in true greatneſs by his loſſes.

2. With perſevering accuſation this enemy dares ſupport his plea, and, though baffled, pretends that it was more owing to the inſufficiency of the teſt, than the integrity of Job, that he had not made good his allegation. Skin for ſkin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life: whilſt he himſelf reſts in a whole ſkin, he can ſit calm under the other loſſes; but put forth thy hand now, and touch his bone and his fleſh, torture him with pain, or afflict him with ſickneſs, and then he will curſe thee to thy face. Note, Bodily torture is indeed the ſevereſt trial of human patience.

3. God conſents he ſhall make the experiment; reſerving only Job's life, he is at liberty to afflict him to the uttermoſt: thus purpoſing ultimately to make a more glorious diſplay of the power of his grace; to preſerve to future ages an eminent monument of patience under every affliction; with deeper confuſion to cover this accuſer of the brethren, and by theſe works of wickedneſs permit him to fill up the meaſure of his iniquities.

7. ¶ So went Satan forth from the preſence of the LORD, and ſmote Job with ſore boils, [e] from the ſole of his foot unto his crown. 8. [f] And he took him a potſherd to ſcrape himſelf withal: and [g] he ſat down among the aſhes. 9. ¶ Then ſaid [h] his wife unto him, [i] Doſt thou ſtill retain thine integrity? [k] Curſe God and die. 10. But he ſaid unto her, [l] Thou ſpeakeſt as one of the fooliſh women ſpeaketh: what? ſhall we receive good at the hand of God, [m] and ſhall we not receive evil? [n] In all this did not Job ſin with his lips.

[e] Chap. xix. 20.
[f] Jam. v. 11.
[g] 2 Sam. xiii. 19. Chap. xlii. 6. Mat. xi. 21.
[h] Gen. iii. 6.
[i] Chap. xxi. 15. Mal. iii. 14.
[k] Chap. i. 5.
[l] Mat. xvi. 23.
[m] Chap. i. 21.
[n] Ibid. 22.

v. 7—10. No ſooner is the permiſſion granted, than the devil is impatient to worry his prey; and whilſt every thing Job feels is tormenting, every thing he hears is diſcouraging: thus Satan hoped he ſhould at laſt prevail.

1. Job is ſmitten from head to foot with ſore boils. What was his peculiar diſeaſe, hath occaſioned many conjectures: I ſhould ſuppoſe it was no common caſe, but ſome extraordinary effort of him who hath the power of death, to concenter the force of every diſeaſe in one, uniting the anguiſh, pain, ſickneſs, nauſeouſneſs, reſtleſsneſs, and every other ill that fleſh is heir to; whilſt no comforter was near, no medicine to aſſwage, no oil to ſupple, no rags to cover, not even a dog to lick his ſores. In the aſhes he ſat, a potſherd in his hand, and whilſt with this he ſought to aſſwage the intolerable itching, it ſerved but to aggravate his torment. Yet in this miſerable ſtate no murmuring word is heard; he is dumb before God, and his ſoul deeply abaſed, as his body in the duſt and aſhes that were ſpread under him. Note, (1.) How admirable does Job appear! what a leſſon to us in pain or ſickneſs, to keep the door of our lips from impatient complaints! (2.) When our body is humbled with diſeaſe, our ſouls ſhould correſpond with our circumſtances, in deep and lowly abaſement.

2. The wife of his boſom becomes the tempter of his ſoul, and no trials ſo ſevere, as thoſe that come through their hands who are deareſt to us. She cannot with patience ſee her huſband retain ſtill his humble ſubmiſſion to God; Doſt thou ſtill retain thine integrity? How uſeleſs; how little doth he deſerve thy ſervice, whoſe cruel hand thus rewards thy fidelity! Curſe God and die: blaſpheme his name, and renounce all dependance upon him; get out of his reach, and by death rid thyſelf of thy troubles. Or, as the words will bear a milder ſenſe, Bleſs God and die: bleſs him, pray to him to take thee away, as weary of a life now rendered inſupportable. Note, (1.) The blackeſt ſuggeſtions of blaſphemy and ſelf-murder have ſometimes attacked the deareſt ſaints of God. (2.) They are bad judges of true religion, who look no farther than this preſent world: had we hope here only, we ſhould be often miſerable indeed.

3. Job nobly repels this fiery dart thrown at him from Satan's quiver. Thou ſpeakeſt as one of the fooliſh women ſpeaketh; far different language ſhould flow from theſe lips, that have ſo long been taught a wiſer leſſon. Such atheiſtical and blaſphemous words might be expected from the profane idolaters, but the wife of Job had been better taught. What? ſhall we receive good at the hand of God, and ſhall we not receive evil? With indignation he receives the ſuggeſtion: many bleſſings they had received at God's hand; if now he choſe to afflict them, it was what with meekneſs they ſhould prepare to receive, and, under all ſubmiſſive, wait in hope. Note, (1.) When we rebuke even great provocations, we ſhould avoid every raſh or haſty expreſſion, and do it calmly and ſeriouſly.

(2.) We muſt never parly with vile ſuggeſtions, but reject them with abhorrence. (3.) In this world, good and evil are ſet over againſt each other; whatever we enjoy of the one, we may not expect exemption from the other; and the latter to a child of God uſually proves the greateſt bleſſing.

4. God bears a freſh teſtimony to Job's integrity, In all this he ſinned not with his lips, never yet uttered a murmuring impatient word; and whatever ſtruggle there might be within, hitherto grace had triumphed; and in bridling his tongue, he had maintained the deſerved character of a perfect man.

11. ¶ Now when Job's three [o] friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place: Eliphaz the [p] Temanite, and Bildad the [q] Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come to [r] mourn with him, and to comfort him. 12. And when they lift up their eyes afar off, and [s] knew him not, they lifted up their voice and wept, and they rent every one his mantle, and [t] ſprinkled duſt upon their heads toward heaven. 13. So they ſat down with him upon the ground ſeven days, and ſeven nights, and none ſpake a word unto him: for [u] they ſaw that his grief was very great.

[o] Prov. xvii. 17.
[p] Gen. xxxvi. 11.
[q] Gen. xxv. 2.
[r] Chap. xlii. 11. Rom. xii. 15.
[s] Lam. iv. 8.
[t] Neh. ix. 1. Lam. ii. 10. Ezek. xxvii. 30.
[u] Iſa. xxii. 4.

v. 11—13. The afflictive circumſtances of ſo great a man's fall and ſufferings ſoon ſpread abroad; his enemies rejoiced, but his friends mourned. We have here,

1. An appointment made by three of them to come and condole with him, Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar, generally ſuppoſed deſcendants from Abraham, by the ſons of Keturah or Eſau; See Gen. xxxvi. 11. Gen. xxv. 2. men of deep knowledge and experience. They had known Job in the days of his greatneſs, and were not like many others, who left him when brought low, but thought themſelves then eſpecially bound to teſtify their regard; and by ſympathetic tears, to alleviate the ſorrows of the mourner. Note, (1.) A true friend is known in adverſity, and ſuch may be juſtly eſteemed among the chief bleſſings of this life. (2.) The houſe of mourning will be frequented by the wiſe and gracious, both in charity to ſupport others, and as a ſchool to learn themſelves.

2. Their aſtoniſhment, grief, and anguiſh is painted in the ſtrongeſt colours. When afar off, they lift up their eyes: ſo changed was his countenance, ſo disfigured his body, ſo wretched his appearance, that they at firſt knew him not; but ſoon diſcovering through the dark veil the miſerable ſufferer, a burſt of tears and cries teſtified their deep affliction; they rent every one his mantle, and ſprinkled duſt upon their heads towards heaven, the tokens of expreſſive ſorrow; ſo they ſat down with him upon the ground ſeven days and ſeven nights, probably never ſtirred, and in bitterneſs ate the bread of mourners, and mingled their drink with weeping: or at leaſt each day and part of the night they ſpent with him, however painful and grievous the ſcene; and none ſpake a word unto him. In ſilence overwhelmed with ſuch ſtupendous woe, too big for utterance; for they ſaw that his grief was very great. Note, (1.) Diſeaſe makes frightful changes; the dear loved countenance will ſoon be horrid ghaſtly: let us remember what vile bodies we have, and be abaſed. (2.) They who haſte from the chamber of diſeaſe, and are glad to fly from the melancholy door, ſhew themſelves ſtrangers to true friendſhip, as well as unmindful of, and unprepared for the evil days they muſt ſhortly ſee. (3.) When we perceive the grief ſo great, as to be incapable of admitting immediate conſolation, we muſt wait till an opening offers, to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon.

CHAP. III.

Hitherto Job had born up nobly: here his impatience prevails, and though he doth not curſe God, 1. He curſes the day of his birth, ver. 1—10. 2. He complains that he did not die as ſoon as he was born, ver. 11—19. 3. He grieves that his life was now continued under ſuch miſery, ver. 20—26. In this it muſt be owned that Job ſinned with his lips, and it is written not for our imitation, but our admonition, that he who thinks he ſtands may take heed leſt he fall.

1. AFTER this Job opened his mouth, and [a] curſed his day. 2. And Job ſpake and ſaid, 3. [b] Let the day periſh wherein I was born, and the night in which it was ſaid, there is a man-child conceived. 4. Let that day be darkneſs, let not God regard it from above, neither let the light ſhine upon it. 5. Let darkneſs and [c] the ſhadow of death ſtain it, let a cloud dwell upon it, † let the blackneſs of the day terrify it. 6. As for that night, let darkneſs ſeize upon it, let it not ‡ be joined unto the days of the year, let it not come into the number of the months. 7. Lo, let that night be ſolitary, let no joyful voice come therein. 8. Let them curſe it [d] that curſe the day, who are ready to raiſe up their mourning. 9. Let the ſtars of the twilight thereof be dark, let it look for light, but have none, neither let it ſee the ‖ dawning of the day: 10. Becauſe it ſhut not up the doors of my mother's womb, nor hid ſorrow from mine eyes.

[a] Jer. xx. 14.
[b] Chap. x. 18. Jer. xv. 10. & xx. 14.
[c] Chap. xvi. 16. Pſal. xxiii. 4.
† Or let thoſe that have a bitter day terrify it. Amos viii. 10.
‡ Or rejoice among, &c.
[d] 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. Jer. ix. 17. Amos v. 16.
‖ Heb. The eyelids of the morning. Chap. xli. 18.

v. 1—10. At laſt the ſolemn ſilence breaks. Big ſorrows flow into his lips, and feeling his wretchedneſs, Job curſed the day that firſt brought into life a miſerable being, doomed to ſuch tormenting anguiſh. Herein corruption prevailed; he ſtumbled, yet not ſo as to fall. In general he ſtill appears our admiration, and we ſhall ſee him recovering his reſignation; his ſin pardoned, his ſoul reſtored, and Satan's accuſation of him as a hypocrite clearly confuted; and though compaſſed with infirmities, in the main he is found faithful and upright, and fixed in his adherence to God.

With a variety of ſtrong and ſtriking expreſſions, he brands the day of his unhappy birth, wiſhes its memorial were for ever cancelled; that darkneſs, diſmal as death, might thicken around it, and no joyful ſound be heard, to chear the dreadful gloom; that God would never favour it with one pleaſing event, but let melancholy reign, and ſtamp it with wretchedneſs, that no voice but mourning and woe may be ever uttered therein, and curſes perpetual reſt upon it; whilſt every one who lamented the dead, ſhould mention this hated birth-day, with that which wakened up their ſorrows: and this becauſe it ſhut not up his mother's womb, but gave unwelcome light to thoſe eyes, that opened only to behold miſery. A deſire fooliſh, cruel, and perverſe, which he lived to condemn, and be aſhamed of having uttered. Note, The day of our birth need be kept with humiliation, when we remember the ſin of our conception, and the evil of our years; but ſhould never be curſt, ſince there is ſo bleſſed a hope ſet before us, in that child that to us is born, and through whom we have now a proſpect of endleſs glory. If we look indeed no farther than the grave, and full in view behold thoſe miſeries that fleſh is heir to, it might lead us to join Job's imprecation; but beyond the grave, the proſpect brightens to the eye of faith, and enables the ſoul amidſt its ſorrows to rejoice in hope.

11. [e] Why died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghoſt when I came out of the belly? 12. Why did the knees prevent me? or why the breaſts that I ſhould ſuck? 13. For now ſhould I have lien ſtill, and been quiet, I ſhould have ſlept; then had I been at reſt; 14. With kings and counſellors of the earth, [f] which built deſolate places for themſelves: 15. Or with princes that had gold, who filled their houſes with ſilver: 16. Or [g] as an hidden untimely birth I had not been; as infants which never ſaw light. 17. There the wicked ceaſe from troubling; and there the weary [h] be at reſt. 18. There the priſoners reſt together, they hear not the voice of the oppreſſor. 19. The ſmall and great are there, and the ſervant is free from his maſter.

[e] Chap. x. 18.
[f] Ibid. xv. 28.
[g] Pſal. lviii. 8.
[h] Heb. iv. 9. Rev. xiv. 13.

v. 11—19. 1. Tired of life, in love with death, impatiently Job expoſtulates, Why he died not, as an abortion, or ſurvived the hour of his birth? Why the knees ſupported him, the breaſts ſuckled him, and robbed him of an infant grave? Note, (1.) Man is of all creatures born the moſt helpleſs, and without the tendereſt care and kind providence, could never ſurvive the days of helpleſs infancy. (2.) To quarrel with the life God beſtows, is to ſin againſt our own mercies; and if ever in hell we curſe the day of our birth, we ſhall have none but ourſelves to blame. (3.) Fretfulneſs and impatience at our lot, is fooliſh as well as ſinful, and can only aggravate, inſtead of alleviating our burdens. (4.) To deſire death to be with Chriſt, and delivered from ſin is commendable; but to be tired of the burdens of mortality, and in haſte to be gone, is ſelfiſh and evil.

2. He ſpeaks of the grave, as the deſirable aſylum for the wretched. There he ſhould have enjoyed reſt and eaſe, and in his bed of duſt, ſlept, as he could not now, through raging anguiſh, on a bed of down. There he ſhould have lain down with kings and counſellors, no longer diſtinguiſhed in this cold manſion, unleſs by the deſolate habitations, thoſe ſepulchral monuments they built for themſelves; and with princes, whoſe riches and pomp could not deſcend with them into the grave. There, like an untimely birth, or the ſtill-born infant, carried from the womb to the grave, he ſhould know no ſorrow: There the wicked ceaſe from troubling, Satan no more tempts, nor wicked men vex and perſecute: there the weary pilgrim repoſes in eternal reſt: the priſoners there are at eaſe, nor hear the clamorous voice of their oppreſſor or creditor; and the ſlave ceaſes his labour, free from his cruel maſter's yoke: the ſmall and great are there mixed promiſcuouſly, and no diſtinction marks the wiſe man from the fool. Note, (1.) Though the troubles of life muſt not make us impatient under them, the ſhadows of death will be welcome to the afflicted believer. (2.) Death is the terror of the great, becauſe their honours cannot follow them: happy only and truly great are they, that after death expect their crown. (3.) It is a comfort to the holy ſoul that dwells in this diſordered world, vexed as righteous Lot with the filthy communication of the wicked, that yet a moment, and they will for ever ceaſe from troubling.

Before Christ 1520.

20. Wherefore is light given to him that is in miſery, and life unto the bitter in ſoul? 21. Which [i] long for death, but it cometh not, and dig for it more than for hid treaſures? 22. Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad when they can find the grave? 23. Why is light given to a man [k] whoſe way is hid, and [l] whom God hath hedged in? 24. For my ſighing cometh [m] before I eat, and my roarings are poured out like the waters. 25. For † the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of, is come unto me. 26. I was not in ſafety, neither had I reſt, neither was I quiet: yet trouble came.

i Rev. ix. 6.
k Iſa. xl. 27.
l Chap. xix. 8. Lam. iii. 7. Hoſ. ii. 6.
m Chap. vii. 10.
† Heb. I feared a fear and it came upon me.

v. 20—26. Job continues his impatient expoſtulation, and grieves that a life of miſery ſhould be longer continued to thoſe whoſe bitterneſs of ſoul makes death eagerly longed for, who dig for the grave as for hid treaſure; and exult with tranſport when their diſmiſſion from the burdens of mortality arrives: and in his own caſe, he particularly thinks himſelf hardly dealt with, his way is hid, there is no door of eſcape, hedged in with the thorns of affliction on every ſide: ſo conſtantly in pain and anguiſh, that his appetite was palled with ſorrow, and his pangs ſo acute, that he roared aloud like the noiſe of mighty waters falling. His fears were now all come upon him: in the beginning of his trouble, he had entertained the moſt grievous apprehenſions, and under the firſt ſtrokes of providence began to totter, and inwardly loſt his wonted repoſe; but then he hoped for a little reſpite, yet trouble came upon trouble; ſtill darker clouds thickened over him, till he ſeemed overwhelmed with wretchedneſs. Note, (1.) To reflect on God's providence, is tacitly to caſt blame on himſelf. (2.) Though impatient anguiſh eagerly calls for death, did they who often ſo deſire its approach look beyond the grave, they would more eagerly ſtart back, and welcome life with all its miſeries. (3.) Our time is in God's hands; happy for us it is ſo; elſe we might bitterly repent our raſhneſs. (4.) The more this life is irkſome, the more ſollicitous let it make us to prepare for a better. (5.) They are only fit to die who are content to live, and ſatisfied under every burthen wait chearfully the Lord's leiſure.

CHAP. IV.

Job's impatient expoſtulations give an opening for thoſe ſuggeſtions of his three friends, which on the review of his caſe aroſe. Probably they had mentioned between themſelves their ſuſpicions, and from his ſufferings, concluded him a hypocrite. Thus Satan found them his ſeconds, and they with warmth and cruelty plead againſt Job; whilſt conſcious of integrity, he vindicates himſelf from their aſperſions. Thus the diſpute begins, and Eliphaz, as moſt diſtinguiſhed, or the eldeſt perſon, firſt replies, 1. He beſpeaks a patient hearing, ver. 1, 2. 2. He concludes him an hypocrite, becauſe the conſolation he adminiſtred to others, could not ſupport himſelf, ver. 3—6. 3. He maintains that man's wickedneſs is that which always brings God's judgments, ver. 7—11. 4. He corroborates his aſſertion by a viſion of his, in which he was minded of the inconteſtible purity and juſtice of God, and of the weakneſs and ſinfulneſs of man, ver. 12—21. By all this he aims to humble Job's ſpirit, and to make him both penitent and patient under his afflictions.

1. THEN Eliphaz the Temanite anſwered and ſaid, 2. If we aſſay to commune with thee, wilt thou be grieved? but who can withhold himſelf from ſpeaking? 3. Behold, [a] thou haſt inſtructed many, and [b] thou haſt ſtrengthned the weak hands. 4. Thy words have upholden [c] him that was falling, and thou haſt ſtrengthned [d] the feeble knees. 5. But now it is come upon thee, and thou † fainteſt: it [e] toucheth thee, and thou art troubled. 6. Is not this [f] thy fear, [g] thy confidence, thy hope, and the uprightneſs of thy ways?

a Gen. xviii. 19.
b Iſa. xxxv. 3.
c Gal. vi. 1.
d Heb. xii. 12.
† Or art weary.
e Chap. i. 11.
f Ibid. 1.
g Prov. iii. 26.

v. 1—6. Having heard Job's impatient complaint, Eliphaz can no longer keep ſilence.

1. He apologizes for the part he was about to take, but hopes Job will not be offended if he and his friends eſſay to apply ſome remedy to his diſeaſe; and as they apprehended his wound needed to be laid open, he begs he will not think that unkindneſs, but friendſhip dictates his diſcourſe. He would not willingly grieve him, but in this caſe he intimates ſilence would be criminal, and that God's glory, as well as Job's good, required them to deal with him faithfully. Note, (1.) In difficult caſes, in the multitude of counſellors there is ſafety. (2.) When we have reproof to give, the gentleneſs of our manner ſhould gild the bitter pill. (3.) It is a cruel kindneſs and vile ſelfiſhneſs, for fear of offending, to ſuffer ſin upon our brother.

Before Christ 1520.

2. He ſuggeſts the unbecomingneſs of his conduct under his preſent trials, ſo contrary to the advice himſelf had often given to others. Thou haſt inſtructed many how they ſhould walk before God, and taught them the ſubmiſſion due to his holy will: thou haſt ſtrengthened the weak hands that hung down as ready to faint, under the preſſure of heavy afflictions: thy words have upholden him that was falling, either by temptation into ſin, or by trouble into deſpair; and thou haſt ſtrengthened the feeble knees, encouraged them to ſupport their burdens, and helped them with good advice, and kind conſolation; but now it is come upon thee, the ſame trials which he had taught others how to bear; and thou fainteſt, or art weary, ſinking under the burden as inſupportable; it toucheth thee, as if Job's preſent griefs were but light afflictions, but a ſlight ſtroke of correction; and thou art troubled, like the raging ſea that cannot reſt, and as a man at his wits end. Hence he ſeems to intimate, that as his preſent behaviour ſo little correſponded to his own advice, it was to be feared that his former conduct had been inſincere. Note, (1.) Though a man be not called to the miniſtry, every one is bound to improve the talents God hath given him in his own family and neighbourhood, by warning the unruly, ſupporting the weak, and comforting the feeble-minded. (2.) It is too true, that good counſel is eaſier given than taken; though that will in no wiſe prove the hypocriſy of the adviſer, but only ſhews the weakneſs and corruption of our nature. (3.) To make light of others trials, and to exaggerate their impatience under them, ſhews the abſence of the ſpirit of love, that would be glad to plead the excuſe of the tempted, and from their circumſtances engage us to make the moſt candid allowances.

3. He charges him with hypocriſy in his former profeſſions; that his fear of God, his confidence in his regard, his hope of things unſeen, and the uprightneſs of his ways, however exemplary they might have ſeemed, were but appearances; that at bottom there was nothing in them; and this his preſent ſtate, as he concludes, evidently proved, ſince God would not afflict a truly righteous man, nor would he be thus impatient in his trouble. Note, (1.) The charge of hypocriſy is one that is the ofteneſt laid againſt God's people, and among the foreſt to be born. (2.) A cenſorious ſpirit is exceeding ſinful; they will have judgment without mercy, who have ſhewed no mercy. (3.) We muſt not judge of a man's ſtate from a particular failing. He may be truly faithful at bottom, who on a violent temptation may yet be moved from his own ſtedfaſtneſs.

7. Remember, I pray thee, [h] who ever periſhed being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off? 8. Even as I have ſeen [i] they that plow iniquity, and ſow wickedneſs, reap the ſame. 9. By the blaſt of God they periſh, and by † the breath of his noſtrils are they conſumed. 10. The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and [k] the teeth of the young lions are broken. 11. [l] The old lion periſheth for lack of prey, and the ſtout lion's whelps are ſcattered abroad.

h Gen. iv. 8.
i Pſal. vii. 14. Prov. xxii. 8. Hoſ. x. 13. Gal. vi. 7, 8.
† i. e. his anger. Iſa. xxx. 33. Exod. xv. 8. Chap. xv. 30. Iſa. xi. 4. 2 Theſ. ii. 8.
k Pſal. lviii. 6.
l Ibid. xxxiv. 40.

v. 7—11. Two poſitions he here lays down in ſupport of his former charge, that Job muſt be a hypocrite becauſe of his afflictions.

1. That the innocent and righteous never periſh under ſuch heavy viſitations; but his caſe appeared deſperate, therefore he was not innocent or righteous, as he pretended. He is right reſpecting eternal perdition, but elſe Job, to whoſe experience he appealed, might eaſily confute him with the death of Abel, the heavy loſſes of Lot, and the ſufferings of Jacob: beſides that, whilſt there was life, ſtill there was hope, that all Job's preſent evils might end in bleſſings. Note, The concluſions of the revilers of God's people, are uſually drawn from premiſes as weak and inſufficient to ſupport them.

2. That wickedneſs was ever attended with temporal puniſhment; and for this he vouches his own experience, in the caſe of ſinners in general; who, ſowing iniquity, and expecting to reap comfort, find the harveſt miſery; their crop blaſted with the Divine diſpleaſure, and conſumed as corn rooted up by the whirlwind: and in particular he had ſeen the proud oppreſſors thus periſh; who, ravening like lions, fierce and greedy of prey, filled their houſes with ſpoil; but ſoon by God's judgment, their teeth were broken, the old lion was famiſhed with hunger, and their whelps, their families, were ſcattered abroad. Tho' he ſpeaks of the caſe of others, there ſeems to be an oblique glance to Job's ſituation, as if like this old lion, he had by extortion filled his den, but now was ready to periſh for want, and his children had been ſlain by the breath of God. Hence he would infer his wickedneſs as the cauſe of his ſufferings; but whatever the experience of Eliphaz might be, greater and more numerous inſtances were eaſy to be collected, where the wicked proſpered long, perhaps died in plenty, and ſaw no bitterneſs. Such was profane Eſau's caſe, and Lamech ſeems a ſtill more daring and proſperous ſinner.

12. Now a † thing was ſecretly brought to me, and mine ear received [m] a little thereof. 13. In thoughts from the viſions of the night, when deep ſleep falleth on men, 14. [n] Fear came upon me, and trembling, which made all my bones to ſhake. 15. Then a ſpirit paſſed before my face, the hair of my fleſh ſtood up.
16. It ſtood ſtill, but I could not diſcern the form thereof:
an image was before mine eyes, ‡ there was ſilence, and I heard a voice, ſaying, 17. Shall mortal man be ‖ more juſt than God? ſhall a man be more pure than his maker? 18. Behold, [o] he put no truſt in his ſervants; and § his angels he charged with folly: 19. [p] How much leſs on them [q] that dwell in houſes of clay, whoſe foundation is in the duſt, which are cruſhed before the moth? 20. [r] They are † deſtroyed from morning to evening: they periſh for ever without any regarding it.
21. [s] Doth not their excellency which is in them go away?
[t] they die, even without wiſdom.

† Or word.
m Chap. xxvi. 14. 1 Cor. xiii. 12.
n Gen. xv. 12. Hab. iii. 16.
‡ Or I heard a ſtill voice. 1 Kings xix. 12.
‖ Or juſt before God? and pure before his Maker? Eccleſ. vii. 20.
o Chap. xv. 15. 2 Pet. ii. 4.
§ Or, nor in his angels, in whom he put light.
p Chap. xv. 16.
q 2 Cor. v. 1.
r Pſal. xc. 5. Iſa. lviii. 12.
† Or beaten in pieces.
s Pſal. xxxix. 11. & xlix. 14.
t Chap. xxxvi. 12.

v. 12—21. To reprove Job's impatient complaints, Eliphaz proceeds to relate a viſion from God, which probably was given him ſome time in the paſt ſeven days. The purport of it is from the view of the frailty, folly, and ſinfulneſs of mortal man, to ſilence every murmur againſt his diſpenſations, and to lead his friend to more humble thoughts of himſelf.

1. He deſcribes the manner of this revelation made to him: A thing, or a word of Divine wiſdom was ſecretly brought to me, ſtole upon me unawares, and mine ear received a little thereof; either his capacity was too weak to retain the whole, or what was revealed was but a ſmall portion of the will of God. In thoughts of deep and ſerious meditation from viſions of the night, which were vouchſafed him, when deep ſleep falleth upon men, to whoſe ſpirit nevertheleſs God hath acceſs, fear came upon me, and trembling; an awful ſenſe of the Divine Majeſty affected his mind, and communicated to his very body a ſacred tremor, which made all my bones to ſhake, as if each ſinew was unſtrung, and every joint looſened. Note, (1.) God hath ſecret ways of acceſs to the ſouls of men; his people know it to their comfort, his enemies feel it to their terror. (2.) Our higheſt attainments are poor and inconſiderable; we know but a part, a very little part of God's ways. (3.) When we lie down with good thoughts, we may hope our very dreams ſhall be holy. (4.) Though moſt viſions of the night are vain, incoherent, and to be troubled by them would be ſuperſtitious folly; yet there are ſome, I doubt not, that bear the mark of God's hand, and deſerve our ſolemn attention.

2. The meſſenger who brought it: A ſpirit, one of thoſe bright angelic hoſts, who miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation, paſſed before my face; ſtruck with ſurprize and dread, the hair of my head ſtood up, erect as the briſtles of the porcupine. It ſtood ſtill, as if prepared to ſpeak, but I could not diſcern the form thereof, perhaps the brightneſs of the ſurrounding glory prevented him: an image was before mine eyes, terrible to behold; there was ſilence, an awful pauſe, and then I heard a voice diſtinct and audible. Note, (1.) Though apparitions in general are the creatures of fear and folly, yet that God may on important occaſions thus ſend from the world of ſpirits, why ſhould it be thought incredible? (2.) The weakneſs of our nature ſhudders, and the conſciouſneſs of guilt terrifies us at the apprehenſion of a viſit from the unſeen world. (3.) When God is about to ſpeak, ſilence and attention become our proſtrate ſouls before him.

3. The meſſage is weighty and important: Shall mortal man, ſinful, and therefore weak and frail, be more juſt than God, or rather be juſt before God, pretend to affect innocence, or ſtand at his bar as righteous? ſhall a man, the greateſt and beſt of men, be more pure than his maker, or pure before his maker, or in his ſight dare to appear as ſinleſs? Behold, note it with deep attention, He put no truſt in his ſervants, his angels; did not truſt them with their own ſtability, but ſecured them in Chriſt Jeſus; did not reveal to them his ſecrets, Mat. xxiv. 36. did not place his confidence in them, as in any meaſure ſupporting the glory of his throne; he wanted them not. Nay, he chargeth them with folly; compared with himſelf, their wiſdom is fooliſhneſs; and left to themſelves, they were liable to fall, as man, in innocence. How much leſs in them that dwell in houſes of clay, in man, a worm, whoſe body is but a veſſel of finer clay, whoſe foundation is in the duſt, weak and tottering before every blaſt of diſeaſe or accident, which are cruſhed before the moth; if but ſuch a weak worm, ſo feeble is the ſtructure, puſh againſt it, the houſe is broken through, or more eaſily cruſhed than the ſoft moth between our fingers. They are deſtroyed from morning to evening, thouſands dying daily and continually, or every day their bodies haſten to their diſſolution; they periſh for ever, are cut off from the land of the living, no more to return, without any regarding it; they themſelves little expecting it, and the living uſually lay it not to heart. Doth not their excellency which is in them go away, or with them? all the endowments of their mind, the beauty, health, and ſtrength of their bodies, and all their pomp, greatneſs, and affluence vaniſh as the cloud of the morning; they die even without wiſdom, it periſhes with them; or forgetting to conſider their latter end, they die unprepared. Now if God puts no truſt in the angels, and chargeth them with folly, how much leſs dependance can be placed on miſerable, weak, and ſinful man; and how much more chargeable is he with folly and frailty, therefore can in no wiſe arrogate to himſelf a wiſdom and righteouſneſs beyond his maker, or think of appearing juſtified in the eyes of his purity. Note, (1.) Diſcontent with the diſpenſations of God's providence, is in fact to impeach his wiſdom, juſtice, and goodneſs, as inferior to our own. (2.) If the angels are in God's ſight thus weak and imperfect, and he places no confidence in them, what folly for man to make them the objects of worſhip, or to direct his prayer unto them? (3.) The more we conſider the vanity and frailty of our life, and the nearneſs and certainty of death, the lowlier thoughts of ourſelves it will beget in us. (4.) It were the heighth of folly, nay of madneſs, for a ſinful dying worm to plead before God his worth and excellence. (5.) It is among the ſtrong proofs of the inſenſibility and thoughtleſſneſs bound up in the heart of a ſinner, that amidſt ſuch daily warnings around him, and ſuch frequent notices within him, he lives ſo careleſs, and leaves death, with all its awful conſequences, far out of his ſight.

CHAP. V.

Eliphaz proceeds to confirm what he had before advanced, that only the wicked are wholly conſumed, as he appeared to be. 1. He appeals to all the ſaints, in proof of this poſition, ver. 1, 2. 2. Produces his own experience, ver. 2—5. 3. He allows affliction is the common lot, ver. 6, 7. But, 4. ſhews how righteous men demean themſelves, ver. 8—16. 5. That their afflictions always end well; therefore he adviſes Job to humble himſelf, pray, and hope in God's mercy, ver. 17—27.

1. CALL now, if there be any that will anſwer thee, and to which of the † ſaints wilt thou ‡ turn?
2. For wrath killeth the fooliſh man, and [a] ‖ envy ſlayeth the ſilly one. 3. I have ſeen the fooliſh taking root:
but ſuddenly [b] I curſed his habitation. 4. His children
[c] are far from ſafety, and they are cruſhed in the gate, [d] neither is there any to deliver them. 5. Whoſe harveſt the hungry eateth up, and taketh it even out of the thorns, and [e] the § robber ſwalloweth up their ſubſtance.

† Or holy ones.
‡ Or look.
a Gen. xxx. 1.
‖ Or zeal, or indignation.
b Jer. xii. 3.
c Pſal. cxix. 155.
d Ibid. cix. 12, 13.
e Chap. xviii. 9.
§ Or thirſty one.

v. 1—5. Eliphaz, confident in the goodneſs of his cauſe, tauntingly defies Job to contradict his aſſertions.

1. He bids him appeal to God or man, and he will be ſilenced; call now to God, if there be any that will anſwer thee, and ſee if he will confute the viſion I have related; or call now to all the holy men of old, if there be any whoſe caſe correſponds with thine, ſo afflicted and yet innocent, and not a parallel will be found. And to which of the ſaints, or holy ones, wilt thou turn, either the divine perſons in the godhead, who would reject his appeal of integrity, or the ſaints upon earth, among whom he would not find one advocate, or whoſe circumſtances and ſentiments reſembled his own: therefore the charge he brought muſt be true, that his inſincerity was the cauſe of his ſufferings. Note, (1.) They can have little confidence to approach God, whoſe own conſciences condemn their hypocriſy. (2.) There are in every age ſome living ſaints, ſanctified by God's word and ſpirit; and though the world uſe the word as a term of deriſion, it is a title of the higheſt honour, and true of every real believer who is called to be a ſaint, as much as Paul or John. (3.) It were indeed a ſtrong proof of the badneſs of our ſtate and temper, if we had the experience of all God's ſaints againſt us; but the experience of the ſaints is often pleaded by thoſe who have it leaſt on their ſide.

2. He aſſerts the ruin of the wicked as a truth himſelf had often been witneſs to. Wrath killeth the fooliſh or wicked man; the wrath of God is revealed againſt him, or his own haſty ſpirit urges him on to his ruin, and envy at the proſperity of others, or zeal, God's diſpleaſure againſt iniquity, deſtroyeth the ſilly one, the ſinner who is void of underſtanding, ſo that he pines away often under his own vexations; and this notwithſtanding his momentary proſperity, I have ſeen the fooliſh taking root ſuddenly, but deſtruction awaited him. I curſed his habitation, not wiſhed him evil, but foreſaw the curſe impending over his devoted palace: his children, the ſtaff of his age, are far from ſafety, and they are cruſhed in the gate, buried in the ruins of their deſolate houſes, neither is there any to deliver them, neither God or man intereſt themſelves in their behalf; whoſe harveſt the hungry eateth up, ſo that their ſubſtance is conſumed, and taketh it even out of the thorns, leaves none behind, even ſo much as a handful at the hedge-ſide; or though fenced in with thorns, break through and plunder it, and the robber ſwalloweth up their ſubſtance. And in this deſcription of the ruin of the fooliſh man, there is an evident invidious parallel drawn with Job's caſe, whoſe ſudden afflictions, the death of his children, and the ruin of his ſubſtance by the robbers, Eliphaz would inſinuate as a proof, that he ſhared with the wicked in their afflictions, becauſe he had joined them in their ſins. Note, (1.) The indulgence of bur vile paſſions prove often fatal to ourſelves. (2.) The wrath of God, in time and eternity, aſſuredly reſts on the ſinner's head, however proſperous his circumſtances may appear. (3.) The wicked man muſt be a ſilly one; how could he elſe for the ſake of a momentary pleaſure, ruſh into everlaſting pain.

6. Although [f] affliction cometh not forth of the duſt, neither doth trouble ſpring out of the ground: 7.
† Yet man is born unto trouble, as ‡ the ſparks fly upward. 8. ‖ I would ſeek unto God, and unto God would I commit my cauſe: 9. [g] Which doth great things, and unſearchable: marvellous things without number. 10. [h] Who giveth rain upon the earth, and ſendeth waters upon the fields: 11. [i] To ſet up on high thoſe that be low; that thoſe which mourn may be exalted to ſafety. 12. [k] He diſappointeth the devices of the crafty, ſo that [l] their hands cannot perform their enterpriſe. 13. [m] He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſs: and the counſel of the froward is carried headlong.
14. [n] They meet with darkneſs in the day-time, and grope in the noon day as in the night. 15. But [o] he ſaveth the poor from the ſword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty. 16. So the poor hath hope, and [p] iniquity ſtoppeth her mouth.

[f] Amos iii. 6.
† Or, but.
‡ Heb. The ſons of the burning coal lift up to fly.
‖ Or I do ſeek unto God, and unto God I turn my ſpeech.
[g] Chap. ix. 10. Pſal. xl. 5. Rom. xi. 33.
[h] Jer. v. 24.
[i] 1 Sam. ii. 7. Pſal. cxiii. 7.
[k] Neh. iv. 15. Pſal. xxxiii. 10. Iſa. viii. 10.
[l] Pſal. lxxvi. 5.
[m] 1 Cor. iii. 19.
[n] Deut. xxviii. 29. Iſa. lix. 10. Amos viii. 9.
[o] Pſal. lxxii. 4.
[p] Ibid. cvii. 42.

v. 6—16. It was the intention of Eliphaz not to ſink Job into deſpair, but firſt to lay bare his wound, and then apply the healing balm, ſuggeſting arguments for reſignation, and how to bear his burden profitably.

1. He directs him to the origin and cauſe of all his trouble: Although affliction cometh not forth of the duſt, neither doth trouble ſpring out of the ground, as things fortuitous and accidental, or owing to ſecond cauſes, operating independant of God's agency or direction, but all is fixed by unalterable decree, and no creature acts but by his guidance, and under his over-ruling power. Yet, or but, man is born to trouble; ſince ſin entered, the curſe entered, and cloſe as our ſhadow afflictions follow us, as the ſparks fly upwards, numerous as theſe, and the natural conſequence of our fallen ſtate; and this ſhould reconcile us to ſuffering, and engage us to be humble for the ſin which is the cauſe of it. Note, (1.) Fortune and chance are the creatures of heatheniſm and infidelity: we are aſſured in God's word that not a hair of our heads falls to the ground without Divine direction. (2.) The more we are acquainted with the ſinfulneſs of our nature, the leſs reaſon ſhall we have to murmur under any affliction, ſince we muſt then acknowledge it to be leſs than our iniquity deſerves.

2. He gives him advice how to behave himſelf: I would ſeek unto God, or doubtleſs I do ſeek unto God; it is the method I myſelf take in my trials, and would recommend to you as doubtleſs the moſt proper and ſeaſonable: and unto God I would, or I do commit my cauſe, in humble prayer and patient reſignation, and then reſt in hope. Note, We may ſafely commend what we have proved good by experience, and the people of every age have always found that patient hope and believing prayer, will not fail at laſt of bringing an anſwer of peace.

3. He enforces his admonition, by conſiderations drawn from God's ſovereign dominion, power, and equity: Which doth great things in the works of creation and providence; and unſearchable, beyond the deepeſt penetration of the wiſeſt ſages; marvellous things that excite our aſtoniſhment, and exceed our comprehenſion; and theſe, without number; earth, air, and ſea teem with wonders, and every day new works of Providence awaken our admiration; and the more we attempt to reaſon, the more we are loſt in depths of wiſdom unfathomable. How fooliſh then to diſpute againſt God, and how much wiſer to refer ourſelves to him, who can do ſuch wonders, and will do ever wiſely. By his gracious providence, he ſendeth the rain to water the earth, v. 10. the poor and mourners, whoſe faces were black, as it were, with famine, ſee plenty reſtored, and themſelves exalted from their low eſtate, v. 11. ſuch merciful aſſiſtance may they expect who wait upon him. But the crafty are diſappointed in their ſchemes, their enterprizes prove abortive, their own ſnares entangle them, as birds in an evil net, and their precipitate counſels hurry them on to ruin, v. 12, 13. In the plaineſt circumſtances they become infatuated, and fall from the meridian of proſperity, into the deepeſt darkneſs of affliction, v. 14. whilſt the helpleſs ſervants of God, againſt whom their tongues were maliciouſly let looſe, and whom their arm cruelly oppreſſed, are delivered, to the great diſappointment of iniquity, and to the encouragement of the hope of the poor, who never truſt on him and are confounded. The inference Eliphaz would draw from hence is evident, that if Job thus humbly truſted upon God, he would experience a like deliverance. Note, (1.) The wiſeſt become fools, when they turn from God to truſt on their own underſtanding. (2.) The deepeſt laid plots of men or devils need not trouble God's people, there is one who ſitteth in the heavens who laughs them to ſcorn. (3.) They who have their tempers in lowlineſs conformed to their circumſtances, will find him near at hand who will lift them up, and reſtore comfort to the mourners. (4.) In the worſt of times we ſhould never quit our hope in God, for he is faithful that hath promiſed. (5.) Though the mouth of malignity is now open, and the hand of the oppreſſors heavy on God's people, their arm ſhall ſoon be broken, and their lips ſealed up in everlaſting ſilence.

17. Behold, [q] happy is the man whom God correcteth:
therefore [r] deſpiſe not thou the chaſtning of the Almighty: 18. For [s] he maketh ſore, and bindeth up:
he woundeth, and his hands make whole. 19. [t] He ſhall deliver thee in ſix troubles: yea, in ſeven there ſhall no evil touch thee. 20. [u] In famine he ſhall redeem thee from death; and in war, from the power of the ſword.
21. [x] Thou ſhalt be hid from the ſcourge of the tongue;
neither ſhalt thou be afraid of deſtruction when it cometh.
22. At deſtruction and famine thou ſhalt laugh: [y] neither ſhalt thou be afraid of the beaſts of the earth. 23. For thou ſhalt be in league with the ſtones of the field; and [z] the beaſts of the field ſhall be at peace with thee.
24. And thou ſhalt know that † thy tabernacle ſhall be in peace; and thou ſhalt viſit thy habitation, and ſhalt not ‡ ſin. 25. Thou ſhalt know alſo that thy ſeed ſhall be great, and thine offſpring as the graſs of the earth. 26.
Thou ſhalt come to thy grave in [a] full age, like as a ſhock of corn cometh in, in his ſeaſon. 27. Lo this, we have ſearched it, ſo it is; hear it, and [b] know thou it for ‖ thy good.

[q] Pſal. xciv. 12. Prov. iii. 12. Jam. i. 12. Rev. iii. 19.
[r] Heb. xii. 5.
[s] Deut. xxxii. 39. 1 Sam. ii. 6. Hoſ. vi. 1.
[t] Pſal. xci. 3. Prov. xxiv. 16.
[u] Pſal. xxxiii. 19. & xxxvii. 19.
[x] Ibid. xxxi. 20.
[y] Iſa. xi. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 25.
[z] Hoſ. ii. 18.
† Or peace is thy tabernacle.
‡ Or err.
[a] Prov. x. 27.
[b] Ibid. ix. 12.
‖ Heb. Thyſelf.

v. 17—27. Eliphaz draws his ſpeech to a concluſion, and cloſes it with a view of the great and precious promiſes which would attend Job, if his mind were but conformed to his circumſtances.

1. He warns him not to deſpiſe the chaſtning of the Almighty; though the draught be bitter, it muſt not be rejected, becauſe it is the means of health: it is the rod of the Almighty, before which he may not proudly diſdain to bow: it is lifted up with the moſt gracious deſign of fatherly correction, therefore not to be ſlighted, but ſubmitted to with patience, heard with reverence, Micah vi. 9. and the cup of affliction to be drank with chearfulneſs. Note, In every affliction, our chief concern ſhould be not the removal, but the due improvement of it.

2. He ſupports his advice with the bleſſed effects which would flow from it. Behold, happy is the man whom God correcteth by his word, or providences; it is the proof of his regard, and deſigned to work eminently for our good; it ſerves to wean the heart from earth, and urge the ſoul to ſeek more diligently the true and abiding joys of glory. The ſame hand alſo that wounds can heal, and will, no doubt, when the deſign of his viſitation is anſwered, v. 18. The length or repetition of our troubles ſhould not diſcourage us, for out of them all God will deliver his ſervants; and in them preſerve the ſouls of his ſaints from evil, that the wicked one toucheth them not. Though famine pale ſtalk ghaſtly through the land, or horrid war with garments rolled in blood ſpread deſolations around; though wild beaſts of the deſert howl and threaten to devour, or men more ſavage than theſe beaſts, bite with malignant teeth, and with the ſcourge of the tongue, poiſonous as the ſerpent's ſting, ſtrive to infuſe their baneful calumnies, God will preſerve his choſen; they ſhall be fed in the time of dearth, covered from danger under the wing of the Almighty, the creatures ſhall be in league with them not to hurt them, and ſecure they ſhall mock at the impotent malice of their foes: their houſes ſhall be in peace, their families united in love, and defended from the evil of ſin and trouble; they ſhall go in and out under the Divine bleſſing, and piety and proſperity crown all their labours; their poſterity ſhall be great and numerous, and after beholding them fixed in comfort and affluence, they ſhall go down to their graves crowned with length of days, riches and honour, and, ripe for glory as the ſheaf in the day of harveſt, be gathered into the boſom of God's everlaſting love. Note, (1.) When God wounds his people, he heals, binds up their hearts with preſent divine conſolations, and opens a way for them to eſcape out of every temptation; no wound ſo deep which he cannot cure. (2.) They who have God for their confidence, may defy their foes, and triumph even in the jaws of death. (3.) A peaceable abode is a ſignal mercy, but the diſtinguiſhed bleſſing is to be kept from ſin. (4.) It is a comfort to gracious parents, to ſee their children's proſperity in the world, but moſt of all to behold their piety, for that alone can enſure the abiding good. (5.) Age is ripening us for the grave, are we alſo ripening for glory? filled with grace as with years, full of good fruits, and bending with chearfulneſs into the hands of the harveſt-man, as ready for the ſtorehouſe of God.

3. He begs Job's ſerious conſideration: Lo! attend to what I have ſpoken, as the reſult of ſound and deep experience; this we have ſearched, it is our joint ſentiments, and ſo it is approved by the concurring teſtimony of all God's people: hear it then with reverence and ſubmiſſion, and know thou it for thy good, or thyſelf, apply it to thy own caſe, and receive the bleſſing this diſcourſe was intended to convey. Note, Great truths deſerve ſolemn attention, and from every ſermon we hear, our future conduct ſhould make our profiting appear.

CHAP. VI.

Eliphaz concluded his diſcourſe with an air of aſſurance, as if what he had ſaid was ſo plain and pertinent, that nothing could be objected in anſwer to it. But Job, diſſatisfied with all he had ſaid, ſtill juſtifies himſelf in his complaints, and condemns him for the weakneſs of his arguing. 1. He ſhews that he had juſt cauſe to complain, ver. 1—7. 2. He continues his paſſionate wiſh, to be eaſed of all his miſeries by death, ver. 8—13. 3. He reproves his friends for their uncharitable cenſures of him, and the unkind treatment they gave him, ver. 14—30. It muſt be owned that Job in all this ſpoke a deal of reaſon, but with a mixture of paſſion and human infirmity: And in this conteſt, as indeed in moſt conteſts, there was fault on both ſides.

1. BUT Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. Oh that my grief were thoroughly weighed, and my calamity † laid in the balances together! 3. For now [a] it would be heavier than the ſand of the ſea: therefore [b] my words are ‡ ſwallowed up. 4. For [c] the arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poiſon whereof drinketh up my ſpirit: [d] the terrors of God do ſet themſelves in aray againſt me. 5. Doth the wild aſs bray when he hath graſs? or loweth the ox over his fodder? 6. Can that which is unſavoury be eaten without ſalt? or is there any taſte in the white of an egg? 7. [e] The things that my ſoul refuſed to touch are as my ſorrowful meat.

† Heb. Lifted up.
[a] Prov. xxvii. 3.
[b] Pſal. lxxvii. 4.
‡ Or boil up.
[c] Deut. xxxii. 23. Pſal. xxxviii. 2.
[d] Ibid. lxxxviii. 15, 16.
[e] Lam. iv. 5.

v. 1—7. Having heard with patient attention the diſcourſe of Eliphaz, however piercing and unjuſt ſome of the reflections muſt appear, Job, far from being convinced by his reaſoning, replies with warmth to his arguments.

1. He wiſhes for a more impartial balance than his cenſorious friends ſeemed inclined to afford him; who ſlighted the weight of thoſe calamities they did not feel, and blamed him as aggravating his troubles, the heavineſs of which, words were wanting to expreſs, and the half of it he could not tell, whilſt ſighing and tears ſtopped his utterance, or as the expreſſion, v. 3. may be rendered, therefore my words boil up, through the anguiſh he felt within. Note, (1.) They who are at eaſe themſelves, are often partial judges of others complaints. (2.) We recommend that advice as eaſy and obvious to others, that, if in their caſe, we might ourſelves find exceeding difficult, if not impracticable.

2. He complains of what they could not ſee, v. 4. the inward anguiſh of his ſoul. His outward trials were heavy as the ſand, and as numerous, but his inward pangs far more deadly. Like poiſoned arrows, the wrath of God, which he read in theſe afflictions, drank up his ſpirit, and ſunk him almoſt into deſpair, whilſt what he feared added to what he felt; he ſaw God marſhalling his terrors againſt him, and who could tell where they would end. Note, (1.) Of all our evils, a ſenſe of God's wrath is moſt intolerable: a wounded ſpirit who can bear? (2.) If in the agonies of pain a haſty expreſſion may not be juſtified, they ſhould plead with us its excuſe.

3. He vindicates himſelf in his complaints; under which, to be ſilent, would prove him more inſenſible than the moſt ſtupid animals. Doth the wild aſs bray when he hath graſs? or loweth the ox over his fodder? no; but when deprived of theſe, the very beaſts will complain. Now all his comforts were periſhed; the food that in time paſt he would not have deigned to touch, was become his ſorrowful meat, inſipid, without a grain of ſalt, and taſteleſs as the white of an egg, or his ſpittle; or more probably he means, the admonitions and reproof of Eliphaz were as nauſeous to him, as the bitter morſel he loathed; and more unſavoury than the moſt inſipid food, being no way ſuited to his caſe and condition, and therefore diſreliſhed and rejected. Note, (1.) There is no virtue in inſenſibility. (2.) When we know not to what ſtraits we may be reduced, it is good betimes to avoid all nicety of diet, which tends only to pamper the appetite, and will add peculiar bitterneſs in any day of future want.

8. O that I might have my requeſt! and that God would grant me † the thing that I long for! 9. Even [f] that it would pleaſe God to deſtroy me; that he would let looſe his hand and cut me off. 10. Then ſhould I yet have comfort, yea, ‡ I would harden myſelf in ſorrow; let him not ſpare, for [g] I have not concealed the words of the holy One. 11. What is my ſtrength, that I ſhould hope? and what is mine end, that I ſhould prolong my life? 12. [h] Is my ſtrength the ſtrength of ſtones? or is my fleſh of braſs? 13. Is not my ‖ help in me? and is wiſdom driven quite from me?

† Heb. My expectation.
[f] 1 Kings xix. 4.
‡ Or though I ſhould be burnt with pain.
[g] Acts xx. 27.
[h] Pſal. ciii. 14, 15.
‖ Or defence.

v. 8—13. Theſe are among the words that Job will wiſh unſaid, and deſerve all the rebuke of impatience that Eliphaz hath beſtowed: ſo hard it is, when the ſpirit is ruffled, for a good man to refrain from the ſpeech of perverſeneſs. We have here,

1. Job's impatient wiſh and prayer for his immediate diſſolution, O that I might have my requeſt! as if the boon was wondrous great; and what is this thing he longs for? why, that God would make an end of him, let looſe his arm, and by one ſtroke put a period to his days of miſery: a bad wiſh, and a worſe prayer; but God is kinder to us than we are to ourſelves, and therefore mercifully refuſes to grant our ſinful and haſty requeſts. Note, (1.) However irkſome our preſent ſtate may be, we may not think of ridding ourſelves of our troubles, but wait till our change comes. (2.) Through our folly at times, our very prayers are turned into ſin.

2. Though he is wrong in his raſh deſire, he expreſſes a gracious hope in death, Then ſhould I have comfort, the proſpect of its approach ſhould be my joy, and after death I ſhould enter into everlaſting felicity. Yea, could I ſee this wiſhed-for hour, though death approached with all its terrors, I would harden myſelf in ſorrow, and ſtand unmoved under the ſhock; or as the words may be rendered, though I ſhould be burnt with pain, and every boil burſt forth into a flame to conſume me, let him not ſpare; ſo he ſlay me, I am content to ſuffer every excruciating pang of torment: ſurely this alſo is his infirmity. His faith in the proſpect of death is commendable; his defiance of ſuffering, and hardening himſelf in ſorrow, is blameable: thus corruption is apt to mix with all we ſay and do. Note, (1.) Death to a believer is a conſummation devoutly to be wiſhed for; only though willing to be gone, let him contentedly wait the Lord's leiſure. (2.) To harden ourſelves againſt affliction, is to diſappoint the deſign of God's corrections, and would prove not our fortitude but obſtinacy.

3. He produceth the reaſon why he wiſhed to die: I have not concealed the words of the holy One; far from being conſcious of unfaithfulneſs or hypocriſy, as was ſuggeſted, his conſcience bore him witneſs in the Holy Ghoſt, that he had ever embraced, profeſſed, and propagated, even in the midſt of that idolatrous generation, thoſe doctrines of truth which God had revealed to him, and therefore he dared appear at his bar, unterrified at the fears of judgment, and humbly confident of gracious acceptance. Note, (1.) A good conſcience gives boldneſs in the day of judgment. (2.) The truths we know and believe, we muſt profeſs, own, and ſeek to inculcate, however ſuch profeſſion and zeal for God may make us obnoxious to a wicked world.

4. He rejects the conſolations Eliphaz propoſed to him, as what in his preſent ſtate were vain chimæras; what is my ſtrength, that I ſhould hope to ſee a reſtoration of my health and vigour? or what is my end, what purpoſe would it anſwer, now all my comforts are gone, that I ſhould prolong my life? Is my ſtrength the ſtrength of ſtones, or is my fleſh braſs? to bear up under a weight of troubles ſo numerous, and inſupportably heavy. Note, (1.) Dejected hearts are ready to preach to themſelves deſpair, and refuſe to be comforted. (2.) Though our own ſtrength is very weakneſs, yet there is help laid on one mighty to ſave, and we can do or ſuffer all things, Chriſt ſtrengthening us. (3.) Whilſt God is pleaſed to prolong our lives, we may be aſſured he hath ſome end for his own glory to anſwer, though we may think ourſelves uſeleſs.

5. He deſires them not to deſpiſe his reaſonings, as if his misfortunes had affected his underſtanding: Is not my help in me, or defence? am I not ſtill able to maintain my cauſe? and is wiſdom driven quite from me? No: Though my body ſuffers, my faculties are unimpaired, and I can ſupport myſelf in the conſciouſneſs, that reaſon and argument are on my ſide. Note, It is a mercy under every affliction, that our underſtanding continues unclouded.

14. [i] To him that † is afflicted pity ſhould be ſhewed from his friend; but he forſaketh the fear of the Almighty. 15. My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and [k] as the ſtream of brooks they paſs away:

16. Which

[i] Prov. xvii. 17. 2 Cor. xi. 29.
† Heb. Melteth.
[k] Jer. xv. 18.

‡ Heb. Are cut off.
§ Heb. Extinguiſhed.
l Gen. xxv. 15.
m Jer. xiv. 3.
‖ Heb. Ye are like to it.

16. Which are blackiſh by reaſon of the ice, and wherein the ſnow is hid: 17. What time they wax warm, they ‡ vaniſh: when it is hot, they are § conſumed out of their place. 18. The paths of their way are turned aſide; they go to nothing, and periſh. 19. [l] The troops of Tema looked, the companies of Sheba waited for them. 20. [m] They were confounded becauſe they had hoped; they came thither and were aſhamed. 21. For now ‖ ye are nothing; ye ſee my caſting down, and are afraid.

v. 14—21. Eliphaz, in the name of the reſt, had accuſed him of hypocriſy: with greater evidence he retorts the charge, from their cruel conduct, who, inſtead of friendly comforters, had turned accuſers and tormenters.

1. He pleads his juſt expectations from them. Pity, at leaſt, he might have expected; and if they could not remove his ſorrows, their friendly compaſſions, in ſympathiſing with his griefs, ſhould have ſought at leaſt to alleviate them. Note, The boſom of true friendſhip is the ſeat of tenderneſs. Though relief is not in our power, the kind enquiry, the ſollicitous attention, the ſoft look of pity, and the ſympathetic tear, ſpeak the deſires of the faithful heart.

2. He charges Eliphaz and his abettors with cruel unkindneſs, and diſappointing his juſt expectations, wherein they ſhewed as much diſregard to the fear of God, as faithleſsneſs to their friend. Like brooks ſwoln by the melted ſnow and ice in winter, their profeſſions in the days of his proſperity were great; but now the ſcorching ſun is riſen, their ſtreams deceitfully diſappear. The travellers that eyed before the rolling flood, came, heated with journeying, eager to quench their raging thirſt: the troops of Tema and Sheba, the caravans of merchants, expected with earneſt ſollicitude to diſcover the welcome river, and waited patiently, in hope that there at leaſt they ſhould find water for themſelves and fainting camels: but lo! their hope is vaniſhed; no drop remains amidſt the burning ſands; the brook is dry, and terrible diſappointment covers them. Such were the friends of Job, failing him when he wanted their kind help, and deceitful as theſe vaniſhing ſtreams. For now ye are nothing, afford me not the leaſt relief in my diſtreſs: ye ſee my caſting down under theſe afflictions, and are afraid to patronize my cauſe, as if theſe ſtrokes beſpoke the judgments of the Almighty; or that he ſhould burthen them for a maintenance, or ſhould infect them with his diſeaſe, or offend them with its nauſeous ſmell. Note, (1.) It is a bitter trial to find a friend, on whom we depended, faithleſs. (2.) The world is full of diſappointments; the more we ceaſe from man, and expect our whole comfort from the friend of ſinners, the ſurer will be our portion. (3.) We ſhall, ſooner or later, find all creature-confidence nothing, yea, leſs than nothing, and vanity; and when we are thus aſſured, what folly to place our hope on any thing below!

n 1 Sam. xii. 3.
o Jam. i. 19.
† Or, that the ſpeeches of one that is but of hope are wind?
‡ Or, cauſe to fall upon.
p Chap. xvii. 10.
§ Or, There is no iniquity.
‖ Heb. Palate.

22. [n] Did I ſay, Bring unto me? or give a reward for me of your ſubſtance? 23. Or deliver me from the enemies hand? or redeem me from the hand of the mighty? 24. [o] Teach me, and I will hold my tongue: and cauſe me to underſtand wherein I have erred. 25. How forcible are right words! but what doth your arguing reprove? 26. Do ye imagine to reprove words, and † the ſpeeches of one that is deſperate, which are as wind? 27. Yea, ye ‡ overwhelm the fatherleſs, and you dig a pit for your friend. 28. Now therefore be content, look upon me, for it is evident unto you, if I lie. 29. [p] Return, I pray you, § let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, my righteouſneſs is in it. 30. Is there iniquity in my tongue? cannot my ‖ taſte diſcern perverſe things?

v. 22—30. Job goes on to vindicate himſelf, and to upbraid the unkindneſs of his friends.

1. Reduced as he was, he had not been troubleſome or importunate with them, either to relieve him out of their abundance, or to vindicate his conduct, or to make repriſals for him on the Sabæans and Chaldeans; and having given no provocations to uſe him ill, their accuſations were the more aggravated. Note, (1.) The importunity of want often provokes the abuſe of the uncharitable. (2.) Though a good man, when God ſo pleaſes to reduce him, is not too proud to beg, yet, whilſt he is able to work, or a pittance remains, he will not be burdenſome, and rather will decline the proffers of his friends, than weary out their generoſity.

2. Though he could not call folly wiſdom, he profeſſes himſelf, however unkindly treated, open to conviction if he had erred, v. 24. and humbly ready in ſilence to attend the force of right words; but theirs were neither right nor forcible, nor did their arguing fix on him reproof or conviction: their ſuppoſitions were groundleſs, and their concluſions falſe. Note, (1.) They are the truly wiſe, who are open to reaſon, and are not aſhamed to ſee wherein they have erred. (2.) It is a bad cauſe that needs abuſe to ſupport it; and it weakens a good one, to uſe heat or ill language. Arguments clothed with kindneſs, like the razor ſet in oil, cut deepeſt with leaſt pain.

3. He urges the cruelty of catching at a paſſionate word, which in his preſent deſperate ſituation might drop from him, yet was far from proving him inſincere or wicked. In his deſolate ſituation they not only bore him down, already as the fatherleſs overwhelmed with ſorrow, but digged a pit for their friend; pretended to come to comfort him, and ſeemed to labour only to entangle him in his talk, and to watch for a raſh expreſſion, on which to ſpend their unkind reproofs. Note, (1.) We muſt make allowances for a man's ſituation, and not be ſevere cenſurers of every haſty word, or wrong ſtep. (2.) To add oppreſſion and inſult to the afflictions of the poor, is doubly criminal.

4. He maintains warmly his integrity, to his vindication of which he begs them to give a patient hearing. Be content to ſtay a moment; look upon me; does my countenance betray the conſciouſneſs of ſhame, or bluſh of guilt? for it is evident to you, if I lie; you would ſoon diſcover it, if it were ſo. Return, I pray you, to kinder ſentiments of me; or perhaps they roſe to depart, and he begs a patient audience: let it not be iniquity, or, there is no iniquity, none ſuch as they charged him with; yea, return again, my righteouſneſs is in it. In the whole of his cauſe, and the preſent controverſy, he doubted not but to prove himſelf blameleſs of every accuſation. Is there iniquity in my tongue? No; I have ſpoken the truth. Cannot my taſte diſcern perverſe things? Yes; he had the cleareſt exerciſe of his reaſon, was able to maintain his uprightneſs, and diſcover the fallacy of their arguments. Note, (1.) We are bound to give every man a patient hearing. (2.) Truth is a mighty weapon, when weilded by the weakeſt arm. (3.) They who have a good cauſe will never ſhun the light, but court enquiry.

CHAP. VII.

Job goes on to juſtify himſelf in his deſire of death. 1. He complains of his troubles, ver. 1—6. 2. He begs God to remember the vanity of his life, ver. 7—10. 3. He complains of the miſerable condition he was now in, ver. 11—16. 4. He wonders why God will thus contend with him, and begs for the pardon of his ſins, and a ſpeedy releaſe out of his miſeries, ver. 17—21.

a Chap. xiv. 14. Pſal. xxxix. 4.
† Or, a warfare.
‡ Heb. Gapeth after.
b Chap. xxix. 2.
c Deut. xxviii. 67. Chap. xvii. 12.
d Iſa. xiv. 11.
e Chap. ix. 25. Pſ. cii. 11. & ciii. 15. & cxliv. 4. Jam. iv. 14.

1. IS there not [a] an † appointed time to man upon earth? are not his days alſo like the days of an hireling? 2. As a ſervant ‡ earneſtly deſireth the ſhadow, and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work: 3. So am I made to poſſeſs [b] months of vanity, and weariſome nights are appointed to me. 4. When I lie down, I ſay, [c] When ſhall I ariſe, and the night be gone? and I am full of toſſings to and fro unto the dawning of the day. 5. [d] My fleſh is clothed with worms and clods of duſt, my ſkin is broken, and become lothſome. 6. [e] My days are ſwifter than a weaver's ſhuttle, and are ſpent without hope.

v. 1—6. Job proceeds to juſtify his deſire of death, as the period to the miſeries he underwent. Is there not an appointed time, ſet by divine decree, or a warfare to man upon earth, where he muſt conflict with variety of evils, till by death he receives his diſcharge? Are not his days alſo like the days of an hireling, fixed and determined, and full of toil and labour? As a ſervant earneſtly deſireth the ſhadow, wearied with the toils of the day, and longing for repoſe, and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work, ſo do I long for death to relieve me of my miſeries, and bring me to that reward which God hath promiſed to beſtow in mercy on every man according as his work is. I am made to poſſeſs, as if this was the only portion he was heir to, months of vanity, or empty ones, deſtitute of all joy, comfort, and uſefulneſs, and weariſome nights are appointed me. Reſtleſs upon his bed, no ſweet repoſe cloſed his eyes, to ſooth his pains; or, if he ſlumbered, viſions of the night ſcared and terrified him. When I lie down, I ſay, When ſhall I ariſe, and the night be gone, or meaſured? when ſhall the welcome day return, and theſe lingring hours be paſt? and I am full of toſſings to and fro unto the dawning of the day. I turn, and turn again; every poſture is uneaſy, and tired out upon my bed, I watch for break of day. My fleſh is clothed with worms, that bred in his ulcers, and clods of duſt, from the aſhes in which he ſat. My ſkin is broken, and become loathſome, with the ſtench of his ſores. My days are ſwifter than a weaver's ſhuttle, haſtening to their end, and are ſpent without hope of any recovery of his former proſperity. So that it need not be wondered that he courted death, overwhelmed as he was with ſuch miſeries, without the proſpect of relief. Note, (1.) Our lives are fixed by an unalterable decree, and beyond theſe bounds we cannot paſs. (2.) If we awake refreſhed from beds of ſleep, let us thankfully acknowledge knowledge to whom we owe it. (3.) Our vile bodies ſhould ever humble us: one ſtroke of diſeaſe may make them loathſome to others, and a burden to ourſelves. (4.) Are our days inceſſantly haſtening to an end, how diligent ſhould we be to improve them, that, when the thread of life is cut, we may not die without hope.

7. O remember that [f] my life is wind: mine eye † ſhall no more ſee good. 8. [g] The eye of him that hath ſeen me, ſhall ſee me no more: thine eyes are upon me, and I am not. 9. As the cloud is conſumed, and vaniſheth away: ſo [h] he that goeth down to the grave, ſhall come up no more. 10. He ſhall return no more to his houſe, [i] neither ſhall his place know him any more. 11. Therefore I will not refrain my mouth, I will ſpeak in the anguiſh of my ſpirit, I will complain in the bitterneſs of my ſoul. 12. Am I a ſea, or a whale, that thou ſetteſt a watch over me? 13. [k] When I ſay, My bed ſhall comfort me, my couch ſhall eaſe my complaint: 14. Then thou ſcareſt me with dreams, and terrifieſt me through viſions. 15. So that my ſoul chooſeth ſtrangling, and death rather than my ‡ life. 16. [l] I loath it, I would not live alway: [m] let me alone, for [n] my days are vanity.

[f] Pſ. lxxviii. 39. & lxxxix. 47.
† Heb. Shall not return to ſee, &c.
[g] Chap. xx. 9.
[h] 2 Sam. xii. 23.
[i] Chap. viii. 18. & xx. 9. Pſ. ciii. 16.
[k] Chap. ix. 27, 28.
‡ Heb. Bones.
[l] Chap. x. 1.
[m] Ibid. 20. & xiv. 6. Pſ. xxxix. 13.
[n] Pſ. lxii. 9.

v. 7—16. Job here directs his diſcourſe to God. If his friends care not for him, he hopes God will remember him, either to eaſe or releaſe him.

1. He begs him to remember the vanity of his life, hanging upon the breath in his noſtrils, and paſſing as the wind. He deſpairs of ſeeing any more proſperity upon earth: hid in the grave, v. 8. he ſhould no longer afford this ſpectacle of woe; and one glance of God's eye were enough to bring him thither. There all his ſorrows would end, and, once removed, he ſhould return to this miſerable world no more, v. 9, 10. vaniſhed as the cloud, and forgotten. Note, (1.) Our life is vaniſhing as a cloud, and paſſing as the wind; and when we lie down in the duſt, there is no returning to redeem or amend the days that are fled. (2.) If we muſt ſhortly take our leave of a vain world, it highly becomes us to have our affections weaned from it, that we may with readineſs wait our great change, and caſt no lingring look behind.

2. He pours forth his paſſionate complaint: in anguiſh, in bitterneſs he expoſtulates with God on his afflictions. Am I a ſea, proud and raging, or a whale, ravenous and oppreſſive, that thou ſetteſt a watch over me? hemming me in with ſore afflictions, and preventing my eſcape by death, which I long for, v. 15. Nor can it be thought ſtrange I ſhould thus eagerly court it, when, riſing up, and lying down, miſery purſues me cloſer than my ſhadow. Terrified with fearful dreams, my bed, inſtead of eaſe, aggravates my complaint: my life is become inſupportable; I lothe it, or am become lothſome; the moſt tormenting death is preferable to my preſent ſufferings, v. 15. Let me then alone, that I may cloſe theſe wretched eyes in the duſt. I would not wiſh to live alway in the moſt proſperous condition, how much leſs thus afflicted, where my days all of them are vanity, full of evil, miſery, and woe. Surely this alſo is his infirmity; how merciful is God to diſappoint his wiſhes, and refuſe an anſwer to his prayers! Note, (1.) Tho' to depart and be with Chriſt makes death deſirable to the believer in his beſt eſtate, yet he is not unwilling to wait, in the midſt of torture, till God is pleaſed to give him his diſmiſſion. (2.) Aſleep or awake, God can reach our ſpirits, and on our beds make us a terror to ourſelves.

17. [o] What is man, that thou ſhouldſt † magnify him? and that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart ‡ upon him? 18. And that thou ſhouldſt viſit him every morning, and try him every moment? 19. [p] How long wilt thou not depart from me? nor let me alone, till I ſwallow down my ſpittle? 20. I have ſinned, what ſhall I do unto thee, [q] O thou § preſerver of men? why [r] haſt thou ſet me as a mark againſt thee, ſo that I am a burden to myſelf? 21. And why doſt thou not pardon my tranſgreſſion, and take away mine iniquity? for now [s] ſhall I ſleep in the duſt, and thou ſhalt ſeek me in the morning, but I ſhall not be.

[o] Pſ. viii. 4. & cxliv. 3.
† Or, wreſtle with him.
‡ Or, againſt.
[p] Pſ. xxxix. 10.
[q] Pſ. xxxvi. 6.
§ Or, Obſerver.
[r] Chap. xvi. 12. Pſ. xxi. 12. Lam. iii. 12.
[s] Iſa. xxvi. 19. Dan. xii. 2.

v. 17—21. We have here,

1. Job fooliſhly expoſtulating with God, What is man, that thou ſhouldſt magnify him? which God ſeemed to do, by entering the liſts as an adverſary, to wreſtle with him, as the word may be rendered, a foe ſo unequal, and beneath his notice; and that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart upon him, or againſt him, as an enemy? and that thou ſhouldſt viſit him every morning, with repeated ſtrokes of affliction, and try him every moment, giving him no reſpite from ſufferings. How long wilt thou not depart from me, or look off from me? turn away thy frowning face, or eye me not ſo fiercely as a contending wreſtler; nor let me alone till I ſwallow down my ſpittle? Take thy hand off for a moment at leaſt, juſt whilſt I draw breath. Note, (1.) If God contends with us, it is in mercy, becauſe our way is perverſe. (2.) The trials we ſuffer here are deſigned as the furnace for gold, to purge our droſs, and brighten our graces; therefore we ought not to murmur under them, but ſeek to anſwer their deſign.

2. Wiſely confeſſing his ſins, and pleading for pardon and reconciliation. I have ſinned; though, reſpecting the charges laid by his cenſorious friends, he maintained his integrity, yet before God he was ready to acknowledge himſelf a ſinner, and therefore unable to contend with him. What ſhall I do unto thee, O thou preſerver of men, or ſaviour of men? Fain would I obtain thy favour, and avoid thy diſpleaſure, that now ſo heavily oppreſſeth me. Why haſt thou ſet me as a mark againſt thee, or, appointed me to meet thee in the liſts? Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me ſo ſorely, that I am a burden to myſelf? And why doſt thou not pardon my tranſgreſſion, and take away mine iniquity? that the cauſe of all my evils being removed, the dire effects of them may ceaſe. For now, if thou wilt grant me this, I ſhall ſleep in the duſt in peace, when my iniquity is forgiven; and thou ſhalt ſeek me in the morning, and I ſhall not be: like a kind friend coming to enquire in the morning after him, and lo, he is happily releaſed from his miſery. Note, (1.) The moſt perfect man need confeſs himſelf a ſinner: though ſincere, he is not ſinleſs. (2.) A humbling ſenſe of ſin will ſerve exceedingly to ſilence every complaint in our afflictions. (3.) The great concern under our ſevereſt ſufferings, is not ſo much to obtain eaſe for our bodies, as reſt for our ſouls, in the pardon of our ſins. (4.) If we aſk, what a ſinner muſt do? the anſwer is, Apply to the ſinner's friend, the ſaviour of men, and none go from him with a repulſe. (5.) When our ſouls are at peace with God, we can comfortably commit our bodies to the duſt, and take our leave of the world with as much calmneſs and ſatisfaction, as when we bid good night to our friends on retiring to repoſe. (6.) If in the morning our ſpirit ſhould be fled, and the corpſe alone remains, let not weeping friends complain, that we have ſo eaſily and ſuddenly eſcaped the pains of dying.

CHAP. VIII.

Job's friends are like Job's meſſengers: Bildad takes up the diſpute, as ſecond to Eliphaz, and in the ſame ſtrain. He endeavours to convince Job, 1. That he had ſpoken too paſſionately, ver. 2. 2. That he and his children had ſuffered juſtly, ver. 3, 4. 3. That if he were a true penitent, God would ſoon turn his captivity, ver. 5—7. 4. That it was a uſual thing for Providence to extinguiſh the joys and hopes of wicked men, as his were extinguiſhed, and therefore they had reaſon to ſuſpect him for an hypocrite, ver. 8—19. 5. That they ſhould be abundantly confirmed in their ſuſpicion, unleſs God did ſpeedily appear for his relief, ver. 20—22.

1. THEN anſwered Bildad the Shuhite, and ſaid, 2. How long wilt thou ſpeak theſe things? and how long ſhall the words of thy mouth be like a ſtrong wind? 3. [a] Doth God pervert judgment? or doth the Almighty pervert juſtice? 4. If thy children have ſinned againſt him, and he have caſt them away for their tranſgreſſion: 5. [b] If thou wouldſt ſeek unto God betimes, and make thy ſupplication to the Almighty; 6. If thou wert pure and upright, ſurely now he would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteouſneſs proſperous. 7. [c] Though thy beginning was ſmall, yet thy latter end ſhould greatly increaſe.

[a] Deut. xxxii. 4. 2 Chron. xix. 7. Chap. xxxiv. 17. Rom. iii. 5.
[b] Chap. v. 8. & xi. 13. & xxii. 23.
[c] Zech. iv. 10. Mat. xiii. 12.

v. 1—7. We have here,

1. Bildad's haſty reproof of Job: How long wilt thou ſpeak theſe things? impatient in thy complaints, obſtinate in ſelf-vindication, diſregarding the good advice that was given thee, and charging God fooliſhly. How long ſhall the words of thy mouth be as a ſtrong wind? rude to thy friends, and inſolent againſt the almighty. Note, Reviling language proves both a bad diſputant, and a weak cauſe.

2. His vindication of God. Doth God pervert judgment? or doth the Almighty pervert juſtice? No; the Judge of all the earth muſt do right. So far the truth was evident, and none would diſpute it; but he was greatly miſtaken,

3. In the application. He ſuppoſes Job's children wicked, and himſelf a hypocrite; and intimates, that the awful providences upon him were the conſequences thereof. If thy children have ſinned againſt him, which he concludes from their ſudden death, and he have caſt them away for their tranſgreſſion, it was an act of juſtice. If thou wouldſt ſeek unto God betimes, and make thy ſupplication to the Almighty, notwithſtanding all theſe heavy viſitations, if thou wert pure and upright, as thou pretendeſt to be, ſurely now, without delay, would God appear to comfort and reſtore thee: he would awake for thee, to rebuke thy afflictions, and make the habitation of thy righteouſneſs, in which thou maintaineſt thyſelf, proſperous; which would be the ſure evidence of his approbation; then, though thy beginning were ſmall, reduced as thou now art, yet thy latter end ſhould greatly increaſe. He ſeems to adviſe him as a friend, but inſinuates a ſtrong ſuſpicion of his hypocriſy, and makes two ſuppoſitions, [1.] That extraordinary afflictions are always the puniſhment of extraordinary ſins. [2.] That righteouſneſs was always bleſſed with outward proſperity: both which are falſe, and yet God's judgments and juſtice in no wiſe impeached thereby. Note, (1.) In every affliction it is good advice to fly to God for help. (2.) We can have no good hope he will anſwer us, if we are conſcious of our own hypocriſy before him. (3.) God's bleſſing can ſoon make a little afford a great increaſe. (4.) Though men call us hypocrites, if God knows our ſimplicity, it need little move us.

8. For [d] inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyſelf to the ſearch of their fathers. 9. (For [e] we are but of yeſterday, and know nothing, becauſe our days upon earth are a ſhadow). 10. Shall not [f] they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart? 11. Can the ruſh grow up without mire?
can the flag grow without water? 12. [g] Whilſt it is yet in his greenneſs, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb. 13. So are the paths of all that forget God, and [h] the hypocrite's hope ſhall periſh:
14. Whoſe hope ſhall be cut off, and whoſe truſt ſhall be a ſpider's † web. 15. [i] He ſhall lean upon his houſe, but it ſhall not ſtand: he ſhall hold it faſt, but it ſhall not endure. 16. [k] He is green before the ſun, and his branch ſhooteth forth in his garden. 17. His roots are wrapped about the heap, and ſeeth the place of ſtones. 18. [l] If he deſtroy him from his place, then it ſhall deny him, ſaying, I have not ſeen thee. 19. Behold, this is the joy of his way, and out of the earth
ſhall others grow.

[d] Deut. iv. 32. Chap. xv. 18. Rom. xv. 4.
[e] 1 Chron. xxix. 15. Pſ. xxxix. 5. & cxliv. 4.
[f] Heb. xi. 4.
[g] Pſ. cxxix. 6. Jer. xvii. 6.
[h] Chap. xi. 20. & xviii. 14. Pſ. cxii. 10. Prov. x. 28.
† Heb. Houſe. Iſa. lix. 5.
[i] Chap. xxvii. 18.
[k] Pſ. xxxvii. 35, &c.
[l] Chap. vii. 10. Pſal. xxxvii. 36.

v. 8—19. From the miſerable diſappointment and end of the hypocrite and ungodly, Bildad goes on to infer, that the ſimilar effects in Job's caſe proceeded from a ſimilar cauſe.

1. He appeals to the experience of former ages for the truth of what he was advancing, and bids Job ſearch the traditions of the antient fathers in proof of his argument, as he wiſhed not to reſt the matter on their own authority, who, though men of age and experience, were but of yeſterday, creatures of a day, compared with the age of thoſe who had gone before, and knew nothing, comparatively ſpeaking, becauſe their days upon earth were a ſhadow, ſo ſoon gone, and afforded leſs time for the improvement of knowledge, and opportunity for obſervation. But if he would be at the pains to enquire of theſe impartial judges, he would doubtleſs receive ſatisfaction. Note, (1.) The experience of God's ſaints of old, recorded in the word of truth, ſhould be diligently enquired into, and applied to our own caſe. (2.) We are not now, through mercy, left to precarious tradition, but have God's infallible oracles to guide us. (3.) There is a great deference due to age and experience, and in general, to conſult with theſe is to be wiſe.

2. He illuſtrates his main poſition by a variety of ſimilitudes. Can the ruſh grow up without mire? can the flag grow without water? theſe are their nouriſhment and ſupport. Whilſt it is yet in its greenneſs, ſeems moſt flouriſhing, and not cut down by the ſcythe, of its own accord it withereth before any other herb, or in their preſence, they looking on, and deriding its fall. So are the paths of all that forget God. Though planted in earth, and fed with the mire of ſenſual indulgencies, proſperous for a while, and flouriſhing; yet at beſt they are hollow and uſeleſs, and in a moment they wither under the blaſts of God's diſpleaſure; and the hypocrite's hope periſheth. Fair as their profeſſion ſeemed, and well-grounded as their hope appeared, a day of trial, like the ſcorching ſun, exhales the water, and their worldly ſupports being withdrawn, they apoſtatize, and periſh, whoſe hope ſhall be cut off in black deſpair, and whoſe truſt ſhall be as the ſpider's web, or houſe, ſpun from their own bowels of ſelf-ſufficient righteouſneſs, too weak to make a cable for hope's anchor, and too thin for garments to hide the ſhame of their nakedneſs; ſwept away without reſiſtance with the beſom of deſtruction, and affording no more ſhelter for the ſoul againſt divine juſtice, than the hole of the ſpider. He ſhall lean upon his houſe, his proſperity, his religious profeſſion, his moral duties, his external worſhip and ſervices, but it ſhall not ſtand; tottering on the ſandy foundation, it can yield the hypocrite no ſupport: he ſhall hold it faſt, cling to it, as the ſpider to her web, refuſing to be beat out of his vain confidence and ſelf-dependance, but it ſhall not endure; his proſperity ſhall fail, and his falſe profeſſions be detected. He is green before the ſun, like a flouriſhing tree, whilſt the world ſmiles; or in the eyes of men he appears eminently pious and bleſt, and his branch ſhooteth forth in his garden, ſtrong and vigorous, and fenced on every ſide. His roots are wrapped about the heap, ſtrike deep, and he ſeeth the place of ſtones, or houſe of ſtones, grows ſo high as to overlook the ſtatelieſt building. Such is the appearance often of proſperous iniquity, and ſo high the hypocrite lifts his head. If he deſtroy him from his place, as God aſſuredly will, then it ſhall deny him, ſaying, I have not ſeen thee: ſo utter will be the extirpation, that neither root nor branch will be left. Behold, this is the joy of his way, ſpoken ironically, this is what it comes to at laſt; and out of the earth ſhall others grow; either hypocrites, like them, who take no warning by their end; or good men, for whom the wealth of the ſinner is laid up. Note, (1.) Hypocriſy among profeſſors is the moſt common and deadly weed that grows in the church and garden of God upon earth. (2.) Forgetfulneſs of God is at the bottom of all iniquity. (3.) The ſelf-righteous formaliſt, fair as he may appear without, hath his ſpider's poiſon within; and though he prides himſelf in his works and duties, they will be found as unable to bear the ſeverity of God's juſtice, as the ſpider's web to bind Leviathan. (4.) Though worldly proſperity continue long with ſinners, even until death, yet then at leaſt the ax will be laid to the root of the tree, and all their hopes periſh.

20. Behold, [m] God will not caſt away a perfect man, neither will he † help the evil doers: 21. Till he fill thy mouth with laughing, and thy lips with ‡ rejoicing.
22. They that hate thee [n] ſhall be clothed with ſhame, and the dwelling-place of the wicked § ſhall
come to nought.

[m] Iſa. iii. 10.
† Heb. Take the ungodly by the hand.
‡ Heb. Shouting for joy.
[n] Pſ. cxxxii. 18.
§ Heb. Shall not be.

v. 20—22. Bildad here ſums up his diſcourſe, confident that every man would receive from God according to his work; but as he looked no farther than temporal rewards and puniſhments, and extended no view to eternal ones, his inference was utterly defective.

1. The perfect man, or ſincere, God will not caſt away: however great his diſtreſs might be for a ſeaſon, joy and gladneſs would again return, and peace and plenty crown his head, to the confuſion of all that hated him.

2. The evil doers God never will help out of the pit into which they are fallen, but their dwelling-place ſhall be covered with perpetual deſolations. Hence he puts the iſſue of the controverſy on the return of Job's proſperity; inſinuating, that the continuance of his afflictions, from which there now appeared no proſpect of deliverance, would be a full evidence of his inſincerity and iniquity. Note, (1.) Though here the ſame event cometh alike to all, it is a bleſſed and comfortable truth, that in eternity God's juſtice ſhall be vindicated in the everlaſting ſalvation of the righteous, and the eternal condemnation of the wicked. (2.) Till this great day comes, we may not conclude from men's outward circumſtances either God's love or hatred, but muſt wait patiently, to know the true characters of men, and judge nothing before the time, when every man ſhall receive according as his work is.

CHAP. IX.

We have here Job's anſwer to Bildad's diſcourſe, wherein he ſpeaks honourably of God, humbly of himſelf, and feelingly of his troubles. 1. He lays down the doctrine of God's juſtice, ver. 2. 2. He proves it, from his wiſdom, power, and ſovereignty, ver. 3—13. 3. He acknowledges himſelf unable to contend with God, ver. 14—21. 4. He maintains, that we cannot judge of men's characters by their outward condition, ver. 22—24. 5. He complains of the greatneſs of his troubles, the confuſion he was in, and the loſs he was at what to ſay or do, ver. 25—35.

1. THEN Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. I know it is ſo of a truth: but how ſhould man [a] be juſt † with God? 3. If he will contend with him, he cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand. 4. [b] He is wiſe in heart, and mighty in ſtrength: [c] who hath hardned himſelf againſt him, and hath proſpered? 5. [d] Which removeth the mountains, and they know not; which overturneth them in his anger. 6. Which ſhaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble. 7.
Which commandeth the ſun, and it riſeth not: and ſealeth up the ſtars. 8. [e] Which alone ſpreadeth out
the heavens, and [f] treadeth upon the waves of the ſea.
9. [g] Which maketh Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and the chambers of the ſouth. 10. [h] Which doth great things paſt finding out, yea, and wonders without number.
11. Lo, [i] he goeth by me, and I ſee him not:
he paſſeth on alſo, but I perceive him not. 12. [k] Behold, he taketh away, who can ‡ hinder him? who will

[a] Pſ. cxliii. 2.
† Or, before.
[b] Chap. xxxvi. 5.
[c] Iſa. xxvii. 4. 1 Cor. x. 22.
[d] Pſ. lxviii. 8. & cxiv. 4. Hab. iii. 6.
[e] Gen. i. 6. Pſ. civ. 2, 3.
[f] Hab. iii. 15. Mark vi. 48.
[g] Chap. xxxviii. 31. Amos v. 8.
[h] Chap. v. 9. Pſ. lxxi. 15. Rom. xi. 33.
[i] Chap. xxiii. 8, 9. & xxxv. 14.
[k] Iſa. xlv. 9. Jer. xviii. 6. Rom. ix. 20.
‡ Or, turn him away? or make him reſtore?

knowledge to whom we owe it. (3.) Our vile bodies ſhould ever humble us: one ſtroke of diſeaſe may make them loathſome to others, and a burden to ourſelves. (4.) Are our days inceſſantly haſtening to an end, how diligent ſhould we be to improve them, that, when the thread of life is cut, we may not die without hope.

7. O remember that [f] my life is wind: mine eye † ſhall no more ſee good. 8. [g] The eye of him that hath ſeen me, ſhall ſee me no more: thine eyes are upon me, and I am not. 9. As the cloud is conſumed, and vaniſheth away: ſo [h] he that goeth down to the grave, ſhall come up no more. 10. He ſhall return no more to his houſe, [i] neither ſhall his place know him any more. 11. Therefore I will not refrain my mouth, I will ſpeak in the anguiſh of my ſpirit, I will complain in the bitterneſs of my ſoul. 12. Am I a ſea, or a whale, that thou ſetteſt a watch over me? 13. [k] When I ſay, My bed ſhall comfort me, my couch ſhall eaſe my complaint: 14. Then thou ſcareſt me with dreams, and terrifieſt me through viſions. 15. So that my ſoul chooſeth ſtrangling, and death rather than my ‡ life. 16. [l] I loath it, I would not live alway: [m] let me alone, for [n] my days are vanity.

[f] Pſ. lxxviii. 39. & lxxxix. 47.
† Heb. Shall not return to ſee, &c.
[g] Chap. xx. 9.
[h] 2 Sam. xii. 23.
[i] Chap. viii. 18. & xx. 9. Pſ. ciii. 16.
[k] Chap. ix. 27, 28.
‡ Heb. Bones.
[l] Chap. x. 1.
[m] Ibid. 20. & xiv. 6. Pſ. xxxix. 13.
[n] Pſ. lxii. 9.

v. 7—16. Job here directs his diſcourſe to God. If his friends care not for him, he hopes God will remember him, either to eaſe or releaſe him.

1. He begs him to remember the vanity of his life, hanging upon the breath in his noſtrils, and paſſing as the wind. He deſpairs of ſeeing any more proſperity upon earth: hid in the grave, v. 8. he ſhould no longer afford this ſpectacle of woe; and one glance of God's eye were enough to bring him thither. There all his ſorrows would end, and, once removed, he ſhould return to this miſerable world no more, v. 9, 10. vaniſhed as the cloud, and forgotten. Note, (1.) Our life is vaniſhing as a cloud, and paſſing as the wind; and when we lie down in the duſt, there is no returning to redeem or amend the days that are fled. (2.) If we muſt ſhortly take our leave of a vain world, it highly becomes us to have our affections weaned from it, that we may with readineſs wait our great change, and caſt no lingring look behind.

2. He pours forth his paſſionate complaint: in anguiſh, in bitterneſs he expoſtulates with God on his afflictions. Am I a ſea, proud and raging, or a whale, ravenous and oppreſſive, that thou ſetteſt a watch over me? hemming me in with ſore afflictions, and preventing my eſcape by death, which I long for, v. 15. Nor can it be thought ſtrange I ſhould thus eagerly court it, when, riſing up, and lying down, miſery purſues me cloſer than my ſhadow. Terrified with fearful dreams, my bed, inſtead of eaſe, aggravates my complaint: my life is become inſupportable; I lothe it, or am become lothſome; the moſt tormenting death is preferable to my preſent ſufferings, v. 15. Let me then alone, that I may cloſe theſe wretched eyes in the duſt. I would not wiſh to live alway in the moſt proſperous condition, how much leſs thus afflicted, where my days all of them are vanity, full of evil, miſery, and woe. Surely this alſo is his infirmity; how merciful is God to diſappoint his wiſhes, and refuſe an anſwer to his prayers! Note, (1.) Tho' to depart and be with Chriſt makes death deſirable to the believer in his beſt eſtate, yet he is not unwilling to wait, in the midſt of torture, till God is pleaſed to give him his diſmiſſion. (2.) Aſleep or awake, God can reach our ſpirits, and on our beds make us a terror to ourſelves.

17. [o] What is man, that thou ſhouldſt † magnify him? and that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart ‡ upon him? 18. And that thou ſhouldſt viſit him every morning, and try him every moment? 19. [p] How long wilt thou not depart from me? nor let me alone, till I ſwallow down my ſpittle? 20. I have ſinned, what ſhall I do unto thee, [q] O thou § preſerver of men? why [r] haſt thou ſet me as a mark againſt thee, ſo that I am a burden to myſelf? 21. And why doſt thou not pardon my tranſgreſſion, and take away mine iniquity? for now [s] ſhall I ſleep in the duſt, and thou ſhalt ſeek me in the morning, but I ſhall not be.

[o] Pſ. viii. 4. & cxliv. 3.
† Or, wreſtle with him.
‡ Or, againſt.
[p] Pſ. xxxix. 10.
[q] Pſ. xxxvi. 6.
§ Or, Obſerver.
[r] Chap. xvi. 12. Pſ. xxi. 12. Lam. iii. 12.
[s] Iſa. xxvi. 19. Dan. xii. 2.

v. 17—21. We have here,

1. Job fooliſhly expoſtulating with God, What is man, that thou ſhouldſt magnify him? which God ſeemed to do, by entering the liſts as an adverſary, to wreſtle with him, as the word may be rendered, a foe ſo unequal, and beneath his notice; and that thou ſhouldſt ſet thine heart upon him, or againſt him, as an enemy? and that thou ſhouldſt viſit him every morning, with repeated ſtrokes of affliction, and try him every moment, giving him no reſpite from ſufferings. How long wilt thou not depart from me, or look off from me? turn away thy frowning face, or eye me not ſo fiercely as a contending wreſtler; nor let me alone till I ſwallow down my ſpittle? Take thy hand off for a moment at leaſt, juſt whilſt I draw breath. Note, (1.) If God contends with us, it is in mercy, becauſe our way is perverſe. (2.) The trials we ſuffer here are deſigned as the furnace for gold, to purge our droſs, and brighten our graces; therefore we ought not to murmur under them, but ſeek to anſwer their deſign.

2. Wiſely confeſſing his ſins, and pleading for pardon and reconciliation. I have ſinned; though, reſpecting the charges laid by his cenſorious friends, he maintained his integrity, yet before God he was ready to acknowledge himſelf a ſinner, and therefore unable to contend with him. What ſhall I do unto thee, O thou preſerver of men, or ſaviour of men? Fain would I obtain thy favour, and avoid thy diſpleaſure, that now ſo heavily oppreſſeth me. Why haſt thou ſet me as a mark againſt thee, or, appointed me to meet thee in the liſts? Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me ſo ſorely, that I am a burden to myſelf? And why doſt thou not pardon my tranſgreſſion, and take away mine iniquity? that the cauſe of all my evils being removed, the dire effects of them may ceaſe. For now, if thou wilt grant me this, I ſhall ſleep in the duſt in peace, when my iniquity is forgiven; and thou ſhalt ſeek me in the morning, and I ſhall not be: like a kind friend coming to enquire in the morning after him, and lo, he is happily releaſed from his miſery. Note, (1.) The moſt perfect man need confeſs himſelf a ſinner: though ſincere, he is not ſinleſs. (2.) A humbling ſenſe of ſin will ſerve exceedingly to ſilence every complaint in our afflictions. (3.) The great concern under our ſevereſt ſufferings, is not ſo much to obtain eaſe for our bodies, as reſt for our ſouls, in the pardon of our ſins. (4.) If we aſk, what a ſinner muſt do? the anſwer is, Apply to the ſinner's friend, the ſaviour of men, and none go from him with a repulſe. (5.) When our ſouls are at peace with God, we can comfortably commit our bodies to the duſt, and take our leave of the world with as much calmneſs and ſatisfaction, as when we bid good night to our friends on retiring to repoſe. (6.) If in the morning our ſpirit ſhould be fled, and the corpſe alone remains, let not weeping friends complain, that we have ſo eaſily and ſuddenly eſcaped the pains of dying.

CHAP. VIII.

Job's friends are like Job's meſſengers: Bildad takes up the diſpute, as ſecond to Eliphaz, and in the ſame ſtrain. He endeavours to convince Job, 1. That he had ſpoken too paſſionately, ver. 2. 2. That he and his children had ſuffered juſtly, ver. 3, 4. 3. That if he were a true penitent, God would ſoon turn his captivity, ver. 5—7. 4. That it was a uſual thing for Providence to extinguiſh the joys and hopes of wicked men, as his were extinguiſhed, and therefore they had reaſon to ſuſpect him for an hypocrite, ver. 8—19. 5. That they ſhould be abundantly confirmed in their ſuſpicion, unleſs God did ſpeedily appear for his relief, ver. 20—22.

1. THEN anſwered Bildad the Shuhite, and ſaid, 2. How long wilt thou ſpeak theſe things? and how long ſhall the words of thy mouth be like a ſtrong wind? 3. [a] Doth God pervert judgment? or doth the Almighty pervert juſtice? 4. If thy children have ſinned againſt him, and he have caſt them away for their tranſgreſſion: 5. [b] If thou wouldſt ſeek unto God betimes, and make thy ſupplication to the Almighty; 6. If thou wert pure and upright, ſurely now he would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteouſneſs proſperous. 7. [c] Though thy beginning was ſmall, yet thy latter end ſhould greatly increaſe.

[a] Deut. xxxii. 4. 2 Chron. xix. 7. Chap. xxxiv. 17. Rom. iii. 5.
[b] Chap. v. 8. & xi. 13. & xxii. 23.
[c] Zech. iv. 10. Mat. xiii. 12.

v. 1—7. We have here,

1. Bildad's haſty reproof of Job: How long wilt thou ſpeak theſe things? impatient in thy complaints, obſtinate in ſelf-vindication, diſregarding the good advice that was given thee, and charging God fooliſhly. How long ſhall the words of thy mouth be as a ſtrong wind? rude to thy friends, and inſolent againſt the almighty. Note, Reviling language proves both a bad diſputant, and a weak cauſe.

2. His vindication of God. Doth God pervert judgment? or doth the Almighty pervert juſtice? No; the Judge of all the earth muſt do right. So far the truth was evident, and none would diſpute it; but he was greatly miſtaken,

3. In the application. He ſuppoſes Job's children wicked, and himſelf a hypocrite; and intimates, that the awful providences upon him were the conſequences thereof. If thy children have ſinned againſt him, which he concludes from their ſudden death, and he have caſt them away for their tranſgreſſion, it was an act of juſtice. If thou wouldſt ſeek unto God betimes, and make thy ſupplication to the Almighty, notwithſtanding all theſe heavy viſitations, if thou wert pure and upright, as thou pretendeſt to be, ſurely now, without delay, would God appear to comfort and reſtore thee: he would awake for thee, to rebuke thy afflictions, and make the habitation of thy righteouſneſs, in which thou maintaineſt thyſelf, proſperous; which would be the ſure evidence of his approbation; then, though thy beginning were ſmall, reduced as thou now art, yet thy latter end ſhould greatly increaſe. He ſeems to adviſe him as a friend, but inſinuates a ſtrong ſuſpicion of his hypocriſy, and makes two ſuppoſitions, [1.] That extraordinary afflictions are always the puniſhment of extraordinary ſins. [2.] That righteouſneſs was always bleſſed with outward proſperity: both which are falſe, and yet God's judgments and juſtice in no wiſe impeached thereby. Note, (1.) In every affliction it is good advice to fly to God for help. (2.) We can have no good hope he will anſwer us, if we are conſcious of our own hypocriſy before him. (3.) God's bleſſing can ſoon make a little afford a great increaſe. (4.) Though men call us hypocrites, if God knows our ſimplicity, it need little move us.

8. For [d] inquire, I pray thee, of the former age, and prepare thyſelf to the ſearch of their fathers. 9. (For [e] we are but of yeſterday, and know nothing, becauſe
our days upon earth are a ſhadow). 10. Shall not [f] they teach thee, and tell thee, and utter words out of their heart? 11. Can the ruſh grow up without mire?
can the flag grow without water? 12. [g] Whilſt it is yet in his greenneſs, and not cut down, it withereth before any other herb. 13. So are the paths of all that forget God, and [h] the hypocrite's hope ſhall periſh:
14. Whoſe hope ſhall be cut off, and whoſe truſt ſhall be a ſpider's † web. 15. [i] He ſhall lean upon his houſe,
but it ſhall not ſtand: he ſhall hold it faſt, but it ſhall not endure. 16. [k] He is green before the ſun, and his branch ſhooteth forth in his garden. 17. His roots are wrapped about the heap, and ſeeth the place of ſtones. 18. [l] If he deſtroy him from his place, then it ſhall deny him, ſaying, I have not ſeen thee. 19. Behold, this is the joy of his way, and out of the earth ſhall others grow.

d Deut. iv. 32. Chap. xv. 18. Rom. xv. 4.
e 1 Chron. xxix. 15. Pſ. xxxix. 5. & cxliv. 4.
f Heb. xi. 4.
g Pſ. cxxix. 6. Jer. xvii. 6.
h Chap. xi. 20. & xviii. 14. Pſ. cxii. 10. Prov. x. 28.
† Heb. Houſe. Iſa. lix. 5.
i Chap. xxvii. 18.
k Pſ. xxxvii. 35, &c.
l Chap. vii. 10. Pſal. xxxvii. 36.

v. 8—19. From the miſerable diſappointment and end of the hypocrite and ungodly, Bildad goes on to infer, that the ſimilar effects in Job's caſe proceeded from a ſimilar cauſe.

1. He appeals to the experience of former ages for the truth of what he was advancing, and bids Job ſearch the traditions of the antient fathers in proof of his argument, as he wiſhed not to reſt the matter on their own authority, who, though men of age and experience, were but of yeſterday, creatures of a day, compared with the age of thoſe who had gone before, and knew nothing, comparatively ſpeaking, becauſe their days upon earth were a ſhadow, ſo ſoon gone, and afforded leſs time for the improvement of knowledge, and opportunity for obſervation. But if he would be at the pains to enquire of theſe impartial judges, he would doubtleſs receive ſatisfaction. Note, (1.) The experience of God's ſaints of old, recorded in the word of truth, ſhould be diligently enquired into, and applied to our own caſe. (2.) We are not now, through mercy, left to precarious tradition, but have God's infallible oracles to guide us. (3.) There is a great deference due to age and experience, and in general, to conſult with theſe is to be wiſe.

2. He illuſtrates his main poſition by a variety of ſimilitudes. Can the ruſh grow up without mire? can the flag grow without water? theſe are their nouriſhment and ſupport. Whilſt it is yet in its greenneſs, ſeems moſt flouriſhing, and not cut down by the ſcythe, of its own accord it withereth before any other herb, or in their preſence, they looking on, and deriding its fall. So are the paths of all that forget God. Though planted in earth, and fed with the mire of ſenſual indulgencies, proſperous for a while, and flouriſhing; yet at beſt they are hollow and uſeleſs, and in a moment they wither under the blaſts of God's diſpleaſure; and the hypocrite's hope periſheth. Fair as their profeſſion ſeemed, and well-grounded as their hope appeared, a day of trial, like the ſcorching ſun, exhales the water, and their worldly ſupports being withdrawn, they apoſtatize, and periſh, whoſe hope ſhall be cut off in black deſpair, and whoſe truſt ſhall be as the ſpider's web, or houſe, ſpun from their own bowels of ſelf-ſufficient righteouſneſs, too weak to make a cable for hope's anchor, and too thin for garments to hide the ſhame of their nakedneſs; ſwept away without reſiſtance with the beſom of deſtruction, and affording no more ſhelter for the ſoul againſt divine juſtice, than the hole of the ſpider. He ſhall lean upon his houſe, his proſperity, his religious profeſſion, his moral duties, his external worſhip and ſervices, but it ſhall not ſtand; tottering on the ſandy foundation, it can yield the hypocrite no ſupport: he ſhall hold it faſt, cling to it, as the ſpider to her web, refuſing to be beat out of his vain confidence and ſelf-dependance, but it ſhall not endure; his proſperity ſhall fail, and his falſe profeſſions be detected. He is green before the ſun, like a flouriſhing tree, whilſt the world ſmiles; or in the eyes of men he appears eminently pious and bleſt, and his branch ſhooteth forth in his garden, ſtrong and vigorous, and fenced on every ſide. His roots are wrapped about the heap, ſtrike deep, and he ſeeth the place of ſtones, or houſe of ſtones, grows ſo high as to overlook the ſtatelieſt building. Such is the appearance often of proſperous iniquity, and ſo high the hypocrite lifts his head. If he deſtroy him from his place, as God aſſuredly will, then it ſhall deny him, ſaying, I have not ſeen thee: ſo utter will be the extirpation, that neither root nor branch will be left. Behold, this is the joy of his way, ſpoken ironically, this is what it comes to at laſt; and out of the earth ſhall others grow; either hypocrites, like them, who take no warning by their end; or good men, for whom the wealth of the ſinner is laid up. Note, (1.) Hypocriſy among profeſſors is the moſt common and deadly weed that grows in the church and garden of God upon earth. (2.) Forgetfulneſs of God is at the bottom of all iniquity. (3.) The ſelf-righteous formaliſt, fair as he may appear without, hath his ſpider's poiſon within; and though he prides himſelf in his works and duties, they will be found as unable to bear the ſeverity of God's juſtice, as the ſpider's web to bind Leviathan. (4.) Though worldly proſperity continue long with ſinners, even until death, yet then at leaſt the ax will be laid to the root of the tree, and all their hopes periſh.

20. Behold, [m] God will not caſt away a perfect man, neither will he † help the evil doers: 21. Till he fill thy mouth with laughing, and thy lips with ‡ rejoicing. 22. They that hate thee [n] ſhall be clothed with ſhame, and the dwelling-place of the wicked § ſhall
come to nought.

m Iſa. iii. 10.
† Heb. Take the ungodly by the hand.
‡ Heb. Shouting for joy.
n Pſ. cxxxii. 18.
§ Heb. Shall not be.

v. 20—22. Bildad here ſums up his diſcourſe, confident that every man would receive from God according to his work; but as he looked no farther than temporal rewards and puniſhments, and extended no view to eternal ones, his inference was utterly defective.

1. The perfect man, or ſincere, God will not caſt away: however great his diſtreſs might be for a ſeaſon, joy and gladneſs would again return, and peace and plenty crown his head, to the confuſion of all that hated him.

2. The evil doers God never will help out of the pit into which they are fallen, but their dwelling-place ſhall be covered with perpetual deſolations. Hence he puts the iſſue of the controverſy on the return of Job's proſperity; inſinuating, that the continuance of his afflictions, from which there now appeared no proſpect of deliverance, would be a full evidence of his inſincerity and iniquity. Note, (1.) Though here the ſame event cometh alike to all, it is a bleſſed and comfortable truth, that in eternity God's juſtice ſhall be vindicated in the everlaſting ſalvation of the righteous, and the eternal condemnation of the wicked. (2.) Till this great day comes, we may not conclude from men's outward circumſtances either God's love or hatred, but muſt wait patiently, to know the true characters of men, and judge nothing before the time, when every man ſhall receive according as his work is.

CHAP. IX.

We have here Job's anſwer to Bildad's diſcourſe, wherein he ſpeaks honourably of God, humbly of himſelf, and feelingly of his troubles. 1. He lays down the doctrine of God's juſtice, ver. 2. 2. He proves it, from his wiſdom, power, and ſovereignty, ver. 3—13. 3. He acknowledges himſelf unable to contend with God, ver. 14—21. 4. He maintains, that we cannot judge of men's characters by their outward condition, ver. 22—24. 5. He complains of the greatneſs of his troubles, the confuſion he was in, and the loſs he was at what to ſay or do, ver. 25—35.

1. THEN Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. I know it is
ſo of a truth: but how ſhould man [a] be juſt † with God? 3. If he will contend with him, he cannot anſwer him one of a thouſand. 4. [b] He is wiſe in heart, and mighty in ſtrength: [c] who hath hardned himſelf againſt him, and hath proſpered? 5. [d] Which removeth the mountains, and they know not; which overturneth them in his anger. 6. Which ſhaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble. 7.
Which commandeth the ſun, and it riſeth not: and ſealeth up the ſtars. 8. [e] Which alone ſpreadeth out
the heavens, and [f] treadeth upon the waves of the ſea.
9. [g] Which maketh Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and the chambers of the ſouth. 10. [h] Which doth great things paſt finding out, yea, and wonders without number. 11. Lo, [i] he goeth by me, and I ſee him not:
he paſſeth on alſo, but I perceive him not. 12. [k] Behold, he taketh away, who can ‡ hinder him? who will ſay

a Pſ. cxliii. 2.
† Or, before.
b Chap. xxxvi. 5.
c Iſa. xxvii. 4. 1 Cor. x. 22.
d Pſ. lxviii. 8. & cxiv. 4. Hab. iii. 6.
e Gen. i. 6. Pſ. civ. 2, 3.
f Hab. iii. 15. Mark vi. 48.
g Chap. xxxviii. 31. Amos v. 8.
h Chap. v. 9. Pſ. lxxi. 15. Rom. xi. 33.
i Chap. xxiii. 8, 9. & xxxv. 14.
k Iſa. xlv. 9. Jer. xviii. 6. Rom. ix. 20.
‡ Or, turn him away? or make him reſtore?

ſay unto him, What doſt thou? 13. If God will not withdraw his anger, [l] the § proud helpers do ſtoop under him.

[l] Chap. xxvi. 12.
§ Heb. Helpers of pride.

v. 1—13. Without a reflection on the inſinuations of his unkind friend, Job enters directly into the argument.

1. He admits God's juſtice as a ſure truth, nor dared to queſtion how unequal a match he was for his maker. Unable to ſtand before his bar, ſinful man could not anſwer to one of a thouſand of the charges God could bring againſt him, but muſt plead guilty; nor can he reſiſt the execution of his deſerved ſentence. Should he dare to plead for himſelf, God is wiſe in heart, and would detect the folly, and ſilence the ſophiſtry of his arguments: ſhould he dare to reſiſt, God is mighty in power, yea, almighty to put his ſentence in force, and every ſtruggle is vain; for who ever hardened himſelf againſt him, in ſelf-juſtification, or impious oppoſition, and proſpered? Note, (1.) The knowledge of our own ſinfulneſs, and particularly of our fallen nature, will ſilence all ſelf-dependance, and bring us before God ſpeechleſs with guilt, to look up for a better righteouſneſs than our own, in order to juſtification unto life. (2.) Though wicked men and devils harden themſelves in rebellion againſt God, as if he was weak to puniſh them, or negligent about their iniquity, a few ſhort days will detect their folly, and lay them trembling under the rod of judgment in the belly of hell.

2. He expatiates on the glorious evidences of God's wiſdom and power: ſo far was he from curſing God, he could, in the midſt of his pains, delight to dwell on the contemplation of his divine perfections. [1.] His power, how amazing! At his word the mountains leap from their rooted baſes, and they know not whither they are hurled: if his anger burns, they are overturned as the mole-hill. Shook by his arm, earth's looſened pillars tremble, and all the cumberous load thereon ſuſtained ſhakes like the leaf, and is as eaſily removed. The ſun, that roſe in glory at his word, ſhall, at his will, ſink back into primæval darkneſs, or ſtanding ſtill in its courſe, withdraw from one hemiſphere the light of day. Black with thick tempeſts, the louring ſky veils the bright ſtars, and their light is ſealed up in darkneſs. Such works of wonder God hath wrought, when in the deluge the powers of earth and heaven were ſhaken; and ſuch, whenever he pleaſes, he can ſtill repeat, to ſcourge guilty mortals, and make his power to be known. [2.] His wiſdom, how great! He alone ſpread over us the heavens with ſuch admirable contrivance, and the waves of the ſea beneath his feet retire to their appointed deep: yea, though they lift high their curling heads, their boundary is fixed, which they cannot paſs. Each conſtellation moves in its appointed order, and the ſouthern ſtars, unſeen by us in this hemiſphere, riſe and ſet in regular ſucceſſion, as we return to, and go forth from, our chambers. Note, The heavens are an expanded volume, the ſtars legible characters, where man ſhould read the wiſdom, power, and glory of God. [3.] His agency is inviſible, and his works unſearchable. We cannot comprehend their number, nor fathom his myſterious ways. He paſſes by us, and we ſee him not. The effects of his wiſdom and power are evident, whilſt himſelf, his counſels, his agency, are hid and ſecret. [4.] His ſovereignty is uncontroulable. Whatever he pleaſes, he doth, in the hoſts of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth. If he take away every gift he had beſtowed, who can hinder him, or make him reſtore it again? who dares plead with him, and ſay, What doſt thou? may he not do what he will with his own? [5.] His anger is terrible: if God will not withdraw it, the proud helpers, or the helpers of pride, the ſtouteſt ſinner, the moſt exalted of the ſons of pride, can neither ſupport themſelves, nor afford others the leaſt ſuccour: they do ſtoop under him, ſinking down to the earth in affliction, or lower, cruſhed into hell under the inſupportable load of his wrath. Note, How ſhould we then fear to offend him, if ſuch is the power of his anger?

14. [m] How much leſs ſhall I anſwer him, and chooſe out my words to reaſon with him? 15. Whom, though I were righteous, [n] yet would I not anſwer, but I would make ſupplication to my judge. 16. If I had called, and he had anſwered me; yet would I not believe that he had hearkned unto my voice. 17. For he breaketh me with a tempeſt, and multiplieth my wounds [o] without cauſe. 18. He will not ſuffer me to take my breath, but [p] filleth me with bitterneſs. 19. If I ſpeak of ſtrength, lo, he is ſtrong, and if of judgment, who ſhall ſet me a time to plead? 20. If I juſtify myſelf, mine own mouth ſhall condemn me: if I ſay, I am perfect, it ſhall alſo prove me perverſe. 21. † Though I were perfect, yet would I not know my ſoul: I would deſpiſe my life.

[m] Chap. xl. 5.
[n] Chap. x. 5. Rom. iii. 19. 1 Cor. iv. 4.
[o] Chap. ii. 3. & xxxiv. 6.
[p] Lam. iii. 15.
† Or, I perfect? if I ſaid ſo, I ſhould not know my ſoul.

v. 14—21. Job applies to his own caſe the views of God's perfections he had deſcribed, as a ground of ſelf-abaſement before him. However he could maintain his cauſe before man, as in no wiſe a hypocrite, as he was accuſed, he could not vindicate himſelf before God, as free from ſin.

1. He owns his inability to ſtand the conteſt with God: He is too wiſe for man to plead with him; of purer eyes, than that ſinful man ſhould preſume to appear righteous before him; too mighty to be reſiſted; and from his judgment no appeal can lie to any ſuperior court, v. 19. Note, There is no ſtanding before God on the footing of our own deſerts. In a covenant of grace, not of works, can the ſinner alone be juſtified. Therefore,

2. However righteous he was as a magiſtrate, and ſincere in profeſſion as a good man, he reſolves rather to cry for mercy, than to plead his merits, v. 15. not that he expected to be heard for his prayer's ſake, but, if anſwered, he ſhould aſcribe it ſolely to God's rich grace, and not to the worth of his own ſupplications, v. 16. Note, Mercy, not deſert, muſt be our plea; nor can our beſt prayers make God our debtor: nay, ſo much infirmity is mixed with them, that we are undone, if he pardons not the iniquity of our holy things.

3. Job had ſpoken right things hitherto, but his infirmity now appears in the concluſion he draws, that whilſt his afflictions were not removed, his prayers could not be anſwered; and tho' acknowledging himſelf a ſinner, he ſeems to think his ſufferings exceeded his deſerts. He breaketh me with a tempeſt of afflictions, and multiplieth my wounds without cauſe, any ſuch cauſe at leaſt as his cenſorious friends had ſuggeſted. He will not ſuffer me to take my breath, I can ſcarce pray or ſpeak, through the violence of my diſeaſe; but he filleth me with bitterneſs. Note, We may not judge our prayers rejected, becauſe our ſufferings remain: though we cannot now ſee why God thus dealeth with us, we ſhall be convinced by and by, that the greateſt kindneſs God could do us, was the continuance of our affliction.

4. He repeats his renunciation of ſelf-juſtification before God: the attempt would prove his perverſeneſs. If he ſaid he was perfect, he ſhould deceive himſelf: nay, though he were, he ſhould not dare to inſiſt upon it before God, in whoſe preſence all creature-perfection is imperfection; or, as the words may be rendered, I perfect? no; if I entertained ſuch an imagination, I ſhould not know my ſoul, ſhould prove myſelf ignorant of my own heart: I would deſpiſe my life, not think it worth pleading for; or, though perfect, wiſh for its continuance here below. Note, (1.) Conceit of ſinleſs perfection can only ariſe from ignorance of ourſelves, of God, and of the ſpirituality of his law. (2.) Self-juſtifiers will out of their own mouth be condemned.

22. This is one thing, therefore I ſaid it, [q] he deſtroyeth the perfect and the wicked. 23. If the ſcourge ſlay ſuddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent. 24. The earth is given into the hand of the wicked; [r] he covereth the faces of the judges thereof; if not, where and who is he?

[q] Eccleſ. ix. 2. Ezek. xxi. 3.
[r] Jer. 14. 4.

v. 22—24. The grand point in diſpute is, Whether the wicked are always miſerable, and the innocent proſperous. This his friends affirm, he as reſolutely denies. This is one thing, ſingular as it may appear to you, yet certain and ſure, and which from the fulleſt conviction I advance, God deſtroyeth the righteous and the wicked; eternally indeed the righteous cannot periſh, and ſometimes there may have been peculiar interpoſitions of God in their behalf; but, in general, they fall in the promiſcuous ruin, when deſolating judgments ariſe; and if the ſcourge ſlay ſuddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent. Not that God delights in the miſeries of his people, but if he ſeems unconcerned for their ſufferings, or takes even pleaſure in them, 'tis becauſe he intends their trials for the increaſe of their graces, and the brightning their crown. The earth, in general, is given into the hand of the wicked; they proſper, have dominion, and bear the ſway. He covereth the faces of the judges thereof; gives them up to blindneſs of heart, and leaves them to execute their unrighteous decrees, to the oppreſſion of the innocent: if not, if this be not fact and truth, where and who is he that can confute me? or, if this be not God's doing, whoſe is it? He hath the government of the world, and theſe things cannot be done but by his permiſſion: ſufferings therefore are no proof of his anger, nor proſperity, of his favour. Note, (1.) Though the righteous here ſuffer with the wicked, they ſuffer not as the wicked; their afflictions are merciful corrections, not angry judgments, and the end of them not their ruin, but more abundant glory. (2.) It muſt ſilence our complaints under oppreſſion, and ſuppreſs all envy at the proſperity of the wicked, that it is God's doing, permitted for wiſe ends, which, though we know not now, we ſhall know hereafter.

25. Now [s] my days are ſwifter than a poſt: they flee away, they ſee no good. 26. They are paſſed away as the † ſwift ſhips: [t] as the eagle that haſteth to the prey. 27. [u] If I ſay, I will forget my complaint, I will leave off

[s] Chap. vii. 6.
† Heb. Ships of deſire.
[t] Hab. i. 8.
[u] Chap. vii. 13.

off my heavineſs, and comfort myſelf : 28. [x] I am afraid of all my ſorrows, I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent. 29. If I be wicked, why then labour I in vain ? 30. [y] If I waſh myſelf with ſnow-water, and make my hands never ſo clean ; 31. Yet ſhalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes ſhall ‡ abhor me. 32. For [z] he is not a man, as I am, that I ſhould anſwer him, and we ſhould come together in judgment : 33. Neither is there any ‖ days-man betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both. 34.
[a] Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear terrify me. 35. Then would I ſpeak, and not fear him ; † but it is not ſo with me.

[x] Pſ. cxix. 120.
[y] Jer. ii.22.
‡ Or, make me to be abhorred.
[z] Eccleſ. vi. 10. Iſa. xlv. 9. Jer. xlix. 19. Rom. ix. 20.
‖ Or, alike, or umpire, or arbitrator.
[a] Chap. xiii. 21. & xxxiii. 7.
† Heb. But I am not ſo with myſelf.

v. 25—35. His complaints mingle with his arguments.

1. He bewails his paſt proſperity fled, his preſent ſorrows incurable. Swifter than a poſt on full ſpeed his days of joys were hurried by, and now are ſucceeded by days of miſery, which made the former forgotten, as if they had never been : they are gone, like ſhips that ſkim before the wind, and, as if labouring for expreſſion to expreſs their velocity, fled as the eagle, when darting on his prey. In vain he ſought to recover a glimpſe of former comfort, or to compoſe himſelf under preſent afflictions ; If I ſay, I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heavineſs, and comfort myſelf, the attempt were fruitleſs ; ſorrows followed him cloſe as his ſhadow, and he feared they would overwhelm him at laſt. Note, (1.) Time is rapid, our day expiring, all temporal good tranſitory ; let us be wiſe then to redeem it, that when the preſent moment is loſt in eternity, as the drop in the boundleſs ocean, our happy portion there may be ſecured. (2.) It is eaſier to know we ought to ſubmit, and to bid the miſerable forget their complaints, than to exerciſe that ſilent reſignation, which is ſo evidently our bounden duty.

2. He deſpairs of being able to plead with God : either it is the language of humility, expreſſive of his ſinfulneſs and worthleſſneſs, or of his impatience, and hard thoughts of God, as if he had cleanſed his hands in vain. I know thou wilt not hold me innocent, I begin to deſpair of recovery, and expect, in the continuance of my afflictions, to be treated as if I be wicked, which will be believed without doubt if I periſh in my ſuffering. Why then labour I in vain, to clear myſelf, when the calamities I ſuffer will plead againſt me, in the eyes of the world, ſtronger than any arguments I can urge will vindicate me. If I waſh myſelf with ſnow-water, and make my hands never ſo clean, uſe every effort to maintain my innocence, and ſhew my converſation never ſo blameleſs, thou ſhalt plunge me in the ditch of deep afflictions, and my own cloaths ſhall abhor me ; my deareſt friends will conſtrue my caſe abominable, and my ſufferings will make me a burden to myſelf. Or theſe words may alſo expreſs his ſenſe of ſin ; I acknowledge my guilt, I am wicked, though not as my friends ſuggeſt, yet ſo as to be unable to bear the ſeverity of thy judgment ; nor can I cleanſe myſelf from my ſins by any attempts of my own ; though I try every expedient, I ſhould ſtill be loathſome, as one plunged in the mire, and my beſt righteouſneſs would be like his filthy rags. Note, (1.) The beſt of men have the loweſt thoughts of their own goodneſs. (2.) The more a ſinner goeth about to eſtabliſh his own righteouſneſs, inſtead of ſubmitting to the righteouſneſs of God, the more deſperate his caſe grows. (3.) Though we may be never ſo clean from the groſſer pollutions that are in the world thro' luſt, there is corruption enough in every man's heart, to make him loathſome in the eyes of a holy God.

3. He complains of the unequal conteſt. He is not a man, as I am ; the potſherds may ſtrive with the potſherds of the earth, but impoſſible it is, that I, a worm, ſhould anſwer him, the glorious and infinite God, and that we ſhould come together to judgment, or alike, on equal terms. He can have no ſuperior, nor is there any court where the cauſe can be tried ; neither is there any days-man, or arbitrator, to whom the cauſe can be referred, and by whoſe deciſions we muſt abide. Or it may be rendered, O that there were a mediator, that might lay his hand upon us both, ſo as effectually to ſettle and adjuſt the diſpute. Note, The days-man Job wanted, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt appears to be : his hand is laid on both, to bring an offended God near in mercy to ſinful man, and to incline man, a ſinner, to return in humiliation to a pardoning God.

4. He wiſhes for a ſhort reſpite, that he might ſpeak for himſelf. Let him take his rod away from me, of chaſtiſement that oppreſſed him, and let not his fear terrify me, that dread of his awful majeſty which now overwhelmed him ; then would I ſpeak, in prayer and ſupplication, or plead for himſelf, and not fear him, as in his preſent ſtate he did, God appearing as an enemy ; or perhaps, daring as the challenge was, he would then maintain his cauſe without fear, and, though a ſinner confeſſed, yet reaſon with him on the exceeding greatneſs of his ſufferings ; but it is not ſo with me, I am diſabled by his terrors to ſpeak before him, and I have no days-man ; or, I am not ſo with myſelf, ſo maſter of himſelf, as to be able, in his diſordered ſtate, to maintain his cauſe aright. Note, Even truly good men, under ſore trials, have ſpoken unadviſedly with their lips ; therefore we need ever pray, that we may not be led into temptation.

CHAP. X.

Job owns that he is full of confuſion, ver. 15. and as he is, ſo is his diſcourſe. 1. He complains of his hardſhips, ver. 1—7. And then comforts himſelf that he was in the hand of the God that made him, ver. 8—13. 2. He complains again of the ſeverity of God's dealings with him. ver. 14—17. and then comforts himſelf, that death would put an end to his troubles, ver. 18—22.

1. MY ſoul is [a] weary of my life, I will leave my complaint upon myſelf ; I will ſpeak in the bitterneſs of my ſoul. 2. I will ſay unto God, Do not condemn me ; ſhew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me. 3. Is it good unto thee, that thou ſhouldſt oppreſs
? that thou ſhouldſt deſpiſe [b] the work of thine hands, and ſhine upon the counſel of the wicked ? 4.
Haſt thou eyes of fleſh ? or [c] ſeeſt thou as man ſeeth ?
5. Are thy days as the days of man ? are thy years as man's days, 6. That thou enquireſt after mine iniquity, and ſearcheſt after my ſin ? 7. Thou knoweſt that [d] I am not wicked, and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand.

[a] 1 Kings xix. 4. Chap. vii. 16.
[b] Pſal. cxxxviii. 8.
[c] 1 Sam. xvi. 7.
[d] Pſ. xxvi.4.

v. 1—7. Though in general Job acknowledged himſelf a ſinner, and unable to ſtand the ſeverity of God's judgment, yet, when he conſidered his own integrity in general, and the uncommon weight of his afflictions, he ſeemed to feel an argument for impatient complaint, and charges God fooliſhly.

1. He repeats his paſſionate wiſh for death ; My ſoul is weary of my life, burdened with afflictions, and longing to be rid of them in the grave. I will leave my complaint upon myſelf ; I muſt complain, though I lay the blame on myſelf : ſuch anguiſh cannot be ſuppreſſed, I will ſpeak in the bitterneſs of my ſoul. Note, To be weary of life before God ſends a diſcharge, is to be unfaithful to the poſt he hath given us to maintain.

2. He reſolves to enquire of God the cauſe of his ſufferings. I will ſay unto God, Do not condemn me, or account me wicked, deal with him as if he really was ſuch as his friends ſuggeſted, and who, whilſt his troubles continued, would be confirmed in their ſuſpicions. Shew me wherefore thou contendeſt with me ; conſcious he was not of having wilfully offended, and therefore fain would know the deſign God propoſed in the heavineſs and continuance of his calamities. Note, (1.) It becomes us in ſuffering times to enquire into their cauſe, that we may anſwer their end. Tho' we may know nothing of ourſelves, particularly to condemn us, he that judgeth us is the Lord, who ſees what we overlook, and whoſe ways and thoughts are as much above ours, as the heaven is higher than the earth. (2.) When we ſuffer the rod of correction, we need eſpecially pray to be ſaved from the condemnation of ſin. Every other burden is ſupportable, that intolerable.

3. He preſumes to expoſtulate with God on his caſe. Is it good unto thee, that thou ſhouldſt oppreſs ? can it be agreeable to thy perfections to take pleaſure in tormenting me ? that thou ſhouldſt deſpiſe the work of thine hands, and be indifferent to my ſorrows, though thy creature by nature, by grace thy ſervant too ? and ſhine upon the counſel of the wicked, proſper their devices againſt the righteous, or, by the continuance of his afflictions, ſeem to approve the hard cenſures of the world and his friends. Haſt thou eyes of fleſh ? or ſeeſt thou as man ſeeth ? Looking no farther than outward appearances, they condemn me ; wilt thou do like them, who ſeeſt the ſecrets of the heart, and knoweſt my innocence ? or doſt thou regard me with an evil eye, envying my proſperity, as the world did ? Are thy days as the days of man, whoſe life is ſhort, his purpoſes mutable, and his reſearches after truth, through the imperfection of his faculties, tedious ? that thou enquireſt after mine iniquity, and ſearcheſt after my ſin ? continuing his anguiſh, as if to draw out of him a confeſſion of his guilt, as from a perſon under the torture ; which ſeemed to Job ſevere and needleſs, perſuaded of God's all-ſeeing eye, and unerring wiſdom, and aſſured of his own uprightneſs before him. Thou knoweſt that I am not wicked, chargeable with open or allowed iniquity, nor hypocritical in my profeſſions ; and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand. No power could reſcue him from God's hand, and therefore he need not be bound with theſe cords of affliction, as if to prevent his eſcape. Note, (1.) It is difficult under extraordinary troubles to be ſilent, and not impeach, by murmuring, God's goodneſs or his righteouſneſs. (2.) The ſenſe of God's omniſcience ſhould ever fill our minds with reverence and godly fear before him. Who will not dread the ſin that darkneſs promiſes to cover, when God's eye is there? (3.) Reſiſtance againſt God is vain; to ſtruggle againſt his corrections, is but to torment our own ſouls.

8. [e] Thine hands have † made me, and faſhioned me together round about; yet thou doſt deſtroy me. 9. Remember, I beſeech thee, that thou haſt made me [f] as the clay, and wilt thou bring me into duſt again? 10. [g] Haſt thou not poured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheeſe? 11. Thou haſt clothed me with ſkin and fleſh, and haſt ‡ fenced me with bones and ſinews. 12. Thou haſt granted me life and favour, and thy viſitation hath preſerved my ſpirit. 13. And theſe things haſt thou hid in thine heart: I know that this is with thee.

[e] Pſal. cxix. 73.
† Heb. Took pains about me.
[f] 2 Cor. v. 1.
[g] Pſal. cxxxix. 14, &c.
‡ Heb. Hedged.

v. 8—13. Having called himſelf the work of God's hands, ver. 3. he here enlarges on that conſideration; begs God to remember his own paſt favours and his frailty, as a reaſon againſt the ſeverity of thoſe ſufferings which threatned to deſtroy him. Thine hands have made me and faſhioned me together round about, yet thou doſt deſtroy me, for under theſe troubles I muſt quickly ſink. Remember, I beſeech thee, that thou haſt made me as the clay, thou art my potter, I am moulded at thy will, brittle as the clay, remember it, for I cannot ſtand under ſuch ſtrokes of correction, but muſt be broken to pieces. And wilt thou bring me to the duſt again? delight to make and unmake me, give me a momentary exiſtence, only to bring me to a miſerable end? eſpecially after being ſo fearfully and wonderfully made. Haſt thou not poured me out as milk, and curdled me as cheeſe? when at my conception in the womb the embryo firſt appeared: thou haſt clothed me with ſkin and fleſh, and fenced me with bones and ſinews, carried on the formation of my body till I breathed vital air: thou haſt granted me life, and with it numberleſs mercies and favour, thy gifts of nature, and the better portion of thy grace: and thy viſitation hath preſerved my ſpirit, kept me long amidſt the dangers that ſurrounded me, and ſupported and preſerved the life thou didſt beſtow; and theſe things haſt thou hid in thine heart; amidſt all the apparent mercies in thy ſecret counſels lay concealed the miſeries to which I was ordained. I know that this is with thee, thou alone canſt account for the reaſons of thy conduct, which to me appears ſtrange and myſterious, or I know that this was thy eternal purpoſe thus to afflict me. Note, (1.) The curious ſtructure and formation of the human body, ſhould lead us to an admiration of the hand that made it. (2.) All our mercies of nature, providence, and grace, are derived from God, and he ſhould be acknowledged by us in all with thankfulneſs, and the grateful return made to him in bounden love and ſervice. (3.) Though ſometimes we cannot reconcile God's former dealings or his promiſes with our preſent afflictive diſpenſation, he will appear at laſt righteous in his word, and juſt in all his works.

14. If I ſin, then [h] thou markeſt me, and thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity. 15. [i] If I be wicked, woe unto me; and [k] if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head: I am full of confuſion, therefore [l] ſee thou mine affliction. 16. For it increaſeth: [m] thou hunteſt me as a fierce lion; and again thou ſheweſt thyſelf marvellous upon me. 17. Thou reneweſt † thy witneſſes againſt me, and increaſeſt thine indignation upon me: changes and war are againſt me. 18. [n] Wherefore then haſt thou brought me forth out of the womb? O that I had given up the ghoſt, and no eye had ſeen me! 19. I ſhould have been as though I had not been, I ſhould have been carried from the womb to the grave. 20. [o] Are not my days few? ceaſe then, and [p] let me alone, that I may take comfort a little: 21. Before I go whence I ſhall not return, even to [q] the land of darkneſs, and [r] the ſhadow of death; 22. A land of darkneſs, as darkneſs itſelf, and of the ſhadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkneſs.

[h] Pſal. cxxxix. 1.
[i] Iſa. iii. 11.
[k] Chap. ix. 20, 21.
[l] Exod. iii. 7.
[m] Iſa. xxxviii. 13. Lam. iii. 10.
† i. e. Thy plagues.
[n] Chap. iii. 11.
[o] Ibid. vii. 6. & viii. 9.
[p] Chap. vii. 16. Pſal. xxxix. 13.
[q] Pſal. lxxxviii.
[r] Ibid. xxiii. 4.

v. 14—22. The more Job went on to complain, the warmer his words grow.

1. He reflects upon the ſeverity of God's enquiry, and the rigour of his ſentence. If he took one falſe ſtep, it was marked as if God's eye was over him for evil, and the continuance of his trouble he regarded as the ſign his iniquity was unpardoned. He acknowledges if he were wicked, that then he could expect nothing but woe; and though righteous, as he ſeemed to be, conſcious he was he would not, or dared not lift up his head before the holy majeſty of heaven. Full of confuſion through his anguiſh, he knew ſcarce what or how to ſpeak, and therefore begs God to look upon his affliction in mercy, before it quite overwhelmed it; for inſtead of abating, the waters of trouble ſwelled daily higher: he was hunted with afflictions, as the fierce lion purſues his prey; and theſe ſo repeated and ſtrange, that he was an aſtoniſhment to others, and a wonder to himſelf. Every day freſh calamities, as new evidences, aroſe to teſtify his guilt, and the increaſing indignation againſt him; his changes were only from evil to worſe, and war from heaven, earth, and hell ſeemed to aſſault him. Note, (1.) If God be ſtrict to mark what is amiſs, who may abide it? (2.) Wo to the wicked! whether proſperity or adverſity attend them here, miſery, intolerable as eternal, muſt be their portion hereafter. (3.) Though afflictions may be the ſtrokes of God's indignation, yet all the fruit of them is to take away our ſin. (4.) If a child of God ſeem ſunk in uncommon calamities, let him not deſpair; though the diſpenſation is grievous, it is for the trial of his faith. (5.) Reflections upon God as hard and ſevere, are very ſinful, and ſhow an unhumbled ſpirit.

2. He renews his impatient deſire of death; begs at leaſt that God would give him ſome ſhort reſpite from his afflictions before he dropped into the grave. He expoſtulates with God, why he ſo unkindly drew him into a world ſo miſerable, v. 18. wiſhes as before, chap. iii. 11. to have died from the womb, that no eye might have ſeen his miſery, and that he might have departed as one that had never been. He urges the ſhortneſs of his days, as a plea for ſome moment's comfort, before death ſhould cloſe his eyes in darkneſs, and lay him in the grave, whence there could be no return to earth again; where no ſucceſſion of days and years cheared the melancholy ſcene, no diſtinction of age, ſex, or ſtation appeared, no beam of light ever pierced the dreadful gloom, but ſhadows of death, dark and diſmal, were perpetually extended over it. Note, (1.) Every moment's reſpite and eaſe we enjoy here, ſhould be regarded as a mercy from God. (2.) The ſhorter our days are, the more we need to improve them. (3.) The moment God allots us here, is in order to prepare for our great change. (4.) The grave to ſenſe affords a very melancholy proſpect; but to the righteous there ariſeth up light in the darkneſs, and faith can look thro' the thick cloud, and behold thoſe glories beyond, in proſpect of which we can ſay, though I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, I will fear no evil.

CHAP. XI.

Zophar here takes up the argument, and applies not balm, but corroſives to Job's bleeding wounds. 1. He condemns Job, as proud and falſe in juſtifying himſelf, ver. 1—4. 2. He begs God to convince him, ver. 5. (1.) Of his unerring wiſdom, and inviolable juſtice, ver. 6. (2.) Of his unſearchable perfections, ver. 7—9. 3. Of his inconteſtable ſovereignty, and uncontroulable power, ver. 10. 4. Of the cognizance he takes of the children of men, ver. 11, 12. (3.) He aſſures him, that upon his repentance and reformation, ver. 13, 14. God would reſtore him to his former proſperity and ſafety, ver. 15—19. But if he were wicked, it was in vain to expect it, ver. 20.

1. THEN anſwered Zophar the Naamathite, and ſaid, 2. Should not the multitude of words be anſwered? and ſhould † a man full of talk be juſtified? 3. Should thy lies make men hold their peace? and when thou mockeſt, ſhall no man make thee aſhamed? 4. For [a] thou haſt ſaid, My doctrine is pure, and [b] I am clean in thine eyes. 5. But, O that God would ſpeak, and open his lips againſt thee; 6. And that he would ſhew thee the ſecrets of wiſdom, that they are double to that which is! know therefore, that [c] God exacteth of thee leſs than thine iniquity deſerveth.

† Heb. A man of lips.
[a] Chap. vi. 30.
[b] Ibid. x. 7.
[c] Ezra ix. 13.

v. 1—6. With eyes ſparkling with indignation, at ſeeing all the former arguments ſlighted and ineffectual, Zophar the third replies,

1. He opens with much inſolence and abuſe. Far from admitting any thing of Job's vindication of himſelf to be either true or pertinent, he treats him as a mere talkative, that pretended by a multitude of words to make a ſhew of wiſdom; gives the lie to his aſſertions of his integrity, and brands him as mocking God in ſuch appeals to his omniſcience. Note, (1.) Controverſy uſually produces unbecoming warmth, but in religious controverſy to be abuſive and paſſionate, is, though too common, eſpecially indecent and ſinful. (2.) When there is a diſpoſition to find fault, the moſt inoffenſive words, the moſt reaſonable diſcourſe, will afford a handle for malevolence. (3.) We need not count it ſtrange to be treated unmercifully, when we ſee ſo good a man thus abuſed by his neareſt friends. (4.) Though ſome may be ſo rude as to give us the lie, and others ſo wicked as to brand thoſe with meanneſs, who do not ſhew their reſentment, the grace of God teaches a different leſſon, and bids us overcome evil with good.

2. Zophar had called Job liar, and lo! his firſt charge againſt him appears a falſhood; ſo ſure it is, that the firſt to give the lie is uſually the moſt guilty, and abuſe a ſad ſymptom of a bad cauſe. Job had maintained his integrity; but had acknowledged withal, that though no hypocrite, or wicked man, he had ſin in him, which in God's ſight would condemn him. Zophar interprets all his pleas of ſincerity as pretences to perfection:

fection: ſo eaſy it is by a wrong conſtruction of our meaning, to draw inferences utterly oppoſite to our ſentiments.

3. He wiſhes God to take up the controverſy, ſince their arguments ſeemed fruitleſs, concluding that he muſt be on their ſide; though alas! they who moſt ſolemnly appeal to him, are often very far from being moſt in the right. Of two things Zophar wiſhed God to convince Job, 1. The unſearchable depths of his wiſdom, that they are double to that which is in man, who ſhews only his own weakneſs and wickedneſs, when he attempts to arraign what he cannot comprehend. 2. The unexceptionable equity of his procedure, far from exacting more than our iniquity deſerves, his chaſtiſements are leſs than our provocations. Note, (1.) Men may ſpeak great truths, though they may draw very wrong inferences from them. (2.) A ſenſe of our own blindneſs ſhould ever make us ſilent under God's afflictive diſpenſations; though we know not how, there is wiſdom, yea and mercy in them. (3.) It is certain that every man, whilſt he is out of hell, hath leſs than his iniquities deſerve; and cauſe therefore to praiſe God for his mercy, and chearfully to ſubmit to whatever burden is laid upon him.

7. [d] Canſt thou by ſearching find out God? canſt thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? 8. It is as high as heaven, what canſt thou do? deeper than hell, what canſt thou know? 9. The meaſure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the ſea. 10. If he cut off, and ſhut up, or gather together, then [e] who can hinder him? 11. For he knoweth vain men: he ſeeth wickedneſs alſo; will he not then conſider it? 12. For [f] vain man would be wiſe, [g] though man be born like a wild aſs's colt.

[d] Eccleſ. iii. 11. Rom. xi. 35.
[e] Chap. ix. 12.
[f] Rom. i. 22.
[g] Pſal. lxxiii. 22. Eccleſ. iii. 18.

v. 7—12. In our preſent fallen ſtate we can comprehend ſo little, either of the Divine perfections or providence, that to pretend to find fault with them, were the arrogance of folly. Zophar here,

1. Diſplays God's incomprehenſibility, ſovereignty, and omniſcience, as arguments to ſilence Job's plea before him. His infinite perfections, v. 7—9. are beyond our moſt enlarged and perſevering reſearches; the more we labour to comprehend of his immenſity, eternity, &c. the more we ſhall be loſt in the contemplation, and forced to cry, O the depth, &c. Rom. xi. 33. His ſovereignty, v. 10. who ſhall controul: if he cut off by death and judgments, or make a change in his dealings with any perſon or family, as in Job's caſe; yea, ſhould he reduce to its primitive nothing the whole created univerſe, who can ſay unto him, what doſt thou? not that God merely to diſplay his ſovereignty makes his creatures miſerable: infinite wiſdom and juſtice mark all his ways, v. 11. He knoweth vain men, he ſeeth wickedneſs; however cloſely covered or concealed, he detects the vain pretence; Will he not then conſider it? yes, and viſit ſuch perſons with the judgments they have provoked. Note, (1.) Every view of the Divine perfections ſhould humble us before God. (2.) From him nothing is hid or ſecret: how ſhould the conſideration engage our watchfulneſs againſt the moſt ſecret deſire of evil within our hearts?

2. He repreſents man as vain in his imaginations, affecting to be wiſe, though born ſtupid as the wild aſs's colt, and like it ſtubborn and untractable. Note, (1.) Man is by nature proud, and wiſe in his own conceits; ever ſince the firſt man, by affecting forbidden wiſdom, fell, all his poſterity have not ceaſed to imitate his ſin. (2.) Pride ever makes a man intractable; they who have a high opinion of themſelves, are uſually above advice.

13. If [h] thou prepare thine heart, and [i] ſtretch out thine hands towards him; 14. If [k] iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away, and let not wickedneſs dwell in thy tabernacles. 15. For then [l] ſhalt thou lift up thy face without ſpot, yea, [m] thou ſhalt be ſtedfaſt, and ſhalt not fear: 16. Becauſe [n] thou ſhalt forget thy miſery, and remember it as waters that paſs away: 17. And thine age [o] ſhall † be clearer than the noon day: thou ſhalt ſhine forth, thou ſhalt be as the morning. 18. And thou ſhalt be ſecure, becauſe there is hope; yea, thou ſhalt dig about thee, and [p] thou ſhalt take thy reſt in ſafety. 19. Alſo thou ſhalt lie down, and none ſhall make thee afraid; yea, many ſhall make ſuit unto thee. 20. But [q] the eyes of the wicked ſhall fail, and ‡ they ſhall not eſcape, and [r] their hope ſhall be as ‖ the giving up of the ghoſt.

[h] Chap. v. 8. & xxii. 21.
[i] Pſal. cxliii. 6.
[k] 1 Tim. ii. 8.
[l] Chap. xxii. 26. Pſal. cxx. 6.
[m] 1 John iii. 21.
[n] Iſa. lxv. 16.
[o] Pſal. xxxvii. 6. & cxii. 4. Iſa. lviii. 8.
† Or riſe above.
[p] Lev. xxvi. 5, 6. Pſal. iv. 8. Prov. iii. 24.
[q] Lev. xxvi. 16.
‡ Heb. Flight ſhall periſh from them. Amos ii. 14. & ix. 1.
[r] Chap. viii. 14. & xviii. 14.
‖ Or a puff of breath.

v. 13—20. Zophar concludes his ſpeech with ſound advice, but evidently intimates his ſenſe of Job's afflictions, as proceeding from his ſecret ſins, which, if not parted with, muſt provoke his utter ruin.

1. His advice is, to prepare his heart by ſerious reflection, and ſetting before himſelf the humbling views of his ſin, to ſtretch out his hands in penitent prayer for mercy, to put away iniquity from his hand, allowed ſin, or the gains of oppreſſion and fraud, and to purge out wickedneſs from his tabernacles, which he ſeems to intimate he had allowed, or connived at in his family. Note, (1.) They who deſire to return to God's favour, muſt reſtore their ill gotten gains, however painful and ſhameful ſuch reſtitution may be. (2.) The ſins of his houſhold are chargeable on the negligent maſter, and God will require them at his hands.

2. He ſupports his counſel by a variety of conſiderations evidencing the comfort which would accrue to him from following it; For then ſhalt thou lift up thy face without ſpot before God and man, who will regard him with favour, thou ſhalt be ſtedfaſt, fixed in proſperity, and ſhalt not fear ſuch awful changes, as of late he had beheld. Becauſe thou ſhalt forget thy miſery, the comforts reſtored will obliterate the remembrance of paſt calamities, and remember it as waters that paſs away; if they are reflected upon, they vaniſh as the brook dried up in ſummer; or, like the flood of Noah, he may be aſſured that they ſhall no more return: and thine age ſhall be clearer than the noon day, thou ſhalt ſhine forth, thou ſhalt be as the morning; though clouds and darkneſs of affliction had covered him, theſe in his age ſhould be diſpelled, comfort and joy, as the light at noon, chear his future day, and his evening ſun ſhine bright as the ſplendor of the morning. And thou ſhalt be ſecure from future calamity, becauſe there is hope of God's returning favour. Yea, thou ſhalt dig about thee, and fix a durable manſion, or find wells of water for his cattle, or as in entrenchment ſecured; and thou ſhalt take thy reſt in ſafety, no danger being near to terrify or diſturb: thou ſhalt lie down, and none ſhall make thee afraid; yea, many ſhall make ſuit to thee, thou ſhalt be more honoured and courted, than now thou art ſlighted and deſpiſed. Note, (1.) When we have returned to God in faith and humble prayer, we may be confident of his favour. (2.) If God eſtabliſhes us, we ſhall not fail, nor need fear what all the powers of evil can do againſt us. (3.) Though the faithful here below, by temptation or affliction, may ſuffer a ſhort eclipſe, the day is near when they will ſhine without ſpot, brighter than the ſun for ever and ever. (4.) If we caſt the anchor of hope on the ſure bottom of God's faithfulneſs, no ſtorms can hurt or endanger our ſecurity.

3. He deſcribes the miſerable end of the ungodly: The eyes of the wicked ſhall fail, whilſt looking after relief in vain, and they ſhall not eſcape from the hand of God's judgments, and their hope ſhall be deſperate, and the diſappointment terrible, as the giving up the ghoſt. And ſuch he ſeems to inſinuate would be Job's caſe, if he rejected the admonitions of his friends; and whilſt his ſins remained, continued proudly and falſely to vindicate himſelf. Note, (1.) If not before, in death at leaſt, the vain confidence of the wicked and ſelf-righteous expires, (2.) There is no eſcaping God's judgments; they who will not turn, muſt burn.

CHAP. XII.

In this and the two following chapters Job replies to Zophar's diſcourſe. In this addreſſing himſelf to his friends, He, 1. ſhews that his wiſdom is not inferior to theirs, ver. 1—4. 2. He proves that the wicked often proſper, ver. 4—11. 3. He conſents to what they had ſaid of the wiſdom and power, and ſovereignty of God, ver. 12—25.

1. AND Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. No doubt but [a] ye are the people, and wiſdom ſhall die with you. 3. But [b] I have underſtanding as well as you; [c] † I am not inferior to you: yea, who knoweth not ſuch things as theſe? 4. [d] I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he anſwereth him: the juſt upright man is laughed to ſcorn. 5. He that is [e] ready to ſlip with his feet, is as a lamp [f] deſpiſed in the thought of him that is at eaſe.

[a] Prov. xxviii. 11.
[b] Chap. xiii. 2.
[c] 2 Cor. xi. 5.
† Or I do not fall before you.
[d] Chap. xvi. 10. & xvii. 2. & xxx. 1.
[e] Pſal. xxxviii. 17. Jer. xx. 10.
[f] Prov. xiv. 2.

v. 1—5. Exaſperated by ſuch treatment and inſinuations, Job replies with equal ſeverity, and returns the more juſtly deſerved rebuke.

1. He ridicules their arrogance, in conceiting themſelves the only living oracles: No doubt but you are the people, ironically admitting their pretenſions, as the only wiſe men in the world, compared with whom, Job and others were as the wild aſs, ignorant and ſtupid, and wiſdom ſhall die with you; to be ſure, when you are gone the world will, for want of ſuch inſtructions, ſoon grow brutiſh. Note, (1.) Nothing is more diſguſting and offenſive, than the boaſts of vanity. (2.) A high conceit of our own importance, is as fooliſh as it is ſinful.

2. He pleads a right to the exerciſe of reaſon, as well as they: But I have underſtanding as well as you; my natural faculties are unimpaired; and if I claim equality with you, I may do it without preſumption, for I am not inferior to you, in parts or knowledge; or falling before you, as one vanquiſhed; or more than you, an apoſtate from God, as was ſuggeſted. Yea, who knoweth not ſuch things as theſe? What they had diſcourſed of the wiſdom, juſtice, power, and ſovereignty of God, were ſubjects he was equally acquainted with, and which others could ſpeak of as knowingly as they had done; therefore they need not, on that account, think ſo highly of themſelves, Note, (1.) Tho' a wiſe man never chuſes to ſpeak in his own praiſe, there may be times when ſelf-vindication may oblige us, as it may ſeem, to boaſt ourſelves a little, 2 Cor. xi. 6. (2.) When we differ from others in ſentiment, it becomes us neither to be overbearing, or to deſpiſe them, however clear the argument may appear to us: they are men as well as we, and may be endued with equal, perhaps ſuperior underſtanding.

3. He complains of their inſolent uſage. I am as one mocked of his neighbour, for ſo it appeared to him, who expected comfort from his friends, and found nothing but railing accuſation; and this was the more cruel from a profeſſor of religion, ſuch as each of them appeared, who calleth upon God, and he anſwereth him; or he means himſelf, who, though they inſinuated his neglect of prayer, continued ceaſeleſs at a throne of grace. Note, (1.) It is a ſore trial to be trodden upon in our afflictions, eſpecially by thoſe from whom we might have hoped for kinder treatment. (2.) When we are reduced in our circumſtances, we are apt to be over jealous, to conſtrue every inattention a deſigned ſlight, and in trouble to account every word of reproof a reproach and cruel. (3.) It is a comfort amidſt all the cenſures of men, even ſometimes of good men, that we have a throne of judgment open, and are there ſure to be heard with impartiality.

4. He proceeds to confute their ſuggeſtion, that the righteous were always externally happy. The juſt upright man is laughed to ſcorn; it was not merely his own caſe, but the general lot of the faithful: thus Noah, Lot, and others, fared from wicked men. He that is ready to ſlip with his feet, the righteous in affliction, is as a lamp deſpiſed in the thought of him that is at eaſe: the ſinners in affluence deſpiſe his troubles, and he appears like the lamp ready to go out, the ſnuff of which is diſagreeable and nauſeous. Note, (1.) Religion, and the faithful profeſſors of it, were the objects of mockery and ſcorn in every age: let it not then appear ſtrange, if we ſhare in their reproach. (2.) It is too common to ſee poverty ſlighted and ſcorned by thoſe who are at eaſe; but the portion of Lazarus at the gate, is ſtill infinitely preferable to Dives at the table.

6. [g] The tabernacles of robbers proſper, and they that provoke God are ſecure; into whoſe hand God bringeth abundantly. 7. But [h] aſk now the beaſts, and they ſhall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they ſhall tell thee: 8. Or ſpeak to the earth, and it ſhall teach thee; and the fiſhes of the ſea ſhall declare unto thee. 9. Who knoweth not in all theſe, that [i] the hand of the LORD hath wrought this? 10 [k] In whoſe hand is the ſoul of every living thing, and the breath of † all mankind: 11. [l] Doth not the ear try words? and the ‡ mouth taſte his meat?

[g] Chap. xxi. 7. Pſal. xxxvii. 35. & xcii. 7. Jer. xii. 1. Mal. iii. 15.
[h] Prov. vi. 6. Jer. viii. 7. Rom. i. 20.
[i] Heb. i. 10.
[k] Num. xvi. 22. Dan. v. 23.
† Heb. All fleſh of man.
[l] Chap. xxxiv. 3. 1 Cor. x. 15.
‡ Heb. Palate. Chap. vi. 30.

v. 6—11. The two grand poſitions Job's friends laid down, he effectually controverts. Before he affirms the ſufferings of the upright, he here remarks the proſperity of the wicked.

1. The tabernacles of robbers proſper, ſuch as the Sabæans, who plundered his ſubſtance, and many other wicked men who build up their houſes by oppreſſion and fraud; and they that provoke God by open and daring iniquities, are ſecure, and in this world live in affluence and at eaſe: into whoſe hand God bringeth abundantly of every temporal bleſſing; ſo far are they from diſtinguiſhed afflictions, that they are not plagued like other men. Note, (1.) They who abuſe God's gifts, or by diſhoneſt gain enrich themſelves, however fair their character may appear among men, they will be counted robbers in the day of God. (2.) Many have a rich portion in this life, who have none in another.

2. He appeals for the truth he advances to all the creatures, among whom in general the moſt innocent are the prey to the moſt rapacious; or rather he bids them obſerve the flocks and herds of the wicked, their tables covered with fiſh and fowl, and every delicacy, and then they will be convinced whether they are moſt affluent who are moſt pious. Or this is urged as an anſwer to what Zophar had advanced, of the wiſdom, power, and dominion of God, in which there was no ſuch myſtery as he ſeemed to intimate, chap. xi. 7. but it might all be read, even in the brute creation. They were the work of the hands of Jehovah (which name of God only here occurs in the whole book); they ſubſiſted by his care, and were at his ſovereign diſpoſal; truths clear and evident to enlightened reaſon, as ſounds to the attentive ear, or different ſavours to the palate; or he intimates, v. 11. that if any unprejudiced ear heard their diſpute, he would as eaſily diſcover the perverſeneſs of their arguments, and the ſolidity of his own, as the taſte diſcerned between ſweet and bitter. Note, The fallen underſtanding is like a vitiated palate, unable rightly to taſte or reliſh, but when God gives the hearing ear, then we are enabled to prove all things, and to hold faſt that which is good.

12. [m] With the ancient is wiſdom, and in length of days underſtanding. 13. With † him is [n] wiſdom and ſtrength, he hath counſel and underſtanding. 14. Behold, [o] he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again: [p] he ſhutteth up a man, and there can be no opening. 15. Behold, he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up: alſo [q] he ſendeth them out, and they overturn the earth. 16. [r] With him is ſtrength and wiſdom: the deceived and the deceiver are his. 17. He leadeth counſellors away ſpoiled, and [s] maketh the judges fools. 18. [t] He looſeth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle. 19. He leadeth princes away ſpoiled, and overthroweth the mighty. 20. [u] He removeth away the ſpeech of the truſty, and [x] taketh away the underſtanding of the aged. 21. [y] He poureth contempt upon princes, and ‡ weakeneth the ſtrength of the mighty. 22. [z] He diſcovereth deep things out of darkneſs, and bringeth out to light the ſhadow of death. 23. [a] He increaſeth the nations, and deſtroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and ‖ ſtraitneth them again. 24. He taketh away the heart of the chief of the people of the earth, and [b] cauſeth them to wander in a wilderneſs where there is no way. 25. [c] They grope in the dark without light, and he maketh them to § ſtagger like a drunken man.

[m] Chap. xxxii. 7.
† i. e. God.
[n] Chap. xxxvi. 5.
[o] Ibid. ix. 12. & xi. 10.
[p] Iſa. xxii. 22. Rev. iii. 7.
[q] Gen. vii. 11.
[r] Ver. 13.
[s] 2 Sam. xv. 31. & xvii. 14. Iſa. xix. 2. 1 Cor. i. 19.
[t] Dan. ii. 21.
[u] Chap. xxxii. 9. Iſa. iii. 2, 3.
[x] 2 Sam. xv. 31.
[y] Pſal. cvii. 40. Dan. ii. 21.
‡ Or looſeth the girdle of the ſtrong.
[z] Dan. ii. 22. Mat. x. 26. 1 Cor. iv. 5.
[a] Pſal. cvii. 38.
‖ Heb. Leadeth in.
[b] Pſal. cvii. iv, 40.
[c] Gen. xix. 11.
§ Heb. Wander.

v. 12—25. Job had aſſerted, he was not inferior to his friends in underſtanding, and he ſhews it,

1. By exalting the wiſdom and power of God as much as they had done. However wiſe the ancients were, and however deep ſkilled by long experience any man might appear, he was nothing compared with God, the Antient of Days, whoſe wiſdom is infinite, his counſels and underſtanding deep and unfathomable, and his ſtrength almighty and irreſiſtible. Note, If fierce diſputants would lay aſide the weapons of controverſy, and deſire to improve the undiſputed and glorious truths both ſides admitted, how much more would it be to their own and others edification and comfort?

2. He mentions a variety of inſtances, wherein this wiſdom and power of God appeared in the various diſpenſations of his providence in the world. [1.] There is no building up what he makes deſolate, v. 14. as the cities of Sodom, nor any poſſibility of delivering his priſoners, whether incloſed with the bands of affliction, or ſhut up more terribly in the dungeon of hell, where there is a great gulph fixed, ſo that none once entered, can ever paſs from thence. [2.] He hath different engines, able to act either way for the puniſhment of the ſinner, when he pleaſes, v. 15. If he binds up the clouds, drought and famine conſume the earth; if he opens the windows of heaven, a deluge, as in the days of Noah, ſweeps away the world of the ungodly. Note, If God withholds the rain of Divine influence from a ſoul, it muſt quickly wither, or if he pour forth the flood of his wrath upon us, who may abide it? [3.] From him is derived all the wiſdom of man, the deceived, and the deceiver are his, ver. 16. He beſtows wiſdom on the one, which he abuſes, and withholds it from the other, and both are in his hand; ſo that the crafty can proceed no farther than his permiſſion: and as he pleaſes he can counteract and diſappoint all their deep devices, and make them ſubſervient to the purpoſes of his own glory. Note, Though all the evil in the world proceeds from the abuſe of what God beſtows, and can proceed no farther than he pleaſes, yet is he in no wiſe to be charged as the author of the evil, which is wholly man's own work. [4.] As an evidence of what was aſſerted, v. 16. a proof is added, v. 17. in the infatuation God is pleaſed to put on the counſels of the wiſe, as in the caſe of Ahitophel, he maketh even thoſe, who as moſt eminent for underſtanding, were created judges in the land, fooliſh in their determinations. [5.] The greateſt are equally under his dominion with the loweſt, v. 18, 19, 21. Kings are not too high for him to humble; he can looſe their bonds, the tyrannical oppreſſions they laid on their ſubjects; or their girdles, the enſigns of royalty, ſtrip them off, reduce them to badges of ſervitude, ſo that their honour fades into contempt, and all their might affords them no protection. Note, No might of body, no advancement of ſtation, not even the thrones of kings, is the leaſt ſecurity, when God pleaſes to lay men's honour in the duſt, and to tread on princes as mortar: let kings and mighty men then fear to offend this Almighty God, leaſt they feel the power of his arm. [6.] The perſuaſive orator, entruſted with the concerns of ſtate, that had words at will, heſitates, and is confuſed, if God withholds his help; and the aged ſenator, renowned for wiſdom, becomes fooliſh, v. 20. Have we ready utterance, or ſolid underſtanding? Be it remembered who made man's mouth, and teacheth him knowledge, leaſt abuſing theſe gifts to miniſter to our pride, confuſion and folly ſhould be our righteous puniſhment? [7.] The deep-laid plots of men his eye ſees, his providence unfolds, v. 21. the ſins covered with darkneſs, thick as the ſhadow of death, are unveiled to their perpetual ſhame. Note, Let no ſinner promiſe himſelf ſecrecy or impunity; there is an eye that pierces the darkneſs, from which no workers of iniquity can hide themſelves. [8.] Nations are increaſed or diminiſhed at his will, v. 22. They proſper by his arm, and that withdrawn, ruſh into ruin. Note, National ſtrength is from God; if he is provoked, when at the ſummit of proſperity, by undiſcerned means he can quickly breed diviſion, and the diſjointed ſtructure falls by its own weight. [9.] The greateſt generals and wiſeſt commanders, deprived by him of valour and counſel, loſe their courage, are ſunk with panic fear, utterly at a loſs how to act, and by miſtakes groſs as darkneſs, ſtumble and loſe the power of reſiſtance, as a drunken man: ſo weak are the wiſeſt and greateſt without God; and ſo ſure it is that wiſdom and power alone belong unto the Lord, and can only be derived from him.

CHAP. XIII.

In this chapter, 1. Job concludes himſelf their equal in wiſdom, ver. 1, 2. and condemns their partiality and deceitfulneſs, under colour of pleading God's cauſe, ver. 4—8. threatens them with the judgments of God, ver. 9—12. deſires them to be ſilent, ver. 5, 13, 17. and then turns from them to God, ver. 3. 2. He profeſſes his confidence in God, ver. 15, 16, 18. 3. He expoſtulates with God concerning his deplorable condition, ver. 14—19, &c. complains of the confuſion he was in, ver. 20—22. and of the rigour of God's proceedings againſt him, ver. 23—28.

1. LO, mine eye hath ſeen all this, mine ear hath heard and underſtood it. 2. [a] What ye know, the ſame do I know alſo: I am not inferior unto you. 3. [b] Surely I would ſpeak to the Almighty, and I deſire to reaſon with God. 4. But ye are forgers of lies, [c] ye are all phyſicians of no value. 5. O that you would altogether hold your peace, and [d] it ſhould be your wiſdom. 6. Hear now my reaſoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips. 7. [e] Will you ſpeak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for him? 8. Will ye accept his perſon? [f] will ye contend for God? 9. Is it good that he ſhould ſearch you out? or as one man mocketh another, do ye ſo mock him? 10. [g] He will ſurely reprove you, if ye do ſecretly accept perſons. 11. Shall not his † excellency make you afraid? and his dread fall upon you? 12. Your remembrances are like unto aſhes, your bodies to bodies of clay.

[a] Chap. xii. 3.
[b] Ibid. xxiii. 3. & xxxi. 35.
[c] 1 Tim. i. 7.
[d] Prov. xvii. 28.
[e] Chap. iv. 7. & viii. 6, 20.
[f] Judg. vi. 31.
[g] Chap. xlii. 7.
† Or height or greatneſs.

v. 1—12. In vindicating his cauſe againſt his unkind friends, ſome ſeverity mixes with his juſt ſelf-defence.

1. He deſires them to weigh what he had ſaid, that they might be convinced he was not ſo weak as they would inſinuate, he ſpoke from experience and obſervation, and he was aſſured that both would corroborate his ſentiments, and prove him at leaſt their equal in underſtanding. Note, We ſhould well weigh before we condemn; raſh cenſures ſhew only the folly of thoſe who beſtow them.

2. He wiſhes the cauſe might be brought before God, v. 3. either to reaſon with him as a diſputant, or as the umpire between him and his friends: could this be granted, he feared not to carry the point. Note, Conſcious ſimplicity fears not the eye of piercing truth.

3. He ſharply upbraids their cruel treatment of him: Ye are forgers of lies, contriving and publiſhing poſitions contrary to the truth of God, and highly injurious to the character of their neighbour; that God never afflicted the righteous, and that Job's ſufferings were on account of his wickedneſs: ye are all phyſicians of no value, idol-phyſicians, pretenders to ſcience, but ignorant both of the cauſe of his maladies, and the method of cure, deceiving his hopes, and as uſeleſs as the idol ſtock or ſtone. Note, (1.) A deliberate lye is a crying ſin; againſt ſuch falſe tongues no innocence can protect. (2.) Whatever here below the awakened ſinner flies to, for help and healing, will make him worſe rather than better: none can cure the miſeries of a fallen ſpirit, but that great phyſician, who hath the balm of life and grace to miniſter to the ſin-ſick ſoul.

4. He begs them to hold their peace, v. 5. rather than ſpeak ſuch words as wound, inſtead of healing; and that their wiſdom would better appear in ſilence, than in arguments ſo weak, and urged with ſuch unkindneſs. He earneſtly entreats them to hear his reaſoning, and not be inattentive to, or diſregard his pleadings, as they ſeemed to do. Note, (1.) Haſtineſs to ſpeak, and raſhneſs to utter without mature deliberation, expoſes the folly, inſtead of diſplaying the wiſdom of a diſputant. (2.) Truth needs only a fair hearing, but prejudice is deaf, and the beſt of men often ſuffer unheard, or unnoticed.

5. He expoſtulates with them on the folly, ſin, and danger of their conduct; who whilſt they pretended to plead the cauſe of God and truth, diſhonoured him by falſhood, and miſrepreſented his diſpenſations: Will you ſpeak wickedly for God? in condemning a righteous man as a hypocrite, and talk deceitfully for him, by pretending to vindicate his juſtice at the expence of his truth. Will ye accept his perſon, according to human partiality, and conſtruing his afflictions into ſigns of guilt, refuſe to examine my caſe, and judge me unheard? Will ye contend for God? does his cauſe need ſuch advocates? or will your pretext to plead for him excuſe the falſhood of your principles, or the raſh cenſure of your concluſions? Is it good that he ſhould ſearch you out? would he not then detect the evil of your principles, and the cruelty of your conduct? or as one man mocketh another, do ye ſo mock him? pretending to be on his ſide, yet ſpeaking to his diſhonour. He will ſurely reprove you, if ye do ſecretly accept perſons; however you may deceive yourſelves with imaginations of zeal for the honour of his perfections, he will reſent your accuſations of an upright man, condemned unjuſtly by you: Shall not his excellency make you afraid? or his heighth, his glorious perfections of power, holineſs, truth, &c. and his dread fall upon you, as falſe witneſſes for him, doing ſo bad a thing, under a pretence of zeal for his glory. Your remembrances are like unto aſhes, your bodies to bodies of clay, your arguments are light as aſhes, and as weak as a fortification compoſed of eminences of clay; or he ſuggeſts their weak and mortal ſtate, as a reaſon why they ſhould be afraid to provoke the holy and avenging God. Note, (1.) A good intention will not excuſe, much leſs juſtify an ill thing. (2.) They who plead for God, need be ſerious enquirers after truth themſelves, and neither wilfully or wickedly condemn thoſe whom God hath not condemned. (3.) Whatever deceit we may put on others, or ourſelves, God is not mocked; he ſearcheth the heart, is no reſpecter of perſons, and will aſſuredly reprove the evil he diſcerns, however ſecretly concealed, or coloured over with whatever pious pretext. (4.) The conſideration of God's excellency and our meanneſs, his perfections and our vanity, ſhould awaken in our mind a holy awe, and make us afraid to provoke his diſpleaſure.

13. Hold your peace, let me alone, that I may ſpeak, and [h] let come on me what will. 14. Wherefore do [i] I take my fleſh in my teeth, and [k] put my life in mine hand? 15. [l] Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him: but [m] I will † maintain mine own ways before him. 16. He alſo ſhall be my ſalvation: ‡ for an hypocrite ſhall not come before him. 17. Hear diligently my ſpeech, and my declaration with your ears. 18. Behold now, I have ordered my cauſe, I know that I ſhall be juſtified. 19. [n] Who is he that will plead with me? for now [o] if I hold my tongue, I ſhall give up the ghoſt. 20. [p] Only do not two things unto me: then will I not hide myſelf from thee. 21. Withdraw thine hand far from me: and let not thy dread make me afraid. 22. Then [q] call thou, and I will anſwer: or let me ſpeak, and anſwer thou me.

[h] Prov. xxviii. 1.
[i] Chap. xviii. 4.
[k] 1 Sam. xxviii. 21. Pſal. cxix. 109.
[l] Pſal. xxiii. 4. Prov. xiv. 32. or Rom. iv. 18.
[m] Chap. xxvii. 5.
† Heb. Prove, or argue.
‡ Or but.
[n] Rom. viii. 33.
[o] Chap. xxxii. 19. Jer. xx. 9.
[p] Chap. ix. 34. & xxxiii. 7.
[q] Pſal. cxliii. 2.

v. 13—22. Full of matter, he reſolved to utter his ſpeech, and begs a moment's diligent attention, v. 17. to the declaration he was going to make.

1. Whatever became of him, whatever cenſures his friends laid on him, or whatever troubles from the hand of God, ſpeak he muſt; he would not ſmother the proteſtations of his innocence, nor pine to death in ſilent vexation, v. 14. for to hold his tongue under ſuch circumſtances of ſuffering and wrong, would be to burſt with grief and expire: or, as ſome render the words, v. 14. At all events I will take my fleſh in my teeth, and put my life in my hand, come what will come, I will maintain my integrity. Note, (1.) If we have the teſtimony of a good conſcience, we need fear no evil. (2.) It is a relief to ſpeak; to be condemned to ſilence under oppreſſion and wrong, is doubly hard to be born.

2. He ſtrongly maintains his ſimplicity before God. Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him: the ſeverity of my trials ſhall not make me quit my dependance on him, and the conſciouſneſs of my integrity till death will I never renounce. I will maintain mine own ways before him, that I have walked in truth and all good conſcience. Not that herein he placed his hope of ſalvation; no; He alſo ſhall be my ſalvation, in his ſaving and ſovereign grace is my truſt, whatever becomes of me here below; but this he never could hope to partake of, if allowed guile had been chargeable upon him; for an hypocrite ſhall not come before him: this he was fully aſſured of, and as ſure this character was not applicable to himſelf, as his friends had inſinuated. Behold, now I have ordered my cauſe, am ready to maintain it againſt every accuſer; I know that I ſhall be juſtified, from the malicious accuſations of men, from the ſin he had confeſſed, and in his own heart enjoy the conſciouſneſs of his acceptance before God. Who is he that will plead with me? let him appear, and I am prepared to anſwer every allegation. Note, (1.) Whatever diſcouragements are in our way, confidence in God is our great duty and ſupport. (2.) They who plead the ſalvation of Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall find no charge capable of lying againſt them in the court of heaven. (3.) Though ſincerity is neither our perfection nor juſtification before God, it is a comfortable evidence to our own ſouls, of an intereſt in his ſalvation, whilſt hypocriſy gives the lie to every hope.

3. He turns from his friends, to make his addreſs to God. Two things he deſires, and then he will undertake to open his cauſe: [1.] That his afflictions be removed, or ſuſpended; and [2.] That the terror of the Divine Majeſty be withdrawn, and that ſuch a manifeſtation of his preſence might be made, as would not confound and diſmay him: then as defendant he would anſwer, or as plaintiff interrogate, and reaſon with God on his dealings with him. A daring propoſal, for which he was afterwards by Elihu, and God himſelf, juſtly cenſured. Note, (1.) In our diſtreſs we are too apt to utter what, on reflection, we deeply condemn. (2.). When we ſee a perfect man ſo imperfect, it ſhould teach us what a fallen creature is in his beſt eſtate, how ignorant, and, in many inſtances, how perverſe ſtill before God.

23. [r] How many are mine iniquities and ſins? make me to know my tranſgreſſion, and my ſin. 24. Wherefore [s] hideſt thou thy face, and [t] holdeſt me for thine enemy? 25. [u] Wilt thou break a leaf driven to and fro? And wilt thou purſue the dry ſtubble? 26. For thou writeſt bitter things againſt me, and [x] makeſt me to poſſeſs the iniquities of my youth. 27. [y] Thou putteſt my feet alſo in the ſtocks, and † lookeſt narrowly unto all my paths; thou ſetteſt a print upon the heels of my feet. 28. And [z] he, as a rotten thing conſumeth, as a garment that is moth-eaten.

[r] Pſ. xix. 12.
[s] Deut. xxxii. 20. Pſ. xiii. 1. Iſa. viii. 17.
[t] Chap. xvi. 9. & xix. 11. & xxxiii. 10. Lam. ii. 5.
[u] Iſa. xlii. 3.
[x] Chap. xx. 11. Jer. xxxi. 19.
[y] Chap. xxxiii. 11.
† Heb. Obſerveſt.
[z] Pſ. xxxix. 11. Hoſ. v. 12.

v. 23—28. Having propoſed a fair trial, Job here,

1. Begs to be informed of the number and nature of his ſins, v. 23. being confeſſedly a ſinner, though not chargeable with any groſſer crime. Some underſtand this as the language of humility, others, as a complaint of hard meaſure, to ſuffer without knowing the cauſe, or being conſcious of having given any particular provocation: the latter ſenſe ſeems moſt to correſpond with the following expoſtulations. Note, (1.) Who can underſtand his errors? they who know moſt, know but a little of the evil they ſtand chargeable with before God. (2.) They who ſearch moſt into their own hearts, will daily ſee growing cauſe of ſhame and confuſion before God.

2. He grieves bitterly at the abſence of a ſenſe of God's favour, a more afflictive burden than all his other loſſes, and cannot bear the thought of having the God he loved treat him as an enemy, and frown on him in diſpleaſure. Note, (1.) Thoſe alone who have enjoyed communion with God, know the miſery of darkneſs, and diſtance from him. (2.) An apprehenſion of God's wrath is a kind of hell upon earth. (3.) When God ſeems to depart from us, we need ſee what hath provoked him, for ſurely there is a cauſe.

3. He expoſtulates with God on his treatment of him, as beneath his majeſty to cruſh a worm, as unable to reſiſt him, as the ſtubble the furious whirlwind: perhaps he meant it to move his commiſeration. He complains of the hard meaſure he endured, for which the iniquities of his youth were raked up againſt him, as thoſe that afforded moſt cauſe for condemnation; and intimates God's ſeverity in putting him into ſuch a ſtate of ſuffering, marking every falſe ſtep, as if ſollicitous to catch at the leaſt infirmity to vindicate his procedure, and to increaſe his anguiſh, under which already he pined away, as a corpſe turning to putrefaction, and as a garment moth-eaten; under ſuch miſery to add to his ſufferings, ſeemed bitter, not to ſay cruel. Note, (1.) They have ſadly-miſtaken notions of the divine compaſſions, who can entertain a thought of his breaking with his wrath the heart that is bleeding in humiliation. (2.) Youthful ſins, however light they may be made of, God remembers, and will, ſooner or later, make his ſervants poſſeſs the bitter remembrance of them. (3.) They who think God too ſtrict and ſevere, prove both their own ignorance of themſelves and him. Were one of our days but brought to a rigid ſcrutiny, long ſince we muſt have been undone for ever. (4.) Man is a periſhing worm, and even above ground often becomes loathſome. How vile doth diſeaſe make our bodies! but how much more odious hath ſin made our ſouls! What a bleſſed hope to be delivered for ever from both in a reſurrection day!

CHAP. XIV.

Having mentioned his periſhing body, Job, in conſideration thereof, pleads for a reſpite. He here ſpeaks, 1. Of man's life, as ſhort, ver. 1. Sorrowful, ver. 1. Sinful, ver. 4. Stinted, ver. 5, 14. 2. Of man's death, as the period of our preſent exiſtence, ver. 7—12. As what delivers us from our calamities, ver. 13. Deſtroys our hopes of life, ver. 18, 19. and ſhuts out the knowledge of every thing here below, ver. 20—22. 3. This he pleads with God, who he thought was too ſevere with him, ver. 16, 17. begging that he would not contend with him, ver. 3. but grant him a little reſpite, ver. 6. 4. He engages to prepare for death, ver. 14. and comforts himſelf in the hope that it will prove his gain, ver. 15.

1. MAN that is born of a woman, is of [a] few days, and [b] full of trouble. 2. [c] He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth alſo as a ſhadow, and continueth not. 3. And doſt thou open thine eyes upon ſuch an one, and bringeſt me into judgment with thee? 4. [d] Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one. 5. Seeing [e] his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou haſt appointed his bounds that he cannot paſs. 6. [f] Turn from him, that he may reſt till he ſhall accompliſh, [g] as an hireling, his day.

[a] Gen. xlvii. 9.
[b] Eccleſ. ii. 23.
[c] Chap. viii. 9. Pſ. xc. 5, 9. & cii. 11. & ciii. 15. Iſa. xl. 6. Jam. iv. 14.
[d] Gen. v. 3. Pſ. li. 5. John iii. 6. Rom. v. 12. Eph. ii. 3.
[e] Chap. vii. 1.
[f] Chap. vii. 16, 19. & x. 20. Pſ. xxxix. 13.
[g] Chap. vii. 1.

v. 1—6. We have here,

1. A lively and affecting deſcription of miſerable man, who is born of a woman, a dying worm, ſprung from dying worms. He is of few days, ſo ſhort his paſſing exiſtence, that years, or months, are too long to reckon by: he is the creature of a day, at fartheſt, a few ſhort days terminate his mortal being, and full of trouble withal. From the hour that in cries he firſt bemoaned his entrance into a wretched world, ſorrow is his portion; infancy, youth, manhood, age, have their attendant diſeaſes, griefs, vexations, cares, and fears, till death, the king of terrors, cloſes the ſcene. In his beſt eſtate, he cometh forth as a flower, which of itſelf would quickly fade, but is ſeldom left to ſuch a gradual decay; he is cut down, by the ſtroke of diſeaſe or accident, as graſs before the mower's ſcythe: ſo tranſitory is all his excellence. He fleeth alſo as a ſhadow; there is no more ſubſtantial good in his ſhort-lived enjoyments, than there is ſolidity in a ſhadow; and, what makes them ſtill more vain, he continueth not, but haſtens from life to death, as the ſhadow of the flying bird: withal full of ſin as of ſorrow, and indeed thence all his ſorrow flows. He came a corrupted creature into the world, a child of fallen man, begotten in his image, for who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? or, from ſuch a ſinful original, what but evil can be the natural fruit? Not one is born but in this ſtate; not one is found, who is not a tranſgreſſor from the womb. Now ſin and death are twin-ſiſters; ſeeing man is thus corrupt, his days are determined by a divine and unalterable decree. The number of his months are with thee, known and fixed; thou haſt appointed his bounds, which he cannot paſs, when every effort to preſerve the departing ſpirit will be in vain, and friends or phyſicians be unable to avert or ſuſpend the execution of that awful ſentence, Duſt thou art, and unto duſt thou ſhalt return. Note, (1.) A humbling ſenſe of original ſin is the foundation of all true humiliation. (2.) The vanity and ſhortneſs of our preſent life ſhould quicken us to greater diligence in ſecuring an eternity of ſubſtantial bliſs. (3.) Though our death is fixed in God's decree, we, who know not his ſecrets, are bound to uſe all thoſe means he hath appointed for the preſervation of our lives, and leave the event with him.

2. Job expoſtulates with God, why, as a creature ſo weak, corrupt, and worthleſs, he ſhould ſo ſtrictly eye his ways, and ſo rigorouſly ſevere call him to his bar, v. 3. He begs a moment's reſpite, v. 6. that God would turn his frowning face away, and ſuffer him as a hireling to accompliſh his day, with ſome little intermiſſions from ceaſeleſs toil, and bring him at laſt to that ſleep in death, which would be to him ſweeter than reſt to the weary labourer. Note, (1.) Life is a day of toil, but, bleſſed be God, there remaineth a reſt for his people, eternal in the heavens. (2.) We have a God who knows our frailty, and can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; it is good in prayer to ſpread our caſe before him.

7. For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, [h] that it will ſprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not ceaſe. 8. Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the ſtock thereof die in the ground: 9. Yet through the ſcent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant. 10. But man dieth, and waſteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghoſt, and [i] where is he? 11. As the waters fail from the ſea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up: 12. So man lieth down, and riſeth not till [k] the heavens be no more, they ſhall not awake, nor be raiſed out of their ſleep. 13. O that thou wouldſt hide me in the grave, that thou wouldſt keep me ſecret, until thy wrath be paſt, that thou wouldſt appoint

[h] Ver. 14.
[i] Chap. xix. 26.
[k] Iſa. li. 6. & lxv. 17. 2 Pet. iii. 7, 10. Rev. xx. 11. & xxi. 1.

appoint me a ſet time, and remember me! 14. If a man die, [l] ſhall he live again? all the days of my appointed time [m] will I wait, till my change come. 15.
[n] Thou ſhalt call, and I will anſwer thee: thou wilt have a deſire to the work of thine hands.

[l] Chap. xix. 26. Dan. xii. 2.
[m] Chap. xiii. 15.
[n] John v. 28.

v. 7—15. Having pathetically deſcribed the miſeries of life, he paſſes on to the conſideration of death, where his fleſh might reſt in hope; though not of proſperity on earth, yet of a joyful reſurrection.

1. At death, man's hope in this world finally periſhes. A tree cut down will ſprout again; and though the ſtock be dead, fibres from the root will put forth new ſuckers: the waters exhaled from the ſea, fall down again in ſhowers; and winter's floods, though dried up by the ſcorching ſun, at the returning ſeaſon riſe as before. But man's waſte is irreparable, and when at death he gives up the ghoſt, as ſoon he muſt, he is gone for ever: no ſhoot ſhall ſpring, no flood of life return; where he lieth down he muſt abide, till the heavens are no more, never to return to life below: or perhaps intimating, that in another world only, when the heavens ſhould be wrapped together as a ſcroll, he might expect to riſe again, chap. xix. 26. Note, (1.) Though man's body dies, his ſoul periſhes not with it, but lives in the world of ſpirits. (2.) Since there is no return hither to correct what hath been amiſs, great need have we to improve that preſent moment on which eternity depends.

2. As he had hope in his death, he longs for its arrival; O that thou wouldſt hide me in the grave, from all the miſeries and ſorrows he endured, and from the ſtrife of tongues; that thou wouldſt keep me ſecret, where no eye ſhould ſee him, until thy wrath be paſt, the effects of which he apprehended would never remove till he was returned to the duſt, and waited a reſurrection day. That thou wouldſt appoint me a ſet time, to diſcharge me from the labours of life, or to reſcue me from the duſt of death, and remember me! think upon my ſorrows to end them, or on my ſleeping aſhes to raiſe them once more from the grave. Note, (1.) Till the body ſleeps in death, we cannot be hid from troubles; but there at leaſt they will end. (2.) The duſt of God's ſaints is precious to him, he doth not forget them; the time is fixed for their glorious reſtitution, and herein they can rejoice.

3. He reſolves in patient hope to wait God's appointed time. If a man die, as ſurely he muſt, ſhall he live again, to amend any thing that is paſt? no; therefore let me with patience bear my preſent burden. Or, ſhall he live again? yes; though his body lie down in the duſt, he ſhall riſe again: therefore all the days of my appointed time will I wait, until my change come. This expectation ſhall reconcile me to my preſent afflictions: a change will come, a glorious change; the time is fixed; O come the welcome day. Then thou ſhalt call, and I will anſwer thee, ready for the arms of death, or from the duſt, joyful to hear the trump that awakes the dead. Thou wilt have a deſire to the work of thine hands; the curious fabric of my body, which thy hands have faſhioned, thou wilt reſtore, no more to taſte of death, or ſee corruption. Note, (1.) The hope of a glorious reſurrection is the great ſupport under every human miſery. (2.) Death hath changed its nature, when grace hath changed our hearts; it then becomes our privilege to die.

16. For now [o] thou numbreſt my ſteps, doſt thou not watch over my ſin? 17. [p] My tranſgreſſion is ſealed up in a bag, and thou ſeweſt up mine iniquity. 18. And ſurely the mountain falling, † cometh to nought: and the rock is removed out of his place. 19. The waters wear the ſtones: thou ‡ waſheſt away the things which grow out of the duſt of the earth, § and thou deſtroyeſt the hope of man. 20. Thou prevaileſt for ever againſt him, and he paſſeth: thou changeſt his countenance, and ſendeſt him away. 21. His ſons come to honour, and [q] he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. 22. But ‖ his fleſh upon him ſhall have pain, and his ſoul within him ſhall mourn.

[o] Chap. xxxiv. 21. Pſ. lvi. 8. & cxxxix. 2, 3. Prov. v. 21.
[p] Deut. xxxii. 34. Hoſ. xiii. 12.
† Heb. Fadeth.
‡ Heb. Overfloweſt.
§ Or, ſo.
[q] Eccleſ. ix. 5.
‖ Or, Whilſt his fleſh is upon him, he ſhall have pain, and whilſt, &c.

v. 16—22. Job returns to his ſad complaints,

1. Of God's rigour. He had no hope of reſt on this ſide the grave, whilſt God ſeemed to mark with curious eye each ſtep, to minute the leaſt tranſgreſſions, and ſeal them up, as indictments ready to be produced in court againſt him. Note, (1.) Hard thoughts of God are as bitter to ourſelves, as diſhonourable to him. (2.) It is the want of a due ſenſe of the evil of ſin, that leads us to complain.

2. Of man's waſting and irreparable condition. The mountains moulder; the rocks are removed by floods, or earthquakes; the ſtones, by continual dropping, are hollowed out; and floods ſweep away the productions of the earth. Theſe waſtes none can repair; the mountains cannot grow again, nor the rocks return; the hollow of the ſtone is never filled up, nor the deſolations of the flood repaired; and, or ſo, thou deſtroyeſt the hope of man, who, once removed by death, never returns to his place again: thou prevaileſt for ever againſt him, contention is vain, diſeaſe and death cannot be reſiſted; and he paſſeth, as a wind from the face of the earth. Thou changeſt his countenance; the ſtroke of ſickneſs covers the blooming face with livid paleneſs, and death makes it ghaſtly and frightful, and ſendeſt him away into the grave. There, inſenſible of all that paſſes here below, his ſons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them. But his fleſh upon him ſhall have pain, in the dying hour, or when in the grave, figuratively ſpeaking, his body ſhall ſee corruption, and his ſoul within him ſhall mourn at the bitterneſs of death. Note, (1.) This is a periſhing world, we and it conſume together; how vain then to place our confidence on any thing here below. (2.) Death makes ſtrange alterations; proud beauty ſhould look in that glaſs, to humble its ſelf-idolatry. (3.) It is to nature a bitter thing to die, and expiring groans are often full of anguiſh: to a ſinner they are but the beginning of ſorrows, to a ſaint they are his farewel to pain and grief for ever.

CHAP. XV.

Job's arguments little avail. Eliphaz ſtill ſticks cloſe to the principles upon which he had condemned Job, and, 1. He reproves him for juſtifying himſelf, and charges him with many things which he unfairly inferred from his diſcourſe, ver. 2—13. 2. He perſuades him to humble himſelf before God, ver. 14—16. 3. He tells him of the woful eſtate of the wicked, that harden their hearts againſt God, ver. 17—35.

1. THEN anſwered Eliphaz the Temanite, and ſaid, 2. Should a wiſe man utter † vain knowledge, and fill his belly with the eaſt wind? 3. Should he reaſon with [a] unprofitable talk? or with ſpeeches wherewith he can do no good? 4. Yea, thou ‡ caſteſt off fear, and reſtraineſt prayer before God. 5. For [b] thy mouth § uttereth thine iniquity, and thou chooſeſt the tongue of the crafty. 6. Thine own mouth con-demneth thee, and not I: yea, thine own lips teſtify againſt thee. 7. Art thou the firſt man that was born?
or [c] waſt thou made before the hills? 8. [d] Haſt thou heard the ſecret of God? and doſt thou reſtrain wiſdom to thyſelf? 9. [e] What knoweſt thou that we know not?
[f] what underſtandeſt thou, which is not in us? 10.
With us are both the gray-headed, and very aged men, much elder than thy father. 11. Are the conſolations of God ſmall with thee? is there any ſecret thing with thee? 12. Why doth thine heart carry thee away?
and what do thine eyes wink at, 13. That thou turn-eſt thy ſpirit againſt God, and letteſt [g] ſuch words go out of thy mouth? 14. [h] What is man that he ſhould be clean? and he which is born of a woman, that he ſhould be righteous? 15. Behold, [i] he putteth no truſt in his ſaints; yea, the heavens are not clean in his ſight.
16. [k] How much more abominable and filthy is man,
[l] which drinketh iniquity like water?

† Heb. Knowledge of wind.
[a] Mat. xii. 36, 37. Col. iv. 6.
‡ Or, makeſt void.
[b] Chap. ix. 22, &c. & xii. 4, 6.
§ Heb. Teacheth.
[c] Pſ. xc. 2. Prov. viii. 25.
[d] Rom. xi. 34.
[e] Chap. xiii. 5.
[f] Chap. xxxii. 7.
[g] Chap. xiii. 13, 15, 22.
[h] 1 Kings viii. 46. 2 Chron. vi. 36. Chap. xiv. 4. Pſ. xiv. 3. Prov. xx. 9. Eccleſ. vii. 20 1 John i. 8, 10.
[i] Chap. iv. 18. & xxv. 5.
[k] Chap. iv. 19. Pſ. xiv. 3. & liii. 3.
[l] Chap. xxxiv. 7. Prov. xix. 28.

v. 1—16. Job's friends had all ſpoken in turn, and Eliphaz, who had opened the diſpute, undertakes again to reply, much offended that Job preſumed to controvert their arguments, and from his own words endeavouring to produce ſundry accuſations, in confirmation of the point he ſo ſtrenuouſly denied.

1. He reproaches him with folly and emptineſs in his arguments, whereby he had for ever forfeited the character of a wiſe man, v. 2, 3. His reaſonings were vain, and his words bluſtering as the eaſt wind, yet without ſolidity, unprofitable, and uſeleſs. Note, (1.) It is much eaſier to treat an adverſary with contempt, than to anſwer him. (2.) Unprofitable talk deſerves cenſure: they that muſt give an account of every idle word, need keep well the door of their lips.

2. He charges him with great impiety, as caſting off the fear of God, and reſtraining prayer before him, v. 4. ſince the principles he advanced, according to Eliphaz's opinion, made all religion void. If the tabernacles of robbers proſpered, if juſt men were laughed to ſcorn, and God deſtroys the perfect and the wicked, then, ſaith he, what uſe is it to fear him, or to pray to him, who laugheth at the trial of the innocent? Such ſpeeches Eliphaz regards as deep iniquity, and the crafty gloſſes of piety, v. 5. with which Job covered his words, but could not conceal the hypocriſy within. His own lips, v. 7. ſpoke his condemnation, and no need was there for further proof. Note, (1.) It is too common for angry diſputants to diſtort the arguments of their adverſaries, and to charge them with inferences from them, not only never dreamt of, but utterly abhorred. (2.) They that caſt off God's fear, will not think of prayer; and they who reſtrain prayer, can have no fear of God before them; and ſuch a prayerleſs and careleſs ſtate is the ſure proof of a man's impiety, and the forerunner of eternal ruin.

3. He arraigns him of arrogance and ſelf-conceit, as if his claim to an equality of underſtanding, chap. xiii. 2. was to be interpreted a monopoly of wiſdom. Art thou the firſt man that was born ? or before Adam ? that all knowledge and experience muſt center in thee ? Yea, art thou wiſe as God, pretending to be from everlaſting ? Waſt thou made before the hills ? or, did God conſult with thee in his glorious works, and communicate to thee his great deſigns ? Haſt thou heard the ſecret of God ? and doſt thou arrogate and reſtrain wiſdom to thyſelf ? What knoweſt thou that we know not ? reſpecting age, thine elders ; reſpecting numbers, and the current of antiquity, all are on our ſide : with us are both the gray-headed, and very aged men, much elder than thy father. Note, (1.) Nothing is eaſier than to triumph over our adverſary, by making him ſpeak what he never meant, and then confuting our own ſuppoſitions. (2.) There are ſecret things which belong unto God, to pretend to fathom which, proves not our wiſdom, but our pride and folly. (3.) Many appeal to antiquity, who would find it often hard to ſupport their pretenſions ; not that error ſupported by antiquity is a bit the better for being the older : God's word is the only ſure guide. (4.) Grey heads are not always oracles : whatever veneration is due to them, truth is too great a ſacrifice to make to any man.

4. He accuſes him of contemning the counſels of his friends, and the conſolations of God, when thoſe were the very things he wanted, and for want of which his complaint was bitter ; but becauſe he declared them miſerable comforters, they would infer, as they ſpoke for God, that it was a ſlight put upon him. Are the conſolations of God ſmall with thee ? deſpiſed and ſlighted. Is there any ſecret thing with thee ? any charm that others know not of, to ſupport thee ; or any ſecret ſin, that, being indulged, prevents the entrance of divine comforts ? Note, (1.) Many ſpeak in God's name, whom he never ſent, and would intereſt him in their quarrel, though he diſowns any relation to them. (2.) The conſolations of God are what an afflicted ſoul values above all things ; with theſe every trial is lightened ; without them, every burden grievous. (3.) Allowed ſin neceſſarily cuts off the ſources of true comfort.

5. He charges upon him inſolence againſt God. Why doth thine heart carry thee away ? like an unruly horſe, that refuſes bit or bridle ; and what do thine eyes wink at ? Why ſo contemptuous of us ? Or what is thy aim and intention in thoſe hard ſpeeches of thine, that thou turneſt thy ſpirit againſt God, as if daring to contend with him, and letteſt ſuch words go out of thy mouth ? arraigning his wiſdom, juſtice, and providence. It muſt be owned, Job had given ſome handle for this charge, chap. ix. 12. x. 3. xiii. 22—27. but Eliphaz draws a ſudden temptation into a ſettled enmity and oppoſition againſt God, exaggerates the evil, and makes no allowance for his heavy afflictions, nor any account of the expreſſions of unfeigned piety, which he conſtantly mingles with his moſt impatient complaints.

6. He inſinuates, that he juſtified himſelf as a man of ſinleſs perfection, than which, nothing was farther from Job's thoughts, ſee chap. xiv. 4. and therefore, from the glaring proof of man's corruption, would infer Job's falſhood in his ſelf-vindication. What is man that he ſhould be clean ? and he which is born of a woman, that he ſhould be righteous ? If the ſaints in glory are in his ſight imperfect, and the bright heavens, and the hoſts that inhabit them, are not clean in his ſight, how much more abominable and filthy is man, which drinketh iniquity like water ? as naturally diſpoſed to it, as the appetite craves for food, and ſwallows it as greedily and plentiful, as thoſe who are parched with thirſt do the cooling draught. Note, (1.) Man is naturally diſpoſed to evil, and only evil, and that continually. (2.) Indulgence in ſin makes our beſtial appetites only the more craving. (3.) As both our nature and our ways are unclean before God, we can never in his ſight preſume to be juſtified. (4.) Sin is the abominable thing God hates, and will aſſuredly puniſh, unleſs the ſoul be waſhed in that blood of Jeſus, which alone can make us clean.

17. I will ſhew thee, hear me, and that which I have ſeen, I will declare, 18. Which wiſe men have told [m] from their fathers, and have not hid it : 19. Unto whom alone the earth was given, and [n] no ſtranger paſſed among them. 20. The wicked man travelleth with pain all his days, and the number of years is hidden to the oppreſſor. 21. [o] † A dreadful ſound is in his ears ; [p] in proſperity the deſtroyer ſhall come upon him. 22. He believeth not that he ſhall return out of darkneſs, and he is waited for of the ſword. 23. [q] He wandreth abroad for bread, ſaying, Where is it ? he knoweth that [r] the day of darkneſs is ready at his hand. 24. Trouble and anguiſh ſhall make him afraid ; they ſhall prevail againſt him, as a king ready to the battle. 25. For [s] he ſtretcheth out his hand againſt God, and ſtrengthneth himſelf againſt the Almighty. 26. He runneth upon him, even on his neck, upon the thick boſſes of his bucklers : 27. Becauſe [t] he covereth his face with fatneſs, and maketh collops of fat on his flanks. 28. And he dwelleth in deſolate cities, and in houſes which no man inhabiteth, which are ready to become heaps. 29. He ſhall not be rich, neither ſhall his ſubſtance continue, neither ſhall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth. 30. He ſhall not depart out of darkneſs, the flame ſhall dry up his branches, and [u] by the breath of his mouth ſhall he go away. 31. Let not him that is deceived truſt in vanity : for vanity ſhall be his recompence. 32. It ſhall be accompliſhed [x] before his time, and his branch ſhall not be green. 33. He ſhall ſhake off his unripe grape as the vine, and ſhall caſt off his flower as the olive. 34. For the congregation of hypocrites ſhall be deſolate, and fire ſhall conſume the tabernacles of bribery. 35. [y] They conceive miſchief, and bring forth ‡ vanity, and their belly prepareth deceit.

[m] Gen. xviii. 19.
[n] Joel iii. 17.
[o] Lev. xxvi. 36.
† Heb. A ſound of fears.
[p] 1 Theſ. v. 5.
[q] Gen. iv. 12. Pſ. lix. 15. & cix. 10.
[r] Chap. xviii. 12.
[s] Mal. iii. 13.
[t] Pſ. xvii. 10.
[u] Chap. iv. 9. 2 Theſ. ii. 8.
[x] Chap. xxii. 16. Pſ. lv. 23.
[y] Pſ. vii. 14. Iſa. lix. 4. Hoſ. x. 13.
‡ Or, iniquity.

v. 17—35. Eliphaz proceeds with his arguments, which are as weak as his reproaches were unjuſt. He inſiſts the wicked are always miſerable, and Job's ſufferings therefore are a ſufficient proof of his guilt.

1. He beſpeaks Job's attention ; I will ſhew thee, hear me, ſomething worth notice, and not ſuch unprofitable talk as he had declared his to be, v. 3. He had claimed antiquity for his voucher, v. 10. and profeſſes to ſpeak not more his own ſentiments, than the traditions of the wiſeſt and beſt of men, who were great as they were good, v. 19. and no ſtranger paſſed among them, either to ſhare their bleſſings, or, as robbers, to plunder them ; but their proſperity, the reward of their piety, was uninterrupted : in which he ſeems to glance at Job, unlike them in proſperity, and therefore unlike them in piety. Note, Experience is the wiſeſt teacher.

2. He deſcribes the wicked man, and his conſtant miſery, wherein, though he ſpeaks in a third perſon throughout, it is eaſy to ſee the application is deſigned for Job himſelf. He draws the character of the wicked man, v. 25—28. as daring in iniquity, fearleſs of God's threatnings, mocking at his wrath as a bugbear, and, as a combatant in arms, ruſhing on the thick boſſes of his buckler, as if defying his power, v. 25, 26. In eaſe and luxury he riots, fed to the full, fattened as an ox in a rich paſture, gratifying every luſt, and miniſtring to the cravings of a pampered appetite, v. 27. By oppreſſion he enlarges his habitation, and having ſeized the houſes of others, makes deſolations around him, as if he would dwell alone in the earth, to enjoy the fruits of his ill-gotten abundance, v. 28—35. Note, (1.) God is patient towards daring ſinners, but their time of ruin is at hand. (2.) Senſual appetite is the ſoul's ruin, and fleſhly indulgence ſtupifies the conſcience againſt all fear of God, or ſenſe of danger.

3. The miſery of the wicked man is largely deſcribed. His miſchievous devices coſt him much painful thought, his conſcience feels at times the pangs of guilt, and ſhort is the reign of iniquity, v. 20. Terror haunts him, a dreadful ſound is in his ears, a fearful looking for of judgment. In the midſt of his proſperity, ſome calamity ſweeps away his wealth, diſeaſe embitters all his portion, or death ſeizes him as his prey, v. 21. In his afflictions he ſinks under deſpair, and in hell it will be the conſummation of his miſery. The ſword of vengeance hangs terrible over him, threatning each moment to fall, v. 22. Reduced to beggary, he wanders, famiſhed with hunger, and none give unto him. The day of death approaching ſcares him, and ſtill more the dreadful darkneſs that obſcures his proſpect beyond the grave, v. 23. Increaſing troubles expected diſtreſs him, eternal anguiſh in his view diſmays him, and unable to reſiſt, as a man before an armed hoſt, he falls a prey to his own fears, v. 24. Poor in the midſt of his abundance, his covetouſneſs and carking care with-holds from him enjoyment ; or, conſumed on his luſts, he waſtes quickly his ill-gotten wealth : at leaſt, his poſſeſſions are tranſitory and vaniſhing as a dream, v. 29. His afflictive diſpenſations are without any proſpect of an end ; his children, like withered branches ſtruck with lightning, die around him ; and, at laſt, himſelf is cut off by the blaſts of God's diſpleaſure, v. 30. Deceived by Satan to truſt in preſent vanities, he finds a lie in his right hand : let others ſee and dread ſuch fatal deluſion, v. 31. An immature death ſhall ſeize him, before the time his vain hope ſuggeſted ; and, like a dry ſtick, all his wealth, family, and friends, ſhall periſh before him, or forſake him, v. 32. Stripped by the tempeſt of wrath, like the unripe grape, or the flower of the olive, he ſhall ſee the deſolation of all that was dear to him, v. 33. Though hand join in hand, the congregation of the hypocrites ſhall be deſolate : vain will be their pretexts of religion, when God comes to detect and puniſh them ; his fire will conſume the tabernacles of the wicked magiſtrates, where bribery and corruption dwelt, v. 34. Thus ſhall the miſchief, craft, and falſhood of the wicked return upon his own head, and vanity, vexation, and ruin be his only portion, v. 35. Throughout all this deſcription he ſeems to keep Job in his eyes; whoſe loſſes, calamities, afflictions in his children, family, ſubſtance and perſon, he would intimate proved him to be this wicked man, this oppreſſor and hypocrite. Note, (1.) It is true the curſe of God is upon the houſes of the wicked, and ſometimes, though not always, viſible in this world. (2.) The happieſt ſinner has inward terrors, which all his enjoyments cannot ſooth or chaſe away. (3.) A dying hour, and judgment day at fartheſt, will verify all that is here aſſerted of the wicked, and more.

CHAP. XVI.

This chapter begins Job's reply to the diſcourſe of Eliphaz, 1. He upbraids his friends with their unkind uſage of him, ver. 1—5. 2. He repreſents his own caſe as very deplorable upon all accounts, ver. 6—16. 3. He ſtill holds faſt his integrity, concerning which he appeals to God's righteous judgment, from the unrighteous cenſures of his friends, ver. 17—22.

1. THEN Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. I have heard many ſuch things: [a] miſerable comforters are ye all. 3. Shall † vain words have an end? or what emboldeneth thee that thou anſwereſt? 4. I alſo could ſpeak as ye do: if your ſoul were in my ſoul's ſtead, I could heap up words againſt you, and [b] ſhake mine head at you. 5. But [c] I would ſtrengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips ſhould aſſwage your grief.

[a] Chap. xiii. 4.
† Heb. Words of wind. Chap. xv. 2.
[b] Pſal. xxii. 7. & cix. 25. Lam. ii. 15.
[c] Gal. vi. 1.

v. 1—5. Such arguing as Eliphaz offered, produced little conviction and leſs comfort; no wonder therefore Job, inſulted and afflicted, retorts ſharply the charges his opponent had caſt upon him. It was as hard to be patient under ſuch provocation, as to be ſilent under his ſufferings.

1. He is tired of ſuch vain repetition. It was crambe repetita, the ſame jarring ſtring ſtruck with the ſame rough hand. He complains of them all, as miſerable comforters, that heightened his anguiſh by unjuſt reproaches, inſtead of pouring in the kind balm of friendly ſympathy. He thought it high time for ſuch vain talkers to have done, and counts it inſolent and provoking, to have ſuch anſwers obtruded upon him. Note, (1.) They who ſend wounded conſciences to better obedience, and their own duties for a cure, like Job's comforters, but exaſperate the pain. (2.) All creatures can afford no ſatisfaction to the ſoul under a ſenſe of ſin, till God ſpeak the pardoning word. (3.) To cenſure men for ſins we cannot prove, and perſiſt in repeating accuſations which have been confuted and anſwered, deſerves a ſharp rebuke.

2. He ſuggeſts to them how different a conduct he would have ſhewn them, had they been in his circumſtances; and therein juſtly upbraids their cruelty and unkindneſs. I alſo could ſpeak, or ought I to ſpeak? ought I to heap up words againſt you, and ſhake mine head at you, if you were under my calamities? No: far other ſhould be my conduct. 'Twere eaſy indeed, as you do, to trample on the miſerable, and inſult the afflicted, but I would ſtrengthen you with my mouth, ſuggeſting every kind alleviation, miniſtring the ſoft balm of friendly ſympathy and conſolation, and the moving of my lips ſhould aſſwage your grief. Note, (1.) Though we cannot remove the afflictions of our friends, we may kindly ſuggeſt to them arguments to ſupport them, and by tender ſenſibility with them, alleviate their ſorrows. (2.) If we placed our ſouls in other's ſtead, under their temptations and afflictions, it would teach us both to judge of them more favourably, and to treat them with greater tenderneſs.

6. Though I ſpeak, my grief is not aſſwaged: and though I forbear, what am I eaſed? 7. But now [d] he hath made me weary: thou haſt made deſolate all my company. 8. And thou haſt filled me with wrinkles, which is a witneſs againſt me: and my leanneſs riſing up in me, beareth witneſs to my face. 9. [e] He teareth me in his wrath, who hateth me: he gnaſheth upon me with his teeth: [f] mine enemy ſharpeneth his eyes upon me. 10. They have [g] gaped upon me with their mouth, they [h] have ſmitten me upon the cheek reproachfully, they have gathered themſelves together againſt me. 11. [i] God hath † delivered me to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked. 12. [k] I was at eaſe, but he hath broken me aſunder: he hath alſo taken me by my neck, and ſhaken me to pieces, and [l] ſet me up for his mark. 13. His archers compaſs me round about, he cleaveth my reins aſunder, and doth not ſpare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground. 14. He breaketh me with breach upon breach, he runneth upon me like a giant. 15. I have ſewed ſackcloth upon my ſkin, and [m] defiled my horn in the duſt. 16. My face is [n] foul with weeping, and on my eye-lids is the ſhadow of death:

[d] Pſal. lxxxviii. 15.
[e] Chap. x. 16, 17. Lam. iii. 10.
[f] Chap. xiii. 24.
[g] Pſal. xxii. 13.
[h] Lam. iii. 30. Mic. v. 1.
[i] Chap. i. 15, 17.
† Heb. Shut me up.
[k] Chap. i. 3.
[l] Ibid. vii. 20. Lam. iii. 12.
[m] Chap. xxx. 9. Pſal. vii. 5.
[n] Lam. ii. 11.

v. 6—16. Job's complaints are ſtill uppermoſt, and all methods to aſſwage them are vain: whether he ſpoke, or was ſilent, he got no eaſe from God or man; his prayers returned unanſwered: his friends miſconſtrued his words into paſſion, and ſeem diſpoſed to call his ſilence ſullenneſs. He therefore ſpeaks in the bitterneſs of his ſoul.

1. He was weary of his life, deprived now of every comfort, deſolate and ſolitary, bereaved of his family, and forſaken of all thoſe who uſed to aſſemble at his houſe for the worſhip of God, and his hand evident in his ſuffering, added bitterneſs to the cup, v. 7.

2. His body, emaciated with pain and grief, looked like decrepit age, and he appeared a kind of living ſkeleton; witneſſes theſe of his deep affliction, but cruelly pleaded againſt him, as proofs of guilt and ſin.

3. His enemy, who hated him, with piercing eyes obſerved him, full of indignation, and tearing him in fury. This enemy may be underſtood of Eliphaz, or Satan, or as the context ſeems beſt to ſuit, of God himſelf, who appeared in ſuch a terrible character, and of whom he was ready to entertain ſuch hard thoughts. Note, They who have God indeed for their enemy, will be torn in pieces whilſt there is none to deliver them.

4. He was become the object of ſcorn and contempt, v. 10. and herein a type of Jeſus. But though like him in ſcorn, how inferior to him in reſignation!

5. He was delivered into the hands of the wicked; the Chaldeans, who robbed him; and his friends, who ſeemed ſo ſet againſt him; or the wicked one, the devil, whoſe power to torment him, appeared ſo abſolute.

6. The wrath of God ſeemed let looſe upon him. When at eaſe a little moment, again ſudden the ſtroke broke into ſhivers all his comforts; ſeized as a child in a giant's arms, and ſhook limb from limb; ſet up as the butt of God's poiſoned arrows, and the mark for the world's enmity; tormented with the moſt acute pains, and no intermiſſion of his agonies; living as in the pangs of death, pierced through the liver with a ſword, and the gall flowing through the wound; and daily aggravated, and increaſing troubles ſucceeding as breach upon breach, whilſt with a giant's fury, reſiſtleſs and cruel, God appeared to delight in cruſhing him under his feet: ſuch ſad thoughts his afflicted heart ſuggeſted.

7. His humiliation was deep as his affliction; ſackcloth was his garb, his glory all departed, his horn in the duſt, and tears night and day flowed, till his eyes grew dim with ſorrow, as if the ſhadow of death hung on his eyelids. Note, (1.) It becomes us to humble ourſelves, when God's heavy hand is upon us. (2.) Though we ſow in tears as the ſhowers in ſeed-time, the harveſt of patient ſuffering ſhall be joy.

17. [o] Not for any injuſtice in mine hands: alſo my prayer is pure. 18. O earth, [p] cover not thou my blood, and [q] let my cry have no place. 19. Alſo now, behold, my witneſs is in heaven, and my record is on high. 20. My friends † ſcorn me: but mine eye poureth out tears unto God. 21. [r] O that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his neighbour. 22. When ‡ a few years are come, then [s] I ſhall go the way whence I ſhall not return.

[o] Chap. xxxi. 13.
[p] Gen. iv. 10.
[q] Chap. xxvii. 9. Pſal. lxvi. 18.
† Heb. My ſcorners.
[r] Chap. xxxi. 35. Eccleſ. vi. 10. Iſa. xlv. 9. Rom. ix. 20.
‡ Heb. Years of number.
[s] Eccleſ. xii. 5.

v. 17—22. Though his paſſionate expreſſions are to be condemned, Job's uprightneſs in general deſerves the higheſt approbation.

1. He can appeal to God that theſe afflictions came not upon him for any injuſtice in his hands, as his friends ſuggeſted; or for any impiety, in reſtraining prayer before him, for God knew his integrity to man, as alſo the purity of his intentions, and the fervency of his devotions, v. 17—19. Note, It is an unſpeakable comfort, whatever we ſuffer, if we can ſtill keep a clear conſcience, and take God to record the ſimplicity of our ſouls before him.

2. He ſupports his appeal to God, by a ſolemn imprecation: If what I ſay be not true, O earth, cover not thou my blood, let it be ſhed for dogs to lick; or if there be any ſecret crime, let it be laid open to the day; and let my cry have no place with God or man. I am content to be condemned of both without mercy.

3. He makes God his recourſe in his afflictions, v. 20: amidſt the ſcorn and inſult of his friends, he poured out tears unto him; tears that beſpoke his compaſſions, tears that pleaded againſt the unkindneſs of his accuſers. Note, The tears of God's people are not forgotten, and they who cruelly cauſed theſe tears to fall, ſhall be recompenſed.

4. He longs to have an opportunity to plead his cauſe before God, without dread of the Divine Majeſty, as a man pleads for his neighbour, with freedom and unreſerve; then he doubted not he ſhould obtain a verdict in his favour, and ſilence his cenſorious friends.

Before Chriſt 1520.

5. He comforts himſelf that the time is ſhort, v. 22. and however now unjuſtly cenſured, his character would by and by be cleared up: when the few years of life ended, he ſhould go the way whence he ſhould not return, never come back again to a miſerable world, nor be expoſed to any of thoſe calamities under which he now groaned. Note, (1.) Death is a journey into a far country, whence we are no more to return; the moment we depart from earth, our eternity is determined for hell or heaven. (2.) The time here is ſhort; happy they who employ it in getting ready for their removal, that when the hour comes, they may have nothing to do but to die.

CHAP. XVII.

In this chapter, 1. Job, as a dying man, ver. 1. appeals to God for ſpeedy redreſs of the wrongs of his friends, ver. 2—7. and hopes though it be a ſurpriſe, it will be no ſtumbling-block to good people to ſee him thus abuſed, ver. 8, 9. 2. He reflects upon the vain hopes they had fed him with, expecting nothing but approaching death, ver. 10—16.

1. † MY breath is corrupt, my days are extinct, [a] the graves are ready for me. 2. [b] Are there not mockers with me? and doth not mine eye continue in their provocation? 3. Lay down now, ‡ put me in a ſurety with thee; [c] who is he that will ſtrike hands with me? 4. For [d] thou haſt hid their heart from underſtanding: therefore ſhalt thou not exalt them. 5. He that ſpeaketh flattery to his friends, even the eyes of his children ſhall fail. 6. He hath made me alſo [e] a by-word of the people, and ‖ aforetime I was as a tabret.
7. [f] Mine eye alſo is dim by reaſon of ſorrow, and all my members are as a ſhadow. 8. Upright men ſhall be aſtoniſhed at this, and the innocent ſhall ſtir up himſelf againſt the hypocrite. 9. The righteous alſo ſhall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands [g] ſhall § be ſtronger and ſtronger.

† Or my ſpirit is ſpent.
a Pſal. lxxxviii. 4.
b Chap. xiii. 9.
‡ Or appoint my ſurety with thee. Heb. vii. 22.
c Rom. viii. 33.
d Mat. xi. 25.
e Chap. xxx. 9. Pſal. xliv. 13, 14.
‖ Or before them.
f Pſal. vi. 7.
g 2 Sam. iii. 1.
§ Heb. Add ſtrength.

v. 1—9. Job wiſhed for a fair trial of his caſe, but it muſt be ſoon, or death would prevent him.

1. He ſpeaks of himſelf, as one at the point to die, v. 1. His breath corrupt through his diſeaſe, and drawn with difficulty; his days extinct, the laſt of them juſt at their end, and the graves of his fathers open, as ready for his reception. Note, (1.) Though the breath of natural life will quickly expire, if God hath breathed ſpiritual life into us, then can we never die. (2.) The days of time are drawing to their period; what folly then to ſeek our portion here, inſtead of ſecuring a part in that eternity, where time will be loſt as a drop in the ocean. (3.) If the grave is ready for us, highly it imports us to be ready for the grave; then come death, and welcome.

2. He complains of his friends, as mockers, that inſulted him with abuſe, and deceived his expectations, v. 2. provoking him continually, ſo that neither day or night his eyes could cloſe. Note, (1.) It is cruel to mock at any man's calamities. (2.) An exaſperated ſpirit drives ſleep from the eyelids.

3. He longs that God would hear the cauſe. Lay down now ſome pledge of appearing, put me in a ſurety with thee, let me have aſſurance that the cauſe ſhall be heard, or appoint my ſurety with thee, my Divine Redeemer, who will undertake to plead my cauſe for me, and then I am ſure of ſucceſs. Who is he that will ſtrike hands with me, and lay any thing to my charge? I ſhall then have an advocate to anſwer for me. Note, (1.) They who have Chriſt for their ſurety, may appear with boldneſs at God's bar. (2.) We may be aſſured of being accounted righteous before God, notwithſtanding any accuſations, when we have this righteous One for our advocate.

4. He imputes the charges of his friends to a judgment of infatuation upon them from God, and concludes thence their unfitneſs to be exalted as umpires in the diſpute, v. 4. Note, (1.) Wiſdom is God's gift, and when the wiſe abuſe their talent, he can infatuate and confound them. (2.) They ſhall not be exalted, but be caſt down into the pit of miſery, who employ the wiſdom God hath given them againſt the cauſe and people of God.

5. He denounces a curſe upon flatterers, ſuch as were his friends, who pretended to ſpeak for God, and to give him great expectations of proſperity, The eyes of his children ſhall fail, his family be deſolate, and find no kindneſs in their diſtreſſes. Note, Flattery is abominable, and what every wiſe and good man abhors.

6. He laments that he was now deſpiſed, though once the darling of his friends and the people. His poverty became a proverb, and his wickedneſs univerſally eſteemed the cauſe of it, v. 6. Note, (1.) We muſt place little confidence on men's regard: love and loathing, honour and infamy are often ſucceſſive. (2.) Every one is the great man's admirer; but is he reduced, how deſpicable doth he in poverty appear? It is well if we have one friend who is not ſo changeable.

7. Bitter ſorrow dimmed his eye, and continual tears wore him to a ſkeleton, v. 7. ſo deeply doth the body uſually partake in the anguiſh of the ſoul. Let us fear inordinate grief, leſt it make us ſelf-murtherers.

8. He declares what effect his ſufferings and his friends behaviour would have upon the righteous. They would be aſtoniſhed at his ſorrows and their cruelty, and riſe up with indignation to reprove the hypocriſy of ſuch as pretended to ſanctity, yet were ſo raſh in their cenſure of the innocent. Far from being diſcouraged by ſuch a dark diſpenſation, or the fear of the like uſage, they would hold on their way in purity, ſimplicity, and integrity; and inſtead of fainting, grow ſtronger and ſtronger. Perhaps he expreſſes his own confidence of doing ſo, notwithſtanding their revilings, conſcious of his righteouſneſs, and the cleanneſs of his ways before God. Note, (1.) A good man may ſee things he cannot account for in God's dealings, but he ſtaggers not through unbelief. (2.) They who are faithful to God, are zealous for him, and dare vindicate his oppreſſed cauſe and people. (3.) The bittereſt abuſe God's people ſuſtain, is uſually from formal and hypocritical profeſſors. (4.) They who are brought once into God's way, never faint nor fail, difficulties and oppoſition quicken and ſtrengthen them.

10. But as for you all, [h] do you return, and come now:
for I [i] cannot find one wiſe man among you. 11. [k] My days are paſt, my purpoſes are broken off, even the thoughts of my heart. 12. [l] They change the night into day: the light is † ſhort becauſe of darkneſs. 13. If I wait, the grave is mine houſe: I have made my bed in the darkneſs. 14. I have ſaid to corruption, Thou art my father: to the worm, Thou art my mother, and my ſiſter. 15. And where is now my hope? as for my hope, who ſhall ſee it? 16. They ſhall go down [m] to the bars of the pit, when [n] our reſt together is in the duſt.

h Chap. vi. 29.
i 1 Cor. vi. 5.
k Chap. vii. 6. & ix. 25.
l Deut. xxviii. 67.
† Heb. Near.
m Chap. xviii. 13.
n Ibid. iii. 18. & xxi. 23.

v. 10—16. From ſad experience convinced now, how little expectation he could entertain from his friends,

1. He profeſſes his deſpair of being eaſed by their counſels, in which no traces of wiſdom appeared, and unleſs they returned to a better mind, and came with more unprejudiced tempers to hear his defence, he could hope for little good from their conference, v. 10. Note, Many are wiſe in their own eyes, who in conference, are found to add nothing unto thoſe they pretend to inſtruct.

2. He concludes it folly to flatter himſelf with the hope of good days, v. 11. They are paſſed, no more to return; all his gracious purpoſes of the employment of his affluence for the good of mankind are fruſtrated, and the thoughts of his heart are ready to periſh with his body in the grave: they are ſo bitter, that they change night into day, giving him no reſt, and the light is ſhort, becauſe of the darkneſs, v. 12. the days of proſperity ſeemed but like a flaſh of paſſing light, ſucceeded by thick darkneſs; or the day obſcured with his ſorrows drew to an end, and ſcarce afforded a beam of welcome light. Note, (1.) Death will put an end to all our purpoſes, therefore what now thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might. (2.) The night is tireſome to the ſleepleſs eye, and the day dark to the ſorrowful; let us bleſs God if we ſleep in peace, and wake up chearful to meet the morning ſun.

3. His approaching end made it vain to expect a change; he looked for no houſe but the grave, no bed of laſting repoſe but the duſt, no more dear relatives but worms and corruption; his hope was gone of earthly bleſſings, which neither he nor they would live to ſee reſtored. One proſpect only was before him, They muſt go down to the bars of the pit, and reſt together there. Note, (1.) We are too apt to faint in adverſity, and when perplexed, to be in deſpair. Job little thought what good things yet awaited him. (2.) It is wiſe to keep death in our view, to make the grave familiar to us as our houſe, and every night ere we ſleep on our pillow, to remember our bed of duſt. To a gracious ſoul, death hath loſt its terror. Since Jeſus ſlept in the grave, it is but our houſe of paſſage, as travellers from time to eternity, from life to immortality. (3.) It little becomes thoſe to be proud, who are ſo nearly related to worms and corruption. (4.) They who could obtain no reſt before, in death will find it; there at leaſt fierce diſputes and animoſities will have an end.

CHAP. XVIII.

In this chapter Bildad makes a ſecond aſſault upon Job. 1. He reproves him as talkative and paſſionate, ver. 1—4. 2. He enlargeth upon the doctrine he had before maintained, concerning the miſery of wicked people, and the ruin that attends them, ver. 5—21. with an evident application to Job's caſe.

Before Chriſt 1520.

1. THEN anſwered Bildad the Shuhite, and ſaid, 2. How long will it be, [a] ere you make an end of words? mark, and afterwards we will ſpeak. 3. Wherefore are [b] we counted as beaſts, and reputed vile in your ſight? 4. [c] He teareth † himſelf in his anger: ſhall the earth be forſaken for thee? and ſhall the rock be removed out of his place?

[a] Chap. xi. 2.
[b] Ibid. xvii. 4, 10. Pſal. lxxiii. 22.
[c] Chap. xiii. 14.
† Heb. His ſoul.

v. 1—4. Sharply Bildad takes up the diſcourſe, and ſeems the more exaſperated at Job's preſumption and obſtinacy.

1. He charges him with impertinent talkativeneſs, v. 2. as if he took pleaſure in hearing his own voice, and would never have done with his idle words, (arguments or reaſon he will not call them) as if they were mere empty ſound, Vox et præterea nihil. Note, (1.) They that engroſs the converſation, and withal ſay nothing worth hearing, deſerve rebuke. (2.) It is too common with diſputants to treat each other with contempt and rudeneſs, but abuſe is not argument.

2. He intimates that he was inattentive to their ſound reaſonings, and that it was vain to ſpeak, unleſs he would pay ſome greater regard to their diſcourſe, v. 2. Note, It is endleſs ſpeaking to thoſe who will not hear.

3. He regards himſelf and his friends, as highly inſulted, v. 3. becauſe Job had, chap. xvii. 4. ſpoken of them as wanting underſtanding; and chap. xii. 7. referred them to the beaſts for wiſdom: he would infer, that he eſteemed them as brutiſh and vile. Note, Many people are apt to ſuſpect affronts that were never intended.

4. He accuſes him of mad rage. He had ſaid, chap. xvi. 9. he teareth me in his anger: No, ſays Bildad, you are your own tormentor, your paſſions are your plague. Note, Unmortified paſſions bring their curſe and puniſhment along with them.

5. He charges him with inſolent expectation, to change the ſettled order of providence: Shall the earth be forſaken becauſe of thee? ſhall God invert his method of government, and for thy ſake ceaſe to puniſh the wicked, and bleſs the righteous? and ſhall the rock be removed out of his place? the unchangeable God alter his purpoſes, and no longer give to a man according to his works? No: the ſuppoſition is preſumptuous and arrogant. He firſt takes it for granted, that Job's ſufferings were the puniſhment of his iniquity, and founds on them this heavy charge.

5. Yea, [d] the light of the wicked ſhall be put out, and the ſpark of his fire ſhall not ſhine. 6. The light ſhall be dark in his tabernacle, and [e] his † candle ſhall be put out with him. 7. The ſteps of his ſtrength ſhall be ſtraitned, and [f] his own counſel ſhall caſt him down. 8. For [g] he is caſt into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a ſnare. 9. The gin ſhall take him by the heel, and [h] the robber ſhall prevail againſt him. 10. The ſnare is ‡ laid for him in the ground, and a trap for him in the way. 11. [i] Terrors ſhall make him afraid on every ſide, and ſhall drive him to his feet. 12. His ſtrength ſhall be hunger-bitten, and [k] deſtruction ſhall be ready at his ſide. 13. It ſhall devour the || ſtrength of his ſkin: even the firſt-born of death ſhall devour his ſtrength. 14. [l] His confidence ſhall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it ſhall bring him to [m] the king of terrors. 15. It ſhall dwell in his tabernacle, becauſe it is none of his: [n] brimſtone ſhall be ſcattered upon his habitation. 16. [o] His roots ſhall be dried up beneath, and above ſhall his branch be cut off. 17. [p] His remembrance ſhall periſh from the earth, and he ſhall have no name in the ſtreet. 18. He ſhall be driven from light into darkneſs, and chaſed out of the world. 19. [q] He ſhall neither have ſon nor nephew among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings. 20. They that come after him, ſhall be aſtoniſhed at his day, as they that § went before were affrighted. 21. Surely ſuch are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him [r] that knoweth not God.

[d] Prov. xiii. 9. & xx. 20.
[e] Chap. xxi. 17.
† Or lamp.
[f] Eſth. vii. 9. Chap. v. 12, 13.
[g] Prov. v. 22.
[h] Chap. v. 5.
‡ Heb. Hidden.
[i] Chap. xv. 21. Jer. vi. 25. & xx. 4. & xlvi. 5.
[k] Chap. xv. 23.
|| Heb. Bars.
[l] Chap. viii. 14. & xi. 20. Pſal. cxii. 10. Prov. x. 28.
[m] Heb. ii. 15.
[n] Iſa. xiii. 19.
[o] Ibid. v. 24. Amos ii. 9. Mal. iv. 1.
[p] Pſal. cix. 13. Prov. ii. 22. & x. 7.
[q] Iſa. xiv. 22. Jer. xxii. 30.
§ Or lived with him.
[r] Pſal. lxxix. 6. 2 Theſ. i. 8. Tit. i. 16.

v. 5—21. Bildad here largely deſcribes the miſery of the wicked, and this with a view to Job's caſe; but he greatly erred from the mark. For though all he can ſay of a ſinful ſtate, reſpecting its puniſhment and wretchedneſs is true, yet it doth not always appear in this world; for neither are all who are ſinful outwardly afflicted and miſerable, nor do the greateſt ſufferings at all prove the want of the moſt ſolid piety.

1. Darkneſs ſhall overwhelm the wicked man. His light of proſperity ſhall be quickly extinguiſhed, the ſparks of worldly comforts he rejoiced in ſhall be quenched, his family ſhall be reduced to deep diſtreſs, and he ſhall go down to his grave in darkneſs and miſery, v. 5. 6. Note, (1.) The joys of a wicked man are but as the ſparks from a furnace, ſo quickly will they be fled and gone. (2.) There is a curſe upon the houſe of the ungodly; and as his ill example ſways thoſe who belong to him, they periſh together.

2. He ſhall be enſnared and enſlaved by afflictions; his ſtrong ſteps of health ſhall be ſtraitned by ſickneſs; or his large poſſeſſions round which he ſtalked in pride, ſhall be cut ſhort, v. 7. His craft ſhall entangle him, and be his ruin; the net he ſpread for others ſhall take his own feet, and wherever he walks, the ſnare of ſin, and conſequently miſery, is at his heels; he ſhall be caught without power to eſcape, and the robber ſhall ſpoil him, unable to make reſiſtance: hidden dangers ſurround his ſteps, and ſudden deſtruction is ready to fall on him, v. 8, 10. Note, (1.) Satan lays firſt the ſnare of ſin, and if once the ſoul cometh into his net, he will be as ſurely a tormentor as he hath been the tempter. (2.) When God leaves a wicked man to his own counſels, he ruſhes headlong into ruin.

3. Terrors make him afraid on every ſide, v. 11. within, an accuſing conſcience, before him death looks ghaſtly, the grave yawns, an offended God frowns, hell opens. He would take to his feet, but whither can he run to fly from God, or from himſelf. Note, Many a wretched ſoul flies to amuſements, cares, and diſſipations for eaſe, but vain the attempt: Hæret lateri lethalis arundo.

4. Famine and deſtruction ſhall come upon him, v. 12. devour him to his very ſkin, and the moſt terrible of deaths bring him down to his grave, v. 13. All his confidences ſhall fail him, he ſhall be rooted out of his tabernacle, after beholding the deſolations ſpread around it, and no one comfort remaining; and at laſt, as a malefactor reluctantly dragged to execution, he ſhall be brought to the King of Terrors, terrors unſpeakable, before death, in death, after death. Note, (1.) Death is terrible to nature, till grace hath diſarmed him of his mortal ſting, but to the impenitent ſinner he continues a King of Terrors, the moſt terrible of all terribles. (2.) When God ſtrikes, vain are friends and phyſicians, and every human ſupport. In that hour, the moſt infatuated ſoul will feel every creature-comfort and confidence to be vanity of vanities.

5. His family will fall with him. Death will erect his throne in the ſinner's tabernacle, nor leave it till ruin, like that which was poured on Sodom, hath utterly laid it waſte; becauſe it is none of his, being gotten by fraud and oppreſſion, or by his abuſe juſtly forfeited, v. 15. Neither root nor branch ſhall remain; ſtruck, as with the lightning's blaſt, no heir ſhall inherit his eſtate, neither ſon nor nephew; nor ſo much as a creature be left in his deſolate habitation, v. 19.

6. His memory ſhall periſh. He thought to perpetuate a great name in the earth, but the remembrance of it ſhall be blotted from the annals of time, v. 17. Darkneſs, utter and eternal, muſt receive him; driven from his proſperity reluctant and chaſed out of the world as a ſavage beaſt, whoſe death is a deliverance to the country, v. 18. Note, However great and honourable among men the proſperous ſinner appears, his end will be to lie down in ſhame and everlaſting contempt.

7. His cotemporaries, amazed at God's judgments, ſhall hear of his fall, and poſterity be aſtoniſhed at the relation, v. 20.

8. Bildad ſums up his ſpeech, with confidence of the truth of what he had ſpoken: Surely, ſuch are the dwellings of the wicked, as above deſcribed; and this is the place, the miſerable lot aſſigned the reprobate ſoul of him that knoweth not God; for ignorance of God is at the bottom of all ſin, and ruin eternal the wages of it.

In all this deſcription of a wicked man's ſufferings, there is an evident alluſion to Job's caſe; afflicted in his perſon, his family, robbed and ſpoiled, ſeeing the deſolations of his houſe, acknowledging the terrors he felt, and bemoaning his hopeleſs wretchedneſs: and hence Bildad would infer, that being like the wicked in his ſufferings, he muſt have reſembled them in his ſins.

CHAP. XIX.

This chapter contains Job's anſwer to Bildad's diſcourſe, in which, 1. He complains, (1.) That his comforters had added to his afflictions, ver. 2—7. (2.) That God was the author of them, ver. 8—12. (3.) That his relations and friends were ſtrange to him under them, ver. 13—19. (4.) That he had no pity ſhewed him, ver. 20—22. 2. He profeſſes his belief of a reſurrection, and his hopes of happineſs in it, ver. 23—27. 3. He cautions his friends againſt their hard cenſures of him, ver. 28, 29.

1. THEN Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. How long [a] will ye vex my ſoul, and break me in pieces with words? 3. Theſe ten times have ye reproached me: you are not aſhamed that you † make yourſelves ſtrange to me. 4. And be it indeed that I have erred, mine error remaineth with myſelf. 5. If indeed [b] you will magnify your ſelves againſt me, and plead againſt my reproach: 6. Know now that God hath overthrown me, and [c] hath compaſſed me with his net. 7. Behold,

[a] Pſal. xlii. 10.
† Or harden yourſelves againſt me.
[b] Pſal. xxxviii. 16.
[c] Lam. i. 13 Hoſ. vii. 12.

I cry out of ‡ wrong, but [d] I am not heard: I cry aloud, but there is no judgment.

‡ Or violence. Jer. xx 8.
[d] Jam. iv. 3.

v. 1—7. Severe and cutting were theſe harſh cenſures that Bildad laid upon this man of ſorrows. With juſt indignation therefore,

1. He complains of the cruel uſage he met with; They vexed his ſoul, added gall to his cup, attempted to rob him of his only remaining comfort, his integrity; and exaſperated his ſpirit by provocations, more than man could bear. They broke him in pieces with words, every one had a ſtone to throw at him: they reproached him as a wicked hypocrite, they were not aſhamed to make themſelves ſtrange to him, however zealouſly attached to him before; his afflictions had made them ſhy of him, and they bluſhed not at the baſeneſs of their conduct. They magnified themſelves againſt him, looked down upon, and inſulted him: they pleaded againſt him his reproach, turned his ſufferings into an argument of his hypocriſy and iniquity; and this they perſiſted in, notwithſtanding all his remonſtrances, and ten times, or ſeveral times, (a certain number for an uncertain) repeated their cruel reflections and unkindneſs. Note, (1.) Inward vexation is among the foreſt trials. (2.) Reproach hath been the portion of many a good man. (3.) Falſe friends diſcover themſelves in adverſity. (4.) They that are down, are generally trampled upon. (5.) It needs great patience to ſuſtain repeated inſult.

2. He makes a conceſſion for argument's ſake, v. 4. Be it indeed that I have erred, who is infallible? and errors of judgment deſerved not ſuch rough treatment. Beſides, mine error remaineth with myſelf; if what I hold concerning God's diſpenſations be wrong, I am only chargeable with it, and anſwerable for it: or rather I muſt remain in what you call an error, receiving not the leaſt conviction from your diſcourſes. Note, (1.) It were the heighth of folly to conceit ourſelves infallible. (2.) Truth is not the leſs precious, becauſe proud and worldly-wiſe men ſtamp it with the brand of error.

3. He warns them not raſhly to impute to God motives for his conduct he would diſavow. His ſufferings were from his hand alone; he was compaſſed with his net of afflictions, v. 6. He cried out for judgment againſt his plunderers, but was not yet heard: yea, though he cried aloud, and wiſhed the whole of his caſe might appear before God, no court was appointed for hearing it, nor judgment given, v. 7. but God knew wherefore he withheld the anſwer to his prayer, without admitting their concluſion that he was a wicked man. Note, (1.) Though our prayers may ſeem to be repulſed, we muſt not faint. (2.) Sooner or later every man's cauſe will be heard, and the righteous ſentence paſs thereon.

8. [e] He hath fenced up my way that I cannot paſs, and he hath ſet darkneſs in my paths. 9. He hath ſtript me of my glory, and taken the crown from my head. 10. He hath deſtroyed me on every ſide, and I am gone: and [f] mine hope hath he removed like a tree. 11. He hath alſo kindled his wrath againſt me, and [g] he counteth me unto him as one of his enemies. 12. His troops come [h] together, and [i] raiſe up their way againſt me, and encamp round about my tabernacle. 13. [k] He hath put my brethren far from me, and mine acquaintance are verily eſtranged from me. 14. My kinsfolk have failed, and my [l] familiar friends have forgotten me. 15. They that dwell in mine houſe, and my maids, count me for a ſtranger: I am an aliant in their ſight. 16. I called my ſervant, and he gave me no anſwer: I intreated him with my mouth. 17. [m] My breath is ſtrange to my wife, though I intreated for the children's ſake of mine own body. 18. Yea, [n] † young children deſpiſed me: I aroſe, and they ſpake againſt me. 19. [o] All ‡ my inward friends abhorred me: and they whom I loved are turned againſt me. 20. [p] My bone cleaveth to my ſkin, ‖ and to my fleſh, and I am eſcaped with the ſkin of my teeth. 21. [q] Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends, for [r] the hand of God hath touched me. 22. Why do ye perſecute me as God, and are not ſatisfied with my fleſh?

[e] Chap. iii. 23. Lam. iii. 7.
[f] Chap. xvii. 15.
[g] Ibid. xiii. 24. Lam. ii. 5.
[h] Pſal. xxxiv. 19.
[i] Chap. xxx. 12.
[k] Pſal. xxxi. 11. & xxxviii. 11. & lxix. 8. & lxxxviii. 8, 18.
[l] Mic. vii. 5.
[m] Chap. xvii. 1.
[n] 2 Kings ii. 23.
† Or the wicked.
[o] Pſal. xli. 9. & lv. 13, 14, 20.
‡ Heb. The men of my ſecret.
[p] Chap. xxx. 30. Pſal. cii. 5. Lam. iv. 8.
‖ Or as to my fleſh.
[q] Heb. xiii. 2.
[r] Chap. i. 11. Pſal. xxxviii. 2.

v. 8—22. Job acknowledged the hand of God in his afflictions, and here,

1. Complains of the diſpleaſure of God therein manifeſted. Like a benighted traveller in a wood, with briars and thorns God had hedged up his way, v. 8. and he could ſee no path out of his troubles. As one ſeized by robbers he had loſt his all, ſtripped of his earthly comforts, children, honours, and eſtate, v. 9. deſtroyed on every ſide, his hope was gone, as a tree rooted up and dry, that never can revive again, v. 10. more bitter than any thing beſide, God's wrath appeared kindled againſt him, and he ſeemed to treat him as an enemy, compaſſing him with legions of afflictions, and ſore preſſing him on every ſide like a beſieged city, v. 11, 12. Note, (1.) The people of God are apt to write bitter things againſt themſelves, and to miſtake the rod of love for the ſcourge of ruin. (2.) Hope is the laſt ſupport of the miſerable; when that is gone, the caſe is deplorable indeed. (3.) Though we may ſee no way to eſcape out of temptation, he who laid the trial upon us, knows how to bring us through it with ſafety.

2. He laments the unkindneſs of his friends and acquaintance, wherein alſo he ſees God's afflicting hand, His brethren he had put far from him. It was their ſin that they were ſo faithleſs to him, but it was of God who ſuffered them. His relations failed him, his acquaintance ſhunned him, his familiar friends forſook him, v. 13, 14. his very domeſtics ſlighted him, and would not vouchſafe him an anſwer, though he called and entreated, v. 15, 16. yea, the wife of his boſom cared not to come near him, and ſhunned his breath, as if infectious; and though he beſought her by every endearing tie of conjugal affection, ſhe paid no regard to his entreaty, v. 17. Even the children in the ſtreets had learned of their ungodly parents to mock at him; and as he went, or aroſe to correct and ſilence them, they continued to revile him, v. 18. nay, his boſom friends, whom he loved as his own ſoul, not only forſook but abhorred him; not only as loathſome, but as a wicked hypocrite, v. 19. and to juſtify their own perfidy, turned againſt him with the moſt virulent abuſe. Note, (1.) They who are under frowning Providences, will often ſee cauſe of complaint againſt man's baſeneſs and ingratitude. (2.) The nearer the relation, the greater our love, and juſt expectations of a due return, the bitterer will be the diſappointment.

3. He bemoans the painful and diſeaſed condition of his miſerable body, v. 20. reduced and emaciated by his ſores and ſorrows, till his bones appeared ready to ſtart through his ſkin, and that all over ulcerated, except his gums or lips; Satan leaving him the uſe of ſpeech, not out of compaſſion, but that he might curſe God.

4. He entreats, on this repreſentation of his caſe, the pity of his friends, v. 21: if they would grant him nothing more, his very miſeries deſerved that at leaſt: and upbraids them with the ſavage cruelty of perſecuting thus him whom God had ſmitten, as if in his ſtead, and veſted with his authority, not content with all the miſeries he had already ſuffered, and ſtriving to fill to the brim the cup of his afflictions, v. 22. Note, (1.) The leaſt we owe to human woe is pity; a friend will do more, he will partake in it, and labour to relieve, or alleviate the ſorrows of the afflicted. (2.) It is doubly grievous where God hath wounded, inſtead of binding up the broken-hearted, to aggravate their pains.

23. Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! 24. That they were graven with an iron pen and lead, in the rock for ever! 25. † For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that [s] he ſhall ſtand at the latter day ‡ upon the earth. 26. ‖ And though after my ſkin, worms deſtroy this body, yet in my fleſh [t] ſhall I ſee God: 27. Whom I ſhall ſee for myſelf, and mine eyes ſhall behold, and not § another; † though my reins be conſumed within me. 28. But ye ſhould ſay, [u] Why perſecute we him, ſeeing the root of the matter is found in me? 29. Be ye afraid of the ſword: for wrath bringeth the puniſhments of the ſword, [x] that ye may know there is a judgment.

† Or namely.
[s] Dan. vii. 9. Mat. xxvi. 64. Rev. i. 6.
‡ Or above.
‖ Or after I awake, tho' this body be deſtroyed, yet, &c.
[t] Pſal. xvii. 15. 1 Cor. xiii. 12. 1 John iii. 2.
§ Heb. A ſtranger.
† Heb. My reins are conſumed in my boſom.
[u] Ver. 22.
[x] Mat. vii. 2. Jam. ii. 13.

v. 23—29. We have here the glorious confeſſion of Job's faith, as his great and only ſupport, when all beſide ſeemed deſperate. His friends might be convinced hereby he was neither infidel nor wicked; he believed in a Divine Redeemer, and expected with confidence a judgment day; when, if not before, all their unjuſt accuſations would be confuted and confounded: and this is to all unjuſtly aſperſed by calumny, and oppreſſed by the world, an encouraging expectation. Some have explained this remarkable ſcripture away as relative only to a temporal reſtitution, but it is evident, v. 10. this he utterly deſpaired of; and chap. xxiii. 8, 9. xxx. 23. it appears he had not the leaſt hope of proſperity returning in this world, and therefore he looked beyond the grave, into a better, where his ſoul had caſt anchor within the vail.

1. He prefaces his expectation with an earneſt wiſh, that the words he was now about to ſay, might be perpetuated to all ages, as a ſtanding monument of his faith and hope, graven in the rock with an iron pen, and filled up with lead: perhaps he wiſhed this inſcription might be written on his tomb-ſtone, to teſtify when he was dead, the ſentiments he entertained when alive. Note, It is for the glory of God, and the good of poſterity, to leave behind us teſtimonies of our faith and hope; that in their works and writings, good men, like Job and Abel, (though dead) might ſtill ſpeak.

2. His confeſſion deſerves to be written, not merely in letters of lead on the rock, but on tables of gold, or rather on fleſhly tables of our hearts for ever. For, or namely, this is what I would have inſcribed on the rock, I know that my redeemer liveth, my divine Goel, to whom the right of redemption belongs; he lives from everlaſting to everlaſting, and that he ſhall ſtand at the latter day upon the earth, when he appears incarnate for his people's ſalvation; or rather above the earth, when he ſhall come in the clouds of heaven to judgment, with power and great glory, and all nations ſhall be aſſembled before him to receive their final doom: and though after my ſkin, worms deſtroy this body in the grave, and corruption utter and univerſal conſume this mortal tabernacle, yet in my fleſh ſhall I ſee God. In the reſurrection day, when, reſcued from the duſt my fleſh ſhall be reſtored, and with my bodily eyes ſhall I behold God manifeſt in the perſon of my Redeemer, whom I ſhall ſee for myſelf, with joy unutterable, and mine eyes, theſe eyes now dim with tears, ſhall behold his glory, and not another, or a ſtranger, an ungodly man, ſhall have no ſuch delight or comfort in meeting him. Though my reins, (or better without the Though) My reins are conſumed within me, or in my boſom; my ſoul is conſumed with eager longing for this day of my Redeemer's appearance and glory. Note, (1.) The faith in an incarnate Redeemer was the only ſupport of the ſaints of God in every age. (2.) The Lord Jeſus hath offered himſelf to redeem for fallen man God's forfeited favour, and the heavenly inheritance, and in him our right to both is reſtored. (3.) He ever liveth, therefore his people cannot periſh, for his advocacy is all-prevailing for them, and his grace all-ſufficient in them. (4.) A comfortable certainty of his intereſt in the Redeemer's regard, is the believer's privilege: he may ſay, He is mine, and add, I know it, by bleſſed and delightful experience. (5.) The hope of a judgment-day is the ſupport of God's ſuffering ſaints. (6.) Tho' our bodies return to the duſt, they are not loſt in the grave, but every particle locked up as in a treaſure-houſe, and preſerved againſt the reſurrection-day. (7.) In the viſion of the ever bleſſed God conſiſts the glorious happineſs of the redeemed. (8.) Every day which brings us nearer to our laſt day, our deſires ſhould be more enlarged, and our longings for it more eager, whilſt we ceaſe not to pray, Come, Lord Jeſus, come quickly.

3. He intimates the effect his declaration ſhould have upon them. Inſtead of uſing him as they did, they ſhould rather ſay, Why perſecute we him, ſeeing the root of the matter is in him? He is ſound in the faith, and appears to be no hypocrite. At leaſt, they ought to tremble for the conſequences, if they perſevered to ill-uſe him. Be ye afraid of the ſword of divine juſtice, for wrath bringeth the puniſhment of the ſword; an offended God will draw it from the ſcabbard, that ye may know there is a judgment, and woe unto you if he ſet his face againſt you. Note, (1.) If a man have the root of the matter in him, and is ſound in fundamentals, leſſer differences ſhould be overlooked. (2.) All perſecution for conſcience-ſake is deteſtable; and how eſpecially guilty muſt it be, to oppreſs thoſe who hold one faith, one hope, one God, one Redeemer with us, merely becauſe they will not ſquare every opinion to our own, or, however weak their objections, diſlike our form of worſhip, dreſs, or ceremonies. (3.) In a day of judgment, bigotry and cenſoriouſneſs towards our brethren will be remembered, and if it deſtroy not our hope, it will tarniſh our crown.

CHAP. XX.

One would have thought that ſuch an excellent confeſſion of faith as Job made in the cloſe of the foregoing chapter, ſhould have ſatisfied his friends, or at leaſt have mollified them; but they ſeem deaf to all his pleas. Zophar in turn immediately riſes up to reply. 1. With warmth he introduces his diſcourſe, ver. 1—3. 2. The ſubject of it is nothing new, but Bildad's arguments expreſſed in lofty language, ver. 4—29. This was all they could ſay, and this they reſolved never to deſiſt from, that he was miſerably afflicted, and therefore muſt be vilely wicked; as if, however God may ſometimes viſit the ungodly here below, he never varied this method of his providence.

1. THEN anſwered Zophar the Naamathite, and ſaid, 2. Therefore do my thoughts cauſe me to anſwer, and for this I make haſte. 3. I have heard [a] the check of my reproach, and the ſpirit of my underſtanding cauſeth me to anſwer.

[a] Chap. xix. 29.

v. 1—3. Zophar in haſte riſes to vindicate himſelf and friends from the unjuſt aſperſions, as he imagined, of cruelty and perſecution, which Job caſt upon them. Big with matter, his thoughts ſwelled in his boſom, and forced a vent at his lips. He interprets what he had heard as an high provocation, and, confident that reaſon was on their ſide, and ſolid underſtanding only with them, he ſpeaks as under the influence of the ſpirit of wiſdom, and demands therefore attention. Note, (1.) They who are moſt confident, are ſeldom moſt in the right. (2.) Prejudice and pride make men interpret the kindeſt warning into an affront, and return it with inſolence. (3.) The dictates of paſſion often paſs for the voice of reaſon; ſo partial is every man apt to be in his own cauſe.

4. Knoweſt thou not this of old, ſince man was placed upon earth, 5. That [b] the triumphing of the wicked is ſhort, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment? 6. [c] Though his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the clouds: 7. Yet he ſhall periſh for ever, like his own dung: [d] they which have ſeen him, ſhall ſay, Where is he? 8. He ſhall fly away [e] as a dream, and ſhall not be found: yea, he ſhall be chaſed away as a viſion of the night. 9. [f] The eye alſo which ſaw him, ſhall ſee him no more; neither ſhall his place any more behold him.

[b] Pſ. xxxvii. 35, 36. Dan. iv. 31. Acts xii. 23.
[c] Iſa. xiv. 13, 14. Obad. 4.
[d] Pſ. xxxvii. 36.
[e] Pſ. lxxiii. 20. & xc. 5.
[f] Chap. vii. 8, 10. & viii. 18. Pſ. xxxvii. 36. & ciii. 16.

v. 4—9. He here opens his argument. The deſtruction of the wicked is ſpeedy and certain, and therefore, from Job's afflictions this character muſt needs belong to him. He appeals to all antiquity, in proof of the doctrine he was about to advance, v. 4. Since the day Adam was placed on the earth, the miſery of the wicked had been uniform and perpetual; witneſs Cain, the flood, the deſtruction of Sodom, &c. The triumphing of the wicked was ever ſhort, and the hypocrite's joy momentary. Whether their character was abandoned wickedneſs or hypocritical profeſſion, avowed irreligion or the form of godlineſs without the power of it, their damnation ſlumbered not, v. 5. Though for a while indeed iniquity might be triumphant, and hypocriſy undetected, v. 6. yet ruin final and eternal awaited them, v. 7. Their proſperity ſhall be paſſing as the dream, unſubſtantial as the forms of fancy in the viſions of the night, v. 8, and they ſhall be loathſome as their own dung, v. 7. With ſurprize they who paſſed by them in their exaltation, ſhall, at their return, enquire what is become of all their greatneſs, v. 7. now buried with them in the grave, where no eye ſhall any more behold them, v. 9. Note, (1.) However long a wicked man's proſperity, or a hypocrite's profeſſion, laſts in this world, it may well be counted ſhort and momentary, compared with the eternity which approaches. (2.) Sin and ruin, though not always in this life, ſhall, in the next, appear certainly inſeparable. (3.) They who lift their heads to the clouds in ſinful proſperity, or proud ſelf-righteouſneſs, are only thus ſuffered to mount, in order to fall deeper into the pit of deſtruction, where, of all others, the hypocrite's portion will be moſt terrible, See Mat. xxiv. 51.

10. † His children ſhall ſeek to pleaſe the poor, and his hands [g] ſhall reſtore their goods. 11. His bones are [h] full of the ſin of his youth, [i] which ſhall lie down with him in the duſt. 12. Though wickedneſs be [k] ſweet in his mouth, though he hide it under his tongue; 13. Though he ſpare it, and forſake it not: but keep it ſtill ‡ within his mouth: 14. Yet his meat in his bowels is turned, it is the gall of aſps within him. 15. He hath ſwallowed down riches, and [l] he ſhall vomit them up again: God ſhall caſt them out of his belly. 16. He ſhall ſuck the poiſon of aſps: the viper's tongue ſhall ſlay him. 17. [m] He ſhall not ſee the rivers, the floods, the brooks of honey and butter. 18. That which he laboured for, [n] ſhall he reſtore, and ſhall not ſwallow it down: according to his ſubſtance ſhall the reſtitution be, and he ſhall not rejoice therein. 19. Becauſe he hath § oppreſſed, and [o] hath forſaken the poor; becauſe he hath violently taken away an houſe which he builded not. 20. [p] Surely he ſhall not feel quietneſs in his belly, he ſhall not ſave of that which he deſired. 21. ‖ There ſhall none of his meat be left; therefore ſhall no man look for his goods.

† Or, the poor ſhall oppreſs his children.
[g] Ver. 18.
[h] Chap. xiii. 26.
[i] Chap. xxi. 20.
[k] Prov. ix. 17.
‡ Heb. In the midſt of his palate.
[l] Mat. xxvii. 3, 4.
[m] 2 Kings vii. 2. Jer. xvii. 6.
[n] Ver. 10.
§ Heb. Cruſhed.
[o] Mat. xxv. 42. Jam. ii. 13.
[p] Ecclef. v. 13, 14.
‖ Or, there ſhall be none left for his meat. Jer. xvii. 11.

v. 10—21. In a variety of inſtances Zophar expatiates on the miſery of the wicked in this world. His children ſhall ſeek to pleaſe the poor, or, being poor, ſhall pleaſe. Men will take pleaſure to ſee them reduced, and the ill-gotten gain vaniſhed, which by force their father ſhall be compelled to reſtore, v. 10. Full of the ſins of youth, luſt, drunkenneſs, gluttony, quarrels, his bones ſhall be rotten with diſeaſes, and they ſhall not only bring him to the grave, but the curſe of ſin for ever reſt upon him dead as alive, v. 11. Sweet as the draughts were of pleaſurable iniquity, and delightful as the indulgence of his appetites; cheriſhed as his luſts were in his boſom, and concealed to ſave his character and credit among men, v. 12, 13. yet ſhall thoſe acts of ſin, that ſeemed ſo ſweet in the proſpect, and ſo tranſporting in the enjoyment, breed afterwards loathing, and pangs within ſucceed, bitter as gall to the conſcience, and poiſonous to the ſoul as the venom of the aſp, v. 14. The fruits of his inſatiate covetouſneſs, which he ſwallowed as a hungry man his food, he ſhall diſgorge, either by his own terrified conſcience compelling him to reſtitution, or by God's Providence reſtoring to the right owner the ſpoils of wickedneſs, v. 15. Diſeaſe, fatal as the poiſon of aſps, and painful as the viper's bite, ſhall ſeize him, as the juſt wages of his iniquity, v. 16.

Before Chriſt 1520.

v. 16. His affluence, in which he once gloried, and for which he laboured ſo long and unweariedly, v. 17. ſhall fail him, like the ſtreams of a brook dried up. When each one hath got their own, v. 18. nothing ſhall be left to comfort him. Becauſe of his oppreſſion, he ſhall carry about with him a tormented conſcience, v. 20. and ſhall ſave not the ſmalleſt portion of all his deſireable acquiſitions. He ſhall be reduced to pining hunger, v. 21. and not the leaſt pittance be left for his heirs: ſo univerſal ſhall be his deſolations. Note, (1.) Youthful ſins, however lightly accounted of, have terrible conſequences. (2.) God often makes men's iniquities their preſent plague; and diſeaſe, deformity, pain, contempt, and loathing, are ſeen in this world to be the wages of ſin. (3.) The ſweeteſt ſins produce the moſt bitter remembrances, both now in the pangs of conſcience, and hereafter in hell, where the worm never dies. (4.) They purchaſe preſent pleaſure and greatneſs dear, who, for the ſake of theſe, expoſe themſelves to everlaſting pain and contempt. (5.) The gains of covetouſneſs and oppreſſion are often ſhort-lived: what is gotten by wickedneſs, is uſually ſquandered in profuſion.

22. In the fulneſs of his ſufficiency he ſhall be in ſtraits: every hand of the † wicked ſhall come upon him. 23. [q] When he is about to fill his belly, God ſhall caſt the fury of his wrath upon him, and ſhall rain it upon him, while he is eating. 24. [r] He ſhall flee from the iron weapon, and the bow of ſteel ſhall ſtrike him through. 25. It is drawn and cometh out of the body; yea, [s] the gliſtering ſword cometh out of his gall; [t] terrors are upon him. 26. All darkneſs ſhall be hid in his ſecret places: [u] a fire not blown ſhall conſume him; it ſhall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle. 27. The heaven ſhall reveal his iniquity: and [x] the earth ſhall riſe up againſt him. 28. [y] The increaſe of his houſe ſhall depart, and his goods ſhall flow away in the day of his wrath. 29. [z] This is the portion of a wicked man from God, and the heritage ‡ appointed unto him by God.

† Or, troubleſome.
q Num. xi. 33.
r Iſa. xxiv. 18. Jer. xlviii. 43. Amos v. 19.
s Chap. xvi. 13.
t Chap. xviii. 11.
u Heb. xii. 29.
x Iſa. xxvi. 21.
y Rev. xviii. 17.
z Chap. xxvii. 13. & xxxi. 2. Mat. xxiv. 31.
‡ Heb. Of his decree from God.

v. 22—29. We have here the wicked man brought to his final exit.

In the midſt of his ſufficiency and abundance, the fears of want ſhall make him poor, and prevent him from the uſe of what he hath; or his deſtruction ſhall then ſuddenly deſcend upon him, and the wicked ſpoil him, as the Chaldeans had done to Job, v. 22. Whilſt the meat is yet in his mouth, and he is in the mid-purſuit of his luſts and covetouſneſs, the wrath of an offended God, furious as the whirlwind, ſhall be hurled upon him, to cruſh him under the intolerable weight; and miſeries, like a deluge of rain, beat upon him, v. 23. When God purſues, flight will be vain: judgment upon judgment, terrible to feel, as unavoidable to eſcape, ſhall light upon him; the barbed arrow pierces him, the glittering ſword ſtrikes him through the liver; mortally wounded he falls; the terrors of death ſeize him, convulſive agonies of body, tormenting pangs of conſcience, horrible the preſent anguiſh, but more intolerable the fears of futurity, v. 24, 25. Darkneſs utter and eternal awaits him, reſerved for him among God's treaſures of vengeance; the fire of hell unquenchable, which God himſelf hath kindled, ſhall conſume him, v. 26. Miſery and ruin ſhall be entailed upon his poſterity: his ſins, however ſecret, ſhall be brought to light; or judgments immediately from God, as the burning of Sodom, ſhall proclaim his atrocious guilt, and all the powers of nature appear armed againſt him in God's quarrel, v. 27. In this day of wrath his deſolations ſhall be accompliſhed, and all he hath ſhall finally periſh with him, v. 28. Such is the portion of the wicked man, deſcending to him as ſurely as the inheritance to the heir, and the heritage appointed unto him by God, by that divine decree, which cannot fail of its accompliſhment. Note, (1.) The wrath of God aſſuredly abides on the moſt joyous ſinner, and he will ſhortly make him feel its fury. (2.) How terrible will be the hypocrite's diſappointment, that lies down dreaming of happineſs, and awakes in hell! (3.) There is no eſcaping from God's purſuit: they who will not flee to him for mercy, cannot fly from him in judgment. (4. If wicked men would but conſider their latter end, it would give a check to their revels, and awaken ſome ſalutary concern about eſcaping the wrath to come. (5.) The moſt ſecret ſins cannot be long concealed; a judgment-day will unveil every man's heart and ways. (6.) The portion of the wicked is this certain, terrible, inevitable ruin; though not in time, yet, what is infinitely worſe, in eternity.

The diſcourſe of Zophar thus affords awakening truths, and though, levelled againſt Job, it was groſsly miſapplied, yet may miniſter abundant inſtruction, when conſidered as a warning againſt the ways and miſerable end of the ungodly and the hypocrite.

Before Chriſt 1520.

CHAP. XXI.

We have here, Job's reply to Zophar's diſcourſe, diveſted much of former paſſionate complaints, and chiefly employed on the topic in diſpute. 1. He begs them to weigh his words, and conſider his ſufferings, ver. 1—6. 2. He deſcribes the proſperity of the wicked, 7—13. and their impiety, ver. 14—16. Then foretels their ruin, ver. 17—21. But though allowing ſuch examples are ſometimes made, yet God's diſpenſations even to them are different, many living and dying in eaſe and affluence, ver. 22—26. and that it was in the next world only, where their recompenſe awaited them; and therefore their concluſions againſt him were wrong, ver. 27—34. and herein he hath evidently truth and experience on his ſide.

1. BUT Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. Hear diligently my ſpeech, and let this be your conſolations. 3. Suffer me that I may ſpeak, and after that I have ſpoken, [a] mock on. 4. As for me, is my complaint to man? and if it were ſo, why ſhould not my ſpirit be troubled? 5. † Mark me, and be aſtoniſhed, and [b] lay your hand upon your mouth. 6. Even when I remember, [c] I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my fleſh.

a Chap. xvi. 10. & xvii. 2.
† Heb. Look unto, or upon me.
b Judg. xviii. 19. Chap. xxix. 9. & xl. 4. Pſ. xxxix. 9.
c Pſ. cxix. 120. Hab. iii. 16.

v. 1—6. Before Job enters on the point in hand, he begs,

1. An attentive hearing, and that pride and prejudice might not reject the conviction of the truths he urged. Hear diligently my ſpeech, as thoſe who deſire ſimply to inveſtigate the truth, and wiſhed, if miſtaken, to be undeceived; and this ſhall be your conſolations; you will yourſelf find the comfort of having uſed all proper means of coming to the knowledge of the truth; or this is all the conſolation I expect from you, a fair and candid hearing. Suffer me that I may ſpeak, without interruption, and after that I have ſpoken, mock on, continue to inſult me, if this be your reſolution, in ſpite of all my arguments. Note, A patient hearing, at leaſt, is due to every man. It is high injuſtice to condemn without permitting the accuſed to ſpeak in their own defence.

2. It was not to them he at firſt complained, nor would they be his judges, and therefore they need not have taken up the matter ſo hardly againſt him. Is my complaint to man? no; but to God, who knew the bitterneſs of his ſufferings, and from whom alone he could hope for redreſs; and if it were ſo, why ſhould not my ſpirit be troubled? when all his prayers and tears had yet met no relief, but rather provoked the raſh cenſures of his friends, who condemned him for a hypocrite. Note, If God were not kinder to us than our deareſt friends, we ſhould ſometimes have hard meaſure.

3 He bids them behold his caſe, and ſurely it deſerved their pity. Mark me, my words, my ſufferings, and be aſtoniſhed at the ſtrangeneſs of my afflictions; and lay your hand upon your mouth, pretend not to fathom the ways of God's unſearchable providence, and forbear to judge of men's characters by their outward lot in this world. Even when I remember the days that are paſt, the afflictions that had befallen himſelf, or the inſtances of the proſperity of the wicked he was about to mention, I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my fleſh. What I feel, though it ſhakes not my confidence of my integrity, greatly diſtreſſes me; and what I ſee of the ways of God's providence with the wicked, aſtoniſhes me. I wonder and adore, waiting in affecting ſuſpenſe the awful iſſue. Note, (1.) There are myſterious diſpenſations of providence, that ſtagger ſometimes the faith and hope of good men. (2.) We muſt wait till the great day of God for the final vindication of his ways to man.

7. Wherefore do [d] the wicked live, become old, yea, [e] are mighty in power? 8. Their ſeed is eſtabliſhed in their ſight with them, and their offspring before their eyes. 9. Their houſes are ſafe from fear, [f] neither is the rod of God upon them. 10. Their bull gendereth and faileth not, their cow calveth and caſteth not her calf. 11. They ſend forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance. 12. They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the ſound of the organ. 13. [g] They ſpend their days in † wealth, and [h] in a moment go down to the grave. 14. Therefore they ſay unto God, [i] Depart from us; for we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways. 15. [k] What is the Almighty, that we ſhould ſerve him? and [l] what profit ſhould we have if we pray unto him? 16. Lo, ‡ their good is not in their hand: [m] the counſel of the wicked is far from me.

d Chap. xii. 6. Pſ. xvii. 10. & lxxiii. 3, 12. Jer. xii. 1. Hab. i. 16.
e Rev. xiii. 4. & xvii. 4.
f Pſ. lxxiii. 5.
g Chap. xxxvi. 11.
† Or mirth.
Luke xii. 19.
h Mat. xxiv. 38.
i Chap. xxii. 17. Luke xix. 14.
k Exod. v. 2. Chap. xxxiv. 9.
l Chap. xxxv. 3. Mal. iii. 14.
‡ Or, Is not their good in their hand?
Chap. xxii. 18. Pſ. xvii. 14. Luke vi. 24.
m Gen. xlix. 6. Pſ. i. 1.

v. 7—16. Job's friends had inſiſted upon it, that there was no ſuch thing as proſperous iniquity; at leaſt, that it was momentary. Experience, ſays Job, contradicts your aſſertion; the wicked live and die in eaſe and affluence, yea, are hardened by it; yet this God often permits, without being either chargeable with want of wiſdom or juſtice in his government of the world.

1. He deſcribes their proſperity. Wherefore do the wicked live, if it be as you ſay? how do they become old, and are not cut off with any remarkable judgments, yea, are mighty in power? ſo far from being deſtitute or deſolate, they bear the ſway in the world. How is this conſiſtent with your aſſertions? yet there are undeniable inſtances of what I advance. Their families are built up, and they live to ſee them well ſettled. Their ſubſtance is protected, v. 8. and no rod of affliction upon them. v. 9. Their worldly affairs in the minuteſt inſtances proſper, v. 10. Their children are numerous as a flock, their houſes are full of joy and mirth, and they devote to dance and ſong the jocund day, v. 11, 12. The hours paſs along in pleaſure and ſenſual indulgence, and without a groan they go down to the grave, in a moment, without any of the miſeries Zophar had deſcribed; or quietly ſtupid and inſenſible, without apparent fear or terror, v. 13. Note, (1.) No man is to be judged of by his outward proſperity; we muſt take in eternity to make a right eſtimate of man's eſtate. Nemo felix ante obitum. (2.) Worldly wealth abuſed to gratify ſenſual appetite, is a curſe inſtead of a bleſſing.

2. He ſuggeſts the ill effect of their proſperity; it hardened their hearts againſt God, and led them to infidelity. Therefore, becauſe poſſeſſed of ſuch wealth, and living, in conſequence thereof, in a round of vanity and worldly luſts, they ſay unto God, Depart from us; they wiſh to leave him far above out of their ſight, and that no remembrance of him ſhould diſturb their conſcience, and interrupt their joys; for we deſire not the knowledge of thy ways. The paths of godlineſs appear forbidding and melancholy, compared with pleaſure's flowery way; and they wiſh for no unwelcome interruption, from grave leſſons and religion's needful reſtraints. Their lives make it their intereſt that God ſhould not interfere with the concerns of men; and therefore, tho' perhaps not in words expreſſed, yet the ſentiments of their hearts are, What is the Almighty? or who is he, that we ſhould ſerve him? Perhaps there is no God; or, if there be, he careth not about the petty affairs of men: the terrors of his arm are but the bugbears of prieſts, to frighten the mind of the ſuperſtitious; and what profit ſhould we have if we pray unto him? a taſk uſeleſs and unneceſſary, whence nothing can be got. So thinks the blinded ſinner, loſt in indulgence, and enſlaved by diverſe fooliſh and hurtful luſts, which drown men in perdition and deſtruction. Note, (1.) A pleaſure-loving world is ever jealous of the incroachments of religion, and wiſhes to be ignorant, leſt, coming for a moment to the light, they ſhould not be able, with ſuch quietneſs of conſcience, to return to the purſuit of their vanities. (2.) Irreligion is the parent of infidelity: we eaſily perſuade ourſelves what we deſire to believe. (3.) Though a wicked and careleſs world ſees no profit in prayer, a child of God by bleſſed experience finds his richeſt acquiſitions are got upon his knees.

3. Job puts in a caveat, not to be miſinterpreted, as if in this deſcription of the wicked he concurred with, or approved of, their ways. No; he knew their ſlippery ſteps. Lo, their good is not in their hand; what they enjoy is tranſitory and fading; or, is it not in their hand? They have their portion in this life alone, and no hope hereafter; but the counſel of the wicked is far from me; I neither ſay as they ſay, nor do as they do. Note, When we are ſpeaking with thoſe we know to be captious, we need be the more explicit, that we may not be miſunderſtood.

17. [n] How oft is the † candle of the wicked put out? and how oft cometh their deſtruction upon them? God diſtributeth ſorrows in his anger. 18. [o] They are as ſtubble before the wind, and as chaff that the ſtorm carrieth away. 19. God layeth up his iniquity [p] for his children: [q] he rewardeth him, and he ſhall know it. 20. His eyes ſhall ſee his deſtruction, and [r] he ſhall drink of the wrath of the Almighty. 21. For what pleaſure hath he in his houſe after him, when the number of his months is cut off [s] in the midſt? 22. [t] Shall any teach God knowledge? ſeeing he judgeth thoſe that are high. 23. One dieth in ‡ his full ſtrength, being wholly at eaſe and quiet. 24. His breaſts are full of milk, and his bones are moiſtened with marrow. 25. And another dieth in the bitterneſs of his ſoul, and never eateth with pleaſure. 26. They ſhall lie down § alike in the duſt, and [u] the worms ſhall cover them.

[n] Chap. xviii. 6.
† Or lamp.
[o] Pſ. i. 4. & xxxv. 5. Iſa. xvii. 13. & xxix. 5. Hoſ. xiii. 3.
[p] Exod. xx. 5.
[q] Rev. xviii. 6.
[r] Pſ. lxxv. 8. Jer. xxv. 15. Rev. xiv. 10. & xx. 15.
[s] Pſ. lv. 23.
[t] Iſa. xl. 13. & xlv. 9. Rom. xi. 34. 1 Cor. ii. 16.
‡ Heb. His very perfection.
§ Or together. Chap. iii. 18.
[u] Iſa. xiv. 11.

v. 17—26. Having deſcribed the proſperity of the ungodly, he maintains,

1. The continuance of it. How oft is the candle of the wicked, his proſperity, put out? doth it not often burn to the laſt? How oft cometh deſtruction upon them? is not the very contrary ſeen to be the caſe? Doth God diſtribute ſorrows in his anger? no; he lives at eaſe, and knows no affliction. How oft, as his friends had ſuggeſted, are they as ſtubble before the wind, and as chaff that the ſtorm carrieth away? experience ſhews the reverſe to be true. Note, Though ſome inſtances of God's interpoſition againſt the wicked appear, more commonly they live and die undiſturbed in their poſſeſſions.

2. He anſwers an objection, that though themſelves do not ſuffer, God layeth up iniquity for his children; but admitting it, that would not at all prove the concluſions Job's friends would draw; for they require, that God ſhould reward him in this life, and he ſhould know it. His eyes ſhould ſee the deſtruction, and he ſhould drink of the wrath of the Almighty, in his own perſon, according to their principles; for elſe, what pleaſure, or what buſineſs hath he in his houſe after him? after death, when their joys or ſorrows cannot affect him, when the number of his months is cut off in the midſt, and he goes down to the grave.

Perhaps this whole paſſage may bear a different view, as a conceſſion, that oftentimes the wicked might ſuffer, but it was not always the caſe, and that were ſufficient to invalidate their arguments. Note, (1.) A wicked parent entails the curſe of God upon his family. (2.) There is a cup of trembling filled with the wine of the wrath of God, that will ſhortly be put into the hand of the ungodly.

3. He maintains the ſovereignty of God in all theſe diſpenſations, Shall any teach God knowledge? pretend to direct his procedure, ſeeing he judgeth thoſe that are high, who muſt ſhortly appear at his bar, when righteous judgment will be adminiſtered. Till then it were preſumption to judge of men's character by their outward circumſtances; for here men equally wicked have very different ends: one in the midſt of proſperity, eaſe, and affluence, goes down to the grave; another, after long lingering in miſery. Or it may intimate the different kinds of death men meet; ſome by a ſudden and unexpected ſtroke, others waſted by ſickneſs and long decay: but in the duſt all difference will be at an end, and the worms alike cover them. Note, (1.) God is ſovereign and juſt; he doth indeed what he will, but what he wills is always holy, juſt, and good. (2.) The ſtrongeſt health is no protection from the ſtroke of ſudden death: it becomes us each moment to be prepared. (3.) If we have eaſe and appetite, whilſt others groan in pain, and loath their food, let us be thankful, and improve the mercy before the evil days come. (4.) However the wicked die, they will meet in one place; whether they go from the palace or the dunghil, they will lie down in flames, and the worm that never dies ſhall alike prey upon them.

27. Behold, I know your thoughts, and the devices which ye wrongfully imagine againſt me. 28. For ye ſay, Where is the houſe of the prince? and where are † the dwelling-places of the wicked? 29. Have ye not aſked them that go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens? 30. That [y] the wicked is reſerved to the day of deſtruction; they ſhall be brought forth to the day of ‡ wrath. 31. Who ſhall declare his way to his face? and who ſhall repay him what he hath done? 32. § Yet ſhall he be brought to the grave, and ſhall ‖ remain in the tomb. 33. The clods of the valley ſhall be ſweet unto him, and [z] every man ſhall draw after him, as there are innumerable before him. 34. How then comfort ye me in vain, ſeeing in your anſwers there remaineth † falſhood?

[x] Chap. i. 19.
† Heb. The tent of the tabernacles of the wicked.
[y] Prov. xvi. 4. 2 Pet. ii. 9.
‡ Heb. Wraths.
§ Or, At length he is brought.
‖ Heb. Watch in the heap.
[z] Heb. ix. 27.
† Heb. Tranſgreſſion.

v. 27—34.

1. Job intimates his thorough knowledge of his friends deſign in their former ſpeeches. He ſaw they concluded him a hypocrite, though wrongfully, and that merely becauſe his dwelling was deſolate, as they argued was the conſtant caſe with the wicked, v. 28. Note, Men's looks and inuendoes ſpeak as plain as any language can.

2. He refers them to any traveller for confutation of their aſſertions, who could give them ſure proofs and tokens, that wicked men were generally in proſperity. This is not the place of recompence, but the next world; there they will receive according to their deeds, and every good man, a traveller to glory, would inform them, if they aſked, that the wicked is reſerved to the day of deſtruction; they ſhall be brought forth to the day of wrath; certain and eternal ruin is their portion hereafter, though now they are great and proſper. Here they are too high to be reproved, and too mighty to be reſtrained by the arm of human juſtice, v. 31. but there they will be convicted and condemned, without the power of reſiſtance. Here, notwithſtanding their wickedneſs, they go in pomp to the grave, a gorgeous ſepulchral monument, and attendant crowds do them honour even in the duſt, to make the clods of the valley ſweet unto them, v. 32. but they ſhall awake to ſhame and everlaſting contempt. And thus, in death at leaſt, which is the common lot, the wicked will meet their deſert, and every man muſt draw after him, as there are innumerable before him. Note, Death is a beaten road, where, ſooner or later, every man muſt tread. Semel calcanda eſt via Lethi.

Before Chriſt 1520.

3. He concludes from hence the futility and falſhood of their anſwers, and the vanity of their pretended conſolations, v. 34. They accuſed him as a hypocrite, and promiſed him comfort on his repentance, as if his ſufferings, the effect of his ſins, would be then removed; whereas he hath proved, that ſufferings are not the preſent puniſhment of guilt, ſeeing the wicked generally proſper; nor was he conſcious of the leaſt of thoſe accuſations they ſuggeſted.

CHAP. XXII.

Eliphaz the third time riſes to the charge, and perverts what Job had urged as a myſterious diſpenſation, into a reflection upon Providence. 1. He ſhews that our duties are no way profitable to God, ver. 2—4. 2. He charges him with many crimes in general, but particularly with oppreſſion, uncharitableneſs, and infidelity, ver. 5—9. & 12—14. 3. He inſiſts on it, that this is the cauſe of his ſufferings, ver. 10, 11. 4. He compares his caſe to that of the old world, ver. 15—20. 5. He exhorts him to repentance, and thereupon promiſes him great proſperity, ver. 21—30.

1. THEN Eliphaz the Temanite anſwered and ſaid, 2. [a] Can a man be profitable unto God, † as [b] he that is wiſe may be profitable unto himſelf? 3. Is it any pleaſure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that thou makeſt thy ways perfect? 4. Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? will he enter with thee into judgment?

a Chap. xxxv. 7. Pſ. xvi. 2. Luke xvii. 10.
† Or, but.
b Prov. ix. 12.

v. 1—4. It is Job's hard caſe to have all he can urge miſunderſtood, and ſome ill meaning drawn from the diſtortion of his arguments. Becauſe he maintained his integrity, as being no hypocrite, Eliphaz would infer, that he pretended to make God his debtor; and thereupon he argues, that his goodneſs could neither profit him, nor his iniquity hurt him.

1. Our goodneſs cannot profit God, nor merit any thing at his hands. Can a man be profitable unto God, as he that is wiſe may be profitable unto himſelf? no; though religion is our wiſdom, and the advantages of it to us unſpeakably great, in preſent poſſeſſion, and future expectation; yet our goodneſs extendeth not to God. He is far exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe; we receive all from him, but can add nothing to him, compleatly happy in his own all-ſufficient fulneſs. Is it any pleaſure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that thou makeſt thy ways perfect? No; though he takes pleaſure in the proſperity of his ſervants, and is glorified in their ſervices, yet, had there never been man or angel created, his infinite ſelf-complacence, and the inexpreſſible riches of his glory, had been the ſame. It is his condeſcenſion that he accepts our ſervices, the pleaſure and the gain of them is our own alone, not his.

2. Our iniquity cannot hurt him. Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? leſt, if left to proſper, thou ſhouldſt grow above his government. Will he enter with thee into judgment? condemn thee for thy ſins, as they deſerve? aſſuredly he will. Note, None are too great for God to humble: if he ſpares the wicked, it is not for fear of them, but in patient pity towards them.

5. Is not thy wickedneſs great? and thine iniquities infinite? 6. For [c] thou haſt taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, and ſtripped the naked of their clothing. 7. Thou haſt not given water to the weary to drink, and [d] thou haſt withholden bread from the hungry. 8. But as for the mighty man, [e] he had the earth, and † the honourable man dwelt in it. 9. Thou haſt ſent widows away empty, and [f] the arms of the fatherleſs have been broken. 10. Therefore [g] ſnares are round about thee, and ſudden fear troubleth thee; 11. Or darkneſs that thou canſt not ſee, and [h] abundance of waters cover thee. 12. [i] Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold ‡ the height of the ſtars, how high they are! 13. And thou ſayeſt, [k] § How doth God know? can he judge through the dark cloud? 14. [l] Thick clouds are a covering to him that he ſeeth not, and he walketh in the circuit of heaven.

c Exod. xxii. 26, 27. Deut. xxiv. 10, &c. d Prov. xxv. 21. Iſa. lviii. 7.
e Pſ. xii. 8.
† Heb. The accepted for countenance.
f Chap. xxxi. 21.
g Chap. xviii. 10, 11. & xix. 6.
h Pſ. xxxii. 6.
i Pſ. cxv. 3.
‡ Heb. The head.
k Pſ. lxxiii. 11. & xciv. 7.
§ Or, what.
l Pſ. cxxxix. 12.

v. 5—14. His friends had repeatedly condemned Job by inſinuations, and inferences, and compariſon of his caſe with wicked men; but as that had no effect, Eliphaz takes a large ſtep farther, and, right or wrong, reſolves to lay on him crimes enough. If half of them could but be proved, Job would have been a bad man indeed. It is common in the world to ſay, Abuſe confidently and abundantly, and ſome of the lies will be believed.

1. In general he charges him with great wickedneſs, and infinite crimes, as if what he was about to advance were but a ſmall part of the black catalogue. Note, The beſt of men have been the moſt foully aſperſed by lying tongues.

2. He proceeds to the particular accuſations, and they are many and grievous. [1.] Great oppreſſion, v. 6. For a trifling loan he had ſecured a pledge of much ſuperior value, or thou haſt taken thy brother for a pledge, arreſted him for an inconſiderable debt; and when the poor were almoſt naked, had ſtripped them of the little raiment they had left. [2.] Cruel uncharitableneſs, v. 6, 9. The hungry and thirſty were left to faint and famiſh, and a cup of cold water denied them, whilſt he rioted in affluence; yea, even the afflicted widow, whoſe poverty ſwelled the meaſure of her griefs, was ſent away empty from his door. [3.] Vile partiality, v. 9. Before him, as a magiſtrate, the greateſt ever carried the cauſe: the mighty man, who oppreſſed the poor, was ſure to have judgment in his favour, and be confirmed in the poſſeſſion of what he had ſeized; whilſt the arms of the fatherleſs were broken, ruined without redreſs by their richer neighbours. And, no leſs deſtitute of piety towards God, than charity towards man, he charges him, [4.] With avowed infidelity, v. 12—14. as if God, in the height of heaven, either could not ſee through the dark cloud that interpoſed, or left men at large, whilſt he paraded through his own ſuperior manſions, careleſs about the inſignificant concerns of little mortals. Note, (1.) Though fooliſh and wicked men ſay God hath forſaken the earth, yet he heareth the cry of oppreſſion and wrong. Tho' heaven is his throne, he filleth all things, and is as much preſent beneath the thick clouds, as above them. (2.) Abominable in the ſight of the righteous Judge is the acceptance of men's perſons: he will quickly appear the patron and awful avenger of the injured.

3. He aſcribes Job's preſent ſufferings to his atrocious ſins; for thus he reaſoned. Becauſe his ſufferings are great, his ſins muſt be great, and in exact proportion to them; therefore ſnares compaſſed him about; health, wealth, and children were loſt together; terrors had ſeized his conſcience, which they interpreted the ſigns of conſcious guilt, v. 10. and darkneſs had inveloped all his hopes; whilſt, like a drowning man in the midſt of boiſterous waves, deſperate and undone, he ſeemed ready to ſink in eternal ruin, the juſt puniſhment of his ſuppoſed crimes, v. 11. Note, (1.) He that condemneth the righteous is an abomination to the Lord. (2.) We may not wonder if the moſt malignant interpretations are put on our providential afflictions: better men than we have ſuffered more ſeverely before us.

15. Haſt thou marked the old way which wicked men have trodden? 16. [m] Which were cut down out of time, [n] † whoſe foundation was overflown with a flood. 17. Which ſaid unto God, [o] Depart from us: and what can the Almighty do ‡ for them? 18. Yet [p] he filled their houſes with good things: but [q] the counſel of the wicked is far from me. 19. [r] The righteous ſee it, and are glad: and the innocent laugh them to ſcorn. 20. Whereas our ſubſtance is not cut down, but [s] the remnant of them the fire conſumeth.

m Chap. xv. 32. Pſ. lv. 23. & cii. 24. Eccleſ. vii. 17.
n 2 Pet. ii. 5.
† Or, their foundation a flood poured out.
o Chap. xxi. 14.
‡ Or, to them.
p Pſ. xvii. 14.
q Chap. xxi. 16.
r Pſ. lviii. 10. & cvii. 42. Rev. xix. 1, 2. s 2 Pet. ii. 6, 7.

v. 15—20. Job had pleaded the experience of all ages, to teſtify the proſperity of many wicked men. Eliphaz thinks he hath an irrefragable argument to confute him in the flood, brought on the world of the ungodly; and whilſt he inſinuates ſuch were his ſins as theirs, he bids him take warning by their puniſhment.

1. He deſcribes their wickedneſs, and uſes the very words Job had ſpoken concerning the wicked who proſpered, chap. xxi. 14. as a confutation of what he there advanced. They ſaid unto the Almighty, Depart from us; we renounce his government, worſhip, and ways: and what can the Almighty do for them? as if they neither expected any good, nor feared any evil at his hands. Yet, which was a great aggravation of their wickedneſs, he filled their houſes with good things. Note, (1.) Impiety is the parent of infidelity. (2.) Ingratitude to God is among the ſinner's blackeſt crimes. (3.) They are ſtill poor in the worſt ſenſe, who, though their houſes are full of goods, have their hearts empty of divine grace.

2. He profeſſes his abhorrence of ſuch principles and practice: The counſel of the wicked is far from me. So Job had declared, and Eliphaz thinks with much greater reaſon he may aſſert.

3. He relates their deſtruction. Though it was the old way, and the general way, it was not a whit the ſafer for that. They were cut down by the divine judgment, out of time, and removed into an eternity of miſery, and this before they had filled the number of their years, ſurprized with ſudden deſtruction; whoſe foundation was overflown with a flood; all their confidences periſhed with them, and they ſunk as lead in the mighty waters.

Note, (1.) When we remember what the water hath once done, we ſhould think what the more devouring element of fire will ſhortly do, conſuming for ever the earth, and all that is therein. (2.) The hypocrite and ſinner's hope is on a ſandy foundation: when the floods of wrath deſcend, ruin, terrible as inevitable, ſhall overwhelm them.

4. He teſtifies the joy of the righteous, either Noah and his family, or godly men in all ages, on ſeeing the vengeance, v. 19. not that they take pleaſure in men's miſery, but they rejoice to ſee God glorified in his judgments. With theſe, Eliphaz and his friends joined, happy now, as theſe of old to perceive themſelves diſtinguiſhed with God's protection, and therefore concluding the goodneſs of their ſtate and cauſe, whereas our ſubſtance is not cut down, but theirs was; and the remnant of them the fire conſumed, which ſome refer to the burning of Sodom and Gomorrah, but more probably is deſigned to point at Job's caſe, whoſe cattle and ſervants the lightning had conſumed; and thence he would infer that they were righteous, but he condemned and made to ſuffer, as one of the ungodly.

21. Acquaint now thyſelf with him, and [t] be at peace: [u] thereby good ſhall come unto thee. 22. Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and [x] lay up his words in thine heart. 23. [y] If thou return to the Almighty, thou ſhalt be built up, thou ſhalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles. 24. Then ſhalt thou [z] lay up gold as duſt, and the gold of Ophir as the ſtones of the brooks. 25. Yea, the Almighty ſhall be thy † defence, and thou ſhalt have plenty of ſilver. 26. For then [a] ſhalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and [b] ſhall lift up thy face unto God. 27. [c] Thou ſhalt make thy prayer unto him, and he ſhall hear thee, and thou ſhalt pay thy vows. 28. Thou ſhalt alſo decree a thing, and it ſhall be eſtabliſhed unto thee: and the light ſhall ſhine upon thy ways. 29. When men are caſt down, then thou ſhalt ſay, ‡ There is lifting up: and [d] he ſhall ſave || the humble perſon. 30. § He ſhall deliver the iſland of the innocent: and it is delivered by [e] the pureneſs of thine hands.

t Iſa. xxvii. 5.
u Mat. vi. 33. 1 Tim. iv. 8.
x Pſal. cxix. 11. Prov. iv. 21. Luke i. 66. & ii. 19, 51.
y Chap. viii. 5, 6. & xi. 13, &c.
z 1 Chron. i. 15.
† Or gold.
a Cant. ii. 3.
b Chap. xi. 15.
c Pſal. l. 15. Iſa. lviii. 9.
‡ Or let there be lifting up.
d Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5.
|| Heb. Him that hath low eyes.
§ Or the innocent man ſhall deliver the iſland. Eccleſ. ix. 15.
e 1 Tim. ii. 8.

v. 21—30. On the ſuppoſition that Job was a wicked man, Eliphaz had warned him of the great danger to which he was expoſed with the ſinners of old: yet, not to reduce him to deſpair, but to lead him to repentance, he gives him excellent counſel and encouragement, which ſhews, however miſtaken he was in Job's particular caſe, that he was well verſed in the ways of God, and at bottom a man of ſound piety. There may be ſomething, yea ſometimes much to condemn even in truly good men; to whom notwithſtanding, we cannot refuſe our general approbation of their conduct.

1. His counſel is a humble and ſpeedy return to God: Acquaint thyſelf now with God: now, whilſt yet there is life and hope; without delay, acquaint thyſelf with his perfections and providences, and be at peace, ſilent and ſubmiſſive before him, acquieſcing in all his diſpenſations; and inſtead of fighting againſt him, lay down thine arms, and ſeek pardon and peace with him: thereby good ſhall come unto thee, his merciful favour ſhall be reſtored. Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, ſubmit to his government, and yield thyſelf up to his holy will, and lay up his word in thy heart as the choiceſt treaſure, and thy counſellor and guide in every time of difficulty. Note, (1.) Acquaintance with God is the way to be at peace with him; till we know his holineſs we have offended, and his love we have ſlighted, we can never in real penitence return to him. (2.) Peace with God is the moſt invaluable of all bleſſings. (3.) If God in our divine redeemer Jeſus, hath been pleaſed to reſtore our ſouls to his favour, let it be our care henceforward, to yield up ourſelves to be guided by his holy word and will. (4.) They who know the value of the ſcriptures, eſteem them above mines of gold, and daily labouring therein, ſtore their hearts with the richeſt treaſures of divine counſel and conſolations.

2. He promiſes him the beſt of bleſſings, as the conſequence of ſuch an humble return to the Almighty, from his ſtate of eſtrangement and rebellion againſt him; and theſe precious promiſes are the moſt effectual means to engage the ſinner's heart to God. All the terrors of hell will never drive the ſinner ſo effectually, as the goodneſs of God ſweetly leads and conſtrains him to repentance.

[1.] His evils ſhould be removed, and his loſt proſperity be reſtored. If thou return to the Almighty, thou ſhalt be built up, the deſolations of thy houſe and family ſhall be repaired; thou ſhalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles, thou wilt be careful to remove every evil, and no more commit, or connive at it; and then thy ſufferings, that are the effects of thy iniquity, God will put far away from thee. Thou ſhalt lay up gold as duſt, and the gold of Ophir as the ſtones of the brook, in ſuch abundance ſhall thy riches increaſe; ſecure alſo as well as affluent, no robbers ſhall any more plunder, or judgments ſpread deſolation. Yea, the Almighty ſhall be thy defence, He, on thy repentance, will become thy friend, and preſerve thy goods in ſafety: or, he ſhall be thy choice gold, better to thee than all thy other riches, and thou ſhalt have plenty of ſilver. Note, (1.) The beſt riches are God's grace and love. (2.) What God gives of this world, wears well, and what he keeps, is ſafe and ſecure to us.

[2.] He ſhould enjoy communion with God, and be happy in the ſenſe of his favour: for then ſhall thou have thy delight in the Almighty, he ſhall be thy happineſs and joy, and ſhall lift up thy face unto God, with holy confidence in him, and boldneſs to approach him. Thou ſhalt make thy prayer unto him, aſſured of a ſpeedy anſwer of peace, and he ſhalt hear thee, whilſt thou art ſpeaking, and grant thy requeſts; and in grateful acknowledgment of his mercies received, thou ſhalt pay thy vows, conſtant in praiſe as prayer. Note, (1.) They who have ever taſted the happineſs of communion with God, and known the bitterneſs of diſtance from him, as Job had, will count the reſtoration to a ſenſe of his love the moſt ineſtimable bleſſing. (2.) When we are at peace with God, we may approach him with confidence, knowing we ſhall receive the petitions we require of him. (3.) For the bleſſings received in prayer, we owe the conſtant grateful return of praiſe.

[3.] All his deſigns ſhould ſucceed, and a bleſſing be upon all his labour: Thou ſhalt decree a thing, reſolve under the Divine aſſiſtance ſo to act, and it ſhall be eſtabliſhed unto thee, God will confirm thy purpoſe, and crown the iſſue with ſucceſs: and the light ſhall ſhine upon thy ways, no ſuch darkneſs as now ſurrounds thee ſhall remain; but thy path ſhall be clear as the day, and the ſun of proſperity ſhine upon thee on every ſide. Note, (1.) The ſucceſs of all our purpoſes, whether reſpecting ſpiritual or temporal good, comes from God alone. (2.) They who are at peace with God, will enjoy the light of his countenance as their preſent comfort, and look to the light of eternal glory as their expected happy portion.

[4.] His prayers ſhould be heard in behalf of others, as well as himſelf. When men are caſt down, and under their diſtreſs apply to thee, thou ſhalt ſay to encourage them, there is lifting up, or in prayer to God for them, let there be lifting up, and he ſhall ſave the humble perſon, and lift him out of the pit of affliction at thy requeſt. He ſhall deliver the iſland of the innocent, ſave them at thy deſire; or the innocent, the one good man, ſhall deliver the iſland, or he ſhall deliver thoſe who are not innocent; not only the humble ſhall receive a bleſſing from thy prayers, but even the wicked ſhall enjoy reſpite, and ſome temporal good from them. And it is (the iſland,) or he is (the perſon prayed for,) delivered by the pureneſs of thine hand, God having ſuch reſpect to thy petitions, when thou ſtretcheſt forth thine hands to him in the heavens. Note, (1.) Great is the power of a good man's prayers, and we ſhould earneſtly deſire to have an intereſt in them. (2.) Though God's praying people are often the ridicule of the world, it is through them the iſland is preſerved. (3.) There is one innocent and holy interceſſor in heaven, for whoſe ſake, God's humble people partake of his ſalvation.

CHAP. XXIII.

This chapter begins Job's reply to Eliphaz. 1. He complains bitterly, and wiſhes to plead his cauſe before God, ver. 2—5. as confident of ſucceſs from God's mercy, ver. 6, 7. and his own integrity, ver. 10—12. 2. He could not find out the deſign of his ſufferings, ver. 8, 9. nor gain any hope of their relief, ver. 13, 14. 3. This heightened his trouble, ver. 15—17.

1. THEN Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. Even to day [a] is my complaint bitter: my ſtroke is heavier than my groaning. 3. [b] O that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his ſeat! 4. I would order my cauſe before him, and fill my mouth with arguments. 5. I would know the words which he would anſwer me, and underſtand what he would ſay unto me. 6. [c] Will he plead againſt me with his great power? No; but he would put ſtrength in me. 7. There [d] the righteous might diſpute with him; ſo ſhould I be delivered for ever from my judge.

a Lam. iii. 19, 20.
b Chap. xiii. 3. & xvi. 21.
c Iſa. xxvii. 4, 8. Jer. x. 24.
d Heb. x. 22.

v. 1—7. Job ſeems to think it in vain to reaſon with his friends, reſolved to condemn him ſo unreaſonably and cruelly, and therefore rather turns to God, in his anſwer to the accuſations of Eliphaz.

1. He juſtifies his complaints from the bitterneſs of his anguiſh, which all their counſels tended nothing to alleviate; or even to day is my complaint rebellion, ſo accounted by his cenſorious friends; but ſo far were his complaints from exceeding his ſufferings, that his ſtroke was heavier than his groaning. Note, (1.) They who know not what others feel, are too apt, when at eaſe themſelves, to condemn them for inordinate ſorrow. (2.) Though God forbids us not to complain, yet we need fear, leſt we murmur under our afflictions, which were to rebel againſt his government.

2. He longs to appear before God, and plead his cauſe; O that I knew where I might find him, where at his tribunal I might ſtand, I would order my cauſe before him, I would fill my mouth with arguments, I would direct my prayer to him, and plead the prevailing arguments of his grace and righteouſneſs in a Redeemer; or I would produce the moſt unexceptionable evidences, how unjuſtly I am condemned by my friends. I would know the words that he would anſwer me, far from deſiring the darkneſs to hide me, as ſuggeſted, chap. xxii. 14. I ſhould long for his ſentence to come forth, and to underſtand what he would ſay unto me, who would judge according to truth, and not condemn me unjuſtly as you do. Note, (1.) A ſoul under deſertion cries after God, O that I knew where I might find him, and ſuch complaints ſhall not be long unanſwered; he will be found in mercy of thoſe who ſeek him. (2.) It is a comfort, that whatever others anſwer us, or however they judge, we expect to appear before him, whoſe deciſions will be according to truth.

3. He expreſſes his confidence in the iſſue of ſuch a trial. Would He, God, plead againſt me with his great power, to cruſh and oppreſs me as you do? No: He would put ſtrength in me, encourage me to bear up under every preſſure. There the righteous, ſuch as I am, might diſpute with him, not againſt him as an adverſary, but before him as their judge, ſo ſhould I be delivered for ever from my judge, from your cenſures, which, as judges of my caſe, you have ſo raſhly pronounced; or rather he who is my judge, would declare my integrity, and deliver me from preſent and eternal condemnation. Note, (1.) They who fly to God in their diſtreſs, to pray and plead with him, ſhall find their ſtrength increaſe with every application to him. (2.) If God acquit us, we need neither fear nor care whoſe anathemas are upon us.

8. [e] Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him: 9. On the left hand where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: [f] he hideth himſelf on the right hand, that I cannot ſee him. 10. But he knoweth the way that I take; when [g] he hath tried me, [h] I ſhall come forth as gold. 11. My foot hath held his ſteps, his way have I kept, and [i] not declined. 12. Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips, [k] I have eſteemed the words of his mouth, more than my † neceſſary food.

e Chap. ix. 11.
f Pſal. xliv. 24.
g Pſal. xvii. 3. & lxvi. 10.
h Iſa xlviii. Mal. iii. 3.
i 2 Tim. iv. 10.
k Pſal. cxix. 72. John iv. 34.
† Or appointed portion.

v. 8—12. Job had ſaid, O that I knew where I might find him; and his were not empty wiſhes, but earneſt labours. Here,

1. He laments his diſappointment; on every ſide he turned his thoughts, deeply revolved in mind his ſufferings, and ſought to find out their cauſe, and to acquaint himſelf with God's deſigns in them; but darkneſs was in all his path, and he was as much as ever at a loſs to account for the very ſingular circumſtances of his afflictions, and wherefore God thus viſited him, v. 8. Note, The moſt beloved ſaints of God have been exerciſed with great darkneſs of ſoul, as well as great anguiſh of body; which however grievous for the time, work bleſſed fruits in the end.

2. He was conſcious of his own integrity, and ſatisfied in the divine Omniſcience, v. 10. and therefore concludes, that when he had been tried, he ſhould come forth from the furnace as gold, the brighter for the torture. My foot hath held his ſteps, I have ſought to conform ſtep by ſtep with his word and providences; his way have I kept, his worſhip I have maintained, and his will obeyed in ſimplicity, and not declined from it, in any known inſtance, or by allowed guile; neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips, as a backſlider, or an apoſtate, I have eſteemed the words of his mouth, more than my neceſſary food, more delightful to my ſoul, and judged them more neceſſary for it, than even food for my body. Note, (1.) It is a comfort God knows our ways, and our ſimplicity before him. (2.) The trials of the faithful are ſure to iſſue to their honour and advantage. (3.) The word of God is the believer's daily bread, and he feeds upon it, to the comforting and ſtrengthening of his ſoul.

13. But he is in one mind, and [l] who can turn him? and [m] what his ſoul deſireth, even that he doth. 14. For he performeth the thing [n] that is appointed for me: and many ſuch things are with him. 15. Therefore [o] am I troubled at his preſence: when I conſider, I am afraid of him.
16. For God [p] maketh my heart ſoft, and the Almighty troubleth me: 17. † Becauſe I was not cut off before the darkneſs, neither hath he covered the darkneſs from my face.

l Chap. ix. 12, 13. & xii. 14.
m Pſal. cxv. 3.
n 1 Theſ. iii. 3.
o Hab. iii. 16.
p Pſal. xxii. 14.
† Or why was I not cut off by darkneſs? or why hath he covered, &c.

v. 13—17. Though he was conſcious of his uprightneſs, and hoped the iſſue of his trials ſhould be peace, they were hard to be born, though bear them he muſt.

1. It was in vain to think of changing the purpoſes of the immutable God. He is in one mind, unalterable his counſels, and who can turn him from executing his decrees? and what his ſoul deſireth, even that he doth, without controul, or poſſibility of reſiſtance. He performeth the thing that is appointed for me, according to his eternal mind and will, and many ſuch things are with him; many diſpenſations of his providence, abſtruſe and unaccountable by mortal worms; or he feared more troubles were in his hand, as if his meaſure of ſuffering was not yet full. Note, Though God doth what he will, he cannot but do what is right; and therefore we are ever bound to acquieſce, and ſeeing his hand in our afflictions, to be dumb, and not to open our mouth.

2. Though Job quitted not his hope, yet at times his fears prevailed: Therefore am I troubled at his preſence; when I conſider, I am afraid; the ſovereignty of God's diſpenſations, and the immutability of his counſels, compared with what he had already ſuffered, made him apprehenſive leaſt worſe was in ſtore for him, and that quite melted him down: for God maketh my heart ſoft, and the Almighty troubleth me, the fear of his impending viſitations, as well as the ſenſe of preſent anguiſh; becauſe I was not cut off before the darkneſs of affliction came, as if he was marked out to ſuffer: or it may be conſtrued as an expoſtulation, Why was I not cut off before, or by darkneſs, by death, from beholding theſe miſeries? neither hath he covered the darkneſs from my face, which, had I been hid in the grave, I had not ſeen: or without the word neither, He hath covered the darkneſs from my face, refuſes me the comfort of departing, or ſuffers me to ſee no end of my afflictions. Note, (1.) The conſideration of God's perfections out of a redeemer are big with terror to the ſoul, but in him our fears remove. (2.) We ſhould not be in ſuch haſte to be gone from our troubles into the darkneſs of death, when we know not how ſoon the ſcene may change, and that life which was our burden, be made comfortable to ourſelves, and ſerviceable to the cauſe of God.

CHAP. XXIV.

Job here more immediately enters on the point in diſpute, and ſhews (1.) That in this world oppreſſors are not always reckoned with, ver. 2—12. however barbarous they may be, ver. 21, 22. (2.) That ſuch often go undiſcovered and unpuniſhed, ver. 13—17. But, 3. That God puniſhes them by ſecret judgments, or reſerves them for future ones, ver. 18—20. and ver. 23—25. So that upon the whole we cannot ſay, that all that are in trouble are wicked; nor that all that are in proſperity are righteous.

1. WHY, ſeeing [a] times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him, not ſee his Days? 2. Some [b] remove the land-marks; they violently take away flocks, and feed thereof. 3. They drive away the aſs of the fatherleſs, [c] they take the widow's ox for a pledge. 4. They turn the needy out of the way: [d] the poor of the earth hide themſelves together. 5. Behold, as wild aſſes in the deſert, go they forth to their work, [e] riſing betimes for a prey: the wilderneſs yieldeth food for them and for their children. 6. They reap every one his corn in the field: and † they gather the vintage of the wicked. 7. They cauſe the naked to lodge without cloathing, that they have no covering in the cold.
8. They are wet with the ſhowers of the mountains, and [f] embrace the rock for want of a ſhelter. 9. They pluck the fatherleſs from the breaſt, and take ‡ a pledge of the poor. 10. They cauſe him to go naked without cloathing, and [g] they take away the ſheaf from the hungry. 11. Which make oil within their walls, and tread their wine-preſſes, and [h] ſuffer thirſt. 12. Men groan from out of the city, and the ſoul of the wounded crieth out: [i] yet God layeth not folly to them.

a Acts i. 7.
b Deut. xix. 14. & xxvii. 17. Prov. xxii. 28. & xxiii. 10.
c Deut. xxiv. 6, 10, 12, 17. Chap. xxii. 6.
d Prov. xxviii. 28.
e Ibid. iv. 16.
† Heb. The wicked gather the vintage.
f Lam. iv. 5. Heb. xi. 38.
‡ Heb. Or the poor for a pledge.
g Deut. xxv. 4. Jam. v. 4.
h Jer. xxii. 13.
i Pſal. l. 21.

v. 1—12. The argument in diſpute is, whether the wicked were not always purſued with marks of Divine diſpleaſure in this world. Job conſtantly denies the aſſertion.

1. He begins with an inference drawn from the cloſe of the former chapter, v. 14. Why, ſeeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, whoſe all-capacious mind comprehends in one view the paſt, the preſent, and the future, and according to whoſe will, all events are directed; Why, if as you aſſert, the wicked are always miſerable, do they that know him, that are acquainted with his will and ways, and favoured with his love, not ſee his days of executing judgment in this life on the ungodly? which they certainly would, if, as you affirm, they were always puniſhed here, whereas the very contrary is evident. Note, Whatever ſtrange diſpenſations of Providence appear, we may be aſſured God hath not forſaken the earth: he ſees and orders all with infinite wiſdom, and at laſt we ſhall adore, and wonder, and praiſe him, when we ſhall ſee his great deſigns laid open to our view.

Before Chriſt 1520.

2. He proves in a variety of inſtances, the proſperity of the wicked; who, though the moſt unjuſt and cruel oppreſſors, go on with impunity. They rob men of their eſtates, and plunder them of their cattle, v. 21. If the poor have but a ſingle beaſt, they make a prey of it, and heed not the cries of the widow or fatherleſs, v. 3. inſolent and over-bearing, it is dangerous but to ſtand in their way, and the poor are forced to hide themſelves for ſafety, v. 4. Intractable and wanton as the wild aſſes, they make plunder their trade, and riſing early purſue their prey, living upon the fruits of their robbery, v. 5. The corn which others ſowed they reap, and gather the vintage of the wicked, devouring even one another, v. 6. or the wicked gather the vintage of the juſt, oppreſſed by them. The almoſt naked are ſtripped of the few rags which covered them, and mercileſs, they leave them in cold and hunger to pine and ſhiver on the barren mountain, or under the dreary rock, v. 7, 8. Even the fatherleſs babe they pluck from the breaſt, to ſell as a ſlave, and take the pledge of the poor, or the poor for a pledge, ſeize them for debt, and make them their bondmen, v. 9. they have no pity on the naked to cover them, and if he hath gleaned but one ſheaf of corn, to ſatisfy his hunger, even that they violently take from him, v. 10. Impriſoned within their walls, and doomed to hard ſervitude, the poor are compelled to make their oil, and tread their wine-preſſes, yet dare not quench their thirſt with the juice of the grape, v. 11. Under ſuch oppreſſion, even in the cities as well as the country, men groan without redreſs; and the ſoul of the wounded ſtruck and hurt, for daring perhaps to complain, crieth out, but in vain; yet God layeth not folly to them, ſuffers all this ſcene of grievous rapine and cruelty, and interpoſes not with any diſtinguiſhed judgments. Note, (1.) God takes notice of the ſinner's wickedneſs, though he, from his ſucceſs, promiſes himſelf impunity. (2.) It is doubly cruel to injure the fatherleſs and widow. (3.) They are wicked and hard hearted maſters, whoſe ſervants are ſcarce ſuffered to live by their labour, and there is a maſter in heaven, who will right them ſhortly.

13. They are of thoſe [k] that rebel againſt the light, they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof. 14. [l] The murderer riſing with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as a thief.
15. [m] The eye alſo of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, [n] ſaying, No eye ſhall ſee me: and diſguiſeth his face. 16. In the dark they dig through houſes, which they had marked for themſelves in the day-time: [o] they know not the light. 17. For the morning is to them even as the ſhadow of death: if one know them, they are in the terrors of the ſhadow of death.

[k] John iii. 20.
[l] Pſal. x. 8. Mic. ii. 1.
[m] Prov. vii. 9.
[n] Pſal. x. 11.
[o] John iii. 20.

v. 13—17. Like Ezekiel's chambers of imagery, Job goes on to deſcribe greater abominations that paſs in this world often with impunity. They are of thoſe that rebel againſt the light, reſiſt the remonſtrances of conſcience, and wilfully and deliberately plunge themſelves into the groſſeſt crimes; they know not the ways thereof, they refuſe to know, and ſhun the light of truth, nor abide in the paths thereof, preferring the dark ways of wickedneſs before it: or literally, the day-light is odious to them; they chuſe the darkneſs, if poſſible, to hide their guilty deeds. Vain attempt! whilſt God's eye, clearer than the ſun, pierces the thickeſt ſhades, and the night to him is as bright as the day. We have,

1. Their ſins—murder, adultery, and houſe-breaking. Riſing with the light, the murderer ſeizes the early traveller, and tho' poor and needy, and little to be got from him, yet killeth him, as if thirſting for blood, and at night is as a thief, robbing whatever he can ſeize, v. 14. The adulterer, aſhamed to perpetrate his deſigns publicly, waiteth for the night, and ſtill in fear of diſcovery, diſguiſeth his face; and tempted by the falſe hope of ſecreſy, ruſhes to the horrid deed, v. 15. The robber in the day prowls in queſt of prey, and having marked the place and houſe, at night breaks through and ſteals. Note, (1.) Though blood be here never diſcovered, the day will come when it will cry for vengeance. (2.) However ſecret the adulterer's crime be kept, his ſhame ſhall not be covered, when in a judgment-day the maſk is plucked away.

2. Though they ſucceed in their enterpriſes, they carry about them continual terror. They know not the light, dare not be ſeen in it, are afraid of diſcovery. The morning is to them as the ſhadow of death, ſo unwelcome; if one know them, guilt flaſhes in their faces, and dread of deſerved ſhame and puniſhment ſeizes them, they are like men juſt expiring in the terrors of the ſhadow of death. Note, A ſtate of wickedneſs is a ſtate of trembling; however pleaſurable or profitable the ſin, the continual alarm through fear of diſcovery, embitters all.

18. He is ſwift † as the waters, their portion is curſed in the earth: he beholdeth not the way of the vineyards.
19. Drought and heat conſume the ſnow-waters: [p] ſo doth the grave thoſe which have ſinned. 20. The womb ſhall forget him, the worm ſhall feed ſweetly on him, [q] he ſhall be no more remembered, and wickedneſs ſhall be broken as a tree. 21. He evil entreateth the barren that beareth not: and doth not good to the widow:
22. [r] He draweth alſo the mighty with his power: he riſeth up, and no man is ſure of life. 23. ‡ Though it be given him to be in ſafety, whereon he reſteth; yet [s] his eyes are upon their ways. 24. [t] They are exalted for a little while, but ‖ are gone, and brought low, they are taken out of the way, as all other, and cut off as the tops of the ears of corn. 25. And if it be not ſo now, who will make me a liar, and make my ſpeech nothing worth?

† Or on.
[p] Pſal. xlix. 14.
[q] Eccleſ. viii. 10.
[r] Eſth. iii. 9, 10. Rev. xvii. 2.
‡ Or it is given him to be in ſafety, and he reſteth on it, though his (God's) eyes, &c.
[s] Pſal. xi. 4.
[t] Ibid. xxxvii. 7—10.
‖ Heb. Are not.

v. 18—25. We have here,

1. The farther character of the wicked, v. 21, 22. He afflicts the barren with reproach, oppreſſes the widow, not even the mighty are ſafe; ſo daring is he, that when he riſeth up, no man's life is ſecure.

2. Notwithſtanding all his complicated ſins, it is given him to be in ſafety, v. 23. and inſtead of being affected with God's patience and repenting, he reſteth thereon, promiſing himſelf continual impunity. Yea, he is exalted, v. 24. ſo far from undergoing any preſent diſtinguiſhed ſuffering, he rears his head high, and if not beloved, is feared and obeyed. Note, Proſperity often hardens the ſinner, but he is leaſt ſafe when moſt ſecure. For,

3. The time of recompenſe will come, though not here, yet in death at leaſt. Short-lived is his joy, v. 24. though it endure to the laſt gaſp, for ſwift as water his days are hurrying by, v. 18. and however happy he appears, the curſe of God is upon him; and when he is gone, he ſhall no more behold the poſſeſſions in which he gloried, v. 18. His remembrance ſhall be blotted from his parent earth, v. 20. Broken down as a tree, the worms ſhall feed upon his carcaſe in the duſt: ſecure as he was, God's eye ſtill marked his winding way, v. 23. and as wicked men before him were, he ſhall be ſwept away from the earth, when the meaſure of his iniquities is full, as the ears of ripe corn are cut down, v. 24. In the grave he ſhall be conſumed, and there all his glory ſhall periſh with him, as the ſnow is melted before the ſcorching ſun, v. 19. Note, Though vengeance be ſlow, it is ſure: the longeſt period of a ſinner's reign is a few ſhort days, a fleeting moment of life.

4. He challenges them to confute the truths he had advanced, to prove him a liar, or invalidate his arguments; elſe muſt they quit the field, and own the proſperity of the wicked, and that not here but hereafter their recompenſe from God awaited them, and conſequently that their judgment was raſh and cenſorious who concluded him a wicked man, merely becauſe of his afflictions.

CHAP. XXV.

Bildad here makes a ſhort reply to Job's laſt diſcourſe. He drops the main queſtion concerning the proſperity of the wicked, as if unable to anſwer the proofs Job had brought: but becauſe he thought Job had made too bold an appeal to the Divine tribunal, chap. xxiii. he in a few words ſhews the infinite diſtance there is between God and man, teaching us, 1. To think highly of God, ver. 2, 3, 5. and, 2. Meanly of ourſelves, ver. 4, 6. which are two good leſſons for us all to learn.

1. THEN anſwered Bildad the Shuhite, and ſaid,
2. [a] Dominion and fear are with him, he maketh peace in his high places. 3. [b] Is there any number of his armies? and upon whom doth not his light ariſe?
4. [c] How then can man be juſtified with God? or how can he be clean [d] that is born of a woman? 5. Behold even to the moon, and it ſhineth not; yea, [e] the ſtars are not pure in his ſight. 6. How much leſs man [f] that is a worm: and the ſon of man which is a worm?

[a] Dan. iv. 34.
[b] Ibid. vii. 10.
[c] Chap. iv. 17, &c. & xv. 14, &c. Pſal. cxxx. 3. & cxliii. 2.
[d] Pſal. li. 5.
[e] Chap. xv. 15.
[f] Pſal. xxii. 6.

v. 1—6. Bildad, either convinced by Job's arguments of the proſperity of the wicked, was unable to reply, or ſeeing him obſtinate in his opinion, thinks it uſeleſs to attempt his conviction. One thing however he cannot but urge, and therein he is right, the majeſty and holineſs of God, as an argument to deter Job from his repeated appeal to him, and eagerneſs to plead for himſelf at his bar.

1. He would have Job obſerve how great and glorious God is. Dominion and fear are with him, his kingdom abſolute and univerſal, and reverence and godly fear are the bounden duty of every creature before the eternal majeſty. He maketh peace in his high places, no jarring diſcord diſturbs the repoſe of that bright world where he dwells. Is there any number of his armies? when all the hoſts of heaven and earth, the elements, and all the powers of nature ſtand ready to execute his commands, and upon whom doth not his light ariſe? his providential care, extenſive as the ſun's bright beams, fills the earth with his goodneſs. Therefore Job's noiſy clamour is as unreaſonable, as his deſire to plead with ſuch an Almighty and holy God is preſumptuous.

Before Chriſt 1520.

2. How vile man is. How can man be juſtified before God, and how can he be clean that is born of a woman? his nature is corrupt, his ways perverſe; and therefore what folly, what madneſs to pretend to appear at his righteous bar. Behold to the moon, and it ſhineth not, and the ſtars are not pure in his ſight; his piercing eye can deſcry ſpots in the brighteſt luminaries of heaven; how much leſs then can man that is a worm, dare ſtand in his preſence as perfect, or the ſon of man, the corrupted offspring of a fallen parent, that is a worm, a dying worm, and ſhortly to be food for worms, preſume to vindicate himſelf. Note, (1.) A ſenſe of our meanneſs as mortal worms, and our ſinfulneſs as fallen creatures, ſhould ever humble us low in the duſt before God. (2.) Man is as unfit for communion with God, through his corruption, as unable to ſtand before him by reaſon of his guilt; woe were unto us, if we ſhould, unpardoned and unholy, be called to his bar. (3.) It is a mark of the amazing love and condeſcenſion of God, that notwithſtanding our vileneſs and ſinfulneſs, he hath in mercy had reſpect unto us, and ſent his ſon to waſh us in his blood, and his ſpirit to renew our hearts, that we might be enabled to appear righteous in his ſight, and be made meet for the enjoyment of his bleſſed ſelf.

CHAP. XXVI.

This is Job's ſhort reply to Bildad's diſcourſe, 1. He ridicules it as foreign to the point in diſpute, ver. 2—4. 2. He profeſſes to ſpeak greater things of God's power and greatneſs, and therefore he might ſave himſelf the trouble of proving what none controverted, ver. 5—13. 3. He declares this ſubject to be inexhauſtible, ver. 14.

1. BUT Job anſwered and ſaid, 2. How haſt thou helped him that is without power? how ſaveſt thou the arm that hath no ſtrength? 3. How haſt thou counſelled him that hath no wiſdom? and how haſt thou plentifully declared the thing, as it is? 4. [a] To whom haſt thou uttered words? and whoſe ſpirit came from thee?

[a] Chap. xii. 3.

v. 1—4. Pained as Job is, in every part, he cannot help rallying Bildad on the impertinence of his pompous oration.

How haſt thou helped him that is without power? how ſaveſt thou the arm that hath no ſtrength? If this be referred to God, it is an ironical ſarcaſm, on Bildad's pretending to lift his feeble arm in ſupport of the Almighty and his cauſe; or if it be ſpoken of Job, as ſeems moſt natural, it expreſſes his contempt of a diſcourſe ſo foreign to the purpoſe, and ſo little ſuited to miniſter ſtrength or help to him. How haſt thou counſelled him that hath no wiſdom? ridiculing the folly of his affecting the part of a counſellor, and regarding his opponent, as if he was deſtitute of underſtanding: And how haſt thou plentifully declared the thing as it is? ſet forth the matter in diſpute in a copious and convincing manner, when in fact he had not ſpoken one word to the purpoſe, reſpecting the grand point in debate. To whom haſt thou uttered words, To me? as if I were ignorant of ſuch knowledge, and withal ſo foreign to the caſe. And whoſe ſpirit came from thee? in thy conceit, the ſpirit of wiſdom and eloquence; in my apprehenſion, the ſpirit of folly and affectation. Note, (1.) When perſons conceited and wedded to their own opinions, aſſume a ſuperiority in diſpute, without producing any juſt claim to it, they deſerve the ridicule they provoke. (2.) It is not ſufficient that what we ſay is true; it muſt be pertinent, and applicable to the caſe in hand, or elſe it is unprofitable and vain. (3.) Afflicted ſouls have need not to have diſplays of majeſty and terror ſet before them, but of mercy and grace in Chriſt, poured in as balm into their wounds.

5. † Dead things ‡ are formed from under the waters, and the inhabitants thereof. 6. [b] Hell is naked before him, and deſtruction hath no covering. 7. [c] He ſtretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing. 8. He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds, and the cloud is not rent under them. 9. He holdeth back the face of [d] his throne, and ſpreadeth his cloud upon it. 10. [e] He hath compaſſed the waters with bounds, ‖ until the day and night come to an end. 11. The pillars of heaven tremble, and are aſtoniſhed at [f] his reproof. 12. [g] He divideth the ſea with his power, and by his underſtanding [h] he ſmiteth through § the proud. 13. [i] By his ſpirit he hath garniſhed the heavens; his hand hath formed [k] the crooked ſerpent. 14. Lo, theſe are † parts of his ways, but [l] how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can underſtand?

† Heb. Giants.
‡ Or groan under the waters with, &c.
[b] Pſal. cxxxix. 8. Prov. xv. 11. Heb. iv. 13.
[c] Chap. ix. 8. Pſal. civ. 2, &c.
[d] Iſa. lxvi. 1.
[e] Chap. xxxviii. 8. Pſal. xxxiii. 7. & civ. 9. Prov. viii. 21. Jer. v. 22.
‖ Heb. Until the end of light and darkneſs.
[f] Pſal. civ. 7.
[g] Iſa. li. 15.
[h] Pſ. lxxxix. 9. & civ. 3.
§ Heb. Pride.
[i] Pſal. xxxiii. 6.
[k] Iſa. xxvii. 1.
† Or the ſkirts.
[l] 1 Cor. xiii. 9.

Before Chriſt 1520.

v. 5—14. The point in debate is dropped here, and ſince Bildad ſeemed to triumph in ſetting forth the power and greatneſs of God; Job, ſo far from diſputing it, heartily joins with him, yea, exceeds him. It were happy for us, in all our religious differences, if we would wave diſputes about opinions allowedly not eſſential to ſalvation, and, content to differ about the more aſtruſe and minuter points of doctrine, unite in the great and glorious truths, which both ſides heartily embrace.

1. The power and glory of God appears in hell beneath, ſunk as ſtones in the mighty waters, and groaning in miſery; the Rephaim, the giants of enormous ſize, ſwept away by the devouring deluge with all the multitude, are ſhut up in chains of darkneſs, under the great abyſs, unto the judgment of the great day, v. 14. for ſo the words may ſignify. Behold, the giants groan under the waters, with the inhabitants thereof, the world of the ungodly. Hell is naked before him, and deſtruction hath no covering; he ſees each atom of the ſleeping dead, wherever diſperſed in earth, fire, air, or water: yea, the place of the damned is open before him, hell itſelf excludes not his preſence; how then ſhould the ſinner be hid, when even death and hell are without covering?

2. From things beneath, he aſcends to things around us, in the earth and ſea, He hangs the earth upon nothing, v. 7. poiſed in the vaſt expanſe, and held together by ſtrange magnetic virtue. Shut up in the boſom of the vaſt abyſs, the mighty waters know thoſe bounds they cannot paſs, till time ſhall be no more, v. 10. The ſtormy billows roar and laſh the echoing ſhores; the waves lift up their heads, as if they had forſaken the deep, and threatned to mount the ſkies; the pillars of heaven, the ſtrong mountains tremble, and ſtand aſtoniſhed at his reproof, when tempeſts and mighty thundring are ſtirred up round about them; then at his word he ſmiteth through the proud waves, the ſtorm is huſhed, the billows ſubſide, and creep in gentle murmurs to the ſhore, v. 11, 12.

3. From objects around us on earth, he riſes to the viſible glories above us, that bear the ſtrong and legible characters of his eternal power and godhead, who faſhioned them. The vaſt expanſe of firmament is ſtretched over us, v. 7. where float thoſe clouds, in which, by mechaniſm wonderful, the waters exhaled from the ſea are ſuſpended, v. 8. nor, rent with the weight, pour down in torrents their collected ſtores, but with gentle ſhowers refreſh, inſtead of deluging the earth, v. 8. hid by the dark veil between, the brightneſs of his radiant throne in the higheſt heavens is concealed, v. 9. garniſhed by his ſpirit, the ætherial ſky, bright with ſun, moon, and ſtars, diſplays the wonders of his tranſcendant greatneſs, v. 13. and his hand hath formed the crooked ſerpent, either ſome bright conſtellation in the heavens, or that wonder of God's works upon earth, Leviathan, Iſa. xxvii. 1.; yet ſurpaſſing marvellous as theſe his works appear, lo, theſe are parts of his ways, but how little a portion is heard of him? how little do we know, compared with what is unſeen; and even in what is viſible, how ſmall a part can we comprehend of the depths of the wiſdom, knowledge, and glory of God therein manifeſted. But the thunder of his power, the amazing greatneſs of it, who can underſtand? it infinitely tranſcends all human faculties, and leaves us far behind, loſt in wonder and admiration.

CHAP. XXVII.

Job's friends, now ſilent through conviction, or deſpair of ſucceſs, no more reply, and therefore he proceeds in his diſcourſe. 1. He begins with a ſolemn proteſtation of his integrity, and of his reſolution to hold it faſt, ver. 2—6. 2. He expreſſeth the dread he had of that hypocriſy they charged him with, ver. 7—10. 3. He ſhews the miſerable end of wicked people, notwithſtanding their long proſperity, and the curſe that attends them, and is entailed upon their families, ver. 11—23.

1. MOreover, Job † continued his parable, and ſaid, 2. As God liveth, [a] who hath taken away my judgment, and the Almighty, who hath ‡ vexed my ſoul; 3. All the while my breath is in me, and the § ſpirit of God is in my noſtrils; 4. My lips ſhall not ſpeak wickedneſs, nor my tongue utter deceit. 5. God forbid that I ſhould juſtify you: till I die, [b] I will not remove my integrity from me. 6. My righteouſneſs I hold faſt, and will not let it go: [c] my heart ſhall not reproach me ſo long as I live.

† Heb. Added to take up.
[a] Chap. xxxiv. 5.
‡ Heb. Made it bitter, 2 Kings iv. 27.
§ i. e. The breath which God gave him. Gen. ii. 7. Iſa. ii. 22.
[b] Chap. ii. 9. & xiii. 15.
[c] Acts xxiv. 16.

v. 1—6. Though his friends are ſilent, Job continues his diſcourſe; a parable 'tis called, as full of deep and weighty matter, or as abounding with metaphors and allegories.

He ſolemnly appeals to God, as the everliving God, and almighty Governor of the world, for his integrity, though he had afflicted his ſoul, and taken away his judgment, v. 2, refuſed to appear to vindicate him, and continued his troubles; (a raſh expreſſion, for which Elihu reproved him, chap. xxxiv. 3.) Whilſt life and breath endured, v. 3. he reſolved nothing ſhould make him wickedly and falſely confeſs himſelf guilty, when his conſcience bore him witneſs in the Holy Ghoſt he was ſincere before God, v. 4. Far therefore from juſtifying them in their charges, by acknowledging the truth of them, he rejects with indignation the thought, reſolved till death to maintain his paſt integrity, v. 5. and, notwithſtanding all he ſuffers, to cleave ſtedfaſtly unto God, and never quit his plea of the juſtice of his cauſe, nor ſuffer his heart to reproach him, by yielding to their cruel ſuggeſtions, v. 6. Note, (1.) An oath is an appeal to the heart-ſearching God; and, as we muſt ſwear by no other, when we ſwear by him, we cannot be too circumſpect, that we ſpeak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Prevarication, or concealment, is as much perjury in the eye of God, as direct falſhood aſſerted. (2.) We are too apt to charge God fooliſhly, to faint under his corrections, and to call that his vexation, which flows only from our own impatience. (3.) Whatever circumſtances we are in, it is a wiſe and holy purpoſe, to hold faſt till death in our dependance on God, and unſhaken ſteadineſs in the profeſſion of the true religion. (4.) Whilſt we are careful to keep a conſcience void of offence, we are in duty bound to turn a deaf ear to Satan's ſuggeſtions that we are hypocrites, and not children of God, and to be unmoved by any cenſures of perverſe and uncharitable men. If our conſcience condemns us not, then have we confidence towards God.

7. Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riſeth up againſt me, as the unrighteous. 8. For [d] what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his ſoul? 9. [e] Will God hear his cry, when trouble cometh upon him? 10. Will he delight himſelf in the Almighty? will he [f] always call upon God?

[d] Mat. xvi. 26. Luke xii. 20.
[e] Chap. xxxv. 12. Pſ. xviii. 41. Prov. i. 28. & xxviii. 9. Iſa. i. 15. Ezek. viii. 18. Mic. iii. 4.
[f] Pſ. lxxviii. 34, &c.

v. 7—10. It had been ſuggeſted by his friends, that he was a wicked man, or a hypocrite. No, ſays he, I know the evil and danger of their ſtate too well. Let mine enemy be as the wicked. If it were permitted him to wiſh the greateſt evil to his enemy, he could not think of any thing ſo terrible as his ſharing with the wicked: not that a good man, as Job, would wiſh evil to any; but it is expreſſive of his ſenſe of the dreadfully dangerous and ruinous eſtate of the ungodly. For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, ſucceeding in his ſchemes of worldly advantage, and ſecuring praiſe and honour among men? How vain and wretched! what a deluſion will it appear, when God taketh away his ſoul? A dying hour, or at fartheſt, a judgment day, will terribly undeceive him, and all his profeſſions and outward performances ſtand him in no ſtead at God's bar. Will God hear his cry when trouble comes upon him? Either the troubles of life, or the fearfulneſs that at death, or after death, will ſeize him, will God regard his prayer? No; whilſt inward hypocriſy remains, prayer is an abomination; and in the day of vengeance, inflexible juſtice can be prevailed upon by no importunity to reverſe the ſentence. Will he delight himſelf in the Almighty? No; his religion is a burden, a taſk; not a pleaſure, nor his choice. Will he always call upon God? No; he prays only by fits and ſtarts. When he can get nothing by it, or muſt ſuſtain damage from his profeſſion of religion, the maſk is immediately removed. Now Job ſuggeſts, that the very contrary of this was his character, and therefore he was no hypocrite. Note, (1.) Miſerable is the condition of the hypocrite: we need take heed we deceive not ourſelves, but prove our own ſelves, whether Jeſus Chriſt indeed be formed in us. (2.) Many groan and cry under their troubles, whoſe prayer, as it proceeds not from a humbling ſenſe of ſin, but from mere anguiſh of pain, returns unanſwered. (3.) They who neglected prayer, or uſed it in mere formality, will ſhortly cry out in real deſire, when the door is ſhut, and it is too late to knock. (4.) The religion of hypocrites conſiſts in profeſſion, the performance of ſome outward ceremonies, and a deſire to appear righteous before men; but the heart is unchanged. They know no delight in God; their taſk of formal duties is irkſome; and an excuſe for omitting them, or hurrying them haſtily over, is eaſily admitted. Nor would they pray, or ſerve God at all, if the fear of hell, or their character in the world, did not more influence them, than any pleaſure in his ſervice, or real love to him in their ſouls.

11. I will teach you † by the hand of God: that which is with the Almighty will I not conceal. 12. Behold, all ye yourſelves have ſeen it, why then are ye thus altogether vain? 13. [g] This is the portion of a wicked man with God, and the heritage of oppreſſors, which they ſhall receive of the Almighty. 14. [h] If his children be multiplied, it is for the ſword: and his offſpring ſhall not be ſatisfied with bread. 15. Thoſe that remain of him ſhall be buried in death: and [i] his widows ſhall not weep. 16. Though he heap up ſilver as the duſt, and prepare raiment as the clay; 17. He may prepare it, [k] but the juſt ſhall put it on, and the innocent ſhall divide the ſilver. 18. He buildeth his houſe as a moth, and [l] as a booth that the keeper maketh. 19. The rich man ſhall lie down, but he ſhall not be gathered: he openeth his eyes, and he is not. 20. [m] Terrors take hold on him as waters, [n] a tempeſt ſtealeth him away in the night. 21. [o] The eaſt wind carrieth him away, and he departeth: and as a ſtorm hurleth him out of his place. 22. For God ſhall caſt upon him, and not ſpare: ‡ he would fain flee out of his hand. 23. [p] Men ſhall clap their hands at him, and ſhall hiſs him out of his place.

† Or, of the hand.
[g] Chap. xx. 29.
[h] Deut. xxviii. 41. Eſth. ix. 10. Hoſ. ix. 13.
[i] Pſ. lxxviii. 64.
[k] Prov. xiii. 22. & xxviii. 8. Eccleſ ii. 26.
[l] Iſa. i. 8. Lam. ii. 6.
[m] Chap. xviii. 11.
[n] Exod. xii. 29. Iſa. xv. 1. Dan. v. 30.
[o] Hoſ. xiii. 15.
‡ Heb. In fleeing he would flee. Exod. xiv. 25. Judg. iv. 17.
[p] 1 Kings ix. 8. Lam. ii. 15. Rev. xviii. 20.

v. 11—22. That the wicked are certainly miſerable, Job will readily allow; the queſtion only is, Where? not always viſibly in this life, though that may be ſometimes the caſe, but aſſuredly after death the curſe will overtake them. This he here undertakes to teach his friends, under the good hand of God, if they deſire to learn; and theſe diſpenſations of the Almighty's providence he would unfold, v. 11. which themſelves muſt needs have obſerved and ſeen, and therefore the more blameable their cenſures in condemning him for a hypocrite. The portion of the ungodly and oppreſſor then is ſure deſtruction, deſcending to them as an heritage; and though in this life they may proſper, they ſhall receive it from the hand of the Almighty in eternity, v. 13.

1. Their families, whom they leave behind them, and in whom they hope to perpetuate their name and glory, ſhall be cut off by the ſword, v. 14. by famine; and if any yet remain, the peſtilence, v. 15. ſhall ſweep them away, hurried to the grave, without a tear dropt over them: either they ſhall have no widows to lament them, or they ſhall be ſo odious to the wife of their boſom, that they will rather rejoice at their departure.

2. The wealth of the ſinner, which with ſuch aſſiduous care and toil he collected, ſhall be diſſipated through God's overruling providence. The juſt ſhall poſſeſs the wardrobes he hath filled, and the innocent divide the ſilver he hath accumulated, who will make a better uſe of the unrighteous Mammon, v. 17. His ſtately palace ſhall moulder into duſt, as the feeble houſe the moth erects, and be of as ſhort continuance as the ſhepherd's booth. Note, (1.) When men are dead, their riches ſtrangely vaniſh: could they look out of their graves, their miſery to ſee how they are diſpoſed of, would be greater even than the anxiety and care with which they ſcraped them together. (2.) The only durable houſe we can build, is that not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

3. They themſelves ſhall meet a miſerable death, and a more terrible eternity. The rich man ſhall lie down in the duſt of death, but he ſhall not be gathered to the ſepulchre of his fathers, or the congregation of the righteous. He openeth his eyes, which he cloſed upon his bed, and lo he is not any longer numbered with the living, but cut off by a ſudden ſtroke, and lifting up his eyes in torment. Terrors take hold on him, reſiſtleſs as the torrent of waters, and a tempeſt of divine wrath, little expected as the approach of the thief, ſtealeth him away in the night, juſt when he had been ſaying, Soul, take thine eaſe. The eaſt wind carrieth him away, and he departeth into the regions of eternal darkneſs; and as a ſtorm, the vengeance of God hurleth him out of his place, from his palace upon earth, down into the horrid caverns of Tophet; for God ſhall caſt upon him the fierceneſs of his wrath, tribulation, and anguiſh, and ſpare not; his puniſhment will be without meaſure, and without end, where, though he would fain flee out of all his hand, reſiſtance is vain, and the great gulph fixed prevents all eſcape. Men ſhall clap their hands at him, or, hands ſhall clap at him; the righteous on earth, on being delivered from their oppreſſor, and ſaints and angels in heaven magnifying God for his righteous judgments, and ſhall hiſs him out of his place, treating his memory with contempt on earth, or expreſſing their abhorrence of his crimes, when he is driven from God's tribunal into everlaſting puniſhment. Note, (1.) They who lie down on their beds, know not whether they ſhall ever awake again among the living. Are we ready then for a ſudden ſummons? (2.) The death-bed of the rich is often a ſcene of tempeſt, when they muſt leave a beloved world, to go where dreadful darkneſs hides the proſpect, and conſcious guilt begets a fearful looking-for of judgment. (3.) If once the ſinner be ingulphed in the belly of hell, then black deſpair will add the ſummit of miſery to the intolerable and everlaſting burnings.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Job had ſhewed that ſome wicked men live and die in proſperity, while others are arreſted by the judgments of God: but if any aſk the reaſon, why ſome are puniſhed in this world, and not others, they muſt be told it is a queſtion that cannot be reſolved. There are myſteries in nature as well as providence, unſearchable by the deepeſt philoſopher. If we are careful to ſearch for the true wiſdom, we may know enough to be wiſe unto ſalvation, and more we need not deſire. Job ſpeaks here, 1. Concerning worldly wealth, how induſtriouſly it is ſought for, ver. 1—11. 2. Concerning wiſdom, ver. 12. How ineſtimable its value is, ver. 15—19. How ſecret its place, ver. 14, 20, 22. In particular, that there is a wiſdom which is hid in God, ver. 23—27. And a wiſdom which is revealed to man, ver. 28. Our enquiries into the former muſt be checked, into the latter muſt be quickned, for that is it which is our concern.

† Or, mine. 1. SURELY there is a † vein for the ſilver, and a place for gold where they fine it. 2. Iron is taken ‡ Or, ore. out of the earth, and braſs is molten out of the ‡ ſtone.
[a] Eccleſ. i. 13. 3. He ſetteth an end to darkneſs, and [a] ſearcheth out all perfection: the ſtones of darkneſs, and the ſhadow of death. 4. The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters forgotten of the foot; they are dried up, they are gone away from men. 5. As for the earth, out of it cometh bread: and under it is turned up at it were fire. 6. The ſtones of it are the place of ſapphires: and § Or, gold-ore. it hath § duſt of gold. 7. There is a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not ſeen. 8.
The lion's whelps have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion paſſed by it. 9. He putteth forth his hand upon the [b] Prov. ii. 4. rock; [b] he ‖ overturneth the mountains by the roots.
‖ Or, turneth it up from the roots of mountains. 10. He cutteth out rivers among the rocks, and his eye ſeeth every precious thing. 11. He bindeth the floods from overflowing, and the thing that is hid, bringeth he forth to light.

v. 1—11. Riches is the grand object which men covet: to obtain them, no labour, contrivance, or induſtry are ſpared. By indefatigable purſuit and toil the mine is exhauſted of its ſtore; but the ſecrets of heaven, with all our ſtudy, cannot be penetrated as the bowels of the earth. The ſilver from the vein, and gold from the mine or the ſand, is collected and purified in the fire; and iron and braſs dug out of the earth, and molten in the furnace, v. 2. The ſame ſpot that above produces bread for man's food, beneath contains the hidden treaſures of gold and precious ſtones, ſparkling as fire, v. 5, 6. Man, in purſuit of theſe, opens the mine, and introduces the light, where, from the creation, darkneſs reigned, v. 3. He ſearcheth out all perfection, contrives variety of inſtruments to extract theſe ſubterranean treaſures, and brings to the ſurface the ſtores of ore that lay concealed as in the ſhadow of death. When guſhing waters hid in the bowels of the earth break forth, waters that never foot before had touched, by levels cut through the rocks, v. 10. or engines, he drains the overflowing flood, v. 4, 11. No rock, no mountain, can reſiſt his reſearches, v. 10. He carries on his traverſes, and brings forth to the light the precious things that were hid, v. 11. Secret paths are hollowed out, which neither the moſt ſharp-ſighted bird hath ſeen, nor have been trodden by the ſtrongeſt beaſts which roam the wilderneſs in ſearch of prey, v. 7, 8. Note, (1.) Shall gold thus engage man's inceſſant toil? and ſhall the riches of God's grace, infinitely more precious, be neglected? (2.) They who would be wiſe unto ſalvation, muſt in the mine of God's word dig for the ſacred treaſures there contained. The earth often diſappoints men's reſearches, but thoſe whom God by his grace engages to ſeek his true riches, never ſeek in vain. (3.) Deep is the mine, but deeper far, and more unſearchable, the diſpenſations of providence and grace: the keeneſt eye is here often at a loſs, and the ſtrongeſt reaſoner, after all his reſearches, is forced to cry, O the depth!

[c] Ver. 20. Eccleſ. vii. 24. 12. [c] But where ſhall wiſdom be found? and where is the place of underſtanding? 13. Man knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found in the land of the [d] Rom. xi. 33, 34. living. 14. [d] The depth ſaith, It is not in me: and the † Heb. Fine gold ſhall not be given for it. Prov. iii. 13, 14. & viii. 11, 19. & xvi. 16. ſea ſaith, It is not with me. 15. † It cannot be gotten for gold, neither ſhall ſilver be weighed for the price thereof. 16. It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx, or the ſapphire. 17.
The gold and the cryſtal cannot equal it: and the exchange of it ſhall not be for ‡ jewels of fine gold. 18.
‡ Or veſſels. No mention ſhall be made of coral, or of pearls: for the price of wiſdom is above rubies. 19. The topaz of Ethiopia ſhall not equal it, neither ſhall it be valued with pure gold.

v. 12—19. Gold and precious ſtones are valuable acquiſitions, but Job ſuggeſts a far more worthy purſuit, and which will more amply repay the pains, and that is wiſdom, the knowledge of and acquaintance with God and his ways.

1. This is the ineſtimable gain, which man knoweth not how to value; and whilſt engroſſed with earthly cares how to be rich, ſeldom concerns himſelf how to be wiſe. Yet, compared with this, all the moſt admired and precious ſtores that ever earth diſcloſed, are lighter upon the balances than vanity itſelf. One grain of grace is a more ſubſtantial good, than if the earth were one ſolid maſs of gold, and the whole property our own.

2. This is the hid treaſure which man knoweth not where to find. The miner ſaith, it is not in his dark cavern; the mariner ſaith, the merchandize of the ſea cannot procure it; the deepeſt reſearches of the wiſeſt philoſophers are unſatisfactory, and they grope for the wall as the blind. Where then ſhall wiſdom be found? no-where, but in him who is the wiſdom of God, and hath brought life and immortality to light in the goſpel, and in his word hath bid us ſearch after him that we may find him, and in him all the hid treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. Note, (1.) The truths of the goſpel known and believed, make a man more truly wiſe, than the deepeſt acquaintance with the arcana of nature, or the moſt diſtinct underſtanding of the abſtruſeſt parts of the mathematics. (2.) Moſt people are eager enough, yea too eager, after riches; here no pains diſcourage their purſuit; but the treaſures of grace they deſpiſe and neglect, and count them not worth the ſeeking. Fooliſh preference! to be more ſollicitous about a periſhing world, than an immortal ſoul, and more anxious to ſecure a portion in time, than in eternity.

20. [e] Whence then cometh wiſdom? and where is [e] Ver. 12.
the place of underſtanding? 21. Seeing it is [f] hid [f] Mat. xiii. 44.
from the eyes of all living, and kept cloſe from the fowls of the air. 22. [g] Deſtruction and death ſay, We [g] Ver. 14.
have heard the fame thereof with our ears. 23. [h] God [h] Acts xv. 18.
underſtandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof. 24. For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and [i] ſeeth under the whole heaven. 25. [k] To make the [i] Prov. xv. 3. Heb. iv. 13.
weight for the winds, and he weigheth the water by meaſure. 26. When [l] he made a decree for the rain, [k] Pſ. cxxxv. 7.
and a way for the lightning of the thunder: 27. Then [l] Am. iv. 7.
did he ſee it, and † declare it, he prepared it, yea, and † Or number.
ſearched it out. 28. And [m] unto man he ſaid, Behold, [m] Deut. xxix. 29.
[n] the fear of the Lord, that is wiſdom, and to depart [n] Ibid. iv. 6. Pſ. cxi. 10. Prov. i. 7. & ix. 10. Eccleſ. xii. 13.
from evil is underſtanding.

v. 20—28. When we have begun to enquire as Pilate, John xviii. 38. What is truth? we muſt not haſtily depart without an anſwer. Job repeats the important queſtion, Whence then cometh wiſdom? he reſolves the queſtion by a two-fold conſideration of it, as ſecret with God, or revealed to man.

1. Secret things belong unto God; known unto him are the ſprings and reaſons of all his diſpenſations, whether of providence or grace. They who ſoar the higheſt cannot pry into them, v. 21. and they who ſink the deepeſt, find the ſhallow line of human underſtanding unable to fathom the abyſs of wiſdom, v. 22. Could even the dead come back to inform us what they know, they could report but the fame of it, that ſuch wiſdom is in God, but what it is neither ſpirits of men nor angels comprehend. God alone underſtandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof. The reſidence of wiſdom is in his own boſom, and all his purpoſes, planned with exact deſign, are executed in regular and uninterrupted order, though to us his paths are in the great waters, and his footſteps are not known. [1.] His eye overlooks all; at one view all nature is open to him; the paſt, the preſent, the future, know no ſucceſſion in his all-comprehending mind. [2.] His power doth all; the very winds are poiſed in his balance, laid up in his treaſures, directed to what point to blow, how long, how violent, and when to return. The waters are meaſured by him in exact proportion; the ſea to reach its banks, not overflow; the rivers to run perpetual, whilſt he maintains their inexhauſtible ſource, v. 25. [3.] His decree fixes all. Not a drop of rain falls, or a beam of lightning flaſhes from the cloud, but according to his eternal appointment, v. 26. Every circumſtance of the minuteſt event was fore-ordained, from eternity diſpoſed, and prepared in the moſt exact order. He alone beholds his own decrees, and declares them to us in their operations and iſſues, to diſplay his own glory, v. 27. Note, A real faith in Divine Providence will reconcile us to every event. It is thy doing, and that is enough to engage our perfect acquieſcence in the wiſdom, equity, and mercy of the diſpenſation.

2. Man's duty and wiſdom is revealed to him. And unto man, Adam, at firſt, and to all his ſons, he ſaid, Behold, attend with ſolemn reverence the great and important leſſon, the fear of the Lord, that filial fear which proceeds from the knowledge and love of him as revealed, this is wiſdom, the moſt valuable attainment, and infinitely ſurpaſſing the higheſt flights of philoſophic attainments; and to depart from evil, ſin of every kind, the effect of ſuch fear of God, is underſtanding. And with this Job ſuggeſts his friends ſhould have been ſatisfied, and not pretend to dive into the ſecrets of God, and condemn him for a hypocrite, by miſinterpreting the deſigns of his providence.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXIX.

After a ſolemn pauſe, that they might weigh his words, and he might conſider what important matter he had yet to utter, on perceiving his friends ſilent, Job continues his diſcourſe, and ſhews, 1. What comfort he formerly had in God and his family, ver. 1—6. 2. What reſpect was paid him by all ſorts of people, ver. 7—10. 3. What good he did as a magiſtrate, ver. 11—17. 4. What proſpect he had of the continuance of his comfort at home, ver. 18—20. And of his intereſt abroad, ver. 21—25.

1. MOREOVER, Job [a] continued his parable, and ſaid, 2. Oh that I were as in months paſt, as in the days when God preſerved me: 3. When his † candle ſhined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkneſs: 4. As I was in the days of my youth, when [b] the ſecret of God was upon my tabernacle: 5. When [c] the Almighty was yet with me, when my children were about me: 6. When [d] I waſhed my ſteps with butter, and [e] the rock poured me out rivers of oil:

[a] Chap. xxvii. 1.
† Or lamp. Pſ. xviii. 28.
[b] Pſ. xxv. 14.
[c] Judg. vi. 12.
[d] Deut. xxxii. 13. & xxxiii. 24. Chap. xx. 17.
[e] Pſ. lxxxi. 16.

v. 1—6. Reflections upon his former proſperous ſtate, contraſted againſt his preſent wretchedneſs, draw forth the deep ſigh from his boſom; and though no proſpect of a change appears, he cannot but wiſh the return of happier days. Oh that I were as in months paſt, enjoying ſuch outward bleſſings, or rather ſuch communion with God, as even then was his greateſt joy. Note, (1.) God forbids us not to pray for the reſtoration of health, eaſe, and worldly good, whilſt we in ſubmiſſion reſign ourſelves to his will. (2.) A godly man longs more for the light of God's countenance, than for any bleſſing this world can afford.

Job mentions two things eſpecially, that made him wiſh for the months that were paſt: the comfort he had in God, and in his family.

1. In God; when he preſerved me from all evil, when his candle ſhined upon my head, the bright communications of his favour were my delight and glory; and when by his light I walked thro' darkneſs, and every trouble was made eaſy by the preſence, light, and love of God. As I was in the days of my youth, when he enjoyed a lively ſenſe of the divine regard, when the ſecret of God was upon my tabernacle, and he manifeſted himſelf to me, as he doth not to the world; when the Almighty was yet with me, ſhowering down mercy ſpiritual and temporal upon me. Note, (1.) They are ſafe whom God preſerves, and they only. (2.) The light of God's love will refreſh the ſoul amidſt the darkeſt diſpenſations. (3.) It is a bleſſed thing, when in our youthful days we are acquainted with the ſecret of God.

2. In his family. When my children, thoſe deareſt and moſt valuable earthly bleſſings, were with me, my comfort and joy: when I waſhed my ſteps with butter, ſo plentifully did the kine ſupply him, and the rock poured me out rivers of oil; his olive-yards ſo fruitful, that the ſtreams of oil guſhed out, as ſprings of water from beneath the rock. Note, Children are God's gift; whilſt we thankfully enjoy them, let us not by idolatrous affection tempt God to take them away.

7. When I went out to [f] the gate, through the city, when I prepared my ſeat in the ſtreet. 8. The young men ſaw me, and hid themſelves: and the aged aroſe, and ſtood up. 9, The princes refrained talking, and [g] laid their hand on their mouth. 10. The nobles held their peace, and their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth. 11. When the ear heard me, then it bleſſed me; and when the eye ſaw me, it gave witneſs to me: 12. Becauſe [h] I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherleſs, and him that had none to help him. 13. The bleſſing of him that was ready to periſh came upon me: and I cauſed the widow's heart to ſing for joy. 14. [i] I put on righteouſneſs, and it clothed me: my judgment was as a robe and a diadem. 15. I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame. 16. I was a father to the poor: and [k] the cauſe which I knew not, I ſearched out. 17. And I [l] brake the jaws of the wicked, and pluckt the ſpoil out of his teeth.

[f] Jer. xxxviii. 7.
[g] Judg. xviii. 19. Chap. xxi. 5.
[h] Pſ. lxxii. 12. Prov. xxi. 13. & xxiv. 11.
[i] Deut. xxiv. 13. Pſal. cxxxii. 9. Iſa. lix. 17. Eph. vi. 14.
[k] Prov. xxix. 7. & xxxi. 8.
[l] Pſ. lviii. 6. Prov. xxx. 14.

v. 7—17. Job's friends had treated him with inſolence, and accuſed him of being an oppreſſive magiſtrate, as well as a bad man. But how differently had he uſed to be regarded, and what teſtimonies could he not produce of his integrity? He here declares,

1. What high reſpect had formerly been paid him from the leaſt to the greateſt. When as a magiſtrate he went to the place of judgment, which was uſually held in the gate, or where the greateſt concourſe of people was, that all might hear and have free acceſs, the young men with veneration gave way, and the aged roſe up with deep reſpect, and ſtood till he was ſeated, v. 8. The princes and nobles, the chief magiſtrates who were on the bench with him, conſcious of his ſuperior abilities, heard him as their oracle: they ſealed up their lips before him, and waited for his opinion of the caſe, fully aſſured, from the depth of his penetration, and the integrity of his heart, that his deciſions would be the voice of truth and juſtice, v. 9, 10. Every hearer applauded his ſentence, and every beholder witneſſed to the gravity, wiſdom, and uprightneſs of his conduct, v. 11. Note, (1.) Modeſty in youth, and reſpect for the aged, is moſt amiable and becoming. (2.) A wiſe and upright judge is worthy to be had in honour, as the moſt uſeful member of the community. (3.) It is a mark of true wiſdom to know when to be ſilent.

2. What he did to deſerve this reſpect. He was the friend of the poor and fatherleſs, eſpouſing their cauſe, and redreſſing their complaints, v. 12. Thoſe who were ready to periſh, thro' want or oppreſſion, experienced his generous ſupport; and the widows hearts were made to exult in the kind care he ſhewed for them and their intereſts, v. 13. Bleſſings were ſhowered down upon his head, the voice of gratitude; and daily prayers went up to God for him, the beſt recompence the poor can make their benevolent friend, and which Job eſteemed the moſt valuable return. Clothed with righteouſneſs, no reſpect of perſons ever biaſſed his determinations; and the ornament he valued more than the purple robe or the diadem, which, as a magiſtrate, perhaps he wore, was that judgment, that principle of equity and uprightneſs, which ever influenced him, v. 14. The ignorant, who could not plead for themſelves, and the helpleſs, who had neither friends nor money to proſecute their juſt rights, he freely and effectually aſſiſted, v. 15. and the poor found in him a father, ever ready to vindicate their wrongs, v. 16. If difficulties occurred in any cauſe, with cloſe application he ſet himſelf to unravel the truth, which cunning, fraud, or falſhood had perplexed, v. 16. and the wicked, convicted by his wiſdom, and condemned by his righteous ſentence, unable, as when the jaw-bone is broken, to hold their prey, were compelled with ſhame and grief to reſtore the fruits of their oppreſſion, v. 17. Note, (1.) They are truly great, whoſe will to do good is equal to their ability. (2.) Gratitude and prayer are returns the pooreſt can make; theſe then ſhould never be forgotten. (3.) An heart filled with the love of juſtice, an head bleſſed with ſound underſtanding, an ear patiently attentive to the longeſt evidence, and an hand firm in the execution of condign puniſhment on the wicked, theſe conſtitute a righteous judge.

18. [m] Then I ſaid, I ſhall die in my neſt, and I ſhall multiply my days as the ſand. 19. My root was ſpread out [n] by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon my branch. 20. My glory was † freſh in me, and [o] my bow was [p] renewed in my hand. 21. Unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept ſilence at my counſel. 22. After my words they ſpake not again, and my ſpeech dropped upon them. 23. And they waited for me, [q] as for the rain, and they opened their mouth wide, as for the latter rain. 24. If I laughed on them, they believed it not, and the light of my countenance they caſt not down. 25. I choſe out their way, and ſat chief, and dwelt as a king in the army, as one that comforteth the mourners.

[m] Pſ. xxx. 6.
[n] Pſ. i. 3. Jer. xvii. 8.
† Heb. New.
[o] Gen. xlix. 24.
[p] Iſa. xl. 31.
[q] Pſ. lxxii. 6.

v. 18—25. From all appearances, and according to human foreſight, no man's proſperity appeared of ſurer continuance than Job's; no wonder therefore,

1. That he promiſed himſelf good days. Then I ſaid, when every thing without was ſo fair, and within conſcious integrity, I ſhall die in my neſt. Die he knew he muſt, and never in his greateſt proſperity forgot to prepare for his departure hence; but he hoped it would be in peace, amidſt his kind friends ſurrounding his bed, and children, the heirs of his virtue, as well as affluence, with filial piety cloſing his dying eyes. I ſhall multiply as the ſand my days, and late return unto the tomb, full of years, riches, and honours. Note, (1.) When things go ſmoothly, we are too apt to count upon their continuance; but how often do we ſee a quick tranſition, and our hopes diſappointed? (2.) A long life is a deſirable bleſſing, when employed for the glory of God, and the good of mankind.

2. He thought he had great grounds for his hope. Rooted as a tree, his worldly proſperity ſeemed fixed on a durable baſis, and his vital ſtamina ſound and vigorous. Watered continually by providential care, he grew and increaſed; the dew of heavenly influences reſted upon him, and all his concerns, ſpiritual or temporal, flouriſhed, v. 19. His glory was freſh, never withering, ever blooming, whilſt each day added new luſtre to his eſtate, and his bow was renewed in his hand; ſo that he appeared to have nothing to apprehend from any adverſary. When he ſpoke, attention ſat mute, and on his lips the audience hung: the ear delighted, was never weary, and his diſcourſe, as gentle ſhowers deſcending to refreſh the parched ground, ſunk deep into the heart. All heard with ſilent wonder his words, as the voice of wiſdom, and with ſubmiſſion received his counſels, as oracular, v. 21—23. If he ſmiled graciouſly, ſo great they eſteemed the honour, they ſcarce could believe themſelves the objects of his regard; and, far from preſuming on his familiar condeſcenſion, were awed by his majeſty, and paid him no leſs reſpect and reverence, v 24. As a counſellor, all who conſulted him acquieſced in his advice. As a teacher of divine truth, he pointed out their way, and they followed him. In public aſſemblies he had the ſeat of honour; in the congregation of the faithful he preſided, and led their devotions. As a king in his army he was honoured and obeyed; and as one that comforteth the mourners, ready to fly to the relief of the afflicted, and to pour the balm of conſolation into the wounded ſpirit, v. 25. Note, (1.) If we proſper in body or ſoul, be it ever remembered who it is that watereth us every moment, whoſe influences with-held, we wither, droop, and die. (2.) Superiors ſhould be condeſcending, yet in their freedoms maintain their dignity. (3.) They who have comforted others, find themſelvs often unable to receive in their afflictions the conſolations they have adminiſtered.

CHAP. XXX.

Job's preſent deep adverſity is here deſcribed, and looks the darker, contraſted with his former great proſperity. 1. He was now as much deſpiſed, as before exalted, ver. 1—14. 2. His terror and ſorrow were in full meaſure with, or exceeded, his former conſolation, ver. 15, 16, 26—28, & 31. 3. His health is changed into pain and ſickneſs, ver. 17—19, 29, 30. 4. His former ſweet communication with God is cut off, ver. 20—22. 5. Inſtead of his expected long life, death is at the door, ver. 23. But, 6. two things gave him ſome relief; (1.) That his troubles would not follow him to the grave, ver. 24. (2.) That in his proſperity he had ſympathized with thoſe that were in miſery, ver. 25.

1. BUT now [a] they that are younger than I, have me in deriſion, whoſe fathers I would have diſdained to have ſet with the dogs of my flock. 2. Yea, whereto might the ſtrength of their hands profit me, in whom old age was periſhed? 3. [b] For want and famine they were ſolitary: fleeing into the wilderneſs, in former time deſolate and waſte: 4. Who cut up mallows by the buſhes, and juniper-roots for their meat. 5. They were driven forth from among men, (they cried after them, as after a thief) 6. To dwell in the clifts of the valleys, in caves of the earth, and in the rocks. 7. Among the buſhes [c] they brayed, under the nettles they were gathered together. 8. They were children of fools, yea, children of † baſe men: they were viler than the earth. 9. And now [d] am I their ſong, yea, I am their by-word. 10. They abhor me, they flee far from me, and ſpare not [e] to ſpit in my face. 11. Becauſe [f] he hath looſed my cord, and afflicted me, they have alſo let looſe the bridle before me. 12. Upon my right hand riſe the youth, they puſh away my feet, and they [g] raiſe up againſt me the ways of their deſtruction. 13. They mar my path, [h] they ſet forward my calamity, ‡ they have no helper. 14. They came upon me, as a wide breaking in of waters: in the deſolation they rolled themſelves upon me.

[a] Chap. xix. 18.
[b] Prov. xxiii. 21.
[c] Chap. vi. 5.
† Heb. Men of no name.
[d] Chap. xvii. 6. Pſ. xxxv. 15. & lxix. 12. Lam. iii. 14, 63.
[e] Iſa. l. 6. Mat. xxvi. 67. & xxvii. 30.
[f] Chap. xviii.
[g] Chap. xix. 12.
[h] Zech. i. 15.
‡ Or, there is no helper againſt them.

v. 1—14. We have here a long account of Job's diſtreſſes; among the chief of which, he reckons the inſults he ſuſtained from the vileſt abjects around him.

1. He deſcribes them as younger than himſelf, perſons of the meaneſt extraction, whoſe parents were ſo deſpicable, that they were unworthy to be ſet over the dogs of his flock; yea, ſcarce fit company for them, v. 1. ſo ſlothful, that they were uſeleſs cumberers of the ground: ſo battered with vices, that they never reached old age: or ſo fooliſh, that all the wiſdom which uſually attends long life was periſhed in them, v. 2. Poor as idle, famine came upon them; and whilſt they refuſed to work, to ſuch ſturdy beggars none cared to give; ſo that their diſtreſſes drove them to the deſerts, living upon roots, and fruits that grew wild upon the buſhes, v. 3, 4. Vagabonds on the earth, and plagues of their country, for their crimes they were driven from the ſociety of men, and every body was glad to be rid of them, v. 5. Under the rocks and in caves they hid themſelves, like wild aſſes; famiſhed, they brayed for hunger; and under the nettles, or thorn hedges, were gathered together, v. 6, 7. a generation of folly and infamy, the very ſcum of the earth, v. 8. Note, (1.) They who will not work, have no right to eat. (2.) It is a relief to ſociety, when the idle vagrants, the peſts of ſociety, are driven from the hive. (3.) This beggarly world is full of the devil's poor, whoſe vices and ſloth concur to make their being as miſerable to themſelves, as their ſins render them odious to God and man.

2. Even theſe dared ſhew their inſolence and abuſe to this afflicted man. They derided him, v. 1. made him the ſubject of their ballads, perhaps turned his name into a proverb for hypocriſy and wickedneſs, v. 9. They abhorred him for the vigilance with which, as a magiſtrate, he had animadverted upon them; ſhunned him as a plague, and if they came near, it was but to add the vileſt inſults to him, to ſpit in his face, or trip up his heels, that they might ſport themſelves at his fall, v. 10, 12. Becauſe God had afflicted him, and looſed his cord, his power as a magiſtrate to puniſh them, they caſt off all reverence and reſtraint, v. 11. The very children roſe up to mock at his calamities, taught by their ungodly parents, v. 12. They imputed to him the cauſe of all their ſufferings, and ſought to revenge themſelves upon him in his deſtruction. They obſtructed him in the exerciſes of devotion, or treated his holy walk with contempt: they added bitterneſs to his affliction, and they have no helper, or no helper is againſt them, none to take my part, v. 13. Like the waters, when the mound is broken down, or a beſieging army, when the breach is opened in the wall, they came rolling themſelves, as if to overwhelm him in his preſent deſolations, taking advantage of his weakneſs, and eager to make an utter end of him. Note, (1.) Inſult is what generous ſpirits can moſt difficultly brook. (2.) The beſt of men have ſuffered the moſt contempt and ridicule from an ungodly world; we may not think it ſtrange therefore if we ſhare with them. (3.) They who in their proſperity were almoſt adored, in adverſity will often be trampled upon by every foot. (4.) Thus was the greater than Job treated in his diſtreſſes, mocked, ſpit upon, puſhed at in ſport, and abhorred; yet never appeared greater in the eyes of God, than when moſt deſpiſed and rejected of men.

15. [i] Terrors are turned upon me: they purſue my ſoul as the wind: and my welfare paſſeth away as a cloud. 16. And now [k] my ſoul is poured out upon me: the days of affliction have taken hold upon me. 17. My bones are pierced in me in the night-ſeaſon: and my ſinews take no reſt. 18. By the great force of my diſeaſe is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat. 19. He hath caſt me [l] into the mire, and I am become like duſt and aſhes. 20. I cry unto thee, [m] and thou doſt not hear me: I ſtand up, and thou regardeſt me not. 21. [n] Thou art become cruel to me: with † thy ſtrong hand thou oppoſeſt thyſelf againſt me. 22. Thou lifteſt me up to the wind: thou cauſeſt me to ride upon it, and diſſolveſt my ‡ ſubſtance. 23. For I know that thou wilt bring me to death, and [o] to the houſe [p] appointed for all living. 24. Howbeit he will not ſtretch out his hand to the § grave, though they cry in his deſtruction. 25. [q] Did not I weep for him that was in trouble? ‖ was not my ſoul grieved for the poor? 26. When [r] I looked for good, then evil came unto me: and when I waited for light, there came darkneſs. 27. My bowels boiled, and reſted not: the days of affliction prevented me. 28. [s] I went mourning without the ſun: I ſtood up, and I cried in the congregation. 29. [t] I am a brother to dragons, and a companion to † owls. 30. [u] My ſkin is black upon me, and [x] my bones are burnt with heat. 31. My harp alſo is turned to mourning, and my organ into the voice of them that weep.

[i] Jer. xvii. 17.
[k] 1 Sam. i. 15. Pſ. xlii. 4.
[l] Pſ. xl. 2.
[m] Pſ. xxii. 2. Lam. iii. 44.
[n] Jer. xxx. 14.
† Heb. The ſtrength of thy hand.
‡ Or wiſdom.
[o] Eccleſ. xii. 5.
[p] Heb. ix. 27.
§ Heb. Heap. So Chap. xxi. 32.
[q] Pſ. xxxv. 13, 14. Rom. xii. 15.
‖ Or, did not my ſoul burn for, &c. 2 Cor. xi. 29.
[r] Jer. viii. 15.
[s] Pſ. xxxviii. 6. & xlii. 9.
[t] Pſ. cii. 6. Mic. i. 8.
† Or oſtriches.
[u] Pſ. cxix. 83. Lam. iv. 8. & v. 10.
[x] Pſ. cii. 3.

v. 15—31. Many and grievous were the tribulations Job endured both in body and mind, of which he here feelingly complains.

Internal terrors fixed on his ſpirit, from the apprehenſion of God as an enemy; and as the wind, ſwift in ſucceſſion and reſiſtleſs, they purſued him. His welfare, or ſalvation, his proſperity paſſed away as the cloud vaniſhes, v. 16. Diſſolved with anguiſh, his ſoul melted within him, and affliction had ſeized on him as its prey, v. 17. His body tortured with pains, his bones aching, and his ſinew as if ſtretched upon the rack, prevented ſleep from cloſing his weary eyes, v. 13. The purulent diſcharge from his boils diſcoloured and ſtiffned his very garments, ſo that they were not only noiſome, but preſſed hard and painfully on his inflamed ulcers, v. 18. Like one caſt in the mire, ſo loathſome he appeared; and as more than half dead, his fleſh ſeemed already turned to corruption, and fit only for the grave, v. 19. Vain were his prayers, his tears; God gave him no anſwer, as if diſregarding his requeſt, v. 20. Yea, worſe, God dealt with him as a cruel enemy; and, as if armed with omnipotence, oppoſed him on every ſide, v. 21. Caught up, as the ſtubble before the wind, he thought God ſported with his miſery, and by the blaſts of his diſpleaſure, diſſipated all his ſubſtance, v. 22. No proſpect of relief appeared; but, wretched as he was, he expected to be brought to the grave, the houſe appointed for all the living, by Divine decree, ſince ſin entered, and death followed at its heels, v. 23. Yea, even the death he was appointed unto was delayed, and he was kept in torment; or God would not reſcue him from going down to the pit, notwithſtanding the prayers and interceſſion of thoſe who intereſted themſelves for him, in his preſent ruinous and miſerable eſtate, v. 24. His compaſſions to the poor and afflicted had been tender and conſtant, v. 25. and he might hope to have met with like compaſſion from God; but how greatly was he diſappointed, when, inſtead of the good he looked for, evil came upon him; and, inſtead of light and comfort in his troubles, darkneſs, and deſpair of their end, had compaſſed him about, v. 26. A burning fever ſcorched him up within, and days of anguiſh ruſhed on him as an enemy, and ſurprized him as a thief in the night, v. 27. No gleam of ſun-ſhine lightened up the dark valley of affliction; even amidſt the greateſt concourſe of thoſe who aſſembled for worſhip, or gathered round him, he roared out in his pains, v. 28. Deſolate and wailing, as the dragons and the owls, and finding none to pity him, v. 29. His ſkin was black with his diſeaſe, and it burnt to the very bones and marrow, v. 30. The voice of joy was fled, his harp and organ lay neglected by, unable now to reliſh the ſwelling notes, when weeping and mourning were the melancholy diſcordant ſounds that ever grated in his ears, v. 31. Note, (1.) They who dwell in corruptible bodies muſt expect often to feel ſickneſs and pain, the preludes of death. (2.) It is folly as well as ſin, to be proud of that body which the ſtroke of diſeaſe can make ſo loathſome. (3.) Whatever houſes men build for themſelves, let them remember, there is one dwelling prepared for them, where they muſt make their longeſt abode. (4.) Bodily trials are heavy, but a ſenſe of God's diſpleaſure, and a wounded ſpirit, is the bittereſt of all our burdens. (5.) Muſic is a pleaſing entertainment, but diſeaſe untunes the nerves, and looſens the ſilver cord, and then the ſounds of harmony can delight no longer.

CHAP. XXXI.

Many had been the ſevere accuſations laid upon Job, though none of them ſupported by the leaſt evidence. He here enters into a particular vindication of himſelf upon oath, and appears not only far from a wicked man, or hypocrite, but influenced by the nobleſt principles of piety, purity, charity, and equity. The particular ſins he diſclaims are, 1. Wantonneſs and uncleanneſs of heart, ver. 1—4. 2. Fraud and injuſtice in commerce, ver. 4—8. 3. Adultery, ver. 9—12. 4. Haughtineſs and ſeverity towards his ſervants, ver. 13—15. 5. Unmercifulneſs to the poor, the widows, and the fatherleſs, ver. 16—23. 6. Confidence in his worldly wealth, ver. 24, 25. 7. Idolatry, ver. 26—28. 8. Revenge, ver. 29—31. 9. Neglect of poor ſtrangers, ver. 32. 10. Hypocriſy in concealing his own ſins, and cowardice in conniving at the ſins of others, ver. 33, 34. 11. Oppreſſion, ver. 38—40. Towards the cloſe he appeals to God's judgment, concerning his integrity, ver. 35—37.

1. I Made a covenant with mine [a] eyes; why then ſhould I think upon a maid? 2. For [b] what portion of God is there from above? and what inheritance of the Almighty from on high? 3. Is not deſtruction to the wicked? and [c] a ſtrange puniſhment to the workers of iniquity? 4. [d] Doth not he ſee my ways, and count all my ſteps? 5. If I have walked with vanity, or if my foot hath haſted to deceit; 6. [e] Let me be weighed in an † even balance, that God may know mine integrity. 7. If my ſtep hath turned out of the way, and [f] mine heart walked after mine eyes, and if any blot hath cleaved to mine hands: 8. Then [g] let me ſow, and let another eat: yea, let my offſpring be rooted out.

[a] Mat. v. 28.
[b] Chap. xx. 29. & xxvii. 13.
[c] Iſa. xxviii. 21. Jude 7.
[d] 2 Chron. xvi. 9. Chap. xxxiv. 21. Prov. v. 21. & xv. 3. Jer. xxxii. 19.
[e] Pſ. xxvi. 1.
† Heb. Balances of juſtice.
[f] Num. xv. 39. Ezek. vi. 9. Mat. v. 28.
[g] Lev. xxvi. 16. Deut. xxviii. 30. &c.

v. 1—8. Two of the moſt common and moſt beſetting ſins are lewdneſs and inordinate love of the world; of both Job proteſts his innocence.

1. Of lewdneſs. So far was he from every groſſer indulgence, that his eyes, the inlets of beauty's beams, thro' which, like the rays collected in the burning-glaſs, the fire of impure deſires is kindled in the heart; theſe were kept from wandering on forbidden objects: nor in his ſecret thoughts did he ever harbour or cheriſh the fancies of an unchaſte imagination, v. 1. Nor was he thus circumſpect becauſe of the ſhame or inconvenience which might enſue from indulgence; no; it was the fear of God that reſtrained him: he knew uncleanneſs muſt exclude him from the regard and favour of God, v. 2. muſt expoſe him to the terrors of divine vengeance, to ſtrange diſeaſes here, and eternal ſufferings hereafter, v. 3. Nor could he hope for concealment in his moſt ſecret ſins, even in thought, fully perſuaded of God's all-ſeeing eye, from which nothing is hid, nothing is ſecret. v. 4. Note, (1.) Fleſhly luſts are the moſt dangerous enemies of the ſoul, and call for eſpecial watchfulneſs. (2.) They who would keep their hearts pure, muſt keep their eye ſingle: the leaſt impure indulgencies allowed, lay open the ſoul to the deluge of iniquity. None who once ſlacken the rein, know where they ſhall ſtop. (3.) However unexceptionable our outward conduct appears, there is a God who marks our ſecret ſteps, is with us amidſt the darkneſs, and ſees the hidden thoughts of our minds; let us remember then continually his eye is upon us. (4.) Impurity of temper, and the enjoyment of God, are incompatible: into the new Jeruſalem the defiled and unclean cannot enter. (5.) It ſhould deter us from the thought of ſin, to look forward to its puniſhment: the higheſt indulgence of corrupt appetite will miſerably repay us for devouring fire and everlaſting burnings.

2. Of inordinate love of the world. No vanity nor deceit were in his walk or converſation: he never told a lie to make a good bargain; unreaſonably commended his own wares, or decried his neighbour's, as they who are in haſte to be rich ſtick not at doing, v. 5. His ſtep turned not from the path of juſtice, warped by ſelf-love and partiality from the rule of truth and uprightneſs; nor did he covet what he ſaw, or uſe any illicit method to procure, as Achan did, the tempting bait. No blot cleaved to him, not merely of outward crimes, for which men could accuſe him, but his heart was reſtrained from the deſires of inordinate concupiſcence, v. 7. ſo that he could be content God ſhould weigh him in the balances of his righteouſneſs, conſcious of his integrity, v. 6. and readily reſted his all upon the trial, content, if guilty, to ſuffer the loſs of ſubſtance, family, children, and all, as the juſt puniſhment of his tranſgreſſion. Note, (1.) A truly honeſt man is a living prodigy. (2.) They who are full of talk in their worldly dealings, are to be ſuſpected as full of fraud. Honeſty needs no varniſh. (3.) The gain of covetouſneſs, however fair our character, will leave a blot in the ſight of God, which nothing but atoning blood can waſh away. (4.) The fruits of injuſtice muſt be reſtored, or in the day of judgment they will be caſt into the oppoſite ſcale, and when we are weighed we ſhall be found wanting. (5.) They who are conſcious of integrity never ſhun a ſcrutiny.

9. If mine heart have been deceived by a woman, or if [h] I have laid wait at my neighbour's door: 10. Then let my wife grind unto another, and [i] let others bow down upon her. 11. For this is an hainous crime, yea, [k] it is an iniquity to be puniſhed by the judges. 12. For [l] it is a fire that conſumeth to deſtruction, and would root out all mine increaſe. 13. If [m] I did deſpiſe the cauſe of my man-ſervant, or of my maid-ſervant, when they contended with me: 14. What then ſhall I do when [n] God riſeth up? and [o] when he viſiteth, what ſhall I anſwer him? 15. [p] Did not he that made me in the womb, make him? and did not one faſhion us in the womb?

[h] Jer. v. 8.
[i] 2 Sam. xii. 11.
[k] Gen. xxxviii. 24. Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22.
[l] Prov. vi. 27, &c.
[m] Eph. vi. 9. Col. iv. 1.
[n] Pſ. xliv. 21.
[o] Iſa. x. 3.
[p] Chap. xxxiv. 19. Prov. xiv. 31. & xxii. 2. Mal. ii. 10.

v. 9—15. Two other inſtances of Job's integrity are produced.

1. He abhorred adultery. His neighbour's wife never enticed his heart: he neither yielded to her ſollicitations or allurements, or ſpread the net of ſeduction, or watched the unguarded moment to rob her of her honour, v. 9. He imprecates the moſt dreaded of evils, acknowledges himſelf worthy to ſuffer the deepeſt ſhame and diſhonour, and deſerving to be puniſhed in kind, if ſuch guilt were found in him, v. 10. But a variety of conſiderations made him deteſt the thought: [1.] The hainous nature of the crime, an injury to his neighbour the moſt irreparable, and to his own ſoul the moſt deſtructive, v. 11. [2.] The juſt judgment he might expect from man, even death, to which in the earlieſt ages adulterers were doomed, v. 11. And ſurely how much more deſerving is he of death, who ſteals from a man that moſt precious jewel his wife, his honour, than he who robs his houſe, or takes his purſe? [3.] A fire it would now kindle in his conſcience to torment him, of God's wrath in eternity to conſume him, and of preſent judgments, ſuch as fell on Sodom, to mark God's abhorrence of ſuch hateful deeds. Note, (1.) Adultery is amongſt the moſt crying ſins. (2.) The deceitfulneſs of ſin is great: they who think to take ſome undue liberties, and reſt there, know not how unable they are to refrain from the greateſt lengths of lewdneſs, if once they enter into temptation. (3.) Though our laws have no longer numbered adultery among the capital crimes, and ſo ſecret may the ſin be kept, that human ſuſpicion never reached it, yet, whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.

2. He ſhewed to his ſervants the greateſt equity and tenderneſs. He did not condemn them unheard, or, if they complained, ſlight their expoſtulations, but examined their remonſtrance without being offended, and gave them whatever redreſs their juſt grievance called for, v. 13. and this, on theſe great conſiderations, [1.] That he conſidered he had a maſter in heaven, with whom was no reſpect of perſons, and to whom he muſt give an account, v. 14. [2.] That, however exalted his ſtation above them, they were made of the ſame clay, partakers of the ſame human nature, and faſhioned by the ſame hand, v. 15. Note, (1.) A good man will be a kind maſter, and not a lion in his houſe, and frantic among his ſervants. (2.) If our ſervants are perverſe or faulty, it becomes us not to be harſh or inexorable, leaſt we ſhould find as little mercy and kindneſs from our maſter in heaven, as we ſhew to them. (3.) It ſhould ſerve to humble the higheſt, and keep them from valuing themſelves, as if creatures of a different ſpecies from their inferiors, to remember the common womb from whence they came, and the ſame grave to which they go.

16. If I have withheld the poor from [q] their deſire, or have cauſed the eyes of the widow to fail: 17. Or [r] have eaten my morſel myſelf alone, and the fatherleſs hath not eaten thereof: 18. (For from my youth [s] he was brought up with me as with a father, and I have guided † her from my mother's womb) 19. If [t] I have ſeen any periſh for want of cloathing, or any poor without covering: 20. If his loins [u] have not bleſſed me, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my ſheep: 21. [x] If I have lift up my hand againſt the fatherleſs, when I ſaw my help in the gate: 22. Then let mine arm fall from my ſhoulder-blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone. 23. For deſtruction from [y] God was a terror to me, and by reaſon of his highneſs I could not endure.

[q] Luke xvi. 21.
[r] Rom. xii. 13.
[s] Jam. i. 27.
† i. e. Widow.
[t] Mat. xxv. 36.
[u] Deut. xxiv. 13.
[x] Iſa. lviii. 6.
[y] Gen. xxxix. 9. Neh. v. 15.

v. 16—23. Accuſed as Job had been, with cruel unmercifulneſs, it appears the charge was not only utterly groundleſs, but his character the very reverſe from his earlieſt days.

1. He deſcribes the attention and regard he ever paid the poor, the fatherleſs, and the widow. The poor never preſented his ſupplication unheard, nor was grieved with the denial of any reaſonable requeſt. The widow's eyes did not fail, either through the delay of her petition, or inattention to her ſpeaking looks, when ſhe knew not how to aſk, v. 16. Alone he had never eaten his morſel, the fatherleſs was not only fed at his table, but honoured with his preſence, v. 17. Mercy in the womb had been woven into his frame; and from his youth he was the father of the orphan, and the huſband of the widow, to counſel, guide, and protect them, v. 18. Never did the poor want covering, or the naked go ſhivering from his door; his fleece cloathed them, and, warmed by his charitable gifts, they bleſſed his bounty, and prayed to God to reward him, v. 19, 20. In the gate, no frowns or menace diſcouraged the fatherleſs, not a finger was ever lifted againſt them, though had he been diſpoſed to oppreſſion, ſo great was his influence, he might have done it with impunity, v. 21. Note, (1.) Kindneſs to the poor is not only highly acceptable to God, but brings with it in the ſecret ſatisfaction it miniſters an abundant reward. (2.) The poor need cloaths as much as meat, and we muſt not forget all their wants. (3.) Reſpect ſhewn to thoſe, who through poverty are too commonly deſpiſed, is a cheap, yet moſt grateful kindneſs. (4.) The more power we have to do ill, the more careful ſhould we be never to abuſe it.

2. He imprecates vengeance upon himſelf, if ever he had done as Eliphaz ſuggeſted, chap. xxii. 9. even that his arm might drop from his ſhoulder, or be broken from the bone, v. 23. Note, Though the uſe of imprecations upon ourſelves in general, is ſinful and evil, yet in a ſolemn clearing of ourſelves, like an oath, they may be uſed to God's glory.

3. He mentions the reſtraints which withheld him from all uncharitableneſs and unkindneſs. He feared to provoke that holy God, who is the avenger of the injured, and the guardian of the poor. He knew the terror of the moſt high, and how little he could endure his judgments, ſhould he provoke him by ſuch diſpleaſing conduct, v. 24. Note, (1.) The higheſt muſt remember there is one higher than they, to whom they muſt give an account. (2.) Holy fear of God is a needful reſtraint from ſin.

24. [z] If I have made gold my hope, or have ſaid to the fine gold, [a] Thou art my confidence: 25. [b] If I rejoiced becauſe my wealth was great, and becauſe mine hand had gotten much: 26. [c] If I beheld the ſun when it ſhined, or the moon walking in brightneſs: 27. And my heart hath been ſecretly enticed, or my mouth hath [d] kiſſed my hand: 28. This alſo were [e] an iniquity to be puniſhed by the judge: for [f] I ſhould have denied the God that is above. 29. [g] If I rejoiced at the deſtruction of him that hated me, or lift up myſelf when evil found him: 30. (Neither have I ſuffered my mouth to ſin, by [h] wiſhing a curſe to his ſoul) 31. If the men of my tabernacle ſaid not, Oh that we had of his fleſh! we cannot be ſatisfied. 32. [i] The ſtranger did not lodge in the ſtreet: but I opened my doors to † the traveller.

[z] Pſal. lii. 7. Mar. x. 24. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
[a] Prov. x. 15.
[b] Pſal. lxii. 10. Luke xii. 19. Jam. v. 5.
[c] Deut. iv. 19. & xvii. 3.
[d] Hoſ. xiii. 2.
[e] Ver. 11.
[f] Mat. iv. 10.
[g] Prov. xvii. 5.
[h] Mat. v. 44. Rom. xii. 14.
[i] Rom. xii. 13. Heb. xiii. 2. 1 Pet. iv. 9.
† Or the way.

v. 24—32. Compelled to commend himſelf, in vindication of his character from the moſt unjuſt aſperſions, Job proceeds to other inſtances of his ſimplicity before God and man.

1. This world never engaged his heart with idolatrous affection; he never placed his hope in the purſuit of gold, nor his confidence on what he poſſeſſed; his gain gave him no joy, comparable with his God; he received it as God's gift, and employed it to God's glory, v. 24, 25. Note, (1.) Covetouſneſs is idolatry. The affection of the heart ſet on gold, and our joy and confidence placed on the creature, are equally criminal with the knee bent to the ſtock or ſtone. (2.) Riches are very apt to ſteal away the ſoul into inordinate love of them, hence ſo few rich men enter the kingdom of heaven.

2. He renounces all idolatrous worſhip paid to the luminaries of heaven. Theſe probably were the firſt of all the Pagan deities, which obtained Divine honours. In the time of Job, this worſhip began to grow in vogue; but far, very far was he from joining in the abominable ſervice, ſecretly or openly. When he went forth, and beheld the ſun in its meridian ſplendor, or in the clear night ſaw in her ſilver orb the moon diffuſing grateful light to the benighted earth, v. 26. his heart was never ſeduced to adoration, nor bowing kiſſed he his hand before them, the uſual method of worſhip, in token of Divine honours, v. 27. He regarded idolatry, as a crime deſerving the moſt condign puniſhment from the magiſtrate, and more deteſted it as the higheſt affront to God, who will not give his glory to another, and regards the worſhip of other gods as the denial of himſelf, v. 28.

3. No revenge, even to his bittereſt enemy, when in his power, found a place in his boſom: ſo far from doing him an injury, he never rejoiced when miſchief befel him, v. 29. never ſuffered his lips to ſpeak a word of imprecation, or his heart to harbour a wiſh of malevolence againſt him: nay, when thoſe of his houſe, his friends, or ſervants, urged him to reſent the wrongs done him, and wiſhed for the fleſh of thoſe who hated him, that they might avenge their maſter's cauſe, he neither attended to their inſtigations, nor ſuffered them to ſhew their reſentment, v. 31. Note, (1.) Among the hardeſt taſks, a chriſtian finds the forgiveneſs of injuries, and the love of our enemies. (2.) Joy in the fall of an enemy, is malice and murder in the heart. (3.) The greateſt provocation will never juſtify our revenge. (4.) There are ſeldom wanting thoſe, who are ready to blow the coals of contention; to ſuch, the wiſe will turn a deaf ear.

4. He declares the hoſpitable entertainment every traveller met with; which, when yet there were no public inns, was more eſpecially needful. His door was ever open to the traveller, or to the way, his houſe by the way ſide, that the weary might turn in thither, and find refreſhment; repoſe in ſafety under his roof, and not lodge in the ſtreet, expoſed to the inclement ſky.

33. [k] If I covered my tranſgreſſions, [l] † as Adam: by hiding mine iniquity in my boſom: 34. Did I fear a great multitude, or did the contempt of families terrify me: that I kept ſilence, and went not out of the door? 35. [m] O that one would hear me! behold, my deſire is [n] that the Almighty would anſwer me, and that mine adverſary had written a book. 36. Surely I would take it upon my ſhoulder, and bind it as a crown to me. 37. [o] I would declare unto him the number of my ſteps, as a prince would I go near unto him. 38. [p] If my land cry againſt me, or that the furrows likewiſe thereof ‡ complain: 39. [q] If I have eaten the ‖ fruits thereof without money, or have cauſed § the owners thereof to loſe their life: 40. Let thiſtles grow inſtead of wheat, and † cockle inſtead of barley. The words of Job are ended.

[k] Prov. xxviii. 13.
[l] Gen. iii. 8, 12.
† Or after the manner of men. Hoſ. vi. 7.
[m] Chap. xxxiii. 6.
[n] Ibid. xix. 22.
[o] 1 Pet. iii. 15.
[p] Hab. ii. 11.
‡ Heb. Weep.
[q] Jam. v. 4.
‖ Heb. Strength.
§ Heb. The ſoul of the owners thereof, to expire or breath out.
† Or noiſome weeds.

v. 33—40. We have here Job proſecuting his proteſtations of his ſincerity, and concluding with his appeal to God.

1. He proteſts his ſincerity.

[1.] He never concealed his iniquity, as Adam, or as men in general do, deſiring to find excuſe, and to lay the blame on others. He acknowledged himſelf a ſinner, many tranſgreſſions he was chargeable with, for who liveth and ſinneth not? but no wickedneſs, no hypocriſy, contradictory to his profeſſion as a good man, was chargeable upon him; all he knew, he freely owned, and deſired to be humbled for before God, v. 33. Note, (1.) Hypocritically to excuſe, palliate, or conceal our ſins, is only to deceive and deſtroy our own ſouls. (2.) Humble confeſſion is the ſure way to inſtant pardon.

[2.] No fear of man intimidated him from his duty, as a chriſtian or a magiſtrate; he was not aſhamed of his religion, or any ridicule to which it might expoſe him; he paid no regard to perſons in judgment; the quality of the party never influenced his deciſions, nor could he ever be prevailed upon to ſit ſilent by, whilſt truth and juſtice were oppreſſed, but openly remonſtrated againſt it, unconcerned who were diſpleaſed or offended; alike indifferent to the clamours of the vulgar, as unmoved moved with the contempt of the great, v. 34. Note, (1.) The fear of man is a great ſnare, it requires much chriſtian fortitude to get above it. (2.) They who hear a good cauſe run down, or ſee injuſtice committed, without vindicating the one, and remonſtrating againſt the other, become criminal by their ſilence and connivance.

[3.] His poſſeſſions were honeſtly come by; his land had no accuſation againſt him for oppreſſion; the wages of the labourer kept back, never cried againſt him; nor did his hard hand ſqueeze his tenants, or his unreaſonable demands of work beyond their ſtrength endanger the lives of his ſervants; land, tenants, or labourers, never had reaſon to complain. With a ſolemn imprecation he binds his judgment upon him, if he falſified in his evidence, and wiſhes barrenneſs and the curſe might deſolate his fields, inſtead of plenty crowning the year with increaſe, v. 38, 39, 40. Note, Ill-gotten eſtates are often untoward poſſeſſions, and diſappoint the hopes of the unjuſt.

2. He once more renews his appeal to God, and his eager deſire to have his cauſe heard at his bar. O that one would hear me, that he might have a judge appointed, before whom he could plead his cauſe. Behold, let it ſtand upon record as the thing, which, ſo far from fearing as a hypocrite, I long for; my deſire is that the Almighty would anſwer me, a raſh wiſh, if he meant that God would enter the liſts in judgment againſt him, allowable if he deſired only to plead his cauſe, in oppoſition to his friends before him; and that mine adverſary had written a book, a bill of indictment, containing the charges to be heard at the bar of God, unleſs it be thought that he regarded God as his adverſary, and deſired to know wherein he had offended, as if he dared even then to plead for himſelf. Surely I would take it upon my ſhoulder, ſo confident was he that he could vindicate his cauſe from every accuſation; far from fearing to be cruſhed by it, he would carry it off in triumph; and bind it as a crown to me, his righteouſneſs ſhould ſhine the brighter, the more it was examined, and the impeachment of his integrity ſhould iſſue to his more diſtinguiſhed honour. I would declare to him the number of my ſteps, truth needs no diſguiſe; he would lay bare his boſom and every ſecret ſtep, nor dreaded the ſtricteſt ſcrutiny: and as a prince would I go near to him, not trembling as a criminal, and keeping at a diſtance, but with confidence and majeſty boldly advancing to the judgment-ſeat, without a fear that his cauſe ſhould miſcarry. Note, (1.) Conſciouſneſs of innocence longs for the trial. (2.) They who have now God's verdict in their favour, will, in a judgment-day, ſurround his throne as princes, yea, as aſſeſſors with him.

Thus the words of Job are ended. If this be not thought convincing by his friends, it would be vain to multiply arguments, and in ſelf-vindication he will add no more.

CHAP. XXXII.

Job and his friends having finiſhed what they had to ſay, Elihu riſes as umpire of the diſpute. In this chapter, 1. A ſhort account is given of his parentage and ſentiments on the ſubject of their diſpute, ver. 1—5. 2. He apologizes for preſuming to ſpeak after his elders, though he had not the experience of an old man, yet God had inſpired him with underſtanding, ver. 6—10. 3. They had in vain attempted to convince Job, ver. 11—13. 4. He had ſomething new to offer, ver. 14—17. 5. His mind was full of matter, and it would be a refreſhment to give it vent, ver. 18—20. 6. He was reſolved to ſpeak impartially, ver. 21, 22.

1. SO theſe three men ceaſed to anſwer Job, becauſe [a] he was righteous in his own eyes. 2. Then [b] was kindled the wrath of Elihu the ſon of Barachel [c] the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram: againſt Job was his wrath kindled, becauſe [d] he juſtified himſelf rather than God. 3. Alſo againſt his three friends was his wrath kindled, becauſe they had found no anſwer, and yet had condemned Job. 4. Now Elihu had waited till Job had ſpoken, becauſe they were † elder than he. 5. When Elihu ſaw that there was no anſwer in the mouth of theſe three men, then his wrath was kindled.

[a] Prov. xxx. 12. Luke xvi. 15.
[b] Gal. iv. 18.
[c] Gen. xxii. 21.
[d] Chap. xxxiv. 5.
† Heb. Elder for days.

v. 1—5. The warm diſpute is cloſed. A ſilent pauſe enſued; either convinced of Job's integrity, his friends ceaſed to anſwer, or counting him obſtinate to conviction, and righteous in his own eyes, they forebore to reply: but now a new perſonage appears. With ſilence he had liſtened to the knotty controverſy, perceived the fallacy and falſhood of the arguments on the one ſide, and the raſhneſs and impatience on the other; and therefore riſing with warmth, he prepares to reprove both for their perverſeneſs; Job's friends, that they condemned him without evidence, and Job himſelf, that he juſtified himſelf rather than God; was more careful about his own reputation than God's glory, and ſeemed more ſollicitous to vindicate himſelf than juſtify God, in the diſpenſations of his providence. Note, (1.) In angry diſputes, uſually there is much to reprove on both ſides. (2.) When we have fault to find, it ſhould be done to men's faces, and not behind their backs. (3.) A gracious heart is jealous for the honour of God, and cannot, unmoved, ſee him ſlighted. (4.) A holy indignation againſt evil, and warmth in the cauſe of truth, is ſo far from being condemnable, that it is highly commendable. We have here,

1. The name and family of this moderator, Elihu, My God is he. Hence ſome have ſuppoſed him to be Chriſt, the ſon of Barachel, the bleſſed of God, of the kindred of Ram, the high and lofty one, the Buzite, deſpiſed and rejected of men; and to him other things in his ſpeech and character may be applicable: but more generally he is ſuppoſed to be a deſcendant of Buz, the ſon of Nahor, Abraham's brother, Gen. xxii. 21.

2. He was a young man, had ſat ſilent by till his elders had ſpoken, and waited till none made any farther reply. Note, Young men owe their elders deference, and though they may not yield implicit faith, or ſacrifice truth to any difference of years, yet they will wait reſpectfully, till with propriety they may ſtate their objections.

6. And Elihu the ſon of Barachel the Buzite anſwered and ſaid, I am † young, and [e] ye are very old; wherefore I [f] was afraid, and durſt not ſhew you mine opinion. 7. I ſaid, [g] Days ſhould ſpeak, and multitude of years ſhould teach wiſdom. 8. But there is a ſpirit in man: and [h] the inſpiration of the Almighty giveth them underſtanding. 9. [i] Great men are not always wiſe: neither do the aged underſtand judgment. 10. Therefore I ſaid, Hearken to me, I alſo will ſhew mine opinion. 11. Behold, I waited for your words; I gave ear to your reaſons, whilſt you ſearched out what to ſay. 12. Yea, I attended unto you: and behold, there was none of you that convinced Job, or that anſwered his words: 13. [k] Leſt ye ſhould ſay, We have found out wiſdom: God thruſteth him down, not man. 14. Now he hath not directed his words againſt me: neither will I anſwer him with your ſpeeches.

† Heb. Few of days.
[e] Chap. xv. 10.
[f] Jam. i. 19.
[g] Chap. xii. 12.
[h] Ibid. xxxviii. 36. Prov. ii. 6. Eccleſ. ii. 26. Dan. i. 17. & ii. 21. Jam. i. 5.
[i] 1 Cor. i. 26.
[k] Jer. ix. 23.

v. 6—14. Elihu having taken up the cauſe,

1. With great humility and modeſty prefaces his diſcourſe. He ſpeaks of himſelf as diffident, becauſe of his youth, and afraid to ſpeak before his elders, v. 6, 7. He had attentively heard them out, in hopes that every new ſpeech would throw light on the argument, and rectify the miſtakes of the former; but he owns he was diſappointed, v. 11, 12. and therefore he hopes he may, without preſumption, beg an audience, and venture to ſpeak his opinion on the ſubject, v. 10. Note, (1.) In matters of doubtful diſputation, it becomes us to be diffident of our opinion, and more ready to hear the ſentiments of our elders, than forwardly broach our own. (2.) Byſtanders that hear, cool and unprejudiced, ſee farther often than thoſe, who in the heat of diſpute, have their judgment blinded by paſſion. (3.) If we have given others a long and patient hearing, it is but reaſonable we ſhould be heard in our turn.

2. He mentions ſeveral reaſons why he was emboldened now to ſpeak, [1.] Becauſe there is a ſpirit in man, a rational ſpirit, capable of judging and thinking, or rather that God puts his ſpirit in man, and the inſpiration of the Almighty giveth him underſtanding, and then the youngeſt may be wiſer than the aged, v. 8. Note, (1.) Since we have a rational ſoul, the greater obligation lies on us to cultivate this diſtinguiſhing privilege. (2.) The wiſdom of fallen man in ſpiritual matters, is darkneſs, till the Spirt of God enlightens his underſtanding. [2.] Becauſe neither greatneſs nor grey hairs are always repoſitories of wiſdom: it is right they ſhould be, but we ſee they are not. [3.] Becauſe as the matter ſtood, the diſpute was as perplexed as ever, and their conceit of their wiſe arguments groundleſs; for though what they pleaded was allowed to be true, God thruſteth him down, not man: yet it would not at all be evident from thence, that Job was a wicked man, or a hypocrite, as they inferred. Note, They who call God to patronize the concluſions of their folly or cenſoriouſneſs, deſerve a ſharp rebuke. [4.] Becauſe he came cool and unprejudiced to the diſpute, Job's ſpeeches were not directed againſt him; neither was he partial to either, but ſpake ſimply, with a view to the glory of God, and the elucidation of the truth. In order to which, he would not anſwer him with their inconcluſive arguments, accuſing him as wicked, or pleading his ſufferings as a proof of guilt, but admitting his claim, and preſuming his integrity, he intended to ſhew how unbecomingly he had ſpoken of God, and how unjuſtifiable were his complaints and hard ſpeeches, which reflected upon the mercy, juſtice, and providence of God, v. 14. Note, They have a right to ſpeak, who can ſet the cauſe of truth in a light more convincing and ſtriking, than thoſe who have gone before. Be it our care, that as Elihu, we do not diſappoint the expectations we have raiſed.

15. They were amazed, they anſwered no more: they left off ſpeaking. 16. When I had waited, (for they ſpake not, but ſtood ſtill, and anſwered no more) 17. I ſaid, I will anſwer alſo my part, I alſo will ſhew mine opinion. 18. For I am full of matter, [l] the ſpirit † within me conſtraineth me. 19. Behold, my belly is as wine which ‡ hath no vent, it is ready to burſt like new bottles. 20. I will ſpeak, that I may be refreſhed: I will open my lips, and anſwer. 21. [m] Let me not, I pray you, accept any man's perſon, neither let me give flattering titles unto man. 22. For [n] I know not to give flattering titles, [o] in ſo doing my maker would ſoon take me away.

[l] Pſal. xxxix. 3. Jer. xx. 9.
† Heb. Of my belly.
‡ Heb. Is not opened.
[m] Lev. xix. 15.
[n] Mat. xxii. 16.
[o] Pſal. xii. 3.

v. 15—22. Silent with amaze, Job's friends attempted not to ſpeak; attentive to what ſo young an orator could offer, when their ſtore of argument was exhauſted, whilſt he, after waiting a while, proceeded,

1. To declare how full he was of the ſubject; as wine fermenting, he muſt ſpeak or burſt. Much he had to ſay; it was a burden to him to be longer ſilent, and for the relief of his own ſpirit, as well as their conviction, he was compelled to open his mouth, v. 17, 20. Note, They who ſpeak for God, ſhould be earneſt in their diſcourſes, out of a heart big with zeal for God's glory, and the good of men's ſouls.

2. He profeſſes to ſpeak with impartial freedom, not ſacrificing truth to compliment; neither becauſe of Job's diſtreſs, through falſe compaſſion dealing unfaithfully with him, nor becauſe of his friends greatneſs, fearing to blame what was blameworthy in them: and thus he reſolves to act with an eye to God, who hates falſehood and flattery. Note, (1.) The fear of God will ſet us above the fear of man. (2.) Compaſſion for the poor muſt no more influence us to be partial to them, than reſpect for the rich. Truth and juſtice muſt ever be the great conſideration.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Elihu here, 1. Beſpeaks Job's favourable acceptance of what he ſhould ſay, and offers himſelf, as he had wiſhed in God's behalf, to receive his plea, and anſwer it, ver. 1—7. 2. He charges him with the hard words he had ſpoken againſt God, ver. 8—11. 3. He endeavours to convince him of his fault herein, by ſhewing him, (1.) God's ſovereign dominion over man, ver. 12, 13. (2.) The gracious purpoſe and deſign, for which many of our dreams are vouchſafed, ver. 15—18. (3.) The benefit that is or might be derived from our ſufferings, ver. 19—30. 4. He begs of Job either to anſwer him, or give him leave to proceed, ver. 31—33.

1. WHerefore Job, I pray thee, hear my ſpeeches, and hearken to all my words. 2. Behold, now I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath ſpoken in my † mouth. 3. [a] My words ſhall be of the uprightneſs of my heart; and my lips ſhall utter knowledge ‡ clearly. 4. [b] The ſpirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life. 5. If thou canſt anſwer me, ſet thy words in order before me, ſtand up. 6. Behold, [c] I am according to thy wiſh [d] in God's ſtead: I alſo am formed out of the clay. 7. Behold, [e] my terror ſhall not make thee afraid, neither ſhall my hand be heavy upon thee.

† Heb. Palate.
[a] 1 Theſ. ii. 3, 4.
‡ Heb. Purely.
[b] Gen. ii. 7.
[c] Chap. xxxi. 35.
[d] 2 Cor. v. 20.
[e] Chap. ix. 34. & xiii. 21.

v. 1—7. Elihu opens his diſcourſe with an application to Job by name, whom his friends had never thus addreſſed. He begs a favourable hearing, and that he would weigh his arguments entire, v. 1. They were the product of mature deliberation, v. 2. and flowed from the ſincerity of his ſoul: he hoped to ſpeak clearly to his underſtanding, and convincingly to his conſcience, v. 3. Endued with a reaſonable ſoul as a man, and renewed in the ſpirit of his mind as a gracious man, he might expect attention, v. 4. and was ready to hear in return whatever Job could farther ſay for himſelf, v. 5. He had deſired one on the behalf of God, that he might plead with him: Lo! he is here, one in his own nature, faſhioned from the ſame clay, v. 6. whoſe terror would not ſcare him, as if God himſelf appeared, nor his hand be heavy on him; he would bring no ſuch railing accuſation as his friends had done: he propoſes to convince him by the weight of his arguments, not run him down by the violence of his arguing. Note, (1.) We are bound to hear a diſcourſe entire, before we form a judgment upon it. (2.) They who ſpeak for God, need deep and ſerious deliberation: and ſhould be more ſollicitous to ſpeak plain, ſo as to be underſtood, than fine, that they may be admired.

8. Surely thou haſt ſpoken in mine † hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy words, ſaying, 9. [f] I am clean without tranſgreſſion, I am innocent; neither is there iniquity in me. 10. Behold, [g] he findeth occaſions againſt me, [h] he counteth me for his enemy. 11. [i] He putteth my feet in the ſtocks, he marketh all my paths. 12. Behold, [k] in this thou art not juſt: I will anſwer thee, that God is greater than man. 13. [l] Why doſt thou ſtrive againſt him? for he giveth not account of any of his matters.

† Heb. Ears.
[f] Chap. x. 7. & xvi. 17. & xxvii. 5, 6. & xxix. 14.
[g] Chap. xiv. 16.
[h] Ibid. xiii. 24. & xvi. 9. & xix. 11.
[i] Chap. xiii. 27.
[k] Jam. iii. 2.
[l] Iſa. xlv. 9. Rom. ix. 20.

v. 8—13. Job had boaſted, chap. xxxi. 36. how eaſily he would take every indictment which could be brought againſt him on his ſhoulder, but Elihu will convince him the burden is heavier than he is aware.

1. He opens his charge againſt Job for words ſpoken openly and publickly, to the diſhonour of God, and reflecting on his adorable perfections; and againſt ſuch, every hearer is ever bound to bear a public teſtimony.

[1.] He had ſaid, I am clean without tranſgreſſion, I am innocent, neither is there iniquity in me: this might be collected from chap. x. 6, 7. xiii. 2, 3. xxvii. 5, 6. or perhaps in expreſs words Job might have aſſerted it, though not recorded in the controverſy; not that he pleaded he was ſinleſs, but he had too high an opinion of his integrity, inſiſted upon it too much, and thereby drew unjuſt reflections on God, for afflicting a perſon ſo righteous as he conceived himſelf to be.

[2.] He had repreſented God as ſevere and cruel, ſeeking occaſion to quarrel with him, and without cauſe treating him as an enemy, v. 10, 11. expreſſions highly irreverent, and deſerving juſt cenſure. See chap. xiv. 16, 17. xiii. 24, 27. xix. 11. for theſe things therefore,

2. Elihu propoſes to plead with Job. Behold, take notice of it as an important truth, in this thou art not juſt: however upright in general, he allowed his conduct to have been, here it was indefenſibly culpable. Therefore, I will anſwer thee, confute theſe bold aſſertions, and this on the cleareſt principles, (1.) That God is greater than man, and therefore it is both fooliſh and arrogant to find fault with him; why doſt thou ſtrive againſt him? whoſe wiſdom, power, juſtice and truth, is not only above compariſon, but above our comprehenſion. Note, This one conſideration ſhould for ever ſilence every murmur againſt God's ways and providences. (2.) He is ſovereign in his diſpenſations, for he giveth not account of any of his matters: Who ſhall queſtion the Eternal Majeſty, and ſay to him, what doſt thou? or as others interpret the words, he giveth not an account of all his matters; there are ſecrets of Providence which he reſerves to himſelf, and which it were preſumption but to pretend to pry into.

14. For [m] God ſpeaketh once, † yea, twice, yet man perceiveth it not. 15. [n] In a dream, in a viſion of the night, when deep ſleep falleth upon men, in ſlumbrings upon the bed: 16. Then [o] he ‡ openeth the ears of men, and ſealeth their inſtruction, 17. That he may withdraw man from his purpoſe, and [p] hide pride from man. 18. He keepeth back his ſoul from the pit, and his life from periſhing by the ſword.

[m] Pſal. lxii. 11.
† Or a ſecond time he doth not reviſe it.
[n] Gen. xx. 3. & xxxi. 24. Dan. iv. 5.
[o] Chap. xxx. 10, 15.
‡ Heb. Revealeth, or uncovereth.
[p] 2 Cor. xii. 7.

v. 14—18. Though God is not obliged to give any account of his matters, yet he never deals with men ſo unreaſonably as Job ſuggeſted; but if we attend to his notices, we may perceive his deſigns towards us. For God ſpeaks once, yea, twice, repeats his admonitions, and in a variety of ways, by ſecret remonſtrances with our conſciences from his word and ſpirit, by his afflictive providences, and by his miniſters, but man perceiveth it not, negligent or perverſe, he regards not the inward admonition, nor adverts to the chaſtening rod, nor hears the voice of the wiſe: or the words may be rendered, a ſecond time he doth not reviſe it, the words but man, being not in the original: having once decreed, his counſels never alter, nor need a ſecond thought. All is planned with perfection of wiſdom and juſtice, and therefore to be ſubmitted to with implicit reſignation.

1. He ſpeaks to men in a dream, which before there was any written word, was frequently the method God took to convey the notices of his will. See Gen. xx. 3. xxxi. 24. in a viſion of the night, when deep ſleep falleth upon man, in ſlumberings on the bed: Then, when the ſenſes are locked up in repoſe, he openeth the ears of men, not of the body, but of the ſoul, and ſealeth their inſtruction or chaſtiſement; conveys admonitions to their conſcience, and aſſures them of the certainty of his chaſtiſements, if they take not warning: and when they wake, the dream is not forgotten, but the lively traces of it remain, as wax bears the impreſſion of the ſeal. Note, (1.) God can in ſleep give us warnings, which to diſregard, is to ruſh on our ruin. (2.) Unleſs God openeth man's deaf ears, he never can be wiſe unto ſalvation.

2. He hath deſigns of mercy in theſe notices he gives. (1.) That he may withdraw man from his purpoſe, prevent him from the ſin into which he was ready to ruſh, and work a divine change on his temper and diſpoſition. (2.) And hide pride from man, by reſtraining the proud from their purpoſes, or that he may humble and ſubdue the ſpirit of his own people, too reluctant in their ſubmiſſion to his providential will. (3.) He keepeth back his ſoul from the pit, and his life from periſhing by the ſword; when he was on the brink of preſent and eternal ruin, he is warned, and plucked as a brand from the burning. Note, (1.) Proud reſiſtance againſt the ſecret admonitions of God, is wilful rebellion, and will end in reprobacy. (2.) It is an unſpeakable mercy to be viſited with notices of our danger, and to have a faithful monitor within. (3.) The ſoul who periſhes will only have himſelf to blame, for God can ſay, I would have gathered you, and ye would not.

19. He is chaſtned alſo with pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with ſtrong pain: 20 [q] So that his life abhorreth bread, and his ſoul dainty meat.
21. [r] His fleſh is conſumed away, that it cannot be ſeen, and his bones that were not ſeen, ſtick out. 22. Yea, his ſoul draweth near unto the grave, and his life to the deſtroyers. 23. If there be [s] a meſſenger with him, [t] an interpreter, one among a thouſand, to ſhew unto man his uprightneſs: 24. Then he is gracious unto him, and ſaith, Deliver him from going down to the pit, I have found † a ranſom. 25. His fleſh ſhall be freſher than a child's: he ſhall return [u] to the days of his youth.
26. [x] He ſhall pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him, and [y] he ſhall ſee his face with joy: for he will render unto man his righteouſneſs. 27. ‡ He looketh upon men, and [z] if any ſay, I have ſinned, and perverted that which was right, and [a] it profited me not;
28. ‖ He will deliver his ſoul from going into [b] the pit, and his life ſhall ſee the light.

[q] Pſal. cvii. 18.
[r] Ibid. cii. 5.
[s] 2 Cor. v. 20.
[t] Mat. xiii. 52.
† Or an atonement. Rom. iii. 24, 25.
[u] Pſal. ciii. 5.
[x] 2 Chron. xxxiii. 13.
[y] Pſal. iv. 6.
‡ Or he ſhall look upon men, and ſay, I have ſinned.
[z] 2 Sam. xii. 13.
[a] Rom. vi. 21.
‖ Or he hath delivered my ſoul, &c. and my life.
[b] Iſa. xxxviii. 17.

v. 19—28. Various ways hath God to ſpeak to the ſouls of men, as here by his word and providences.

1. He afflicts man with diſeaſe; pain, univerſal as acute, ſeizes the body, v. 19. The appetite is loſt, v. 20. Pining waſte conſumes him to a ſkeleton, v. 21. Death appears in full view, and the grave opens to receive him, v. 22. Note, (1.) How ſoon may the ſofteſt pillow no longer afford repoſe to the throbbing head? (2.) If we are able to reliſh our food, let us acknowledge the mercy, and not abuſe it to luxury, leaſt God, as a juſt puniſhment, ſhould bring us to loath even dainty meat. (3.) The ſtrongeſt conſtitution is a feeble barrier againſt the waſtes diſeaſe will make. Let not the ſtrong man glory in his ſtrength.

2. When affliction is laid on the body, God ſends inſtruction to the ſoul. If there be a meſſenger with him, a godly miniſter, or rather that divine meſſenger ſent from heaven, on purpoſe to teach men the way of ſalvation, an interpreter, able to expound the deſign of dark providences, and to open the ſcriptures with clearneſs and conviction to the conſcience; one among a thouſand, as ſuch an able teacher may juſtly be reckoned; or it peculiarly refers to the great prophet, the chief of ten thouſand, to ſhew unto man his uprightneſs; either the uprightneſs of God in afflicting him, or the path of duty proper for his preſent condition, in order to the right improvement of the affliction, or, which is moſt preferable, the perfection of righteouſneſs which is in him, who is the ſinner's ſubſtitute, Chriſt Jeſus: the faith of which is the moſt ſolid ſupport againſt all the fears of death, and the ſureſt means of comfort and ſafety. Note, (1.) Moſt people in ſickneſs are much readier to ſend for the phyſician for their body, than the miniſter of God for their ſoul. (2.) The great endeavour of a wiſe interpreter is to lead the afflicted to a humbling acknowledgment of the righteouſneſs of God in their ſufferings, and to point the troubled ſoul to the tranſcendently glorious righteouſneſs of Jeſus, as their only hope againſt the condemnation of their ſins.

3. The gracious effect which thereupon enſues, 1. To the ſoul pardon and redemption; Then he is gracious unto him, and ſaith, deliver him from going down to the pit, the pit of death, and hell the wages of ſin, for I have found a ranſom, have accepted the offering of the Redeemer in the ſinner's ſtead. 2. To the body the reſtoration of health and eaſe; his fleſh ſhall be freſher than a child's, as if his life were again renewed; he ſhall return to the days of youth, become healthy, vigorous, and ſtrong. Note, (1.) None ever make the perfect righteouſneſs of Jeſus their plea, but find preſent and eternal redemption to their ſouls. (2.) There is a ranſom paid and accepted for God's people, with which he declares himſelf well pleaſed and ſatisfied. (3.) When God's chaſtiſements have anſwered their end, he is pleaſed often in mercy to remove them, and give health of body, as well as ſoul, to the believer.

4. The grateful returns ſuch a perſon makes for the mercies he hath received, 1. In prayer and thankſgiving. He ſhall pray unto God for the continuance of his mercy and grace, and praiſe him for what he hath experienced, and he will be favourable unto him; will hear and anſwer him, and perfect the begun bleſſing; and he ſhall ſee his face with joy, God will lift up the light of his countenance, and fill the ſoul with divine conſolations, for he will render unto man his righteouſneſs, reſtore the comfort of an intereſt in the Redeemer's righteouſneſs, or deal with the perſon recovered according to the tenor of the covenant of grace, and as accepted in Jeſus Chriſt the righteous. 2. He will give glory to God, by humble confeſſion of his ſins. He looketh upon men, and will juſtify God's afflicting hand upon him, and will ſay, I have ſinned, and perverted that which was right, have juſtly offended the eternal Majeſty, and it profited me not, I found no advantage nor comfort in the way of evil, therefore I will return to him from whom I have ſo greatly departed. Note, (1.) Sin is not only rebellion againſt God, but an offence againſt ſound reaſon, as tending to our eternal ruin. (2.) They who are truly turned to God, will not be aſhamed to acknowledge their ſins before men. (3.) Every ſinner will find the ways of iniquity utterly unprofitable; they neither bring him preſent peace, nor can ſecure for him the leaſt ſupport againſt a day of evil. 3. He encourages others by his own experience, to make their application to God, and expect the like mercy: He will deliver his ſoul from going down into the pit, or as the textual reading is, He hath delivered my ſoul from going down to the pit, hath ſaved me from death and hell, and his life, or my life, ſhall ſee the light, preſent proſperity and comfort, and eternal bleſſedneſs and glory. Note, (1.) We are bound for others good, as well as in gratitude to God, to ſpeak of the things he hath done for our ſouls. (2.) They who have taſted that the Lord is gracious, cannot but become advocates for him with others, to come and experience with them, how good the Lord is, and how bleſſed the man who putteth his truſt in him.

Theſe verſes 27, 28. may alſo be interpreted of God's regard to other ſinners, in a like ſtate of affliction, who, on their humble confeſſion, are reſtored, and made to partake of his favour and regard.

29. Lo, all theſe things worketh God † oftentimes with man, 30. [c] To bring back his ſoul from the pit, to be [d] enlightned with the light of the living. 31. Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me, hold thy peace, and I will ſpeak. 32. If thou haſt any thing to ſay, anſwer me:
ſpeak, for I deſire to juſtify thee. 33. If not, [e] hearken unto me; hold thy peace, and I ſhall teach thee wiſdom.

† Heb. Twice and thrice.
[c] Pſal. lvi. 13.
[d] Ibid. cvi. 9.
[e] Ibid. xxxiv. 11.

v. 29—33. Elihu having ſhewn how God ſpeaketh to man, here ſums up the great purpoſe of all theſe diſpenſations.

1. They are all deſigned for man's good, to bring back his ſoul from the paths of ſin and ignorance, and thereby to reſcue him from the pit of eternal miſery; to be enlightened with the light of the living, to partake of the preſent bleſſings of Divine teaching and grace, in order to the better and more valuable poſſeſſions of the eternal inheritance among the ſaints in light. Note, (1.) Departure from God neceſſarily iſſues in eternal ruin, if we are not recovered. (2.) God leaves no man without admonition; if men periſh, their ruin lieth at their own door. (3.) If any ſinner's ſoul be recovered from the paths of the deſtroyer, he will wholly aſcribe it to the ſovereign and ſaving grace of God.

2. He concludes with a deſire Job ſhould mark well what he had ſaid. He is ready to hear, if he hath ought to reply, and would take more pleaſure in juſtifying than condemning him; but if he acknowledged the truth of what he had urged, he would proceed with his diſcourſe; and doubted not but his attention to it would be repaid with wiſdom and inſtruction, v. 31, 33. Note, (1.) A faithful friend never loves to find fault, and is happy to be undeceived, if he hath been miſtaken or miſinformed. (2.) The wiſeſt men are always the moſt willing to learn. Superficial attainments puff up, but ſolid wiſdom humbles.

CHAP. XXXIV.

Elihu, after pauſing, reſumes his diſcourſe. 1. He beſpeaks not only the audience, but the aſſiſtance of the company, ver. 2—4. 2. He chargeth Job with other indecent expreſſions, ver. 5—9. 3. He undertakes to convince him that he had ſpoken amiſs, by ſhewing very fully, (1.) God's inconteſtible juſtice, ver. 10, 12, 17, 19, 23. (2.) His ſovereign dominion, ver. 13—15. (3.) His Almighty power, ver. 20, 24. (4.) His omniſcience, ver. 21, 22, 25. (5.) His ſeverity againſt ſinners. ver. 26—28. (6.) His over-ruling providence, ver. 29, 30. 4. He teacheth him what he ſhould ſay, ver. 31, 32. 5. He appeals to Job and men of underſtanding, for the truth of what he had ſaid, and then reproves him for his peeviſhneſs and diſcontent, ver. 33—37.

1. Furthermore Elihu anſwered and ſaid, 2. [a] Hear my words, O ye wiſe men, and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge. 3. For [b] the ear trieth words, as the † mouth taſteth meat. 4. Let us chooſe to us judgment: let us know among ourſelves what is good. 5. For Job hath ſaid, [c] I am righteous: and God [d] hath taken away my judgment. 6. [e] Should I lie againſt my right? ‡ my wound is incurable without tranſgreſſion. 7. What man is like Job, [f] who drinketh up ſcorning like water? 8. Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men. 9. For he hath ſaid, [g] It profiteth a man nothing that he ſhould delight himſelf with God.

[a] Prov. i. 5.
[b] Chap. vi. 30. & xii. 11.
† Or, Palate.
[c] Chap. xxxiii. 9.
[d] Ibid. xxvii. 2.
[e] Ibid. ix. 17.
‡ Heb. mine arrow, Chap. vi. 4. & xvi. 13.
[f] Chap. xv. 16.
[g] See Chap. ix. 22. Mal. iii. 14.

v. 1—9. Elihu, by Job's ſilence, encouraged to proceed, reſumes his diſcourſe.

1. He addreſſes the audience. Probably the important debate had been attended by others, beſides Job's friends; or though in the preſent caſe they erred greatly, yet might they be, in the general, both wiſe and good men. He deſired to be judged by their wiſdom, perſuaded his arguments would bear the teſt; and thoſe whoſe taſte was moſt judicious, would beſt reliſh them. He propoſes therefore to proceed with the ſubject, that they might come to a right judgment of Job's caſe, and conſult what were the beſt advice to give him under his preſent diſtreſs, v. 1—4. Note, Mutual aſſiſtance is the means of mutual improvement.

2. He recites the charge which he draws from Job's aſſertion. Job hath ſaid, I am righteous; not indeed perfectly, but ſo as not to deſerve (he thought) ſo heavy viſitations, chap. xxvii. v. 6. And God hath taken away my judgment, chap. xxvii. 2. becauſe he had not appeared to remove his afflictions, or ſilence the accuſations of his friends. Should I lie againſt my right? my wound is incurable without tranſgreſſion, chap. ix. 17. xvi. 17—20. He hath ſaid, It profiteth a man nothing he ſhould delight himſelf in God. Not expreſſly indeed; but Elihu infers it as the conſequence of his reaſoning, chap. ix. 22. xxi. 14—15. not that Job really thought ſo; but in the raſhneſs of diſpute, unguarded expreſſions give a juſt handle for rebuke.

3. He expreſſes his aſtoniſhment, that ſo good a man as Job ſhould ſay or inſinuate ſuch ill things. What man is like Job, who drinketh up ſcorning like water? Either lays himſelf open by ſuch words to the ſcorn and contempt of the enemies of religion, or is ſo free in his reflections upon God, and ſo liberal of ridicule and contempt on his friends, See chap. xi. 3. Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men. Not in his conduct indeed, but by uttering ſuch ſpeeches, as ſeemed to countenance and encourage them in their iniquities. Note, It is a grief to good men when the conduct or converſation of profeſſors gives occaſion to the adverſary to ſpeak reproachfully, or to the wicked an argument to harden themſelves ſin.

10. Therefore, hearken unto me, ye men of underſtanding: [h] far be it from God, that he ſhould do wickedneſs, and from the Almighty, that he ſhould commit iniquity. 11. For [i] the work of a man ſhall he render unto him, and cauſe every man to find according to his ways. 12. Yea, ſurely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment. 13. [k] Who hath given him a charge over the earth? or who hath diſpoſed the whole world? 14. [l] If he ſet his heart upon man, if he gather unto himſelf his ſpirit and his breath; 15. [m] All fleſh ſhall periſh together, and man ſhall turn again unto duſt.

[h] Deut. xxxii. 4. 2 Chron. xix. 7. Chap. viii. 3. Pſ. xcii. 15.
[i] Pſ. lxii. 12. Prov. xxiv. 12. Jer. xxxii. 19. Ezek. xxxiii. 20. Mat. xvi. 27. Rom. ii. 6. 2 Cor. v. 10. 1 Pet. i. 17. Rev. xxii. 12.
[k] 1 Chron. xxix. 11.
[l] Pſ. civ. 29.
[m] Gen. iii. 19. Eccleſ. xii. 7.

v. 10—16. Elihu had proved, that God in afflicting men deſigned their good. Here he vindicates him from the charge of wrong, directing his diſcourſe to the company, who, if Job would not hear, might bear teſtimony to the truth of what he advanced.

1. He aſſerts that God neither can, or will, do an injury to any man; nor, though ſovereign and Almighty, abuſe his power by a capricious uſe of it, but with infinite juſtice deal with every man, giving them according to their works, and rejects the very ſuggeſtion of the contrary with the greateſt abhorrence, v. 10.—12. Note, (1.) As long as a ſinner is out of hell, he is bound to lay his hand on his mouth, before a righteous God, and own he hath received leſs than his iniquity deſerves. (2.) Though God's juſtice doth not here always evidently appear, the day is at hand when he ſhall be acknowledged juſt in all his judgments.

2. He proves this by arguments drawn from the ſovereign dominion, and irreſiſtible power of God. Who hath given him a charge over the earth? He hath no ſuperior whom he ſhould fear and be influenced by to do iniquity: Or, who hath given man a charge over the earth? hath not God? And can it be ſuppoſed, after being ſo beneficent, he would become unjuſt? aſſuredly not: Or, who hath diſpoſed the whole world? with ſuch order and regularity, and filled it with ſuch variety of bleſſings? How abſurd then the thought, that he ſhould do wickedly who filleth the whole earth with his goodneſs. If he ſet his heart upon man, either as an enemy to viſit him, or in ſtrict juſtice to enter into judgment; if, as he might, he ſhould gather unto himſelf his ſpirit and breath, which once he gave, the conſequence would be, that all fleſh ſhall periſh together, and man, even the whole human race, ſhall return again unto duſt. As we are creatures, he who made may unmake us when he pleaſes; it is but to withdraw his ſupport, and we breathe our laſt; and as we are ſinners, he would appear righteous if he conſumed the earth: But he ſpares us, and thereby ſhows how far he is from doing man any injuſtice, when daily we hold our all, though forfeited, through his mercy.

16. [n] If now thou haſt underſtanding, hear this: hearken to the voice of my words. 17. [o] Shall even he that hateth right, govern? and wilt thou condemn him that is moſt juſt? 18. Is it fit to ſay to a king, Thou art wicked? and to princes, Ye are ungodly? 19. How much leſs to him [p] that accepteth not the perſon of princes, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor? for [q] they all are the work of his hands. 20. In a moment ſhall they die, and the people ſhall be troubled [r] at midnight, and paſs away: and the mighty ſhall be taken away [s] without hand. 21. For [t] his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he ſeeth all his goings. 22. [u] There is no darkneſs, nor ſhadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themſelves. 23. For he will not lay upon man [x] more than right; that he ſhould enter into judgment with God. 24. He ſhall break in pieces mighty men without number, and [y] ſet others in their ſtead. 25. Therefore he knoweth their works, and he overturneth them in the night, ſo that they are deſtroyed. 25. He ſtriketh them as wicked men in the open ſight of others: 27. Becauſe they turned back from him, and [z] would not conſider any of his ways. 28. So that they cauſed the cry of the poor to come unto him, and [a] he heareth the cry of the afflicted. 29. [b] When he giveth quietneſs, who then can make trouble? and when he hideth his face, who then can behold him? whether it be done againſt a nation, or againſt a man only: 30. That the hypocrite reign not, leſt the people be enſnared.

[n] 1 Cor. x. 15.
[o] Gen. xviii. 25. 2 Sam. xxiii. 3.
[p] Deut. x. 17. 2 Chron. xix. 7. Acts x. 34. Rom. ii. 11. Gal. ii. 6. Eph. vi. 9. Col. iii. 25. 1 Pet. i. 17.
[q] Chap. xxxi. 15.
[r] Ex. xii. 29.
[s] Dan. ii. 45.
[t] 2 Chron. xvi. 9. Chap. xxxi. 4. Pſ. xxxiv. 15. Prov. v. 21. & xv. 3. Jer. xvi. 17. & xxxii. 19.
[u] Pſ. cxxxix. 12. Am. ix. 2—3. Heb. iv. 13.
[x] Ezra. ix. 13.
[y] Dan. ii. 21.
[z] Pſ. xxviii. 5. Iſa. v. 12.
[a] Ex. ii. 24. Pſ. xii. 5.
[b] Iſa. xxvi. 3.

v. 16—30. Elihu appeals to Job, if, or ſeeing, he was a man of underſtanding, for the abſurdity of his poſitions. He admitted God's government, yet complained he was oppreſſed; condemning thereby the moſt Juſt, v. 17. Even to man that is a worm, if placed of God on a throne, it were inſolent, and highly improper, though there were foundation for the charge, to call him ſon of Belial: And rudely to accuſe princes or magiſtrates of oppreſſion and injuſtice, to whom reſpect is due from their very ſtation, v. 18. How much more then muſt it appear preſumptuous to lay ſuch a charge againſt the king of kings, who regardeth no man's perſon, but with the ſtricteſt juſtice and impartiality, conſidering all men alike the work of his hands, pronounces ſentence, and executes judgment upon them. Note, Great and poor muſt ſhortly ſtand before the ſame judge, where the greatneſs of the one, or the poverty of the other, will be no plea for favour or compaſſion, but every man ſhall receive according as his work is. To beget therefore in Job higher, and more worthy thoughts of God, and a more humble and lowly ſenſe of his own deſerts, he ſuggeſts the following conſiderations;

1. God's omnipotence. The mightieſt men are unable to ſtand before him; death, ſudden as terrible, ſhall overtake them: At midnight there ſhall be a cry of deſtruction; and with ſtrokes of judgment inviſible, but irreſiſtible, they fall, v. 20. Let the loftieſt tremble; they are as eaſily brought down, and as unable to grapple with the arm of death, as the meaneſt creature they may deſpiſe.

2. His omniſcience. As none are above his judgment, ſo can none eſcape his notice. Naked and open before him are all the ways of men; he obſerves and minutes even the ſecrets of their ſouls, v. 21. Though darkneſs, thick as the ſhadow of death, be ſought to conceal their ſins from his all-ſeeing eye, they are not hid; or though wrapped up within the cloſeſt cells of a corrupted heart, there is not a thought paſſes there but he knoweth it altogether, v. 22. As, therefore, he will not be unjuſt, through want of power; ſo neither can he be through error or miſtake. Note, (1.) It is the folly of ſinners, that they think to hide their ſins, as if by concealing them from the eyes of men, they could elude the ſcrutiny of God. (2). There is not a more awakening conſideration, which ſhould affect the ſinner's ſoul, than that the eye of God is conſtantly obſerving his heart, and all his ways.

3. His juſtice. He never will give any man cauſe to complain of him. When he viſits for iniquity, he will not lay a heavier burden than the ſin deſerves, v. 23. And therefore, as there is no appeal from his bar, nor poſſibility of altering the ſentence of the moſt Juſt, it were the higheſt folly to demand a freſh trial, when the reſult muſt neceſſarily be the confirmation of the unchangeable decree.

4. He illuſtrates this juſtice, power, and omniſcience in his dealings with men. The wicked, though never ſo numerous or great, are broken in pieces, and better men riſe up in their ſtead, v. 24. He knows their works, and brings their deſtruction upon them unawares, when, in the night aſleep and ſecure, they dream of no danger near, v. 25. He makes his vengeance viſible, that others may ſee and take warning by the ruin of theſe ſinners, whoſe iniquities always juſtify God in his puniſhments, v. 27. Becauſe they rejected his government, and would pay no regard to his will and ways, v. 26. But by oppreſſion extorted the cries of the afflicted and needy; therefore doth vengeance, terrible as righteous, come upon them, v. 28. Note, (1.) They who will not be guided by God's word, will aſſuredly be ſmitten with his rod of judgment, and broken in pieces as a potter's veſſel. (2.) Rejection of God's warnings, and obſtinate diſregard of his will and ways, fill up the meaſure of men's iniquities. (3.) The groanings of the poor againſt the hard-hearted; and of the oppreſſed againſt the unjuſt, are heard by the righteous and compaſſionate God, and he will ſhortly recompence them.

5. God's dealings are irreſiſtible. When he giveth quietneſs, whether to communities, in peace and ſafety protecting them from their enemies; or to individuals, proſpering their worldly affairs, eſpecially filling their ſouls with ſpiritual peace and joy in believing; who then can make trouble? and interrupt or diſturb them in the enjoyment of the quietneſs he beſtows? And when he hideth his face in anger, then who can behold him, or appear before an offended God, whether it be done againſt a nation, or againſt a man only? None can reſcue a devoted people from their deſtruction; nor can any bear up under a ſenſe of God's wrath, or relieve the diſtreſſes of the ſoul he hath wounded. Note, (1.) National peace and ſecurity is from God alone. (2.) If a ſoul enjoys a ſenſe of the divine favour through faith in Jeſus, no accuſations of ſin, nor fears of death or hell, can any longer diſturb him. (3.) When God is our enemy, the whole world, and all that is in it, cannot procure us one helper to protect us from the frowns of his diſpleaſure.

6. He watcheth over the welfare of kingdoms, That the hypocrite reign not, who by craft and fraud ſought to ſtep into the throne, and tyrannize over the people he had deluded: But God diſappoints his devices, leſt the people be enſnared. Note, (1.) Ambition often creeps in order to climb. (2.) When religion hath been made the uſurper's pretext, good men have been ready to fall into the ſnare. (3.) Deliverance from hypocritical and wicked rulers, is a ſignal mercy to any people.

31. Surely it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have born chaſtiſement, [c] I will not offend any more. 32. That which I ſee not, teach thou me; if I have done iniquity, I will do no more. 33. Should it be according to thy mind? he will recompenſe it, whether thou refuſe, or whether thou chooſe, and not I: therefore ſpeak what thou knoweſt. 34. Let men † of underſtanding tell me, and let a wiſe man hearken unto me. 35. [d] Job hath ſpoken without knowledge, and his words were without wiſdom. 36. ‡ My deſire is that Job may be tried unto the end, becauſe of his anſwers for wicked men. 37. For he addeth rebellion unto his ſin, [e] he clappeth his hands amongſt us, and multiplieth his words againſt God.

[c] Chap. xl. 5.
† Heb. of heart, ver. 10.
[d] Chap. xxxv. 16.
‡ Or, My father, let Job be tried.
[e] Chap. xxvii. 23.

v. 31—37. Elihu means not to leave the conviction of what is wrong to grieve him, without the direction how to behave, that he may be extricated from his diſtreſs.

1. He ſuggeſts to him what in his caſe was proper to be ſaid and done. Surely it is meet to be ſaid unto God, I have born chaſtiſement, and deſire to ſubmit chearfully, patiently, and wait the Lord's leiſure for its removal. I will not offend any more, by charging God fooliſhly, as ſevere or unjuſt. That which I ſee not, teach thou me: I ſee much evil that deſerves puniſhment, yet I ſee but a part: Who can underſtand his errors? Open my eyes, and make my conſcience tender and ſenſible: If I have done iniquity, I will do no more, the paſt ſufficeth; henceforward, through divine grace, I hope to walk more holily and humbly than I have hitherto done. Note, (1.) They who are humbled for ſin, will never complain againſt God for what they ſuffer. (2.) When we are afflicted, we are eſpecially called upon to enquire after the cauſe. (3.) The beſt of men will be moſt conſcious how ignorant they are of the depth of iniquity in their fallen ſpirit. (4.) When we turn to God, we muſt reſolutely turn from ſin, Chriſt and Belial cannot agree.

2. He reproves him for his waywardneſs. Should it be according to thy mind? It were highly unreaſonable, the creature's will ſhould prevail againſt his creator and governor: Beſide, He will recompenſe it, whether thou refuſe, or whether thou chooſe: And therefore it is vain to ſtruggle againſt his decree. But if thou ſhouldſt perſiſt, thou muſt bear the blame, and not I: never will I object to any of his diſpenſations, which are all holy, and juſt, and good: therefore ſpeak what thou knoweſt, if it appear a wiſer method of proceeding than that I have ſuggeſted. Note, (1.) He who knows what is moſt for our good, and deſigns that in all he doth, muſt needs do well; and it is the heighth of folly to object. (2.) To ſtruggle againſt God, or find fault, is as uſeleſs as it is fooliſh and ſinful.

3. He appeals for the reaſonableneſs of what he had advanced, to all men of wiſdom and godlineſs, v. 34. However wiſe Job might be, in the preſent caſe he apprehends he had betrayed want of underſtanding, as well as piety, v. 35. And he wiſhed heartily the company would weigh Job's words, as well as his anſwer, as he diſputed not for victory but truth. Some render the words, My deſire, &c. My father, let Job be tried; and deduce thence a proof that the redeemer ſpeaks in the perſon of Elihu. Three reaſons he gives for wiſhing Job's caſe thoroughly tried, (1.) Becauſe he apprehended his ſpeeches had a tendency to ſtrengthen the hands of the wicked, v. 36. (2.) That he had appeared haſtily to triumph in his defence, when in fact he was juſtly to be blamed, though clear of ſome particulars which his friends had ſuggeſted. (3.) That to his impatience under reproof, he had added rebellion againſt God; and by continued ſelf-vindication, accuſed him as unrighteous, v. 37. Note, (1.) Great men, and good men, are ſtill ſinful men, and will ſee daily cauſe to acknowledge their offences. (2.) The kindeſt office of chriſtian friendſhip, is to reprove, and lead us to a right and humbling view of ourſelves.

CHAP. XXXV.

Elihu proceeds to fix on Job a conviction of his hard ſpeeches. 1. He had repreſented religion as an unprofitable thing, which God enjoins for his own ſake, not for ours; the contrary to which Elihu makes out, ver. 1.—8. 2. He had complained of God as deaf to the cries of the oppreſſed; againſt which imputation Elihu here juſtifies God, ver. 9—13. 3. He had deſpaired of the return of God's favour to him, becauſe it was ſo long deferred, but Elihu ſhews him the true cauſe of the delay, ver. 14—16.

1. ELIHU ſpake moreover, and ſaid, 2. Thinkeſt thou this to be right, that thou ſaidſt, [a] My righteouſneſs is more than God's? 3. For thou ſaidſt, [b] What advantage will it be unto thee, and, What profit ſhall I have † if I be cleanſed from my ſin? 4. I will anſwer thee, and thy companions with thee. 5. [c] Look unto the heavens, and ſee and behold the clouds [d] which are higher than thou. 6. [e] If thou ſinneſt, what doſt [e] thou againſt him? or if thy tranſgreſſions be multiplied, what doſt thou unto him? 7. [f] If thou be righteous, what giveſt thou him? or [g] what receiveth he of thine hand? 8. [h] Thy wickedneſs may hurt a man as thou art, and thy righteouſneſs may profit the ſon of man.

[a] Chap. xxxiii. 9. & xxxiv. 5.
[b] Chap. xxxiv. 9.
† Or, by it more than by my ſin.
[c] Pſ. viii. 3.
[d] Chap. xxii. 12.
[e] Jer vi. 19.
[f] Chap. xxii. 2—3. Pſ. xvi. 2. Prov. ix. 2. Rom. xi. 35.
[g] 1 Chron. xxix. 14.
[h] Eccleſ. ix. 18.

v. 1—8. Job had laid himſelf open to reproof; and Elihu fails not to point out to him various particulars in which he had erred; and he had ſo good an opinion of him, that when he had reconſidered them, he would own he had ſpoken amiſs. Note, A good man may err, but he is open to conviction, and not aſhamed to own either his ignorance or his ſin. Errare poſſum hereticus eſſe nolo.

1. The accuſation here laid, is, (1.) His preſumption in ſaying, My righteouſneſs is more than God's. Not that he pretended to perfection before God, or that his moral righteouſneſs was greater than his; but that he ſeemed more ſollicitous to juſtify himſelf than God, and complained as if his goodneſs had made him his debtor, and that he was not rewarded as he had a right to expect; and this moſt juſtly deſerved rebuke. (2.) The diſhonourable idea he had given of true religion, chap. ix. 22. x. 15. as if it were of no advantage to ſerve God; and that he had cleanſed his hands from iniquity in vain, whilſt his troubles were ſo uncommon, and his judgment taken away. Note, (1.) God never can be our debtor; the beſt we do is unworthy of him, and he ever chaſtiſes us leſs than we deſerve. (2.) Though we may find no preſent outward advantage; yea, much loſs and ſuffering for the ſake of God and his cauſe, we ſhall find religion no unprofitable ſervice at laſt.

2. The confutation of Job's aſſertions, is drawn from the greatneſs and glory of God; and this Job, and all who joined him, might be convinced of, if they looked to the heavens; for they would teach them how tranſcendantly God is exalted above man: our ſins may hurt worms like ourſelves, and our goodneſs extend to our fellow mortals, v. 8. But with reſpect to him, the malice of the moſt daring ſinners is impotent: they cannot deſtroy his government, diſturb his peace, defeat his counſels, or tarniſh his glory, any more than they can blot out the ſun. Though they oppoſe him, and break his law, they cannot fly from his arm, and muſt glorify him in their puniſhment, v. 6. On the other hand, our goodneſs extendeth not to him; he needeth not our ſervice; we can add nothing to his ſelf-ſufficient bleſſedneſs; nay, all we render to him, we muſt firſt receive from him; and ſo far from making him our debtor, the obligation is our own, that we are permitted and enabled to ſerve him, and that he condeſcends to accept the worſhip we offer, and the bounden duty we deſire to pay him, v. 7.

9. By reaſon of the multitude of oppreſſions they make the oppreſſed to cry: they cry out by reaſon of the arm of the mighty. 10. But none ſaith, Where is God my † maker, [i] who giveth ſongs in the night? 11. Who teacheth us more than the beaſts of the earth, and maketh us wiſer than the fowls of heaven. 12. There they cry (but [k] none giveth anſwer) becauſe of the pride of evil men. 13. Surely [l] God will not hear vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it.

† Heb. Makers. Gen. i. 26.
[i] Pſ. xlii. 8. & cxlix. 5. Acts xvi. 25.
[k] Prov. i. 28.
[l] Chap. xxvii. 9. Prov. i. 28. Iſa. i. 15. Jer. xi. 11.

v. 9—13. We have here another complaint of Job's, ſilenced.

1. He had reflected upon God, as not hearing and relieving the prayers of the afflicted and oppreſſed, chap. xix. 7. xxiv. 12. xxx. 20. Hereto Elihu anſwers,

2. That if they receive not an anſwer of mercy, it is becauſe themſelves are to blame. [1.] As only anxious to be delivered from their ſufferings, and making no ſpiritual improvement of them to their humiliation, and greater acquaintance with God their Maker, or Makers, as in the original, expreſſive of the perſons in the Godhead, who ſaid, Let us make man. Note, (1.) Many groan under trouble, and complain of their miſeries, who never ſhew any humiliation for ſin, or deſire after God. (2.) Irreligious poverty and ſuffering is, of all eſtates of human miſery, the moſt miſerable. (3.) Selfiſh prayers, the cries of mere diſtreſs, without any regard to God's glory, or our ſoul's good, can expect no help from God. [2.] As being impatient under their ſufferings, and unthankful for the mercies they enjoy. They look not for ſupport from inward conſolations, deſiring to wait God's leiſure, who, under the ſevereſt preſſures of affliction, can make the heart glad, and giveth ſongs in the night, when the darkeſt troubles ſurround his faithful people. Nor, though endued with underſtanding, and a capacity to know God above the beaſts, do they make any uſe of it under their ſufferings, nor differ in their prayers from the mere cry of the brutes, who roar becauſe of their anguiſh. Note, (1.) They who are inſenſible of the undeſerved and diſtinguiſhing mercies they enjoy, have no reaſon to expect deliverance from the evils they feel. (2.) God can give joys that overbalance all our ſorrows; and, when our tribulations moſt abound, make our conſolations through Chriſt the more abound alſo. (3.) The diſtinguiſhing difference between a man and a beaſt lies not ſo much in reaſon as religion. Many beaſts ſhew amazing inſtances of memory, reaſoning, &c. but the dignity of man lies in his capacity for the knowledge, ſervice, and enjoyment of God. [3.] Their cry is the cry of vanity; they are only ſollicitous about the periſhing things of time, for their bodies, not their ſouls, merely becauſe of the oppreſſions they ſuffer under the proud. Or this may be connected with the words incloſed in a parentheſis, as the reaſon why God giveth them no anſwer; not only becauſe their prayers are vain, or inſincere, but alſo becauſe of the unhumbled pride of their hearts. They are evil men, their ſufferings are the effects of their ſins, and yet they do not repent of the one, whilſt they cry to be delivered from the other. Note, (1.) Whilſt the deſign of our afflictions is not anſwered, it is mercy in God to deny our prayer for their removal. (2.) An unhumbled heart may howl upon his bed, but cannot offer that ſacrifice which, through the Mediator, is as the grateful incenſe, and returns fraught with bleſſings from above.

14. Although [m] thou ſayeſt thou ſhalt not ſee him, yet [n] judgment is before him, therefore † truſt thou in him. 15. But now becauſe it is not ſo, ‡ he hath viſited in his anger, yet § he knoweth it not in great extremity: 16. Therefore doth [o] Job open his mouth in vain: he multiplieth words without knowledge.

[m] Chap. ix. 11. & xxiii. 8, 9.
[n] Pſ. xxxvii. 6.
† Or, wait upon him.
‡ i. e. God.
§ i. e. Job.
[o] Chap. xxxiv. 35.

v. 14—16. We have here the laſt charge he brings againſt Job for his haſty expreſſions; and this is,

1. That he deſpaired of God's ever appearing for him, either to vindicate him from the unjuſt aſperſions caſt upon him, or to deliver him from the miſeries he ſuffered, chap. ix. 32—35. xxiii. 4—7. xxxi. 35—37. Note, When God corrects us for our humiliation, Satan is ever ready to drive us to deſperation.

2. Elihu rebukes his deſpondence, and ſhews him both the path of duty, and the reaſon why his deliverance was delayed. Judgment is before him; he will certainly appear to vindicate the cauſe of his people, and then every dark diſpenſation ſhall be unfolded: therefore truſt thou in him, or wait upon him; truſt in his promiſes, and patiently expect their fulfilment. Had this been the caſe, ere this his anguiſh had been relieved. But now, becauſe it is not ſo, becauſe this faith, patience, hope, and reſignation hath not been exerciſed, he hath viſited in his anger, diſpleaſed with Job for his miſimprovement of the mercy intended him in his affliction, and therefore he felt that rod in anger, which was at firſt lifted up in love. Yet he knoweth it not in great extremity: the greatneſs of his ſufferings made him overlook his unbelief, impatience, and raſhneſs; and thereby he loſt both the comfort, and deferred the removal of them. Note, (1.) Deſpair of relief is a high reflection upon God's power and grace, as impatience is on his goodneſs and wiſdom. (2.) Faith in God is the only clue that can guide us through every labyrinth of temptation. (3.) If our troubles are not removed, but increaſed, it becomes us to look well if we have not provoked God by our behaviour under them.

3. He concludes from the whole, Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain, in undue complaints of his ſufferings, in unjuſt reflections upon the Lord, and too eager vindication of himſelf. He multiplieth words without knowledge, appears ignorant of the deſert of ſin, the perfections of God, and the path of duty.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Elihu having reproved Job's raſhneſs, endeavours to engage him to patient ſubmiſſion, the want of which, and not his hypocriſy, as his friends ſuggeſted, had prolonged his afflictions. Here we have, 1. His preface, ver. 2—4. 2. His account of the methods of God's providences towards the children of men, according as they carry themſelves, ver. 5—15. 3. The fair warning and good counſel he gives Job thereupon, ver. 16—21. 4. His demonſtration of God's ſovereignty and omnipotence, ver. 22, 23.

1. ELIHU alſo proceeded, and ſaid, 2. Suffer me a little and I will ſhew thee, that † I have yet to ſpeak on God's behalf. 3. I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will aſcribe [a] righteouſneſs to my maker. 4. For truly, [b] my words ſhall not be falſe: he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee.

† Heb. There are yet words for God.
[a] Deut. xxxii. 4.
[b] 2 Cor. ii. 17.

v. 1—4. As the general ſilence ſeemed to give approbation to what was ſaid, Elihu, after a ſhort pauſe, reſumes his diſcourſe, with an apology for treſpaſſing a little longer on their patience, for what he had now to ſay would be ſhort, yet important. He was ſpeaking in God's behalf, v. 2. therefore might claim attention. It was no common ſubject he treated, but his knowledge was fetched from afar, the reſult of long reſearches, and concerning the deep things of God, v. 3. His deſign was to vindicate the ways of Ged to man, and aſcribe righteouſneſs to his Maker in all the diſpenſations of his providence, v. 3. And in doing this he reſolved to uſe the greateſt impartiality and ſincerity, ſpeaking the truth in love; and he preſumed he was ſo thoroughly acquainted with his ſubject, and his intention ſo upright, that they would acknowledge their regard juſtly due to his diſquiſition, unleſs we ſuppoſe, he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee, be taken literally, as ſpoken by Chriſt in the perſon of Elihu, in whom dwelt all the fulneſs of wiſdom and knowledge, and whoſe words all men are bound to hear and obſerve. Note, (1.) They who ſpeak for God in ſimplicity, will, by the importance of their diſcourſe, engage attention. (2.) A faithful ſoul is jealous for God's honour, and riſes up to vindicate his diſpenſations from the fooliſh and ſinful aſperſions of thoſe murmurers and complainers, who charge God fooliſhly. (3.) Truth and plainneſs of ſpeech eſpecially become thoſe who profeſs themſelves teachers of the good ways of God.

5. Behold, God is mighty, and [c] deſpiſeth not any: [d] he is mighty in ſtrength, and † wiſdom. 6. He preſerveth not the life of the wicked: but [e] giveth right to the poor. 7. [f] He withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but [g] with kings are they on the throne, yea, he doth eſtabliſh them for ever, and they are exalted. 8. And [h] if they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction: 9. Then [i] he ſheweth them their work, and their tranſgreſſions that they have exceeded. 10. [k] He openeth alſo their ear to diſcipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity. 11. [l] If they obey and ſerve him, they ſhall ſpend their days in proſperity, and their years in pleaſures. 12. But if they obey not, they ſhall periſh by the ſword, and they ſhall die without knowledge. 13. But [m] the hypocrites in heart [n] heap up wrath: they cry not when he bindeth them

[c] Chap. x. 3.
[d] Chap. ix. 4. & xii. 13, 16. & xxxvii. 23.
† Heb. Heart.
[e] Pſ. ix. 4.
[f] Pſ. xxxiii. 18. & xxxiv. 15.
[g] Pſ. cxiii. 8.
[h] Pſ. cvii. 10.
[i] 2 Chron. xxxiii. 12.
[k] Chap. xxxiii. 16.
[l] Iſa. i. 19.
[m] Mat. xxiii. 27.
[n] Rom. ii. 5.

Before Chriſt 1520.

them. 14. [o] They die in youth, and their life is among the ‡ unclean.

[o] Chap. xv. 32. & xxii. 16. Pſ. lv. 23.
‡ Or, Sodomites

v. 5—14. Elihu, in the behalf of God, proceeds, as he propoſed, to vindicate God's righteous government.

1. The meaneſt of his ſubjects are not deſpiſed by him, v. 5. He is mighty to redreſs their grievances, and wiſe in all his diſpenſations towards them. Note, If God deſpiſeth not any, ſurely much leſs ought we.

2. He miniſters impartial juſtice. The greateſt, if wicked, feel his vengeance; cut off, even here oftentimes, by his righteous judgment; or, if their life be prolonged, they are only reſerved for the wrath to come: whilſt the cauſe of the poor that were wronged God eſpouſes, v. 6. and his eyes are upon them for good. They are exalted to honour in this world, or, what is infinitely better, they are eſtabliſhed in his grace and love, and for ever appointed to reign with him in glory everlaſting, v. 7. Note, (1.) The day is near, when the oppreſſor and the oppreſſed will meet at the righteous bar of God. (2.) However low God's people may be reduced, they are a royal ſeed, and there is a kingdom prepared for them.

3. If God afflicts his people, it is purely with a deſign to do them good, v. 8. to humble them under the views of paſt iniquities, to turn them from the perverſeneſs of the ways they may have choſen, to open their ears to that inſtruction, to which, except under the rod, they would have been inattentive, and to ſhew them the path of duty, as the ſure way of deliverance from the cords of affliction. Note, (1.) A ſenſe of God's purpoſe in our chaſtiſements, ſhould make us not only reſigned, but thankful. (2.) Whatever brings us to humbler views of ourſelves, and more unreſerved dependance on God, is to be reckoned among our chief mercies. (3.) Afflictions only anſwer their deſign, when God openeth the ear to diſcipline; elſe they but harden inſtead of humbling. (4.) It is a bleſſed fruit of afflictions, when we leave the droſs of ſin in the furnace, and come forth purified as ſilver from the fire.

4. When the end of the correction is anſwered, the rod will not only be removed, but the bleſſedneſs of it appear. If they obey and ſerve him, in conſequence of his gracious chaſtiſement, then they ſhall ſpend their days in proſperity, and their years in pleaſures; for godlineſs hath the promiſe of the life which now is, and ever brings that beſt portion, contentment; but eſpecially in their ſouls they ſhall proſper, taſte the more ſubſtantial pleaſures of religion, and that not only through the days of time, but the years of eternity.

5. Where a hypocrite ſuffers, far different is the iſſue. As they obey not the divine admonitions, but by their impatient and unhumbled ſpirit heap up wrath; and inſtead of crying to God in their diſtreſs, are ſtupid and hardened under it; deſtruction then awaits them, they ſhall periſh under the judgment, and, what is far worſe, ſhall die impenitent. In youth they ſhall be cut off, and their portion in eternity be appointed them among the unclean, whoſe worm dieth not, and their fire is not quenched, v. 12—14. Note, (1.) They who die ſtupid and unconcerned, are in a much more deſperate eſtate, than they who depart in the greateſt agonies of remorſe. (2.) Hypocrites in heart will be detected; however fair a ſhew they make in the fleſh, there is one that ſeeth and judgeth (3.) They who, truſting on their own righteouſneſs, are heaping up their works as their confidence againſt a judgment-day, will be terribly diſappointed to find that they have only heaped up wrath. (4.) Many now proudly deſpiſe the open ſinner, the profane and unclean, and ſay to them, Stand by thyſelf, I am more holy than thou, who yet ſhall have their portion with them in the burning lake.

15. [p] He delivereth the † poor in his affliction, and openeth their ears in oppreſſion. 16. Even ſo would he have removed thee out of the ſtrait [q] into a broad place, where there is no ſtraitneſs, and [r] that which ſhould be ſet on thy table, ſhould be full of fatneſs. 17. But thou haſt fulfilled the judgment of the wicked: judgment and juſtice take hold on thee. 18. Becauſe there is wrath, beware leſt he take thee away with his ſtroke: then [s] a great ranſom cannot deliver thee. 19. Will he eſteem [t] thy riches? no not gold, nor all the forces of ſtrength. 20. [u] Deſire not the night, when people are cut off in their place. 21. Take heed, [x] regard not iniquity: for this haſt thou choſen rather than affliction. 22. Behold, God exalteth by his power: [y] who teacheth like him? 23. [z] Who hath enjoined him his way? or [a] who can ſay, Thou haſt wrought iniquity?

[p] Pſ. lxxii. 4.
† Or afflicted. So ver. 6.
[q] Pſ. xviii. 19.
[r] Ibid. xxiii. 5.
[s] Ibid. xlix. 7.
[t] Prov. xi. 4.
[u] Chap. xxxiv. 22.
[x] Pſ. lxvi. 18.
[y] Iſa. xl. 13, 14. Rom. xi. 34. 1 Cor. ii. 16.
[z] Chap. xxxiv. 13.
[a] Ibid. 10.

v. 15—23. Elihu here applies what he had ſaid to Job's caſe.

1. Had he been humbled, God would have dealt thus graciouſly with him; but his conduct under his affliction continued the ſcourge upon him. It is God's conſtant method of procedure, to deliver the poor, to ſupport, comfort, ſtrengthen him, and, when it is fit, to open a door of eſcape for him. Mean time, he conveys his inſtructive leſſons, and whiſpers his kind conſolations to the ſoul, amidſt all his ſorrows and oppreſſion; and this Job would, ere this, have experienced, had he been patiently ſubmiſſive; his path had not been then, as now, ſtraitned, nor his wants ſo diſtreſſing; he would have been freed from his diſtreſſes, and his table crowned with plenty: but ſince, by a behaviour like that of wicked men, and pleas that gave them countenance in their iniquities, he had offended, therefore in juſt judgment his corrections were continued, till his heart was brought to bow in ſilent humiliation, and to give God his due glory in the acknowledgment of his righteouſneſs, v. 15—17. Note, (1.) If our afflictions are long and heavy, ſurely we have only ourſelves to blame for them. (2.) When the chaſtiſement hath anſwered its end, it will aſſuredly be removed, for God doth not willingly afflict the children of men. (3.) They who plead the cauſe of the wicked, muſt not wonder if they ſuffer with them.

Before Chriſt 1520.

2. He warns him of the danger of perſevering in obſtinate ſelf-vindication. There was danger leſt God in wrath ſhould reſent his injurious aſperſions on his government; and if he ſhould riſe up to avenge his own quarrel, woe to the ſoul againſt whom he lifts up the ſword, v. 18. No ranſom can redeem him, no might reſcue him, no darkneſs conceal him; no, not even the grave, which Job had ſo impatiently deſired. The darkneſs hath no covering before God, and in death, their appointed place, the wrath of God purſues the ſinners, v. 19, 20. Note, (1.) Though a truly good man ſhall not periſh eternally, yet it is by working out his ſalvation with fear and trembling only that it can be ſecured. (2.) Riches profit not in a day of wrath. (3.) No darkneſs can hide, no ſhadow of rock or mountain cover the ſinner from the ſtroke of God.

3. He cautions him to regard iniquity no longer, not to perſevere in his charges againſt God, or ſo impatiently to deſire death, to be rid of his afflictions, rather than humbly reſigned to wait God's leiſure and time for his deliverance, v. 21. Note, The greateſt ſufferings are preferable to the leaſt ſins.

4. He bids him obſerve God's power, wiſdom, and righteouſneſs, to engage his unreſerved ſubmiſſion to his will. He exalteth by his power, himſelf the ſource of all power; and, according to his own will, exalting whom he pleaſes. None teaches like him, ſo wiſe or able to direct: he needs no adviſer; his ways, word, and providences are all perfect in wiſdom; and it were as falſe as fooliſh to charge him with iniquity, whoſe boſom is the ſeat of juſtice, and whoſe glorious prerogative it is, from the eſſential rectitude of his nature, that he can do no wrong. Note, The more we know of God, the more we ſhall be ſilenced and confounded before him, nor dare compare our wiſdom, power, and righteouſneſs with his, or complain of any thing he ordains, which muſt be always wiſe as righteous.

24. Remember that thou [b] magnify his work, which men behold. 25. Every man may ſee it, man may behold it afar off. 26. Behold, God is great, and we know him not, [c] neither can the number of his years be ſearched out. 27. For he maketh ſmall the drops of water: they pour down rain according to the vapour thereof: 28. Which the clouds do drop, and diſtil upon man abundantly. 29. Alſo can any underſtand the ſpreadings of the clouds, or [d] the noiſe of his tabernacle? 30. Behold, he ſpreadeth his light upon it, and covereth the bottom of the ſea. 31. For [e] by them judgeth he the people, [f] he giveth meat in abundance. 32. With clouds he covereth the light; and commandeth it not to ſhine, † by the cloud that cometh betwixt. 33. The noiſe thereof ſheweth concerning it, the cattle alſo concerning ‡ the vapour.

[b] Rev. xv. 3.
[c] Pſ. xc. 2. & cii. 24, 27. Heb. i. 12.
[d] Pſ. xviii. 13. & civ. 7.
[e] Chap. xxxvii. 13. & xxxviii. 23.
[f] Acts xiv. 17.
† Heb. By that which cometh between.
‡ Heb. That which goeth up.

v. 24—33. From the view of the glorious works of God, his unſearchable perfections, and wonders in the adminiſtration of the kingdom of providence, Elihu would affect Job with humbler thoughts of himſelf, and higher apprehenſions of God and his ways.

1. He is worthy to be magnified for the works he hath wrought viſible to every eye: the heavens above, the earth around us, proclaim the glory of the Creator; and ſince in them his univerſal goodneſs as well as greatneſs appears, we may aſſuredly conclude, that in his works of providence, reſpecting us in particular, he deſerves equally to be magnified and adored, v. 24, 25.

2. Though we ſee and know a part of his excellence, yet his perfections are unſearchable, and the myſteries of his works paſt finding out. If we cannot then comprehend his ſurpaſſing greatneſs, it were folly to arraign his proceedings, and to ſpeak evil of what we know not; and if we cannot account for the diviſion of the drops of rain, or for the moſt common appearances in nature, it were highly abſurd to quarrel with his providences,

Before Chriſt 1520.

providences, becauſe we do not clearly ſee the reaſons of his conduct.

[1.] God is great, and we know him not, cannot fathom his immenſity, or comprehend his eternity; neither can the number of his years be ſearched, who was from everlaſting to everlaſting; and here all our ideas are loſt.

[2.] As unſearchable are his works. That the drops of dew deſcend, and from the clouds the rain pours down, we ſee, v. 27, 28. but how this wonder is performed, is yet a myſtery. A little we know; but in a thouſand enquiries into the nature and cauſes of things, we are enveloped with darkneſs; for who can underſtand the ſpreading of the clouds? how poiſed in air they float; how from the ſmalleſt appearances they quickly darken the ſky; how they collect their ſtores, or diſpenſe them; or the noiſe of his tabernacle, the ſtormy winds that blow under heaven, or the thunders that utter their voices from the clouds. Behold, he ſpreadeth his light upon it, on the clouds his tabernacle; the light of the ſun that ſhines when the rain is blown over, or the lightning which flaſhes from it, and covereth the bottom of the ſea with waters, thence to be raiſed, by the action of the ſun and wind, into the clouds, as the vapour in the alembic. For by them judgeth he the people: he can, when he pleaſes, make them the inſtruments of his vengeance, as in the flood; or, when in ſeaſon and meaſure they gently water the earth, he giveth meat in abundance. With clouds he covereth the light, either ſhading the ſultry beams of the ſun, or with thick tempeſt in the ſky, turning the day into night; and commandeth it not to ſhine, by the cloud, or without this ſupplement to the text, by that which cometh betwixt, as in eclipſes, when, by the interpoſition of the moon, the ſun is darkned, or the earth intercepts the ſun-beams, whilſt the moon paſſes through her ſhadow. The noiſe thereof ſheweth concerning it, the whiſtling wind, or thunder, prognoſticate the approaching rain; the cattle alſo, furniſhed with ſtrange inſtinct, give tokens concerning the vapour, when the gathering ſtorm approaches. In all which we ſee God's wondrous working, and are bound to magnify and praiſe him, whoſe wiſdom is infinite, and his ways paſt finding out; and therefore in all his providences ſilent ſubmiſſion becomes our bounden duty.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Elihu here goes on to extol the wonderful power of God in the meteors and the changes of the weather. 1. In thunder and lightning, ver. 1—5. 2. In froſt, ſnow, rains, and wind, ver. 6—13. 3. He challenges Job to ſolve theſe phænomena of nature, that confeſſing his ignorance in them, he might own himſelf an incompetent judge in the proceedings of Divine Providence, ver. 14—22. 4. He concludes with the principle which he undertook to prove, that God is great, and greatly to be feared, v. 23, 24.

1. AT this alſo my heart trembleth, and is moved out of his place. 2. † Hear attentively the noiſe of his voice, and the ſound that goeth out of his mouth. 3. He directeth it under the whole heaven, and his ‡ lightning unto the § ends of the earth. 4. After it [a] a voice roareth: he thundereth with the voice of his excellency, and he will not ſtay them when his voice is heard. 5. God thundreth marvellouſly with his voice; [b] great things doth he, [c] which we cannot comprehend.

† Heb. Hearing, hear.

‡ Heb. Light.
§ Heb. Wings. So Chap. xxxviii. 13.
a Pſ. xxix. 3. & lxviii. 33.
b Chap. v. 9. & ix. 10. Rev. xv. 3. c Pſ. lxxvii. 19.

v. 1—5. If, as is by ſome ſuggeſted, at this time the rolling thunders were at a diſtance heard, with lightnings flaſhing round, and thickning clouds portending the approaching ſtorm, there will be ſomething more peculiarly beautiful and applicable in this deſcription of Elihu.

1. He profeſſes his own reverential fear at the awful ſcene, and addreſſes Job to pay attention to the voice which theſe mighty thunders uttered, v. 2. Note, There is ſomething in thunder inexpreſſibly awful, and ſhould remind us ever of that glorious God who maketh the thunder.

2. He deſcribes the tremendous appearances. God himſelf directs the ſtorm, bids the lightnings flaſh, the thunders roll, and points the mark againſt which theſe inſtruments of deſtruction are levelled; and in every nation this voice is heard. The flaſh precedes, and gives the warning of the terrible exploſion; and the interval is, according to the diſtance of the cloud, proportionably longer or ſhorter, the motion of light being ſo much ſwifter than of ſound. And he will not ſtay them when his voice is heard, torrents of rain uſually ſucceeding. Thus doth God ſpeak to the aſtoniſhed world, marvellous in his works, and above our comprehenſion; and how little need we wonder then, if in his providence myſteries appear which we cannot fathom?

d Pſ. cxlvii. 16.
† Heb. To the ſhower of rain, and to the ſhowers of the rain, &c.

6. For [d] he ſaith to the ſnow, Be thou on the earth; likewiſe † to the ſmall rain, and to the great rain of his ſtrength. 7. He ſealeth up the hand of every man; that all men may know his work. 8. Then the beaſts go into dens, and remain in their places. 9. ‡ Out of the ſouth cometh the whirlwind: and cold out of the § north. 10. [e] By the breath of God, froſt is given: and the breadth of the waters is ſtraitned. 11. Alſo by watering he wearieth the thick cloud: he ſcattereth his bright cloud. 12. And it is turned round about by his counſels: that they may do whatſoever he commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth. 13. [f] He cauſeth it to come, whether for correction, or [g] for his land, or [h] for mercy.

Before Chriſt 1520.

‡ Or, from his chamber.
§ Heb. ſcattering winds.
e Chap. xxxviii. 29. Pſ. cxlvii. 16, 17.
f Exod. ix. 18, 23. 1 Sam. xii. 18, 19. Ezra x. 9. Chap. xxxvi. 31.
g Chap. xxxviii. 26, 27.
h 2 Sam. xxi. 10. 1 Kings xviii. 45.

v. 6—13. Elihu here recounts other inſtances of the wonders God works deep and unſearchable. At his word the ſnow covers the earth; the rain, obedient to his will, deſcends in gentle dews, or dreadful cataracts, v. 6. Driven from the plough, and the road, the traveller ſeeks the covert, and the labourer retires, v. 7. Yea, the very beaſts fly to their dens, till the tempeſt be overpaſt, v. 8. From the ſouth, or from his chamber, the reſiſtleſs whirlwind ruſhes, and bleak northern blaſts bring winter's cold, v. 9. The ſtraitned waters feel the freezing breath of God, and bound in chryſtal fetters ceaſe to flow, v. 10. Thick clouds ariſe, when the diſſolving froſt emits more copious vapours, and in vaſt bodies the collected waters float on air, till, wearied with watering, exhauſted of their ſtores in winter ſhowers, they are diſſipated before the vernal ſun, v. 11. Then bright clouds appear, not charged with ſtorm or rain, but ſcattered light over the blue expanſe, v. 12. and all theſe things are ordered by his counſels, and come and go at his pleaſure, v. 12. The inſtruments of mercy or judgment in his hands, ſometimes for correction ſent, when inclement ſeaſons, black with famine, ſpread their baneful influence, and inundations riſing, threaten a returning deluge. Sometimes on his land for mercy, when ſun and clouds, and rain and ſnow, conſpire to fertilize the ſoil, and crown the happy ſpot on which his favour reſts, with overflowing vats of wine and oil, or vallies thick with corn. Note, (1.) Since every kind of weather receives direction from unerring wiſdom, it is ſinful to complain. (2.) Shall beaſts be wiſe to fly for ſhelter againſt the ſtorm, and ſhall not man, a ſinner, more provident, ſeek under the ſhadow of Jeſus, a covert from the deluge of divine wrath? (3.) Do all the creatures, thus obedient to his will, fulfil his pleaſure, and ſhall we be the only rebels in the creation, and refuſe his government and guidance? (4.) If fruitful ſeaſons glad the year, may we never abuſe the plenty, but in the gifts behold the giver. If for correction the heavens are made as braſs over us, and the earth as iron beneath us refuſes to yield its increaſe, let us hear the rod, and who hath appointed it.

14. Hearken unto this, O Job: ſtand ſtill, and [i] conſider the wondrous works of God. 15. Doſt thou know when God diſpoſed them, and cauſed the light of the cloud to ſhine? 16. Doſt thou know the balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him [k] which is perfect in knowledge? 17. How thy garments are warm, when he quieteth the earth by the ſouth-wind? 18. [l] Haſt thou with him ſpread out the ſky, which is ſtrong, and as a molten looking-glaſs? 19. [m] Teach us what we ſhall ſay unto him; for we cannot order our ſpeech by reaſon of darkneſs. 20. Shall it be told him that I ſpeak? if a man ſpeak, ſurely he ſhall be ſwallowed up.

i Pſ. cxi. 2.
k Chap. xxxvi. 4.
l Iſa. xliv. 24.
m Chap. xiii. 3.

v. 14—20. Elihu calls upon Job to attend diligently his ſpeech, and with ſolemn conſideration to weigh well what he had ſpoken of theſe wondrous works of God, as an argument for ſubmiſſion to every diſpenſation, which, however ſtrange to us, is ordered by him whoſe underſtanding is infinite, v. 14. God alone is all-wiſe, and perfect in knowledge; whilſt we, even the wiſeſt, how ſmall a part of his ways can we underſtand? When God filled the air with his ſtores of rain, or ſnow, or vapours; when or where they ſhall deſcend; how the rays of light became ſo beautifully painted on the cloud in the rainbow, by the different refrangibility of their colours, v. 15. by what mechaniſm theſe floating bodies are ſuſpended, nor ruſh at once in cataracts to the earth, v. 16. how our garments are warm, when, after winter's cold, the milder breath of ſummer ſtills the earth, v. 17. theſe, with innumerable other things, however obvious in their effects, have myſteries in them that no human wiſdom can unfold: and as none can comprehend theſe wonders, none can pretend to have ſhared with God in any of his works. Haſt thou with him ſpread out the ſky, which is ſtrong, firm, and permanent, and as a molten looking-glaſs, bright and clear, without a flaw, reflecting the glory of the great Creator, v. 18. Loſt in the immenſity and unfathomable abyſs of God's wondrous works, he bids Job ſpeak, if he dared pretend a knowledge of theſe myſteries, where wiſdom groped for the wall as blind, and we cannot order our ſpeech by reaſon of darkneſs. Both darkneſs of the fallen mind within, and darkneſs in the myſterious ſubject without, prevents our conceiving or expreſſing ourſelves with any preciſion or clearneſs on the ſubject, v. 19. Far therefore from wiſhing that God ſhould be told how well he had ſpoken, he trembles for himſelf, conſcious how inſufficient the beſt he could ſay muſt appear, where the depth of the matter ſwallowed up the ſpeaker, v. 20. Or this laſt verſe declares his diſclaiming all attempt to vindicate Job's cauſe, where the wiſeſt advocate muſt be immediately confounded. Note, When we ſpeak of God, his being and perfections, we are loſt in aſtoniſhment; if we contemplate his works of creation or providence, our ſhallow line is quickly run out; if we look into his myſteries of grace, and attempt to ſpeak of them, we find a height and length, and breadth and depth, that paſſeth created knowledge.

21. And now men ſee not the bright light which is in the clouds: but the wind paſſeth and cleanſeth them. 22. † Fair weather cometh out of the north: with God is terrible majeſty. 23. Touching the Almighty, [n] we cannot find him out: [o] he is excellent in power and in judgment, and in plenty of juſtice: he will not afflict. 24. [p] Men do therefore fear him: he reſpecteth not any that are wiſe of heart.

† Heb. Gold.
[n] 1 Tim. vi. 16.
[o] Chap. ix. 4. & xii. 13. & xxxvi. 5.
[p] Mat. x. 28.

v. 21—24. Perceiving the appearance probably of the glorious God, inveloped with dark clouds of the ſky, and cloathed with the whirlwind, Elihu haſtens to conclude.

1. He obſerves the ſun is darkned with clouds, but they do not ever lour, v. 21. the wind diſperſes them, and from the north cometh fair weather, v. 22. So, though God approached in terrible majeſty, the ſtorm would blow over, and Job's afflictions iſſue in the ſun-ſhine of proſperity.

2. He ſhuts up his diſcourſe with ſome ſhort but weighty conſiderations. God's glory is infinite, v. 22. his perfections unſearchable; his power, almighty; his judgments, righteous; and all his diſpenſations diſplay plenty of juſtice: ſo that none hath the leaſt reaſon of complaint. He delights not in man's ſufferings, will never afflict beyond his deſerts, and ever with a deſign to do him good, v. 23. moſt juſtly therefore do good men reverence, fear, and ſubmit to him. He reſpecteth not any that are wiſe in heart, who, inſtead of humble ſubmiſſion, indulge their proud reaſonings: their cenſures he diſregards, and, inſtead of altering his procedure, they may expect to be continued under the marks of his diſpleaſure.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

As all ſides had been deſiring God would appear to decide the controverſy, lo, he is here; and, taking up the thread of Elihu's diſcourſe, calls awfully to Job to prepare his anſwer, ſince this he deſired, to the following queſtions: 1. Concerning the earth, and the fabric of it, ver. 1—7. 2. Concerning the ſea, ver. 8—11. 3. Concerning the morning light, ver. 12—15. 4. Concerning the fountains of the deep, or the dark receſſes of the earth, ver. 16—21. 5. Concerning the meteors, ſnow, rain, thunder, lightning, and the ſtars, ver. 22—38. 6. Concerning the proviſion made for beaſts and birds, ver. 39—41. And if he appeared ignorant in theſe common things, how could he preſume to judge of the counſels of God's government?

1. THEN [a] the LORD anſwered Job [b] out of the whirlwind, and ſaid, 2. [c] Who is this that darkneth counſel by words without knowledge? 3. [d] Gird up now thy loins like a man; [e] for I will demand of thee, and anſwer thou me.

[a] Chap. ix. 35.
[b] Exod. xix. 16, 18. 1 Kings xix. 11. Ezek. i. 4. Nah. i. 3.
[c] Chap. xxxiv. 35. & xlii. 3.
[d] Chap. xl. 7.
[e] Chap. xiii. 22.

v. 1—3. Behold the preſent Deity! what mortal but muſt tremble before him, with deep ſilence bow into the duſt, and hear with ſolemn attention what God is about to ſpeak.

1. The perſon who appears is the almighty Jehovah, probably the eternal Son, viſible in human form. See chap. xlii. 5. Out of the whirlwind in terrible majeſty he utters his voice, and, as he had ſo earneſtly requeſted, directs his ſpeech to Job. Note, (1.) God hath various ways of ſpeaking to the ſouls of his people; ſometimes in the ſmall ſtill voice of ſecret conſolations, ſometimes in the awfully-diſtreſſing thunders of heart rending convictions; yet in both it is alike the voice of mercy. (2.) They who contend againſt God muſt be made to know at laſt, how vain their ſtruggle againſt him, who, when he judgeth, will overcome.

2. The charge laid againſt Job: Who is this that darkneth counſel by words without knowledge? Shall a worm dare preſume to judge of God's perfections? Shall Job, the righteous Job, object to his wiſdom and goodneſs? Shall he by ſpeeches of folly darken and miſrepreſent the counſels of providence? How inſolent, as well as ignorant, the attempt! Note, To diſpute with warmth about decrees, foreknowledge, predeſtination; to pretend an explanation clear, diſtinct, and demonſtrative, of theſe unſearchable ſecrets, betrays the preſumption rather than the wiſdom of the diſputant.

3. God challenges him to anſwer, ſince that he ſo eagerly deſired; bids him gird up his loins as a man of war, and produce his ſtrong reaſons, or anſwer his queſtions concerning things natural and obvious, before he dared pretend to fathom the ſecrets of providence.

4. Where waſt thou when [f] I laid the foundations of the earth? declare if thou haſt underſtanding. 5. Who hath laid the meaſures thereof, if thou knoweſt? or who hath ſtretched the line upon it? 6. Whereupon are the † foundations thereof ‡ faſtned? or who laid the corner-ſtone thereof? 7. When [g] the morning-ſtars ſang together, and all [h] the ſons of God ſhouted for joy. 8. Or [i] who ſhut up the ſea with doors, when it brake forth as if it had iſſued out of the womb? 9. When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkneſs a ſwaddling-band for it, 10. And § brake up for it my decreed place, and [k] ſet bars and doors. 11. And ſaid, Hitherto ſhalt thou come, but no further: and here [l] ſhall thy proud waves be ſtayed.

[f] Pſ. civ. 5. Prov. viii. 29. & xxx. 4.
† Heb. Sockets.
‡ Heb. Made to ſink.
[g] Pſ. cxlviii. 3.
[h] Chap. i. 6.
[i] Gen. i. 9. Pſ. civ. 9. Prov. viii. 29. Jer. v. 22.
§ Or, eſtabliſhed my decree upon it.
[k] Chap. xxvi. 10.
[l] Pſ. lxxxviii. 9. & xciii. 4.

v. 4—11. With what majeſty! with what unutterable dignity, doth God deſcribe his own glorious works! and how can Job pretend to diſpute with him, when he is unable to anſwer one of a thouſand of his enquiries.

1. Where was he, when God, alone exiſting from eternity, began his wonders of creation, and laid the ſtrong foundations of the earth? v. 4. Was he preſent, or his wiſdom conſulted, in proportioning the quantity of matter to be conſolidated; or fitting in exact proportion the ſeveral parts, to compoſe the exquiſite machine? v. 5. Could he explain the cauſes of attraction and gravitation; how the parts cohere; by what baſes ſupported; or by what corner-ſtone the glorious fabric was held together? v. 6. How unthought of, without a being, was he, when on the riſing glories of creation, the morning ſtars, ſpoke into being at God's word, ſhone forth his praiſes; or rather, bright angelic hoſts beheld with enraptured admiration the teeming womb of nature, and heaven's high arch reſounded with ſhouts of joy, and ſongs of ſeraphic ſpirits adoring the great Creator, v. 7. Note, (1.) God alone is the great author of all; and he who made all with ſuch conſummate wiſdom, muſt needs beſt know how to govern. (2.) If angels in heaven are adoring, ſhould man be ſilent, to whom the earth is given, and for whoſe ſake it was formed? (3.) In heaven no diſcord is heard; there they all unite in the great congregation. When ſhall the ſons of God on earth reſemble them; divided no more by ſchiſms, ſects, and parties; but with one heart and one mouth unite together in univerſal love, and worſhip God in the ſame beauty of holineſs!

2. He knew no more concerning the limiting the ſea with bounds, than about the creation of the earth. It was God alone, without his help or conſultation, who from the embrio of matter firſt ſeparated the ſwelling floods, that burſt forth at his word, as waters from the travailing womb, v. 8. Then by his ſpirit moving on the face of the deep, the ſeparation firſt was made, and the dry land aroſe: the ocean retired to its appointed place, v. 10. laid as a babe in the cradle, and wrapped with ſwaddling bands of darkneſs, when light had not yet a being, v. 9. There, though the billows rage, and lift their curling heads on high, his decree hath fixed their limits, more firm than bars of adamant; Hitherto ſhalt thou come, but no further; and here ſhall thy proud waves be ſtayed.

12. [m] Haſt thou commanded the morning ſince thy days? and cauſed the day-ſpring to know his place, 13. That it might take hold of the † ends of the earth, that the wicked might be ſhaken out of it? 14. It is turned as clay to the ſeal, and they ſtand as a garment. 15. And [n] from the wicked their light is withholden, and [o] the high arm ſhall be broken. 16. Haſt thou entred into the ſprings of the ſea? or haſt thou walked in the ſearch of the depth? 17. Have [p] the gates of death been opened unto thee? or haſt thou ſeen the doors of the ſhadow of death? 18. Haſt thou perceived the breadth of the earth? declare, if thou knoweſt it all. 19. [q] Where is the way where light dwelleth? and as for darkneſs, where is the place thereof, 20. That thou ſhouldſt take it ‡ to the bound thereof, and that thou ſhouldſt know the paths to the houſe thereof? 21. Knoweſt thou it, becauſe thou waſt then born? or becauſe the number of thy days is great; 22. Haſt thou entred into [r] the treaſures of the ſnow? or haſt thou ſeen the treaſures of the hail, 23. [s] Which I have reſerved againſt the time of trouble, againſt the day of battle and war? 24. By what way is the [m] Pſ. lxxiv. 16.

† Heb. Wings. Chap. xxxvii. 3.
[n] Chap. xviii. 5.
[o] Pſ. x. 15.
[p] Ibid. ix. 13.
[q] John iii. 8.
‡ Or, at.
[r] Pſ. cxxxv. 7.
[s] Exod. ix. 18. Joſh. x. 11. Iſa. xxx. 30.

Before Chriſt 1520.

the light parted, which ſcattereth the eaſt-wind upon the earth ?

v. 12—24. God proceeds to confound Job with queſtions infinitely above mortal underſtanding, and therein to teach him his folly in arraigning any of his works and ways.

1. Reſpecting the light of the morning. Haſt thou commanded the morning ſince thy days? to break ſooner, or retard the dawn beyond its appointed moment ; and cauſed the day-ſpring to know its place? when or where to ariſe ? Never : how then could he pretend to alter the diſpenſations of providence, fixed as the ordinances of day and night. Swift the morning beam darts to earth's fartheſt verge, bringing unwelcome light to deeds of darkneſs ; then the wicked are diſcovered and ſeized, and ſhaken out of the world, v. 13. Turning to the ſun, as clay to the ſeal, the enlightened hemiſphere, that before was darkneſs and confuſion, now appears beautifully illuminated with the beams of day, and all its verdant beauties, trees, plants, herbs, and flowers, like garments cloath and adorn it on every ſide, v. 14. But though the light of day returns, ſpiritual darkneſs is ſtill ſpread upon the ſinner's ſoul, and eternal darkneſs awaits him ; or, confined for his crimes in dungeons, he ſees no chearing beam, and the arm he lifted high in iniquity, is broken by juſt judgment, v. 15. Note, Like the morning light did Chriſt, the day-ſtar, ariſe, and his bright truth hath been diffuſed to the ends of the earth ; and though wicked men chuſe darkneſs rather, and hate this goſpel-day, they ſhall be ſeized, convicted, condemned, and executed, doomed to that outer darkneſs, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth.

2. As ignorant was he, [1.] Of the ſprings of the ſea ; what fed it in ſuch exact proportion, that it ſhould not be exhauſted by the vapour ariſing from it, nor ſwoln beyond its limits by the rivers which flow into it ; and of its depth, which is unfathomable, or its treaſures, which are unſearchable, v. 16. [2.] Of the ſtate of the dead, by what diſeaſes or accidents men ſhall come to the grave ; how the union of body and ſoul is diſſolved ; by what path we go into the unſeen world ; in what place the ſoul remains ; who in it are happy or miſerable ; and what is there tranſacted, v. 17. Note, In awful curioſity the ſoul now ſteps ſometimes to the verge of time, and caſts an eye into the boundleſs ocean of eternity ; but ſhadows, clouds, and darkneſs are upon it. Yet, though ſight fails, and reaſon is loſt, faith can pierce through the thick cloud, and dare unterrified launch forth with confidence and comfort into the untried abyſs. [3.] Of the dimenſions of the earth. Who ever made the ſurvey of all its kingdoms, provinces, hills, dales, with the ſeveral meaſures and extent of each ? Where ſo much is yet unknown, after all human reſearches, and of what is diſcovered, how ſmall a part can any one man know by actual ſurvey ? and how much leſs of the breadth and length of the divine counſels ? [4.] Where light and darkneſs dwell ; from whence brought forth at the creation ; how ſtill preſerved ; by what parted ; how in ſucceſſion going and returning, till day and night ſhall have an end. Secrets theſe, into which the deepeſt philoſophic enquiries can never adequately penetrate. [5.] Of the ſnow, hail, and wind. Where the treaſuries for each are placed ; how they are ſent forth in meaſure and duration ; in what manner marſhalled, when God employs them as inſtruments of vengeance to puniſh guilty mortals. In all which points, a worm of yeſterday, as Job was, muſt confeſs his ignorance, and therefore ought in ſilence to adore, without a murmur againſt any thing God doth, all whoſe works ſo far exceed his underſtanding.

25. Who hath divided a water-courſe for the overflowing of waters ? or a way for the lightning of thunder. 26. To cauſe it to rain on the earth, where no man is ; on the wilderneſs wherein there is no man ? 27. [t] To ſatisfy the deſolate and waſte ground, and to cauſe the bud of the tender herb to ſpring forth ? 28. [u] Hath the rain a father ? or who hath begotten the drops of the dew ? 29. Out of whoſe womb came the ice ? and [x] the hoary froſt of heaven, who hath gendred it ? 30. The waters are hid as with a ſtone, and the face of the deep is frozen. 31. Canſt thou bind the ſweet influences of † Pleiades, or looſe the bands of ‡ Orion ? 32. Canſt thou bring forth § Mazzaroth in his ſeaſon, or canſt thou guide ‖ Arcturus with his ſons ? 33. Knoweſt thou [y] the ordinances of heaven ? canſt thou ſet the dominion thereof in the earth ? 34. Canſt thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of waters may cover thee ? 35. Canſt thou ſend lightnings, that they may go, and ſay unto thee, Here we are? 36. [z] Who hath put wiſdom in the inward parts ? or who hath given underſtanding to the heart ? 37. Who can number the clouds in wiſdom ? or who can † ſtay the bottles of heaven, 38. When the duſt ‡ groweth into hardneſs, and the clods cleave faſt together ? 39. [a] Wilt thou hunt the prey for the lion ? or fill the § appetite of the young lions, 40. When they couch in their dens, and abide in the covert to lie in wait ? 41. [b] Who provideth for the raven his food ? when his young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of meat.

[t] Pſ. cvii. 35.
[u] Jer. xiv. 22.
[x] Pſ. cxlvii. 16.
† Heb. Cimah. Chap. ix. 9. Amos v. 8.
‡ Heb. Ceſil.
§ Or, the twelve ſigns.
‖ Heb. Aſk.
[y] Jer. xxxi. 35.
[z] Chap. xxxii. 8. Pſ. li. 6. Eccleſ. ii. 26.
† Heb. Cauſe to lie down.
‡ Or, is turned into mire.
[a] Pſ. civ. 21.
§ Heb. Life.

Before Chriſt 1520.

[b] Pſ. cxlvii. 9. Mat. vi. 26.

v. 25—41. How impotent, as well as ignorant, is man, when compared with his maker ! Who can do as God doth ? therefore how dare we contend with him ?

1. From him alone cometh the rain ; each drop falls from the clouds in its appointed place, and in the exact channel formed for it through the air, v. 25. The lightning flaſhes not uncircumſcribed, but in the way, extent, and order he preſcribes. The deſolate wilderneſs partakes of the divine care, and herbs and flowers ariſe, where no human footſteps tread ; and the beaſts of the foreſt alone maintain their empire, v. 26, 27. Great parent of all, the rain calls him father, and the ſmalleſt drop of dew diſtinct acknowledges him the maker, v. 28. The hoary froſt that whitens the earth, he only can produce ; and when he ſends forth his ice, the waters are congealed as the rock, and the face of the deep ſolid as the marble pavement, v. 30. Note, (1.) Our hearts are like the deſolate and parched ground, till watered with the dew of heavenly grace, but then bring forth fruit unto God. (2.) If the weather be unſeaſonable and ſevere, we ſhould receive it as a deſerved correction from God.

2. God appeals to him for his weakneſs. He can do nothing : the clouds will not drop at his bidding, nor the lightnings execute his commands, v. 34, 35. much leſs can he reach the higher regions of the ſtars. He cannot bind the ſweet influences of the Pleiades, which uſher in the genial ſpring, to retard or haſten it ; nor looſe the bands of Orion, whoſe conſtellation reigns during the cold of winter, that the ſtormy winds ſhould not blow, or the froſt harden the earth, v. 31. The ſouthern ſtars own not his government, nor do the conſtellations of the north move by his direction, v. 32. So far from guiding them, he knew not by what laws they were governed ; and, if their dominion were left to him, confuſion would ſoon enſue, and he be at a loſs to govern the vaſt machine, v. 33. The underſtanding man poſſeſſes, of whatever kind in things natural and ſpiritual, is all derived from him, and therefore it were folly to pretend to be wiſe above him, from whom all our wiſdom is derived, v. 36. We know little, and can do leſs. Who can number the clouds, or ſtay the bottles of heaven, when by profuſe rain the duſt becomes mire, and cleaves faſt together in clods ? v. 37, 38. Therefore with humble acknowledgments of our weakneſs and ignorance, it becomes us to reſign ourſelves and our all to his government, who alone is the all-wiſe director. Note, (1.) If ſome pretend to judge of men's fortune by the knowledge of the ſtars, and others credit their aſtrological predictions, we may ſafely conclude the knavery of the one, and the folly of the other. (2.) Since God is the author of our rational ſoul, let us improve the meaſure of knowledge he hath beſtowed on us, not in endleſs reſearches, or vain queſtions, much leſs in finding fault with his ways ; but in meditation on his glory, and reflecting on the arguments for perfect ſubmiſſion under all his diſpenſations, and this ſhall be indeed our wiſdom.

3. God proceeds from the works of his glory above, to his care and providence over the brute creation, in which the next chapter is entirely taken up, and might properly begin here. The lion, as the king of beaſts, is firſt mentioned : man neither can nor durſt provide their prey, nor approach them in their hiding-places ; but God feeds and fills them, v. 39, 40. The ravens likewiſe prove his providential care : uſeleſs as they may appear in the creation, their young ones are not ſuffered to periſh for want, but God hears their cry of hunger, and provides for their ſupport Note, (1.) Doth the providence of God extend to the fierce lion, and the unclean raven ? ſhall they ſhare his kindneſs, and can his own children have cauſe to complain of his neglect ? No, in no wiſe. (2.) If the cry of the young raven is heard, ſurely the prayers of the poor ſhall not be diſregarded. Whilſt on our knees we beg for daily bread, we ſhall not want it.

CHAP. XXXIX.

God proceeds to diſcourſe farther concerning, 1. The wild goats and the hinds, ver. 1—4. 2. The wild aſs, ver. 5—8. 3. The unicorn, ver. 9—12. 4. The peacock, ver. 13. 5. The oſtrich, ver. 13—18. 6. The horſe, ver. 19—25. 7. The hawk and the eagle, ver. 26—30. In all which, Job's ſcanty knowledge muſt appear, and his duty of ſubmiſſion be evident.

1. KNOWEST thou the time when the wild goats of the rock bring forth ? or canſt thou mark when [a] the hinds do calve ? 2. Canſt thou number the months that they fulfil ? or knoweſt thou the time when they bring forth ? 3. They bow themſelves, they bring forth their young ones, they caſt out their ſorrows. 4. Their young ones are in good liking, they grow up with corn : they go forth, and return not unto them. 5. Who hath hath ſent out the wild aſs free? or who hath looſed the bands of the wild aſs? 6. [b] Whoſe houſe I have made the wilderneſs, and the † barren land his dwellings. 7. He ſcorneth the multitude of the city, neither regardeth he the crying of the driver. 8. The range of the mountains is his paſture, and he ſearcheth after every green thing. 9. Will ‡ the unicorn be willing to ſerve thee, or abide by thy crib? 10. Canſt thou bind the unicorn with his band in the furrow? or will he harrow the valleys after thee? 11. Wilt thou truſt him, becauſe his ſtrength is great? or wilt thou leave thy labour to him? 12. Wilt thou believe him that he will bring home thy ſeed, and gather it into thy barn.

[a] Pſ. xxix. 9.

[b] Chap. xxiv. 5. Jer. ii. 24. Hoſ. viii. 9.
† Heb. Salt places.
‡ i. e. The Rhinoceros, or the wild bull. Num. xxiii. 22. Deut. xxxiii. 17. Pſal. xcii. 10.

v. 1—12. How little Job's knowledge, how infinite God's, is here manifeſted; and whilſt his tender mercies are ſeen over all his works, how unreaſonable were Job's complaints againſt God, as cruel or unkind?

1. Who knows but God alone, when the wild goats and hinds bring forth, how long they bear their burden, and the hour and moment in which they ſhall be delivered, v. 1, 2. Though their travailing pangs are ſharp, they are ſafely preſerved. v. 3. Their young ones grow up by their ſides, till able to ſeek their own ſuſtenance: they quit their dam, forgetting and forgotten, v. 4.

2. Who gave the wild aſs liberty, and that untameable ſpirit that rejects reſtraint? v. 5. God gives each beaſt its ſeveral diſpoſition, and provides for each a ſuitable proviſion and abode. The wilderneſs and barren mountain is his dwelling, v. 6. far from the haunts of men; preferring liberty, though with poverty, to ſlavery with plenty: he deſpiſes the multitude that would ſeize him, and no driver urges him on with his cries, v. 7. From place to place he roams in ſearch of food, and finds paſture even in the wilderneſs. Note, (1.) Liberty is a precious jewel, and they who are free, with noble ſpirit ſhould maintain their happy independance. (2.) Shall man, that cannot give law to the wild aſſes colt, preſume to direct his maker?

3. God bids him try to bind the Rhem, which we tranſlate unicorn; though it is much doubted whether there be any ſuch creature as we repreſent him. It is therefore generally rendered the wild bull, which comes in appoſitely after what had been ſpoken of the wild aſs. The tame ox might be brought to the yoke and the crib, but who could make the wild bull ſerviceable, v. 9. or break him to the plough or harrow, v. 10. Great as his ſtrength is, he is too unruly to be truſted with any labour of the field, and can neither be led nor drove. If he cannot then govern one creature, much more unfit was he to preſide over the world, and direct the ways of Providence. Note, It is not ability, but the willingneſs to do good, that makes a man truly valuable.

13. Gaveſt thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks? or wings and feathers unto the oſtrich? 14. Which leaveth her eggs in the earth, and warmeth them in the duſt, 15. And forgetteth that the foot may cruſh them, or that the wild beaſt may break them. 16. [c] She is hardned againſt her young ones, as though they were not hers: her labour is in vain without fear; 17. Becauſe God hath deprived her of wiſdom, neither hath he imparted to her underſtanding. 18. What time ſhe lifteth up herſelf on high, ſhe ſcorneth the horſe and his rider.

[c] Lam. iv. 3.

v. 13—18. The oſtrich next is produced, as among the wondrous works of God. Gaveſt thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks, or rather oſtriches, as others tranſlate the word, to which alone the following verſes relate, and whoſe wings are beautiful, whilſt the peacock's have nothing ſingular. She layeth her eggs on the earth; not that, as ſome have ſuggeſted, they are dropped at random, and left to be hatched by the ſun, for ſhe hath a neſt where her eggs are depoſited, yet on the earth, where every foot may cruſh them; and ſo forgetful is ſhe, that when ſhe lights of another neſt, ſhe will ſit and hatch there, leaving her eggs, and hardned againſt her real young, as though they were not hers. Thus her labour is in vain for another, without fear of what will betide her own, v. 16. and this becauſe God hath deprived her of wiſdom; from whom alone the different inſtincts of beaſts, as well as reaſon in man, is derived, v. 17. But though ſo ſtupid and unnatural in danger, her ſpeed is moſt rapid, raiſing herſelf (though unable to fly) by the aſſiſtance of her wings, ſhe leaves the fleeteſt horſe and its rider far behind. Note, (1.) How many ungodly parents, like the cruel oſtrich, are inſenſible to the fruit of their womb, expoſe their children to want by their extravagancies, or their ſouls to ruin by their neglect. (2.) Thus careleſs miniſters deſert their flocks, indifferent what becomes of them; if deceivers ſeduce them, or they periſh for lack of knowledge, they are hardned againſt the loſs. One thing however they forget not; though they refuſe to feed their young, they are abundantly careful to feed themſelves, and will have the fleece, tho' the devil ſeize the fold.

19. Haſt thou given the horſe ſtrength? haſt thou clothed his neck with thunder? 20. Canſt thou make him afraid as a graſhopper? the glory of his noſtrils is † terrible. 21. [d] He paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his ſtrength: he goeth on to meet ‡ the armed men. 22. He ‖ mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the ſword. 23. The quiver rattleth againſt him, the glittering ſpear and the ſhield. 24. He ſwalloweth the ground with fierceneſs and rage: neither believeth he that it is the ſound of the trumpet. 25. He ſaith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he ſmelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the ſhouting.

† Heb. Terrors.
[d] Judg. v. 22.
‡ Heb. The armour.
‖ Heb. Laugheth.

v. 19—25. How inimitably beautiful is this deſcription! Behold the horſe trained for war, ſtrength is in every motion, his riſing neck is cloathed with thunder, from his wide noſtrils iſſues the copious ſteam; pawing in the valley, he ſeems to glory in his might; the armed hoſt and glittering ſpear cannot intimidate him: eager to engage, he ſcarce can bear reſtraint, and prancing fierce, ſeems as if he would ſwallow the ground under his feet; his ears erect, catch with delight the martial trumpet's ſound; he ſnuffs the ſmell of battle from afar, and animated by the ſhout or ſignal for engagement, fearleſs of death or danger, on he ruſhes, defies the ſharp ſword and rattling quiver, and tramples with reſiſtleſs fury on whatever oppoſes him in his courſe. Note, Such is the ſinner, Jer. viii. 6. hurried on by inordinate appetite, he ruſhes to the gratification of his luſts; no danger, loſs, or ſuffering can reſtrain him; yea, the very terrors of God's wrath he ſcorns, and runs on the thick boſſes of his buckler, till ſmitten through with the ſword of death, he falls, and plunges into that gulph of perdition, he would not be warned to avoid.

26. Doth the hawk fly by thy wiſdom, and ſtretch her wings toward the ſouth? 27. Doth the eagle mount up at thy command, and [e] make her neſt on high? 28. She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the † crag of the rock and the ſtrong place. 29. From thence ſhe ſeeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off. 30. Her young ones alſo ſuck up blood: and [f] where the ſlain are, there is ſhe.

[e] Jer. xlix. 16. Obad. iv.
† Heb. Tooth. 1 Sam. xiv. 4.
[f] Mat. xxiv. 28. Luke xvii. 37.

v. 26—30. The hawk and eagle are produced among birds, in proof of the power and providence of God. The hawk, that with ſuch ſagacity purſues her prey ſwift and ſtrong, and from the colder climes at winter's approach, follows the ſouthern ſun: the eagle, that mounts to ſuch a towering height, fixes on the craggy rock her neſt, and makes it her abode; thence darting on her prey, deſcried from afar, ſhe feeds her young with the raw fleſh of ſlaughtered beaſts, or following the battle, waits for the carcaſs of the ſlain. Who taught ſuch wiſdom to the feathered fowl, or directs their flight? not Job: and if he pretended not to challenge theſe, leſs ought he to claim a right to direct the providence of God. Note, (1.) Though the ſinner, like the eagle, builds his neſt on the rock, Jer. xliv. 16. he that ſet him up on high, can alſo caſt him down. (2.) The greedy eye, ſharp as the eagle's, ever attentive on gain, little cares how it be obtained; whether by ſucking the blood of the oppreſſed, or by practices corrupt as the corpſe of the dead.

CHAP. XL.

Here, 1. God demands an anſwer to the queſtions he had put to Job in the foregoing chapter, ver. 1, 2. 2. Job ſubmits in humble ſilence, ver. 3—5. 3. God proceeds to fix the conviction by challenging him, ver. 6, 7. to vie with him, if he durſt, for juſtice, ver. 8. power, ver. 9. majeſty, ver. 10. and dominion over the proud, ver. 11—14. and gives an inſtance of his power in the Behemoth, ver. 15—24.

1. MOREOVER, the LORD anſwered Job, and ſaid, 2. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty, inſtruct him? he that reproveth God, let him anſwer it. 3. ¶ Then Job anſwered the LORD, and ſaid, 4. Behold, [a] I am vile, what ſhall I anſwer thee? [b] I will lay mine hand upon my mouth. 5. Once have I ſpoken, but I will not anſwer: yea, twice, but I will proceed no further.

[a] Chap. xlii. 6. Ezra ix. 6.
[b] Chap. xxix. 9. Pſal. xxxix. 9.

v. 1—5. Confounded in ſilence, Job dares not reply. When after a ſhort pauſe,

1. God farther expoſtulates with him, and from the view of what

Before Chriſt 1520.

what he had ſpoken, demands an anſwer. Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty (an attempt how inſolent!) inſtruct him? can he be taught knowledge? or is every fretful murmurer a proper judge how God ought to direct his providences? ſurely not. Yet this had Job attempted, yea, and blamed God for his diſpenſations, as unjuſt and ſevere. He that reproveth God, let him anſwer it, maintain if he can his charge, or confeſs his folly and ſin for having done ſo.

2. Job confeſſes his error, and ſubmits. He anſwered the Lord, and ſaid, Behold, I am vile, I acknowledge my ſin, I renounce my former opinion of myſelf, I am abominable in my own eyes, and how much more in thine? What ſhall I anſwer thee? I am unable to ſupport the leaſt charge I have advanced againſt thee. I will lay my hand upon my mouth in ſilence, and my mouth in the duſt of humiliation. Once have I ſpoken in ſelf-vindication, but I will not anſwer any more, convinced I played the fool, and erred exceedingly; yea twice, repeatedly have I urged my raſh plea, but I will proceed no further, I own myſelf miſtaken, and deſire to take ſhame for my perverſeneſs. Note, (1.) However high our former apprehenſion of our own goodneſs was, when the ſpirit convinces the ſoul of ſin, we ſhall not have a word to ſay to juſtify ourſelves, but cry for mercy only from our offended God. (2.) The erroneous doctrines they have maintained, or ſinful practices they indulged, are the ſhame and grief of true penitents; and they deſire henceforward to retract, diſclaim, and oppoſe them.

6. ¶ [c] Then anſwered the LORD unto Job out of the whirlwind, and ſaid, 7. [d] Gird up thy loins now like a man: [e] I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me. 8. [f] Wilt thou alſo diſannul my judgment? wilt thou condemn me that thou mayſt be righteous? 9. Haſt thou an arm like God? or canſt thou thunder [g] with a voice like him? 10. [h] Deck thyſelf now with majeſty and excellency, and aray thyſelf with glory and beauty. 11. Caſt abroad the rage of thy wrath: and behold every one that is proud, [i] and abaſe him. 12. Look on every one that is proud, and bring him low: and tread down the wicked in their place. 13. Hide them in the duſt together, and bind their faces in ſecret. 14. Then will I alſo confeſs unto thee, that thine own right hand can ſave thee.

[c] Chap. xxxviii. 1.
[d] Ibid. 3.
[e] Ibid. xlii. 4.
[f] Pſal. li. 4. Rom. iii. 4.
[g] Pſal. xxix. 3, 4.
[h] Pſal. civ. 1.
[i] Dan. iv. 37.

v. 6—14. To fix more deep and laſting on Job's mind the conviction which was begun, God proceeds to renew out of the whirlwind his awful challenges, v. 7. Note, When our conſciences are firſt alarmed, it is dangerous to heal the hurt ſlightly, and catch at comfort to be rid of our convictions; but we ſhould look farther and deeper, that the diſcovery of greater abominations may produce abiding humiliation.

1. Wilt thou diſannul my judgment, alter my decrees, or fruſtrate their execution? Wilt thou condemn me, that thou mayſt be righteous? accuſe me of injuſtice or ſeverity, in order to ſupport thy character, and maintain thy righteouſneſs before men? how wicked and inſolent muſt ſuch a charge appear? Note, If we murmur, the fault is in ourſelves, God's ways are equal, it is our way that is unequal.

2. Haſt thou an arm like God? able to contend with the Almighty; or canſt thou thunder with a voice like him? alas! man is but a worm, his whiſpers cannot be heard amidſt the terrible thunders of God's mighty voice. Note, The ſinner who looks biggeſt, and talks loudeſt, muſt be brought low either here in repentance, or hereafter in ruin everlaſting.

3. Deck thyſelf now with majeſty and excellency, if thou canſt vie with me, and aray thyſelf in glory and beauty, how deſpicable will it appear? not ſo much as the glow-worm's light compared with the meridian ſun. Or it may be ſpoken ironically; take my throne, and try how thou canſt govern the world, that thou mayſt feel how unequal thou art to the taſk.

4. Shew thy univerſal dominion. Put on the monarch's rage and frown, v. 10. look ſternly at the proud, if thou can'ſt abaſe him, v. 11. tread down the wicked from their heighth, lay them in the duſt of death, lead them forth with their faces covered, to execution, as malefactors, or hide them in the grave as ſlain. Then, when in theſe acts of juſtice, power, majeſty and dominion, he can vie with God, he may be allowed to contend with him, and truſt on his own right hand for ſalvation. But when the contrary was ſo evident, he muſt ſubmit entirely to God's ſovereignty, and expect his ſalvation temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal, from his grace and ſtrength alone.

15. ¶ Behold now † Behemoth, which I made with thee, he eateth graſs as an ox. 16. Lo now, his ſtrength is in his loins, and his force is in the navel of his belly. 17. He ‡ moveth his tail like a cedar: the ſinews of his ſtones are wrapt together. 18. His bones are as ſtrong pieces of braſs, his bones are like bars of iron. 19. He is the chief of the ways of God: he that made him, can make his ſword to approach unto him. 20. Surely the mountains bring him forth [k] food: where all the beaſts of the field play. 21. He lieth under the ſhady trees in the covert of the reed and fens. 22. The ſhady trees cover him with their ſhadow: the willows of the brook compaſs him about. 23. Behold, he ‖ drinketh up a river, and haſteth not: he truſteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth. 24. § He taketh it with his eyes: his noſe pierceth through ſnares.

† i. e. The elephant, or the river-horſe.
‡ Or ſetteth up.

Before Chriſt 1520.

[k] Pſal. civ. 14. & cxlvii. 9.
‖ Heb. Oppreſſeth.
§ Or will any take him in his ſight? or bore his noſe with a gin? Chap. xli. 2.

v. 15—24. To prove his own infinite ſuperiority, God bids him regard Behemoth and Leviathan, theſe wonders of creation; if he cannot contend with theſe, much leſs with their maker.

What beaſt is meant by Behemoth, the learned are divided. It ſignifies Beaſts in general, but here muſt mean ſome particular ſpecies: two have been ſuggeſted, to which the deſcription may be applicable; the hippopotamus, or river-horſe, and the elephant; the latter is the moſt received opinion. He is deſcribed as feeding on the graſs, as the ox, v. 15. amazingly ſtrong, able to carry a wooden turret, crowded with warriors, on his back, v. 16—18. No beaſt for bulk equals him, nor for gentleneſs, docility, and ſagacity, v. 19. The mountains provide him food, and harmleſs around him the other beaſts feed without moleſtation, v. 20. Under ſpreading trees, near rivers banks, is his abode, v. 21, 22. Thirſty, the river ſcarce affords a draught, and in his greedy eye, he thinks he can drain it to its ſource, v. 23, 24. No fear interrupts him, he haſteth not away: no ſnares, the ſtrongeſt, can bind him; his noſe, his proboſcis, ſtrikes them through. Yet, great and mighty as he is, God made him; his creature he is, as well as man; the work of the ſame hand, and on the ſame day: and terrible as he may appear to us, is cruſhed as the worm, when God cauſes his ſword to approach him. Let man then own his own littleneſs, and humbly yield up himſelf to his Almighty Creator.

CHAP. XLI.

We have here a large deſcription of Leviathan, before whom none can ſafely ſtand, much leſs before God, ver. 1—10. His ſeveral parts are deſcribed, ver. 11—24. The terrible things ſaid of him, and done by him, ver. 25—34.

1. CANST thou draw out † Leviathan with an hook? or his tongue with a cord which thou ‡ letteſt down? 2. Canſt thou put an hook into his noſe? or bore his jaw through with a thorn? 3. Will he make many ſupplications unto thee? will he ſpeak ſoft words unto thee? 4. Will he make a covenant with thee? wilt thou take him for a ſervant for ever? 5. Wilt thou play with him, as with a bird? or wilt thou bind him for thy maidens? 6. Shall the companions make a banquet of him? ſhall they part him among the merchants? 7. Canſt thou fill his ſkin with barbed irons? or his head with fiſh-ſpears? 8. Lay thine hand upon him, remember the battle, do no more. 9. Behold, the hope of him is in vain: ſhall not one be caſt down, even at the ſight of him? 10. None is ſo fierce that dare ſtir him up: [a] who then is able to ſtand before me?

† i. e. A whale, or crocodile. Pſal. civ. 26. Iſa. xxvii. 1.
‡ Heb. Drowneſt.
[a] Jer. xii. 5.

v. 1—10. The learned are divided about Leviathan, whether the whale or crocodile be meant; ſome parts of the deſcription ſeeming moſt adapted to the one, ſome more peculiar to the other, and ſome appear not to agree with either. The whale in general, indeed ſeems beſt to ſuit the ſubject, being peculiarly mentioned in the creation, as diſplaying his maker's glory, Gen. i. 21. and being a ſea animal, v. 31. which the crocodile is not. Whatever animal be meant, the deſign is evidently to ſhew Job's weakneſs and God's power. He is repreſented here as not to be caught with a hook or bait, or carried as the other leſſer fiſh, ſtrung on a thorn, v. 1, 2. not to be terrified or tamed, v. 3, 4, 5. his fleſh unfit for food, v. 6. and if the whale be meant, as it then made no part of merchandize, men had not learnt the methods of taking them, that have ſince been diſcovered, and which are ſtill attended with ſo much danger, with barbed irons and ſpears, v. 7. It was at his peril who approached him, he would rouſe himſelf for battle, therefore it were wiſe not to meddle with him, v. 8. To hope to take him, as a fiſh in a net, were vain; the very ſight of him was terrible, v. 9. The boldeſt dare not provoke him; and if a creature thus intimidate us from approaching him, and ſo ſurpaſs our ſtrength, who then is able to ſtand before God, to contend with the Almighty, and to impeach his proceedings, or awaken his wrath?

11. [b] Who hath prevented me, that I ſhould repay him? [c] whatſoever is under the whole heaven is mine. 12. I will not conceal his parts, nor his power, nor his come-

[b] Rom. xi. 35.
[c] Deut. x. 14. Pſal. xxiv. 1. & l. 12. 1 Cor. x. 26.

ly proportion. 13. Who can diſcover the face of his garment? or who can come to him † with his double bridle? 14. Who can open the doors of his face? his teeth are terrible round about. 15. ‡ His ſcales are his pride, ſhut up together as with a cloſe ſeal. 16. One is ſo near to another, that no air can come between them.
17. They are joined one to another, they ſtick together, that they cannot be ſundred. 18. By his neeſings a light doth ſhine, and his eyes are like the eye-lids of the morning. 19. Out of his mouth go burning lamps, and ſparks of fire leap out. 20. Out of his noſtrils goeth ſmoke, as out of a ſeething pot or caldron. 21.
His breath kindleth coals, and a flame goeth out of his mouth. 22. In his neck remaineth ſtrength, and || ſorrow is turned into joy before him. 23. The flakes of his fleſh are joined together: they are firm in themſelves, they cannot be moved. 24. His heart is as firm as a ſtone, yea, as hard as a piece of the nether millſtone.
25. When he raiſeth up himſelf, the mighty are afraid: by reaſon of breakings [d] they purify themſelves.
26. The ſword of him that layeth at him cannot hold:
the ſpear, the dart, nor § the habergeon. 27. He eſteemeth iron as ſtraw, and braſs as rotten wood. 28.
The arrow cannot make him flee: ſling-ſtones are turned with him into ſtubble. 29. Darts are counted as ſtubble: he laugheth at the ſhaking of a ſpear. 30.
† Sharp ſtones are under him: he ſpreadeth ſharp pointed things upon the mire. 31. He maketh the deep to boil like a pot: he maketh the ſea like a pot of ointment.
32. He maketh a path to ſhine after him: one would think the deep to be hoary. 33. Upon earth there is not his like: who is made without fear. 34.
He beholdeth all high things: he is a king over all the children of ‡ pride.

† Or within.
‡ Heb. Strong pieces of ſhields.
|| Heb. Sorrow rejoiceth.
d Pſal. cvii. 23. Jonah i. 5.
§ Or breaſt-plate.
† Heb. Sharp pieces of the potſherd.
‡ Or fierceneſs.

v. 11—34. 1. God challenges the univerſal property of all things; none ever made him their debtor, whilſt every creature receives from him life and breath, and every thing conducive to the comfort or preſervation of it. Note, (1.) The beſt ſervices we can render God, lay no obligation on him; the favour is done us, that he enables us to ſerve him, or accepts our humble duty. (2.) If God giveth not an account to us of his matters, have we the ſhadow of right to queſtion him? may he not do what he will with his own?

2. He deſcribes the ſeveral parts of this terrible animal leviathan. None dare approach him, to flea his ſkin, or open thoſe devouring jaws, to look on which only, were enough to make the beholder tremble, v. 13, 14. His ſcales, which are his ſtrength and pride, like a coat of mail, ſhut cloſe over each other, to defend him, v. 15. and are ſo near each other, that even the air cannot come between, v. 16, 17. This, ſome interpret the teeth, inſtead of ſcales, which the whale has not; but there is one ſpecies of them furniſhed with teeth, that ſhut cloſe in correſponding cavities, in the upper jaw. From his neeſing, a light ſhines, and his eyes are bright and ſparkling as the eyelids of the morning, v. 17. His breath is like the ſmoke of the furnace, and hot, like the ſteam of the boiling caldron; coals are ready to kindle from his noſtrils, v. 19—21. Strong and fierce, he fears no ſorrow, v. 22. His fleſh, firm as a rock, defies all the inſtruments of death, v. 24, 26—29. When he lifts up himſelf, in terrors the mighty purify themſelves, as dying men fly to their prayers, v. 25. He makes his bed on the hard ſharp pointed ſtones, v. 30. Before him the boiling deep ſmoaks; behind him, the white foam marks his ſhining path, as if the ocean was hoary-headed grown, v. 31, 32. Upon earth there is not his equal, fearleſs of danger, v. 33. With contempt he beholds the veſſels ſailing by, v. 34. and is a king over the children of pride, greater than the greateſt of them, in magnitude and bodily ſtrength. Or this is ſpoken of God, who beholdeth all theſe ſtupendous creatures; and all the children of pride, whether devils, men, or the moſt lawleſs animals, muſt ſubmit to his government. Highly then it becomes Job to bow, to humble himſelf under God's mighty hand, and own the tranſcendent glory, greatneſs, and unſearchableneſs of all his works and ways.

C H A P. XLII.

We are come now to the moſt pleaſing part of Job's hiſtory; and notwithſtanding all the dark clouds we have ſeen, the evening crowns the day. 1. In the duſt, Job repents and humbles himſelf, ver. 1—6. 2. The difference is made up between him and his friends, God accepts Job's interceſſion for them, and they join in worſhip and ſacrifice, ver. 7—9. 3. Job's miſeries vaniſh; his proſperity, like the ſwelling tide, returns, and he appears greater than ever, ver. 10—17. and all this is written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the ſcripture, whatever our trials are, may have hope.

1. THEN Job anſwered the LORD, and ſaid,
2. I know that [a] thou canſt do every thing, and that [b] † no thought can be withholden from thee. 3.
[c] Who is he that hideth counſel without knowledge?
therefore have I uttered that I underſtood not, [d] things too wonderful for me, which I knew not. 4. Hear, I beſeech thee, and I will ſpeak: [e] I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me. 5. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye ſeeth thee.
6. [f] Wherefore [g] I abhor myſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes.

a Gen. xviii. 14.
b Pſal. cxxxix. 2. Heb. iv. 13.
† Or no thought of thine can be hindered.
c Chap. xxxviii. 2.
d Pſal. xl. 5. & cxxxi. 1. & cxxxix. 6.
e Chap. xxxviii. 3. & xl. 7.
f Iſa. vi. 5.
g Chap. xl. 4.

v. 1—6. Job had begun his humbling acknowledgments, chap. xl. 4, 5. but now his convictions, much deeper and ſtronger, produce lowlier abaſement before God.

1. He ſubmits himſelf entirely to God. I know thou canſt do every thing, theſe wonderous inſtances of thy power convince me, that it is madneſs to contend with the Almighty, and folly to deſpair of what his power can do: none are ſo high he cannot abaſe, none ſo low he cannot reſtore and exalt; and that no thought can be withholden from thee, the ſecrets of the ſoul are known to him; not a corrupt, fretful, or unbelieving thought riſes without his notice; or God's own thoughts and deſigns neceſſarily produce their effects, whether he pleaſes to correct with afflictions, or reſtore the loſt proſperity; none can ſtay the performance of his purpoſes.

2. He confeſſes his ignorance, ſin, and folly. Who is he that hideth counſel without knowledge? pretends to be wiſe above God. Let him take warning, and be admoniſhed by me; it hath been my caſe, with ſhame I acknowledge it: therefore have I uttered that I underſtood not, I have had neither a right knowledge of God's purity, nor my own pollution; of his power, or my own weakneſs; of his wiſdom, nor my own ignorance: things too wonderful for me, which I knew not, have I ſpoken concerning the diſpenſations of his providence, and the myſteries of his government, miſtaking his deſigns, and finding fault with God fooliſhly; in which my preſumption, wilfulneſs, and pride, have appeared to my guilt and confuſion.

3. He reſolves now to change his tone, and turn the voice of contention into the language of prayer, as his only proper method of approaching God. Hear, I beſeech thee, though I own myſelf undeſerving thy notice and regard, and I will ſpeak; not in ſelf-defence, but in humbling confeſſion; I will demand of thee, or make my requeſt to thee, and declare thou unto me, anſwer my petition in pardoning my ſin, and inſtruct me in the right way, that I may not err again.

4. He feels and owns the deep ſenſe he had of his ſinfulneſs. I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; his parents and teachers had given him good inſtructions, concerning the perfections of God, and he had probably received revelations from him; but now mine eye ſeeth thee, never before was ſuch a diſcovery made to his mind, of the ſovereignty, power, wiſdom, and juſtice of God, in all his providential diſpenſations. Probably now alſo in the human form God appeared viſible, whilſt he opened Job's underſtanding to a clear view of his nature, glory, and infinite perfections, and manifeſted them to him in the perſon of an incarnate redeemer. Wherefore I abhor myſelf, and all the hard ſpeeches I have ſpoken, and repent in duſt and aſhes, deſiring to teſtify my grief and ſhame, and renounce henceforward every thought and deed, contrary to thy holy will. Thus muſt every real penitent return to God, (1.) Under a divine conviction, which no human arguments can produce, but God's ſpirit alone in his word, or by his providences. (2.) This ſenſe of ſin will be deep and laſting, yea, increaſing continually, with clearer views of God's purity, and our pollution and imperfection. (3.) We muſt come with heart-felt anguiſh for the diſhonour we have brought on God, and heart-felt ſhame and ſelf-loathing, which are the genuine expreſſions of true repentance. (4.) With a humble hope, that vile and loathſome as we are, God will not reject us, but pity and pardon us, through the Redeemer of loſt ſouls.

7. ¶ And it was ſo that after the LORD had ſpoken theſe words unto Job, the LORD ſaid to Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled againſt thee, and againſt thy two friends: for ye have not ſpoken of me the thing that is right, as my ſervant Job hath. 8. Therefore take unto you now ſeven bullocks, and ſeven rams, and [h] go to my ſervant Job, and offer up for yourſelves a burnt-offering, and [i] my ſervant Job ſhall pray for you, for † him will I accept: leſt I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not ſpoken of me the thing which is right, like my ſervant Job. 9. So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite went,

h Mat. v. 24.
i Gen. xx. 17. Jam. v. 14, 15.
† Heb. His face, or perſon. Ver. 9.

Before Chriſt 1520.

and did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD alſo accepted Job.

v. 7—9. We muſt not think becauſe Job is firſt rebuked, that the cauſe is given againſt him, and his accuſers juſtified, no. Though he deſerved reproof, they deſerved it more. God, whilſt he brings him to acknowledge what he had ſpoken amiſs, will juſtify him from their unjuſt aſperſions, and cover them with confuſion.

1. Job is exalted. After the Lord had ſpoken theſe words unto Job, convinced and humbled him, pardoned and accepted him, then he appears to juſtify and honour him. [1.] He acknowledges him his ſervant, repeatedly calling him by this reſpectable title, as a teſtimony of his fidelity in the main, though through temptation and infirmity, he had erred and ſpoken unadviſedly. [2.] He declares, that in the controverſy, Job had come neareſt to the truth, and ſpoken more wiſely and honourably of him and his providences, than his friends; in denying that proſperity was the criterion of godlineſs, or affliction of hypocriſy and wickedneſs in this world, but extending his views to a future ſtate, where the retribution of every man's work was to be expected. [3.] He appoints him to be their advocate and prieſt; putting this honour upon him, well knowing the ſpirit of charity in his heart, and how ready he would be to pray for his perſecutors. Note, (1.) Whom God pardons, he delights to honour, and their ſins are no more mentioned. (2.) A faithful ſervant of Chriſt may err, or be overtaken with a fault, but God, who ſees the heart, knows the root of matter is in him, and will not diſclaim his relation to him. (3.) Where there is much wrong mixed with what is right, we muſt not condemn the whole for a part, any more than we ſhould caſt away the ore, becauſe it comes from the earth mixed with droſs. (4.) They who have taſted God's pardoning love to their own ſouls, will think no injury too great to be forgiven or forgotten; nor refuſe to open the arms of love to their bittereſt enemy. (5.) Job was herein a lively figure of the Saviour of ſinners, who alone could offer the ſacrifice God would accept, in his deepeſt diſtreſs prayed for his murderers, and ever lives to intercede for the tranſgreſſors.

2. Job's friends are caſt, and brought to his feet in abaſement. Perhaps whilſt they heard God addreſs Job alone out of the whirlwind, they thought the verdict was for them; but now God would make them know, that though Job had offended, they had exceeded. He had ſpoken ſome things wrong, but they many more; laying down falſe hypotheſes of his general dealings with men; condemning the righteous unjuſtly; and miſinterpreting the rod of love into the ſtroke of judgment, making him ſad, whom they ſhould have comforted. For this, God's wrath was kindled againſt them, and though they were good men, in this they had deſerved to periſh, and therefore they muſt bring a ſacrifice of atonement, as the expiation of their guilt. They muſt humble themſelves, not only before God, but before Job, acknowledging their evil, deſiring his prayers, and bringing their ſacrifices to him, whoſe offering for them ſhould be alone accepted. Note, (1.) It is a dangerous thing to judge raſhly of men's ſpiritual ſtate, and a high provocation againſt God, as well as an injury to our brethren. (2.) The beſt of God's ſaints are expoſed to the ſevereſt cenſures, and even good men will be ſometimes criminally ſevere. (3.) Though the ſins of the faithful are not puniſhed with deſtruction, they ſhall ſmart for them, and be made to own how juſtly they deſerved to periſh. (4.) We may not expect forgiveneſs from God, unleſs we have, to the uttermoſt, made our brother ſatisfaction for the injuries we have done him. (5.) It is a mercy we have one advocate to go to, who, highly as we have offended him, never rejects the ſuit of the humbled ſoul.

3. We ſee all happily reconciled. Job's friends, without delay, ſubmit to the divine injunction: he heartily forgives them, and prays for them. They who were late ſo ſharp in contention, together now lift up the voice of humble ſupplication, and united in love ſurround a throne of grace, God well pleaſed accepts the offering, and perfect reconciliation enſues on every ſide. Note, (1.) It is a bleſſed thing to ſee differences thus ended; and friends ſeparated by miſtakes or folly, forgetting, forgiving, and embracing. (2.) How much more agreeable were it, inſtead of the warmth of theological diſpute about opinions, allowedly not eſſential to ſalvation, to unite in love, where all true chriſtians are agreed, in prayer and praiſe, and labour to walk more holily and humbly before God. (3.) There is but one way of reconciliation for the ſinner, the blood of atonement; unleſs we plead that, we muſt be undone. (4.) Whilſt we are waiting on God, in his inſtituted ways, we may take the comfort of our ſervices, and rejoice in our acceptance, through the ſacrifice and interceſſion of our adored Jeſus.

Before Chriſt 1520.

10. And [k] the LORD turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: alſo the LORD gave Job twice as much as he had before. 11. Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his ſiſters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his houſe: and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him: every man alſo gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold. 12. So [l] the LORD bleſſed the latter end of Job more than his beginning: for he had fourteen thouſand ſheep, and ſix thouſand camels, and a thouſand yoke of oxen, and a thouſand ſhe-aſſes. 13. He had alſo ſeven ſons, and three daughters. 14. And he called the name of the firſt, † Jemima, and the name of the ſecond, ‡ Kezia, and the name of the third, ‖ Keren-happuch. 15. And in all the land were no women found ſo fair as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren. 16. After this lived Job [m] an hundred and forty years, and [n] ſaw his ſons, and his ſon's ſons, even four generations. 17. So Job died, being old, and [o] full of days.

[k] Pſal. xiv. 7. & cxxvi. 1.

[l] Jam. v. 11.

† i. e. The day.

‡ i. e. Caſſia.

‖ i. e. The horn of beauty.

[m] Prov. iii. 16.

[n] Pſal. cxxviii. 6.

[o] Chap. v. 26.

v. 10—17. Better, ſays Solomon, is the end of a thing, than its beginning, and we ſee it in Job's caſe abundantly verified. The reſtoration and increaſe of his proſperity were as aſtoniſhing as the ſuddenneſs and depth of his afflictions.

1. God eminently appeared for him. When he prayed for his friends, bleſſings came upon his own head; the Lord turned his captivity, reſtored his body from Satan's bands, and his mind from the terrors and diſtreſs with which it had been agitated; and withal, doubled the poſſeſſions of which he had been deprived. Thus his fidelity was rewarded in this life, his credit reſtored in the eyes of men, and his comforts ſecured on a more ſolid baſis than before. Note, Though this life to a believer may often be compared to Job's dark days, we expect a deliverance from our captivity, where our proſperity will be beyond even Job's here, unſpeakable and eternal.

2. His friends and acquaintance who had been eſtranged from him, returned to viſit and to comfort him, ſympathizing in his affliction; and not content with empty pity, each, according to their ability, made him handſome preſents. God now inclined their hearts to aſſiſt him; probably the approbation God had given of his character, removed their ſuſpicions of his integrity, that had led them to neglect him; and the fear of God's diſpleaſure teſtified againſt his three friends, who had been ſo ſevere upon him, made them deſirous of an intereſt in Job's prayers for them alſo. Note, (1.) God has all men's hearts in his hands, and can ſtrangely incline them to execute his deſigns. (2.) True charity and friendſhip will not merely bring the kind wiſh, but the ready generous aſſiſtance.

3. A remarkable increaſe attended him. His cattle, from the ſtock with which his friends furniſhed him, ſoon doubled the number he had loſt; and above all his riches, the bleſſing of God upon them, made them eſpecially valuable. And thus his latter end was greater than his beginning; more wealthy, more reſpected, and more happy. Note, (1.) God's bleſſing upon honeſt endeavours, will make a little to afford great increaſe. (2.) Reſpecting outward proſperity, a good man often finds a proviſion made for him in his aged days, beyond the moſt ſanguine expectations of his youth; whilſt his ſoul alſo, fraught with the riches of Divine grace, which are the beſt portion, ſhines brighter as he draws to his end, till his glorious inheritance comes, and he leaves a periſhing world for an everlaſting kingdom.

4. His family was wonderfully reſtored; he had the ſame number of ſons and daughters as before. The names of the latter are recorded: Jemima, the day; Kezia, a fragrant ſpice; Keren-happuch, the horn of paint. It is remarked of them, that they were perſons of ſingular beauty, like their names; fair as the day, fragrant as caſſia, and blooming brighter in their native hue, than the tint of vermillion. And we may preſume, their mental accompliſhments, and the exemplarineſs of their piety, were equal to the exquiſiteneſs of their form, from the honourable diſtinction ſhewn them, in appointing them an inheritance with their brethren.

5. He enjoyed a long life, crowned with mercies. He ſaw his children to the fourth generation; an hundred and forty years he lived in a courſe of uninterrupted proſperity, and then gently bending to the grave, as the ripe corn in the time of harveſt, he departed full of days, ſatisfied with life, and willing to exchange his poſſeſſions on earth, for more enduring riches in the better world of glory.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of PSALMS.

WE are now entering upon one of the moſt profitable and delightful parts of the ſacred Writings. Like diamonds, all the words of ſcripture are pure words, but ſome ſhine with a brighter luſtre than others.

The title given theſe divine compoſitions, is the Book of Pſalms, or Hymns. They are compoſed chiefly by David, the ſweet ſinger of Iſrael, whoſe name the whole collection generally bears; though ſome of them appear to have been written by other hands, before and after his time, as the xc. by Moſes, and the cxxvi. and the cxxxvii. during the Babyloniſh captivity, as well as many others, by his cotemporaries, Heman, Aſaph, &c. who are ſuppoſed to be the authors of thoſe, to which their names are prefixed, 2 Chron. xxix. 30. It is generally allowed that they were written in metre, though the knowledge of the nature of the ſacred poetry hath been long ſince loſt.

The great deſign of them is,

1. To deſcribe the glory of our Immanuel; his perſon, offices, character; his incarnation, ſufferings, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and everlaſting rule at the right hand of God. Some of them are quoted in the New Teſtament, expreſly as referring to him, as their grand ſubject. And many good men have been of opinion, that there is not one of them, in which ſome prophecy, deſcription, or circumſtances peculiar to him, may not be found; ſo that here we may emphatically ſay, Chriſt is all and in all.

2. To open a rich mine of Evangelical truth and chriſtian experience, from whence the church in all ages, and every believer in all ſtates, conditions, difficulties, and temptations, may derive ſpiritual inſtruction, ſupport, and conſolation, as we can be under no circumſtances of diſtreſs and trial, but we ſhall find here ſome correſpondent experience applicable to our caſe.

3. To enliven our devotions both in prayer and praiſe. The warmeſt and moſt animated expreſſions may be hence collected, words big with ſenſe and feeling, ſuch as the Holy Ghoſt dictates; and when our hearts are brought in any meaſure to a correſpondence with the Pſalmiſt's temper, and to taſte the ſweets of communion with God, then will theſe ſongs of David, like the vibrations of a ſtring in uniſon, affect our hearts with the tendereſt ſenſibility, and we ſhall echo back the ſound. May ſuch be the bleſſed influence of them on each of my reader's hearts.

PSALM I.

This pſalm deſcribes the true bleſſedneſs of man. The perfect character here ſpoken of, moſt aptly belongs to Chriſt; and in a meaſure to all his ſpiritual ſeed, who ſtand contraſted againſt the world that lieth in wickedneſs. The diviſion of the children of men into ſaints and ſinners, the children of God and the children of the wicked one, is as ancient as the day when enmity was put between the ſeed of the woman and the ſeed of the ſerpent; and it will laſt as long as the countleſs ages of eternity. This pſalm ſhews us, 1. The holineſs and happineſs of a godly man, ver. 1—3. 2. The ſinfulneſs and miſery of a wicked man, ver. 4, 5. 3. The ground and reaſon of both, ver. 6.

1. BLeſſed is the man [a] that walketh not in the counſel of the ungodly, nor ſtandeth in the way of ſinners, [b] nor ſitteth in the ſeat of the ſcornful. 2. But his delight is in the law of the LORD, [c] and in his law doth he meditate day and night. 3. † And he ſhall be like a tree [d] planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his ſeaſon; his leaf alſo ſhall not wither, and whatſoever he doth [e] ſhall proſper.

[a] Prov. iv. 14, 15.
[b] Pſal. xxvi. 4. Jer. xv. 17.
[c] Joſh. i. 8. Pſal. cxix. 97.
† Or then.
[d] Jer. xvii. 8. Ezek. xlvii 2.
[e] Pſal. cxxviii. 2.

v. 1—3. This pſalm opens with the deſcription of the holy and truly happy man, v. 1. Bleſſed is the man, or O the bleſſedneſs of the man, how great, how unutterable, in time and eternity. His character is ſtrongly marked; and by his fruits he may be known. He walketh not in the counſel of the ungodly; does not take his maxims from the world, that lieth in wickedneſs, nor faſhion his conduct after their deſtructive ways; nor ſtandeth in the way of ſinners, though himſelf was once ſuch; yet, like Lot, he hath left the city, and deſires no more to fix his abode among the unholy and profane; nor ſitteth in the ſeat of the ſcornful; however high their pretences to ſuperior wiſdom, and however much they affect to treat with contempt the revealed will of God: ſuch children of pride ſhall not have his ear for a moment; their company he will ſhun as a plague, and their breath as infectious. Note, (1.) The company of wicked men is dangerous, we muſt be ſeparate from them, if we would avoid their ruin. (2.) The progreſs of ſin is headlong; they who walk in the way of ſinners, will ſoon ſit in the ſeat of the ſcornful: determined iniquity makes way for daring infidelity, v. 2. But his delight is in the law of the Lord. The ſafety of our walk depends upon the way which we have choſen: if we are led by that word which is appointed for a light unto our feet, we ſhall be guided into the paths of everlaſting peace. This ſacred clue, therefore, the man of God with delight follows; and in this law doth he meditate day and night: His bible is his companion, he wiſhes no better entertainment; the glorious truths engage his deep meditation, are the matter of his daily converſe; and if by night his eyes are kept waking, his thoughts are pleaſingly occupied in God's word: In this bleſt courſe his ſoul proſpers in every divine diſpoſition, and conſequently partakes of true and laſting felicity, for holineſs and happineſs are inſeparable, v. 3. And he ſhall be, or then ſhall he be, like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his ſeaſon. When by divine grace he is thus enabled to delight and meditate in God's word, the gracious effects of it will be evident; his leaf of profeſſion continues green and flouriſhing, and his holy fruits of righteouſneſs abound. The Lord, whoſe planting he is, waters him every moment; conveys to his ſoul the living ſtreams of divine grace, from Jeſus the living fountain; and thus he grows tall as the cedar, and fruitful as the vine: nor is his ſtate fading or changeable, his leaves withering, or his fruit blaſted like the untimely figs: no, His leaf alſo ſhall not wither. Preſerved by Almighty grace, decay ſhall not tarniſh his beauty, nor apoſtacy lay the axe to the root; but whatſoever he doth ſhall proſper; every prayer ſhall receive an anſwer of peace; every labour ſhall be attended with ſucceſs; every providence be ſanctified; and, in ſhort, all things work together for his good. Such is the bleſſed, holy, happy man. May my ſoul bear the divine impreſſion, and correſpond more to this amiable character!

4. [f] The ungodly are not ſo: but are [g] like the chaff which the wind driveth away. 5. Therefore [h] the ungodly ſhall not ſtand in the judgment, nor ſinners in the congregation of the righteous. 6. For [i] the LORD knoweth the way of the righteous: but [k] the way of the ungodly ſhall periſh.

[f] Iſa. iii. 11.
[g] Job xxi. 18. Pſ. xxxv. 5. Iſa. xvii. 13. & xxix. 5. Hoſ. xiii. 3.
[h] Mat. xiii. 49.
[i] Nah. i. 7. Joh. x. 14.
[k] Prov. xi. 7.

v. 4—6. The very contraſt to thoſe above deſcribed, is the character of the ungodly; they are not ſo, ſin is their way; the company they keep is like themſelves, ungodly; their opinions are erroneous as their practice is perverſe. They abide in the paths of wickedneſs, and ſit down content with their own deceivings; negligent of God's word, never conſulting it in ſecret, and if they ſit under it, what a wearineſs is it? Their thoughts diſſipated in purſuits of worldly vanity, or fleſhly indulgences, never fix on the ſacred volume; nor day nor night are they occupied therein. Like a blaſted tree their leaf is withered, and inſtead of fruit, only fit fuel for the flames: the curſe of God is upon them in all the labour of their hands, and miſery follows them cloſer than their ſhadow: They are like the chaff which the wind driveth away. Vanity is ſtamped on all their enjoyments; driven before the breath of every temptation; light and deſpicable, in God's account, as the duſt of the balance, and ready to ſuffer the eternal blaſting of the breath of his diſpleaſure; when, with his fan in his hand, he ſhall thoroughly purge his floor, and the chaff be burnt with fire unquenchable. Therefore the ungodly ſhall not ſtand in the judgment: in that dreadful day, when God ſhall ſummons to his bar the guilty ſons of Adam, to receive their eternal doom, then ſhall confuſion cover them, every plea be ſilenced, every mouth be ſtopped. Though with hypocriſy, perhaps, they once joined in the aſſembly of God's ſaints, their place ſhall be no more found; nor ſinners in the congregation of the righteous: an awful, an eternal ſeparation ſhall be made; theſe ſhall go into everlaſting puniſhment, but the righteous into life eternal: For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; they walk by faith in Chriſt the living way, and they are accounted righteous, as accepted in him, and derive alſo a divine nature from him; God knows them, ſees and approves the way in which they go, and will ſhortly everlaſtingly reward them. But the way of the ungodly ſhall periſh: they have choſen their deluſions, and muſt periſh in their own deceiving; their way is always grievous, and the end thereof is miſery and death eternal. Lord ſhut not up my ſoul with ſinners!

Let the righteous rejoice; let the ſinner tremble. In a moment this dread eternity opens, and their everlaſting ſtate is determined: Oh that it might awaken the fears of the ungodly, and quicken the diligence of the faithful.

PSALM II.

The preſent diſpoſition of the pſalms appears to be of great antiquity, even as old as the apoſtle's days. See Acts xiii. 33. The whole of this pſalm relates to the Meſſiah. See Acts iv. 25. Heb. i. 5. We have here, 1. The oppoſition that ſhould be given to his kingdom, ver. 1—3. 2. The baffling and chaſtiſing of that oppoſition, ver. 4, 5. 3. The ſetting up of the kingdom of Chriſt notwithſtanding, ver. 6. 4. The eſtabliſhment of it, ver. 7. 5. A promiſe of its enlargement, ver. 8, 9. 6. An exhortation to kings and princes to yield obedience to him, ver. 10—12.

1. [a] WHY do the heathen [b] † rage, and the people ‡ imagine a vain thing? 2. The kings of the earth ſet themſelves, and the rulers take counſel together againſt the LORD, and againſt [c] his Anointed, ſaying, 3. [d] Let us break their bands aſunder, and caſt away their cords from us. 4. He that ſitteth in the heavens [e] ſhall laugh: the LORD ſhall have them in deriſion. 5. Then ſhall he ſpeak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his ſore diſpleaſure. 6. Yet have I § ſet [f] my king upon [g] my holy hill of Zion.

About 1047.
[a] Acts iv. 25.
[b] Pſ. xlvi. 6.
† Or, tumultuouſly aſſemble.
‡ Heb. meditate.
[c] Pſ. xlv. 7. Joh. i. 41.
[d] Jer. v. 5. Luke xix. 14.
[e] Pſ. xxxvii. 13. & lix. 8. Prov. i. 26.
§ Heb. anointed.
[f] Dan. vii. 14. 1 Tim. vi. 15.
[g] Pſ. xvi. 1.

v. 1—6. Since the day that, after war in heaven, rebellion began on earth, at the inſtigation of the old ſerpent caſt out from his place in glory, the fierce conteſt and ſtruggle hath continued between the ſeed of the ſerpent and the ſeed of the woman: and this, with eſpecial bitterneſs, was renewed when the bruiſer of his head appeared incarnate, to deſtroy him and all his hated works. We have here,

1. This furious oppoſition to Chriſt and his kingdom deſcribed. Though he appeared as the prince of peace, came diffuſing bleſſings on every ſide, brought the moſt welcome tidings, ſpake as never man ſpake, and in his life appeared the pattern of every thing great and excellent; yet againſt him is the fierceſt rage of earth and hell levelled. (1.) The inſtruments employed are the heathen, the Roman governor and ſoldiery, and the people, the peculiar people, the Jews: their kings and governors head the riotous aſſembly; and Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the whole ſanhedrim, unite for the deſtruction of the divine Meſſiah. Vainly promiſing themſelves a temporal king, they cannot bear the pretenſions of the lowly Jeſus; and confounded by his juſt and ſevere rebukes, they gnaſh upon him with indignation, perſecute him with the moſt deliberate and unrelenting enmity; and, laying aſide every quarrel among themſelves, are joined in ſtricteſt league to ſuppreſs his riſing kingdom among men. Note, (1.) The cauſe of Jeſus is ever a ſuffering one; they who embark in it muſt begin with taking up the croſs. (2.) The religion of Jeſus hath often groundleſsly excited the jealouſy of earthly princes; his kingdom is not of this world. (3.) They who were at enmity, as great as was between Jew and Gentile, Scribe and Phariſee, will readily conſent to drop all their differences, when the cauſe of Jeſus is to be run down, and cordially unite againſt him and his. (4.) The enmity of the heart againſt the religion of Jeſus, is unſpeakably more bitter and inveterate than againſt any thing beſide; nor will the greateſt harmleſſneſs of conduct, or purity of manners, ſooth the rage of perſecutors. (5.) It is our comfort, that however mighty our enemies, or however politic their contrivances, they imagine a vain thing; the church, and every believer, is fixed upon a rock, againſt which the powers of earth, and the gates of hell, cannot prevail. (2.) The occaſion of this fury is obſerved, v. 3. They cannot endure the government of the Lord's Anointed, nor bear him in any of his characters as prophet, prieſt, or king. Wiſe in their own conceit, they will not ſubmit as little children to learn his heavenly doctrine: proud on their own ſufficiency, and truſting on their own righteouſneſs, they cannot ſtoop, as miſerable and periſhing ſinners, to ſeek his atoning blood, and juſtifying obedience, as the only foundation of their acceptance before God: and, hating the holy ways of this heavenly king, their ſtubborn hearts reject his rule, and that internal ſpiritual kingdom which he erects in the ſoul, mortifying every earthly, ſenſual, deviliſh temper; this they cannot endure. Note, None can be the ſubjects of Chriſt's kingdom, who do not renounce their own wiſdom, righteouſneſs, and ſtrength, and come to Jeſus, to teach, atone for, and rule in and over them.

2. As the conteſt is highly unequal, the ruin of the enemy is ſure. How vain for worms to oppoſe the mighty God? for duſt of the earth to riſe up againſt him who ſitteth in the heavens? how fooliſh that ſecret counſel, which cannot be hid from his all-ſeeing eye? and how mad the attempt to dethrone Omnipo-tence itſelf ? (1.) God derides the impotent menaces of his foes; he ſits ſecure againſt their rage, ſerene and undiſturbed with their tumults; and looks down with ſcorn on their vain imaginations. (2.) His indignation riſes at their wickedneſs, and at laſt he breaks the ſilence he had kept, ſpeaking to them in the awful ſtrokes of providential judgments, and vexing them in his ſore diſpleaſure; filling their hearts with inward miſery, and quickly about to pour out upon them wrath unto the uttermoſt. (3.) With triumph the king, Meſſiah, is exalted in ſpite of all his foes: Yet have I ſet, or, Behold I have ſet, &c. As mediator he is inveſted with a delegated rule and authority, and given to be head of his church, the ſpiritual mount Zion; and to his ſceptre all muſt bow as willing ſubjects, or break under the rod of his indignation, as obſtinate rebels. Note, (1.) The wrath of an offended God is very terrible; wo to the ſoul againſt whom it awakes. (2.) Chriſt, as mediator, hath a peculiar kingdom aſſigned him in the world; in which reſpect he is inferior to him who appointed him, without diminution of that eſſential and eternal power and Godhead, in which he is equal with the Father. (3.) It is the comfort of God's people that their Lord and king is exalted; and therefore his Zion ſhall enjoy his happy rule, in ſpite of all the malice of her inveterate foes. (4.) Though their impotent attempts are long born with, their utter deſtruction is near, when this king ſhall ſit on the throne of judgment, and everlaſting deſtruction fall upon them from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power.

7. I will declare the decree: the LORD hath ſaid unto me, [h] Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. 8. Aſk of me, and [i] I ſhall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. 9. [k] Thou ſhalt break them with a rod of iron, thou ſhalt daſh them in pieces like a potter's veſſel.

[h] Acts xiii. 33 Heb. i. 5. & v. 5.
[i] Pſ. xxii. 27. & lxxii. 8. & lxxxix. 27. Dan. vii. 13, 14.
[k] Pſ. lxxxix. 23. Rev. ii. 27. & xix. 15.

v. 7—9. Chriſt being here exalted to the mediatorial throne, ſpeaks in own perſon: I will declare the decree, either that eternal covenant of redemption, which was entered into between the Father and Son; in virtue of which he was appointed heir of all things, and head of the church, in conſideration of his obedience unto death in behalf of his people; or that doctrine which he profeſſes to have received from the Father, John xii. 49. concerning the wonderous deſigns of God's grace and mercy to the ſinful ſons of men, of which he was the great apoſtle and preacher. (1.) His title to the throne is here produced: The Lord hath ſaid unto me, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Which ſome interpret of the eternal generation of the Son of God, and aſcribe to his perſon as begotten, though of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father, co-exiſtent and co-eternal. I rather incline to refer it to him as mediator, and ſpoken either when the eternal purpoſes of God's grace to man were firſt declared in heaven, and the exalted Jeſus in this divine character received the worſhip of adoring angels; or when, at his incarnation, his baptiſm, and moſt eminently at his reſurrection and aſcenſion, he was declared to be the Son of God with power, Rom. i. 4. (2.) His influence, in virtue of this advancement, is deſcribed, v. 8, 9. Being exalted to the throne of majeſty on high in virtue of his ſufferings, according to the conditions of the covenant of redemption, all power is given him in heaven and in earth. His interceſſion is now effectual; the Father always heareth him, and his requeſts are ſure of being granted, when the language of them is, Father I will. Two things are promiſed him at his requeſt: (1.) The hearts of his people. I ſhall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. Thus we ſee the goſpel of Jeſus hath already gone forth unto the ends of the earth, and reached even to us. Multitudes of the various nations of the world have yielded themſelves up through Almighty grace to his happy government; and we are ſtill expecting, in virtue of this promiſe, the more extenſive ſpread of the Redeemer's influence, when the kingdoms of the world ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Chriſt. Our bleſt iſland, in profeſſion, already owns his ſway; happy for us if our inmoſt ſouls actually enjoyed his government, and he reigned Lord of every motion there! Note, (1.) It is the work of God's almighty grace, which can alone ſubdue the heart to Chriſt, as it is an act of ſovereign favour to be given to him as his poſſeſſion. (2.) Since we have ſuch a prevailing advocate with the Father, who is our friend and king, let us come boldly to a throne of grace, and truſt the all-prevailing efficacy of his interceſſion for us. (2.) The necks of his enemies. Thou ſhalt break them with a rod of iron, thou ſhalt daſh them in pieces like a potter's veſſel. They who refuſe the Saviour's gentle ſway, muſt feel his heavy hand: the Jews, who rejected him, were firſt broken in pieces and diſperſed: the heathen Rome, where the blood of his martyrs was ſhed, is long ſince deſtroyed; and it remains that Rome papal as well as pagan, ſtill red with the blood of the ſaints, receive the ſame terrible doom, with all the other anti-chriſtian powers, whether Jewiſh, Mahometan, or heathen; whoſe deſolations are determined, when the Lord ſhall take his great power and reign, and his foes be made his foot-ſtool. Sinner, whoever thou art, tremble at that day, when if thou art found an enemy and rebel againſt Jeſus and his government, thy final and eternal overthrow will be compleated; and thou as unable to reſiſt as a potter's veſſel before an iron rod, and thy ruin as irreparable as theſe ſhreds that never more can be united.

10. Be wiſe now therefore, O ye kings: be inſtructed, ye judges of the earth. 11. [l] Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling. 12. [m] Kiſs the Son, leſt he be angry, and ye periſh † from the way, [n] when his wrath is kindled but a little: [o] bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him.

[l] Heb. xii. 28.
[m] 1 Sam. x. 1. Or, 1 Kin xix. 18. Hoſ. xiii. 2.
† Or, In.
[n] See Rev. vi. 16.
[o] Pſ. xxxiv. 8. Prov. xvi. 20. Iſa. xxx. 18. Jer. xvii. 7. Rom. ix. 33. & x. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 6.

v. 10—12. Here is wiſdom. Since Jeſus is exalted king in Zion, and oppoſition vain, it is moſt highly our intereſt to court his favour, as it is our bounden duty to ſubmit to his government. Note, True religion is the moſt reaſonable ſervice.

1. The addreſs is directed to the kings and judges of the earth. Thoſe who, as moſt exalted, will be moſt apt to ſay, Who is Lord over us? Let them know there is one that is higher than they, with whom is no reſpect of perſons; and in whoſe ſight they ſtand undiſtinguiſhed from, and equally accountable with their meaneſt ſubjects: and as their ſtation and influence is great, from them eſpecially the Lord requires obedience, that they may ſet an example to thoſe who are committed to their charge. Note, If great men are not good men, they ſhall receive the greater damnation.

2. The exhortation directed to them, is, (1.) To ſerve the Lord with fear, and rejoice before him with trembling. The ſervice of Jehovah, is the duty and happineſs of every creature: his will muſt be our rule, his worſhip our daily exerciſe, his glory our conſtant aim. To rejoice in him is both our privilege and duty, as our reconciled God in Chriſt, as our beſt portion in time, and our exceeding great reward in eternity: yet, with fear and trembling we are commanded to ſerve him, and rejoice before him; knowing the corruption and deceitfulneſs of our hearts, the ſnares of the enemy, and the dangers with which we are encompaſſed; and eſpecially need we fear the workings of pride and ſelf-righteouſneſs, which are ſo apt to creep in, and turn our eyes off the Lord Chriſt and our rejoicing in him, to have confidence in the fleſh, and rejoice in our own vile and worthleſs ſervices. Note, Holy jealouſy and filial fear are moſt conſiſtent with, yea, moſt productive of the moſt ſubſtantial and abiding joy. (2.) To kiſs the Son. God wills that all ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. The kiſs was expreſſive, (1.) Of adoration, Hoſ. xiii. 2. Chriſt is our Lord God, and we are commanded to worſhip him. (2.) Of affection, Luke vii. 38. He is the bridegroom of our ſouls; and therefore our tendereſt love, and warmeſt attachments muſt fix on him. (3.) Of loyalty, 1 Sam. x. 1. For we are called to ſerve him as our maſter, with unſhaken conſtancy to ſubmit to his will, and every providential diſpenſation and affliction, and zealouſly to maintain the intereſts of his kingdom, though expoſed to priſon or to death.

3. This exhortation is enforced by a twofold powerful argument. (1.) Leſt he be angry; for though he ſits on his throne, meek and gentle as a lamb to thoſe who come to him as humble ſupplicants, he will roar as a lion againſt the obſtinately impenitent, and tear them in pieces, whilſt their is none to deliver them. Leſt he be angry, and ye periſh from the way; that is, by leaving the way of righteouſneſs, and turning to the paths of ſin and death: or, in the way, being cut off in the midſt of your iniquities; or, ſuddenly, as the word may be rendered, by ſome divine judgment ſtopping the ſinner ſhort in his career of wickedneſs. When his wrath is kindled but a little, the leaſt ſin provokes it, and the leaſt meaſure of his wrath is intolerable; and therefore, how ſhould we fear to offend? (2.) Bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him. The pleaſantneſs of Chriſt's yoke ſhould engage us to yield our necks to it, as the terrors of his wrath ſhould lead us to avoid it. They who truſt in him are bleſſed; they now enjoy his favour and regard, peace in their conſcience, reviving confidence of his protection, and tranſporting hope of the glory which ſhall be revealed; and hereafter how unutterably more bleſſed will they appear when this king in Zion ſhall ſit on the mount in judgment, place them at his right hand, welcome them to his preſence, ſeat them on his throne; and whilſt their enemies and his are gnawing their tongues with pain, and doomed to dwell in everlaſting burnings, they ſhall be filled with everlaſting conſolations, and ſpend a glorious eternity in adoration, love, and praiſe. Lord, may my happy lot be there!

PSALM III.

David, as the title informs us, compoſed this pſalm when he fled from Abſalom. 1. He complains of his enemies, ver. 1, 2. 2. Encourages himſelf in God, ver. 3. 3. Recollects his former experience of God's goodneſs to him, ver. 4, 5. 4. Triumphs over his fears, ver. 6. And over his enemies, againſt whom he prays, ver. 7. 5. Gives God the glory, and takes to himſelf the comfort of his ſalvation, ver. 8. Herein he was an eminent type of Chriſt, thus betrayed, caſt out of Jeruſalem, aſcending the mount of Olives; and of the ſufferings he there endured, with his triumphant reſurrection, which followed. And the whole is univerſally applicable alſo to the people of God, whoſe troubles and trials, however great, yet out of them all the Lord delivereth them; and therefore, what the ſaints of God have of old experienced, ſhould ſtrengthen and encourage our faith.

[a] 2 Sam. xv. 16, &c. 1023.

¶ A pſalm of David, [a] when he fled from Abſalom his ſon.

[b] 2 Sam. xv. 12.
[c] 2 Sam. xvi. 8 Pſ. lxxi. 11.
[d] Gen. xv. 1.
† Or, About.
[e] Iſa. lx. 19.

1. LORD, [b] how are they increaſed that trouble me? many are they that riſe up againſt me. 2. Many there be which ſay of my ſoul, [c] There is no help for him in God. Selah. 3. But thou, O LORD, art [d] a ſhield † for me; [e] my glory, and the lifter up of mine head.

v. 1—3. David, in deep diſtreſs, is here flying from his unnatural ſon; and as human help failed him, his heart looks up to God: the greatneſs of his trials could not ſo diſcompoſe his ſpirit, as to interrupt his communion with the Father; nor his danger, however imminent, ſink him into deſpair. Note, (1.) The greateſt trials ariſe to us often from our own houſe. (2.) No diſtreſs ſhould unfit us for the exerciſes of devotion. (3.) Whilſt the ſoul flies to God under its afflictions, though they may be heavy, we ſhall not ſink under them. We have in theſe verſes,

1. The complaint of the ſuffering David, poured forth into the boſom of the compaſſionate God: not that he wants our prayers to inform him, but he will be thus enquired of. Many were his foes; the revolt was general, and he a fugitive, driven from his capital; his cauſe, to appearance, deſperate; and his enemies triumphant and inſulting, as if God had forſaken him; and either, as they blaſphemouſly ſuggeſted, could not, or would not ſuccour him. The ſufferings of the Son of David, in the ſame place, were greater ſtill; betrayed by one diſciple, denied by another, forſaken by all; the multitude thirſting for his blood; ſeized, condemned, inſulted, mocked, ſcourged, crucified; and whilſt upon the bloody tree he hung, he heard the blaſphemy of the multitude, deriding his confidence, as utterly forſaken of his God. Such enemies alſo every faithful follower of Jeſus muſt expect; many within, many without, ſeeking to trouble his repoſe, and ſhake his confidence in God: a frowning world will threaten, a tempting devil ſuggeſt diſtreſſing doubts and fears, and an unbelieving heart be ready to deſpond: but, through Divine grace, he riſes ſuperior to his fears, rejects the diſhonourable thought, and reſts his hope ſecure upon the Divine protection. Selah. Very uncertain are the conjectures about this word; ſome conceive it to mean ſome change of the muſic; others a pauſe; others interpret it as an affirmation, verily; ſome tranſlate it for ever; and one learned man hath ſought to prove it a name of God.

2. The pſalmiſt profeſſes his unſhaken confidence in God, notwithſtanding all his foes: the higher the ſtorm of temptation blew, the deeper his faith took root on the unchangeable God. Thou art a ſhield for me, to protect me from the impending danger, to quench the fiery darts my inſulting foes hurl againſt me, and ſafe under thy ſhadow I ſhall reſt from fear of evil. My glory; the author of all the greatneſs to which he had been advanced; and ſtill, in his low eſtate, in God's ſalvation he would glory, confident of his reſtoration: and the lifter up of mine head, though now bowed down through outward troubles, and inwardly afflicted with the ſenſe of his ſins, which had provoked them, yet not ſunk irrecoverably, again God would lift up his horn of majeſty, and ſet up his throne on high. Thus Jeſus, covered with the ſhield of the Almighty, was reſcued from the hand of his perſecutors; foiled the temptations of the wicked one; roſe ſuperior to all his ſufferings; glorified by his Father in his reſurrection, aſcenſion, and ſeſſion at the right hand of Majeſty on high; and now is lifted up above all his enemies, to reign till they are for ever put under his feet: and as the head is, ſo are the members, ſafe in a covenant of everlaſting love; glorious in the eyes of the Lord, amidſt all their ſufferings; and though oftentimes in heavineſs, through manifold temptations, yet doth God lift up the heads, that in ſorrow for ſin, and under ſuffering, hang down as the bulruſh; and ſays, Peace, be ſtill, to the ſtorms and billows which go over them: and as he fills the heart with preſent peace and joy in believing, ſo will he aſſuredly, ſhortly lift up our heads above all our foes, and our ſins and ſorrows together ſhall for ever flee away. O haſten, Lord, this happy time!

[f] Pſ. iv. 8. Prov. iii. 24.
[g] Pſ. xxvii. 1—3.
[h] Ibid. lviii. 6. See Job xvi. 10. 1 Lam. iii. 30.

4. I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah. 5. [f] I laid me down and ſlept; I awaked, for the LORD ſuſtained me. 6. [g] I will not be afraid of ten thouſands of people, that have ſet themſelves againſt me round about. 7. Ariſe, O LORD, ſave me, O my God; for [h] thou haſt ſmitten all mine enemies upon the cheek-bone: thou haſt broken the teeth of the ungodly. 8. [i] Salvation belongeth unto the LORD: [k] thy bleſſing is upon thy people. Selah.

[i] Prov. xxi. 31. Iſa. xliii. 11. Jer. iii. 23. Hoſ. xiii. 4. Jona. ii. 9. Rev. vii. 10.
[k] Eph. i. 3.

v. 4—8. The pſalmiſt had often ſweet experience, how good it was for him to draw near unto God, for he ever heareth the prayer of the poor deſtitute; and as faith encourages the voice of prayer, prayer reciprocally confirms and ſtrengthens our confidence in God. We have here,

1. The application David made to God, and the anſwer of peace he received: I cried unto God with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. The eagerneſs of his cry ſpoke the fervour of his heart; and God heard him with favourable acceptance, out of his holy hill, the mount Sion, where he had choſen his reſidence: Thither the ark had been ſent by David on his flight, 2 Sam. xv. 25. But the God of the ark was with him, to hear and help him. The great Redeemer thus, in the days of his fleſh, with ſtrong crying and tears, preſented his ſupplications, and was ſtrengthened; and every faithful ſoul hath a thouſand times experienced the ſupport derived from effectual fervent prayer, and known by unqueſtionable evidence, that there is a God who heareth prayer.

2. The effect of the divine anſwer from God, was reſt and peace. Though in the midſt of danger from open enemies and ſuſpected friends, I laid me down and ſlept, I awaked, for the Lord ſuſtained me. No terrors diſturbed his repoſe; that guardian whom he truſted ſweetly cloſed his eyes, and he awaked ſafe and refreſhed, to ſee the welcome light of the returning morn. Thus Jeſus ſlept in the grave; and, after a ſhort night, awaked on the morning of the reſurrection-day, as a giant refreſhed with wine: and doth not every believer experience the ſame divine protection? having commended himſelf into the arms of Jeſus, he lays in peace his head upon his pillow; whilſt conſcious terrors haunt the boſom of the guilty, and trouble their repoſe, his ſleep is ſweet unto him, and he awakes, refreſhed and comforted, ready for the duties of the returning day, thankful for his mercies, and, from what he hath already received, encouraged to truſt for what is yet to come. May I ever ſo lie down, O Lord, in peace and prayer; and when I wake up, may I be ſtill with thee!

3. He expreſſes his confident truſt in God. I will not be afraid of ten thouſands of the people, that have ſet themſelves againſt me round about. His enemies were on every ſide; his forces few; himſelf eſpecially ſtruck at, and for his blood they thirſted: but ſince faith hath ſeen a covenant God, fear is ſilenced; and his prayers are the more earneſt, v. 7. for his faith did not ſuperſede his ſupplications, but encourage them. And as God had ſo often ſmitten his enemies upon the cheek-bone; and broken the teeth of the ungodly; both covered them with reproach, and diſabled them from hurting him, he doubted not but the ſame mercy ſhould follow him. The ſon of David exerciſed ſtill greater faith, and fearleſsly met his more furious foes, confounded their devices, and turned them to their own deſtruction. By dying he deſtroyed death, and him that had the power of it, that is the devil: and in him, and by him, his people alſo are made more than conquerors; whilſt all the combined powers of Satan, the world and ſin, are kept from hurting them; and, as the anſwer of their repeated prayers, they behold the ſalvation of God.

4. The pſalmiſt gratefully aſcribes the praiſe of all to God: ſalvation of every kind, temporal or ſpiritual, belongeth unto the Lord; he is the great author and finiſher of it, and to him alone the glory is due. And thy bleſſing is upon thy people. Selah. He is willing as he is able to ſave them to the uttermoſt; and his promiſes have bound him to them in every time of need; for he hath ſaid, I will never leave nor forſake thee: bleſſed then ſurely are the people that are in ſuch a caſe.

PSALM IV.

In this pſalm, 1. David begins with a ſhort prayer, ver. 1. 2. He expoſtulates with his enemies, ver. 2. 3. He points out the happineſs of God's people, ver. 3. 4. He calls upon the ſons of men to conſider their ways, ver. 4. 5. He exhorts them to ſerve God, ver. 5. 6. He tells us what joy and ſecurity he found in his favour, ver. 6—8.

† Or, overſeer.
[a] Iſa. xxxviii. 20. Hab. iii. 19.

¶ To the † chief muſician [a] on Neginoth.

A pſalm of David.

‡ Or, be gracious unto me.
§ Or, a lie.
[b] Ex. xxxiii. 16.
[c] Eph. iv. 26.

1. HEAR me when I call, O God of my righteouſneſs: thou haſt enlarged me when I was in diſtreſs, ‡ have mercy upon me, and hear my prayer. 2. O ye ſons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into ſhame? how long will ye love vanity, and ſeek after § leaſing? Selah. 3. But know that [b] the LORD hath ſet apart him that is godly, for himſelf: the LORD will hear when I call unto him. 4. [c] Stand in awe, and ſin not: com-

[d] commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be ſtill. Selah. 5. Offer [e] the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs: and put your truſt in the LORD.

d Pſ. lxxvii. 6.
e Deut. xxxiii. 19. Pſ. xv. 19.

v. 1—5. Neither the title of this pſalm, nor the matter of it, directs us to any particular occaſion, on which it was compoſed, tho' probably ſoon after the former, with which ſome of the ſentiments correſpond: it is directed to the chief muſician, (who led the band,) on Neginoth, generally ſuppoſed to be the ſtringed inſtruments which were to accompany it. David opens this pſalm,

1. With earneſt prayer to God. Hear me when I call. We have no demands on God for attention; nor can make him our debtor by waiting upon him: it is a mercy, an unſpeakable mercy, if he condeſcends to hear our prayers. O God of my righteouſneſs. My righteous God, who will do me right reſpecting my enemies; or, the vindicator of my righteouſneſs, which men traduce and malign; or the God on whom I depend for righteouſneſs, renouncing all truſt in myſelf, and my own doings and deſerts. Thou haſt enlarged me when I was in diſtreſs; many a time have I experienced thy kind interpoſition, therefore I am ſtill encouraged to hope for the repetition of the ſame mercy. And every true believer may adopt his words, acknowledging how often God hath enlarged his heart, when ſtraitned with temptations and beſet with trials, and ſet his feet at liberty. Note, (1.) In every diſtreſs God is a ſure refuge, let us fly to him. (2.) Paſt experience ſhould engage preſent confidence.

2. He expoſtulates with his enemies, in order to their conviction and converſion: O ye ſons of men, how long will ye turn my glory into ſhame; as the chiefs of Iſrael, who joined his rebellious ſon, ſought to do: and as the high-prieſt and people of the Jews, when they reviled, inſulted, and mocked the Lamb of God, and ridiculed the glory he aſſumed as king of Iſrael, degrading him to the condition of a malefactor, and making him die the death of a ſlave. In like manner do wicked men ſeek to reproach the faithful, brand them as hypocrites and deceivers, and ridicule their holy peculiarities. How long will ye love vanity, and ſeek after leaſing? or a lie. Such was Abſalom, whom they had anointed king, and thought to eſtabliſh his throne; but muſt find, to their coſt, how deceitful their hope. And equally vain will be all the attempts of Satan and his emiſſaries, againſt Chriſt and his people: though they ſealed him up in the grave, and concluded they had triumphed, his reſurrection proved there was a lie in their right hand; and tho' they daily fight and trouble his ſervants, ſeeking to corrupt them with heretical opinions, or to debauch them to evil practices, their attempts are alike vain, and their wickedneſs will recoil upon themſelves.

3. He produces the reaſon why their attempts muſt be abortive. Know that the Lord hath ſet apart him that is godly, for himſelf: which reſpects David himſelf, whoſe conduct God approved, and whoſe kingdom he would eſtabliſh, in ſpite of all his foes. Equally applicable is it to the Meſſiah, that elect in whom God's ſoul delighteth; and more generally it muſt be applied to every one whom God calls, according to the purpoſe of his will: he is ſet apart in the Divine counſel; ſeparated by effectual grace from the world, which lieth in wickedneſs; kept in the arms of everlaſting love, and none can pluck him thence; for the Lord will hear when I call unto him; and therefore every device muſt be baffled. Note, (1.) If ſuch be the bleſſedneſs and ſecurity of God's people, and he makes us know it in his word of promiſe, how earneſt ought we to be to obtain his favour, and have our portion among his ſeparated ones? (2.) The godly is a term of reproach in the world, but it is the higheſt title of honour before God.

4. He warns them of their danger, and the way of eſcaping it. Stand in awe of the judgments of God, threatened againſt tranſgreſſors; and ſin not, to provoke it againſt you. Many verſions read, Be angry, and ſin not, according to the apoſtle, Eph. iv. 26. There is an anger not ſinful, when it is directed againſt the evils we ſee in ourſelves and others, and leads us to zeal for their good, and God's glory. Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be ſtill. Selah. Conſider your ways, ſeriouſly examine them by the rule of God's laws; ſearch out your manifold offences; bring forth the awful ſentence, which is the appointed wages of ſin, and ſuffer no avocation to divert your thoughts from this important ſubject: retire to your cloſet often, or on your bed think of theſe things; and let conſcience faithfully do her office, that ſelf-condemned, and humbled under the ſenſe of ſin, your hearts may be laid in the duſt, to ſeek mercy with an offended God. Then offer unto God the ſacrifice of righteouſneſs. The ſacrifice of God's appointment, which pointed to the atoning blood of the great Redeemer; and put your truſt in the Lord, renouncing yourſelf as a vile ſinner, and looking for the mercy of God in Jeſus Chriſt, as your only ſoul-ſupporting hope: and this will produce ſacrifices of praiſe to God for redeeming grace, with which he hath declared himſelf to be well-pleaſed. Thus may all the evil the ſinner fears be averted, and all the felicity of God's choſen become his happy portion. O that men were wiſe, that they underſtood theſe things!

6. There be many that ſay, Who will ſhew us any good? [f] LORD, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us. 7. Thou haſt put [g] gladneſs in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increaſed. 8. [h] I will both lay me down in peace, and ſleep: for thou LORD only makeſt me dwell [i] in ſafety.

f Num. vi. 26. Pſ. lxxx. 3. & cxix. 135.
g 1 Pet. i. 8.
h Job xi. 18, 19. Pſ. iii. 5.
i Lev. xxv. 18. & xxvi. 5. Deut. xii. 10.

v. 6—8. Having exhorted men to ſeek the favour of a gracious God, David proceeds to ſhow the excellency of his regard beyond every earthly acquiſition.

1. There be many that ſay, Who will ſhew us any good? Fooliſh worldings, who place their chief happineſs in the periſhing enjoyments of preſent vanities; ſeeking their portion on earth, and graſping at this ſhadow, inſtead of God, the only author of true and abiding joy. Note, (1.) Senſe governs moſt men, and their purſuits after happineſs, ſcarce riſe to objects higher than thoſe the beaſts enjoy in common with them. (2.) They who, with a rational and immortal ſoul, ſeek their reſt in ſublunary enjoyments, muſt ever, like the prodigal ſon, find them as huſks, incapable of ſatisfying their hunger. (3.) They who take up with their portion in time, can have none in eternity, Luke xvi. 25.

2. The pſalmiſt, and all, whoſe hearts like his divine grace hath wrought upon, ſeek a nobler, and more ſatisfying poſſeſſion. Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us; give us a ſenſe of thy favour, the comforts of thy ſpirit, and the experience of thy love ſhed abroad in our hearts: this is the only ſatisfying portion an immortal ſoul can enjoy; and all the wealth of the world, compared with this, is dung and loſs. Thou haſt put gladneſs in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increaſed. A worldly ſpirit exults to ſee his barns full, and his vats overflow with wine: but how much greater the joy, to experience the riches of Divine grace, and to be filled with all the fullneſs of God? Or it may be rendered, from the time that their corn and wine increaſed; intimating, that far from envying the proſperity of his enemies, he rejoiced in it; and beſpeaks the bleſſed temper to which Divine grace had brought him. Note, They are wofully miſtaken, who count God's ſervants unhappy, and the ways of godlineſs melancholy: out of them there is no true joy, and the end of all other mirth is heavineſs.

3. With this gladneſs of heart, which a ſenſe of the Divine favour miniſtered, he forgot his troubles, and reſted in peace and comfort. I will both lay me down in peace, and ſleep: no fears ſhall diſturb, nor diſappointment break my reſt; if thou art with me, I have all that heart can wiſh: for thou Lord only makeſt me dwell in ſafety. Though other refuge I have none, the ſhadow of thy wings is ſufficient ſecurity; my ſoul reſts in thy love, my body under thy care, and both are everlaſtingly ſafe. Note, Every believer may with delight adopt theſe expreſſions of dependance upon God: he can ſleep with peace on his bed, for God is there; he can lay with confidence his body in the duſt, and ſleep the ſleep of death, for even in the grave he is ſafe: and having committed his all into the hands of a faithful guardian, he is aſſured, that whether for time or eternity, all is well, a ſafe abode on earth, or an undiſturbed and eternal reſt in heaven, is his aſſured portion.

PSALM V.

David's days were full of trouble, but he had a gracious God to fly to, who heard and helped him. 1. To God he directs his prayer, ver. 1—3. 2. He aſcribes holineſs to God, and an irreconcileable hatred of ſin, ver. 4—6. 3. He reſolves to adhere to the public worſhip of God, ver. 7. 4. He prays, (1.) For himſelf, that God would guide him, ver. 8. (2.) Againſt his enemies, that God would deſtroy them, ver. 9, 10. (3.) For the people of God, that he would give them joy, and keep them ſafe ver. 11, 12.

¶ To the chief muſician upon Nehiloth.

A Pſalm of David.

1. GIVE ear to my words, O LORD, conſider my meditation. 2. Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King and my God: for unto thee will I pray. 3. [a] My voice ſhalt thou hear in the morning, O LORD; in the morning will I † direct my prayer unto thee, and [b] will ‡ look up. 4. For thou art not a God that hath pleaſure in wickedneſs: [c] neither ſhall evil dwell with thee. 5. [d] The fooliſh ſhall not ſtand in thy ſight: thou hateſt all workers of iniquity. 6. [e] Thou ſhalt deſtroy them that ſpeak leaſing: [f] the LORD will abhor § the bloody and deceitful man.

a Pſal. lxxxviii. 13. & cxxx. 6.
† Heb. Set in order.
b Pſ. lxxxv. 8.
‡ Or, look out. Hab. ii. 1. c Pſ. xciv. 20.
d Hab. i. 13.
e Rev. xxi. 8. & xxii. 15.
f Pſ. lv. 23.
§ Heb. The man of bloods and deceit.

The particular occaſion of this pſalm is not obſerved, only in tenor it reſembles the foregoing, and may be ſuppoſed to be wrote on a like affliction, ſuch as the rebellion of Sheba, 2 Sam.

xx. Nehiloth is uſually thought to mean the wind-inſtruments, which were to accompany the voice.

v. 1—6. The cries of his people are ever pleaſing to the ears of the God of Sabaoth, and he will hear and help them. This David knew, and therefore lifts up his heart and voice to God. Give ear to my words, O Lord, conſider my meditation. His lips were not haſty to ſpeak; he firſt deeply pondered his wants, and then he uttered his petition. Hearken unto the voice of my cry; as his diſtreſs was urgent, his importunity was great. Note, Fervor is the life of prayer; cold and negligent requeſts ſhew a heart dead to God. The arguments he uſes, as a plea for being heard, are,

1. The relation he ſtood in to God. My King, and my God; thou art not only all-ſufficient to help me, as the almighty King and eternal God, but bound to help me, as I am thy ſubject and ſervant. Note, A believing view of God as our God, is the great encouragement to pray.

2. The conſtant ſervice he reſolved to pay him. For unto thee will I pray, as the only object of my worſhip, and with ceaſeleſs attendance. My voice ſhalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord: no ſooner ſhall my eyes behold the returning light, than early will I offer unto thee the grateful acknowledgment of protection received, and put my body and ſoul anew under thy care, to be kept from the dangers of the day. Note, The morning is the fitteſt time to ſpend with God in prayer, and our firſt moments ſhould ever be conſecrated to the ſervice of that God who wakeneth us morning by morning. In the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up, or out. As when a meſſenger is diſpatched on ſome important errand, the eye is eager to catch the diſtant glimpſe of his return; ſo doth the ſoul, that ſends to heaven his ſupplications and prayers, wait with earneſtneſs the returning anſwer of peace. For want of this, how many prayers become fruitleſs, becauſe formal!

3. He mentions God's purity, as a foundation of his hope, conſcious of his own ſimplicity, and convinced of the wickedneſs of his troublers. For thou art not a God that hath pleaſure in wickedneſs, neither ſhall evil dwell with thee. Sin is the abominable thing God hates; it is contrary to his nature, and therefore all who love, delight in, and ſerve ſin, muſt be the objects of his abhorrence, excluded for ever from his preſence in heaven, and thruſt down into hell. The fooliſh, or wicked, for wickedneſs is the height of folly, theſe ſhall not ſtand in thy ſight, ſhall be unable to bear his preſence in the day of judgment, driven out with indignation, ſaying, Depart, accurſed, &c. Thou hateſt all workers of iniquity; not all that have been workers of it; for when we were yet ſinners God commended his love towards us, and ſent his Son to die for the ungodly; but all who, rejecting the grace of a Redeemer, perſiſt in their impenitence, and work iniquity as their practice and delight, theſe the holy God hates. Thou ſhalt deſtroy them that ſpeak leaſing, or a lie; the broachers of lying doctrines, or the forgers and propagators of falſe reports to hurt and defame. The Lord will abhor the bloody and deceitful man, the implacable and unmerciful. Theſe are the characters marked for vengeance, not only in David's day, but in every age and place. Such enemies of Chriſt and his people, fooliſh, wicked, malicious, falſe, blood-thirſty men, ſhall be deſtroyed with an everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord, and the glory of his power. Lord, gather not my ſoul with theſe ſinners!

7. But [g] as for me, I will come into thy houſe in the multitude of thy mercy: and [h] in thy fear will I worſhip [i] toward thy holy temple. 8. [k] Lead me, O LORD, in thy righteouſneſs, becauſe of † mine enemies; [l] make thy way ‡ ſtrait before my face, 9. For there is no faithfulneſs § in their mouth, their inward part is very wickedneſs; [m] their throat is [n] an open ſepulchre, [o] they flatter with their tongue. 10. ‖ Deſtroy thou them, O God; let them fall † by their own counſels: caſt them out in the multitude of their tranſgreſſions, for they have rebelled againſt thee. 11. But let all thoſe that put their truſt in thee [p] rejoice: let them ever ſhout for joy, becauſe thou ‡ defendeſt them: let them alſo that love thy name be joyful in thee. 12. For thou, LORD, wilt bleſs the righteous, with favour [q] wilt thou § compaſs him as with a ſhield.

[g] Joſh xxiv. 15.
[h] Heb. xii. 28.
[i] 1 Kings viii. 30. Pſ. cxxxviii. 2.
[k] Pſ. xxv. 5. & cxliii. 8, 10.
† Heb. Thoſe that obſerve me.
[l] Pſ. xxvii. 11.
‡ Or, even.
§ Heb. In his mouth, i. e. in the mouth of any of them.
[m] Rom. iii. 13.
[n] Luke xi. 14.
[o] Pſ. lxii. 4.
‖ Or, make them guilty.
† Or, from.
[p] Iſa. lxv. 13.
‡ Heb. Covereſt, or protecteſt.
[q] Zech. ii. 5.
§ Heb. Crown.

v. 7—12. Having deſcribed the miſerable ways and end of the ungodly, we have,

1. David's reſolution and prayer, that he may take a different courſe. But as for me, I will come into thy houſe, to worſhip there, as one of thy devoted ſervants, and publicly to make profeſſion of my bounden duty; not that I am worthy to open my polluted lips, or to mention my worthleſs ſervice, but in the multitude of thy mercy, this being the only ground of a ſinner's confidence towards God, the mercy revealed in a covenant of grace through Jeſus Chriſt: and in thy fear will I worſhip toward thy holy temple; with reverence adoring the eternal Majeſty, who is ſo greatly to be feared; careful to obſerve his inſtituted ordinances, as well as drawing near through the divinely-appointed medium, the great Mediator between God and man, whom the temple and all its ſervice prefigured. Note, (1.) There is no acceſs to, or acceptance with God, but by Jeſus Chriſt. (2.) With ſuch an advocate we may comfortably and confidently approach a throne of grace. To enable him to keep this pious purpoſe, he prays, Lead me, O God, in thy righteouſneſs; that is, in a conſtant renunciation of my own, and a dependance upon thine, as my ſure hope: or, thy righteouſneſs, may ſignify the ſtatutes in which he would walk, or the faithfulneſs of God engaged to lead him, becauſe of mine enemies, or thoſe that obſerve me. Many eyes are upon the Chriſtian's walk, curious to obſerve, and cenſorious to condemn; therefore he needs peculiar caution, leſt by his ſins he give the enemy occaſion to blaſpheme. Therefore he prays ever, Make thy way ſtrait before my face: enable me to know thy will, to correſpond with thy promiſes, and to walk upright before thee. Note, The exemplarineſs of a Chriſtian's converſation is what peculiarly covers his enemies with ſhame and confuſion.

2. Having mentioned his enemies, he gives their character, and foretels their ruin: For there is no faithfulneſs in their mouth; their words are falſhood and hypocriſy; even when ſmooth as oil, they are very ſwords, deſigned to hurt and deceive. Their inward part is very wickedneſs, and out of the abundance of this wickedneſs their mouth ſpeaketh. From this fruitful ſource, as from a fountain, evil naturally and ceaſeleſsly flows. Note, The great evil of ſin is within; outward actions, however vile, are but branches from that root of deſperate wickedneſs, an apoſtate heart. Their throat is an open ſepulchre, inſatiate as the grave, in inordinate appetites, and, like it, nauſeous with all manner of corrupt communication, which proceeds out of their mouth. They flatter with their tongue; ſpeak fair, whilſt miſchief is in their hearts. Againſt which ſinners the Pſalmiſt prophetically directs his prayer: Deſtroy them, O God, or, make them guilty; let them be condemned, and let them fall by their own counſels into the pit they digged for others; or, becauſe of them, receiving the juſt reward of their deeds. Caſt them out in the multitude of their tranſgreſſions, from their enjoyments, by afflictive providences, from earth by death, and, after death, into the outer darkneſs, where is weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth; and this will be an act of the moſt righteous judgment, for they have rebelled againſt thee. David's enemies had not only caſt off his government, but rejected God; and every ſinner doth the ſame, and ſtands convicted of rebellion againſt the Moſt High. Note, Terrible will be the end of the ungodly, and he will be forced to own the judgment juſt.

3. He concludes with a fervent prayer for God's people, and his confidence of the divine care over them. But let all thoſe who put their truſt in thee, renouncing every other dependance, rejoice; let them ever ſhout for joy, becauſe thou defendeſt them, or covereſt them, as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings. Let them alſo that love thy name, which is dear to the faithful ſoul, be joyful in thee, daily delighting themſelves in thy ſalvation; for thou, Lord, wilt bleſs the righteous. Thoſe who ſtand divinely righteous in their exalted head Jeſus, and compleat in him, the beſt of bleſſings are their portion, of grace here, and glory hereafter; no danger can hurt them, no enemy approach them; with favour unchangeable wilt thou compaſs him as with a ſhield. Note, (1.) In prayer our brethren ſhould ever have a warm remembrance; and we cannot but deſire, that great grace may be upon them all. (2.) From the prayer of faith we may confidently expect the anſwer of peace.

PSALM VI.

This pſalm was penned on one of David's mournful days, when ſickneſs of body, anguiſh of heart, and the inſults of his enemies, united to afflict him; yet, in the midſt of all, he can confidently truſt in God, and, though ſorrowful, be always rejoicing. 1. He pours out his complaints before God, deprecates his wrath, and prays for the return of his favour, ver. 17. 2. He informs us, that God had, and would, hear and anſwer his petitions, ver. 8—10.

¶ To the chief muſician on Neginoth [a] upon Sheminith,

A pſalm of David.

1. [b] O LORD, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure. 2.
Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for [c] I am weak:
O LORD, [d] heal me, for my bones are vexed. 3. My ſoul is alſo ſore vexed: but thou, O LORD, [e] how long? 4. Return, O LORD, deliver my ſoul; oh ſave me for thy mercies ſake. 5. For [f] in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who ſhall give thee thanks? 6. I am weary with my groaning, † all the night make I my bed to ſwim: I water my couch with

[a] 1 Chron. xv. 21. Pſ. xii. tit.
[b] Pſal. xxxviii. 1. Jer. x. 24. & xlvi. 28.
[c] Pſal. xxxviii. 8.
[d] Hoſ. vi. 1.
[e] Pſ. xc. 13.
[f] Pſ. xxx. 9. & lxxxviii. 11. & cxv. 17. Iſa. xxxviii. 18.
† Or, every night.

with my tears. 7. [g] Mine eye is conſumed becauſe of grief; it waxeth old becauſe of all mine enemies.

g Job. xvii. 7. Pſ. xxxi. 9. & xxxviii. 10. Lam. v. 17.

v. 1—7. The direction to the chief muſician is on Neginoth upon Sheminith, which is thought to be a harp of eight ſtrings, and to accompany the voice. The pſalm itſelf opens with a mournful muſe, and beſpeaks the deep affliction of both body and ſoul, and David's humble abaſement before God under his chaſtiſing rod.

1. He repreſents his moving caſe to the Father of mercies, and the God of all conſolation. I am weak, worn down with pining ſickneſs; my bones are vexed with tormenting pain; and, above all my other griefs, my ſoul is ſore vexed alſo, the heavieſt burden under which I groan. Note, (1.) The greateſt kings, and the holieſt ſaints of God, are equally expoſed with others to the ſufferings of humanity. (2.) Bodily ſickneſs is doubly afflictive, when attended with a wounded ſpirit. (3.) Whatever our burdens are, it is our wiſdom and only relief to caſt them on the Lord.

2. His ſorrows were as his anguiſh great: his head was waters, and his eyes a fountain of tears, which ran down day and night; and when the ſource was exhauſted, and the dry eye-ball ſtiffened in the ſocket, his groaning continued, till, weary and exhauſted with grief, he was ready to pine away. Note, (1.) They who have ever felt a conſcience wounded with the ſenſe of ſin, are no ſtrangers to the Pſalmiſt's tears. (2.) When our ſin hath been great, our ſorrow will be great alſo. (3.) The deareſt ſaints of God have been often moſt deeply exerciſed. Let not any faithful ſoul be diſcouraged under his ſuffering, and ſay, Is there any ſorrow like unto my ſorrow? for behold, greater is here.

3. He importunately cries for relief at the hands of his merciful God. Rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure: however heavily thou art pleaſed to lay thy hand upon me, let it be a father's rod, and not in wrath, but for correction: all my other anguiſh I can bear, but thy diſpleaſure is intolerable. Have mercy on me, forgive all that I have done amiſs; heal me, the pain and ſickneſs of my body, but much more the wounds of my ſoul, which ſtink and are corrupt through my fooliſhneſs, with the precious balm of thy grace. How long, Lord, ſhall I cry before thou heareſt me? Return; thy abſence is more than I can bear; lift up the light of thy countenance to chear my diſconſolate heart. Deliver my ſoul from its ſorrow, and all thoſe enemies ſpiritual and temporal that long for my deſtruction. Oh ſave me, for thou alone, Lord, art able to help in this my time of greateſt need. I own, I have no title to demand, no deſert to plead, but for thy mercies ſake, as an act of ſovereign grace, and undeſerved favour. Note, (1.) The removal of a ſenſe of God's diſpleaſure for ſin, is much more earneſtly deſired by the humble ſoul, than the abatement or relief of his ſufferings. (2.) If God ever regard us, we muſt remember it is not for any cauſe in us thereunto moving, either our ſufferings or our ſorrows, but purely of his own great mercy in Jeſus Chriſt. (3.) Though we may be with entire reſignation giving ourſelves up to God, we are not forbidden to pray to be healed. (4.) As long as we are encouraged under our moſt acute ſufferings to pray, we are ſure to be ſupported.

4. He ſtrengthens his requeſts with an argument drawn from God's glory, which is the moſt prevailing plea: In death no man remembereth thee; in the grave who ſhall give thee thanks? I cannot there offer thee praiſe for my recovery, nor encourage others by my experience to truſt upon thee. I can there no more ſerve thee in my generation, or lead the ſong of worſhip in thy ſanctuary. Note, Though to depart and be with Chriſt is far better; yet, for God's glory, and the church's good, the ſaints of God who are ripeſt for heaven may deſire to live.

8. [h] Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity: for the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping. 9. The LORD hath heard my ſupplication; the LORD will receive my prayer. 10. Let all mine enemies be aſhamed and ſore vexed: [i] let them return and be aſhamed ſuddenly.

h Pſ. cxix. 115. Luke xiii. 27.

i Pſ. lvi. 9.

v. 8—10. Whilſt he is ſpeaking, God hears and anſwers; and therefore, ere he riſes from his knees, the language of triumphant faith breaks forth, and, as the ſun diſpels the darkneſs, light and gladneſs return to his afflicted ſoul.

1. He is divinely aſſured, that his prayers and tears had not been diſregarded; that his requeſts are granted; and ſtill a throne of grace open for every farther petition, with full confidence of ſucceſs: the Lord hath heard my preſent, and will hear my future prayer. Note, (1.) They who ſow in prayers and tears, will aſſuredly reap in joy. (2.) He who once hath anſwered us, as the God that heareth prayer, we may aſſuredly gather, will be the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever.

2. He bids the workers of iniquity depart, confounded whilſt they beheld the happy change: or he expreſſes his own holy purpoſe to keep himſelf henceforth from the ways of the deſtroyer, and to have no fellowſhip with the ungodly, v. 8. Note, (1.) Every mercy we receive from God ſhould engage our hearts nearer to him, and bind us firmer in his bleſſed ſervice. (2.) They who would keep from the ways of evil, muſt ſeparate themſelves from the company of ſinners.

3. He predicts the dreadful and ſudden deſtruction of thoſe who troubled and triumphed over him in his diſtreſs, v. 10. Shame at their diſappointment, and vexation at his proſperity, ſhall cover them: they ſhall return from perſecuting him, confounded at his deliverance, ſo unlike what they looked for, and ſudden judgment overtake them in this world, or everlaſting confuſion be their portion in the world to come. Note, (1.) The devices of the enemies of God's people, ſpiritual and temporal, ſhall be ſurely diſappointed. (2.) They who return not now to God in penitence, muſt ſhortly depart from him into everlaſting burnings.

PSALM VII.

David, under the unjuſt aſperſions of his enemies, lodges here his appeal with God. 1. He confidently in prayer applies to him, ver. 1, 2. 2. He maintains his innocence, ver. 3—5. 3. He prays to God to plead his cauſe againſt his perſecutors, ver. 6—9. 4. He expreſſes his confidence in God that he would do ſo, ver. 10—16. 5. He promiſes to give God the glory of his deliverance, ver. 17. In this David was a type of Chriſt, who was himſelf, and ſtill is in his members, thus injured, but will certainly be righted at laſt.

¶ [a] Shiggaion of David, which he ſang unto the LORD, [b] concerning the † words of Cuſh the Benjamite.

a Hab. iii. 1.

b 2 Sam. xvi. 7.

† Or, buſineſs.

1. O LORD my God, in thee do I put my truſt: ſave me from all them that perſecute me, and deliver me. 2. [c] Leſt he tear my ſoul like a lion, renting it in pieces, [d] while there is none to deliver. 3. O LORD my God, [e] if I have done this; if there be iniquity in my hands: 4. If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me: (yea, [f] I have delivered him that without cauſe is mine enemy) 5. Let the enemy perſecute my ſoul, and take it, yea, let him tread down my life upon the earth, and lay mine honour in the duſt. Selah. 6. [g] Ariſe, O LORD, in thine anger, lift up thyſelf, becauſe of the rage of mine enemies: and [h] awake for me to the judgment that thou haſt commanded. 7. So ſhall the congregation of the people compaſs thee about: for their ſakes therefore return thou on high. 8. The LORD ſhall judge the people: [i] judge me, O LORD, [k] according to my righteouſneſs, and according to mine integrity that is in me. 9. Oh let the wickedneſs of the wicked come to an end, but eſtabliſh the juſt: for [l] the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.

c Iſa. xxxviii. 13.

d Deut. xxxii. 36.

e 2 Sam. xvi. 7, 8.

f 1 Sam. xxiv. 7. & xxvi. 9.

g Pſ. xciv. 2.

h Pſ. xliv. 23.

i Pſ. xliii. 1.

k Pſ. xviii. 20. & xxxv. 24.

l 1 Sam. xvi. 7. 1 Chron. xxviii. 9. Pſ. cxxxix. 1. Jer. xi. 20. & xvii. 10. & xx. 12. Rev. ii. 23.

v. 1—9. The perſon on whoſe account this pſalm was penned, is called Cuſh, a Benjamite; probably one of Saul's courtiers, who maligned David to his maſter. Many ſuppoſe Saul himſelf is meant under this name. Shiggaion is variouſly interpreted; from Hab. iii. 1. it ſhould ſeem ſome muſical inſtrument, for which this hymn was ſet. The general tenor of it expreſſes David's recourſe to God, under the reviling of his enemies, and the comfort and ſupport thence derived.

1. The pſalm opens with his profeſſed dependance upon God. O Lord, my God, in whom I have a ſure intereſt, and who art bound to me in the tendereſt relation, and the ſure bonds of an everlaſting covenant, in thee do I put my truſt, at all times, and under all difficulties. Note, They who thus make God their refuge, can never be moved.

2. He cries to God to ſave him from the malice of his perſecutors; ſtrong and cruel as a lion, they threatned to tear him in pieces; and he, without help in himſelf, or a friend to protect him. Note, When we are weak, then are we ſtrong; the more all human dependance is removed, the more ſhall we be led to truſt on God alone.

3. He appeals to God for the innocence there was in him, reſpecting the things laid to his charge. Far from deſigning Saul's death, when he lived at peace in his court, as he was accuſed, he had ſhown the greateſt tenderneſs for his life, even after Saul's cauſeleſs enmity had appeared, when God delivered him into his hand at the cave of Engedi, 1 Sam. xxiv. 4. and again, 1 Sam. xxvi. 12. evidences of his innocence, which even Saul acknowledged. But if guilt were yet found in him, he imprecates the ſevereſt vengeance from his crueleſt enemies; content that God ſhould give him up into their hand, to ſuffer the loſs of honour, fame, and even life itſelf. Note, (1.) It is an unſpeakable comfort, under the world's malignant aſperſions, to be conſcious of our own innocence. (2.) However wicked men may ſtrive to blacken us, we have a God to appeal to, the protector of the injured; and he will make our righteouſneſs ſhortly appear as the light, and our juſt dealings as the noon day.

4. Having lodged his appeal with God, he looks up to him as the righteous judge, and calls upon him to ariſe in anger againſt the furiouſneſs of his enemies, and enable him to aſcend the throne he had commanded him to fill, to the confuſion of his adverſaries. This requeſt he urges, [1.] For the people's ſake, v. 7. who, when his ſufferings ſhould end, his enemies be defeated, and his throne eſtabliſhed, would have the divine worſhip more encouraged among them under his government, and compaſs God's altar with ſongs of praiſe for his deliverance. [2.] For the glory of his own righteouſneſs, v. 8. when he ſhould thus appear the condemner of the wicked, and the juſtifier of the upright.

5. He prays, Oh let the wickedneſs of the wicked come to an end, either by their converſion, and forſaking their evil ways, or by the final coming of that bleſſed kingdom, where ſin can never enter: but eſtabliſh the juſt, or the righteous man, meaning himſelf, and every faithful ſoul, that in the righteouſneſs of his divine ſurety ſtands juſtified before God. He begs that God would eſtabliſh them in every divine and gracious diſpoſition; that they may be ſtrengthened with might in the inner man, and enabled to perſevere unſhaken: and in confidence of this he reſts ſatisfied; for the righteous God trieth the hearts and the reins, diſcovers his enemies through every veil of hypocriſy, and knoweth them that are his, though compaſſed with infirmity, and is convinced of their ſimplicity and godly ſincerity before him. Note, It is a bleſſed thing when we can with comfort regard the righteous God as the ſearcher of hearts.

10. † My defence is of God, which ſaveth the upright in heart. 11. ‡ God judgeth the righteous, and God is angry with the wicked every day. 12. If he turn not, he will [m] whet his ſword; he hath bent his bow, and made it ready. 13. He hath alſo prepared for him the inſtruments of death; [n] he ordaineth his arrows againſt the perſecutors. 14. Behold, [o] he travaileth with iniquity, and hath conceived miſchief, and brought forth falſhood. 15.
§ He made a pit, and digged it, [p] and is fallen into the ditch which he made. 16. [q] His miſchief ſhall return upon his own head, and his violent dealing ſhall come down upon his own pate. 17. [r] I will praiſe the LORD according to his righteouſneſs: and will ſing praiſe to the name of the LORD moſt high.

† Heb. My buckler is upon God.
‡ Or, God is a righteous judge.
[m] Deut. xxxii. 41.
[n] Ibid. 23, 42. Pſ. lxiv. 7.
[o] Job xv. 35. Iſa. lix. 4. Jam. i. 15.
§ Heb. He hath digged a pit.
[p] Eſth. vii. 10. Pſ. ix. 15. & xxxv. 8. & xciv. 23. Prov. v. 22. & xxvi. 27.
[q] 1 Kings ii. 32. Eſth. ix. 25.
[r] Rev. xix. 1, 2.

v. 10—17. The Pſalmiſt having committed his cauſe to God, concludes,

1. His ſalvation ſure. My defence, ſays he, is of God, or, my ſhield is of God: he will cover me as ſafely as under a ſhield from the arrows of my enemies: which ſaveth the upright; they are ſure of his protection; and God judgeth the righteous, is a righteous judge, and therefore they who approve themſelves before him, may be aſſured he will vindicate them from every accuſation. Note, (1.) Out of God's favour there is no ſafety; in it, no danger. (2.) Though our uprightneſs is not the cauſe of our ſalvation, yet it is an earneſt of it. (3.) Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? it is God that juſtifieth them.

2. His enemies deſtruction is certain, unleſs they repent: for God is angry with the wicked every day; he marks their continual provocations, and eſpecially that radical enmity of heart, which is ever working within, to bring forth fruit unto death. If he turn not, he will whet his ſword: God delighteth not in the death of a ſinner; he waiteth to be gracious; however great his provocations, when he returns to God, God will turn from the fierceneſs of his wrath againſt him. How ſhould ſuch goodneſs lead us to repentance! But, if he perſiſt, his ruin lieth at his own door; he hath rejected his own mercies, and muſt periſh in his iniquity. God's glittering ſword is whetting for judgment; the arrow of death is fitting to the ſtring; and all his inſtruments of vengeance ready: and ſhall we deſpiſe the long-ſuffering of our God? Sinner, tremble at thy aggravated guilt, and ſeize the moment which mercy prolongs, leſt ſlighted patience provoke implacable vengeance. Let the perſecutors of God's people eſpecially be warned; on them he will empty his quiver.

3. All the miſchievous devices of the ſinner are vain, and can end but in their own ruin: the conceptions of his deviliſh wiſdom will prove abortive; into the pit he dug for others, himſelf will fall; and all the evil he meditated againſt the innocent recoil upon his own head, and overwhelm him with miſery inſupportable.

4. David concludes with his grateful tribute of praiſe due for theſe righteous acts of the Lord. Every inſtance of ſuch divine interpoſition ſhall miniſter to him conſtant matter for a ſong of thankſgiving to the Lord moſt high. Note, They who, like David, are kept ever truſting, will be, like him, ever praiſing.

PSALM VIII.

This pſalm is a divine meditation on the glory of Chriſt, who is the ſubject of it, Heb. ii. 6—8. God diſplays much of his glory in the works of creation and providence; but it is in redemption he appears moſt tranſcendently excellent, and worthy our higheſt adoration. We have here, the glory of God manifeſt, 1. In making the weakeſt inſtruments ſerve the grandeſt purpoſes, ver. 1, 2. 2. In the works of creation, ver. 3, 4. 3. In the incarnation of Jeſus, and the mediatorial kingdom delegated to him, ver. 5—9.

¶ To the chief muſician [a] upon Gittith,
A pſalm of David.

[a] Pſ. lxxxi. & lxxxiv. tit.

1. O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who haſt ſet [b] thy glory above the heavens. 2. [c] Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings haſt thou ordained ſtrength, becauſe of thine enemies, that thou mighteſt ſtill [d] the enemy and the avenger.

[b] Pſ. cxiii. 4. & cxlviii. 13.
[c] Mat. xi. 25. & xxi. 16. 1 Cor. i. 27.
[d] Pſ. xliv. 16.

v. 1, 2. Gittith ſeems to be the inſtrument for which this pſalm was ſet. It opens with the Pſalmiſt's high admiration of the glory of God: O Lord our God. It is a pleaſing taſk to contemplate the divine excellencies, and his wondrous works, when we can claim an intereſt in him as our God, for then all things are ours. How excellent is thy name in all the earth! bright is the diſplay of glory which appears in all the works of creation and providence throughout the earth; but brighter far this glory ſhines in the eternal world, where God hath fixed his radiant throne, and angels and archangels adore him, yet cannot reach his praiſe, who hath ſet his glory above the heavens. Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings haſt thou ordained ſtrength: by the weak things of this world, ſuch as were the apoſtles and preachers of the goſpel, whom men deſpiſed as babes and ſucklings, hath God ſent forth his mighty word, which is the power of God unto ſalvation; becauſe of thine enemies; either to confound them, as in the temple, when the infants lifted up their voices in Hoſannas to the confuſion and condemnation of the Scribes and Phariſees; or to convert them, when, unable to reſiſt the powerful evidence, they ſhould fall down and give glory to God. That thou mighteſt ſtill the enemy and the avenger, or, cauſe him to ceaſe; that is to ſay, the power of Satan, and his kingdom upon earth, whoſe arm is broken, and the prey of captive ſouls taken from his priſon, which he can no more recover. Note, (1.) The kingdom of Chriſt ſhall finally be triumphant, however deſpicable its profeſſors may now appear in the eyes of a carnal world. (2.) The weaker and more helpleſs we are before our ſpiritual foes, the more is God's glory exalted in bruiſing Satan under our feet, and making us, through faith, more than conquerors.

3. When I [e] conſider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the ſtars which thou haſt ordained;
4. [f] What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the ſon of man, that thou viſiteſt him? 5. For thou haſt made him a little lower than the angels, and [g] haſt crowned him with glory and honour. 6. [h] Thou madeſt him to have dominion over the works of thy hands;
[i] thou haſt put all things under his feet: 7. † All ſheep and oxen, yea, and the beaſts of the field: 8. The fowl of the air, and the fiſh of the ſea, and whatſoever paſſeth through the paths of the ſeas. 9. O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!

[e] Pſ. cxi. 2.
[f] Job vii. 17. Pſ. cxliv. 3. Heb. ii. 6.
[g] Eph. i. 21.
[h] Mat. xxviii. 18.
[i] 1 Cor. xv. 27. Heb. ii. 8.
† Heb. Flocks and oxen, all of them.

v. 3—9. The great condeſcenſions of the Divine Grace to man ſtill further awaken the Pſalmiſt's wonder, love, and praiſe; eſpecially the glories of the man Chriſt Jeſus, ſo highly exalted for us men, and for our ſalvation.

When I conſider the heavens, that ſtupendous frame, the work of thy fingers, ſo curiouſly formed, ſo aſtoniſhingly magnificent; the moon and ſtars, with all the various bodies, that with ſuch order revolve in their ſeveral ſpheres, which thou haſt ordained, or prepared, ſuited and admirably diſpoſed to anſwer the uſes for which they were intended; what is man, Enoſh, miſerable man, that thou art mindful of him? either man in general, to whom in a ſenſe all that is ſaid may be applicable; for whoſe benefit the heavens are ſpread abroad, the luminaries ſhine; in nature, next to angelical; in dignity, the head of this lower world; to whom all creatures are put in ſubjection, and for whoſe ſupport, uſe, and comfort, they are given. Well might this awaken our admiration, and make us aſtoniſhed at the greatneſs of the gift; but greater far is the glory put upon man, and to which the Apoſtle, Heb. ii. 6. applies theſe words. God hath been ſo mindful of man as to take the human nature into an hypoſtatical union with the divine, in the perſon of his own Son, who now is become the Son of man, and thou viſiteſt him with the moſt unbounded favour and regard, giving the ſpirit without meaſure unto him, and anointing him with oil of gladneſs above his fellows. For thou haſt made him a little lower than the Elohim; by the aſſumption of the human nature, Chriſt is inferior to the Father as touching his manhood; or angels, as the apoſtle interprets the word, Chriſt having taken that nature, which in excellence is inferior to the angelical, and particularly as ſubject to death and miſery: a little, not ſo much reſpecting the degree as the duration; but a little while, that is to ſay, during his days of humiliation, eſpecially when he lay in the grave, and experienced that loweſt abaſement of humanity. And all this was God's work, whatever inſtruments were uſed in the humiliation of Jeſus, to ſet forth his own glory, and magnify his grace towards the ſons of men. Thou haſt crowned him with glory and honour, by raiſing him from the dead, and ſetting him on the mediatorial throne on high. Thou madeſt him to have dominion over the work of thy hands, all things are committed into his hand, in heaven and in earth; and he is above all, King of kings, and Lord of lords. Thou haſt put all things under his feet, not only the affairs of this ſublunary world, and the inferior creatures here ſpecified, now again recovered for his people's benefit and uſe, but angels in heaven, and devils in hell, all own his ſovereign ſway; and men, whether his loyal ſubjects, who enjoy his protection, or his enemies, who muſt lick the duſt. Such an exaltation of our divine Lord, fills the heart with the deepeſt acknowledgment to that gracious God, who thus viſited us in our low eſtate, and above all other manifeſtations of his glory and grace, excites our higheſt admiration. O Lord, our Lord, now in the incarnate Jeſus eſpecially related to us, how excellent is thy name in all the earth. Note, (1.) The more we behold of the viſible glories around us, the more ſhould our hearts be led to the contemplation of the glorious author. (2.) Redemption will ever furniſh ſources of wonder and praiſe. Indeed the more we ſearch, the more we ſhall find this ocean unfathomable; and after endleſs ages ſpent in the delightful taſk, ſtill cry, O the length, and breadth, and depth, and heighth of love that paſſeth knowledge.

PSALM IX.

In this pſalm, 1. David praiſeth God for victory over his enemies, ver. 16. 2. He comforts himſelf in the righteous judgment of God, and the protection of his people, ver. 7—10, 18. 3. He prays for freſh matter of praiſe, ver. 13, 14, 19, 20. 4. He rejoices in the final deſtruction of the ungodly, ver. 15—17. And this is very applicable to the kingdom of the Meſſiah, the enemies of which have been in part deſtroyed already, and ſhall be yet more and more, till they all be made his footſtool; which we are to aſſure ourſelves of, that God may have the glory, and we may take the comfort.

¶ To the chief muſician upon Muth-labben,

A pſalm of David.

1. I WILL praiſe thee, O LORD, with my whole heart, I will ſhew forth [a] all thy marvellous works. 2. I will be glad and rejoice in thee: I will ſing praiſe to thy name, O [b] thou moſt High. 3. When mine enemies are turned back, they ſhall fall and periſh at thy preſence. 4. For [c] thou haſt † maintained my right and my cauſe, thou ſatteſt in the throne judging ‡ right. 5. Thou haſt rebuked the heathen, thou haſt deſtroyed the wicked, [d] thou haſt put out their name for ever and ever. 6. ‖ O thou enemy, deſtructions are come to a perpetual end: and thou haſt deſtroyed cities, their memorial is periſhed with them. 7. But [e] the LORD ſhall endure for ever: he hath prepared his throne for judgment. 8. And [f] he ſhall judge the world in righteouſneſs, he ſhall miniſter judgment to the people in uprightneſs. 9. [g] The LORD alſo will be a refuge for the oppreſſed, a refuge [h] in times of trouble. 10. And [i] they that know thy name, will put their truſt in thee: for [k] thou, LORD, haſt not forſaken them that ſeek thee.

[a] Rev. xv. 3.
[b] Pſal. lxxxiii. 18. 1 Tim. i. 17.
[c] Luke xviii. 7, 8.
† Heb. Made my judgment.
‡ Heb. In righteouſneſs.
[d] Prov. x. 7.
‖ Or the deſtructions of the enemy are come, &c. and their cities haſt thou, &c.
[e] Pſal. cii. 12.
[f] Ibid. xcvi. 13. & xcviii. 9.
[g] Pſal. xxxvii. 39. & xlvi. 1. & xci. 2. Iſa. iv. 6.
[h] Heb. iv. 16.
[i] 2 Tim. i. 12.
[k] 2 Tim. iv. 17.

v. 1—10. The occaſion of this pſalm ſeems to be ſome victory obtained over his enemies. Muth-labben is probably the muſical inſtrument which accompanied the voice. He begins,

1. With praiſe and joy, v. 1, 2. His whole heart was engaged; if not in perfection, yet in ſincerity, to ſhew forth God's marvellous works; and all of them, ſo far as his memory could reach, eſpecially the many and ſignal aſſiſtances the moſt High had given him againſt his numerous foes. Note, (1.) In all our ſucceſs, let God have the praiſe. (2.) Whilſt proſperity makes us thankful, our chief joy muſt ſtill be in the God of our mercies. (3.) Since God hath ever proved himſelf the moſt High, no danger ſhould diſtreſs, no enemies diſmay us.

2. He aſcribes the power unto God, v. 3. It was not his own arm, but the preſence and power of the Lord that turned back with confuſion his foes, and ſmote them to the ground. Thus the preſence of Jeſus, John xviii. 6. confounded the band who approached to ſeize him; and when he ſhall ſit on the throne of judgment, before his preſence the ungodly muſt fall and periſh for ever.

3. God's righteouſneſs was herein manifeſted, v. 4. A righteous cauſe God then owned and vindicated; and on this throne of judgment ſtill he ſits, to reſcue thoſe that are oppreſſed with wrong. And hither, under every unjuſt ſentence of man we may ſtill appeal; and though now ſuffering innocence may find no advocate, and unbelief would ſuggeſt that the Lord hath forſaken the earth, the day is at hand when every wrong ſhall be righted, and God appear juſt in his judgments. What a comfort to the ſufferers in the cauſe of God and truth?

4. The triumphs of God over his enemies are recorded; over Goliath and the Philiſtines, whoſe ravages were ſtopped, their army routed, and their cities deſtroyed. And over his ſpiritual foes, Thou haſt rebuked the heathen, by that goſpel that confounded the idolatry of the heathen; thou haſt deſtroyed the wicked, the perſecuting powers of Rome pagan; and as what is purpoſed in the divine counſels, may be regarded as already compleated, the enemy, v. 6. antichriſt, and all his adherents, ſhall periſh together; their ruin ſhall be compleat and final, and their name and memorial be blotted out from under heaven. Note, (1.) Though the wicked proſper for a moment, they are marked for deſtruction. (2.) When God begins, he will make an end. (3.) It is matter of triumph to the people of God, when they ſee the powers of antichriſt breaking, and an earneſt of his final and eternal ruin.

5. He takes comfort from the views of the enduring kingdom, and righteous government of God. When all his foes are fallen, the Lord ſhall endure for ever; he hath prepared his throne for judgment, the great white throne, on which he is ready to appear, and pronounce the eternal ſtate of angels and men. He ſhall judge the world in righteouſneſs, for all judgment is committed unto him; and from his deciſions, as there lies no appeal, ſo ſhall the equity of them be acknowledged by the damned themſelves. The Lord will be a refuge for the oppreſſed, a refuge in times of trouble, and many are the troubles of the righteous within, from corruption, affliction, temptation, deſertion: without, from the ceaſeleſs enmity of the world that lieth in wickedneſs. But bleſſed be God, we have a refuge to fly to in the arms of Jeſus, who is now our preſent help in every time of trouble; and though he may for a time permit our enemy to oppreſs us, ſoon will he appear as our eternal refuge, to lodge us there where the wicked muſt ceaſe from troubling. And they that know thy name, are acquainted experimentally with the gracious promiſes made in the word of truth by Jeſus Chriſt, will put their truſt in thee, though long or ſeverely exerciſed with trials and troubles, will patiently wait to ſee the ſalvation of God; and ſuch will never be diſappointed of their hope, for thou, Lord, haſt not forſaken them that ſeek thee. Never haſt, as the experience of all paſt ages teſtifies, never wilt, as the immutable promiſes that cannot deceive, aſſure us. Happy therefore is the man that putteth his truſt in thee.

11. Sing praiſes to the LORD, which dwelleth in Zion; declare among the people his doings. 12. [l] When he maketh inquiſition for blood, [m] he remembreth them: he forgetteth not the cry of the † humble. 13. Have mercy upon me, O LORD, [n] conſider my trouble which I ſuffer of them that hate me, thou [o] that lifteſt me up from the gates of death: 14. That I may ſhew forth all thy praiſe in the gates of the daughter of Zion: I will rejoice in thy ſalvation. 15. [p] The heathen are ſunk down in the pit that they made: in the net which they hid, is their own foot taken. 16. The LORD is known by the judgment which he executeth: the wicked is ſnared in the work of his own hands. ‡ [q] Higgaion, Selah. 17. The wicked ſhall be turned into hell, and all the nations [r] that forget God. 18. For [s] the needy ſhall not alway be forgotten; the expectation of the poor ſhall not periſh for ever. 19. Ariſe, O LORD, let not man prevail, let the heathen be judged in thy ſight. 20. Put them in fear, O LORD: that the nations may know themſelves to be but men. Selah.

[l] Gen. ix. 5.
[m] Rev. xvi. 6.
† Or afflicted.
[n] Lam. i. 9.
[o] 2 Cor. i. 10.
[p] Pſal. xvii. 15.
‡ i. e. Meditation.
[q] Pſal. xix. 14. & xcii. 3.
[r] Pſal. l. 22.
[s] Ibid. xii. 5.

v. 11—20. David here proceeds,

1. To engage others with him in the delightful work of praiſe. Sing praiſes unto the Lord which dwelleth in Zion, the place where the ſymbols of his conſtant preſence reſted: declare among the people his doings, his diſplays of grace, power, and love towards his choſen. When he maketh inquiſition for blood, the blood of ſaints, ſpilt by the ungodly, and all the evils inflicted on them, he remembreth them; either his ſaints, who, notwithſtanding all their ſufferings, are not forgotten by him, nor a drop of their blood unnoticed: or the wicked, he remembreth their deeds, and will recompenſe them as they deſerve. He forgetteth not the cry of the humble, who, under the chaſtiſing rod, bow down, and renouncing every hope in themſelves, look up to him; though he ſeem not ſometimes to hear their cry, they are not forgotten of him, he will avenge them ſpeedily. Having thus encouraged others to praiſe and truſt him, David,

2. Offers his prayer for the continuance of the mercies he had experienced. His troubles were many; ſometimes he ſeemed brought to the very gates of death, whilſt his enemies purſued him with implacable hatred. And thus ſorely beſet is every faithful ſoul; and often in the apprehenſion of ſenſe, near the borders of the pit, from the prevalence of the powers of darkneſs. But he cries with David, have mercy upon me, and then experiences God's ſupporting hand, thou that lifteſt me up from the gates of death, haſt done ſo from ſpiritual, and wilt from temporal and eternal death. And this is glorioſly applicable to the great Redeemer, for whom God opened the gates of the grave, and lifted him triumphant from the bed of death, as he will alſo do for every believer in the great reſurrection day.

3. Theſe continued mercies would engage his conſtant praiſe in the gates of the daughter of Zion, the church of God, and I will rejoice in thy ſalvation, as compleat, final, and eternal: and ſuch is the ſalvation of Jeſus for all his people, and the juſt matter of their never-ending joys.

4. He foreſees, as Pſal. v. 11, 15. the deſtruction of the ungodly by their own devices; who, when moſt inveterate againſt him, aſſemble only to be broken to pieces, Rev. xvi. 16. xix. 19. At preſent, the wicked often find in the ways of wickedneſs the ruin which attends them, in diſeaſes, poverty, and hereafter hell is ordained for their reception; where all the nations, be they ever ſo great or numerous, who forget God, which is the cauſe of all other wickedneſs, and the ſummit of it, being the atheiſm of the heart, ſhall have their portion in everlaſting burnings. And the Lord is known in the judgment he executeth, the equity of his procedure will be evident, and the multitude of thoſe who periſh will bring no impeachment on his mercy or juſtice, ſince it is the work of their own hands. Higgaion, Selah. Let the ſaints of God conſider and praiſe him for his judgments, and when the ſmoak of the ſinner's torment aſcends, ſay Hallelujah! Rev. xix. 3, 4.

5. He encourages the poor oppreſſed people of God to wait upon him. They ſhall not be forgotten; and though their expectations be deferred, they ſhall not periſh for ever. Patient hope ſhall ſhortly receive the crown of eternal fruition.

6. He concludes with an urgent call to God, to ariſe, and cut ſhort his work in righteouſneſs. Let not man prevail, my enemies in general, or the man of ſin in particular, Saul; let the heathen be judged in thy ſight, brought to the bar, and receive their final doom. Put them in fear, O Lord, impreſs thy terrors on their conſcience, that they may repent as thoſe who know themſelves ſinful men; or rather confound them with ſuch a panic, that notwithſtanding all their threatnings, they may feel their weakneſs, and know how unequal the conteſt is between an arm of fleſh, and the ſword of omnipotence. Selah. My ſoul, wait thou ſtill on the Lord, and thou ſhalt ſee the ſalvation of God!

PSALM X.

The Septuagint tranſlation joins this pſalm with the ninth, and makes them but one, as it doth the cxv. to the cxiv. and to compleat the number of 150. the cxvi. and the cxlvii. are each divided into two. In this pſalm, David deſcribes, 1. The pride, cruelty, and impiety of the wicked, ver. 1—11. 2. He prays in faith to God to appear in behalf of his people, ver. 12—18. This deſcription of the man of the earth, may well be ſuppoſed to refer to the man of ſin, to whom the characters here mentioned eminently agree, and whoſe deſolations are determined at the appearing of our great God and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

1. WHY ſtandeſt thou afar off, O LORD? why hideſt thou thyſelf in times of trouble? 2.
The wicked [a] in his pride doth perſecute the poor: [b] let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.
3. For the wicked boaſteth of his heart's deſire, [c] and † bleſſeth the covetous, whom the LORD abhorreth.
4. The wicked through the pride of his countenance [d] will not ſeek after God: ‡ [e] God is not in all his thoughts.
5. His ways are always grievous; [f] thy judgments are far above out of his ſight: as for all his enemies, [g] he puffeth at them. 6. He hath ſaid in his heart, [h] I ſhall not be moved: for I ſhall never be in adverſity. 7. [i] His mouth is full of curſing, and deceit, and fraud: under his tongue is miſchief and [k] vanity. 8. He ſitteth in the lurking-places of the villages: [l] in the ſecret places doth he murder the innocent: [m] his eyes are privily ſet againſt the poor. 9. [n] He lieth in wait ſecretly as a lion in his den: [o] he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch the poor when he draweth him into his net. 10. He croucheth and humbleth himſelf, that the poor may fall
‖ by his ſtrong ones. 11. He hath ſaid in his heart, God hath forgotten: [p] he hideth his face, [q] he will never ſee it.

[a] Iſa. x. 13.
[b] Pſal. vii. 15, 16. & ix. 15, 16. Prov. v. 22.
[c] Ibid. xxviii. 4. Rom. i. 32.
† Or the covetous bleſſeth himſelf, he abhors the Lord.
[d] Pſal. xiv. 2.
‡ Or all his thoughts are, there is no God.
[e] Pſal. xiv. 1. & liii. 1.
[f] Prov. xxiv. 7.
[g] Pſal. xii. 5.
[h] Rev. xviii. 7.
[i] Rom. iii. 14.
[k] Pſal. xii. 2.
[l] Hab. iii. 14.
[m] Pſal. xvii. 11.
[n] Ibid. 12.
[o] Mic. vii. 2.
‖ Or in his ſtrong parts.
[p] Job xxii. 13. Pſal. lxxiii. 11. & xciv. 7.
[q] Ezek. viii. 12. & ix. 9.

v. 1—11. Two things the pſalmiſt complains of,

1. The diſtance of God from him, and the hiding of his face in the times of trouble, when moſt he needed the light of his countenance to chear and comfort him. Note, (1.) The withdrawing of God's gracious preſence, is one of the heavieſt burdens of a believer's heart. (2.) The greateſt ſaints uſually undergo the ſevereſt exerciſes of their faith; without are fightings, within fears. (3.) If we are at any time left in a ſtate of darkneſs, and deadneſs, it becomes us to enquire if there be not a cauſe, and whether it is not for the correction of our unfaithfulneſs.

2. The prevalence of the wicked, whoſe character in ſtrong and ſtriking colours he ſets forth. Their general character is The wicked, and the various branches of it are reckoned up. [1.] He is proud, v. 2. this is the fruitful ſtock, from whence all evil ſprings. [2.] A perſecutor: when man vainly conceits himſelf the ſtandard of all that is wiſe, then to diſſent from his opinion becomes a heinous offence, and the poor are perſecuted; the poor in ſpirit, as well as thoſe whoſe worldly circumſtances expoſe them more eaſily to oppreſſion: are burned, ſo ſome tranſlate it; for thus have many ſaints and martyrs finiſhed their glorious teſtimony. Let them be taken in the devices they have imagined, or they ſhall be taken, either it is a prayer that the wicked may meet their juſt doom, or an intimation of their ſucceſsful progreſs in perſecuting the ſaints of God, who ſeem for a time given up into their hands. [3.] A boaſter, v. 3. becauſe he ſeems for a while to proſper, he impiouſly concludes the day is his own. [4.] Covetous: the friend of the worldling, commending his parſimony as prudence, calling his idolatrous attachment to the world minding the main chance, and counting thoſe happy who have their portion in this life, whom God abhors. [5.] Prayerleſs: He will not ſeek after God, which is among the ſureſt marks of an impenitent heart. [6.] Careleſs about God, or religion, leaving him far above out of his ſight, and never concerning himſelf whether he be pleaſed or diſpleaſed, for God is not in all his thoughts; or atheiſtical, as it may be rendered; there is no God, ſay all his thoughts. [7.] Diſobedient: His ways are always grievous to God and man, being a conſtant violation of his duties to both. [8.] Impenitent: Thy judgments are far above out of his ſight, he pays no more regard to the ſtrokes of God's vengeance, than to the command of his law. [9.] Inſolent: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them, defying and deſpiſing all his foes, as if able to cruſh them with the breath of his lips, as is ſeen in the anathemas of antichriſt. [10.] Secure: he hath ſaid in his heart, I ſhall not be moved: for I ſhall never be in adverſity, notwithſtanding all the Divine threatnings are againſt him, Rev. xvii. 7. [11.] Profane: his mouth is full of curſing, oaths and blaſphemies are in in his ordinary converſation. [12.] Treacherous: full of deceit and fraud, he ſticks at no lie to gain his purpoſe, and lays it down as a maxim, that no faith is to be kept with thoſe he brands as hereticks. [13.] Heretical: under his tongue is miſchief and vanity, falſe and damnable doctrines, that, like the ſerpent's poiſon, corrupt the ſoul; whilſt thoſe who follow them are not aware of their vanity, and that there is a lie in their right hand. [14.] Bloody-minded: the innocent are murdered, v. 8. for as a lion ſecretly he lies in wait to deſtroy. Thus corrupters ſeek to enſnare the unſuſpicious, and eſpecially the emiſſaries of the man of ſin labour to delude and deſtroy the ſouls of men. [15.] Hypocritical: making the faireſt ſhews of humility and kindneſs, in order, as the crouching lion, to ſeize more ſurely his prey; for there is no meanneſs to which pride will not ſtoop to compaſs its ends. And thus he that calls himſelf God upon earth, annexes to his boaſting that humbling title of a ſervant of ſervants. [16.] Blaſphemous: he hath ſaid in his heart, God hath forgotten, he hideth his face, he will never ſee it, which is in effect denying God's being, as it robs him of his omniſcience, truth, and holineſs. And this is all the miſerable ſupport, the hopeleſs hope of the wicked; for if there be a God that taketh notice of the concerns of men, then his ruin is certain, and his damnation inevitable. Let theſe characters be well pondered; wherever they are found, there the eternal wrath of God abides.

12. [r] Ariſe, O LORD, O God, lift up thine hand: forget not the † humble. 13. [s] Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? he hath ſaid in his heart, Thou wilt not require it. 14. Thou haſt ſeen it, for thou beholdeſt miſchief and ſpite to requite it with thy hand: the poor [t] committeth himſelf unto thee, [u] thou art the helper of the fatherleſs. 15. [x] Break thou the arm of the wicked,

[r] Pſal. lxxxii. 8.
† Or afflicted.
[s] Pſal. lxxiv. 10.
[t] 2 Tim. i. 12.
[u] Pſal. lxviii. 5. Hoſ. xiv. 3.
[x] Pſal. xxxvii. 17.

ed, and the evil man: ſeek out his wickedneſs till thou find none. 16. [y] The LORD is King for ever and ever:
the heathen are periſhed out of his land. 17. LORD, thou haſt heard the deſire of the humble: [z] thou wilt ‡ prepare their heart, [a] thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear:
18. [b] To judge the fatherleſs and the oppreſſed, that the man of the earth may no more ‖ oppreſs.

y Pſal. cxlv. 13. & cxlvi. 10. Jer. x. 10. Dan. iv. 34. & vi. 26. 1 Tim. i. 17.
z Prov. xvi. 1.
‡ Or eſtabliſh.
a Iſa. lxv. 24.
b Ver. 14.
‖ Or terrify.

v. 12—18. Having repreſented his own diſtreſs, and the wickedneſs of his enemies, David calls upon God to ariſe; not that he ſleeped, and needed to be awaked, but to manifeſt the notice he took of the ungodly, to puniſh them, and the remembrance he had of the humble to protect them. Lift up thy hand, forget not the poor, and high time it was to curb the inſolence of the wicked, now exalted to the higheſt pitch, contemning God, his threatnings, omniſcience, and judgments; he hath ſaid in his heart, thou wilt not require it. Note, Confidence of impunity is the great encouragement to ſin, but how vain is the hope of the hypocrite? Thou haſt ſeen it, for from thine all-ſearching eye nothing is hid, nothing is ſecret; nor is there any darkneſs or ſhadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themſelves; for thou beholdeſt miſchief and ſpite, their inveterate malice againſt thy people, though but conceived in thought, to requite it with thy hand, in puniſhment adequate to their provocations. The poor committeth himſelf unto thee, in confidence he ſhall not be diſappointed, whether for body or ſoul, for time or eternity, he leaveth all his cares in the hands of a faithful creator, for thou art the helper of the fatherleſs; thoſe who like me are deſtitute, and unable to provide for themſelves, find in thee a guardian and protector. Therefore in anſwer to their humble confidence, break thou the arm of the wicked and evil, be they men or devils, diſappoint their devices, and reſtrain their malice; ſeek out his wickedneſs till thou find none, make thorough inquiſition, and leave none of his iniquities unpuniſhed. And this the faithful may aſſuredly expect, for the Lord is king for ever and ever, to protect his loyal ſubjects, to deſtroy his rebellious foes, and this for ever and ever; his puniſhments and rewards are both everlaſting. Therefore the heathen are periſhed out of the land; by David's victories they were expelled from Canaan; by the more glorious victories of the ſon of David, not a Canaanite ſhall be ſhortly left in the believer's heart; and when the Lord Jeſus ſhall appear, to put a final period to the kingdom of antichriſt, and reign over his ſaints gloriouſly, not one ſinner ſhall be ſuffered to have a place in that new heaven and earth, wherein dwelleth righteouſneſs. Lord, thou haſt heard the deſire of the humble: the ſecret prayers, which ariſe inwardly in the heart, God notices before the mouth ſpeaks, and grants the requeſt of the humble. Thou wilt prepare their heart, pouring out upon them a ſpirit of ſupplication, and teaching them how to pray; or confirm their heart, enable them to truſt, and not be afraid. Thou wilt cauſe thine ear to hear, thou haſt, and thou wilt continue to do ſo; ever attentive to the prayers of thy people, and ready to give more than they are able to aſk or think. To judge the fatherleſs and oppreſſed, to plead their cauſe, and reſcue them from wrong; that the man of the earth may oppreſs no more, that wicked men in general, and the perſecuting antichriſtian power alluded to in particular, may be utterly and finally deſtroyed, in the day when the glorious angel ſhall proclaim, Επεσεν επεσε Βαϐυλων, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, and Jeſus ſhall compleat the ſalvation of his people, and put all their enemies and his for ever under their feet. Well may every faithful ſoul with eager expectation cry, Lord, how long?

PSALM XI.

David, in this pſalm, repels the temptation which his fearful friends beſet him with, to ſhake his confidence in God, adviſing him to fly his country, to avoid Saul's purſuit. 1. He tells what the temptation was, ver. 1—3. 2. He repels it with the conſideration of God's love to the righteous, and his wrath kept in ſtore for the wicked, ver. 4—7.

¶ To the chief muſician,

A pſalm of David.

About 1060.

1. IN the LORD put I my truſt: [a] how ſay ye to my ſoul, Flee as a bird † to [b] your mountain. 2.
For lo [c] the wicked bend their bow, [d] they make ready their arrow upon the ſtring: that they may ‡ privily ſhoot at the upright in heart. 3. If [d] the foundations be deſtroyed, what can the righteous do?

a 1 Sam. xxvi. 19.
† Or from.
b 1 Sam. xxiii. 14.
c Pſal. lxiv. 3, 4.
‡ Heb. In darkneſs.
d Pſal. lxxv. 3 & lxxxii. 5.

v. 1—3. Temptation and prayer brighten the chriſtian's ſoul; none were ever more exerciſed with the one, or abundant in the other, than the ſon of Jeſſe. We have him here,

1. Expreſſing his confidence in God, as an anſwer to the temptation ſuggeſted to him. In the Lord put I my truſt, not in any human contrivances, nor human help, but ſolely on him, whoſe faithfulneſs and truth ſhall be my ſhield and buckler. Note, Fixed and abiding faith in God, like an anchor, ſure and ſteadfaſt, keeps the ſoul unmoved in every ſtorm.

2. Repelling the temptation ſuggeſted to him by his fearful friends. How ſay ye to my ſoul, flee as a bird to your mountain, to ſome place of ſafety from Saul's attempt, or from his mountain, from the mountain where he ſheltered himſelf in Judea, to ſome more diſtant country. For lo! the wicked bend their bow, Saul, thy avowed enemy; they make ready the arrow upon the ſtring, that they may privily ſhoot at the upright in heart, at thee, innocent as thou art, and thy friends who adhere to thee; and all attempts to plead againſt ſuch unreaſonable men, are vain: for if the foundations are deſtroyed of all equity and upright adminiſtration, what can the righteous do? there is no hope of redreſs, and innocence muſt ſuffer. Note, (1.) Our soreſt temptations come as often from our friends as foes. (2.) Uprightneſs is no protection from perſecution; the moſt blameleſs characters muſt expect in the world to meet the greateſt malignity. No marvel: they teſtify of the world, that its deeds are evil.

4. [e] The LORD is in his holy temple; the LORD's throne is in heaven: [f] his eyes behold, [g] his eye-lids try the children of men. 5. The LORD trieth the righteous:
but the wicked, and him that loveth violence, his ſoul hateth. 6. [h] Upon the wicked he ſhall rain † ſnares, fire and brimſtone, and an ‡ horrible tempeſt: [i] this ſhall be the portion of their cup. 7. For [k] the righteous LORD loveth righteouſneſs, his countenance doth behold the upright.

e Hab. ii. 20.
f Pſal. xxxiv. 15, 16. & lxvi. 7.
g Pſal. vii. 9.
h Gen. xix. 24. Ezek. xxxviii. 22.
† Or quick burning coals.
‡ Or burning.
i Pſal. lxxv. 8. Ezek. xxiii. 33, 34.
k Pſ. xlv. 7.

v. 4—7. The Pſalmiſt ſuggeſts here the ſolid grounds on which his truſt was founded, in oppoſition to all unbelieving fears.

The Lord is in his holy temple, high and lifted up, able to ſee and to defeat the councils of the wicked: the Lord's throne is in heaven, a throne of grace for all the needy ſupplicants; a throne of juſtice, for all who are oppreſſed with wrong; a throne of judgment, to condemn and ſentence the wicked to his deſerved puniſhment. His eyes behold, he is acquainted with all the difficulties and diſtreſſes of his ſuffering people; his eyelids try the children of men, piercing the ſecret receſſes of their boſoms, and beholding every device conceived againſt his choſen ones; and therefore having ſuch a guardian, they may contentedly truſt him. For the Lord trieth the righteous, puts them in the furnace of affliction, not to conſume, but purify them, to ſtrengthen their faith, exerciſe their patience, and make his great love more known to them. But the wicked, and him that loveth violence, his ſoul hateth; however at preſent they may ſeem proſperous, and not plagued like other men, there is a lowring cloud over their head, ready to burſt in an eternal ſtorm. The day is near, even at the door, when upon the wicked, thoſe who perſiſt in their iniquities, and die as they live, ſervants of corruption, he ſhall rain ſnares, fire and brimſtone, and a horrible tempeſt; ſudden as a ſnare it ſhall ſeize them, and horrible, yea infinitely more horrible than that ſtorm of vengeance which broke upon the devoted cities of Sodom and Gomorrah ſhall this tempeſt of Divine wrath overtake them; the ſcorching fire conſuming the body, curſt only with immortality to be tormented, and furious blaſts of his diſpleaſure beating upon his guilty ſoul, with anguiſh unutterable and eternal. Read, ſinner, and tremble, for this is the portion of thy cup. The ſweet draughts of ſin that now intoxicate thee, will put into thy hand this cup of trembling, to be thy portion for ever and for ever. For the righteous Lord loveth righteouſneſs, and delights to manifeſt it by ſuch exemplary puniſhment on the ſinner, and protection of thoſe, who from a divine principle of faith and love, walk in holineſs before him. His countenance doth behold the upright, he regards them with the tokens of his favour, lifts up now the light of his countenance to comfort and ſupport them, and will bring them to that beatific viſion, where in glory they ſhall ſee him face to face. Happy the people that are in ſuch a caſe!

PSALM XII.

David in this pſalm complains to God of the treachery of his falſe friends, and the inſolence of his ſworn enemies. 1. He begs God to help him, ver. 1, 2. 2. He foretells the flatterer's doom, ver. 3, 4. 3. He aſſures us that God will preſerve his people in the worſt of times, ver. 5—8. And this pſalm, in all bad times, may ſtill afford comfort and ſtrength to every godly man.

¶ To the chief muſician [a] upon Sheminith,

A pſalm of David.

a Pſal. vi. Title.

1. † HELP, LORD, for [b] the godly man ceaſeth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men. 2. [c] They ſpeak vanity every one with his neighbour:

† Or ſave.
b Iſa. lvii. 1. Mic. vii. 2.
c Pſal. x. 7.

bour: [d] with flattering lips, and with ‡ a double heart do they ſpeak.

[d] Pſ. xxviii. 3. Jer. ix. 4, 5, 8.
‡ Heb. a heart, and a heart.

v. 1, 2. It hath been the juſt complaint of God's ſaints in every age, how few faithful could be found. David here with deep concern bewails it; and ſince he could find ſo few like-minded with himſelf, whilſt in general all purſued the ways of ſin and vanity, he flies to God for help. Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaſeth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men. Bad times indeed, when piety towards God is decayed, and honeſty to men ceaſes; when all ſeek their own, not the things which be of Jeſus Chriſt. They ſpeak vanity every one with his neighbour, or lies: with flattering lips, and with a double heart do they ſpeak. Hypocrites, who by fair ſpeeches deceive the unwary, profeſſing to ſerve them, but meaning themſelves. Theſe cannot but be perilous days, and we have need earneſtly to cry to God, Save us from the abounding iniquity in the world.

3. The LORD ſhall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue [e] that ſpeaketh proud things. 4. Who have ſaid, With our tongue will we prevail, our lips are our own: Who is lord over us? 5. For the oppreſſion of the poor, for the ſighing of the needy, [f] now will I ariſe, (ſaith the LORD) I will ſet him in ſafety from him [g] that † puffeth at him. 6. [h] The words of the LORD are pure words: [i] as ſilver tried in a furnace of earth, purified ſeven times. 7. Thou ſhalt keep them, O LORD, thou ſhalt preſerve ‡ them from this generation for ever. 8. The wicked walk on every ſide, when the vileſt men are exalted.

[e] Dan. vii. 8, 25.
[f] Iſa. xxxiii. 10.
[g] Pſ. x. 5.
† Or lays ſnares for him.
[h] Pſ. xix. 9.
[i] Pſ. xviii. 30. & cxix. 140. Prov. xxx. 5.
‡ Heb. him, i. e. every one of them.

v. 3—8. What David prays for, his faith ſees ready to be accompliſhed. The Lord ſhall cut off all flattering lips, by judgments from the earth, and give them ſhortly their portion with liars in the burning lake, and the tongue that ſpeaketh proud things. None ſo high but God can humble them, his ſword ſhall ſmite all the children of pride. Note, Pride will have a fall; the ſinner muſt either fall low before a throne of grace, to ſupplicate pardon, or deep into the belly of hell, where a drop of water will be wanting to cool a flaming tongue. The character of the proud is here deſcribed, Who have ſaid, With our tongues will we prevail; by eloquence carry the cauſe againſt truth and juſtice; or, as if they need but ſpeak the word and it is done. Such high conceits does pride generate. Our lips are our own: Who is Lord over us? caſting off the government of God, and deifying themſelves, as if bound to give account of none of their words, and renouncing the authority of the Almighty. But they will be diſappointed, there is one who obſerves all the high imaginations, and hard ſpeeches of ungodly ſinners, and will not ſuffer them to paſs with impunity: for in the heighth of their inſolence, God will make bare his arm, and ſhew them to their coſt who is Lord over them. For the oppreſſion of the poor, that groan like Iſrael in Egypt, under the afflictions they endure, and for the ſighing of the needy, now will I ariſe, ſaith the Lord, when the arrogance of the proud is at the heighth, and his people's patience ready to fail; in that critical time he will ariſe to confound the one, to reſcue the other; I will ſet him in ſafety from him that puffeth at him, or breathes out threatning and ſlaughter as Paul, or lays ſnares for him, which ſhall be broken in pieces, and the ſouls of the righteous delivered as a bird from the net of the fowler. Note, God's time is the beſt time, and if we have but faith, he will not fail; for the words of the Lord are pure words, proceeding from the fountain of purity, and therefore can never diſappoint or deceive thoſe who truſt on them; as ſilver tried in a furnace of earth, purified ſeven times, or more precious than the moſt refined ſilver, and pure from all human mixture and adulteration. Thou ſhalt keep them, O Lord, as a promiſe; or it may be read, keep them, O Lord, as a prayer; to wit, the poor and needy, that truſt in thee, from all the power of evil, from the ſnares of the enemy, and from final and total apoſtacy; thou ſhalt preſerve them from this generation for ever; from the wickedneſs of it, that they be not corrupted, and from their perſecutors that they be not deſtroyed, and this for ever; for in all ages, and all places, this promiſe is ſure to all the ſeed. Bleſſed be God we are not in our own keeping, but in ſo much better hands; ſo able to preſerve us falling, and ſo faithful as never to forſake us: we are ſafe therefore, though the wicked walk on every ſide, when the vileſt of men are exalted, have the power and dominion here below: or, as the latter clauſe may be rendered, according to their exaltation ſhall be their vileneſs. They ſhall fall as low in miſery as they have been exalted in dignity, and gloried in iniquity.

PSALM XIII.

In this pſalm we have the deſerted ſoul's caſe and cure. 1. David complains of inward deſertion, and outward oppoſition, ver. 1, 2. 2. He begs of God to conſider his caſe, and comfort him, ver. 3, 4. 3. He aſſures himſelf of an anſwer of peace, and therefore concludes the pſalm with joy and triumph, becauſe he foreſees his deliverance as good as wrought, ver. 5, 6.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. HOW long wilt thou forget me, O LORD, for ever? [a] how long wilt thou hide thy face from me? 2. How long ſhall I take counſel in my ſoul, having ſorrow in my heart daily? how long ſhall mine enemy be exalted over me? 3. Conſider, and hear me, O LORD my God: [b] lighten mine eyes, [c] leſt I ſleep the ſleep of death; 4. [d] Leſt mine enemy ſay, I have prevailed againſt him; and thoſe that trouble me, rejoice when I am moved. 5. But I have truſted in thy mercy, my heart ſhall rejoice in thy ſalvation. 6. I will ſing unto the LORD, becauſe [e] he hath dealt bountifully with me.

[a] Deut. xxxi. 17. Pſ. xliv. 24. & lxxxix. 46.
[b] Eph. i. 18.
[c] Jer. li. 39.
[d] Pſ. xxv. 2.
[e] Pſ. cxvi. 7. & cxlii. 7.

v. 1—6. Though caſt down by affliction, whilſt we have a throne of grace open, we never need deſpair. Hither David flies with his complaints and prayers.

1. He bewails his preſent dejected ſtate, and expoſtulates with God on the length and ſeverity of his ſufferings. How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord? Not that God's all-comprehending mind ever forgets, or that his people eſpecially are neglected or forſaken of him; but it is the language of unbelieving fear, by which our fooliſh hearts aggravate their ſorrows. For ever? Every moment ſeems long to the afflicted, eſpecially to thoſe, who, as the ſummit of their other griefs, experience darkneſs and deſertion in their ſouls. How long wilt thou hide thy face from me? with this ſupport all other evils would be tolerable, but this withdrawn, adds aggravated weight to the burden. How long ſhall I take counſel in my ſoul? uncertain how to act, and filled with anxious care; whilſt, in a labyrinth of trials, no way appears to extricate myſelf from them, having ſorrow in my heart daily. Note, (1.) Long and daily ſorrows are often the ſevere exerciſe of a chriſtian's faith. (2.) Our anxiety, and vain contrivances to help ourſelves, often add to our burden, and, like birds fluttering in a net, but the more entangle us. How long ſhall mine enemy be exalted over me? either Saul or Abſalom, or his ſpiritual enemies; for in our chriſtian warfare, every faithful ſoul ſometimes finds to his bitter grief the prevalence of ſin.

2. In his diſtreſs, when ſore thruſt at, that he ſhould fall, and the length of his trials almoſt overcoming his hopes of relief, he lifts up his heart to God. Conſider, look upon my diſtreſſed caſe with concern for my ſuffering; and hear me mourn in my prayer, O Lord my God, in whom I will ſtill truſt, though thou ſlay me. Thou art my God, and I will never quit my plea of intereſt in thy regard. Note, If we can ſay, my God, under our deepeſt trials, ſurely there is hope of their end. The matter of his prayer is, Lighten mine eyes, dim with ſorrows and fear; ſhine into me to diſpel the clouds of unbelief; guide me in the way, that I may ſee the door of eſcape open; and be refreſhed and comforted after this night of ſpiritual darkneſs, leſt I ſleep the ſleep of death, pine away in my body, decay in my ſoul, or periſh in my iniquities. Note, Though God's purpoſes are all ſure, and his people cannot periſh finally and eternally; yet they may be tempted to deſpair, and be brought into ſuch circumſtances as will awaken moſt jealous fears for themſelves.

3. He urges the malicious pleaſure his enemies would take in his fall, and the diſhonour conſequently which would be caſt on God. Leſt mine enemy ſay, I have prevailed againſt him; for Satan triumphs in the ſucceſs of his devices; and thoſe that trouble me, my perſecuting foes, rejoice when I am moved; tempted to ſin, or to deſpair under it. Note, The world takes a malicious pleaſure in the chriſtian's fall; and men are happy if they can find any thing to make them hope he is no better than themſelves.

4. He expreſſes his humble confidence, that amidſt all he felt, God would ſupport and comfort him. But I have truſted in thy mercy; merit I diſclaim, hope or help in myſelf I have none, but in thee I truſt; and therefore my heart ſhall rejoice in thy ſalvation: thine, for thou art able to ſave to the uttermoſt; and therefore I will encourage my ſoul in hope. I will ſing unto the Lord, the gratitude of my heart ſhall ſpeak in my joyful lips, becauſe he hath dealt bountifully with me: he hath, for faith realizes the promiſe, and gives preſent ſubſiſtence to the expected relief. Note, (1.) When we come to God in our miſeries, in prayer to pour out our ſouls to him, he will ſend us away rejoicing, and like Hannah, our countenance ſhall no more be ſad, 1 Sam. i. 18. (2.) Singing pſalms is the ancient practice of God's ſaints; and wherever there is found a heart to truſt him, there will be a mouth to praiſe him.

PSALM XIV.

This pſalm contains a deſcription of the corruption of mankind in general, as well as David's enemies in particular; in which view it is quoted, Rom. iii. 10. The ſtreams of wickedneſs the former pſalms laid open in the characters of the ungodly; here the fountains of the great deep are broken up, and we are led to ſee the apoſtate nature of man. Here is, 1. A charge exhibited againſt a wicked world, ver. 1. 2. The proof of the charge, ver. 2, 3. 3. A ſerious expoſtulation with ſinners, eſpecially with perſecutors, upon it, ver. 4—6. 4. A prayer for Iſrael's ſalvation, ver. 7.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. [a] THE fool hath ſaid in his heart, There is no God: [b] they are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doth good. 2. [c] The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men; to ſee if there were any that did underſtand, and ſeek God. 3. They are all gone aſide, [d] they are all together become † filthy: there is none that doth good, no not one.

[a] Pſ. x. 4. & liii. 1.
[b] Rom. iii. 10, &c.
[c] Pſ. xxxiii. 13, 14. & cii. 19.
[d] Gen. vi. 5.
† Heb. ſtinking.

v. 1—3. However outward ſins may ſhock the conſcience, no man can truly be emptied of himſelf, or be led to ſelf-deſpair, till God opens to him the plague of his heart, and makes him ſee the deſperate wickedneſs of a fallen nature. This is here done.

1. The heart of the fool is laid open. The fool, or the ſinner, (for ſin is the fooliſhneſs of folly), hath ſaid in his heart, There is no God. Few are abandoned enough to dare avow atheiſm in principle; but every ſinner feels it his intereſt there ſhould be no God, wiſhes there might be none, and would fain perſuade himſelf there is none; no God to judge, no hell to torment. Note, (1.) If our thoughts were as open as our countenances, we ſhould ſtartle at each other as monſters. (2.) All ſin in practice, proceeds from a meaſure of atheiſm in principle.

2. The ways of men correſpond to their nature: corrupt are they, or they do corrupt: they are ſuch in themſelves, their nature utterly defiled, being conceived and born in ſin, and their inward parts very wickedneſs; and they corrupt others, provoke, ſtir up, and draw out the corruption that is in the hearts of ſinners like themſelves. They have done abominable works, there is none that doth good; their practice correſponds to their principles; for who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? And,

3. This is the caſe univerſally; not in one place, or one age, but uniformly the ſame in every place, in every man, in every age; ſo God teſtifies on the view of all mankind, when the Lord looked down from heaven. The fool ſaid, There is no God, or he careth not for it; he hideth away his face, and will never ſee the evil: but God's eyes are upon the children of men, to ſee if there were any that did underſtand the ways of truth and righteouſneſs, and ſeek God, the knowledge of him and his will. But what a fearful account doth the God of truth, that cannot lie, the God of omniſcience, that cannot err, give of the ſtate of man: They are all gone aſide with univerſal apoſtacy; they have forſaken the path of duty and holineſs; they are all together become filthy, or putrid; loathſome and offenſive to the Divine purity, as a dead carcaſs in our noſtrils. There is none that doth good, no not one; not a ſingle exception can be found among all the ſons of men: they are one man's children; and, as deſcendants of a fallen parent, a ſeed of evil doers. Note, (1.) By nature there is no difference between one man and another; though in outward tranſgreſſion there may be much, in inward apoſtacy there is none. (2.) If there be any good wrought in us, or done by us, we are indebted for it ſolely to the ſovereign and ſaving grace of God.

4. Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge? [e] who eat up my people as they eat bread, and [f] call not upon the LORD. 5. [g] There † were they in great fear: for God is in the generation of the righteous. 6. You have ſhamed the counſel of the poor; becauſe the LORD is his refuge. 7. ‡ O that the ſalvation of Iſrael were come out of Zion! when [h] the LORD bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob ſhall rejoice, and Iſrael ſhall be glad.

[e] Am. viii. 4. Mic. iii. 3.
[f] Iſa. lxiv. 7.
[g] Pſ. liii. 5.
† Heb. they feared a fear.
‡ Or, who will give.
[h] Job xlii. 10. Pſ. cxxvi. 1.

v. 4—7. We have here,

1. The Lord expreſſing his admiration at the abounding wickedneſs. Have all the workers of iniquity no knowledge of their ſin and danger? or, as affirming that they have knowledge, and therefore ſtand more inexcuſable in acting againſt it. Note, The moſt wicked men find an accuſing conſcience, ſufficient to leave them without excuſe in the day of God.

2. Three things he charges upon them, (1.) Oppreſſion, cruel and malicious. They eat up my people as they eat bread; bite and devour them, and with as much pleaſure as the hungry man eateth. (2.) Neglect of prayer: and call not upon God: than which there cannot be a ſurer mark of the unſubdued power of corruption in the heart. (3.) Contempt and ridicule of godlineſs in others: ye have ſhamed the counſel of the poor, becauſe the Lord is his refuge; have attempted to make him aſhamed of his confidence, and to banter him out of his religion. Note, It is an advanced heighth of impiety, when men not only caſt off godlineſs themſelves, but ſet their wits at work to make God's people appear abſurd and fooliſh, and to diſcourage the heart of the poor and humble believer.

3. The terrors of the wicked, notwithſtanding all their bravery and affecting to deſpiſe God's threatnings, will often faſten upon their conſciences; there were they in great fear: in the midſt of their career of wickedneſs, deep and pungent remorſe will be felt; for God is in the generation of the righteous; their friend to protect them, and confound all that hate them. Note, (1.) If God be for us, no matter who are againſt us. (2.) The moſt happy and joyous ſinner has his ſecret pangs, that none know but himſelf.

4. The pſalmiſt concludes with a devout wiſh: O that the ſalvation of Iſrael were come out of Zion! eſpecially that Redeemer who ſhould turn away ungodlineſs from Jacob, and bring a cure for the deſperate diſeaſe of human corruption: when the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people by the powerful agency of his Son, manifeſted to deſtroy the works of the devil, and to ſet the captives of ſin free; then Jacob ſhall rejoice, and Iſrael ſhall be glad; his redeemed people ſhall rejoice in their preſent ſalvation begun; and their joy ſhall by and by be full, when he ſhall appear to deſtroy all his enemies and theirs, and complete their final ſalvation in eternal glory.

PSALM XV.

This pſalm may be entitled the ſure guide to heaven; for though Chriſt is our title, holineſs is our way. 1. We are directed to inquire the way, ver. 1. 2. We are directed how to walk in it, ver. 2—5. 3. We are told how ſafe we ſhall be if we do, ver. 5.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. LORD, [a] who ſhall † abide in thy tabernacle? who ſhall dwell in [b] thy holy hill? 2. [c] He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteouſneſs, and [d] ſpeaketh the truth in his heart. 3. He that [e] backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doth evil to his neighbour, [f] nor ‡ taketh up a reproach againſt his neighbour. 4. In whoſe eyes [g] a vile perſon is contemned; but he honoureth them that fear the LORD: he that ſweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. 5. [h] He that putteth not out his money to uſury, [i] nor taketh reward againſt the innocent. [k] He that doth theſe things, ſhall never be moved.

[a] Pſ. xxiv. 3, &c.
† Heb. ſojourn.
[b] Pſ. ii. 6.
[c] Iſa. xxxiii. 15.
[d] Zech. viii. 16.
[e] Lev xix. 16 Pſ. xxxiv. 13.
[f] Ex. xxiii. 1.
‡ Or receiveth.
[g] 2 Kings iii. 14. Eſth. iii. 2. Pſ. ci. 4.
[h] Ex. xxii. 25. Deut. xxiii. 19. Ezek. xviii. 8.
[i] Ex. xxiii. 8. Deut. xvi. 19.
[k] 2 Pet. i. 10.

v. 1—5. The former pſalm deſcribed that deſperate corruption of fallen man, which rendered him unfit for communion with God; this deſcribes the character of the redeemed, whoſe captivity to ſin is turned, and who, as bought with the blood of Jeſus, are by his ſpirit made meet for an inheritance among the ſaints in light.

1. The pſalmiſt puts an important queſtion: Lord, who ſhall abide in thy tabernacle? have a place among the faithful in the church of God; and abide there as living members upon earth, and after death be admitted to thy preſence in glory? Who ſhall dwell in thy holy hill? in the heavenly Zion, and the city of the living God? Note, (1.) This is a queſtion we ſhould often be making, that we may with ſelf-application ſay, Lord, is it I? (2.) Many have a ſeat in God's tabernacle on earth, who will find no dwelling in his holy hill above. (3.) If we would know our true ſtate, we muſt enquire at God's mouth, and examine and judge of ourſelves, not by the opinions of men, but by his holy word.

2. The queſtion is reſolved, and we muſt apply the character here deſcribed: happy for us if we can find our hearts correſpond thereunto. (1.) He that walketh uprightly, or perfectly; not abſolutely, in that ſenſe there is not a man that liveth and ſinneth not, but with ſimplicity and godly ſincerity; whoſe prevailing bent is to pleaſe God, and who is without diſſimulation, or allowed guile. (2.) And worketh righteouſneſs; believes in, and depends on the righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus Chirſt, which is the great work of God in the ſinner's heart, John vi. 29. and acts towards man with integrity in all his dealings. (3.) And ſpeaketh the truth in his heart; thinks before he ſpeaks in the preſence of God, that he may not offer the prayer and ſervice of feigned lips; and among men his words are ever the true copy of his heart; nor doth he defraud or go beyond his brother in any matter, making conſcience in all his worldly buſineſs to ſpeak truth with his neighbour. (4.) He deſires in converſation to be harmleſs and inoffenſive; his neighbour's reputation is ſacred, he never ſpeaks evil of him, either with malicious deſign or in common talk; nor taketh up a reproach againſt them; is pleaſed with the tales of ſlander, or encourages them; but contrariwiſe, is ever the advocate of the injured and the abſent, pleading their cauſe, and deſiring to caſt the vail of charity over the multitude of ſins: nor doth evil to his neighbour; his deeds correſpond to his words, he doth not ſpeak him fair to his face, and when opportunity offers, make a property of him, or injure him, but ſtudies to advance his intereſts as his own, and to ſerve him with his counſel, purſe, or influence. (5.) He values men not by their outward ſhow, but by their inward piety: in whoſe eyes a vile perſon is contemned, or a wicked man, notwithſtanding he may poſſeſs this world's goods, honours and eſteem, is contemned; not that he refuſes to pay him the civil reſpect due to his ſtation, but he judges of him according to God's word, and counts it his duty to avoid all intimate connection with him, and is fearleſs of his frowns, as regardleſs of his favour: but he honoureth them that fear the Lord, however poor and deſpicable they may be in the eyes of the world, he regards them as the excellent of the earth, and they are his companions and familiar friends. (6.) His oath is ſacred: he that ſweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not, however much prejudice he may ſuſtain, or however imprudent or raſh the engagement was, he fulfils it for his oath's ſake, unleſs releaſed from the obligation. (7.) He is no extortioner, he that putteth not out his money to uſury; that is, to take advantage of his neighbour's diſtreſs, to exact unjuſt premiums or intereſt; for a reaſonable recompenſe for the uſe of money, is as lawful before God and man, as the rent of land, or the price of labour; and he often lends where the caſe requires ſuch a charitable help, hoping for nothing again. (8.) No bribe can tempt him to bear a falſe evidence, to engage in a bad cauſe, or pervert judgment; nor taketh reward againſt the innocent.

3. He that doth theſe things; the man whom this character ſuits, ſhall never be moved, ſhall have a place in the church of God, as tried and found faithful, ſhall be enabled to perſevere amidſt all difficulties and dangers, and finally be admitted into God's manſion of glory, as a pillar in the temple of God, to go out no more. May ſuch be our character, then ſuch ſhall be our end!

PSALM XVI.

This pſalm has ſomething of David in it, but much more of Chriſt; to whom alone ſome points of it are applicable, Acts xi. 24.—xiii. 36. and of whom the whole may be well interpreted. 1. It contains the language of pious affection, whether of David or of Chriſt, his delight in God and his people, and thanks for the bleſſings he enjoyed, ver. 1—7. 2. The confidence of God's favour in his ſufferings, ver. 8. 3. The aſſurance of a ſpeedy and glorious reſurrection, ver. 9—11.

¶ † Michtam of David.

1. PRESERVE me, O God: [a] for in thee do I put my truſt. 2. O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the LORD, Thou art my Lord: [b] my goodneſs extendeth not to thee: 3. But to the ſaints that are in the earth, and to [c] the excellent [d] in whom is all my delight. 4. Their ſorrows ſhall be multiplied that † haſten after another God: their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer, [e] nor take up their names into my lips. 5. [f] The LORD is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: thou maintaineſt my lot. 6. The lines are fallen unto me in pleaſant places; yea, [g] I have a goodly heritage. 7. I will bleſs the LORD, who hath given me counſel: [h] my reins alſo inſtruct me in the night-ſeaſons.

† i. e. Golden, Pſ. lvi. & lvii. & lviii. & lix. & lx. tit.
[a] Pſ. xxv. 20.
[b] Job xxii. 2, 3. & xxxv. 7, 8. Rom. xi. 35.
[c] Prov. xii. 26.
[d] See Prov. viii. 31. & Iſa. lxii. 4.
† Or, give gifts to.
[e] Ex. xxiii. 13 Joſh. xxiii. 7. Hoſ. ii. 17.
[f] Deut. xxxii 9. Pſ. lxxiii. 26. & cxlii. 5. Lam. iii. 24.
[g] Acts xxvi. 18.
[h] Pſ. xvii. 3.

v. 1—7. The title of this pſalm is Michtam, interpreted golden, as containing ſuch diſplays of the ſufferings and glory of Chriſt, as deſerved to be recorded in letters of gold.

1. The pſalm opens with the prayer of faith. Preſerve me, O God: for in thee do I put my truſt; as David profeſſes ever to do, in oppoſition to all his enemies; and as the Lord Jeſus did, when in the days of his fleſh he offered up ſupplications and prayers, and was heard, in that he feared, and truſted on God, Heb. v. 7. Note, The prayer of faith is ever effectual.

2. He ſolemnly devotes himſelf to God. O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord, Thou art my Lord; and therefore as ſuch, there was a ſure foundation for faith: as our God, we may ever ſafely truſt him with all the concerns of body and ſoul. This may be well applied to the Redeemer; who, as poſſeſſing a human ſoul, as well as fleſh, is in that reſpect inferior to the Father; and therefore, as mediator, avouches the Lord for his God.

3. He expreſſes his humble ſenſe of his own goodneſs; it extendeth not to thee, to make God his debtor, or to add to his happineſs; but to the ſaints that are in the earth, who felt the exerciſe of it; and to the excellent, in whom is all my delight; and therefore I am deſirous to ſerve them in every good word and work. Of Chriſt this may alſo be ſaid, whoſe obedience and ſufferings, however infinitely extenſive in their bleſſed influence to the ſons of men, added nothing to the ſelf-ſufficient God, to whom the righteouſneſs of his Son brought no gain; nor could our everlaſting ruin have occaſioned any loſs. And though in the mediatorial tranſactions, there is a glorious diſplay made of the wiſdom, grace, and righteouſneſs of God; yet had they never appeared in this way, they would have, notwithſtanding, eternally exiſted the ſame in him; the good will is wholly to us, whom his grace ſanctifies, and in whom he is pleaſed to expreſs his delight. Note, (1.) Every redeemed ſoul is a ſaint of God, and bound by his very relation to him, to ſeek to be like him. (2.) They are truly great and excellent, who moſt reſemble the glorious pattern of all greatneſs and excellence. (3.) The higher a ſoul advances in holineſs, the humbler thoughts he hath of himſelf in the views of the pure and all-ſufficient God. (4.) Like loves like; they who delight in God, delight in his image where it appears. (5.) Though we can add nothing to God by our good works, yet they are profitable to men; and when done in faith and love, the Redeemer declares he will accept them as kindneſſes done to himſelf.

4. He declares the miſery of idolaters, and profeſſes his own renunciation of their ways. Their ſorrows ſhall be multiplied that haſten after another god: theſe vanities will both diſappoint their hopes, and provoke the indignation of Jehovah. Or the words may be conſidered as applicable to the Jews, who rejected Chriſt, the word God being not in the original, who haſten after another, rejected the true, and ſo eagerly ſought falſe Meſſiah's, which hath proved the cauſe of ſo much miſery to them. Their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer: ſuch ſacrifices as bloody men offered; or as the Gentiles, who ſought to placate their deities with human ſacrifices; nor take their name in my lips, as abhorring them. Refer it to Chriſt, and it ſignifies the abolition of all the typical ſacrifices, wherein ſo much blood of beaſts was ſhed; now uſeleſs by the oblation of himſelf once for all, and to be no more mentioned or accounted of. Note, They who have the blood of Jeſus to plead, need ſeek no other ſacrifice or oblation.

5. He cleaves to God as his happy and enduring portion. The Lord is the portion of my inheritance, and of my cup: his love is my richeſt treaſure, his favour my ſweeteſt enjoyment. Thou maintaineſt my lot, makeſt it ſafe and abiding, ſo that the world cannot take it away. Which is alſo moſt applicable to the Redeemer, whoſe meat and drink it was to do the Father's will; happy in conſtant communion with him, and ſure to ſee his lot maintained, his ſaints and redeemed ones preſerved and kept as the travail of his ſoul, in which he ſhould be everlaſtingly ſatisfied. Note, (1.) The love of God is the beſt portion; compared with that, all things beſide are dung and loſs. (2.) They who live by faith, find conſolations in their cup, more chearing than wine. (3.) The preſent comfort God beſtows, is an earneſt of the everlaſting bliſs he hath in ſtore for his people. (4.) They who have once truly taken God for their portion, may confidently be aſſured he will keep them from falling, and preſerve them for his everlaſting kingdom.

6. He rejoices in the bleſſed portion God had beſtowed on him. The lines are fallen unto me in pleaſant places; alluding to the meaſuring of ground; yea, I have a goodly heritage, outwardly in temporal bleſſing; but eſpecially in the enjoyment of God, his chief good. Chriſt's ſaints are his glorious heritage, and they are pleaſant in his eyes, beautiful in his blood and righteouſneſs, as the curtains of Solomon; and adorned with the graces of his ſpirit, as a robe of wrought gold. Note, (1.) If we have God for our portion, we may well be content, nor envy others their greatneſs, power, and affluence, he is far better. (2.) The heritage of the ſaints is fixed not by line, but by the eternal decree of God; and its excellence can only be fully known when we ſhall enter our glorious reſt above: and this, though diſtant, faith brings near, and ſaith, I have, becauſe I believe.

7. He aſcribes the praiſe of all to God. I will bleſs the Lord, who hath given me counſel, to chuſe this happy portion: my reins alſo inſtruct me in the night-ſeaſons. His inmoſt thoughts, under the Divine influence, when on his bed, muſe upon God; both inſtructing him in the bleſſing he poſſeſſed, and the obligations thence ariſing to love and ſerve ſo gracious a maſter: on Jeſus the ſpirit of counſel Iſa. xi. 2. reſted, and whole nights he ſpent in meditation and prayer to God. May the ſame ſpirit of wiſdom and counſel reſt on my ſoul; and taught by this day and night, may I be led in the way the Lord would have me to go!

8. [i] I have ſet the LORD always before me: becauſe [k] he is at my right hand, [l] I ſhall not be moved. 9. Therefore my heart is glad, and [m] my glory rejoiceth: my fleſh alſo ſhall reſt in hope. 10. For [n] thou wilt not leave my ſoul in hell; neither wilt thou ſuffer thy holy One to ſee corruption. 11. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life: [o] in thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore.

[i] Acts ii. 25.
[k] Pſ. lxxiii. 23. & cxxi. 5.
[l] Pſ. xvi. 5.
[m] Ibid. xxx. 12. & lvii. 8.
[n] Ibid. xlix. 15 Acts ii. 31. & xiii. 35.
[o] Pſ. xvii. 15. & xxi. 6. 1 Cor. xiii. 9. 1 Joh. iii. 2.

v. 8.—11. If it be aſked, as the eunuch did, of whom ſpeaketh the prophet, this of himſelf, or of ſome other perſon? we have an expreſs anſwer, Acts xi. 25. where the words are particularly applied to our divine Redeemer.

1. They expreſs his confidence in God, and the ſupport derived from him to go through the arduous taſk aſſigned him: I have ſet the Lord always before me; his power and faithfulneſs: becauſe he is at my right hand to ſtrengthen me, I ſhall not be moved, notwithſtanding all the ſnares of my enemies, the torments before me, at which the humanity ſhudders, and the pains of hell which ſeize my ſoul, whilſt my body agonizes on the tree. Though Jeſus prayed the cup might paſs from him, he was content to drink it, and triumphantly cried, It is finiſhed, when he gave up the ghoſt.

2. They declare his joy in the God of his ſalvation, under the moſt dark and diſmal diſpenſation: when his ſoul was exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death, and his body laid low in the grave, there was reviving hope in the end; therefore my heart is glad, and my glory, my tongue, as appears Acts xi. 26. rejoiceth in hope; in ſure and certain hope of God's glory being diſplayed, and his people's ſalvation accompliſhed by theſe ſufferings in their ſtead. Note, When the body is moſt afflicted, believing hope can make the ſoul triumph. My fleſh alſo ſhall reſt in hope, even when my body is lying in the duſt, and my enemies triumphant, as if they had compleated their conqueſt; ſtill I ſhall reſt, find the clods of the valley ſweet unto me, in expectation of the glory which ſhall follow. Two chief cauſes of this joy are here aſſigned: (1.) His victory over death by a ſpeedy and glorious reſurrection. For thou wilt not leave my ſoul in hell: not the place of the damned, for thither Chriſt never went, but that ſtate of death in which he lay; or the place of ſeparate ſpirits, where the ſouls of the faithful abide, as is uſually believed, till the reſurrection-day: neither ſuffer thy holy One to ſee corruption. The body of Chriſt being pure as his ſoul, and joined inſeparable with the divine perſon of the Son, was a holy thing; nor ſuffered, as our ſinful bodies, to putrefy in the duſt; for on the morning of the third day he broke the bands of death, of which it was impoſſible he ſhould be holden, and roſe the conqueror of death and hell, to the confuſion of his amazed foes, and to the comfort of his dejected diſciples. (2.) His aſcenſion into heaven, and reigning in glory everlaſting. Thou wilt ſhew me the path of life; not only raiſe me from death temporal, but exalt me alſo to life eternal: that life in glory, where in thy preſence is fulneſs of joy, at thy right hand there are pleaſures for evermore. Conſolations unutterable, and dignity tranſcendent, reward the ſufferings of the glorified Jeſus. Note, (1.) Where Jeſus found ſupport in his ſufferings, there may we; for every member of his body myſtical can ſay, thy God is my God. (2.) When we are putting off our bodies in the duſt, the reſurrection of Jeſus is the ſupport and comfort of the dying believer; for if we have been planted with him in the likeneſs of his death, we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſs of his reſurrection, and as members of his body becauſe he lives, we ſhall live alſo. (3.) The lively proſpects of approaching glory may well make us ſit looſe to all the joys of ſenſe, and reconcile us to all the ſufferings we may be called to: our light afflictions are but for a moment; but a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory approaches; earthly joys are poor and tranſitory, but the pleaſures at God's right hand are pure without allay, and perpetual as the everlaſting ſpring from whence they flow. Be theſe my happy portion!

PSALM XVII.

David, in great diſtreſs, directs his prayer to God. 1. He appeals to God concerning his integrity, ver. 1—4. 2. He prays to God ſtill to be upheld in it, and preſerved from the malice of his enemies, ver. 5—8, 13. 3. He gives a character of his enemies, ver. 9—12, 14. 4. He comforts himſelf with the hopes of his future happineſs, ver. 14. Thus the perfectly innocent ſon of David ſuffered, and in prayer committed himſelf to him who judgeth righteouſly.

¶ A Prayer of David.

1. HEAR the right, O LORD, attend unto my cry, give ear unto my prayer [a] that goeth † not out of feigned lips. 2. Let my ſentence come forth from thy preſence: let thine eyes behold the things that are equal. 3. Thou haſt proved mine heart, [b] thou haſt viſited me in the night, [c] thou haſt tried me, and ſhalt find nothing: I am purpoſed that my mouth ſhall not tranſgreſs. 4. Concerning the works of men, by the word of thy lips, [d] I have kept me from the paths of the deſtroyer. 5. [e] Hold up my goings in thy paths, [f] that my footſteps ſlip not. 6. [g] I have called upon thee, for thou wilt hear me, O God: incline thine ear unto me, and hear my ſpeech. 7. [h] Shew thy marvellous lovingkindneſs, O thou ‡ that ſaveſt by thy right hand them which put their truſt in thee, from thoſe that riſe up againſt them.

[a] See Mat. xv. 8.
† Heb. without lips of deceit.
[b] Pſ. xvi. 7.
[c] Job xxiii. 10. Pſ. lxvi. 10. Zech. xiii. 9. Mal. iii. 2, 3. 1 Pet. i. 7.
[d] 1 Joh. v. 18.
[e] Pſ. cxix. 133.
[f] Jer. x. 23.
[g] Pſ. cxvi. 2.
[h] Ibid. xxxi. 21.
‡ Or, that ſaveſt them which truſt in thee from thoſe that riſe up againſt thy right hand.

v. 1—7. This pſalm is a prayer of David, probably when flying for his life from the blood-thirſty Saul, and ready to be ſurrounded and deſtroyed by his numerous forces.

1. He begs a hearing of his righteous cauſe; and as he ſpoke from the ſimplicity of his heart, v. 1. he hoped from the heart-ſearching God for an anſwer of peace. Note, When our conſcience bears witneſs to our inward ſimplicity, then have we confidence to approach God.

2. He humbly ſues, v. 2. for a gracious interpoſition of God in his behalf, that his uprightneſs might be made manifeſt, and by God's providential dealings the ſentence of his juſtice might appear. Note, (1.) When we are traduced of men, it is an unſpeakable comfort to have the teſtimony of our conſcience, and boldneſs to look up to the omniſcient God. (2.) God's judgments in favour of injured innocence will appear, ſometimes in manifeſt providential interpoſitions, at leaſt in the great day, when the ſecrets of all hearts ſhall be laid open, and every man found faithful have praiſe of God.

3. He appeals to God, v. 3, 4. who had proved him in the furnace of affliction, and comforted him under the darkeſt times of his diſtreſs; that nothing was found in him, no allowed guile, no ſecret malice againſt his bittereſt enemies; and God knew it was his purpoſe both to with-hold his lips from every evil word, and his hands from every evil work; ſo that even when Saul was in his power, he had never entertained the thought of hurting him, keeping from the paths of the deſtroyer, from the ways of iniquity in general, and particularly from avenging himſelf by the death of his enemy; and this, becauſe he made God's word his rule, and ſought continually to conform to his holy precepts. Note, (1.) A conſtant ſerious reſpect to God's word, is the great preſervative againſt evil. (2.) The ways of ſin lead down to death; happy the ſoul that is taught by God to avoid theſe deſtructive paths. (3.) We may not only abſtain from acts of violence againſt thoſe who injure us, but our lips muſt be kept with a bridle, that not an unkind reflection may be made on them.

4. He prays for continued ſupport in this holy way, v. 5. ſenſible that it was not in man that walketh to direct his ſteps, and that left but for a moment to himſelf, his feet muſt ſlide. Hitherto God had helped him, v. 6. when he called, and therefore he humbly hopes to find the ſame grace miniſtered to him, acknowledging that it would be marvellous loving kindneſs, v. 7. yet ſuch as God was ever uſed to manifeſt to the oppreſſed, who, renouncing other help, fled to him alone for ſuccour. Note, (1.) We have no fund of grace to ſupport us a moment in ourſelves, unleſs conſtant ſupplies are ſent from the living fountain. (2.) A deep ſenſe of our own weakneſs and inſufficiency, is the ſureſt way to be ſtrong in the Lord, and the power of his might. (3.) Every chriſtian walks in a ſlippery path, and many wait for his halting; he needs therefore watch and pray that he faint not. (4.) Enemies to God's people, are rebels againſt himſelf, and will be reckoned with accordingly. (5.) In the eyes of a believer, God's loving-kindneſs appears marvellous, not only in his firſt gracious call, when he brought him out of his wretched ſtate of ſin, but eſpecially in his patience, pity, and many recoveries when his feet were well nigh gone; and when he gets to heaven, he will ſtill more wonder at himſelf, and ſtand to all eternity admiring God's amazing love.

8. [i] Keep me as the apple of the eye: [k] hide me under the ſhadow of thy wings, 9. From the wicked that oppreſs me, from my deadly enemies, who compaſs me about. 10. [l] They are incloſed in their own fat: with their mouth they ſpeak proudly. 11. [m] They have now compaſſed us in our ſteps: [n] they have ſet their eyes bowing down to the earth: 12. [o] Like as a lion that is greedy of his prey, and as it were a young lion lurking in ſecret places. 13. Ariſe, O LORD, diſappoint him, caſt him down: deliver my ſoul from the wicked, [p] † which is thy ſword: 14. From men which are thy hand, O LORD, from men of the world, [q] which have their portion in this life, and whoſe belly thou filleſt with thy hid treaſure: ‡ they are full of children and leave the reſt of their ſubſtance to their babes. 15. As for me, [r] I will behold thy face in righteouſneſs: [s] I ſhall be ſatisfied, when I awake, with thy likeneſs.

[i] Deut. xxxii. 10. Zech. ii. 8.
[k] Ruth. ii. 12. Pſ. xxxii. 7. & lvii. 1. & xci. 1, 4. Mat. xxiii. 37.
[l] Deut. xxxii. 15. Job xv. 27. Pſ. lxxiii. 7.
[m] 1 Sam. xxiii. 26.
[n] Pſ. x. 10.
[o] Prov. xxviii. 15.
[p] Iſa. x. 5.
† Or, by thy ſword.
[q] Luke xvi. 25.
‡ Or, their children are full.
[r] 1 Cor. xiii. 12. 2 Cor. iii. 18.
[s] Pſ. iv. 6. & xvi. 11. & lxv. 4. 1 Joh. iii. 2.

v. 8—15. Senſible that his help ſtood only in the Lord, the pſalmiſt redoubles his importunate prayer, v. 8. Keep me as the apple of the eye: with ſuch care as we guard the coats of that ſenſible organ: hide me under the ſhadow of thy wings: with ſuch tenderneſs as the hen gathers her chickens; or in ſuch ſafety as if lodged on the mercy-ſeat under the wings of the cherubim. Note, In vain doth Satan rage againſt thoſe whom God ſecures. His enemies, who oppreſſed him, and compaſſed him about, are deſcribed in lively colours beſpeaking their ſenſuality, pride, malice, craft, and cruelty. (1.) They are incloſed in their own fat; fed to the full, wallowing in luxury, and rioting in abundance. (2.) With their mouth they ſpeak proudly; impiouſly defying God, and breathing out threatnings againſt his people. (3.) They have compaſſed us in our ſteps; as Saul often did, and as the chriſtian often feels himſelf beſet from the reſtleſs malice of Satan and his ſervants. (4.) They have ſet their eyes bowing down to the earth; intent and eager upon my ruin; or under the modeſt and humble look concealing deep and dark deſigns. (5.) They are cruel as a hungry lion, v. 12. and inſidious as the lion's whelp, when lurking ſecretly to ſurprize the unwary traveller. Note, When a chriſtian is thus beſet, he need look about him, and above him, if he would be preſerved from falling. In the view of his danger, David cries to God; Ariſe, O Lord, diſappoint him, and caſt him down: deliver my ſoul from the wicked, which is thy ſword, the inſtrument God uſes often for correction or judgment; and, however men may purpoſe, they can only move and act as they are permitted by him: from the men which are thy hand; held in it, reſtrained by it, or uſed according to God's purpoſes and deſigns. Theſe he deſcribes as men of the world, whoſe heads are taken up with worldly ſchemes, and their hearts ſunk in worldly gratifications; which have their portion in this life, ſeek no other portion than they can find below, and could they be left to enjoy this world, would gladly quit all expectations of another; whoſe bellies thou filleſt with thy hid treaſure; the gold and ſilver which are dug out of the earth: they are full of children, who will ſupport and ſtrengthen them; and leave the reſt of their ſubſtance to their babes; their children's children, tranſmitting to them their affluence and abundance, and living and dying in the heighth of outward proſperity. From ſuch the pſalmiſt prays to be delivered; from their deſtructive ways, which, notwithſtanding all their worldly ſucceſs, would end in everlaſting miſery; or from their power, which theſe outward advantages gave them over him. Note, (1.) God's enemies have in this world uſually the moſt affluent circumſtances, and as they count theſe their good things, they look no farther. (2.) If we receive unkindneſs from man, let us think whoſe hand he is, and though the action in him be evil, juſtify God in his corrections.

Finally, the pſalmiſt concludes with his great hope and joy: not the world, or the things of it, did he graſp after, a nobler ambition filled his heart, even to be like and enjoy the bleſſed God. As for me, I will behold thy face in righteouſneſs; either walking now in the ways of God's will and worſhip, and therein enjoying the preſent ſenſe of his favour and love; or, as expecting God's appearing in the great day, when he ſhould be exculpated from every accuſation laid to his charge; or intimating the manner in which he expected to ſee God's face with comfort, as cloathed in the righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus: I ſhall be ſatisfied with this, and nothing leſs than this, when I awake in thy likeneſs, when in the glorious reſurrection-day I ſhall be perfected in holineſs, and made happy in the conſtant viſion and eternal fruition of thy bleſſed ſelf. Oh that ſuch may be our ſentiments, ſuch our deſires, ſuch our prayers, then ſuch as David's will be our portion!

PSALM XVIII.

We met with this pſalm, 2 Sam. xxii. It is, with ſome ſmall variations, again introduced here: we then applied it to David's caſe, to whom primarily it related; here we ſhall apply it to David's Lord, whoſe troubles and victories are here repreſented, compare ver. 2. with Heb. xi. 13. ver. 49. with Rom. xv. 9. It is full of noble images, and highly ſuited to engage the faith, and enliven the hope of every afflicted believer. Here, 1. He triumphs in God, ver. 1—3. 2. He magnifies his deliverances in diſtreſs, ver. 4—19. 3. He acknowledges that God had rewarded him according to his righteouſneſs, ver. 20—28. 4. He gives to God the glory of all his atchievements, ver. 29—42. 5. He encourageth himſelf ſtill in God, ver. 43—50.

¶ To the chief muſician,

[a] A pſalm of David, the ſervant of the LORD, who ſpake unto the LORD the words of this [b] ſong, in the day [c] that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he ſaid,

1. [d] I Will love thee, O LORD my ſtrength. 2. The LORD is [e] my rock, and my fortreſs, and [f] my deliverer: my God, my ſtrength [g] in whom I will truſt, my buckler, and [h] the horn of my ſalvation, and my high tower. 3. I will call upon the LORD, [i] who is worthy to be praiſed: [k] ſo ſhall I be ſaved from mine enemies. 4. [l] The ſorrows of death compaſſed me, and the floods of † ungodly men made me afraid. 5. ‡ The ſorrows of hell compaſſed me about: [m] the ſnares of death prevented me. 6. In my diſtreſs [n] I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: [o] he heard my voice out of his temple, and my cry came before him, even into his ears. 7. Then [p] the earth ſhook and trembled; [q] the foundations of the hills moved and were ſhaken, becauſe he was wroth. 8. There went up a ſmoke out of his noſtrils, and [r] fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it. 9. [s] He bowed the heavens alſo, and came down: and darkneſs was under his feet. 10. And [t] he rode upon a cherub, and did fly: yea, [u] he did fly upon the wings of the wind. 11. He made darkneſs his ſecret place: [x] his pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the ſkies. 12. [y] At the brightneſs that was before him, his thick clouds paſſed, hail-ſtones and coals of fire. 13. The LORD alſo [z] thundred in the heavens, and the Higheſt gave his voice; hail-ſtones and coals of fire. 14. Yea, [a] he ſent out his arrows, and ſcattered them; and he ſhot out lightnings, and diſcomfited them. 15. [b] Then the channels of waters were ſeen, and the foundations of the world were diſcovered: at thy rebuke, O LORD, at the blaſt of the breath of thy § noſtrils. 16. [c] He ſent from above, he took me, he drew me out of [d] many waters. 17. He delivered me from [e] my ſtrong enemy, and from them which hated me: for they were too ſtrong for me. 18. They prevented me in the day of my calamity: but the LORD was [f] my ſtay. 19. [g] He brought me forth alſo into a large place: he delivered me, [h] becauſe he delighted in me.

[a] 2 Sam. xxii. 1, &c.
[b] Ex. xv. 1.
[c] Pſ. xxxiv. 19. 2 Tim. iv. 18.
[d] Pſ. cxvi. 1.
[e] Deut. xxxii. 4. Iſa. xxxii. 2. 1 Cor. x. 4.
[f] Pſ. iii. 8.
[g] Prov. xviii. 10.
[h] Luke i. 69.
[i] Rev. iv. 11.
[k] Rom. 10, 13.
[l] Pſ. cxvi. 3.
† Heb. Belial.
‡ Heb. Cords.
[m] 1 Sam. xviii. 21.
[n] Acts xii. 5.
[o] Ex. ii. 23. Jonah. ii. 2.
[p] Judg. v. 4. Acts iv. 31.
[q] Job xxvi. 11.
[r] Heb. xii. 29.
[s] Pſ. cxliv. 5. Iſa. lxiv. 1.
[t] Pſ. xcix. 1.
[u] Ibid. civ. 3.
[x] Ibid. xcvii. 2.
[y] Ibid. xcvii. 3.
[z] Ibid. xxix. 3.
[a] Joſh. x. 10. Pſ. cxliv. 6. Iſa. xxx. 30.
[b] Ex. xv. 8. Pſ. cvi. 9.
§ Or, anger.
[c] Pſ. cxliv. 7.
[d] Ibid. lxix. 2. Rev. xvii. 15.
[e] Luke xi. 21.
[f] Iſa. l. 10.
[g] Pſal. xxxi. 8. & cxviii. 5.
[h] 2 Sam. xv. 25.

David is here called the ſervant of the Lord, as repreſenting him who took upon himſelf the form of a ſervant when he was made in the likeneſs of men, and his dangers were greater, and his deliverances yet more glorious than thoſe the king of Iſrael experienced.

1. The pſalmiſt, in the perſon of the Redeemer, expreſſes his confidence in God, his love to him, and conſtant dependance upon his ſalvation in every time of trouble, v. 1—3. Note, They who love God, and truſt on him alone, ſhall find ſure help in every time of need.

2. He magnifies the glorious interpoſition he had experienced under the moſt dangerous and threatning circumſtances, when his ſoul was exceeding ſorrowful even unto death, when ungodly men, mighty as the ſtormy waves, Jews and heathens, conſpired to deſtroy him, when pains of hell tormented his ſpirit, and death in its moſt horrid ſhapes ſeized on his body; in that hour when the powers of darkneſs ſummoned their collected force to ſhake the confidence of the great Mediator, then, with ſtrong crying and tears, he made ſupplication and was heard, v. 6. The trembling earth, and rending rocks, beſpoke the wrath of God againſt the murderers of his Son, and ſwift vengeance ſoon awaked to overtake them, v. 8—15. Judgments, ſudden as the lightning, terrible as thunder, and conſuming as fire, fell upon the devoted city and people where he was crucified; the very foundations of their common-wealth were razed, and deſolations ſpread on every ſide. Note, More terrible judgments await the ſinner in the day of God; when all who have rejected, like the Jews, his great ſalvation, and by their ſins have crucified the Son of God afreſh, will ſee him bow the heavens and come down to take final and eternal vengeance on his enemies.

3. He ſpeaks with exultation of his deliverance, and the glory to which he was advanced. God drew him from the hands of his enemy, delivered him from the power of Satan, and looſed the bands of death, raiſing him from the grave triumphant, and cauſing him to aſcend to his right hand in glory, becauſe he delighted in him, v. 16—19. Note, (1.) Though God for a while ſuffer our enemies to be too mighty for us, yet they ſhall not finally prevail. (2.) God delights in his Son, and all who are members of his body myſtical, are intereſted in the ſame divine regard; and however deep the afflictions with which they are now exerciſed, they ſhall ſhortly be exalted with their triumphant Lord and Saviour.

20. The LORD rewarded me [i] according to my righteouſneſs, according to the cleanneſs of my hands hath he recompenſed me. 21. For [k] I have kept the ways of the LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my God. 22. For [l] all his judgments were before me, and I did not put away his ſtatutes from me. 23. [m] I was alſo upright before him: and I kept myſelf from mine iniquity. 24. Therefore hath the LORD recompenſed me according to my righteouſneſs, according to the cleanneſs of my hands in his eyeſight.

[i] Pſ. vii. 8.
[k] Ibid. cxix. 10, 11.
[l] Ibid. cxix. 120.
[m] Ibid. cxix. 7. Luke i. 6.

ſight. 25. [n] With the merciful thou wilt ſhew thyſelf merciful, with an upright man thou wilt ſhew thyſelf upright. 26. With the pure thou wilt ſhew thyſelf pure, and [o] with the froward thou wilt ſhew thyſelf froward. 27. For [p] thou wilt ſave the afflicted people: [q] but wilt bring down high looks.

[n] 1 Kings viii. 32. Mat. v. 7, 8.
[o] Lev. xxvi. 18, &c. Prov. iii. 34.
[p] Pſ. xii. 5.
[q] Ibid. ci. 5. Iſa. ii. 11.

v. 20—27. Though this was in a meaſure true of David, whoſe cauſe was righteous, and his heart ſimple before God; yet moſt eminently it is applicable to the righteous Saviour. His exaltation and glory is the reward of a righteouſneſs abſolutely perfect; for in him was no ſin, nor guile found in his mouth. Note, They who have an intereſt in Chriſt, have a right to the reward of righteouſneſs with him, for they are compleat in him: but whilſt the afflicted people are ſaved, and they who ſuffer with Jeſus are glorified together with him, the froward and perverſe, the proud, ſelf-righteous, and unhumbled, ſhall be brought low, and feel the wrath of an offended God, v. 26, 27.

28. For [r] thou wilt light my ‡ candle: the LORD my God will enlighten my darkneſs. 29. For [s] by thee I have † run through a troop: and by my God have I leaped over a wall. 30. As for God, [t] his way is perfect: [u] the word of the LORD is tried: he is a buckler [x] to all thoſe that truſt in him. 31. For [y] who is God ſave the LORD? or who is a rock ſave our God? 32. It is God that girdeth me with ſtrength, and maketh my way perfect. 33. [z] He maketh my feet like hinds feet, and [a] ſetteth me upon my high places. 34. [b] He teacheth my hands to war, ſo that a bow of ſteel is broken by mine arms. 35. Thou haſt alſo given me [c] the ſhield of thy ſalvation: and thy right hand hath holden me up, and thy gentleneſs hath made me great. 36. Thou haſt enlarged my ſteps under me; [d] that my feet did not ſlip. 37. I have purſued mine enemies, and overtaken them: neither did I turn again till they were conſumed. 38. I have wounded them, that they were not able to riſe: [e] they are fallen under my feet. 39. For thou haſt girded me with ſtrength unto battle: thou haſt ſubdued under me thoſe that roſe up againſt me. 40. Thou haſt alſo given me [f] the necks of mine enemies: that I might deſtroy them that hate me. 41. They cried, but there was none to ſave them: [g] even unto the LORD, but he anſwered them not. 42. [h] Then did I beat them ſmall as the duſt before the wind: I did caſt them out as the dirt in the ſtreets. 43. [i] Thou haſt delivered me from the ſtrivings of the people: [k] and thou haſt made me the head of the heathen: [l] a people whom I have not known ſhall ſerve me. 44. As ſoon as they hear of me, they ſhall obey me: the ſtrangers [m] ſhall ſubmit themſelves unto me. 45. The ſtrangers ſhall fade away, and [n] be afraid out of their cloſe places. 46. The LORD liveth, and bleſſed be my rock: and let the God of my ſalvation be exalted. 47. [o]. It is God that avengeth me, and [p] ſubdueth the people under me. 48. He delivereth me from mine enemies: yea, [q] thou liftеſt me up above thoſe that riſe up againſt me: thou haſt delivered me from the † violent man. 49. [r] Therefore will I ‡ give thanks unto thee, O LORD, among the heathen: and ſing praiſes unto thy name. 50. [s] Great deliverance giveth he to his king: and ſheweth mercy to his anointed, [t] to David, and [u] to his ſeed [x] for evermore.

[r] Pſ. cxix. 105. Prov. vi. 23.
‡ Or, lamp.
Job xxix. 3.
[s] Phil. iv. 13.
† Or, broken.
[t] Deut. xxxii. 4. Dan. iv. 37. Rev. xv. 3.
[u] Pſ. xii. 6. Prov. xxx. 5.
[x] Pſ. xvii. 7.
[y] Deut. xxxii. 39. 1 Sam. ii. 2. Pſ. lxxxvi. 8.
[z] Hab. iii. 19.
[a] Deut. xxxii. 13. Iſa. xxxiii. 16.
[b] Pſ. cxliv. 1.
[c] Eph. vi. 16.
[d] Prov. iv. 12.
[e] Mal. iv. 3.
[f] Gen. xlix. 8. Joſh. x. 24.
[g] 1 Sam. xxviii. 6. Job xxvii. 9. Prov. i. 28. Iſa. i. 15. Jer. xiv. 11. Ezek. viii. 18. Zech. vii. 13.
[h] Dan. ii. 35.
[i] 2 Sam. iii. 1.
[k] 2 Sam. viii.
[l] Iſa. lv. 5.
[m] 2 Sam. xxii. 45. Pſ. lxvi. 3.
[n] Mic. vii. 17.
[o] Pſ. xciv. 1.
[p] Ibid. xlvii. 3.
[q] Ibid. lix. 1.
† Heb. Man of violence.
[r] Rom. xv. 9.
‡ Or, confeſs.
[s] Pſ. cxliv. 10.
[t] Jer. xxx. 9.
[u] Rom. i. 3. Gal. iii. 16.
[x] 2 Sam. vii. 13.

v. 28—50. David had experienced many dark providences, many dark nights of ſpiritual affliction, and many foes without, as well as fears within; but all vaniſhed when God, his help and ſtrength, lightened his darkneſs, and gave him victory over all his enemies. The Son of David had found deeper diſtreſs, and greater foes; yet, though his eyes were ſealed in death, and his burning light gone out in obſcurity, he awaked, and, like the ſun, ſhone brighter in glory, when the dark cloud had paſſed over him. God helped him, (for, as man, he needed divine ſupport) and none of his enemies could ſtand before him. He aſcended up on high, and led captivity captive, having firſt on his croſs ſpoiled principalities and powers; and now he reigns in glory everlaſting, exalted in the moſt eminent ſenſe to be head of the heathen, all power being given him in heaven and in earth; and in a peculiar manner he is the head of his church, gathered out of all the nations of the world.

In the view of theſe mercies the Pſalmiſt exalts the Divine Majeſty, v. 30, 31, 46, 49. bleſſing and praiſing him for ſuch exertions of his power and faithfulneſs. And Jeſus thanked thus his Father, for hearing and helping him; and in his church unceaſing praiſe will be for ever given for this great ſalvation, both of the head and of the ſeveral members, for whom the like mercy is reſerved in ſtore, v. 50. as hath been ſhewn to their anointed Lord, in whom their redemption is already virtually, and ſhall ſhortly be actually compleated, when they ſhall come to be with him in glory, and partake of his eternal triumphs.

PSALM XIX.

This pſalm hath an evident reference to goſpel-times, See Rom. x. 18. and what the apoſtles thus apply, we may be ſure was the mind of the Spirit in inditing. 1. The Pſalmiſt magnifies the glory of God diſplayed in the heavens, ver. 1—6. 2. In his word, ver. 7—11. 3. He ſhews the need of humiliation before that word, ver. 12. 4. Prays for grace to be kept in God's holy ways, ver. 13, 14.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. [a] THE heavens declare the glory of God: and the firmament ſheweth his handy-work. 2. Day unto day uttereth ſpeech, and night unto night ſheweth knowledge. 3. There is no ſpeech nor language, † where their voice is not heard. 4. [b] Their ‡ line is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world: in them hath he ſet a tabernacle for the ſun, 5. Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a ſtrong man to run a race. 6. [c] His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

[a] Gen. i. 6. Rom. i. 20.
† Or, without theſe their voice is heard.
[b] Rom. x. 18.
‡ Or rule, or direction.
[c] Eccleſ. i. 5.

v. 1—6. All things are full of God; and, to a mind diſpoſed to contemplate, every object around him proclaims the glory of the great Creator.

1. The viſible heavens, and the ethereal ſky ſpread over us, declare the power, and diſplay the wiſdom, of the hand that made them. The regular ſucceſſions of night and day ſpeak to every people and language the voice of inſtruction. The glorious ſun that ſhines, proclaims the brighter glory of him that made it, and daily cauſes it to go forth as a bridegroom from his chamber in the morning, to run as a giant to its meridian height, and then at even to appear as if retiring to his reſt in ruddy clouds, the tabernacle pitched for his reception. Note, Idolaters and atheiſts are without excuſe. If there were no Bibles, the eternal Power and Godhead are ſufficiently viſible in the works of creation and providence.

2. Spiritual things appear concealed under theſe viſible emblems. The bright heavens repreſent the preachers and apoſtles of the glorious goſpel, raiſed up by divine power, and qualified for their bleſſed work. Faithful to the taſk aſſigned, as the ordinances of day and night, and, like them, perpetual in ſucceſſion, their word is gone out into all lands, and their preaching hath reached the ends of the earth. The glorious ſun in this firmament is Jeſus Chriſt, the Sun of righeouſneſs, ariſen a light to lighten the Gentiles, whoſe warm, invigorating, and chearing beams believers happily experience; and he will, from the beginning to the end of their day of life, continue to enlighten and enliven them, till they ſhall be brought to that heaven of heavens, where their ſun ſhall never go down, but with meridian beams of glory ſhine upon God's choſen for ever and ever.

7. [d] The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the ſoul: [e] the teſtimony of the LORD is ſure, making wiſe the ſimple. 8. The ſtatutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart: [f] the commandment of the LORD is pure enlightning the eyes. 9. The fear of the LORD is clean, [g] enduring for ever: the judgments of the LORD are true and [h] righteous altogether. 10. More to be deſired are they than gold, [i] yea, than much fine gold: [k] ſweeter alſo than honey and † the honey-comb. 11. Moreover, by them is thy ſervant warned: and [l] in keeping of them there is great reward. 12. [m] Who can underſtand his errors? cleanſe thou me from ſecret faults. 13. [n] Keep back thy ſervant alſo from preſumptuous ſins, [o] let them not have dominion over me: then ſhall I be upright, and I ſhall be innocent from ‡ the great tranſgreſſion. 14. Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy ſight, O LORD, my § ſtrength and my redeemer.

[d] See 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17.
[e] Pſ. cxi. 7.
[f] Pſ. xii. 6.
[g] Mat. v. 18.
[h] Pſ. cxix. 128.
[i] Ibid. 72, 127. Prov. viii. 11, 19.
[k] Pſ. cxix. 103.
† Heb. The dropping of the honey-combs.
[l] 1 Cor. xv. 58.
[m] Pſ. xl. 12.
[n] Gen. xx. 6.
[o] Pſ. cxix. 133. Rom. vi. 12, 14.
‡ Or much.
§ Heb. Rock.

v. 7—14. However legible the glory of God might be in the works of creation to man in innocence, fallen man muſt have other means to teach him, or he will be brutiſh in his knowledge, and his underſtanding darkened. The book of God is now become more eſſential than the volume of nature.

1. This bleſſed word is here deſcribed under various properties: [1.] It is perfect, converting the ſoul: it contains a perfect diſcovery of the will of God; of that compleat ſalvation wrought out by the Redeemer: it is the inſtrument the Spirit makes uſe of to convert the ſinner's heart, and makes thoſe perfect in Chriſt Jeſus, who truly by ſaith truſt upon it. [2.] It is ſure, making wiſe the ſimple: being the word of the faithful God, it cannot deceive us; and they who, however ſimple in the eyes of men, are enabled firmly to truſt upon it, are truly wiſe, wiſe unto ſalvation. [3] The ſtatutes of the Lord are right; in themſelves direct us in the right way to life and glory, and therefore rejoice the heart, which being found in Chriſt the way, and walking in holineſs, rejoices in hope of the glory of God. [4.] The commandment of the Lord is pure, from all human mixture and adulteration, and tending to produce purity of heart and life; enlightening the eyes, which, without this divine teaching, are cloſed in darkneſs. [5.] The fear of the Lord, the doctrine contained in that word which teaches this holy fear of God, is clean, and endureth for ever; cleanſes and keeps us clean; ſo that thoſe who have experienced the waſhing of water in the word, are without ſpot, and undefiled. Or, the endurance here ſpoken of may refer to the goſpel diſpenſation, which will never, as the Moſaical inſtitutions, be abrogated. [6.] The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether: his deciſions in his word are not only true, and what will infallibly come to paſs, but alſo moſt equitable, and no exception can be made to any of them. [7.] More to be deſired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: all the gold that the mines of Peru produce, is not to be compared with one great and precious promiſe of God's word: the one can only make us appear great before men; by the other we become partakers of a divine nature. [8.] Sweeter alſo than honey and the honeycomb. None of the delights of ſenſe can at all compare with the conſolations which ariſe from God's word: the one too frequently debaſes men into brutes, the other exalts them to partake of angelic joys. [9.] Moreover, by them is thy ſervant warned againſt the ſnares and temptations of ſin and Satan, and directed in the diſcharge of every duty and relation towards God or man. [10.] And in keeping of them there is great reward; not of the law, as a covenant of life, for none then would obtain the reward, becauſe none perfectly obey it; but of the goſpel, holding faſt its doctrines, influenced by its principles, and reaching after the accompliſhment of its promiſes: in this way the reward of eternal life may be expected. Note, If the word of God in all theſe reſpects hath anſwered its bleſſed end to us, then, through patience and comfort of the ſcriptures, we ſhall have hope.

2. The view of the word of God brought the Pſalmiſt on his knees in the duſt. Who can underſtand his errors? how many, how great: cleanſe thou me from my ſecret faults; not only thoſe I ſee and lament, but thoſe which through blindneſs I cannot ſee, or through careleſsneſs have paſſed unobſerved. Note, The more we look into the word of God, the more cauſe we ſhall ſee for humiliation. Though we ſhould ſee no allowed ſin, there are ſecret faults enough to deſtroy us, if God be ſtrict to mark what is amiſs.

3. He prays to be kept from the evil to which he felt himſelf too prone; and eſpecially, that preſumptuous ſins might not diſhonour God, or bring his conſcience under bondage; but that he might be preſerved upright, and kept from apoſtacy. Note, (1.) The greateſt ſaints need pray againſt preſumptuous ſins, for without continual ſupport they cannot but fall into them. (2.) Preſumptuous ſins are great tranſgreſſions; and, though they may not utterly caſt us off from God, yet they will deſtroy our comfort, and terribly ſhake our confidence.

4. He concludes with a humble requeſt for God's acceptance. Let the words of my mouth, the poor imperfect prayers I offer, and the meditations of my heart, my inward thoughts, or deſires, be acceptable in thy ſight, meet an anſwer of mercy and peace, that may ſhew they are heard and granted, O Lord, my ſtrength, or rock, and my redeemer, that haſt ſupported me under all trials, and delivered me from all my enemies, and, I am emboldened to truſt, wilt yet deliver me. Note, (1.) Our great concern ſhould be, to have our perſons and ſervices accepted in the Beloved. (2.) When we have the Lord for our ſtrength and redeemer, we need not fear miſcarrying.

PSALM XX.

This pſalm is generally thought to be compoſed as a form of prayer for the king when he went to battle. 1. They are directed to beg divine help. ver. 1—4. 2. They expreſs their confidence of being heard and anſwered, ver. 5—8. 3. They cry for audience, ver. 9. The whole may be conſidered as relative to Chriſt, and as containing the church's prayer for him, and confidence in his victory.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. THE LORD hear thee in the day of trouble,
[a] the name of the God of Jacob † defend thee.
2. Send thee help from the ſanctuary, and ſtrengthen thee out of Zion. 3. Remember all thy offerings, and ‡ accept thy burnt-ſacrifice. Selah. 4. [b] Grant thee according to thine own heart, and fulfil all thy counſel. 5.
We will rejoice in thy ſalvation, and [c] in the name of our God we will ſet up our banners: the LORD fulfil all thy petitions.

[a] Prov. xviii. 10.
† Heb. Set thee on an high place.
‡ Heb. Turn to aſhes. Lev. ix. 24. 1 Kings xviii. 38. 1 Chron. xxi. 26. 2 Chron. vii. 1.
[b] Pſ. xxi. 2.
[c] Exod. xvii. 15. Pſ. lx. 4.

This is entitled a pſalm of David, his compoſition, or for David, being deſigned as an interceſſion for the king when he went to battle; or rather for the ſpiritual David, the Meſſiah. The prayers of God's church and people are highly deſirable, and a form of ſound words the moſt generally profitable manner of prayer for public worſhip.

v. 1—5. We have here,

1. The matter of their requeſts: That in the day of trouble the Lord would defend their king, whether from ſecret conſpiracies, or open violence; and that Jacob's God, whoſe providential care of him was ſo eminent, would ſhew the ſame tender regard to their ſovereign, ſtrengthening him with ſpiritual might, and from his ſanctuary ſend him forth conquering and to conquer: that all his ſacrifices might be accepted, and his prayers graciouſly anſwered; every deſire crowned with ſucceſs, and every petition granted. Note, (1.) The higheſt dignity cannot guard off troubles, and crowns eſpecially are often lined with thorns. (2.) None need our prayers more than thoſe, whoſe height of ſtation expoſes them to ſo many temptations. (3.) When we begin with a ſacrifice of prayer, we may hope to end with ſongs of praiſe.

The King Meſſiah ſaw many days of trouble, from the cradle to the grave, and, when he cried, was heard and holpen. His God ſupported him; angelic hoſts attended to ſtrengthen him; his offering was a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmell, well pleaſing to God; all his heart's deſire, reſpecting his people's ſalvation, was thereupon granted, and the eternal counſels of peace fulfilled.

2. They promiſe hereupon to rejoice before God: We will, or ſo we will, or let us rejoice, when theſe petitions are granted; then the praiſe of all ſhall be aſcribed to the glorious author of the ſalvation, and in his name we will triumphantly ſet up our banners.

The triumphs of Jeſus are matters of greateſt joy to the faithful; in his compleat ſalvation they rejoice, ſee all their foes laid at their feet, and ſet up their triumphant banners. Death, where is thy ſting? grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God that giveth us the victory through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord; and at his feet the believer's crown will be for ever laid, and ſhouting for joy he will ever cry, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain to receive bleſſing and glory.

6. Now know I, that the LORD ſaveth his anointed:
he will hear him from his holy heaven, with the ſaving ſtrength of his right hand. 7. [d] Some truſt in chariots, and ſome in horſes: but [e] we will remember the name of the LORD our God. 8. They are brought down and fallen, but we are riſen, and ſtand upright. 9. †
Save, LORD, let the king hear us when we call.

[d] Pſ. xxxiii. 16. Prov. xxi. 31. Iſa. xxxi. 1.
[e] 2 Chron. xxxii. 8.
† Or, Lord ſave the king, and hear.

v. 6—9. We have here,

1. The confident concluſion David draws from the ſucceſs of the people's prayers in his behalf; or rather, the aſſurance he hath of the Meſſiah's victory and glory, in anſwer to the prayers of his church. Note, What we pray for in faith, we may aſſuredly conclude will be granted us.

2. Having reſted all their hopes on God, the people diſclaim all human dependance: neither chariot nor horſe is their confidence, but God alone; and the effect of ſuch truſt in him is, that when the chariots and horſes of their enemies are fallen, they who truſt in him riſe victorious. All believers renounce in like manner all human works, all truſt on fleſhly confidences, on privileges, duties, or ſervices; ſeek no juſtifying righteouſneſs, but in their divine head, and deſire to go forth in the name of their Lord God, and to make mention of his righteouſneſs only, fully aſſured, that when all other claims on the divine favour, which the ſelf-righteous and unhumbled make, ſhall be confounded, they ſhall ſtand approved, as compleat in him, and be preſented as holy, unblameable, and unreproveable in God's ſight.

3. The pſalm concludes with a fervent prayer for themſelves, the ſubjects of Iſrael's king, or rather the ſervants of Jeſus, who cry continually, Save, Lord; let the King, Meſſiah, hear us when we call; be our advocate and friend, and ſupply us with all that ſpiritual ſtrength, which in our remaining warfare we need. Note, They who perſevere in waiting upon God in prayer, ſhall abide in his love, and be aſſured of his protection.

PSALM XXI.

As the former was a prayer for ſupport, this is the grateful thankſgiving for having received it. The people of Iſrael for their king, or rather the redeemed of the Lord, to whom this pſalm is moſt applicable, are taught, 1. To congratulate his victories, ver. 1—6. 2. To confide in the power of God for the compleating of the ruin of the enemies of his kingdom. ver. 7—13.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. THE king ſhall joy in [a] thy ſtrength, O LORD, and in thy ſalvation how greatly ſhall he rejoice! 2. [b] Thou haſt given him his heart's deſire, and haſt not withholden the requeſt of his lips. Selah. 3. For [c] thou preventeſt him with the bleſſings of goodneſs: thou ſetteſt a crown of pure gold on his head. 4. [d] He aſked life of thee, and thou gaveſt it him, [e] even length of days for ever and ever. 5. His glory is great in thy ſalvation, honour and majeſty haſt thou laid upon him. 6. For thou haſt † made him moſt bleſſed for ever: [f] thou haſt made him exceeding glad with thy countenance.

a Pſ. xx. 6.
b Ibid. 4, 5.
c 1 Sam. xi. 13.
d Pſ. lxi. 6.
e 2 Sam. vii. 19. Pſ. xci. 16.
† Heb. Set him to be bleſſings. Pſ. lxxii. 17.
f Pſ. xlv. 7.

v. 1—6. David could not experience ſuch wondrous deliverances without deep gratitude; and his people, who prayed for him, were confident that God's ſalvation was the very joy of his heart; and therefore in his behalf they offer to God their ſacrifice of praiſe, for prayers granted; for bleſſings that prevented even deſire; for dignity ſo eminent, to which he was advanced; for length of days in the midſt of danger; and an abiding throne, though ſo often ſhaken; for great glory, honour, and majeſty, beſtowed from on high; for the promiſe of abiding bleſſings, and the experience of preſent exceeding great conſolations.

But more peculiarly applicable are theſe words to the King of Glory, who, in his work of man's redemption, was ſupported by the divine ſtrength to go through the arduous taſk, and in the proſpect of the ſalvation of his people, rejoiced with exceeding great joy in the midſt of all his ſufferings. To him every requeſt was granted, whether for grace or glory, in behalf of his choſen. In him God's preventing bleſſings were wonderfully manifeſted to the ſons of men, without deſert, yea, without deſire. A crown of glory is the reward of his ſufferings, and worthy is he to be thus exalted; death, Satan, and ſin being all ſubdued by him; and angels, principalities, and powers, put under him. The life that for a moment he laid down, is reſtored for ever; Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more, and becauſe he lives, we ſhall live alſo. Unutterable is the glory and majeſty he hath received, the government of all things in heaven and earth being committed to him. Moſt bleſſed in himſelf, or as the margin reads it, thou haſt ſet him to be bleſſings for ever, to communicate eternal bleſſings to his people, and be himſelf the author, procurer, and beſtower of them; and in conſequence of all theſe things, the ſpirit of gladneſs reſts upon him, and the high approbation of God his Father, in his mediatorial work, is his everlaſting delight. Note, Every believer in Jeſus is a king, and ſhall ſhare his triumphs; be ſupported by the ſame ſtrength; find the ſame gracious anſwers to his prayers; experience God's preventing bleſſings; receive at laſt the crown of glory; and reign with his exalted head, happy, eternally and unutterably happy in the light of God's countenance.

7. For the king truſteth in the LORD, and through the mercy of the moſt High he ſhall not be moved. 8. Thine hand ſhall find out all thine enemies, thy right hand ſhall find out thoſe that hate thee. 9. [g] Thou ſhalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger: the LORD ſhall ſwallow them up in his wrath, and [h] the fire ſhall devour them. 10. [i] Their fruit ſhalt thou deſtroy from the earth, and their ſeed from among the children of men. 11. For [k] they intended evil againſt thee: they imagined a miſchievous device, which they are not able to perform. 12. Therefore ſhalt thou † make them turn their back, when [l] thou ſhalt make ready thine arrows upon thy ſtrings, againſt the face of them. 13. Be thou exalted, LORD, in thine own ſtrength: [m] ſo will we ſing and praiſe thy power.

g Mal. iv. 1.
h Pſ. xviii. 8.
i Job xviii. 16, 19. Pſ. xxxvii. 28. & cix. 13. Iſa. xiv. 20.
k Pſ. ii. 1, 2.
† Or, Set them as a butt. Job vii. 20. & xvi. 12.
l Pſ. vii. 12, 13.
m Rev. xi. 17.

v. 7—13. Praiſe for paſt mercies encourages confidence of preſent and future bleſſings; the people therefore expreſs their truſt, that no enemies ſhould ever ſhake the ſtability of David's throne; but that vengeance from God ſhould purſue and overtake them to the uttermoſt; and when this divine interpoſition appeared, they promiſe to renew their grateful ſongs of praiſe. But we muſt look farther than David's throne, and the ſubdual of his enemies, to the more enduring dominion of David's Son and Lord.

1. In the Lord he truſted, and ſtill continues to truſt in the fulfilment of the everlaſting covenant of promiſe to him and his ſeed, which the mercy of God ſuggeſted; and the ſame mercy will keep him firmly eſtabliſhed in the diſcharge of his mediatorial character; ſo that his enemies ſhall never be able to fruſtrate his deſigns of grace and love towards his people. Note, The ſtability of every believer ſtands upon as ſure a baſis as the throne of the Redeemer; if he cannot be moved, neither ſhall we.

2. His enemies muſt finally and eternally fall before him: wicked men, and wicked devils, who have hated his government, ſhall not eſcape his arm. Their miſchievous devices ſhall not only be diſappointed, whether againſt himſelf or his people, but their malice be viſited in judgments terrible as juſt: wrath to the uttermoſt ſhall overtake them, the furnace of hell be heated for their reception, and that fire, which is ſo intolerably tormenting, as well as eternally enduring, ſhall burn and leave them neither root nor branch; whilſt ſharp arrows within ſhall pierce the conſcience, and waken up the worm which never dies. Sinner, mark the end of the enemies of Chriſt and his kingdom; conſider thy ways, and be wiſe.

3. The whole is aſcribed to the Lord's power; it is he who muſt and will exalt his own glory in the ſalvation of his people, and deſtruction of his enemies; and all our work and buſineſs will be, everlaſtingly to ſing and praiſe him for his compleat redemption.

PSALM XXII.

The Spirit of Chriſt, which was in the prophets, teſtifies in this pſalm, as clearly and fully as any where elſe in all the Old Teſtament, the ſufferings of Chriſt, and the glory that ſhould follow, 1 Pet. i. 11. of him, no doubt, David here ſpeaks, and not of himſelf, or of any other man. Mixing complaints, and prayers, and comforts, he ſpeaks, 1. Of the humiliation of Chriſt, ver. 1—21. 2. Of the exaltation of Chriſt, that his undertaking ſhould be for the glory of God, ver. 22—25. For the ſalvation and joy of his people, ver. 26—29. And for the perpetuating of his own kingdom, ver. 30, 31. In ſinging this pſalm, we ought to keep our thoughts fixed upon Chriſt, and be ſo affected with his ſufferings, as to experience the fellowſhip of them, and ſo affected with his grace, as to experience the power and influence of it.

¶ To the chief muſician upon † Aijeleth Shahar,
A pſalm of David.

† Or, the hind of the morning.

1. [a] MY God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? why art thou ſo far from ‡ helping me, and from the words of my [b] roring? 2. O my God, I cry in the day-time, [c] but thou heareſt not; and in the night-ſeaſon, and am not ſilent. 3. But thou art holy, O thou [d] that inhabiteſt the praiſes of Iſrael. 4. [e] Our fathers truſted in thee: they truſted, and thou didſt deliver them. 5. They cried unto thee, and were delivered: [f] they truſted in thee, and were not confounded. 6. But I am a worm, and no man, [g] a reproach of men, and deſpiſed of the people. 7. [h] All they that ſee me, laugh me to ſcorn: they ſhoot out the lip, [i] they ſhake the head, ſaying, 8. [k] He § truſted on the LORD, that he would deliver him: [l] let him deliver him, || ſeeing he delighted in him. 9. But [m] thou art he that took me out of the womb; thou didſt † make me hope, when I was upon my mother's breaſts. 10. I was caſt upon thee from the womb: [n] thou art my God from my mother's belly.

a Mat. xxvii. 46. Mark xv. 34.
‡ Heb. My ſalvation.
b Heb. v. 7.
c Lam. iii. 8.
d Deut. x. 21.
e Rom. xv. 4.
f Iſa. xlix. 23. Rom. ix. 33.
g Iſa. liii. 3.
h Mat. xxvii. 39.
i Pſ. cix. 25.
k Mat. xxvii. 43.
§ Heb. Rolled himſelf upon.
l Pſ. xci. 14.
|| Or, if he delight.
m Pſ. lxxi. 6. Iſa. xlix. 1.
† Or, keep me in ſafety.
n Iſa. xlvi. 3.

v. 1—10. The title of this pſalm is to the chief muſician upon Aijeleth Shahar, which ſeveral underſtand of the muſical inſtrument to which it was ſet; others, that it points to Chriſt, the ſubject of it, as the morning hind, given up to the toils of the hunters, but glorioſly at laſt eſcaping from their ſnares. We have here,

1. A bitter complaint from a ſenſe of God's abſence from his ſoul. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? withdrawn the ſenſe of thy favour, and art ſo far from helping me, when under the bittereſt agonies of ſoul, as well as tormenting pains in my body, and from the words of my roaring, when with an exceeding loud and bitter cry I bemoan my wretchedneſs, (See this fulfilled, Mat. xxvii. 46.) In the day on the croſs, and in the night, in the garden, inceſſantly he cried; and yet the bitter cup might not paſs from him, and herein God appeared as tho' he heard him not. Note, (1.) If God for a time left his own ſon to conflict with ſuch diſtreſs of ſoul, let not any ſaint of God, in a like caſe, think that a ſtrange thing hath happened unto him. (2.) We may not ceaſe to uſe the language of faith, though oppreſſed with affliction, and dejected with fear: My God muſt we ſtill call him. (3.) As long as the ſoul can cry and complain to God, though as it were in dying groans, there is yet life and hope, and he will bring us from the gates of death. (4.) If the exerciſe be long, as well as grievous, and God ſeem not to hear or regard us, yet it becomes us with ceaſeleſs importunity ſtill day and night to cry, if ſo be there may be hope.

2. He encourages his truſt in God, notwithſtanding his miſerable eſtate, [1.] From a ſenſe of the holineſs of God; Thou art holy, who, in all the ſufferings the Redeemer endured, deſigned to diſplay his righteouſneſs in the puniſhment of ſin; for having become his people's ſurety, it was juſt he ſhould bear their ſorrows. O thou that inhabiteſt the praiſes of Iſrael, art the object of continual praiſe for the wondrous mercies manifeſted in redeeming grace. [2.] From the former experience of the ſaints of God: Our fathers truſted in thee, &c. As God, it may be ſaid, Who is his father? As man, he was the ſeed of Abraham, David, &c. whoſe troubles were as great, as their deliverances were glorious, and who never ſought God's face in vain. Note, (1.) If God's glory be exalted by our ſufferings, it may well reconcile us to them. (2.) The experience of former ages ſtands as a leſſon and encouragement to us, to be followers of thoſe who, through faith and patience, inherit the promiſes.

3. He laments the contempt and reproach caſt upon him: as a worm trodden down by every foot; ſo deſpicable, as if he was no man; below the meaneſt; derided and ſcorned; treated as an impoſtor; executed as a villain and murderer; and, even on the accurſed tree, mockery added to his ſhame and torture; whilſt they who went by literally fulfilled this prophecy, wagging the head, and ſaying, He truſted in God, that he would deliver him: let him deliver him, ſeeing he delighted in him. Note, (1.) The moſt honourable character in the ſight of God, is uſually that which man deſpiſeth. (2.) They who will be followers of Chriſt, muſt be content to bear his reproach.

4. Notwithſtanding he truſted in God, whoſe care from tendereſt infancy he had experienced; by wondrous providence, though in a ſtable born, thou didſt make me hope, or, keep me in ſafety; and, by a miraculous viſion, ſecured him, when a babe at the breaſt, in Egypt from Herod's cruelty. I was caſt upon thee from the days of my nativity, and I truſt I ſhall find the ſame protection to the end of my life. Note, The mercies of our days of helpleſs infancy ſhould never be forgotten; and he that brought us ſafely from the womb, we are bound to truſt, will carry us comfortably to our grave.

11. Be not far from me, for trouble is near; for [o] there is none to help. 12. [p] Many bulls have compaſſed me: ſtrong bulls of Baſhan have beſet me round.
13. [q] They gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion. 14. I am poured out like water, and all my bones are out of joint: [r] my heart is like wax, it is melted in the midſt of my bowels. 15.
[s] My ſtrength is dried up like a potſherd: and [t] my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou haſt brought me into the duſt of death. 16. For dogs have compaſſed me, the aſſembly of the wicked have incloſed me: [u] they pierced my hands and my feet. 17. I may tell all my bones: [x] they look and ſtare upon me. 18. [y] They part my garments among them, and caſt lots upon my veſture. 19. But be not thou far from me, O LORD; O my ſtrength, haſte thee to help me. 20. Deliver my ſoul from the ſword: † my darling from the power of the dog. 21. Save me from [z] the lion's mouth: for thou haſt heard me from the horns of the unicorns.

[o] Iſa. lxiii. 5.
[p] Pſ. lxviii. 30. Amos iv. 1.
[q] Job xvi. 10. Lam. ii. 16. & iii. 46.
[r] Job xxiii. 16.
[s] Prov. xvii. 22.
[t] Lam. iv. 4. John xix. 28.
[u] Mat. xxvii. 35.
[x] Luke xxiii. 35.
[y] Ibid. 34. John xix. 24.
† Heb. My only one. Pſ. xxxv. 17.
[z] 1 Pet. v. 8.

v. 11—21. Whither ſhall the afflicted ſufferer fly, but unto the God of his help and his ſalvation? We have here,

1. The ſufferings of Chriſt deſcribed, and with ſuch preciſion, that we cannot but be convinced, that Jeſus is the Chriſt. Troubles like rolling waves, from perfidious friends and open enemies, approached him; none to help him; forſaken of all; and left alone to grapple with the united force of earth and hell. Fierce and ſtrong as bulls of Baſhan, his enemies ruſhed upon him; eager as the blood-hound on his prey, they ſeized him; and, cruel as a ravening and roaring lion, ſought to terrify his mind, whilſt they broke him in pieces with their ſavage jaws. His humanity, weak as water; his joints, as if unlooſed; his heart melted as wax, and his ſtrength quite failing him. Compaſſed about by the aſſembly of the wicked, urgent to haſten his miſerable end; nailed to the accurſed tree; hung up in ignominy and torture; his bones diſlocated, and ready to ſtart through his ſkin; his enemies feaſting their eyes with the inhuman ſpectacle; his tongue dry with thirſt, which is inſulted with vinegar mingled with gall; his blood guſhing out as water upon the earth; his ſoul melted as wax with a ſenſe of divine wrath, and death coming to put at laſt a period to his miſeries, and bring him to the duſt. Such things he endured for us men and our ſalvation. Had he not borne theſe torturing pains, we muſt have been eternally tormented: if his ſoul had not felt the wrath, ours muſt have been expoſed to it: but for his thirſt, we muſt have wanted a drop of water to cool a flaming tongue; and if his body had not for a while been laid in the duſt, our bodies and ſouls muſt have for ever lain in the belly of hell. O bleſſed then, for ever bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt.

2. The minuteſt circumſtances are obſerved, their dividing his garments, and caſting lots upon his veſture; and this we find the ſoldiers did, John xix. 23, 24. He parted with his ſeamleſs veſture as a prey, that he might obtain for us ſpotleſs garments of everlaſting righteouſneſs.

3. His prayer for help: Be not thou far from me, O Lord. As man now ſuffering, God was his refuge: O my ſtrength, by which the humanity can be alone ſupported, haſte thee to help me; the greatneſs of my trials admits of no delay. Deliver my ſoul from the ſword, from the ſenſe of divine wrath, and my darling, or my only one, or my ſolitary one, meaning himſelf, his precious life, from the power of the dog, the wicked Caiaphas, unjuſt Pilate, or treacherous Judas. Save me from the lion's mouth, from Satan, that, like a ramping and roaring lion, threatened to devour him: for thou haſt heard me, and therefore I can truſt the ſame help ſhall be granted, from the horns of the unicorns; from my foes, that like unicorns ruſh at me, and between whoſe horns I am ready to periſh. Note, (1.) Though God may ſeem to hide himſelf, yet he is not far from his people, and means only to excite their importunity in prayer, and to exerciſe their faith. (2.) Hath God delivered his darling Son from the lion's mouth, and the unicorn's horn; and ſhall he not deliver his darling people alſo? (3.) We can never be caſt ſo low, but there is ſtill ground for truſt and hope in God.

22. [a] I will declare thy name unto [b] my brethren: in the midſt of the congregation will I praiſe thee. 23.
Ye that fear the LORD, praiſe him; all ye the ſeed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the ſeed of Iſrael. 24. For he hath not deſpiſed, nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted: neither hath he hid his face from him, but when [c] he cried unto him, he heard. 25.
[d] My praiſe ſhall be of thee in the great congregation:
[e] I will pay my vows before them that fear him. 26.
The meek [f] ſhall eat and be ſatisfied: they ſhall praiſe the LORD that ſeek him; your heart ſhall live for ever.
27. [g] All the ends of the world ſhall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations ſhall worſhip before thee. 28. For [h] the kingdom is the LORD's: and he is the governor among the nations. 29. All they [i] that be fat upon earth, ſhall eat and worſhip: all they that go down to the duſt, [k] ſhall bow before him, and none can keep alive his own ſoul.
30. A ſeed ſhall ſerve him, [l] it ſhall be accounted to the LORD for a generation. 31. [m] They ſhall come, and ſhall declare [n] his righteouſneſs unto a people that ſhall be born, that he hath done this.

[a] Heb. ii. 12.
[b] John xx. 17. Rom. viii. 29.
[c] Heb v. 7.
[d] Pſ. xxxv. 18.
[e] Pſ. cxvi. 14.
[f] John vi. 51.
[g] Pſ. ii. 8. & lxxii. 11. & lxxxvi. 9. & xcviii. 3. Iſa. xlix. 6.
[h] Obad. 21. Zech. xiv. 9.
[i] Pſ. xlv. 12.
[k] Phil. ii. 10.
[l] Heb. ii. 13.
[m] Pſ. lxxviii. 6. & cii. 18. Iſa. lx. 3, 4.
[n] Rom. iii. 21, 22. Phil. iii. 9.

v. 22—31. When Jeſus, by the ſufferings of death for a moment, ſeemed to ſink beneath his foes, in ſilent anguiſh his people ſat diſconſolate; but lo! he comes to awaken up their praiſes, and from the duſt to proclaim his finiſhed redemption.

1. He opens the triumphant ſong himſelf: I will declare thy name, thy glory, grace, and faithfulneſs, among my brethren, the church of the redeemed, whom Chriſt is not aſhamed to call brethren: in the midſt of the congregation will I praiſe thee; in the hearts of his militant members on earth, or at the head of his glorified ſaints in heaven.

2. He calls upon his people to join the thankſgiving. The ſpiritual ſeed of Jacob, and the true Iſrael of God, muſt praiſe and glorify him, for his mercy in the Redeemer, whoſe afflictions, far from deſpiſing or abhorring, he was well-pleaſed with, and accepted as the full ſatisfaction for his people's ſins; looked upon him with moſt delightful complacence, even in his agony, and heard and anſwered his cry in the ſalvation vouchſafed to him in the reſurrection-day, and to all his people for his ſake: and herein the Saviour leads the way, My prayer ſhall be of thee in the great congregation: I will pay my vows of praiſe to God, (See v. 21.) or his engagements to his redeemed, whoſe character is given as thoſe that fear God. Note, (1.) Praiſe is a ſolemn part of divine worſhip, and in it the whole congregation ſhould gladly and devoutly join. (2.) The work of the Redeemer will be the matter of the ſaints praiſes to eternity.

3. In Chriſt are found rich ſupplies for the ſoul's nouriſhment and comfort. The meek, thoſe who are lowly in their own eyes, and have learnt of the meek and humble Jeſus, ſhall eat, feed upon the fleſh of Chriſt, and all the ſaving benefits thence derived, and be ſatisfied, in the perfection of his ſacrifice, fice, righteouſneſs, and redemption. They ſhall praiſe the Lord that ſeek him, who hungring and thirſting after his righteouſneſs, ſeek and find all fulneſs in him; your heart ſhall live for ever, the life of grace here, the life of glory hereafter. Note, (1.) They who feed on Chriſt by faith, poſſeſs a life in him, which even death cannot deſtroy. (2.) If we would have comfort in Chriſt, we muſt be like him, meek and lowly in heart, and then we ſhall ſurely find reſt unto our ſouls.

4. The extent of Chriſt's kingdom ſhall be univerſal. By the power of Divine grace, the ends of the earth ſhall be called and converted to him, v. 27. and come and worſhip before him. The kingdoms of the world ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord, and he ſhall be the governor, to reign in his people's hearts by love, and over his enemies with a rod of iron. High and low, quick and dead, v. 29. muſt ſubmit to his government; and whilſt they own that they cannot keep alive their own ſouls, ſhall truſt them ſafely in his hands, to keep them againſt the great reſurrection day. Note, (1.) However the cauſe of Chriſt in any age may be oppreſſed and brought low, it ſhall be finally triumphant. (2.) When we are going down into the duſt, it is an unſpeakable mercy to know whom we have believed, and to be comfortably ſatisfied concerning our eternal life in glory. For,

5. The kingdom of Chriſt ſhall be eternal, as well as univerſal. A ſeed ſhall ſerve him; in every age, to the end of time, there ſhall be a choſen remnant; it ſhall be accounted to the Lord for a generation, ſhare his tendereſt regards, and be kept by his paternal care. They ſhall come from age to age, and ſhall declare his righteouſneſs unto a people that ſhall be born, that he hath done this; ſhall tranſmit to lateſt poſterity the Redeemer's work, and eſpecially his righteouſneſs, the perfection of it, the neceſſity of being found in it, and the ſecurity of thoſe to whom it is imputed. Thus ſhall the memorial of him be kept up, till he ſhall come the ſecond time from heaven, not as a ſuffering Meſſiah, but as the righteous Judge and eternal King, to reign in glory over the election of his grace, and to execute judgment on the neglecters and deſpiſers of his great ſalvation!

PSALM XXIII.

Many of David's pſalms are full of complaints, but this is full of comforts, and may be well adopted by every believer in Jeſus, who, with David, enjoys the guidance and care of the great ſhepherd and biſhop of our ſouls. 1. The pſalmiſt here claims relation to God as his ſhepherd, ver. 1. 2. He recounts the kind things God had done for him as his ſhepherd, ver. 2, 3, 5. 3. From hence he infers, that he ſhould want no good, ver. 1. That he need fear no evil, ver. 4. 4. That the ſame mercy ſhould follow him in time and eternity, ver. 6.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. THE LORD is [a] my ſhepherd, [b] I ſhall not want. 2. [c] He maketh me to lie down in † green paſtures: [d] he leadeth me beſide the ſtill waters. 3. He reſtoreth my ſoul: [e] he leadeth me in the paths of righteouſneſs for his name's ſake. 4. Yea, though [f] I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, [g] I will fear no evil: for [h] thou art with me, thy rod and thy ſtaff they comfort me. 5. [i] Thou prepareſt a table before me in the preſence of mine enemies: thou anointeſt my head with oil, my cup runneth over. 6. Surely goodneſs and mercy ſhall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the houſe of the LORD ‡ for ever.

[a] Iſa. xl. 11. Jer. xxiii. 4. Ezek. xxxiv. 23. John x. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 25. Rev. vii. 17.
[b] Phil. iv. 19.
[c] Ezek. xxxiv. 14.
† Heb. Paſtures of tender graſs.
[d] Rev. vii. 17.
[e] Pſal. v. 8. Prov. viii. 20.
[f] Job x. 21, 22.
[g] Pſal. iii. 6. & cxviii. 6.
[h] Iſa. xliii. 2.
[i] John x. 9.
‡ Heb. To length of days.

v. 1—6. The deſign of God's word is to encourage the faith, enliven the hope, and quicken the obedience of his people. In the pſalm before us, he appears in a character moſt amiable and engaging, as feeding the flock of his paſture, whom he firſt bought with his blood. The Lord is my ſhepherd may every believer ſay; mine, becauſe I am his, dearly purchaſed and tenderly beloved: I ſhall not want, or fail, how can I, when out of his fulneſs I receive, who is able to do exceeding abundantly for me above all I can aſk or think, and whoſe love inclines him to ſupply me according to the exceeding greatneſs of his power. My body he will feed with food convenient for me, my ſoul he will ſupply according to the riches of his grace; and as the ſource of my bleſſings is inexhauſtible, till he fails, I cannot. He maketh me to lie down in green paſtures, where faith feeds upon the great and precious promiſes of Jeſus, ever affording the ſweeteſt repaſt; and in his bleſſed ordinances, finds meat to eat the world knows not of. There he maketh me to lie down, the work is his own; who, when a wanderer on the world's barren mountains, kindly led me to theſe verdant fields, where now I find a quiet reſting-place, lie down with pleaſing compoſure, becauſe of my ſhepherd's care, and fear no guilt to embitter my portion, no enemy to diſturb my repoſe. He leadeth me beſide the ſtill waters, the waters of Shiloah, that go ſoftly, flowing from the rock Chriſt, cooling the thirſt which the remembrance of paſt ſin, or preſent temptation cauſes, and filling the ſoul with conſolations unſpeakable and glorious, as the ſource from whence they flow. He reſtoreth my ſoul, when fierce diſeaſe, or deep decay threatens my ruin; or fooliſhly wandering from the ſhepherd's care, my erring footſteps would turn aſide, his watchful eye is over me, his tender hand ſtretched out to ſave me, to heal the ſickneſs of my ſoul, to reſtore the joys I once was wont to find, and with freſh vigour to refreſh my fainting heart. He leadeth me in paths of righteouſneſs, points out my way, holds up my goings, and enables me to walk upright before him, in that highway of holineſs which leads to eternal glory; for his name ſake, as an act of ſovereign grace and favour, to diſplay in me a ſinner the riches of his glory. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the ſhadow of death, the deepeſt diſtreſſes of afflicting providences, or that unknown dark and dangerous road, at the proſpect of which mortality ſhrinks back, and ſenſe ſhudders, I will fear no evil; dark as the ſhadows are ſpread over it, deep as the valley lies, long and terrible as to nature's view the road appears, my faith from far diſcerns the beams of glorious light, my ſoul dares boldly ſtep into the grave, aſſured there to find the golden gates of life and immortality. For thou art with me, thou who haſt paſſed before the dreadful ſhade, ſhalt guide me ſafely through; into thy hands with chearful reſignation, I give up my ſoul, my body, they are thine; and as life with all its trials, ſo death with all its terrors, cannot ſeparate me from thy love, or for a moment rob me of thy unceaſing care. Thy rod, under which I have paſſed, and been ſealed unto the day of redemption, and thy ſtaff of promiſes unchangeable, they comfort me, make me more than conqueror over all my fears. O death, where is thy ſting? O grave, where is thy victory? behold a worm of earth, a ſinful worm of earth braving thy ſtroke, and triumphing in my fall. Thou prepareſt a table before me; whilſt here below I ſojourn, I want no manner of thing that is good, either for my body or my ſoul; thy liberal hand opens and fills me with plenteouſneſs, and this even in the preſence of mine enemies, who in vain ſeek to diſtreſs or embitter the portion thou doſt beſtow: thou anointeſt my head with oil, that oil of gladneſs and joy a ſtranger intermeddleth not with; a joy, the earneſt of that bliſs above, when crowned with glory I ſhall ſit down at thy feſtal board in heaven; and my cup runneth over with mercies more than I can tell, flowing from the rivers of endleſs bliſs at thy right hand for evermore. Surely goodneſs and mercy, ſuch as I have already taſted, goodneſs ſo beyond all deſert, and mercy ſo free and boundleſs, ſhall follow me all the days of my life, like thoſe welcome ſtreams, that in the parched deſert followed Iſrael's camp, ſo every morning ſhall new mercies ſurround me; to-morrow ſhall be as to-day; yea, much more abundant, deeper and ſweeter ſhall be the ſtream, the farther on time's rapid wings I am born, till launching forth into the ocean of eternity, my bleſſedneſs ſhall be compleat, and I ſhall be filled with all the fulneſs of God. And I ſhall dwell in the houſe of the Lord for ever; dwell there, where without a vail, irradiation from the eternal Three ſhall dart unutterable joys into my glorified ſpirit, transformed into the image of the God whom I behold; and near his throne, high and lifted up, whilſt bright angelic hoſts, his train, fill the vaſt temple with his glory, my happy lot ſhall be to dwell, to dwell for ever; his love my all-ſufficient portion, and my happy labour everlaſting praiſe. Be this, Lord, my wiſhed-for reſt for ever; here let me dwell, for I have a delight therein.

PSALM XXIV.

This pſalm relates to the kingdom of Chriſt: 1. His univerſal government is ſet forth, ver. 1, 2. 2. The ſubjects of his kingdom are deſcribed, ver. 3—6. 3. A ſummons is given to all, to give the king admiſſion, ver. 7—10. It is ſuppoſed, that this pſalm was penned upon occaſion of David's bringing up the ark to the place prepared for it; and the intention of it was, to lead the people above the pomp of external ceremonies to faith in Chriſt, of whom the ark was a type.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] THE earth is the LORD's, and the fulneſs thereof, the world, and they that dwell therein. 2. For [b] he hath founded it upon the ſeas, and eſtabliſhed it upon the floods. 3. [c] Who ſhall aſcend into the hill of the LORD? and who ſhall ſtand in his holy place? 4. [d] He that hath clean hands [e] and a pure heart; who hath not lift up his ſoul unto vanity, nor ſworn deceitfully. 5. † He ſhall receive [f] the bleſſing from the LORD, and righteouſneſs from the God of his ſalvation. 6. [g] This is the generation of them that ſeek him, that ſeek thy face, ‡ O Jacob. Selah.

[a] Exod. ix. 29. & xix. 5. Deut. x. 14. Job xli. 11. Pſal. l. 12. 1 Cor. x. 26.
[b] Job xxxviii. 6. Pſal. civ. 5. & cxxxvi. 6. 2 Pet. iii. 5.
[c] Pſal. xv. 1. Mic. vi. 6.
[d] Iſa. xxxiii. 15, 16.
[e] Mat. v. 8.
† Or he who receives.
[f] Eph. i. 3.
[g] John i. 47. Gal. vi. 16.
‡ Or, O God of Jacob.

v. 1—6. We have here,

1. The Lord's univerſal ſovereignty and dominion aſſerted, and the grounds of his title thereunto indiſputably proved. The earth is the Lord's, he is the rightful lord and owner, and the fulneſs thereof, whatever lies in the bowels of the earth, or feeds upon its ſurface; whatever flies through the trackleſs air, or makes their path in the great waters, all own him ſovereign, and ſerve his will: the world, and they that dwell therein, not only the inanimate creation, not only the living creatures, void of reaſon, but eſpecially men, the inhabitants of the world, are his workmanſhip, and therefore owe him bounden duty and ſervice, contentment with their lot, and a ſanctified uſe of the creatures whom the great Lord of all hath lent for our ſervice, 1 Cor. x. 26—28. For he hath founded it, and therefore juſtly claims a right over the work of his hands, having produced firſt the matter at his word, faſhioned it for his glory, and ſtill continuing to eſtabliſh and preſerve it, fearfully as it appears ſituated upon the ſeas, and eſtabliſhed upon the floods.

2. Though all things are Chriſt's, by virtue of creation, he hath a peculiar property in ſome, by redemption and grace, the members of his church on earth, and deſigned to inherit glory in heaven. This world is a paſſing ſcene, a ſtage, that the hand which formed it will ſhortly ſtrike down; but when theſe heavens are diſſolved, and this earth burnt up, who ſhall aſcend into the hill of the Lord, the heavenly Zion, and who ſhall ſtand in his holy place, the celeſtial ſanctuary? This is the grand enquiry. The following words deſcribe the character; may we find it applicable to our own ſouls! He that hath clean hands, whoſe converſation is exemplary, his hands neither defiled with diſhoneſt gain nor oppreſſion, and lifted up in prayer without wrath or doubting; and this from a principle of divine faith, working by love, and making a pure heart, not abſolutely and perfectly ſo, for that is not the lot of man on earth; but free from allowed impurity in our moſt ſecret deſires, and in its bent ſincere and upright before the heart-ſearching God, who hath not lift up his ſoul unto vanity, or ſet his heart upon it, neither ſeeking inordinately the pleaſures, intereſts, riches, eſteem, or honours of the world, nor placing his happineſs in any of theſe, but in a meaſure crucified to the world, and the world unto him: nor ſworn deceitfully, but made conſcience of his words and oaths, and faithfully adhered to them, however diſadvantageous. He ſhall receive, or he who receives the bleſſing from the Lord, the bleſſing of pardon and grace, as a poor indigent ſinner coming to the Lord, to receive out of his fulneſs, and eſpecially righteouſneſs from the God of his ſalvation, that divine and all-perfect righteouſneſs of Jeſus, in which alone he can with confidence appear before God, and on which his title to glory ſtands. This is the generation of them that ſeek him, in all his holy ways below, and will meet him in his hill of glory above, even that ſeek thy face, O Jacob, the God of Jacob, who may be here intended, or the ſpiritual ſeed of Jacob, the church of the redeemed; to join whom, that ſoul will be brought who walks as is above deſcribed, and ſeeks to be found among thoſe faithful few, that ſhall be counted to the Lord for a generation. Note, (1.) It behoves us often to examine ourſelves, whether we are in the faith, and to enquire whether Chriſt be formed in us. (2.) They who would reign with Chriſt above, muſt walk with him here below; for without holineſs, no man ſhall ſee the Lord. (3.) Though our hearts muſt be ſincere and without offence unto the day of Chriſt, our title to glory ſtands upon a higher claim than our own obedience, even on the divine righteouſneſs of God manifeſt in the fleſh, which he wrought out for his people's ſalvation.

7. [h] Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlaſting doors, and the King of glory [i] ſhall come in. 8. Who is this King of glory? [k] the LORD ſtrong and [l] mighty, the LORD mighty in battle. 9. Lift up your heads, O ye gates, even lift them up, ye everlaſting doors, and the King of glory ſhall come in. 10. Who is this king of glory? the LORD of hoſts, he is the King of glory. Selah.

[h] Pſal. cxviii. 10. Iſa. xxvi. 2.
[i] Rev. iii. 20.
[k] Hag. ii. 7. 1 Cor. ii. 8.
[l] Rev. xviii. 8.

v. 7—10. If, as is uſually thought, this pſalm was compoſed on the bringing up the ark from Obed-edom to the tabernacle in Zion, theſe verſes contain the alternate queſtions and reſponſes of thoſe who ſtood prepared for its reception within, and thoſe without, who demanded admiſſion for the ark of God they bore; but this triumphant entry into Zion may be regarded as the figure of the more ſplendid and glorious entrance of Jeſus, (1.) Into the believer's heart, and (2.) At the laſt day, with the train of his redeemed, into the manſions of eternal glory.

1. The Lord in his goſpel ſtands at the door and knocks, demanding admiſſion into the hearts of his people, that living temple, where he moſt delights to dwell, and they, with the moſt enlarged affection, are called upon to welcome him in. Do we aſk who is this King of Glory? He is the Lord, Jehovah, ſtrong and mighty, even the Lord mighty in battle, coming from the field of ſlaughtered foes, red in his apparel, the conqueror of death, and ſin, and hell; and therefore juſtly claims that dominion over us, to which his victory entitles him. He repeats the call, as urgent for admiſſion: ſuch is the grace of our Redeemer, that with importunity he woes us to be happy under his gentle ſway; and ſhall we not open to him, who is Lord of hoſts, able to ſave or to deſtroy, and whoſe kingdom ruleth over all, in glory everlaſting? Note, They are truly great, and ſupremely happy, with whom Jeſus condeſcends to take up his abode, and in whoſe hearts he fixes his gracious throne. Well may we cry, come in, dear Lord, to me!

2. When, riſing from his throne of judgment, the hoſts of ſaints and angels, who grace his triumphs, ſhall with him aſcend above the heavens, then ſhall theſe everlaſting doors be opened for his reception; with welcomes of joy tranſporting ſhall the King of Glory enter in, and the remembrance of all his mighty victories afford matter for the unceaſing ſongs of eternity.

PSALM XXV.

This pſalm ſeems to be penned during his troubles, from Abſalom or Sheba. 1. He prays to be protected, and lead in God's holy way, ver. 1—5. 2. That God would be merciful to his ſins, ver. 6, 7, 11. 3. He expreſſes his truſt in God, ver. 8—10, 14. 4. He lays his diſtreſſed ſituation before God, and prays for help and deliverance, ver. 15—22.

¶ A Pſalm of David.

1. [a] UNTO thee, O LORD, do I lift up my ſoul. 2. O my God, I [b] truſt in thee, let me not be aſhamed: [c] let not mine enemies triumph over me. 3. Yea, let none that wait on thee be aſhamed; let them be aſhamed which tranſgreſs [d] without cauſe. 4. [e] Shew me thy ways, O LORD; teach me thy paths. 5. Lead me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my ſalvation, on thee do I wait all the day. 6. Remember, O LORD, [f] thy † tender mercies and thy loving kindneſſes: for they have been ever of old. 7. Remember not [g] the ſins of my youth, nor my tranſgreſſions: according to thy mercy remember thou me, [h] for thy goodneſs ſake, O LORD.

[a] Pſal. lxxxvi. 4. & cxliii. 8. Lam. iii. 41.
[b] Pſal. xxii. 5. & xxxi. 8. & xxxiv. 8. Iſa. xxviii. 16. Rom. x. 11.
[c] Pſal. xiii. 4.
[d] Ibid. lix. 4.
[e] Exod. xxxiii. 13. Pſal. xxvii. 11. & lxxxvi. 11. & cxlii. 8.
[f] Pſal. ciii. 17. & cvii. 1. Jer. xxxiii. 11.
† Heb. Bowels.
[g] Job xiii. 26. Jer. iii. 25.
[h] Pſal. li. 1.

v. 1—7. David's troubles always brought him to his knees, and there he ever found a ſure relief. We have him here,

1. Approaching God under his afflictions, of whatever ſort they were, and caſting his care upon him. Unto thee do I lift up my ſoul in prayer for ſupport, or as a ſacred depoſit, commend it to his keeping and care. O my God, I truſt in thee, fix my anchor within the vail, and amidſt the ſtorm contentedly wait the iſſue; ſince thou art my God, I am ſafe. Note, (1.) An intereſt in God's love is a ſure protection from every foe. (2.) The more our hearts are lifted up from earth to heaven, and leaving theſe vanities, we place our ſupreme deſire on the glories above, the more ſure we are our hope ſhall not be diſappointed.

2. He prays for himſelf, and all that like him were afflicted; that neither he nor they might be aſhamed of their confidence, or diſappointed of their hope. Let not mine enemies triumph over me, as they ſoon would, if God ſhould withdraw his kind ſupport, but let them be aſhamed that tranſgreſs without a cauſe againſt me, who have never provoked them, againſt thee, the God of all mercy. Note, (1.) Whilſt we are praying for ourſelves, we muſt not forget our brethren; but be advocates for them, as they are for us. (2.) He that believeth, ſhall not be aſhamed; the God of his confidence never faileth thoſe who ſeek him. (3.) Though tranſgreſſors may appear for a while ſecure and triumphant in their wickedneſs, yet their day is coming, when everlaſting confuſion ſhall cover them.

3. He begs of God to direct and lead him in the right way of duty, to direct him in his worſhip and ſervice, to enlighten his mind with all ſaving truth, and enable him to walk under the influence of it. And for this he pleads, becauſe God is his ſalvation, the author and finiſher of it, on whom his ſoul depends, and becauſe he waited on him all the day, in conſequence of his promiſe, to hear the prayer of his people. Note, (1.) We are by nature both blind and impotent, ignorant of God's ways, and unable to walk in them; he muſt therefore teach the ignorant, and help the helpleſs, or we can never walk aright and pleaſe him. (2.) They who wait upon God, as the God of their ſalvation, will never wait in vain.

4. He pleads the grace and everlaſting promiſes of God in Jeſus Chriſt, which former ſaints ever experienced in their days of trouble; and he humbly hopes God will not forget to manifeſt the ſame grace, and fulfil the ſame promiſes to him. Note, (1.) The believer's hope fixes on God's everlaſting love, which remains the ſame yeſterday, to day, and for ever. (2.) What others have proved their ſupport, we are the more encouraged to truſt upon.

5. He begs pardon for tranſgreſſions, which from the womb began in a corrupted nature, and appeared from his youth up;

for which, ſhould God enter into judgment with him, he muſt be utterly condemned: therefore he cries for mercy, and diſclaiming all merit, pleads only God's unbounded grace and goodneſs. Note, (1.) The ſins of our youth, though forgiven and forgotten of God, ſhould never be forgotten by us. (2.) The only hope of the ſinner ariſes from God's free grace in a redeemer, without which, every tranſgreſſion muſt ſink us under black deſpair. (3.) They who draw near to God in humble faith, however great or aggravated their ſins, may confidently hope that they ſhall not only be forgiven, but forgotten.

8. Good and upright is the LORD: therefore will he teach ſinners in the way. 9. The meek will he guide in judgment: and the meek will he teach his way. 10.
All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth, unto ſuch as keep his covenant and his teſtimonies. 11. [i] For thy names ſake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity, for [k] it is great. 12. What man is he that feareth the LORD?
[l] him ſhall he teach in the way that he ſhall chooſe. 13.
His ſoul ſhall dwell † at eaſe: and his ſeed ſhall inherit the earth. 14. [m] The ſecret of the LORD is with them that fear him: and he will ſhew them his covenant.

[i] Pſal. xxxi. 3. Ezek. xx. 9.
[k] Rom. v. 20.
[l] Pſ. xxxvii. 23.
† Or in goodneſs.
[m] Prov. iii. 32. John vii. 17. & xv. 15.

v. 8—14. Having aſked of God direction and ſupport, he here promiſes himſelf that he ſhall find it.

Good and upright is the Lord, kind and gracious to his people, faithful to his promiſes, and equitable in his deciſions, therefore will he teach ſinners in the way, though they have offended and provoked him as I have done; yet when they return, he will not reject them, he will ſhew them Chriſt the living way, who came to ſave ſinners, and miniſter to them grace, that they may be enabled to walk in him, as ſouls ranſomed by his blood, and conducting to his glory. The meek, the humbled under a ſenſe of ſin, he will guide in judgment, giving them an underſtanding to know him that is true, and teach his way to them of juſtifying ſinners, through the blood and righteouſneſs of his dear Son. For all the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth, all his promiſes flow from boundleſs mercy, and are the dictates of eternal truth; and all his providences are deſigned with the moſt gracious intention for his people's good; ſo that they may confidently truſt him, whilſt in the way of duty they keep his covenant and his teſtimonies; hold faſt the one as their rock, and follow the other as their holy path of duty, in which they deſire to walk and pleaſe God. Not that any thing they can do, is worthy of God's regard, ſeeing in their beſt eſtate they have need to cry, For thy name's ſake, O Lord, pardon my iniquity, for it is great, much ſin cleaves to all they do, and God, for his name's ſake, will pardon; yea, the very greatneſs of their ſin may be made a plea for forgiveneſs; foraſmuch as God ſhall be more glorified, the more abundantly he pardons. What man then is he that feareth the Lord? conſcious of his guilt, and humbly confeſſing it before his offended God, him ſhall he teach in the way that he ſhall chooſe; the Lord ſhall order his goings, and his footſteps ſhall not ſlide. His ſoul ſhall dwell at eaſe, relieved from every diſtreſſing fear, and enjoying the peace which flows from pardoned ſin, or in goodneſs, as the word may be rendered, in the experience of God's love and favour; and his ſeed ſhall inherit the land, a ſufficiency here below, and hereafter the promiſed land of eternal reſt, the heavenly Canaan. The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, his myſteries of providence and grace are opened to them, they are admitted into that happy communion with him, which is unknown to others, and he will ſhew them his covenant, wherein their preſent grace and eternal glory are now ſecured to them in Chriſt, and they ſhall fully ſee the accompliſhment of all that is therein contained, when they come to his preſence above. Note, (1.) None can come to God for pardon and grace, but thoſe who feel experimentally their guilt and corruption. (2.) It is the ſame thing with God, to pardon many offences as few; ſo that the ſenſe of the greatneſs of our ſins ſhould never keep us from him, but drive us to him. (3.) They who find mercy with God in Jeſus Chriſt, are bound by every tie of love and duty to fear offending him, and to delight to pleaſe him in his holy ways. (4.) When we are ſo doing, all things ſhall work together for good to us, and ſweet mercies ſpring from the moſt afflictive providencies.

15. [n] Mine eyes are ever towards the LORD: for he ſhall pluck my feet out of the net. 16. Turn thee unto me, and have mercy upon me: for I am deſolate and afflicted. 17. The troubles of my heart are enlarged: O bring thou me out of my diſtreſſes. 18. [o] Look upon mine affliction and my pain, and forgive all my ſins.
19. Conſider mine enemies, for they are many, and they hate me with † cruel hatred. 20. O keep my ſoul and deliver me: let me not be aſhamed, for I put my truſt in thee. 21. Let integrity and uprightneſs preſerve me: for I wait on thee. 22. Redeem Iſrael, O God, [p] out of all his troubles.

[n] Pſ. cxxiii. 1.
[o] Exod. iii. 7.
† Heb. Hatred of violence.
[p] Pſal. xxxiv. 19.

v. 15—22. Encouraged by the views of God's goodneſs he had ſuggeſted, he again renews his complaints and prayers, in hopes of preſent and ſpeedy help.

1. His complaints are many and grievous. His feet are entangled in the net; either that which the counſels of Ahitophel and others ſpread for him, or with the ſnares of ſin that had prevailed againſt him; he is deſolate and afflicted, or alone and poor, forſaken of his ſubjects, and deſtitute of neceſſaries, or in his ſpirit grieved with the ſenſe of ſin, which had occaſioned his ſorrows. The troubles of his heart were enlarged, both thro' outward trials and inward diſtreſs, whilſt his guilt ſeems to lie heavier on his conſcience, than all the pain of his afflictions. His enemies were both many in number, and perſecuted him with a cruel hatred, ſo that he had need cry aloud, when thus compaſſed about on every ſide. Note, When God brings his people into trouble under his chaſtiſements, Satan uſually takes occaſion to aggravate their ſorrows, with his inward accuſings.

2. Under all, his eye is directed upward, his truſt unſhaken, and his prayer fervent. (1.) His ſin, as his greateſt burden, he prays God to forgive, v. 18. for that removed, all other ſufferings will be comparatively light afflictions. (2.) He begs God to bring him out of his diſtreſſes in his own good time and way. Note, True reſignation to affliction is not at all inconſiſtent with humble prayer for its removal. (3.) He prays God would conſider his enemies, to break their power, and deliver him from their hands. Note, Though we muſt love our enemies, we may ſafely pray againſt their wickedneſs. (4.) He pleads his integrity, v. 21. however guilty he ſtood before God, to them he had done no wrong. Note, It is a great comfort, when deſpitefully uſed of men, to be conſcious that the injury is unprovoked. (5.) He concludes with a general petition for the whole Iſrael of God, v. 22. either particularly for his afflicted kingdom, during his ſon's unnatural uſurpation, or for the ſending that glorious Saviour, who ſhould turn away ungodlineſs from Jacob, or rather more diffuſively that God would ſave his ſpiritual Iſrael from all their troubles, when the days of their warfare ſhall be ended, and in heaven they ſhall find that eternal repoſe, which no enemy without or within ſhall evermore be able to diſturb. Oh come that happy day!

PSALM XXVI.

This pſalm appears to have been penned on occaſion of the malicious aſperſions caſt on David, by his avowed perſecutor, Saul. It contains his appeal to God for his integrity, ver. 1, 2. for the proof of which he alledges, 1. His regard to God and his truth, ver. 3. 2. His antipathy to ſin and ſinners, ver. 4, 5. 3. His affection to the ordinances of God, ver. 6, 7, 8. Having thus proved his integrity, (1.) He deprecates the doom of the wicked, ver. 9, 10. (2.) He reſolves to hold faſt his integrity, and hope in God, ver. 11, 12. Herein David repreſents that innocent Lamb, who ſuffered ſo much from the revilings of men, and committed his cauſe to him who judgeth righteouſly.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] JUDGE me, O LORD, for [b] I have walked in mine integrity: I have truſted alſo in the LORD: therefore I ſhall not ſlide. 2. [c] Examine me,
O LORD, and prove me; try my reins and my heart.
3. For thy loving kindneſs is before mine eyes: and I have walked in thy truth. 4. [d] I have not ſat with vain perſons, neither will I go in with diſſemblers. 5. I have hated the congregation of evil doers: and will not ſit with the wicked.

[a] Pſal. vii. 8.
[b] Prov. xx. 7.
[c] Pſal. xvii. 3. & lxvi. 10. & cxxxix. 23.
[d] Pſal. i. 1. Jer. xv. 17.

v. 1—5. The greateſt innocence is no protection from the invenomed tongue of ſlander. It is well there is a day coming that ſhall confute the calumnies of the wicked, and turn them with confuſion on their own heads.

1. David here appeals to God for his integrity. Not as upright in the ſight of God, for there he pretended not to be juſtified; but as innocent of the charges laid againſt him by Saul, reſpecting which, he deſires to ſubmit to the heart-ſearching ſcrutiny of God, and to abide by his judgment, conſcious that there was no juſt occaſion of offence to be found in him; and therefore truſting that God would eſpouſe his righteous quarrel, and preſerve him that he ſhould not ſlide: neither fall before the malignity of his perſecutors, nor be enſnared by the power of evil. Note, (1.) Under the baſeſt miſrepreſentations, it is an unſpeakable comfort to poſſeſs conſcious innocence. (2.) They who truſt in God, ſhall never ſlide, at leaſt not ſo as to be caſt away; but are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto ſalvation.

2. In ſupport of his plea, he produces the following evidences. [1.] His regard to God's loving kindneſs, a ſenſe of which upon his heart, reſtrained him from evil. [2.] That he had walked in God's truth, made his word his rule, and ſought to have his actions governed thereby. [3.] His care to abſtain from the company of ſinners. They are called vain perſons, addicted to the vanities of this world; or whoſe talk and converſation was light, lewd, or unprofitable. Diſſemblers, who flatter with their lips, or lye in wait to deceive; evil doers, whoſe words and works are calculated to injure their neighbour; wicked, men of profligate lives and converſations, who have caſt off the fear of God: with theſe he never had maintained acquaintance, never choſe to ſit down in their company, he hated their ways, and fully purpoſed never to go unto them as friends, or be connected with them as his familiars. Note, (1.) A ſenſe of God's love is the great reſtrainer from ſin. (2.) When God's word is ever conſulted as our guide, then we ſhall walk aright. (3.) Nothing ſo dangerous as fellowſhip with the ungodly. (4.) To ſit long amidſt light, vain, unprofitable diſcourſe, deadens the heart perhaps more than what is flagrantly profane. (5.) Though we muſt needs go out of the world if we would have no communication with the wicked, yet a gracious ſoul will have as little as poſſible.

6. [e] I will waſh mine hands in innocency: ſo will I compaſs thine altar, O LORD. 7. That I may publiſh with the voice of thankſgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works. 8. LORD, [f] I have loved the habitation of thy houſe, and the place † where thine honour dwelleth. 9. [g] ‡ Gather not my ſoul with ſinners, nor my life with bloody men: 10. In whoſe hands is miſchief: and their right hand is full of bribes. 11. But as for me, I will walk in mine integrity: redeem me, and be merciful unto me. 12. [h] My foot ſtandeth in an even place: in the congregations will I bleſs the LORD.

e Pſal. lxxiii. 13. Exod. xxx. 19, 20.
f Pſal. xxvii. 4.
† Heb. Of the habitation of thy honour.
g Pſal. xxviii. 3. Gen. xviii. 23. 1 Sam. xv. 6.
‡ Or take not away.
h Pſal. xl. 2.

v. 6—12. We have heard what company David avoided, here we are told what company he delighted in, the worſhippers of God.

1. He declares how he approached the courts of the Lord's houſe. He waſhed his hands in innocency, waſhed in the bleſſed fountain, open for ſin and for uncleanneſs, that ſo he might be accounted pure before God; and he kept back no allowed ſin, but with a conſcience void of offence, compaſſed God's altar; alluding to the prieſts who went round the altar, ſprinkling the atoning blood on the four corners, ſo would he wait continually upon God, pleading the blood of ſprinkling, and offering the grateful ſacrifice of praiſe. That I may publiſh with the voice of thankſgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works, works of mercy and grace ſo aſtoniſhing, that they deſerve to be proclaimed for the comfort of his brethren, and the glory of God. And this was not a mere ſlaviſh duty to ſatisfy conſcience, or ſupport a Phariſaical righteouſneſs, no; it was the very joy of his heart. Lord, I have loved the habitation of thy houſe, there could I with pleaſure ever abide, and the place where thine honour dwelleth, where in the divine Shechinah thy glory viſibly appears. Note, (1.) In our approaches to God's altar, it becomes us to apply with renewed faith to the fountain of a Saviour's blood, that in him we may appear without ſpot or blemiſh. (2.) They who love God will love his ordinances, and count his ſervice perfect freedom. (3.) In the believer's eyes, all God's works of grace appear wonderful, beyond all he could deſire, and above all he could deſerve.

2. He prays, Gather not my ſoul with ſinners, ſuch as are openly profane and profligate, that God would not ſuffer him to walk in their ways, or come to their miſerable end; nor my life with bloody men, who are cut off in the midſt of their days: he deſcribes them as men, in whoſe hand is miſchief, and their right hand is full of bribes, to pervert judgment, or to gratify the ſinful purpoſes of their hearts. Redeem me, deliver me from the company of all ſuch, and from the hand of all my enemies, and be merciful unto me; to my ſins, to pardon them, to my ſufferings, to remove them. Note, (1.) However now ſinners may be joyous, and walk in proſperous iniquity, the day is near when God ſhall gather in their ſouls as tares, and bind them in bundles for the burning. (2.) They who are delivered from ſinners ways, ſhall eſcape their ruin. (3.) The redemption of our ſouls is by the blood of Jeſus; bleſſed and happy are they, to whom this is by faith applied.

3. He repeats his purpoſe to perſevere as he had done, v. 1. in his integrity, and give no juſt cauſe to his enemy to accuſe him. Confident in God's care, who had ſet his foot in an even place, from whence he ſhould not be moved, but in the congregations of God's ſaints continue to bleſs the Lord for all his diſpenſations of mercy, grace, and love to his ſoul. Note, (1.) When we have run well, it ſhould be an engagement to us to perſevere. (2.) Chriſt is the even place on whom the believer is firmly fixed, and from whoſe love and ſervice no enemy ſhall be able to remove him. (3.) They who ſhare the Redeemer's gracious protection, are bound to render the calves of their lips, and in the congregation of ſaints and angels their work will ſhortly be everlaſting praiſe.

PSALM XXVII.

In what particular trouble David penned this pſalm is uncertain. In it we have, 1. The ſtrength and confidence of his faith, ver. 1, 2, 3. 2. The complacency he took in communion with God, and the benefit he experienced by it, ver. 4, 5, 6. 3. His deſire towards God, and his grace, ver. 7—9, 11, 12. 4. His expectations from God, and the encouragement he gives to others to hope in him, ver. 10, 13, 14.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. THE LORD is [a] my light and my ſalvation, whom ſhall I fear? [b] the LORD is the ſtrength of my life, of whom ſhall I be afraid? 2. When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes came upon me, [c] to eat up my fleſh, they ſtumbled and fell. 3. [d] Though an hoſt ſhould encamp againſt me, my heart ſhall not fear: though war ſhould riſe againſt me, in this will I be confident. 4. [e] One thing have I deſired of the LORD, that will I ſeek after, [f] that I may dwell in the houſe of the LORD all the days of my life, to behold [g] the beauty of the LORD, and to inquire in his temple. 5. For in the time of trouble [h] he ſhall hide me in his pavilion: in the ſecret of his tabernacle ſhall he hide me, he ſhall ſet me up upon a rock. 6. And now [i] ſhall mine head be lifted up above mine enemies round about me: therefore will I offer in his tabernacle ſacrifices of † joy, I will ſing, yea, I will ſing praiſes unto the LORD.

a Pſal. lxxxiv. 11. Iſa. lx. 19. Mic. vii. 8.
b Pſal. cxviii. 6.
c Ibid. xiv. 4.
d Ibid. iii. 6.
e Ibid. xxvi. 8.
f Ibid. xxiii. 6. & lxxxiv. 10.
g Pſal. xcvi. 9.
h Ibid. xxxi. 20. & xci. 1.
i Pſal. iii. 3.
† Heb. Shouting.

v. 1—6. If God be for us, who can be againſt us? if he be our ſalvation, how impotent the malice of every foe? We have here,

1. David's triumph over his enemies, through his intereſt in God's love. The Lord is my light, to point out my way, to chear my heart, and to preſerve me from all the darkneſs of evil and of ſin, and my ſalvation, whoſe grace watches over me, whoſe power protects me, and in whoſe arms I am ſafe from every danger; whom ſhall I fear under ſuch a guardian? The Lord is the ſtrength of my life, preſerving me from every deadly blow that is aimed againſt me, by my temporal or ſpiritual foes, and will bring me to his eternal life in glory, of whom ſhall I be afraid? who can ſeparate me from his regards, and if ſecure of theſe, all muſt be well. My numerous adverſaries have tried their utmoſt malice, but ſtumbled and fell; and though they ſhould renew their deſperate attacks, no fear ſhall diſmay me: my confidence is placed on him who cannot fail, and will not forſake me. Note, (1.) Without the light of God's word and ſpirit, we muſt quickly ſtumble; but if theſe lead us, then ſhall we walk ſafely. (2.) Our fears are often apt to beſet us from the views of the multitude, or greatneſs of our dangers; but if our faith fail not, our fears cannot prevail. (3.) Chriſt is our life; till the well-ſpring that is in him fails, we cannot faint. (4.) It is our duty and comfort to deſpair of ourſelves, and be confident in God.

2. His prayer. One thing have I deſired of the Lord, not to return to his own houſe, not to be reinſtated at court, but to be admitted to the more deſirable courts of the Lord's houſe, there he could wiſh for ever to dwell, ſuch delight had he in the ordinances of the ſanctuary; to behold the beauty of the Lord, the prieſts in their veſtments, the ſacrifices ſmoaking on the altar, and all the glory of that worldly ſanctuary; and from theſe outward ſymbols to contemplate the glories of the great high-prieſt, and perfect ſacrifice of the Meſſiah, to whom all this ſhadowy ſervice pointed; and to enquire in his temple, to aſk direction in every difficulty, and in prayer and ſupplication, with thankſgiving, to make his requeſts known unto God. There he promiſed himſelf ſafety and ſecurity, hid under the ſacred pavilion of the Divine Majeſty, and firmly ſeated, as on a rock, which all his enemies, like boiſterous waves, aſſail in vain. Therefore, becauſe of ſuch protection, will I offer in his tabernacle, though now abſent from it, yet confident of again returning, ſacrifices of joy, the grateful overflowings of a heart filled with the love, and big with the praiſes of a gracious God. Note, (1.) God's ſanctuary and ſervice is the believer's delight; he would dwell there now, he hopes to have his abode in it ſhortly for ever. (2.) They who are hid under the wing of Almighty grace, and are bleſt with manifeſtations of the beauty of the Lord as their God and Saviour, are not only ſafe, but happy, amidſt an hoſt of enemies. (3.) Praiſe is the juſt tribute we owe, and ſhould daily render for mercies without number and without end.

7. Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice: have mercy alſo upon me, and anſwer me. 8. When thou ſaidſt, [k] Seek ye my face: my heart ſaid unto thee, Thy face, LORD, will I ſeek. 9. [l] Hide not thy face far from me, put not thy ſervant away in anger: thou haſt been my help, leave me not, neither forſake me, O God of my ſalvation. 10. [m] When my father and my mother forſake me, then the LORD will † take me up. 11. [n] Teach me thy way, O LORD, and lead me in a plain path, becauſe of ‡ mine enemies. 12. [o] Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies: for falſe witneſſes are riſen up againſt me, and ſuch as breathe out cruelty. 13. I had fainted, unleſs I had believed to ſee the goodneſs of the LORD [p] in the land of the living. 14. [q] Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and he ſhall ſtrengthen thine heart: wait, I ſay, on the LORD.

k Pſ. cv. 4.
l Pſ. lxix. 17.
m Iſa. xlix. 15.
† Heb. gather me.
n Pſ. xxv. 4. & lxxxvi. 11. & cxix. 5.
‡ Heb. thoſe that obſerve me.
o Pſ. xxxv. 25.
p Ibid. lvi. 13. & cxvi. 9.
q Ibid. xxxi. 24. & cxxx. 5. Iſa. xxv. 9. Hab. ii. 3.

v. 7—14. Having engaged to praiſe God on his return to his tabernacle, David enlarges his requeſts, that he may have more abundant matter for praiſe and joy.

1. His requeſts are many: in general he begs that God would hear his voice, ſhew him the mercy he needed for ſoul and body, and anſwer his cry by ſome gracious evidence that his prayer was heard and granted, v. 7. In particular, (1.) He deſires God's face may not be hid from him, v. 9. i. e. the ſenſe of his favour and regard. (2.) That he may not be turned back in anger, as a ſervant from the preſence of an offended maſter; at leaſt not turned out of his ſervice, though for a little moment his ſins provoked a frown. (3.) That he might never be left a moment to his own heart; nor forſaken of thoſe ſupplies of grace, without which he could in no wiſe ſtand, v. 9. (4.) He intreats the Lord to teach him his way, his holy way, that he might know it, and lead him, that he might not ſtumble in it, and that becauſe of his enemies, who would with prying eyes obſerve him, and exult at his halting. (5.) He prays to be delivered from the will of his enemies, who thirſted for his blood; and as they ſtuck at no falſehood to miſrepreſent him, he might expect to feel their cruelty if once given up into their hands. Note, (1.) The greateſt ſaints need ever cry for mercy at God's hands. (2.) A ſenſe of God's favour, is the great ſupport under affliction. (3.) We are weak as infancy, and, left to ourſelves, cannot but fall. (4.) The wiſeſt man knows nothing as he ought to know without divine teaching. (5.) Our enemies, as chriſtians, are many, and with malignant eye mark all our ſteps; we need watch and pray, that we may cut off occaſion from thoſe who deſire occaſion againſt us.

2. He prays in faith, as unto the God of his ſalvation, whoſe promiſes encouraged his confidence. God had ſaid unto him, Seek ye my face: his heart echoes back the welcome invitation, Thy face, Lord, will I ſeek, aſſured I ſhall not ſeek in vain, v. 8. The experience alſo of the days paſt, emboldened him to expect preſent ſupport. Thou haſt been my help, v. 9. and I truſt thou wilt continue the ſame kind aſſiſtance. Therefore, though his neareſt and deareſt friends forſook him, v. 10. he could be ſatisfied in the divine care and keeping; and this it was that ever kept his head above water, amidſt ſeas of trouble, v. 13. He fainted not, becauſe he believed to ſee the goodneſs of the Lord in the land of the living; to experience his preſent mercy, and to behold his richeſt diſcoveries of grace in the land where life eternal reigns. On the whole, he bids his poor trembling heart to wait ſtill on the Lord; to take courage, and expect Divine ſtrength; and reſt aſſured, that whilſt he continued to wait upon God in faith and prayer, God would watch over him in mercy and love, v. 14. Note, (1.) If God is ſo condeſcendingly kind as to invite us to come to him, it ſurely becomes us gratefully to receive, and readily to obey the Divine ſummons. (2.) The cauſe of God, ſometimes makes our once deareſt friends our bittereſt enemies; but though all forſake us, if God loves us we have enough. (3.) It is faith alone can keep us from fainting; ſo much corruption within, and ſo many temptations without, would quickly ſink us in deſpair, if our faith fixed not on Jeſus, on his unchangeable regard, and everlaſting promiſes. (4.) From what we have experienced, we ſhould encourage our own ſouls and others, ſtill to take courage, and reſt in aſſured hope of ſeeing the ſalvation of God.

PSALM XXVIII.

The former part of this pſalm is the prayer of a ſaint militant, and now in diſtreſs, ver. 1—3. to which is added the doom of God's implacable enemies, ver. 4, 5. The latter part of the pſalm is the thankſgiving of a ſaint triumphant, and delivered out of his diſtreſſes, ver. 6—8. to which is added a prophetical prayer for all God's faithful loyal ſubjects, ver. 9. Either David's faith foreſaw the happy iſſue of his trials; or, as a foil to ſet off his mercies, he remembered from whence the Lord had delivered him.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. UNTO thee will I cry, O LORD my [a] rock, [b] be not ſilent to me: [c] leſt if thou be ſilent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit. 2. Hear the voice of my ſupplications, when I cry unto thee: when [d] I lift up my hands [e] toward thy holy oracle. 3. [f] Draw me not away with the wicked and with the workers of iniquity: [g] which ſpeak peace to their neighbours, but miſchief is in their hearts. 4. [h] Give them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedneſs of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands, render to them their deſert. 5. Becauſe [i] they regard not the works of the LORD, nor the operation of his hands, he ſhall deſtroy them, and not build them up.

a 1 Cor. x. 4.
b Pſ. lxxxiii. 1.
c Ibid. cxliii. 7.
d Ibid. v. 7.
e Ibid. cxxxviii. 2.
f Ibid. xxvi. 9.
g Ibid. xii. 2. & lv. 21. Jer. ix. 8.
h 2 Tim. iv. 14. Rev. xviii. 6.
i Job xxxiv. 27. Iſa. v. 12.

v. 1—5. Whither ſhall the miſerable fly but to the Father of mercies, and the God of all conſolation? To this rock, with fervour and importunity, the pſalmiſt has recourſe, and cries for help and refuge.

1. He pleads his certain and impending ruin, if God did not hear and ſuccour him, his enemies would bring him to the duſt of death; in God's abſence his ſoul would taſte the pains of hell; and if utterly forſaken by him, the dreadful pit would yawn to receive him; but he truſted God would hear when he lifted up his hands, which, with ceaſeleſs importunity, he continued to do, towards his holy oracle; before the moſt holy place, where the Shechinah reſted, and God's oracles were given; or towards heaven, of which the Holy of Holies was the figure. Note, (1.) Deep diſtreſs ſhould awaken ſtrong cries, and there is one who hears, that can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. (2.) Chriſt is the true oracle, in whom dwelt all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily, and through him our prayers are ſure to ſpeed.

2. He intreats to be ſaved from the ways and end of the workers of iniquity, v. 3. They ſought to entice him with fair words, but miſchief was in their hearts; he knew the evil of their ways, and hated them; he knew the ruin of their end, and would fain avoid it: yet knowing his own weakneſs, and proneneſs to evil, he looks out of himſelf for power, even to him who is mighty to ſave. Note, (1.) In the eyes of a child of God, ſin is regarded as the greateſt of evils. (2.) ſeducing ſpirits are ever buſy to deceive in every age. The Lord preſerve us from error! (3.) They who would avoid the ſinners ruin, muſt ſhun their ways.

3. He foretells the miſerable end of the wicked, from whom he prayed to be delivered. Give them, not as making it the matter of his prayer out of revenge or ill-will, but as foreſeeing this would be the caſe, and praying that God might be glorified in his judgments, according to their deeds, and according to the wickedneſs of their endeavours; for not only outward acts of ſin, but the inward purpoſe of it, is minuted in God's book; not a thought of wickedneſs paſſes unnoticed by him: as their deſerts require, they will receive at God's hands; and becauſe they pay no regard to his word, or the admonitions of his providence, deſtruction to the uttermoſt will overtake them. Note, (1.) In a judgment day, when the ſinner's heart is laid open, a ſcene of wickedneſs will be diſcovered, ſuch as the ſun never beheld. (2.) Inattention to God's works, word, and warnings, is one chief cauſe of the ſinner's ruin.

6. Bleſſed be the LORD, becauſe he hath heard the voice of my ſupplications. 7. [k] The LORD is my ſtrength and my ſhield, my heart truſted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth, and with my ſong will I praiſe him. 8. The LORD is their ſtrength, and he is the † ſaving ſtrength of his anointed. 9. Save thy people, and bleſs thine inheritance: ‡ feed them alſo, and [l] lift them up for ever.

k Pſ. xviii. 2.
† Heb. ſtrength of ſalvations.
‡ Or, rule.
l Iſa. xiv. 2. Or, Rev. v. 10.

v. 6—9. Who ever truſted in God and was confounded, or called upon his name in vain? The pſalmiſt's praiſes ever ſucceed his prayers.

1. He bleſſes God for the anſwer of peace he had given him: either he had received his requeſt, or faith ſo realized the promiſes, that he reckoned that already beſtowed, which he was aſſured God would grant. Note, The mercies faith aſſures us of receiving, are as much the matter of praiſe as thoſe we already enjoy.

2. He profeſſes his firm dependance upon God, and thankful acknowledgment to him, v. 7. The Lord is my ſtrength, by whoſe everlaſting arms I am and ſhall be upheld; my ſhield, conſtantly ſpread over me to protect me from every danger; my heart truſted in him, when ſurrounded with enemies, and I am helped, experience his promiſe fulfilled; therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; a joy unſpeakable and glorious warmed his inmoſt ſoul, and ſongs of melody and love ſpoke aloud the praiſe he owed to his deliverer. Note, The end of worldly joy is heavineſs; but the more a ſoul rejoiceth in God, the more angelical his ſpirit grows.

3. As intereſted in God's people's proſperity, he rejoices that they have the ſame Almighty Saviour. The Lord is their ſtrength, to ſupport them in every time of need, and he is the ſaving ſtrength of his anointed; of David, his king; of Meſſiah, the peoples hope, on whom their help is laid; and of every believer who receives an unction from the Holy one, and is conſecrated unto God a king and prieſt. Note, (1.) God's people rejoice in each other's happineſs as their own, for they are members of the ſame body. (2.) Every believer hath Almighty grace engaged for him, how then ſhould he miſcarry?

4. He prays for the proſperity and ſalvation of all God's Iſrael, that no enemy might prevail againſt them, that all the bleſſings of providence and grace might deſcend upon them; that he would feed them as the dear flock of his paſture, or rule them with his gentle ſway, and make them a willing people; and not only lift them up above all their foes on earth, but eternally exalt them to a throne of glory, where all that hate them ſhould be for ever put under their feet. Note, (1.) They who love the people of God, will daily make an affectionate remembrance of them in their prayers. (2.) They that are ſaved by grace, fed by God's ordinances, and governed by God's ſpirit, ſhall ſurely reign with him in glory, and none beſide.

PSALM XXIX.

It is the probable conjecture of ſome interpreters, that David penned this pſalm upon occaſion of a great ſtorm of thunder, lightning, and rain. It is good to take occaſion from the ſenſible operations of God's power in the kingdom of nature, to give glory to him. 1. He calls upon the great ones of the world to give glory to God, ver. 1, 2. 2. To convince them of the greatneſs of that God whom they were to adore, he takes notice of his power and terror in the thunder and lightning, and thunder ſhowers, ver. 3—9. His ſovereign dominion over the world, ver. 10. and his ſpecial favour to his church, ver. 11. Many things here contained are alſo very ſuitable to goſpel times.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] GIVE unto the LORD, O ye mighty, give unto the LORD [b] glory and ſtrength. 2.
Give unto the LORD the glory † due unto his name;
worſhip the LORD ‡ in [c] the beauty of holineſs. 3.
The voice of the LORD is upon the waters: [d] the God of glory thundreth, the LORD is upon many waters.
4. The voice of the LORD is § powerful; the voice of the LORD is ‖ full of majeſty. 5. The voice of the LORD breaketh the cedars: yea, the LORD breaketh the cedars of Lebanon. 6. [e] He maketh them alſo to ſkip like a calf: Lebanon and [f] Sirion like a young unicorn. 7. The voice of the LORD † divideth the flames of fire: 8. The voice of the LORD ſhaketh the wilderneſs: the LORD ſhaketh the wilderneſs of Kadeſh. 9. The voice of the LORD maketh [g] the hinds to ‡ calve, and diſcovereth the foreſts:
and in his temple doth every one ſpeak of his glory.
10. The LORD ſitteth upon the flood: yea, [h] the LORD ſitteth King for ever. 11. [i] The LORD will give ſtrength unto his people, the LORD will bleſs his people with peace.

[a] Pſ. xcvi. 7, 8.
[b] Ibid. cxv. 1.
† Heb. of his name.
‡ Or, In his glorious ſanctuary.
[c] 2 Chron. xx. 21.
[d] Job xxxvii. 4, 5.
§ Heb. in power.
‖ Heb. in majeſty.
[e] Pſ. cxiv. 4.
[f] Deut. iii. 9.
† Heb. cutteth out.
[g] Job xxxix. 1, &c.
‡ Or, Be in pain.
[h] Pſ. x. 16. Dan. ii. 44.
[i] Pſ. xxviii. 8.

The pſalm opens,

1. With a ſolemn admonition to all living, to render unto the Lord the glory due unto his name. Let mighty angels bow in heaven, and mighty kings on earth fall proſtrate at his feet, aſcribing to him infinite power and eternal majeſty, and worſhip the Lord in the beauty of holineſs: either the tabernacle, where his magnificent and holy worſhip was paid, or with that holineſs of heart and temper which is the beauty of all worſhip. Note, (1.) The greateſt are not too high to bow at God's foot-ſtool, kings ſhould ſet their ſubjects the good example. (2.) Repeated calls ſhow our backwardneſs, and the need we have to be urged to the ſervice and worſhip of the bleſſed God. (3.) It is not the formal ceremony of words, but the beauty of holineſs in the heart, that in our worſhip God eſpecially regards.

2. He gives a reaſon why they ſhould worſhip this glorious God: his name is Jehovah, which is eighteen times repeated in theſe few verſes, and intimates his ſelf-exiſtent and eternal excellence, which renders him the object of univerſal worſhip and praiſe; and his works declare his majeſty, power, and greatneſs; his voice ſpeaks in mighty thunderings, whilſt dark clouds of the ſky are ſpread under him, the forked lightnings glare around, the earth trembles at the terrible ſhock, and mountains, as affrighted, leap from their wide-ſpread baſes; the cedars of Libanus are ſhivered as the brittle reed, the beaſts that lodge under their branches affrighted caſt their burdens, and gloomy foreſts before the reſiſtleſs ſtorm ſtripped of their verdure, admit the flaſhing beam; whilſt He, the mighty God, with majeſty compoſed ſitteth upon the flood, directs the ſtorm, and, as the eternal King, iſſues his mandate as in the deluge, ſaying, hitherto ſhalt thou come, and no further; and every element hears, and inſtantly obeys. Note, When God's thunder is near, and his floods of rain, mingled with fire, deſcend, let us think of this dread majeſty, and bow before him; how glorious to have him our friend, how terrible to meet him as our enemy!

The whole may alſo be well applied to Chriſt; his voice, loud as theſe thunders, ſpeaks to many people, kindreds, and nations, powerful to awaken, convince, and convert the ſoul: the proudeſt ſinners, though like cedars of Libanus, are broken before it; and faſt rooted in ſin as the mountain's baſe, yet by Chriſt's glorious word their bands are looſed; piercing and ſtrong as the glaring beams of lightning, his goſpel in the midſt of darkneſs pours a flood of day upon the ſoul, and kindles up a fire of love in the heart that never ſhall be quenched: the wilderneſs of the Gentile world was ſhaken before it, and ſaving diſcoveries made to them of the glory of God; pangs came upon them at firſt, as ſorrows of a woman in travail, but they were ſucceeded with the joys of Chriſt formed in them; he ſitteth now as the king over our hearts, and the hearts of his people for ever; and in the temple of his church on earth, and his more magnificent ſanctuary in heaven, his majeſty and glory ſhall be the matter of everlaſting praiſe.

3. The pſalmiſt concludes with a comfortable proſpect for God's people. He will give them ſtrength againſt every danger; and bleſs them with his peace, which paſſeth all underſtanding; internal peace from a preſent ſenſe of God's favour in Chriſt, and eternal peace, when the floods of wrath and the deluge of fire ſhall ſweep away the world of the ungodly.

PSALM XXX.

This pſalm is ſaid to be penned on occaſion of the dedication of his houſe; whence he takes occaſion to remember his paſt afflicted ſtate, 2 Sam. v. 11. or it may be it relates to the cleanſing it after Abſalom's inceſt and defilement. 1. He praiſes God for the deliverances he had wrought for him, ver. 1—3. 2. He calls upon others to praiſe him too, and encourages them to truſt in him, ver. 4, 5. 3. He blames himſelf for his former ſecurity, ver. 6, 7. 4. He recollects the prayers and complaints he had made in his diſtreſs, ver. 8—10. and then thanks God for this preſent comfortable change, ver. 11, 12.

¶ A pſalm and ſong, [a] at the dedication of the house of David.

1. I WILL extol thee, O LORD, for thou haſt lifted me up, and [b] haſt not made my foes to rejoice over me. 2. O LORD my God, I cried unto thee: and thou haſt healed me. 3. O LORD, [c] thou haſt brought up my ſoul from the grave: thou haſt kept me alive that I ſhould not go down to the pit.
4. [d] Sing unto the LORD, O ye ſaints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holineſs. 5. For [e] † his anger endureth but a moment; [f] in his favour is life: [g] weeping may endure for a night, but ‡ joy cometh in the morning.

[a] Deut. xx. 5. 2 Sam. v. 11.
About 1043.
[b] Pſ. xxv. 2.
[c] Ibid. lxxxvi. 31. So Jonah. ii. 6.
[d] 1 Chron. xvi. 4. Pſ. xcvii. 12.
[e] Pſ. ciii. 9. Iſa. xxvi. 20. & liv. 7, 8. 2 Cor. iv. 17.
† Heb. There is but a moment in his anger.
[f] Pſ. lxiii. 3.
[g] Ibid. cxxvi. 5.
‡ Heb. Singing.

v. 1—5. Every houſe of a child of God will be a ſanctuary, where prayer and praiſe are daily offered.

1. David begins with the voice of thankſgiving for the mercies he had taſted; his foes ſought his ruin, he was ſick perhaps in body, and afflicted in mind; the grave ſeemed to be open to receive him; but he cried, and the Lord heard him, and delivered him out of all his troubles; therefore he well reſolves, I will extol thee, for thou haſt lifted me up; will declare thy greatneſs and goodneſs, and aſcribe the whole of my ſalvation to thy power and grace. Note, (1.) We brought into the world with us the diſeaſe of mortal corruption; it is matter of unſpeakable joy, if by the blood and grace of Jeſus our dying ſouls are healed. (2.) Recoveries from ſickneſs deſerve ſongs of praiſe; and that the life preſerved by God's mercy, be a-new devoted to his glory. (3.) In all afflicted caſes, whether of body or mind, the prayer of faith availeth much.

2. He calls upon others to join in the ſong of praiſe. Sing unto the Lord, O ye ſaints of his: this is the character of God's people, they are ſeparated from ſin, and by divine grace renewed in righteouſneſs and true holineſs, and therefore they give thanks at the remembrance of his holineſs; pleaſed with beholding this brighteſt attribute of their glorious God; ſatisfied in the righteouſneſs of all his ways, and deriving comfort from the conſideration that, as in a meaſure they reſemble him now, they ſhall ſhortly awake up in his perfect image. For his anger endureth but a moment; not that we are to impute to him any ſuch imperfection, or turbulence in his holy mind as we feel, but according as men chaſtiſe in anger thoſe who offend them, God deals thus with thoſe who ſin againſt him; but to his people, even this is not the ſtroke of an enemy, but the rod of a father, gently correcting us for our good. In his favour is life; ſpiritual life, eternal life, which is the ſure portion of his choſen, notwithſtanding momentary afflictions. Weeping may endure for a night; and ſome weariſome nights our ſins and folly provoke God to make us feel, when he withdraws, and darkneſs and diſtreſs ſurround us; but joy cometh in the morning; the ſeaſon of ſorrow is ſhort, and as the welcome ſun returning diſpels the ſhadows of the night, ſo doth God return to lift up the light of his countenance on his mourning ſaints, and wakens up their joyful praiſes. Note, In all our troubles here, we ſhould remember they are light afflictions, but for a moment; the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory which is to follow, will quickly wipe every tear from our eyes.

6. And [h] in my proſperity I ſaid, I ſhall never be moved. 7. LORD, by thy favour thou haſt made my mountain to ſtand ſtrong: [i] thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled. 8. I cried to thee, O LORD: and unto the LORD I made ſupplication. 9. What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? [k] ſhall the duſt praiſe thee? ſhall it declare thy truth? 10. Hear, O LORD, and have mercy upon me: LORD, be thou my helper. 11. [l] Thou haſt turned for me my mourning into dancing: thou haſt put off my ſackcloth, and girded me with gladneſs: 12. To the end that † my glory may ſing praiſe to thee, and not be ſilent: O LORD my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

[h] Job xxix. 18.
[i] Pſ. civ. 29.
[k] Pſ. vi. 5. & lxxxviii. 11. & cxv. 17. Iſa. xxxviii. 18.
[l] 2 Sam. vi. 14. Iſa. lxi. 3.
† i. e. My tongue, or, my ſoul. Pſ. xvi. 9. & lvii. 8.

v. 6—12. We are ever apt to be ſwinging to extremes, too elated with comfort, or too dejected in diſtreſs. This was David's caſe:

1. In his proſperity he grew ſecure, confident he ſhould never be moved: his foes all vanquiſhed, and his throne firmly ſettled, he thought himſelf fixed as a mountain; and though he aſcribes it to divine grace, he ſeems to place ſome truſt of his ſtability on himſelf. Note, (1.) Worldly proſperity is dangerouſly intoxicating; it is what lulls men in general aſleep, and makes even the ſaints of God to forget that this is a warfare. (2.) God is ſometimes pleaſed to viſit young converts with ſtrong conſolations, and they are ready to conclude it ſhall be always ſo with them; but the feaſt of ſenſe ſeldom laſts long.

2. Trouble overtook him, and dejection of ſoul, from the fear of God's favour being withdrawn, ſunk him low into the duſt, yet not into deſpair, he cried unto the Lord, and made his ſupplication; finding his weakneſs, and feeling now where alone his ſtrength lay, he pleads hard therefore for mercy and help in this his time of need; and pleads the loſs which would accrue from his fall: his enemies could render no glory to God for ſhedding his blood; God would be no more praiſed by him in the ſanctuary, nor his cauſe promoted among the living; and eſpecially God's truth would be diſhonoured, if he ſunk under his burdens, v. 9. and did not ſurvive to declare his faithfulneſs. Note, (1.) In our loweſt frames let nothing drive us from prayer; as long as we have a voice to cry to God, there is hope in our end. (2.) There are ſervices which the ſaints of God can render him on earth, that they cannot even in heaven, and this makes it deſirable to live.

3. Soon the glad change appears; whilſt he is ſpeaking, God anſwers; his ſorrows turn to joy; his mourning is ended, and ſongs of melody and love declare the praiſes of him who brought him out of darkneſs into his marvellous light: ſuch experience engages his glory, his ſoul, his tongue to praiſe God for ever; and theſe lively expreſſions of his gratitude he truſts ſhall laſt not only whilſt life and breath endures below, but be perpetuated through the countleſs ages of eternity. Go thou redeemed ſoul then, and do likewiſe.

PSALM XXXI.

On what occaſion this pſalm was penned is not ſaid; it ſeems probable on ſome of his eſcapes from Saul at Keilah, Maon, or Engedi. 1. David profeſſeth his chearful confidence in God, and in that confidence prays for deliverance out of his preſent troubles, ver. 1—8. 2. He complains of the very deplorable condition he was in, and prays that God would graciouſly appear for him againſt his perſecutors, ver. 9—18. 3. He gives glory to God, and encourages himſelf and others to truſt in him, ver. 19—24.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. [a] IN thee, O LORD, do I put my truſt, let me never be aſhamed: [b] deliver me in thy righteouſneſs. 2. [c] Bow down thine ear to me, deliver me ſpeedily: [d] be thou † my ſtrong rock, for an houſe of defence to ſave me. 3. For thou art my rock and my fortreſs: therefore [e] for thy name's ſake lead me, and guide me. 4. Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me: for thou art my ſtrength. 5. [f] Into thine hand I commit my ſpirit: thou haſt redeemed me, O LORD God of truth. 6. I have hated them [g] that regard lying vanities: but I truſt in the LORD. 7. I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy: for thou haſt conſidered my trouble; thou haſt known my ſoul in adverſities; 8. And haſt not ſhut me up into the hand of the enemy: [h] thou haſt ſet my feet in a large room.

[a] Pſ. xxii. 5. & xxv. 2. & lxxi. 1. Iſa. xlix. 23.
[b] Pſ. cxliii. 1.
[c] Ibid. lxx. 2.
[d] Ibid. xviii. 2, 31.
† Heb. to me, for a rock of ſtrength.
[e] Pſ. xxiii. 3. & xxv. 11.
[f] Luke xxiii. 46. Acts vii. 59.
[g] Jonah. ii. 8.
[h] Pſ. iv. 1. & xviii. 19.

v. 1—8. The greatneſs of our trials need not diſcourage us whilſt we have a great God to ſupport us: to him David has recourſe in all his needs.

1. As uſual, he opens with earneſt and importunate prayer. All his help and hope came from above, thither therefore he directs his ſupplications. (1.) He begs that he might not be aſhamed, either of God his confidence, as failing him, or of the cauſe of God, however it might be vilified or depreſſed. (2.) That God would deliver him in his righteouſneſs, and that ſpeedily, as a righteous judge of thoſe who are oppreſſed with wrong, and a defence againſt the fury of his perſecutors, v. 2, 3. (3.) He deſires to be led, and guided aright, that in the path of duty he might find the way of ſafety. (4.) Particularly, he intreats that the preſent ſnare, laid for him, may be broken, and his feet plucked from the net. Note, (1.) Fervent prayer will have a ſpeedy anſwer. (2.) They who lodge their cauſe with God, ſhall find a righteous judge, who will give to every man according as his work is. (3.) They who truly deſire to know God's will, and follow it, ſhall ſurely be taught and led in the right way.

2. He profeſſes his fixed dependance upon God. In thee do I put my truſt; not in my own righteouſneſs, as deſerving ought at thy hands; not in my own wiſdom, as able to extricate myſelf; not in my own ſtrength, as ſufficient to ſupport me, but in thy wiſdom, righteouſneſs, and ſtrength, as my only refuge; for thou art my rock, fixed and immoveable, and my fortreſs, impregnable and ſecure: thou art my ſtrength, to work for me and in me, and therefore into thy hands I commit my ſpirit, to be preſerved in life, amidſt ſurrounding dangers; to be kept from evil, amidſt the ſnares that are laid for me; and to be ſecured for eternity, however thy providence may diſpoſe of me here below: thou haſt redeemed me; reſcued my body from many a danger, and by atoning blood delivered my ſoul from hell, O Lord God of truth, whoſe promiſes I have ever experienced to be faithful and ſure. Note, (1.) They who have God for their rock, need not fear who are their foes. (2.) If our ſpirits are ſafe lodged in the arms of Jeſus, we may quietly wait the iſſue of every affliction, and know the end will be peace. (3.) Thoſe who are redeemed by a Saviour's blood, ſhall be preſerved by the Saviour's grace. (4.) The more we are enabled to truſt on God's promiſe, the ſtronger teſtimony we bear to his faithfulneſs.

3. He renounces all connection with idols, and all reſource to theſe vanities in his diſtreſſes; he hated the ways of all their worſhippers, and cleaved to Jehovah alone. Note, God is an all-ſufficient portion, we need look for nothing more to make us ſafe and happy.

4. He rejoices in the mercy of his gracious God. His troubles God had conſidered with tendereſt compaſſion, and in adverſities known his ſoul, approved his temper, and viſited him with notices of kind regard. Eſcaped from the ſpot where he was in danger, he enjoys now a happy deliverance, and walks at large with no foe to moleſt him. Note, (1.) Mercies deſerve a conſtant return of praiſe. (2.) Our ſpirit and temper in time of trouble, will beſt ſhew our ſtate towards God. (3.) It is the comfort of God's people in every ſtate, that he knows their ſimplicity, and regards them with his favour.

The words, v. 5. being uſed by our divine Lord on the croſs, may well ſupport us in applying the whole to him; whoſe prayer in trouble, unſhaken dependance on God, deliverance from adverſity, and exaltation above his enemies, were more peculiar and diſtinguiſhed than thoſe of his illuſtrious progenitor.

9. Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble; [i] mine eye is conſumed with grief, yea, my ſoul and my belly. 10. For my life is ſpent with grief, and my years with ſighing: my ſtrength faileth becauſe becauſe of mine iniquity, and [k] my bones are conſumed. 11. [l] I was a reproach among all mine enemies, but [m] eſpecially among my neighbours, and a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did ſee me without, [n] fled from me. 12. [o] I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like a broken veſſel. 13. For [p] I have heard the ſlander of many, [q] fear was on every ſide, while they took counſel together againſt me, they deviſed to take away my life. 14. But I truſted in thee, O LORD: I ſaid, Thou art my God. 15. [r] My times are in thy hand: deliver me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that perſecute me. 16. [s] Make thy face to ſhine upon thy ſervant: ſave me for thy mercies ſake. 17. [t] Let me not be aſhamed, O LORD, for I have called upon thee: let the wicked be aſhamed, and [u] let them be † ſilent in the grave. 18. [x] Let the lying lips be put to ſilence: [y] which ſpeak ‡ grievous things proudly and contemptuouſly againſt the righteous.

[i] Pſ. vi. 7.

[k] Pſal. xxxii. 3. & cii. 3.
[l] Ibid. xli. 8. Iſa. liii. 4. 1 Cor. iv. 13.
[m] Job xix. 13. Pſ. xxxviii. 11. & lxxxviii. 8, 18.
[n] Mat. xxvi. 56.
[o] Pſal. lxxxviii. 4, 5.
[p] Jer. xx. 10.
[q] Ibid. vi. 25. Lam. ii. 22.
[r] See Joh. vii. 30.
[s] Numb. vi. 25. Pſ. iv. 6. & lxvii. 1.
[t] Pſal. xxv. 3.
[u] 1 Sam. ii. 9.
† Or, cut off for the grave.
[x] Pſ. xii. 3.
[y] Pſ. ix. 4. Jude xv.
‡ Heb. A hard thing.

v. 9—18. Swift as Job's meſſengers of evil are the returns of trouble, and therefore call for as repeated application to the God of all grace.

1. David ſpreads before God his bitter ſorrows; with conſtant tears his eyes grew dim, his appetite failed him, his ſtrength decayed, his very bones waſted; and his ſoul, in equal anguiſh with his body, was ready to ſink under its burdens; and this by reaſon of his iniquity, v. 10. His other trials were light, compared with theſe: in all his ſufferings from man, he had his integrity to comfort him, but here he ſtood ſelf-condemned, and owns his afflictions leſs than his iniquity deſerved: his acquaintance, who ſhould comfort him, now, as true courtiers, deſert him when under his prince's diſpleaſure; all his paſt kindneſs to them is forgotten, and ſince he can no longer ſerve them, like a broken veſſel, he is thrown by and neglected: his enemies reproach him with every malignant accuſation; and as it was become dangerous to ſhow the leaſt regard to him, as Ahimelech had experienced, his once familiar friends now are afraid to know him, and care not to meet him, leaſt the ſmalleſt civilities ſhould be to their prejudice: he heard the ſlander that was propagated on every ſide, and fear ſeized him when he knew they were plotting to take away his life. Note, (1.) The people of God are an afflicted people; but the soreſt of their griefs is the ſenſe of their ſins. (2.) They who place dependance on worldly friendſhips, will uſually, to their ſad diſappointment, find them faithleſs. (3.) Abuſe the moſt malignant and falſe hath been ever the lot of the beſt of men. (4.) They who have taken Chriſt for their maſter, muſt expect to meet with the ſame ſlights and inſults; it is no uncommon caſe then, for our neareſt relations to diſown us, and our once deareſt friends to be aſhamed of us. Welcome reproach! if this be to be vile, let us be viler ſtill. (5.) The Redeemer of ſouls endured all this and more; an outcaſt, deſpiſed, and abhorred, and perſecuted by reſtleſs malice, till in his precious blood his enemies embrued their guilty hands.

2. He places his truſt in God, under every diſcouraging proſpect. I ſaid, Thou art my God; and this was enough to quiet every fear, and comfort him in every diſtreſs; for if God were his, then all things muſt work together for his good, and he can quietly reſign up himſelf to him. My times are in thy hand, to diſpoſe of me, and do by me as ſhall ſeem beſt in thy ſight; thou knoweſt the propereſt time for my deliverance, my days cannot be ſhortened but at thy will, nor my troubles of body or ſoul continue a moment longer than thou pleaſeſt; and all events concerning me are ſafe, being in thy diſpoſal. Note, This is a moſt comfortable and quieting conſideration to every child of God.

3. Whilſt he waits in faith, he prays in hope. Our patient ſubmiſſion forbids not humble prayer; he begs therefore, that God would deliver him from his perſecutors, comfort him with a ſweet ſenſe of his favour, and ſave him for his mercies ſake, the only plea he preſumes to make: he prays to be kept from ſhame, as if his hope was deluſive, or his prayer fruitleſs; and that the wicked, who wiſhed him evil, might be confounded at his deliverance, and laid low in the duſt, that they might no more trouble the ſaints repoſe: and finally, he aſks of God a general requeſt in behalf of all his righteous ones, that the lying lips, who inſolently, contemptuouſly, and cruelly revile them, might be ſealed up in eternal ſilence. Note, (1.) A wicked world ſticks at no lyes to hurt God's people. (2.) The moſt reſpectable characters, when engaged in the cauſe of Chriſt, and true religion, muſt expect to meet inſolence and contempt. (3.) The day is coming when ſinners muſt anſwer for all their hard ſpeeches, which cruelly, diſdainfully, and diſpitefully, they have ſpoken againſt the righteous. (4.) Though it is our duty to forgive every inſult and injury, and to pray for our enemies, that God would forgive them too, we may at the ſame time ſafely cry for the coming of Chriſt's glorious kingdom, when the finally impenitent, and deſpiſers of thoſe who are good, will be for ever ſealed up under eternal vengeance.

19. [z] O how great is thy goodneſs, [a] which thou haſt laid up for them that fear thee; which thou haſt wrought for them that truſt in thee, before the ſons of men! 20. [b] Thou ſhalt hide them in the ſecret of thy preſence from the pride of man: [c] thou ſhalt keep them ſecretly in a pavilion from the ſtrife of tongues. 21. Bleſſed be the LORD; for [d] he hath ſhewed me his marvellous kindneſs in a † ſtrong city. 22. For [e] I ſaid in my haſte, [f] I am cut off from before thine eyes: nevertheleſs thou heardeſt the voice of my ſupplications when I cried unto thee. 23. [g] O love the LORD, all ye his ſaints: for the LORD preſerveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer. 24. [h] Be of good courage, and he ſhall ſtrengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the LORD.

[z] Iſa. lxiv. 4. 1 Cor. ii. 9.
[a] See 2 Tim. iv. 8.
[b] Pſ. xxvii. 5.
[c] Job v. 21.
[d] Pſ. xvii. 7.
† Or fenced.
[e] Pſal. cxvi. 11.
[f] Iſa. xxxviii. 11, 12. Lam. iii. 54. Jonah. ii. 4.
[g] Pſ. xxxiv. 9.
[h] Pſ. xxvii. 14.

v. 19—24. The more we experience of God's grace and mercy towards us, the more ſhall we be filled with wonder, love, and praiſe.

1. The pſalmiſt breaks out into wonder. O how great is thy goodneſs! how tranſcendantly bleſſed its effects! how graciouſly free its communications! and how amazingly extenſive, even to the days of eternity; laid up as an invaluable treaſure, and ſecured as a ſacred depoſit for them that fear thee! This is a diſtinguiſhing character of God's people; they fear him, and nothing in compariſon with him; let men threaten, or revile, they will not be moved to do evil, and rather would lay down their lives than offend God: and which thou haſt wrought for thoſe who truſt in thee; haſt wrought, for the redemption is complete, and the work finiſhed; and they truſt it is ſo, and are ſupported by that conſideration: before the ſons of men; either God's ſpecial goodneſs to his people is manifeſted to men by his providential care and deliverance of them; or they make public and open profeſſion of their dependance upon him, and glorify God thereby, even amidſt all the threatnings of their adverſaries. Thou ſhalt hide them, when hunted by the malice of their foes, in the ſecret of thy preſence; ſecure from harm, ſatisfied in thy love, comforted with the light of thy countenance; from the pride of man, that would diſcountenance, or trample them under foot: thou ſhalt keep them ſecretly in a pavilion from the ſtrife of tongues; whatever abuſe, rancour, or diſputings of men of perverſe minds may be levelled againſt them, it ſhall neither diſturb nor diſtreſs them. Note, (1.) They are well kept whom God keeps. (2.) It may well reconcile us to all the evil we meet with, when we enjoy a preſent ſenſe of Divine favour, an experience of ſupport from above, and a pleaſing proſpect of eternal reſt, where we ſhall be for ever hid from the pride and revilings of men.

2. He bleſſes God for the experience of his mercy towards himſelf, ſo much beyond his hopes: the eſcapes he had were marvellous, and plainly ſpoke God's hand, when in Keilah, he was delivered from being betrayed to his enemies; his fears were ready to ſuggeſt that his caſe was deſperate, but God was unſpeakably better to him than his fears, and heard and anſwered the voice of his ſupplications. Note, (1.) We need often deeply reflect upon our unbelieving fears, ſo diſhonourable to God, as well as diſcouraging to ourſelves. (2.) In haſte we are apt to ſpeak raſhly, and lay up matter for leiſurely repentance. (3.) Though for our diſtruſts we deſerve to be forſaken, God dealeth not with us according to our deſerts, but according to his marvellous loving kindneſs.

3. From his own experience he encourages others to love and truſt the bleſſed God. His ſaints ſhould love him; and with good reaſon they ſhould do ſo, when his love to them hath been ſo paſſing ſtrange, and his dealings with them ſo amazingly kind; for he preſerveth the faithful, from ſin, from falling, from their enemies, and will preſerve them to his everlaſting kingdom; and therefore how bound to love him! and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer; gives them the juſt puniſhment of their iniquities; and therefore he exhorts God's people, in the view of his conſtant care, and righteous judgment, to be of good courage; whatever dark providences overtake you, or temptations beſet you, or enemies oppreſs you, faint not, for God is with you, and he ſhall ſtrengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord; whilſt you hope, he will help; yea, he will give the hope as well as help, that none may be ever able to pluck you out of his hand. Note, (1.) The people of God ſhould communicate their experience for mutual comfort and edification. (2.) How greatly do we need to be ſtirred up to love this bleſſed God? who need not complain of the coldneſs of his heart, and the unſuitableneſs of his affections, when he conſiders but a moment the wonders of redeeming grace? (3.) Nothing makes us go on ſo heavily in God's ways as fear of falling; nothing ſo enlivens us to duty as confidence of never failing ſupport. Truſt then, my ſoul, in the Lord for ever, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlaſting ſtrength.

PSALM XXXII.

The apoſtle tells us, that David in this pſalm deſcribes the bleſſedneſs of the man unto whom God imputeth righteouſneſs without works, Rom. iv. 6. He gives us a ſummary, 1. Of goſpel grace in the pardon of ſin, ver. 1, 2. In divine protection, ver. 7. and divine conduct, ver. 8. 2. Of goſpel duty; To confeſs ſin, ver. 3—5. To pray, ver. 6. To govern ourſelves aright, ver. 9, 10. And to rejoice in God, ver. 11.

¶ A pſalm of David, † Maſchil.

1.[a] BLESSED is he [b] whoſe tranſgreſſion is forgiven, whoſe ſin is covered. 2. Bleſſed is the man unto whom the LORD [c] imputeth not iniquity, and in whoſe ſpirit [d] there is no guile. 3. When I kept ſilence, my bones waxed old; through my roring all the day long. 4. For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: my moiſture is turned into the drought of ſummer. Selah. 5. I acknowledged my ſin unto thee, and mine iniquity have I not hid: [e] I ſaid, I will confeſs my tranſgreſſions unto the LORD; [f] and thou forgaveſt the iniquity of my ſin. Selah. 6. [g] For this ſhall every one that is godly, [h] pray unto thee, in a time ‡ when thou mayſt be found: ſurely in the floods of great waters, [i] they ſhall not come nigh unto him.

† i. e. Giving inſtruction.
About 1034.
a Rom. iv. 7, 8.
b Pſ. lxxxv. 2.
c 2 Cor. v. 19.
d Joh. i. 47.
e Luke xv. 18.
f Prov. xxviii. 13. Iſa. lxv. 24. 1 Joh. i. 9.
g 1 Tim. i. 16.
h Iſa. lv. 6.
‡ Heb. Of finding.
i Iſa. xliii. 2.

v. 1—6. This pſalm was probably compoſed after Nathan, the meſſenger of God's mercy, had rouſed David from the lethargy of ſin, and brought him at the ſame time the glad tidings of pardoning grace. Its title is Maſchil; ſome ſay it was the muſical inſtrument to which it was ſet; others refer it to the matter of the pſalm, as containing ſound and weighty inſtructions, as the word ſignifies; and indeed, what inſtruction ſo needful for a ſinner, as the knowledge how he may obtain the full and free pardon of his ſins? what ſo comfortable to the miſerable, as to have the way of true, abiding, eternal happineſs opened to them? Hear then and believe, and the bleſſedneſs is thine. We have here,

1. A declaration of the rich grace of God, made to periſhing ſinners in Chriſt, and the bleſſedneſs thence accruing. Their tranſgreſſion is forgiven, be it never ſo great, never ſo aggravated, never ſo long continued in; their ſin is covered; the blood of Jeſus blots out the dread account; the righteouſneſs of Jeſus covers every ſpot of evil: their iniquity is not imputed; it is not their bleſſedneſs that they have no iniquity, for they are full of it, their nature is corrupt, their hearts deſperately wicked, and their ways altogether abominable before God; but when in Chriſt Jeſus they are called and choſen, no charge lieth againſt them, becauſe their ſins have been all imputed to him; and he, who knew no ſin, was purely ſpotleſs in himſelf, hath become ſin for them, repreſenting their guilty character, and bearing all the wrath, which was the wages of ſin, that they might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him; might be, as conſidered in him, complete before God, and treated as righteous perſons, who never had offended: theſe are bleſſed, completely and eternally bleſſed; no terrors of conſcience diſmay them, no fear of death need trouble them, nor any dread of judgment diſtreſs them, for there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus. Such is their privilege, and their practice is anſwerable thereunto: in their ſpirit there is no guile; they are not only without ſpot, in virtue of their relation to Jeſus their head, but the ſame grace that juſtifies the guilty, ſanctifies the unholy; they are bleſſed with ſimplicity of heart before God, and yield themſelves up to the guidance of his word and ſpirit.

2. He deſcribes his miſerable ſtate whilſt ſin reigned in him and over him; God's hand was heavy upon him in ſome violent diſeaſe, that parched up his body as the drought in ſummer; and the anguiſh made his very bones wax old, he appeared ſo emaciated thereby. Note, (1.) Miſerable is the eſtate of the impenitent ſinner. (2.) However ſevere the ſcourge that drives us to God, we have abundant reaſon to kiſs the rod.

3. At laſt his ſilence broke, and he ſpoke with his tongue in penitent confeſſion; with deep and unfeigned humiliation laying bare his boſom before the heart-ſearching God, and deſiring to hide none of his tranſgreſſions. Note, (1.) It is a bleſſed ſymptom when the ſinner is brought to his knees. (2.) They who are truly awakened by God's ſpirit, deſire to take ſhame to themſelves; not palliating their offences, but in their aggravated guilt acknowledging and lamenting them.

4. Whilſt he was ſpeaking, yea, before he ſpake, God heard and pardoned. I ſaid, I will confeſs, &c. and ere the purpoſe was formed into a prayer, thou forgaveſt the iniquity of my ſin; ſealed the pardon to my conſcience, which was before ratified in, and granted to the Redeemer. Note, (1.) All who come to God in Chriſt, will find him readier to pardon than we to pray; what an encouragement to the chief of ſinners! (2.) It is not our penitence, nor our prayers, but God's free grace, to which alone we are indebted.

5. He doubts not but his experience would have a gracious effect on others; and ſeeing God ſo ready abundantly to pardon, they would be induced to pray; and every godly man, under a ſenſe of daily tranſgreſſions, would not fail to come to him in the time of need, when God will be ever found of thoſe who ſeek him, and then ſurely, in the floods of great waters, whether they be floods of temptation, or affliction, or corruption, they ſhall not come nigh unto him, ſo as mortally to hurt him, or finally to ſwallow him up. Note, (1.) It is a comfort to a diſtreſſed ſinner, groaning under a ſenſe of guilt, to hear that others, like himſelf, have found mercy. (2.) The moſt godly men need be found daily, as ſinners, at the throne of grace. (3.) They who ſeek God ſhall ſurely find him; the more imminently terrible their danger, the more ſhall God's grace and love be magnified in their ſalvation.

7. [k] Thou art my hiding-place, thou ſhalt preſerve me from trouble: thou ſhalt compaſs me about with ſongs of deliverance. Selah. 8. [l] I will inſtruct thee, and teach thee in the way which thou ſhalt go: † I will guide thee with mine eye. 9. [m] Be ye not as the horſe, or as the mule which have no underſtanding: [n] whoſe mouth muſt be held in with bit and bridle, leſt they come near unto thee. 10. [o] Many ſorrows ſhall be to the wicked: but he that truſteth in the LORD, mercy ſhall compaſs him about. 11. [p] Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice ye righteous: and ſhout for joy all ye that are upright in heart.

k Pſal. ix. 9. & xxxi. 20. & cxix. 114.
l Ibid. li. 13.
† Heb. I will counſel thee; mine eye ſhall be upon thee.
m Prov. xxvi. 3.
n Jam. iii. 3.
o Prov. xiii. 21. Rom. ii. 8.
p Pſal. lxiv. 10. & lxviii. 53. Phil. iv. 4.

v. 7—11. They who have found a pardoning God, cannot but rejoice in hope.

1. David profeſſes his confidence in God, and his expectations from him. Thou, the bleeding Lamb of God, whoſe wounds are open for me, thou art my hiding-place, whither my poor and ſinful ſoul hath fled, and lies ſecure from all the accuſations of conſcience, the charges of Satan, and the fears of wrath: there no trouble can approach, but ſongs of deliverance compaſs me about, for guilt pardoned, for corruption ſubdued, for death deſtroyed, for hell ſhut up, for heaven opened. Note, They who have fled to Jeſus for refuge, have found matter for eternal praiſe.

2. By ſweet experience now he can teach others the way to reſt and peace, and pardon and joy unſpeakable. I will inſtruct thee, &c. will point the path I myſelf have trod, and in which whoever walks, will find the ſame bleſſedneſs. Note, (1.) They who ſpeak from experience, will preach moſt effectually. (2.) A teachable ſpirit is the way to true wiſdom. (3.) God's word and miniſters, under the bleſſing of the ſpirit, are our appointed guides, and we muſt hear them.

3. He warns the obſtinate and incorrigible of their approaching miſery, and cautions them to avoid it. They muſt not, like brute beaſts, be ſlaves to their appetites, nor refractory againſt the Divine word and warnings, for then their ſorrows would be multiplied, and their torments inſupportable and endleſs. Note, (1.) It is better to bend before God's warnings, than break beneath his judgments. (2.) Sinners degrade themſelves from men to beaſts; yea, worſe than beaſts, in the abuſe of faculties theſe never poſſeſſed. (3.) To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

4. He encourages the faithful to adhere to God, and rejoice in him; whilſt they truſt in God, his mercy ſhall compaſs, his power guard them. Therefore, be glad and rejoice ye righteous; ye that ſtand complete in Chriſt, glory in your privileges; and ſhout for joy all ye that are upright in heart; aſcribe the praiſe to him, to whom you are indebted for all the grace beſtowed upon you; and look forward, with holy tranſport, to the kingdom he hath provided for you. Amen! Amen!

PSALM XXXIII.

Though this pſalm hath no title, it is probably David's. In it he calls upon the righteous to praiſe God, ver. 1—3. 1. For his word and providence, ver. 4, 5. 2. For the work of creation, ver. 6—9. 3. For his wiſe government of the world, ver. 10, 11. and 13—17. 4. For his favour to his choſen, which encourageth them to truſt in him, ver. 12. and 18—22.

1.[a] REJOICE in the LORD, O ye righteous, for [b] praiſe is comely for the upright. 2. Praiſe the LORD with harp: [c] ſing unto him with the pſaltery, and an inſtrument of ten ſtrings. 3. [d] Sing unto him a new ſong, play ſkilfully with a loud noiſe. 4. For [e] the word of the LORD is right: and all his works are done in truth. 5. [f] He loveth righteouſneſs a Pſ. xxxii. 11. & xcvii. 12.

b Ibid. cxlvii. 1.
c Ibid. cxii. 3. d Ibid. xcvi. 1. & cxliv. 9. Iſa. xlii. 10. Rev. v. 9.
e Pſal. xix. 8.
f Ibid. xlv. 7.

and judgment : [g] the earth is full of the † goodneſs of the LORD. 6. [h] By the word of the LORD were the heavens made : and all the hoſt of them [i] by the breath of his mouth. 7. [k] He gathereth the waters of the ſea together, as an heap : he layeth up the depth in ſtore-houſes. 8. Let all the earth fear the LORD : let all the inhabitants of the world ſtand in awe of him. 9. For [l] he ſpake, and it was done ; he commanded, and it ſtood faſt. 10. [m] The LORD bringeth the counſel of the heathen to nought : he maketh the devices of the people of none effect. 11. [n] The counſel of the LORD ſtandeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations.

[g] Pſ. cxix. 64.
† Or mercy.
[h] Gen. i. 6, 7. Heb. xi. 3. John i. 3.
[i] Job xxvi. 13.
[k] Gen. i. 9. Job xxvi. 10. & xxxviii. 8.
[l] Gen. i. 3. Pſ. cxlviii. 5.
[m] Iſa. xix. 3.
[n] Job xxiii. 13. Prov. xix. 21. Iſa. xlvi. 10.

v. 1—11. They who know the happineſs of praiſing God with joyful lips, will be provoking others to the ſame bleſſed work.

1. The pſalmiſt calls upon the righteous to join him in the grateful ſong of praiſe. It is a comely work, moſt juſtly due to God, moſt becoming a ſoul ſo deeply bound in gratitude and love. Renewed mercies call for new ſongs, and every inſtrument of muſic, that may enliven the joy, and warm the ſoul with greater fervor. Note, (1.) Muſic, when under the guidance of grace, may be made a help to our devotion. (2.) Praiſe is a noble part of worſhip, in which the heart, affected with the ſenſe of God's love, will be frequently engaged.

2. He ſuggeſts abundant matter for our praiſe. [1.] For God's pure and perfect word, which, next to the gift of his Son, may be well reckoned our chief bleſſing, where the paths of truth and holineſs are marked out, and the way to glory made plain before our faces. [2.] For his providential diſpenſations, which are righteouſneſs and judgment ; all God's dealing with the ſons of men manifeſting his delight in theſe, and, above all, his goodneſs is ſeen throughout the earth ; goodneſs to all the ſons of men, giving them life, and breath, and all things, and peculiar goodneſs to his people, who ſhare the richer mercies of goſpel grace. [3.] For the creation, v. 6, 7, 9. riſing at the word of Almighty power, and inſtantly ſtarting into being at the command of God. By the word of the Lord, the Logos, his Son, the great agent, by whom all things were made, and by the breath of his mouth, the powerful operations of his holy Spirit. The heaven, the earth, the ſea, and all that dwell therein, hence derive their original, and, by the ſame omnipotence preſerved, continue ſtedfaſt and unchangeable ; till, by a ſecond mighty word, the heavens ſhall be wrapped together as a ſcroll, the earth diſſolve, and all the elements melt with fervent heat. [4.] For his diſappointing the devices of the wicked, however craftily laid, or deeply hidden. [5.] For his own unchangeable decrees of grace and love towards his people. Note, Theſe are not the ſubject of praiſe to any one ſaint merely, but to every righteous man in every age.

3. He infers from all theſe views of God's word, works, and providence, the univerſal obligation to reverence and fear him, who, having all the creatures in his hand, can quickly arm them for our ruin ; and therefore highly is it our intereſt, as well as duty, to pay him our bounden ſervice, and not provoke his indignation.

12. [o] Bleſſed is the nation whoſe God is the LORD : and the people [p] whom he hath choſen for his own inheritance. 13. [q] The LORD looketh from heaven : he beholdeth all the ſons of men. 14. From the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth. 15. He faſhioneth their hearts alike : [r] he conſidereth all their works. 16. There is no king ſaved by the multitude of an hoſt : [s] a mighty man is not delivered by much ſtrength. 17. [t] An horſe is a vain thing for ſafety : neither ſhall he deliver any by his great ſtrength. 18. Behold, [u] the eye of the LORD is [x] upon them that fear him : upon them that hope in his mercy : 19. To deliver their ſoul from death, and [y] to keep them alive in famine. 20. [z] Our ſoul waiteth for the LORD ; [a] he is our help and our ſhield. 21. For our hearts ſhall rejoice in him ; [b] becauſe we have truſted in his holy name. 22. Let thy mercy, O LORD, be upon us, according as we hope in thee.

[o] Pſ. lxv. 4. & cxliv. 15.
[p] Exod. xix. 5.
[q] 2 Chron. xvi. 9. Job xxviii. 24. Pſ. xi. 4. & xiv. 2. Prov. xv. 3.
[r] Job xxxiv. 21. Jer. xxxii. 19.
[s] Eccleſ. ix. 11.
[t] Prov. xxi. 31.
[u] Job xxxvi. 7. Pſ. xxxiv. 15. 1 Pet. iii. 12.
[x] Pſ. cxlvii. 11.
[y] Job v. 20. Pſ. xxxvii. 19. Prov. x. 3.
[z] Pſ. lxii. 1, 5. & cxxx. 6.
[a] Pſ. cxv. 9, &c.
[b] 1 Chron. v. 20.

v. 12—22. We have here,

1. The bleſſedneſs of God's peculiar people, v. 12. Their God beholds all the ſons of men, v. 13, 14. their thoughts are naked and open before him. Though ſome wickedly ſay, God hath forſaken the earth, his eyes go to and fro in it, and none of the devices of the ungodly are unknown or unnoticed by him. He faſhioneth their hearts : as the God of the ſpirits of all fleſh, he muſt needs be acquainted with the work of his own hands ; and he over-rules all the imaginations they entertain, directing them all in ſuch a way, as to be ſubſervient to the purpoſes of his own glory ; and conſidereth all their works, the deeds of the wicked, to reſerve them for judgment ; and of the righteous, to reward them. Nor can any creature act independently of him, either to ſave or to deſtroy : in which conſideration, God's people may take the greateſt ſatisfaction, v. 16, 17. The greateſt kings, with the moſt numerous hoſts, avail nothing, if God proſper them not : the ſtrength of a giant is weakneſs, if God be againſt him, as David had experienced : and all the horſes prepared for battle cannot protect or ſave their riders, if the Lord be not on their ſide : ſo that, whilſt all creature-dependance muſt be renounced by us, all creature-oppoſition need not be feared, if the Lord be our God. And his eyes are upon them that fear him ; whilſt in general he regards and governs all the reſt, with peculiar favour he looks upon his choſen, whoſe truſt is placed on his rich mercy in Chriſt, and whoſe fear is, leſt they offend him. Againſt theſe, though kings and armies, and mighty men and horſes of war riſe up, they cannot hurt or deſtroy them : God will deliver their ſoul from death, from temporal death, from ſpiritual death, from eternal death. In time of public calamity, when famine ſtalks through the land, they ſhall have bread to eat ; and when the famine of the word prevails, and they are deprived of the miniſtry of the word and ordinances, they ſhall be fed with ſecret ſupplies of grace, and their ſouls ſhall live, Rev. xii. 14. Note, (1.) They are truly bleſſed and happy, who are God's inheritance, whom he regards with love, and who regard him with confidence, and reverential filial fear. (2.) Whatever thoughts are in a man's heart, the counſel of the Lord, that ſhall ſtand. (3.) The thought of the univerſal power, influence, and operations of God, ſhould ever engage our quiet and contented reſignation of ourſelves into his hands.

2. Having deſcribed the bleſſedneſs of God's choſen, he directs them in their duty. Our ſoul waiteth for the Lord, in patient hope, expecting the fulfilment of his promiſes. He is our help and our ſhield, the ſtrength on which we depend, and the protection under which we are ſafe. For our heart ſhall rejoice in him, as we are bound to do under the rich experience of his grace and love, and in hope of the glory which ſhall be revealed in us ; becauſe we have truſted in his holy name, and we know he will not, cannot, fail us. Therefore, let thy mercy, Lord, be upon us, as we are ever called to pray, for in this way we muſt expect thoſe gracious ſupplies he hath promiſed, according as we hope in thee, renouncing every other hope, and expecting by faith and prayer to be made partakers of thy preſent mercy in every time of need, and of thy eternal mercy, when all our requeſts ſhall be finally and fully accompliſhed.

PSALM XXXIV.

This pſalm was penned upon a particular occaſion, as appears by the title. 1. He praiſes God for the experience which he had of his goodneſs, ver. 1—6. 2. He encourages God's people to truſt in him, ver. 7—10. 3. He cautions all to take heed of ſin, and make conſcience of duty, ver. 11—14. 4. To enforce this, he ſhews God's favour to the righteous, and his diſpleaſure againſt the wicked, ver. 15—22.

¶ A pſalm of David, when [a] he changed his behaviour before † Abimelech : who drove him away, and he departed.

1. [b] I WILL bleſs the LORD at all times : his praiſe ſhall continually be in my mouth. 2. My ſoul ſhall [c] make her boaſt in the LORD : [d] the humble ſhall hear thereof, and be glad. 3. O magnify the LORD with me, and let us exalt his name together. 4. I ſought the LORD, and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears. 5. They ‡ looked unto him, and were lightened : and their faces were not aſhamed. 6. This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him ; and ſaved him out of all his troubles. 7. [e] The angel of the LORD [f] encampeth round about them that fear him, [g] and delivereth them. 8. O [h] taſte, and ſee, that the LORD is good : [i] bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him. 9. [k] O fear the LORD, [l] ye his ſaints : for there is no want to them that fear him. 10. [m] The young lions do lack and ſuffer hunger : but they that ſeek the LORD ſhall not want any good thing.

[a] Prov. xxix. 25.
† Or Achiſh, 1 Sam. xxi. 13.
[b] Eph. v. 20. 1 Theſ. v. 18.
[c] 1 Cor. i. 31.
[d] Pſ. cxix. 74. & cxlii. 7.
‡ Or flowed.
[e] Dan. vi. 22. Heb. i. 14.
[f] Gen. xxxii. 2. 2 Kings vi. 17. Zech. ix. 8.
[g] Pſ. xci. 11.
[h] 1 Pet. ii. 3.
[i] Pſ. ii. 12. Jer. xvii. 7.
[k] Heb. xii. 28.
[l] Pſ. xxxi. 23.
[m] Job iv. 11.

v. 1—10. Abimelech was the Philiſtine king called Achiſh, 1 Sam. xxi. 10. to whoſe court David, in his deſperate circumſtances, flew for refuge, and there ran the moſt imminent danger of being deſtroyed by the ſuggeſtions of the courtiers. By feigning himſelf an idiot, a device which was not perhaps altogether juſtifiable, he eſcaped ; however, the hand of God was evident, and the deliverance deſerved a ſong of praiſe.

1. He profeſſeth his fixed purpoſe, at all times, and in all places, to be ſhewing forth God's praiſe; both as the grateful tribute he owed, and that other humble men in diſtreſs might hear and be glad, encouraged by his mercies to hope for help and deliverance. In the Lord he will boaſt, aſcribing all to him, and counting his intereſt in his favour the greateſt and moſt invaluable acquiſition.

2. He labours to excite others to join him in the work of praiſe, exalting and magnifying God's holy name. And good reaſon was there for ſo doing: great was his diſtreſs, an exile in an enemy's country; his life in danger; but he could be in no place, where a throne of grace was not open: thither he flies, tells his compaſſionate Lord of all his fears, and is heard and holpen. Nor was his caſe ſingular; multitudes, like himſelf, had prayed, and were lightened, their darkneſs of ſoul diſpelled, and their diſtreſſful circumſtances cleared up: nor did ever God refuſe the meaneſt, who thus were found waiting upon him. This poor man, probably he means himſelf, in the abject ſtate to which he was reduced, or ſome other lowly ſaint, cried, and inſtant help appeared, v. 9. Angelic hoſts diſdain not the employment of miniſtring to the heirs of ſalvation, but, happy in obedience to their Lord's commands, encamp around them. Thus God delivers his people from every danger, and they are bound to bleſs and praiſe him. Note, (1.) Though we may ſometimes be in fear, God will not ſuffer us to fall. (2.) God doth, by a ſenſe of his returning favour, brighten up the countenance of the dejected. (3.) None ever waited upon him, and went away from a throne of grace diſappointed. (4.) If angels are our guard, yea, if the God of angels be with us, we need not fear what men or devils can do againſt us.

3. He invites all to taſte and ſee that the Lord is good, to come and partake of the riches of his mercy in Chriſt, ſo freely offered, and ſo richly beſtowed on the ſinful ſons of men. Bleſſed is the man that truſteth in him, accepts the gracious invitation, and reſts on his merciful goodneſs for pardon, grace, and glory.

4. He exhorts his ſaints to fear him, v. 9. for his goodneſs ſake, engaged thereby to more dutiful ſubmiſſion and ſervice; and ſurely their intereſt is highly concerned in ſo doing, for there is no want to them that fear him. As much of this world's good as is advantageous for them, ſhall be given them; but eſpecially the ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt Jeſus, in all their rich abundance, ſhall be their happy portion. Thus, though the lions hunger, through the ſcarcity of prey; or, figuratively, the covetous and ravenous oppreſſor is reduced to want; God's people ſhall be fed to the full, their ſoul and body both repleniſhed, and nothing wanting to make them truly and abidingly happy.

11. Come ye children, hearken unto me: [n] I will teach you the fear of the LORD. 12. [o] What man is he that deſireth life, and loveth many days, that he may ſee good? 13. [p] Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from ſpeaking guile. 14. [q] Depart from evil, and do good: [r] ſeek peace and purſue it. 15. [s] The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous, and his ears are open unto their cry. 16. [t] The face of the LORD is againſt them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth. 17. The righteous cry, and the LORD heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.
18. [u] The LORD is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart: and ſaveth ſuch as be of a contrite ſpirit.
19. [x] Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the LORD delivereth him out of them all. 20. He keepeth all his bones: [y] not one of them is broken. 21.
[z] Evil ſhall ſlay the wicked: and they that hate the righteous ſhall be † deſolate. 22. The LORD redeemeth the ſoul of his ſervants: and none of them that truſt in him ſhall be deſolate.

[n] Eccleſ. xii. 10.
[o] 1 Pet. iii. 10.
[p] Pſ. xxxix. 1.
[q] Ib. xxxvii. 27. Iſa i. 16, 17.
[r] Heb. xii. 14.
[s] Job xxxvi. 7. Pſal. xxxiii. 18. 1 Pet. iii. 12.
[t] Lev. xvii. 10. Jer. xliv. 11. Amos ix. 4.
[u] Pſ. li. 17. Iſa. lvii. 15. & lxi. 1. & lxvi. 2.
[x] Acts xiv. 22. 2 Tim. iii. 11, 12.
[y] John xix. 36.
[z] Pſ. xciv. 23.
† Or guilty, or damned.

v. 11—22. David was not only a great king, a mighty warriour, a ſweet muſician, but a holy preacher, and we here enjoy ſome of his divine inſtructions.

1. He begins with the firſt principles for his children's inſtruction, the fear of God, which is the beginning of wiſdom. The children here ſpoken of were his ſubjects, or young perſons in general, or more particularly thoſe, whoſe tractable tempers rendered them attentive to the leſſons he ſhould teach. Note, (1.) It is the greateſt mercy, when children from earlieſt infancy are inſtructed in the word of God. (2.) Negligent parents and maſters will have a heavy charge to anſwer in the day of God, if, for lack of knowledge, their children and ſervants periſh.

2. He anſwers the enquirers into the path of life and happineſs, v. 12. with full inſtructions, v. 13, 14. by obſerving which we may ſecure not only all the comfort that this miſerable world is capable of affording, but infinitely more, even a life of glory and happineſs eternal. Keep thy tongue from evil; under the influence of divine grace, let all thy words be directed, that no corrupt communication, nothing profane, lewd, malicious, cenſorious, may proceed out of thy mouth, but ſuch as is good to the uſe of edifying; and thy lips from ſpeaking guile: let all your dealings be with integrity, that no man go beyond or defraud his brother in any matter; and that your ſpeech may be ever the language of your hearts. Depart from evil, as the abominable thing which God hates; let no allowed iniquity be indulged; avoid the perſons, and ſhun the places, that would be a ſnare to you; and do good, the works of faith, and labours of love, that are truly good, as proceeding from the right principle, guided by God's word, the right rule, and directed to God's glory, the right end. Seek peace, in ſuch a kind, affectionate, and obliging temper and conduct, as may juſtly give none offence; and purſue it: if, through the pride and perverſeneſs of others, the bond of peace is broken, though offended, be the firſt to ſeek reconciliation, ready to forgive and forget every provocation and injury. Bleſſed and happy are they who have thus their converſation in the world.

3. He enforces the holy ways he recommends by their bleſſed iſſue to thoſe who follow them, and by the miſery of thoſe who forſake them.

[1.] Great is the bleſſedneſs of the righteous. (1.) God takes the greateſt complacency in them, v. 15. whilſt cloathed with the righteouſneſs of his dear Son, they appear without ſpot or blemiſh, and adorned with the graces of his holy Spirit, are all glorious within. (2.) He is ever attentive to their prayers. The tendereſt parent never hears the liſpings of his darling ſon with ſuch readineſs to give, or feels ſuch bowels of compaſſion for his moans, when afflicted or hurt, as God does towards his children: no prayer is unnoticed, no groan unheard, no requeſt denied. (3.) He is nigh to them that are of a broken heart; whether ſin or ſuffering, or both, be the cauſe, he is near to help and heal them; and the contrite ſpirit feels the balm of his grace poured in at every wound. (4.) Though their afflictions be many, v. 19. as well as heavy, and ſuch are often the lot of God's deareſt children, yet he never leaves them to ſink under them. Whether they be wants of body, or diſtreſs of ſoul, the Lord delivereth them out of all, ſtrangely ſometimes working for them by his providence, and manifeſting more aſtoniſhingly to them the wonders of his grace. (5.) A peculiar care is over the righteous: not a bone of him ſhall be broken, which may emphatically be referred to our righteous Head, and, in a more general ſenſe, to every faithful ſoul, whoſe concerns of every ſort are in the hands of a faithful guardian. (6.) Their eternity is ſecured: The Lord redeemeth the ſouls of his ſervants; the price is paid in the blood of Jeſus; and whatever diſtreſſes or temptations they may be yet expoſed to, his redemption is eternal, and therefore the reſcue as ſure from the power of corruption, as from the guilt of ſin; and none that truſt in him ſhall be deſolate, or guilty, or damned. God hath juſtified them from all things; they ſhall never enter into condemnation, and therefore no fears of death or judgment need make their ſpirits diſconſolate: no one ſhall be loſt of all the purchaſed remnant, but they ſhall come with Jeſus in the day of his appearing, to grace his triumphs, and to be everlaſting trophies of his victory.

[2.] Deplorable is the end of the ungodly. The face of the Lord is againſt them that do evil: his curſe follows them as their ſhadow, embitters all their comforts, takes off their wheels, when moſt eager in their purſuit of carnal joy, and impreſſes a bitterneſs, that only the heart which feels it, knows. The ſtroke of God's judgments purſues them, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth. Evil ſhall ſlay the wicked; the ſting of death, the wages of ſin, ſhall pierce them; ſickneſs and pain, beyond the power of medicine to aſſuage, ſhall torment the wretched body; and bitterer anguiſh in their minds, and dark forebodings of approaching judgment, more terribly diſtreſs their ſouls; till the awful hour comes, their eyes are fixed, convulſions ſeize them, and in a groan they expire. Happy for them if death ended there; but they that hate the righteous ſhall be deſolate, or guilty, or damned: as they ſhunned them and their ways on earth, an eternal ſeparation ſhall part them at death. Guilt, with all its horrors, ſhall go down with them into the grave; and at the day when body and ſoul muſt be again united, their damnation ſlumbereth not: eternal deſolations are determined upon them; abandoned of God, and driven from his preſence with wrath intolerable to bear, yet impoſſible to eſcape, into that place of torment, where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

If ſuch bleſſedneſs then attends the ways of grace and holineſs; if ſuch miſeries await the paths of evil; ſhall we madly ſpurn our mercies, and court our ruin? God forbid!

PSALM XXXV.

The perſecutions of Saul and his ſervants ſeem to be the ſubject of this pſalm. 1. He complains, they ſought the ruin of himſelf and friends, ver. 1, 3, 4, 7, 11, 15, 16, 20, 21, 25, 26. 2. He pleads his innocence, and good deeds towards them, ver. 7, 19, 12—14. 3. He prays to God to be his comforter and deliverer, ver. 1—4, 17, 22, 22, 27, 29. 4. He prophecies the deſtruction of his perſecutors, ver. 4, 5, 6, 8. 5. He promiſes himſelf that he ſhall yet ſee better days, ver. 9, 10. and that he will then attend God with his praiſes, ver. 18, 28. Much of this is applicable to Chriſt and his enemies, and to thoſe of his church and people, to the end of time.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] PLEAD my cauſe, O LORD, with them that ſtrive with me: fight againſt them that fight againſt me. 2. Take hold of ſhield and buckler, and ſtand up for mine help. 3. Draw out alſo the ſpear, and ſtop the way againſt them that perſecute me: ſay unto my ſoul, I am thy ſalvation. 4. † [b] Let them be confounded and put to ſhame that ſeek after my ſoul: let them be turned back and brought to confuſion that deviſe my hurt. 5. [c] Let them be as chaff before the wind: and let the angel of the LORD chaſe them. 6. Let [d] their way be dark and ſlippery, and let the angel of the LORD perſecute them. 7. For [e] without cauſe have they hid for me their net, in a pit, which without cauſe they have digged for my ſoul. 8. Let deſtruction come upon him [f] at unawares, and [g] let his net that he hath hid, catch himſelf: into that very deſtruction let him fall. 9. And my ſoul ſhall be joyful in the LORD: it ſhall rejoice in his ſalvation. 10. [h] All my bones ſhall ſay, LORD, who is like unto thee, which delivereſt the poor from him that is too ſtrong for him, yea, the poor and the needy, from him that ſpoileth him.

[a] Pſ. xliii. 1. & cxix. 154. Lam. iii. 58.
† Or, They ſhall be.
[b] Ver. 26. Pſ. xl. 14. & lxx. 3.
[c] Job xxi. 18. Pſ. i. 4. Iſa. xxix. 5. Hoſ. xiii. 3.
[d] Pſ. lxxiii. 18. Prov. iv. 19. Jer. xxiii. 12.
[e] Pſ. vii. 4.
[f] 1 Theſ. v. 3.
[g] Pſal. vii. 15, 16. & lvii. 6. & cxli. 10. Prov. v. 22.
[h] Pſ. li. 8.

v. 1—10. The cauſe of God and truth is here ever under the croſs. We have,

1. David calling upon God to plead his cauſe, and vindicate his injured innocence. His enemies maligned and traduced him; not ſatisfied with plundering him of all, and driving him out as a vagabond in the earth, they thirſted for his precious blood; were ever contriving ſecretly to enſnare, in order to deſtroy him, and openly in arms purſued him; whilſt, both unwilling and unable to contend, he could only commit himſelf to him who judgeth righteouſly, and leave God to ſecure him from the cauſeleſs injuries they wickedly plotted againſt him. Note, (1.) The beſt of men have been often perſecuted as the vileſt criminals; and the moſt inoffenſive and peaceable in the land, charged with the blackeſt deſigns of conſpiracy and rebellion. (2.) When we have a good cauſe and a good conſcience, it ſhould make us the more eaſily put up with the revilings of men. (3.) God will one day viſit for oppreſſion and wrong; till then, let us poſſeſs our ſouls in patience.

2. He prays that God would inwardly ſupport him, and outwardly manifeſt his power to his enemies confuſion. [1.] He begs inward ſupport, v. 3. Say unto my ſoul, I am thy ſalvation: all other trials would ſit light upon him, whilſt he poſſeſſed this conſciouſneſs of God's power and grace engaged for him. Note, When the believer's conſcience is aſſured of his part in the almighty Saviour, then all is peace within, and he can defy the glittering ſword without. [2.] He cries for God's appearing to protect him, and confound his enemies; which is not the language of revenge, but ſpoken under the ſpirit of prophecy, as what would ſurely come to paſs, as it may be rendered, they ſhall be, inſtead of let them be, &c. God's ſhield and buckler ſpread over him, and ſword and ſpear lifted up againſt his perſecutors, will not only ſave him, but deſtroy them. Terrible is the caſe of thoſe, againſt whom the God of war goes forth to fight; ſhame and confuſion muſt cover them, v. 4. As chaff before the wind, ſo eaſily ſhall they be diſperſed before the blaſting of the breath of his diſpleaſure, v. 5. Unable to eſcape the divine vengeance which purſues them, their way ſhall be dark, that they cannot flee; and ſlippery, that they cannot but fall. Deſtruction, or the ſtorm of wrath, v. 8. ſhall overtake him, Saul in particular, and every other enemy that dares riſe up againſt God and his people. Intangled in the net he laid, ſhall his foot be ſnared, and the ruin he deſigned for others, return upon his own head. Note, (1.) Though we may not indulge private reſentment, or wiſh evil to our worſt enemies, we may ſafely pray for the deliverance of God's ſuffering people, and the confuſion of the enemies of Chriſt and his church. (2.) The ſinner's foot is in a ſlippery place, and through the darkneſs of his fallen mind, he ſees not the dreadful pit juſt before him.

3. He rejoices in the confidence that God would ſave him, v. 9. and therefore aſcribes to him the glory. All my bones, my ſoul and body, my whole man, ſhall ſay, Lord, who is like unto thee? ſo peerleſs in thy own excellencies, ſo condeſcending to thy poor people, ſo good to redeem, ſo great to deliver them from all their mighty adverſaries. Note, (1.) They who make the Lord their ſtrength, will find him their joy. (2.) If God be for us, no matter who are againſt us.

11. [i] Falſe witneſſes did riſe up; they laid to my charge things that I knew not. 12. [k] They rewarded me evil for good, to the † ſpoiling of my ſoul. 13. But as for me, [l] when they were ſick, my cloathing was ſackcloth: I ‡ humbled my ſoul with faſting, [m] and my prayer returned into mine own boſom. 14. I behaved myſelf § as though he had been my friend, or brother: I bowed down heavily, as one that mourneth for his mother. 15. But in mine ‖ adverſity they rejoiced, and gathered themſelves together: yea, [n] the abjects gathered themſelves together againſt me, and I knew it not; they did tear me, and ceaſed not. 16. With hypocritical mockers in feaſts: [o] they gnaſhed upon me with their teeth.

[i] Mat. xxvi. 59.
[k] Pſ. xxxviii. 20. & cix. 5.
† Heb. Depriving, or bereaving.
[l] Job xxx. 25.
‡ Or, afflicted.
[m] Mat. x. 13.
§ Heb. as a friend, as a brother to me.
‖ Heb. halting. Pſal. xxxviii. 17.
[n] Job xxx. 8.
[o] Pſ. xxxvii. 12. Lam. ii. 16.

v. 11—16. It is not in the power of the moſt harmleſs to ſecure himſelf from falſhood; nor can the kindeſt treatment engage returns from the ungrateful. This David found.

1. Falſe witneſſes did riſe up; they laid to my charge things that I knew not; accuſed him of treaſonable deſigns againſt Saul's life and government, which never entered into his thoughts; yea, which his conduct ſo glaringly confuted, 1 Sam. xiv. 17, 18. Such perjured wretches likewiſe aroſe againſt the Son of David, Mat. xxvi. 60. and how many a time ſince hath the ſame enmity againſt true godlineſs led the ſons of wickedneſs to ſtick at no lies or oaths to blacken the faithful profeſſors of it.

2. They ſhewed the baſeſt ingratitude, rewarding him evil for good, to the ſpoiling, or bereaving of his ſoul; robbing him of his honour, his good name, his worldly goods, and aiming at his very life. Well had he ever deſerved of the nation, as their champion and deliverer; of Saul, as his moſt faithful and valiant ſoldier and ſervant; of thoſe who maligned him at court, as their affectionate friend. When they were ſick, with tendereſt ſympathy he felt their pain, and ſought with kind ſollicitude to remove it; with ſackcloth of no fictitious grief, he went heavily; his countenance beſpoke the emotions of his fraternal heart; and whilſt for their ſin he humbled his ſoul with faſting, his fervent prayers in their behalf teſtified the deep ſincerity of his regard: but it returned into his own boſom, ſlighted and ill-requited by them, though not returned in vain; God's bleſſing, refuſed to them, lighted on his own ſoul. But how different their conduct! how cruel their returns! In mine adverſity, or in mine halting, they rejoiced; when trouble came upon him, when he was diſgraced at court, and forced to fly as an outlaw; far from commiſerating his ſufferings, or eſpouſing his righteous quarrel, they gathered themſelves together, to mock and inſult him: the very abjects, men of the vileſt and meaneſt character, tore his reputation in pieces; he became the ſong of the drunkard, and in feaſts at their carouſals, or for a piece of bread, to curry favour with his enemies, hypocritical mockers ſet him up as the but of their ridicule and reviling, and gnaſhed upon him with their teeth, as if they wiſhed to devour him alive. Note, (1.) Baſe ingratitude wounds a generous ſpirit. (2.) The greateſt ſervices often meet an ill requital. (3.) The tendereſt ſenſibility is conſiſtent with the trueſt heroiſm: the truly brave are moſt compaſſionate. (4.) Prayer for us is the beſt mark of friendſhip. (5.) Though our kindneſs may be loſt upon the unthankful, and our prayers ſlighted, they ſhall not return without a bleſſing to ourſelves. (6.) If we, like David, are made the but of ridicule, the ſport of fools, and the ſong of drunkards, let it not be thought ſtrange: Jeſus was thus treated, and the diſciple is not above his maſter.

17. LORD, [o] how long wilt thou look on? reſcue my ſoul from their deſtructions, [p] my darling from the lions. 18. [q] I will give thee thanks in the great congregation: I will praiſe thee among much people. 19. Let not them that are mine enemies † wrongfully rejoice over me: [r] neither let them wink with the eye, [s] that hate me without a cauſe. 20. For they ſpeak not peace, but they deviſe deceitful matters againſt them that are quiet in the land. 21. Yea, [t] they opened their mouth wide againſt me, and ſaid, [u] Aha, aha, our eye hath ſeen it. 22. This thou haſt ſeen, O LORD, [x] keep not ſilence: O LORD, be not far from me. 23. [y] Stir up thyſelf, and awake to my judgment, even unto my cauſe, my God and my Lord. 24. Judge me, O LORD my God, according to thy righteouſneſs, and let them not rejoice over me. 25. [z] Let them not ſay in their hearts, ‡ Ah, ſo would we have it: let them not ſay, We have ſwallowed him up. 26. [a] Let them be aſhamed and brought to confuſion together, that rejoice

[o] Hab. i. 13.
[p] Pſ. xxii. 20.
[q] Ibid. 25, 31. & xl. 9, 10. & cxi. 1.
† Heb. Falſely.
[r] Prov. vi. 13. & x. 10.
[s] Pſ. lxix. 4. & cix. 3. & cxix. 161. Lam. iii. 52. John xv. 25.
[t] Job xvi. 10.
[u] Pſ. xl. 15. & lxx. 3. Ezek. xxv. 3.
[x] Pſ. lxxxiii. 1.
[y] Ibid. xliv. 23.
[z] Ibid. lxx. 3.
‡ Heb. Ah, ah, our ſoul.
[a] Ver. 4. Pſ. xl. 14.

joice at mine hurt : let them be [b] cloathed with ſhame and diſhonour, that magnify themſelves againſt me. 27.
Let them ſhout for joy, and be glad, that favour my § righteous cauſe : yea, [c] let them ſay continually, Let the LORD be magnified, [d] which hath pleaſure in the proſperity of his ſervant. 28. And my tongue ſhall ſpeak of thy righteouſneſs and of thy praiſe all the day long.

[b] Pſ. cix. 29. & cxxxii. 18.
§ Heb. righteouſneſs.
[c] Pſ. lxx. 4.
[d] Ibid. cxlix. 4.

v. 17—28. With eagerneſs the Pſalmiſt calls upon God to appear, not merely as a ſpectator of the injuries done him, but as the righteous judge and avenger. In order whereunto,

1. He deſcribes the character of his enemies. They were as lions, v. 12. fierce and cruel; their hatred was cauſeleſs, v. 19. they could not ſpeak to him with common civility, v. 20. they were falſe accuſers of the faithful, who were quiet in the land, and gave no juſt offence to any man : they took a malicious pleaſure in his ſufferings, and inſulted him in his diſtreſs, v. 21. Such were the enemies of Jeſus, ravenous, bitter, taunting, inſulting, triumphing in his agony, and mocking him on the croſs : we are by our profeſſion his followers ; may we be content with his reproach.

2. He prays, that God would ariſe to judge : he knew his cauſe was good, and therefore appeals to this high tribunal, v. 24. He cries to be delivered from the jaws of theſe lions, v. 17. That God would no longer keep ſilence, but pronounce the ſentence of juſt condemnation againſt them, and reſcue his ſoul from ſin and death, to which he was expoſed, v. 17. He begs, that their joys in his ſufferings may be ſhort-lived, v. 19. and that their proud boaſting may be ſilenced, and ſhame and confuſion cover them ; their projects defeated, and themſelves brought to the duſt. v. 26. Note, The triumphing of the wicked is but for a moment, and the laughter of fools will ſoon be ſucceeded by everlaſting ſorrow.

3. He expreſſes his ardent deſires, that the faithful ſervants of God, and his true friends, might ſee God's gracious dealings with him, and rejoice in his triumphs, bleſſing God for the vindication of injured innocence, and delighted in his proſperity, as if their own. Note, (1.) It is a joy to every faithful follower of the Lamb, to ſee their fellow-members happy and proſperous. (2.) Though for our good God ſees it needful to afflict his ſervants, he takes no pleaſure in their ſufferings, but delights in their proſperity. (3.) All our comforts come from God's hands, and for them he well deſerves to be bleſſed and praiſed.

4. The Pſalmiſt himſelf experiencing ſuch mercy from God, declares he will not fail of telling abroad God's praiſes in the great congregation, v. 18. and magnifying his righteouſneſs, v. 28. ſo eminently diſplayed in this interpoſition : nor ſhall his gratitude ever be ſilent, but all the day long, whilſt life and breath endure, his praiſe ſhall be loud and ceaſeleſs, till the ſongs of time ſhall give place to the never-ending ſongs of eternity.

PSALM XXXVI.

The occaſion of this pſalm appears to be the perſecution of Saul, or Abſalom. We may obſerve in it, 1. The ſinfulneſs of ſin, and how miſchievous it is, ver. 1—4. 2. The goodneſs of God, and how gracious he is, (1.) To all his creatures in general, ver. 5, 6. (2.) To his own people in particular, ver. 7—9. With which the pſalmiſt is encouraged to pray for all ſaints, ver. 10. for himſelf in particular, and his own preſervation, ver. 11. and to triumph in the certain fall of his enemies, ver. 12.

¶ To the chief muſician,

A pſalm of David the ſervant of the Lord.

1. THE tranſgreſſion of the wicked ſaith within my heart, that there is [a] no fear of God before his eyes. 2. For [b] he flattereth himſelf in his own eyes, † until his iniquity be found to be hateful. 3. The words of his mouth are iniquity and [c] deceit : he hath left off [d] to be wiſe, and to do good. 4. [e] He deviſeth ‡ miſchief upon his bed, [f] he ſetteth himſelf in a way that is not good ; he abhorreth not evil.

[a] Rom. iii. 18.
[b] Deut. xxix. 19.
† Heb. to find his iniquity to hate.
[c] Pſ. xii. 2.
[d] Jer. iv. 22.
[e] Prov. iv. 16. Mic. ii. 1.
‡ Or vanity.
[f] Iſa. lxv. 2.

v. 1—4. The higheſt title of the greateſt monarch, or the wiſeſt man, is to be called the ſervant of the Lord ; in this David glories, as his moſt diſtinguiſhed honour. We find him here deſcribing the wickedneſs of the wicked in its true colours, beginning with the root of bitterneſs within, and proceeding to the hateful fruits without.

1. The fear of God is baniſhed from his eyes ; this the tranſgreſſion of the wicked ſaith in my heart. David, by obſerving and marking his conduct, could not but be ſo convinced ; for they who daringly and avowedly continue in the breach of God's laws, muſt needs be deſtitute of his fear. Note, It is no charity to deny the evidence of our ſenſes, and to hope well of thoſe who live in open ſin.

2. He cries, Peace, peace to his ſoul ; he flattereth himſelf in his own eyes, either that God regardeth it not, or will wink at what he calls the little eſcapes and infirmities of human nature ; that his judgments will not be ſo ſevere as his word ſeems to ſay ; that death is at a diſtance ; that if he muſt repent, it is time enough yet ; and at leaſt he ſhall do as well as thouſands of others, whom God will not be ſo hard as, for a little ſin here, to deſtroy eternally. By theſe and the like vain and infidel reaſonings, his heart is hardened and ſecure, till his iniquity be found to be hateful. However men flatter themſelves, the day is near when they muſt be undeceived, and a lie be found in their right hand ; when God ſhall flaſh conviction on the ſelf-deceiver, make his abhorrence of ſin evident, and wrath to the uttermoſt be for ever the portion of the ſinner's cup.

3. Out of the abundance of the heart his mouth ſpeaketh ; corrupt and vile diſcourſe defiles his lips, and, as he deceives himſelf, he ſeeks to impoſe upon others by falſhood and hypocritical profeſſions.

4. Though once he pretended regard to religion, he hath thrown off the maſk, v. 3. and caſt the reins upon the neck of folly and ſin. Note, None are ſo bad as thoſe who once made a profeſſion of godlineſs, if they depart from it.

5. His thoughts are ever ſet on miſchief ; on his bed he contrives it ; and, when he ariſes, deliberately and reſolutely purſues the ſchemes he hath formed to gratify his luſts, and injure his neighbour. Note, (1.) Deliberate ſin ſhews the devil's power in the heart uncontrouled. (2.) They who, awake on their beds, have not their thoughts occupied in God's word, will find a tempter near, who will be buſy to ſuggeſt to them evil.

6. He abhorreth not evil ; nothing ſticks with him ; he hath ſilenced remorſe, and takes pleaſure in his abominations. To ſin through temptation is ſinful ; but to take pleaſure in ſin, without fear or reſtraint, is exceeding ſinful.

5. [g] Thy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens ; and thy faithfulneſs reacheth unto the clouds. 6. Thy righteouſneſs is like the † great mountains ; [h] thy judgments are a great deep : O LORD, thou preſerveſt man and beaſt. 7. How ‡ excellent is thy loving kindneſs, O God ! therefore the children of men [i] put their truſt under the ſhadow of thy wings. 8. [k] They ſhall be abundantly § ſatisfied with the fatneſs of thy houſe :
and thou ſhalt make them drink of [l] the river of [m] thy pleaſures. 9. For [n] with thee is the fountain of life :
[o] in thy light ſhall we ſee light. 10. O ‖ continue thy loving kindneſs unto them that know thee ; and thy righteouſneſs to [p] the upright in heart. 11. Let not the foot of pride come againſt me, and let not the hand of the wicked remove me. 12. There are the workers of iniquity fallen : [q] they are caſt down, and ſhall not be able to riſe.

[g] Pſ. lvii. 10. & cviii. 4.
† Heb. Mountains of God.
[h] Job xi. 8. Rom. xi. 33.
‡ Heb. precious.
[i] Ruth ii. 12. Pſ. xvii. 8. & xci. 4.
[k] Pſ. lxv. 4.
§ Heb. Watered.
[l] Rev. xxii. 1.
[m] Pſ. xvi. 11.
[n] Jer. ii. 13.
[o] John viii. 12.
‖ Heb. draw out at length.
[p] Pſ. xv. 2.
[q] Ibid. i. 5.

v. 5—12. The world affords a dark proſpect to the child of God ; he muſt look above him, not around him, if he would be comforted, and there a bleſſed ſcene preſents itſelf in that glorious God, who is the joy of his people, and the portion of their inheritance.

1. He contemplates the bright perfections of the bleſſed God : Thy mercy is in the heavens, laid up for thy people, notwithſtanding all the devices of the wicked againſt them ; and as this is now their protection, ſhortly they will be brought to theſe heavens, eternally to enjoy it. To this it is owing alſo, that ſinners are ſo long borne with ; God is merciful, not willing that any ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come unto repentance. Thy faithfulneſs reacheth to the clouds : though men are falſe, and turn as the weather-cock, God is faithful, and never changes ; and we may confidently truſt him to fulfil all his promiſes ; nor need think it long that ſinners are born with ; his threatnings will be accompliſhed in their ſeaſon. Thy righteouſneſs is like the great mountains ; either that righteouſneſs which is the ſinner's juſtification, ſure and everlaſting ; or thoſe deciſions againſt the impenitent, which are fixed and immoveable. Thy judgments are a great deep, unfathomable often by the ſhallow line of human underſtanding, but always directed with infinite wiſdom, and unimpeachable equity.

2. He meditates with delight on his diſpenſations of providence and grace towards his people, in all which his excellent loving kindneſs appears. In general, all creatures partake of his providential care : not only man, the Lord of the creation, but every beaſt, is fed by his bounty, and preſerved by his providence ; whilſt with eſpecial regard he manifeſts his loving kindneſs to thoſe who put their truſt under the ſhadow of his wings, and fills their hearts with wonder, gratitude, and love. With liberal hand their wants are all ſupplied ; with the fatneſs of his houſe they are ſatiſfied : an all-ſufficient God is an all-ſufficient portion. Of earthly bleſſings they ſhall have enough, whilſt ſweet content makes every meal a feaſt: with ſpiritual communications they ſhall be abundantly repleniſhed; enjoying, in holy ordinances here below, divine fellowſhip with the Father and his Son Jeſus Chriſt; and daily looking for the perfection of happineſs in the full, uninterrupted, and eternal enjoyment of God's preſence and love in his temple of glory above. Even in this vale of tears, thou ſhalt make them drink of the river of thy pleaſures; thoſe pure joys, that they who thirſt after righteouſneſs taſte, when coming to Jeſus to drink, they receive out of his fulneſs the abundance of pardon, grace, and conſolations, the foretaſtes of thoſe eternal pleaſures that are at God's right hand for evermore. For with thee is the well of life; thou art the living fountain; thy breath firſt animated the lifeleſs clay; but better far, quickened by thy free ſpirit, our ſoul, dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, firſt felt new powers infuſed, and truly began to live. With living ſtreams fed from the ſacred fountain, we are enabled daily to increaſe with the increaſe of God, and ſhortly we expect to drink at the fountain-head, and live eternally glorious and happy, like the author of our bleſſed immortality. In thy light ſhall we ſee light; without thee all is darkneſs; no ſun to ſhine, no eye to ſee; but when thou doſt ariſe, the Sun of righteouſneſs, then ſtrait our ſightleſs eye-balls meet the welcome day. Before us lies the path of life and glory, and diſtant realms of everlaſting light terminate the proſpect. Thither our willing feet are haſting; and, yet a moment, ſhall arrive at that bright world, where, face to face, we ſhall behold the beatific and transforming viſion, and in the contemplation of God's tranſcendent excellencies, be unutterably and eternally happy.

3. He prays for himſelf and others, that they may be continually bleſſed with the communications of divine grace: that thoſe who know God, may follow on to know him more and more, v. 10. ſupported by his loving kindneſs, gaining a more diſtinct view of their divine juſtifying righteouſneſs, and experiencing God's conſtant protection from the power of evil. For himſelf he begs, that the foot of pride may not come againſt him, to trample him down, or the hand of the wicked prevail, to deſtroy him; that neither his enemies without or within, ſpiritual or temporal, may remove him from his ſtedfaſtneſs. Note, Tho' we have aſſured promiſes of being kept, yet muſt we be inceſſant in prayer for their accompliſhment.

4. He foreſees the ruin of the wicked near, certain, and fearful; fallen under the ſtroke of death's reſiſtleſs arm; caſt down by the juſt ſentence of the eternal judge, into the place of torment, and never able to riſe from that bed of death, where the ſufferings are as everlaſting as they are intolerable. O gather not, Lord, my ſoul, with theſe ſinners!

PSALM XXXVII.

This pſalm is a ſermon, full of uſeful inſtruction for the people of God, and a key to the myſteries of providence. 1. David forbids us to fret at the proſperity of the wicked, ver. 1, 7, 8. (1.) Becauſe of the ſcandalous character of the wicked, ver. 12, 14, 21, 32. and the honourable character of the righteous, ver. 21, 26, 30, 31. (2.) Becauſe of the deſtruction and ruin which the wicked are nigh to, ver. 2, 9, 10, 20, 35, 36, 38. and the ſalvation and protection which the righteous are ſure of, ver. 13, 15, 17, 28, 33, 39, 40. (3.) Becauſe of the particular mercy God has in ſtore for all his people, ver. 11, 16, 18, 19, 22—25, 28, 29, 37. 2. He preſcribes very good remedies againſt it, ver. 3—6, 27, 34.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] FRET not thyſelf becauſe of evil doers, neither be thou envious againſt the workers of iniquity. 2. For they ſhall ſoon be cut down like the graſs, and wither as the green herb. 3. Truſt in the LORD, and do good, ſo ſhalt thou dwell in the land, and † verily thou ſhalt be fed. 4. [b] Delight thyſelf alſo in the LORD; and he ſhall give thee the deſires of thine heart. 5. ‡ [c] Commit thy way unto the LORD: truſt alſo in him, and he ſhall bring it to paſs. 6. And [d] he ſhall bring forth thy righteouſneſs as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day.

[a] Prov. xxiii. 17. & xxiv. 1, 19. Pſ. lxxiii. 3. Jer. xii. 1.

† Heb. In truth.

[b] 1 Pet. i. 8.

‡ Heb. Roll thy way upon.

[c] Pſ. lv. 22. Prov. xvi. 3. Mat. vi. 25. 1 Pet. v. 7.

[d] Job xi. 17. Mic. vii. 9.

v. 1—6. The way of duty is made very plain, and therefore we are more inexcuſable, if we depart from it.

1. The Pſalmiſt cautions us againſt envy and fretfulneſs becauſe of the proſperity of the wicked. It had been a trial that himſelf had been beſet with, and therefore he ſpeaks from experience, which is the moſt effectual way of preaching. When in the world we ſee the ungodly proſper, and proud oppreſſors glorying in the injuries they inflict on God's perſecuted people, we are too apt to repine at their affluence and influence; to entertain hard thoughts of God; and fret and murmur againſt the diſpenſations of providence; a temper as evil, reſpecting God, as tormenting to ourſelves.

2. He gives a ſtrong argument to ſilence our impatience. The proſperity of the ſinner is ſhort and precarious, as the withering graſs; and God's ſcythe of judgment is whetted to mow them down, and caſt them into the oven as fuel for the flames. Mark his end, and thou ſhalt not envy his way.

3. He preſcribes the good we ſhould follow, as well as the evil we ſhould avoid, and enjoying the better portion in God's favour, have no reaſon to envy any worldling his poſſeſſions. Three things he adviſes, and ſupports each of them with the moſt forcible argument of the bleſſedneſs which would thence ariſe. [1.] To truſt in the Lord, on his promiſes for ſupport, and wait the iſſue of his providences; and do good, perſevering in the path of duty, however dark and diſcouraging it may appear; and then God will take care, you ſhall be fed, and not famiſhed, as you may be ready to fear, if you act with conſcientious integrity, in a world of knavery and ſelfiſhneſs; and dwell in the land, if not ſo great as others, yet with a peaceful conſcience, and a contented mind, and that is a higher feaſt than luxury can give. [2.] To delight in the Lord, as the moſt bleſſed portion; in his love, as the beſt enjoyment; in his word, as the ſureſt title deeds; and in his promiſed glory, as the beſt inheritance; and he will give thee the deſires of thine heart; a renewed ſoul, whoſe delight is in God, can aſk for nothing he will not grant, becauſe the ſum total of all his requeſts is, thy will be done. [3.] To commit thy way unto the Lord, in prayer for direction, and with quietneſs expecting an anſwer; ſatisfied in every diſpoſal, and aſſured that infinite wiſdom and love will order all things to work for our good: and then, without any ſinful expedients or contrivances of our own, he will bring it to paſs; ſo that the event ſhall fully anſwer our expectations; and, however for a time blackened with calumny, raſhly cenſured, or unjuſtly treated, he will make our righteouſneſs evident as the light, and our judgment as the noon-day; when, either in time or eternity, he ſhall appear for the vindication of his people from malignant tongues, and the injuſtice of oppreſſors. If we have but faith and patience, the end muſt be glory and honour.

7. [e] † Reſt in the LORD, and [f] wait patiently for him: [g] fret not thyſelf becauſe of him who proſpereth in his way, becauſe of the man who bringeth wicked devices to paſs. 8. [h] Ceaſe from anger, and forſake wrath: fret not thyſelf in any wiſe to do evil. 9. For [i] evil doers ſhall be cut off: but [k] thoſe that wait upon the LORD, they ſhall inherit the earth. 10. For yet a little while, and the wicked ſhall not be: yea, [l] thou ſhalt diligently conſider his place, and it ſhall not be. 11. But [m] the meek ſhall inherit the earth: and ſhall delight themſelves in the abundance of peace. 12. The wicked plotteth againſt the juſt, and [n] gnaſheth upon him with his teeth. 13. [o] The LORD ſhall laugh at him, for he ſeeth that his day is coming. 14. The wicked have drawn out the ſword, and have bent their bow, to caſt down the poor and needy, and to ſlay ‡ ſuch as be of upright converſation. 15. [p] Their ſword ſhall enter into their own heart, and their bows ſhall be broken. 16. [q] A little that a righteous man hath, is better than the riches of many wicked. 17. For [r] the arms of the wicked ſhall be broken: but the LORD upholdeth the righteous. 18. The LORD knoweth the days of the upright: and [s] their inheritance ſhall be for ever. 19. They ſhall not be aſhamed in the evil time: and [t] in the days of famine they ſhall be ſatisfied. 20. But the wicked ſhall periſh, and the enemies of the LORD ſhall be as the § fat of lambs, they ſhall conſume: into ſmoke ſhall they conſume away.

[e] Pſ. lxii. 1.

† Heb. Be ſilent to the Lord. Exod. xiv. 13. 2 Chron. xx. 17. Iſa. xxx. 15.

[f] Lam. iii. 26.

[g] Ver. 1.

[h] Eph. iv. 26.

[i] Job xx. 23—29. Pſ. lv. 23.

[k] Iſa. lvii. 13.

[l] Job vii. 10. & xx. 9.

[m] Mat. v. 5.

[n] Pſ. xxxv. 16.

[o] Ibid. ii. 4.

‡ Heb. The upright of way.

[p] 1 Sam. xxxi. 4. Pſ. vii. 15.

[q] Prov. xvi. 8. 1 Tim. vi. 6.

[r] Job xxxviii. 15. Pſ. x. 15. Ezek. xxx. 21, &c.

[s] Iſa. lx. 21.

[t] Job. v. 20. Pſ. xxxiii. 19.

§ Heb. preciouſneſs.

v. 7—20. The foregoing precepts are here reinforced and enlarged upon, and we have need of line upon line, ſeeing our hearts are ſo corrupt, and our underſtanding ſo darkened.

Abundant reaſons are here urged, why we ſhould patiently wait upon the Lord, and without anger, envy, and diſcontent, behold the proſperous ſinner, and bear up under every croſs we may be called to ſuffer from him.

1. A variety of reaſons for our quiet ſubmiſſion is here produced from the miſery of ſinners. [1.] Their ruin is determined, v. 9. Though for a while their evil counſels ſeem to ſucceed, v. 7. and all goes ſmoothly on, yet they are only raiſed to a higher ſummit, to make their fall more terrible. [2.] Their deſtruction is near, even at the door, v. 10. Their career is ſhort; the longeſt life is but a ſtep, and they are often ſurprized in the midſt, and their ſoul required of them. Each moment is uncertain, each breath precarious, and then all their hopes periſh, vaniſhing as the ſmoke from the altar, v. 20. [3.] Their own devices ſhall fall upon them, v. 12—14. Tho' crafty, cruel, and, in their own apprehenſion, confident of ſucceſs, God mocks at their impotent deſigns, and turns the deſtruction they had prepared for the defenceleſs poor, upon their own heads. Their day is coming, a terrible day, when the wicked muſt tremble, and at which the righteous ſhould rejoice. [4.] When God ariſes to judgment, they will periſh for ever; his wrath, as the fire of the altar, ſhall burn, and none ſhall quench it: the wicked, as fuel for the flames, ſhall be conſumed, or rather conſuming yet unconſumed, in theſe everlaſting burnings.

2. The unſpeakably happier lot of the righteous, with all their troubles, ſhould repreſs every murmur of diſcontent becauſe of the apparent proſperity of the ungodly. [1.] They ſhall inherit the earth, v. 9. Their patient waiting ſhall not be diſappointed; the preſent world ſhall afford them a ſufficiency, and in the new earth, where dwelleth righteouſneſs, they have a ſure poſſeſſion. [2.] They ſhall delight themſelves in the abundance of peace. Whatever portion, be it leſs or more, they have below, one thing they enjoy better than the wealth of both the Indies, peace with God, and, as the effect of that, peace of conſcience; a delightful peace, that makes even ſufferings light, and adds a double reliſh to every enjoyment: a peace, to which the wicked are ſtrangers; a peace the world cannot give; and, bleſſed be God, cannot take away; and abundance of peace, not only whilſt ſun and moon endureth, or till life ſhall terminate, but permanent as the ages of eternity. [3.] The little a righteous man hath, is better than the riches of many wicked, v. 16. Of this world God's enemies have far the greater ſhare; but without God's bleſſings the ſweeteſt draughts are bitter, and the worm of diſcontent at the root of their gourd makes it wither, when to appearance moſt flouriſhing. But the righteous man's little comes from God's gift, is enjoyed in his love, and improved to God's glory. He hath the great ſeaſoning of contentment in whatſoever ſtate he is, and, ſenſible how unworthy he is of the leaſt, every thing he uſes fills him with thankfulneſs. A dry cruſt, with a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt, furniſhes a more delicious meal, than the tables of luxury ever afforded. [4.] The Lord upholdeth the righteous; ſo that in all trials and difficulties he is ſupported within; and, as the everlaſting arms are underneath him, he is now and for ever ſafe from fear of evil. [5.] The Lord knoweth the days of the upright, v. 18. He takes notice of his daily ſervice, faithful to reward him; of his trials, to ſupport him; of his ſorrows, to comfort him; and gives him a ſenſe of his love all the day long. [6.] Their inheritance ſhall be for ever, v. 18. Their portion, bleſſed as it is, ſhall not be circumſcribed by the narrow bounds of time; but in heaven there is reſerved for them an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, which fadeth not away. [7.] They ſhall never be aſhamed of their confidence, v. 19. In general calamities they ſhall be never deſtitute; in the evil day of death their faith and joy ſhall not fail them; and in the day of judgment they have boldneſs to appear before the awful bar. Such preſent poſſeſſions, ſuch eternal expectations, may well keep down every riſing diſcontent. Why ſhould we envy the ungodly their ſhort-lived, embittered, unſatisfying, periſhing enjoyments, when we have ſuch a ſufficient, ſatisfying, abiding portion here, and ſuch a near proſpect of a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory hereafter?

21. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again:
but [u] the righteous ſheweth mercy, and giveth. 22. For [x] ſuch as be bleſſed of him ſhall inherit the earth; and they that be curſed of him ſhall be cut off. 23. [y] The ſteps of a good man are † ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way. 24. [z] Though he fall, he ſhall not be utterly caſt down: for [a] the LORD ‡ upholdeth him with his hand. 25. I have been young, and now am old: yet [b] have I not ſeen the righteous forſaken, nor his ſeed begging bread. 26. [c] He is § ever merciful, and lendeth: and [d] his ſeed is bleſſed. 27. [e] Depart from evil, and do good: and dwell for evermore. 28. For the LORD loveth judgment, and forſaketh not his ſaints, they are preſerved for ever: but [f] the ſeed of the wicked ſhall be cut off. 29. [g] The righteous ſhall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever. 30. [h] The mouth of the righteous ſpeaketh wiſdom; and his tongue talketh of judgment. 31. [i] The law of his God is in his heart, none of his ſteps ſhall ſlide. 32. The wicked watcheth the righteous, and ſeeketh to ſlay him. 33. The LORD will not leave him in his hand, nor ‖ condemn him when he is judged.

[u] Pſ. cxii. 5, 9.
[x] Prov. iii. 33.
[y] 1 Sam. ii. 9.
† Or, eſtabliſhed.
[z] Prov. xxiv. 16. Mic. vii. 8. 2 Cor. iv. 9.
[a] Iſa. xli. 10.
‡ Or, upholdeth his hand.
[b] Heb. xiii. 5.
[c] Pſ. cxii. 5, 9.
§ Heb. All the day.
[d] Pſ. cxii. 2.
[e] Ibid. xxxiv. 14.
[f] Ibid. xxi. 10. Iſa. xiv. 20.
[g] Prov. ii. 21.
[h] Mat. xii. 35.
[i] Deut. vi. 6. Pſ. xl. 8. & cxix. 98. Iſa. li. 7.
‖ Or, Suffer him to be condemned. Pſ. cix. 31.

v. 21—23. We have here,

1. The contraſt between the righteous and the wicked in their dealings among men. The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: knaviſh and unjuſt, they contract debts they are neither able nor deſign to pay: but the righteous not only maintains juſtice, but exerciſes mercy, lending to aſſiſt the induſtrious, and giving to relieve the neceſſities of the poor.

2. Their different regards from God, and expected end. The one is bleſſed with his favour, enjoys a preſent portion, and is deſigned for his eternal kingdom: the other is the object of his diſpleaſure, under his curſe in this world, and ready to be cut off from the earth, and conſigned to never-ending miſery in the next.

3. A variety of inſtances of God's kindneſs and regard for the righteous are inſiſted upon. [1.] His ways are ordered of the Lord, v. 23. His written word is his conſtant rule; his ſpirit of wiſdom enlightens and directs him therein; and by the leadings of his providence he makes his duty plain, when in difficulties about his conduct. [2.] He delights in his way; takes a pleaſure to ſee him walk under the influence of his grace. [3.] Though he fall, he ſhall not be utterly caſt down. Fall he may, into ſin, grievous ſin, through the remaining corruption of his nature; but the Lord will recover him, and not ſuffer him to ſink under guilt and deſpair: or into affliction, deep affliction, but he ſhall not be ſwallowed up thereby; God's comforts ſhall ſupport him under them, and God's wiſdom and love open a way for him to eſcape. [4.] He ſhall not want. However he may be reduced, God will ſome way raiſe him up a friend, that he ſhall not be forſaken: and this the Pſalmiſt by long experience could declare, that he had never ſeen the righteous deſtitute, or his ſeed, the followers of his holy ſteps, begging their bread. Note, Common beggars uſually owe their neceſſities either to their lazineſs, their extravagance, or their vices, which have diſeaſed and diſabled them. [5.] He ſhall be protected and preſerved through every difficulty. God loveth judgment; he is not unrighteous to forget the works of faith, and labours of love; and in theſe the gracious ſoul exerciſes himſelf. His lips drop wiſdom, v. 30. inſtructed of God in the ways of his grace, he labours to ſpread abroad a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt; and his tongue talketh of judgment; God's method of dealing with ſaints and ſinners, for the comfort of the one, and the conviction of the other. The law of his God is in his heart, written there by almighty grace; and being thus renewed in holineſs, none of his ſteps ſhall ſlide. However ſore thruſt at by wicked men, v. 32. or tempted by wicked ſpirits, the Lord ſhall preſerve him from every fatal blow, reſcue him from every ſnare, juſtify him from every accuſation of earth or hell, v. 33. and preſerve him ſafe to his everlaſting kingdom.

4. When God is ſo rich in mercy, we are ſurely bound to duty. Depart from evil, and do good: daily ſeek to be farther removed from ſin, and daily be preſſing after higher meaſures of grace and holineſs; cleanſing yourſelves from all filthineſs of fleſh and ſpirit, and perfecting holineſs in the fear of God. And as many as walk after this rule ſhall peace be upon them and mercy, and on the Iſrael of God.

34. Wait on the LORD, and keep his way, and he ſhall exalt thee to inherit the land: [k] when the wicked are cut off, thou ſhalt ſee it. 35. [l] I have ſeen the wicked in great power: and ſpreading himſelf like † a green bay-tree. 36. Yet he paſſeth away, and lo, he was not: [m] yea, I ſought him, but he could not be found.
37. Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright:
for [n] the ‡ end of that man is peace. 38. But the tranſgreſſors ſhall be deſtroyed together, the end of the wicked ſhall be cut off. 39. But [o] the ſalvation of the righteous is of the LORD, he is their ſtrength in the time of trouble. 40. And [p] the LORD ſhall help them, and deliver them: he ſhall deliver them from the wicked, and ſave them, [q] becauſe they truſt in him.

[k] Pſ. lii. 6. & xci. 8.
[l] Job v. 3.
† Or, A green tree that groweth in his own ſoil.
[m] Job xx. 7.
[n] Iſa. lvii. 2.
‡ Or, reward. Ver. 38.
[o] Jonah ii. 9.
[p] Iſa. xxxi. 5.
[q] 1 Chron. v. 20.

v. 34—40. We cannot have the path of duty too frequently or too warmly enforced.

1. The Pſalmiſt repeats the exhortation to wait on the Lord, in patient perſeverance, inſtant prayer, and humble faith; and keep his way; make conſcience of duty, conſult his word, eye his providences, ſubmit to his corrections, improve his mercies, then all will be well.

2. His arguments for ſo doing are the ſame as before; the miſery of the impenitently wicked, and the bleſſedneſs of the righteous.

(1.) The miſery of the wicked. He ſhall be cut off, from life, from hope, from God, from glory. David had lived to ſee the divine threatnings accompliſhed; he had beheld his ſpreading branches and lofty head, like a bay-tree flouriſhing; yet how momentary the proſperity! the ax of judgment is laid at his root; he falls, forgotten among the living; his memorial periſhes, and, as fuel only for the flames, he is caſt into the burning lake. Nor was this the caſe of one notoriouſly abandoned, but ſhall be the portion of all unhumbled ſinners, be they never ſo great, never ſo numerous: they ſhall be deſtroyed together, ſinking in one promiſcuous ruin; and, having been companions in ſin, muſt mingle their ceaſeleſs tears, and lie down together in that pit from which there is no deliverance.

(2.) The bleſſedneſs of the righteous, the perfect, the upright; that is, of the ſoul that, juſtified in a Redeemer's righteouſneſs, and renewed by a Saviour's grace, ſeeks in ſimplicity to pleaſe God. He ſhall be delivered from all his enemies, and ſtrengthened in every time of trouble, v. 39, 40.

Peace ſhall be his happy lot, in death at leaſt, when all the ſtorms of life blown over, he ſurrenders his departing ſoul into the Saviour's hands, and enters into that eternal reſt, where ſorrow is unknown, and no cloud obſtructs the beams of the life-giving Sun of righteouſneſs. His ſalvation is ſecured, for it is of the Lord, the author and finiſher of it, v. 39. to be enjoyed in him, and with him, through all the ages of a bliſsful and glorious eternity.

PSALM XXXVIII.

This is one of the penitential pſalms; it is full of grief and complaint from the beginning to the end: He complains, 1. Of God's diſpleaſure, and of his own ſin which provoked it, ver. 1—5. 2. Of his bodily ſickneſs, ver. 6—10. 3. Of the unkindneſs of his friends, ver. 11. 4. Of injuries which his enemies did him, pleading his good carriage towards them, yet confeſſing his ſins againſt God, ver. 12—20. 5. He concludes with a prayer to God, for his gracious preſence and help, ver. 21, 22. The ſweets of ſin can never pay us for the bitterneſs of the ſorrow and ſuffering. Let us learn theſe therefore rather from others falls than our own.

¶ A pſalm of David [a] to bring to remembrance.

1. O LORD, [b] rebuke me not in thy wrath: neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure. 2. For [c] thine arrows ſtick faſt in me, and thy hand preſſeth me ſore. 3. There is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh, becauſe of thine anger: [d] neither is there any † reſt in my bones, becauſe of my ſin. 4. For [e] mine iniquities are gone over mine head: [f] as an heavy burden they are too heavy for me. 5. My wounds ſtink and are corrupt: becauſe of my fooliſhneſs. 6. I am troubled, I am bowed down greatly; [g] I go mourning all the day long. 7. For my loins are filled with a loathſome diſeaſe: and there is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh. 8. I am feeble and ſore broken: [h] I have roared by reaſon of the diſquietneſs of my heart. 9. LORD, all my deſire [i] is before thee: and my groaning is not hid from thee. 10. [k] My heart panteth, my ſtrength faileth me: as for [l] the light of mine eyes, it alſo ‡ is gone from me. 11. [m] My lovers and my friends ſtand aloof from my ‖ ſore: and my kinſmen ſtand afar off.

v. 1—11. The title of this pſalm is, to bring to remembrance; either to bring to remembrance his ſins, when lying on the bed of ſickneſs; or after his recovery, to remember his deep diſtreſs and God's mercy to him, as a humbling memorial to him of his own vileneſs, and a conſtant evidence of the amazing grace of a pardoning God.

1. He earneſtly deprecates the wrath of God, v. 1. the ſenſe of which was the moſt intolerable part of his ſufferings. Bitter as his bodily pains were, theſe were light afflictions, compared with the apprehenſion of God's diſpleaſure. This therefore he begs may be removed.

2. He ſpreads his diſtreſſing caſe before the father of mercies, bewailing his wretchedneſs, but moſt bewailing his ſins. Thine arrows ſtick faſt in me, not only ſharp to pierce deep, but, as it were, tipped with poiſon, filling his ſoul with bitterer anguiſh, than his body with acute pain: and thy hand preſſeth me ſore, ſo inſupportably heavy, I ſink under it. There is no ſoundneſs in my fleſh, v. 7. diſeaſe, loathſome and univerſal, hath ſeized upon me; and what aggravates every pang, it appears inflicted in thine anger, which, who can endure, if it be kindled, yea but for a moment? neither is there any reſt in my bones, becauſe of my ſin; ſin, that bitter and evil thing provokes the holy God, kindles a fire even in my bones, and haunting my conſcience, gives me no reſt day nor night. Yet righteous art thou, O God; theſe are the juſt deſert of mine iniquities; iniquities great and grievous, that like ſtormy waves threaten to overwhelm me, and as a burden inſupportable, to ſink me in the loweſt deeps. My ſoul is filled with gaping wounds, loathſome as the fouleſt ulcers, and deadly, as made with the ſcorpion's ſting, whilſt my fooliſhneſs bitterly upbraids me; that for a vile and momentary gratification, could thus offend the God of purity, and plunge myſelf to ſuch an abyſs of anguiſh. I mourn, I groan, I roar for the diſquietneſs of my heart, mine eyes grow dim, worn out with weeping, and darkned with the ſhadows of death. My heart pants, as though I were juſt expiring, and my ſtrength faileth me, as ſinking under my burdens. Amidſt this bitterneſs of ſoul and anguiſh of body, no kind friend is near to miniſter the cordial of comfort, to ſooth my agony, or cloſe my dying eyes: deſerted, forſaken, abhorred; a monſter in their eyes, a terror to myſelf. Note, (1.) What ſad work does ſin make, even in the heart of a child of God? and if this be done in the green tree, what ſhall be done in the dry? (2.) The griefs of a real penitent are always bitterer for his ſins, than his ſufferings. (3.) They who have ever felt the burden of ſin, have known ſome of the Pſalmiſt's groans. (4.) However painful the wounds of conſcience, it is a ſign of life to feel. Inſenſibility is the moſt fatal ſymptom. (5.) Under ſickneſs of body, let us reflect upon, and be humbled for the ſin of our ſoul. (6.) The ſtrongeſt muſt bow before God's afflicting hand; ſinews of braſs and bones of iron cannot reſiſt the ſtroke of fierce diſeaſe. (7.) Worldly friends, like the ſwallow, flutter round us in the ſummer of proſperity, but forſake us in the winter of adverſity. (8.) In his ſufferings, David was a type of Chriſt; bitterer ſorrows his ſoul endured, more agonizing pain his body ſuffered, more baſely deſerted of his friends, and even for a while to ſenſe forſaken of his God, and all this not for his own ſins, but for ours.

3. Though perplexed, he is not in deſpair. Hope ſupported his fainting heart, v. 9. God knew his groaning was no feigned ſorrow, and his deſire, all his deſire was before him, who ſaw his deep diſtreſs, and what above all things he ſought, even pardon and peace with God. Note, It is ſome comfort that our compaſſionate God ſees our anguiſh; and whilſt we are enabled, though he ſlay us, to truſt in him, we cannot utterly fail.

12. They alſo that ſeek after my life, lay ſnares for me: and they that ſeek my hurt, ſpeak miſchievous things, and imagine deceits all the day long. 13. But [n] I, as a deaf man, heard not: and I was [o] as a dumb man that openeth not his mouth. 14. Thus I was as a man that heareth not, and in whoſe mouth are no reproofs. 15. For † in thee, O LORD, do I hope: thou wilt ‡ hear, O LORD my God. 16. For I ſaid, Hear me, leſt otherwiſe they ſhould rejoice over me: [p] when my foot ſlippeth, they magnify themſelves againſt me. 17. For I am ready to halt, and my ſorrow is continually before me. 18. For [q] I will declare mine iniquity; I will be ſorry for my ſin. 19. But mine enemies are lively, and they are ſtrong: and they that hate me wrongfully are multiplied. 20. [r] They alſo that render evil for good, are mine adverſaries: [s] becauſe I follow the thing that good is. 21. Forſake me not, O LORD: O my God, be not far from me. 22. Make haſte ‖ to help me, O LORD, my ſalvation.

v. 12—22. Whilſt within were fears, without were fightings. His enemies took advantage of his diſeaſe and diſtreſs to inſult and aſſail him.

1. He complains of them to God, who was not an unconcerned ſpectator of their wickedneſs. Thirſting for his blood, they laid ſnares for his life; their lips were full of miſchief, and their heart of deceit: with malicious pleaſure they rejoiced, when his foot ſlipped and ſin prevailed, and magnified themſelves when calamity ſeemed to lay him low, and death threatned him. They hated him without a cauſe, returned his kindeſt offices with black ingratitude; and, devil like, his holy conduct provoked their bittereſt enmity. Their might and multitude made them very formidable, and, left to himſelf, he was utterly unable to reſiſt them. Note, (1.) The great quarrel againſt the people of God, is becauſe of his image they bear; whatever handle is made uſe of, this enmity againſt God is at the bottom. (2.) So fixed is the hatred of the wicked againſt goodneſs for its own ſake, that though benefited by it, they deteſt it, abhor the prayers offered for them, and can ſcarce give a civil anſwer to the kindeſt enquiries. (3.) When the views of our utter helpleſſneſs lead us to ſeek Divine ſtrength, then ſhall we out of weakneſs be made ſtrong.

2. He mentions, with ſatisfaction, his own unruffled temper under theſe provocations, v. 13, 14, and the cauſe of it, v. 15. he committed his caſe to God, his covenant God, not doubting but in him to find a friend when all forſook him; and that he would hear, or anſwer for him, hear his prayer to help him, anſwer for him, by appearing in judgment as his avenging God. Thus ſatisfied, like a deaf man he heard not, neither regarded, reſented, nor retorted their ill uſage; and as one dumb, his lips never uttered an unkind word, or attempted to expoſtulate where reaſoning was vain. Note, (1.) To be calm and compoſed under ſevere provocation, is the mark of a truly bleſſed ſpirit. (2.) It is wiſe to appear ignorant of many unkindneſſes done us. (3.) When anſwering will but exaſperate, we muſt be content ſilently to ſuffer. (4.) Thus did the Lamb of God appear dumb before his ſhearers. (5.) Hope in God is the great ſupport againſt all oppreſſion and wrong. (6.) They who contentedly leave their caſe with him, ſhall not be diſappointed, or want an advocate to plead for them.

3. Though he was ſilent before man, where he could vindicate himſelf, he is not ſilent before God, where he deſires to humble his ſoul. There he declares his iniquity, that had been the juſt cauſe of all his ſufferings, and with unfeigned ſorrow, v. 18. bewails his ſins. Reſpecting men, he could look for juſtice; reſpecting God, he applied only for mercy. Note, (1.) A ſenſe

---

[a] Pſal. lxx. Title.

[b] Ibid. vi. 1. Jer. x. 24.

[c] Job vi. 4.

[d] Pſal. vi. 2.

† Heb. Peace or health.

[e] Ezra ix. 6. Pſal. xl. 12.

[f] Mat. xi. 28.

[g] Job xxx. 28. Pſal. xlii. 9. & xliii. 2.

[h] Job iii. 24. Iſa. lix. 11.

[i] Rom. viii. 27.

[k] Pſal. xl. 12.

[l] Ibid. vi. 7. & lxxxviii. 9.

‡ Heb. Is not with me.

[m] Pſ. xxxi. 11. Luke xxiii. 49.

‖ Heb. Stroke.

[n] 2 Sam. xvi. 10.

[o] Pſ. xxxix. 2, 9.

† Or, thee do I wait for.

‡ Or anſwer.

[p] Pſal. xxxv. 15, 26.

[q] Prov. xxviii. 13.

[r] Pſ. xxxv. 12. & cix. 5.

[s] 1 Pet. iii. 14. 1 John iii. 12.

‖ Heb. To my help.

of our own offences againſt God, will ſerve to make us patient under the provocation of men. (2.) They who have a true ſight and ſenſe of ſin, cannot but be deeply ſorry for having offended a God ſo holy, and grieved him that is ſo gracious.

4. He directs his prayer to God for help, for preſent help; forſake me not, O Lord; though left of all beſide, let thy preſence comfort, thy power ſupport me: O my God, be not far from me, my God in whom, by promiſe, I have an intereſt, whoſe nearneſs to me I now peculiarly need; make haſte to help me, for I am ready to halt, v. 17. under ſuch complicated and continual ſorrow, make haſte then, O Lord, my ſalvation, on thee I place my hope, from thee alone my help muſt come, and chearfully I reſign myſelf up to thee, perſuaded that thou art and wilt be my preſent, yea, my eternal ſalvation. Let God's Iſrael then in deepeſt affliction ſtill truſt, and not be afraid.

PSALM XXXIX.

David ſeems to have penned this pſalm under ſome ſeaſon of deep affliction, wherein he found it difficult to exerciſe that patience he had ſo late preſcribed; ſo much eaſier is it to preach than to practiſe. 1. He relates the ſtruggle that he felt between grace and corruption, ver. 1—3. 2. He meditates upon the doctrine of man's frailty and mortality, ver. 4—6. 3. He prays for the pardon of his ſins, the removal of his afflictions, and the lengthning out of his life till he was ready for death, ver. 7—13.

¶ To the chief muſician, even to [a] Jeduthun,
A pſalm of David.

1. I Said I will take heed to my ways, that I ſin not with my tongue: [b] I will keep † my mouth with a bridle, while the wicked is before me. 2. [c] I was dumb with ſilence, I held my peace, even from good, and my ſorrow was ‡ ſtirred. 3. My heart was hot within me, while I was muſing the fire burned: [d] then ſpake I with my tongue. 4. LORD, [e] make me to know mine end, and the meaſure of my days, what it is: that I may know ‖ how frail I am. 5. Behold, thou haſt made my days as an hand-breadth, and [f] mine age is as nothing before thee: [g] verily every man § at his beſt ſtate is altogether vanity. Selah. 6. Surely every man walketh † in a vain ſhew: ſurely they are diſquieted in vain: he [h] heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who ſhall gather them.

[a] 1 Chron. xvi. 41. Pſal. lxii. 77. Title.
[b] Jam. i. 26.
† Heb. A bridle, or muzzle for my mouth.
[c] Pſ. xxxviii. 13.
‡ Heb. Troubled.
[d] Job iii. 1. Jer. xx. 14.
[e] Pſal. xc. 12. & cxix. 84.
‖ Or what time I have here.
[f] Pſal. xc. 4.
[g] Ver. 11. Pſal. lxii 9. & cxliv. 9.
§ Heb. Settled.
† Heb. An image.
[h] Eccleſ. ii. 18, 19. Luke xii. 20.

v. 1—6. Jeduthun ſeems to be the chief muſician who led the band, to whom this is directed, 1 Chron. xvi. 41. and it contains much matter for a mournful ſong, ſuited to ſooth the ſorrows which mortality is heir to, and reconcile our ſouls to the holy will of God.

1. David reflects upon the ſolemn purpoſes he had formed, to watch over his words and ways, which was ſo needful when many eyes were upon him, waiting for his halting. He ſaid within his heart, I will take heed to my ways, to walk circumſpectly after the word and will of God. I will keep my mouth with a bridle from every murmuring expreſſion under my trials, while the wicked is before me, who would take pleaſure to ſee him provoked to ſpeak unadviſedly with his lips. Note, (1.) We need much watchfulneſs and circumſpection, in order to walk aright; a careleſs heart will make crooked ways. (2.) Nothing is more difficult to reſtrain than the tongue; he is a perfect man that can curb it.

2. For a while he kept his purpoſe, v. 2. ſilent as a dumb man, under every provocation; and leaſt he ſhould ſpeak wrong, he even held his peace from good words, which, though ſpoken with the kindeſt purpoſe, ſerve only to ſtir up the greater wrath of the wicked.

3. Unable long to refrain, at firſt his grief, pent up, but ſwelled the more; his heart grew warm, either with zeal for God, or rather with impatience under his ſufferings, and muſing upon the wickedneſs of his enemies, his own afflictions, the fire of anger kindled, and he ſpake with his tongue; either wiſhing impatiently to die out of his troubles, or rather that God would make him look to his end, as a ſupport to him under them. Note, When the mind is ever ruminating upon its ſorrows, and reflecting upon the authors of them, the galling ſore is aggravated, and fuel provided for the fire of diſcontent.

[1.] He begs to know his end. If conſidered as the language of haſtineſs, it means that it might be ſoon, that his troubles and life might end together; or it is a prayer for ſupport under them, in the view of his quickly approaching death, and the bleſſed reſt which would then enſue. Note, (1.) The conſideration of our latter end ſhould be the frequent ſubject of our meditations, that the certainty and nearneſs of it being more deeply felt, we might be more ſolicitous to prepare for it. (2.) When ſickneſs, decay, or age are teaching us our frailty, we are peculiarly called upon to ſeek a more enduring portion in the eternal world.

[2.] He replies to his own enquiry: Behold, thou haſt made my days as an hand-breadth, ſo ſcanty is the meaſure of man's ſhort life; mine age is as nothing before thee; compared with God's eternity, ſhorter than a moment: verily every man at his beſt eſtate, when moſt proſperous, covered with honour, health, and wealth, is altogether vanity; every thing he poſſeſſes is inſignificant. Surely every man, of whatever rank or degree, walketh in a vain ſhew, when in the eyes of worms like himſelf, in pageant ſplendor he appears diſtinguiſhed, vain is the gaudy pride, himſelf a ſtalking ſhadow, yea, the ſhadow of a ſhade: ſurely they are diſquieted in vain, their buſy anxious cares diſturb them, often groundleſs, ever uſeleſs; he heapeth up riches, vain comforters in a dying hour; riches, which he that increaſeth, increaſeth ſorrow and care, and muſt leave behind him, he knows not whether to a wiſe man or a fool: ſurely all is vanity. Note, The more we ſee vanity ſtamped upon the creature, the more ſollicitous ſhould we be to ſecure the ſubſtantial and eternal good.

7. And now, LORD, what wait I for? my hope is in thee. 8. Deliver me from all my tranſgreſſions, make me not the reproach of the fooliſh. 9. [i] I was dumb, I opened not my mouth; becauſe thou didſt it.
10. [k] Remove thy ſtroke away from me: I am conſumed by the blow of thine hand. 11. When thou with rebukes doſt correct man for iniquity, thou makeſt † his beauty to conſume away [l] like a moth: [m] ſurely every man is vanity. Selah. 12. Hear my prayer, O LORD, and give ear unto my cry, hold not thy peace at my tears: for I [n] am a ſtranger with thee, and a ſojourner, [o] as all my fathers were. 13. [p] O ſpare me, that I may recover ſtrength, before I go hence, and be no more.

[i] Pſal. xxxviii. 13. Ver. 2.
[k] Job ix. 34.
† Heb. That which is deſireable in him to melt away.
[l] Job xiii. 28. Hoſ. v. 12.
[m] Ver. 5.
[n] Lev. xxv. 23. 1 Chron. xxix. 15. Heb. xi. 13. 1 Pet. i. 17. & ii. 11.
[o] Gen. xlvii. 9.
[p] Job x. 20, 21. & xiv. 6.

v. 7—13. The views of man's vanity bids him look for a more enduring portion in God. And therefore,

1. He profeſſes that on him all his hope is ſtaid, and that as he could expect nothing beneath the ſun, as his happineſs, neither would he be diſquieted with the light and momentary troubles he might be expoſed to. Note, (1.) The leſs we expect on earth, the more will our eyes be turned to heaven. (2.) Whatever elſe is a vain hope, they who hope in God ſhall never be aſhamed.

2. He prays for pardon and deliverance. His ſins were his great concern, he longs above all things to be delivered from their condemning guilt, that he may enjoy peace of conſcience; and from their prevailing power, that would give occaſion to the wicked and fooliſh to reproach him: and then he hopes his ſufferings would be removed alſo, that lay heavy upon him. The ſtroke of God's hand conſumed him, his ſtrength failed him, his health and beauty decayed, as a garment moth-eaten: he wept and prayed therefore, begging God's kind regard to his prayers and tears, and pleading his old loving-kindneſſes that had been ſhewn to his fathers, when ſtrangers and ſojourners. Like them therefore in temper, he begs to ſhare their mercies. Note, (1.) Our ceaſeleſs prayer muſt be for pardoning mercy. The ſting of affliction is removed when ſin is forgiven. (2.) One ſtroke of diſeaſe makes ſtrange alterations; the bloom of beauty fades, the ſparkling eye is dim, the ruddy lip is livid, and languor, paleneſs, and decay, mars all the lovely form. How poor a thing then to be proud of, how precarious a vanity! (3.) The prayer of faith, and the tears of penitence, will never be diſregarded of God. (4.) When we conſider ourſelves as really ſtrangers upon earth, who neither have nor ſeek our reſt below, each trial we meet will quicken our pace, and whet our longings after our houſe and home, a manſion in the ſkies.

3. With holy reſignation, v. 9. he ſurrenders up himſelf to God; having begun to pray, his ruffled ſpirits are compoſed, and his ſoul returns to its reſt again. Since God's hand is in every affliction, and every chaſtiſement moſt righteous, yea leſs than our iniquity deſerves, it ill becomes us to find fault, but rather continually to acknowledge that he doth all things well.

4. He concludes with a deſire of ſome ſhort reſpite, that he might recover his bodily and ſpiritual ſtrength a little, if ſo God pleaſed, to ſerve his cauſe and intereſts upon earth, and grow more meet for his inheritance above, before he left this mortal ſcene, and returned to his eternal reſt.

PSALM XL.

This pſalm is a prophecy of Chriſt, his mediatorial undertaking, the ſufferings he underwent, his prayers for ſupport, and the deliverance he obtained. Probably David penned it on ſome ſpecial deliverance of his own, and whilſt he was opening his mouth in praiſe, the the ſpirit of prophecy led him on to ſpeak of that Son and Lord of his, to whom much of what he ſays is only applicable. 1. He begins with recording God's favour, and deſcribes the character of the truly bleſſed man, ver. 1—5. 2. He ſpeaks of the Redeemer's glorious undertaking, ver. 6—10. 3. He prays for himſelf and all the faithful, ver. 11—17.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. †I [a] WAITED patiently for the LORD, and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. 2. He brought me up alſo out of ‡ an horrible pit, [b] out of the miry clay, and ſet my feet upon a rock, and eſtabliſhed my goings. 3. And [c] he hath put a new ſong in my mouth, even praiſe unto our God: [d] many ſhall ſee it and fear, and ſhall truſt in the LORD. 4. [e] Bleſſed is that man that maketh the LORD his truſt: and reſpecteth not the proud, nor ſuch as turn aſide to lies. 5. [f] Many, O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works which thou haſt done, and [g] thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and ſpeak of them, [h] they are more than can be numbered.

† Heb. In waiting I waited.
a Pſal. xxvii. 14. & xxxvii. 7.
‡ Heb. A pit of noiſe.
b Zech. ix. 11.
c Pſ. xxxiii. 3.
d Ibid. lii. 6.
e Jer. xvii. 7.
f Job v. 9. & ix. 10. Pſal. xcii. 5.
g Pſ. cxxxix. 17.
h 1 Cor. ii. 9. Eph. iii. 18, 19.

v. 1—5. None ever yet truſted in God, and were confounded. The Pſalmiſt acknowledges, by bleſſed experience, that in his deepeſt diſtreſs God had not failed him. I waited patiently on the Lord; though his burden was heavy, and help long delayed, he fainted not, but cried unto God, and God heard and anſwered him. He brought me up alſo out of the horrible pit of deſpondence, and out of the miry clay, in which he was faſt ſtuck that he could not get out, and ſet my feet upon a rock, where nothing could ſhake him, and eſtabliſhed my goings, that no power of evil might be able to turn him aſide. Then was his mouth filled with joy; he hath put a new ſong of praiſe into my mouth; and from his own caſe he doubted not but others would be encouraged to exerciſe the ſame faith; many ſhall ſee it and fear, and ſhall truſt in the Lord, and whoever doth ſo, renouncing every other confidence, will be found truly bleſſed and happy, v. 4. Thus Jeſus waited on God, when agonizing in the garden, and bleeding on the tree: horrible indeed was the pit in which he lay, when loaded with the guilt of all our iniquities, the pains of hell gat hold upon him, but he cried, and God heard him. From the grave he brought him up, raiſed him to the throne of glory, firm as a rock, and eſtabliſhed as the days of eternity. With everlaſting joy upon his head, there he reigns; and all his people, renouncing every other hope of righteouſneſs, and every lying vanity which would draw off the ſingleneſs of their eye from him, look to him, truſt in him, fear him, and find themſelves bleſſed in ſo doing. This relieves their deſpondence, reſcues them from the horrible pit of hell, raiſes their hearts from melancholy fears to confidence, and changes their voice from mourning to praiſe; rejoicing in Chriſt Jeſus, in his ſufferings, righteouſneſs and glory, and deriving from thence joy unſpeakable and full of glory.

6. [i] Sacrifice and offering thou didſt not deſire, mine ears haſt thou † opened: burnt-offering and ſin-offering haſt thou not required. 7. Then ſaid I, Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of me: 8. [k] I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart. 9. [l] I have preached [m] righteouſneſs in the great congregation: lo, I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, thou knoweſt. 10. I have not hid thy righteouſneſs within my heart, I have declared thy faithfulneſs and thy ſalvation: I have not concealed thy loving-kindneſs, and thy truth, from the great congregation.

i Pſal. li. 16. Heb. x. 5.
† Heb. Digged.
k John iv. 34.
l Heb. ii. 3.
m Rom. iii. 21, 22.

v. 6—10. Theſe are the words of the Divine Redeemer, the ſong of praiſe put into his mouth, which, as the repreſentative of his redeemed people who are included in him, he offers for the glorious work of redemption. Many and wonderful are the works of God, wonders of creation and providence, admirably ordered and diſpoſed with infinite wiſdom, all deſigned for the good of men, and ſo innumerable, that we are loſt in the vaſt abyſs, and know not where to begin or where to end the ſong of praiſe: but one more eminent, more tranſcendantly glorious than all the reſt, ſtands forth, and claims peculiar admiration. Great is the work of worlds, ſpoke into being at a word; great the upholding power, that ſtill preſerves and regulates with wondrous harmony the vaſt creation; but greater far the vaſt deſign and wondrous execution of man's redemption, by the incarnation, ſuffering, and death of God's eternal Son; and this is here ſet forth and quoted at large by the Apoſtle, Heb. x. 5.

1. The inſufficiency of all ceremonial ſacrifices is here intimated, and their utterly ceaſing to be offered when the oblation of the body of Jeſus once for all ſhould aboliſh theſe ſhadows, v. 1. They were indeed of Divine inſtitution, but all their efficacy lay in directing the offerer's faith to the vicarious ſufferings of God's Son; for their own ſakes, they were never acceptable to God, who could take no delight in the blood of bulls, nor could they ever pacify the ſinner's conſcience, which required a better ſacrifice than theſe to take away ſin.

2. The voluntary oblation of Chriſt, in conſequence of the everlaſting covenant, and the Divine deſignation, is mentioned, v. 7. In the records of eternity it was enrolled, in the revealed word declared, and in the fulneſs of time manifeſted. Mine ears haſt thou opened, perhaps alluding to Exod. xxi. 6. intimating his taking the form of a ſervant, or as the Apoſtle quotes it, a body haſt thou prepared me, and this his choice: it was not what he was obliged to, but by voluntary engagement, and the conſtrainings of mighty love towards miſerable man. But having once engaged, he ratified the agreement, profeſſes his readineſs to abide by it, yea, takes delight in executing it; and from his heart is ready to fulfil all the will of God, reſpecting his mediatorial work, whether by obedience or ſufferings, in behalf of his ranſomed people. Note, If Chriſt ſo readily engaged for us, what gratitude and willing ſubjection do we owe him in return?

3. He became himſelf the great preacher of the righteouſneſs he wrought out, and the ſalvation he accompliſhed; in both which alſo God's faithfulneſs to his promiſes appeared, and his tranſcendant loving-kindneſs to the children of men. Theſe Jeſus declared, nor kept back from us any thing of the whole counſel of God. Bleſſed be his name, that his divine ſermons have reached unto us: oh! that we may experience divine teaching alſo, and read ſo as to underſtand.

11. Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD: [n] let thy loving-kindneſs and thy truth continually preſerve me. 12. For innumerable evils have compaſſed me about, [o] mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, ſo that I am not able to look up: they are more than the hairs of mine head, therefore [p] my heart faileth me. 13. [q] Be pleaſed, O LORD, to deliver me: O LORD, make haſte to help me. 14. [r] Let them be aſhamed and confounded together, that ſeek after my ſoul to deſtroy it: let them be driven backward, and put to ſhame that wiſh me evil. 15. Let them be deſolate for a reward of their ſhame, [s] that ſay unto me, Aha, aha. 16. Let all thoſe that ſeek thee, rejoice and be glad in thee: let ſuch as love thy ſalvation, [t] ſay continually, The LORD be magnified. 17. But I am poor and needy, yet the LORD [u] thinketh upon me: thou art my help and my deliverer, make no tarrying, O my God.

n Pſal. lvii. 3. & lxi. 7.
o Ibid. xxxviii. 4.
p Ibid. lxxiii. 26.
q Ibid. lxx. 1, &c.
r Ibid. xxxv. 4, 26. & lxxi. 13.
s Pſ. xxxv. 21, 25.
t Ibid. xxxv. 27.
u Gen. viii. 1.

v. 11—17. Though this may refer to the Pſalmiſt's caſe, as reſuming his prayer in the view of the glorious redemption accompliſhed for him, yet it may be alſo well applied to the Redeemer himſelf.

1. In executing his work, he muſt bear our ſins, and carry our ſorrows; and under theſe he complains and cries for help. Though in himſelf without ſin, holy and harmleſs, yet when he appeared in our nature he became ſin for us, not only an offering for ſin, but having all the iniquity of his redeemed people actually imputed to him; ſo that in this view, never was a guilty ſoul ſo heavy laden: more than human ſtrength was needful to ſupport the dreadful load; the humanity fainted, but by the eternal Spirit he was upheld. He prays, and pleads the truth and grace engaged to ſupport him through his ſufferings; and as his diſtreſs is urgent, he cries for preſent and immediate help, and was heard becauſe he feared. Note, (1.) Since Jeſus ſunk not under the load of the ſins of the world, ſhall our ſins, but one of that many, lead us to deſpair? God forbid. (2.) They who plead the Divine faithfulneſs, may depend upon ſeeing the fulfilment of the promiſes. (3.) There is a throne of grace open, and through Jeſus we may come boldly; no tender mercy will be withheld, no kindneſs refuſed, no help delayed when in his name we pray.

2. He prays for the deſtruction of all his enemies, which he foreſees ready to be accompliſhed. The powers of hell that ſought to deſtroy him, muſt fall as lightning before him; the Jews that in his crucifixion cried inſultingly, Aha, ſo would we have it, are long ſince deſolate to their ſhame, diſperſed into all the nations, and every where a proverb of reproach; and all his foes, whether fallen angels, or impenitent ſinners, muſt at the laſt day feel the effects of his indignation, driven backward into hell, and covered with everlaſting confuſion. Note, All the afflictions of a ſaint of God, however Satan and his enemies may inſult over him, ſhall terminate to his comfort and their confuſion.

3. He prays for his own redeemed ones, thoſe that love thy ſalvation, love him, the author of it, and delight in the gracious way in which it is accompliſhed for them, and beſtowed upon them; and ſeek thee, make God's will their rule, God's glory their end, and the enjoyment of God their ſovereign happineſs. Let them rejoice, on earth beginning the ſong of praiſe, and to eternity crying continually, the Lord be magnified.

4. He concludes with a believing commiſſion of himſelf to God. Though he was rich for our ſakes, he became poor and needy, yet the Lord regarded him in his low eſtate; and therefore truſting on his ſaving help and deliverance, he cries to him to make no delay. Note, (1.) Our ſpiritual poverty is abject, but we have an inexhauſtible treaſury, which the key of prayer can unlock. (2.) In every trial let us not think the time long; the promiſe is ſure, the moment haſting by, time expiring, eternity approaching, and there at leaſt our ſalvation ſhall be accompliſhed.

PSALM XLI.

God's kindneſs and truth have often been the ſupport and comfort of the ſaints, when they have had moſt experience of men's unkindneſs and treachery: ſo David found them. Here, 1. He comforts himſelf in God under his ſickneſs, ver. 1, 2, 3. and lifts up his heart in prayer to him, ver. 4. 2. He repreſents the malice and inſolence of his enemies, ver. 5—9. 3. He leaves his caſe with God, not doubting but that he would own and favour him, ver. 10, 11. and concludes with a doxology, ver. 13. But if we look not farther than David, even to his glorious Son, we ſhall be beſide the purport of this pſalm.

¶ To the chief muſician,

A pſalm of David.

1. [a] BLESSED is he that conſidereth the † poor; the LORD will deliver him ‡ in time of trouble. 2. The LORD will preſerve him, and keep him alive, and he ſhall be bleſſed upon the earth; and [b] thou wilt not deliver him into the will of his enemies. 3. The LORD will ſtrengthen him upon the bed of languiſhing: thou wilt ‖ make all his bed in his ſickneſs. 4. I ſaid, LORD, be merciful unto me; [c] heal my ſoul, for I have ſinned againſt thee.

[a] Prov. xiv. 21. & xix. 17. Heb. xiii. 16.
† Or weak or ſick.
‡ Heb. In the day of evil.
[b] Pſal. xxvii. 12.
‖ Heb. Turn.
[c] Pſal. vi. 2.

v. 1—4. The labour of love is never labour loſt; ſo the Pſalmiſt aſſures us.

1. He pronounces the man bleſſed that conſidereth the poor; either in general the poor in this world, compaſſionate their wants, ſympathize with them in their ſorrows, and ſeek by counſel, influence, and liberal diſtribution, to relieve the diſtreſſes of the neceſſitous; or it may refer to that poor man whom ſo few remember, Eccleſ. ix. 15. the lowly Jeſus expoſed for our ſakes to want, and having no where to lay his head: to conſider his humiliation for us, is the way to true bleſſedneſs.

2. He ſhews wherein this bleſſedneſs conſiſts. In trouble, God would deliver him, preſerve him from his enemies, repay him with intereſt even upon earth, ſupport him on the bed of languiſhing, and tenderly watch over him in his ſickneſs. Note, (1.) Kindneſs to God's poor and afflicted ones, is highly our intereſt as well as duty; none ever loſt by lending thus to the Lord. (2.) God's bleſſing is the comfort of every eſtate; it can make the bed of languiſhing chearful, give reſt in trouble, and make even grief to ſmile.

3. Having ſome good hope through grace, that he could claim the character, he is emboldened in prayer to ſeek the promiſes. Yet, as a miſerable ſinner in himſelf utterly undeſerving, he pleads for mercy with God, and begs his ſickneſs may be healed, that worſt and moſt dangerous diſeaſe, corruption in his ſoul. Note, They who ſee deeply into their fallen nature, will, in their beſt eſtate, cry for mercy to their ſins, and healing of their corruptions.

5. Mine enemies ſpeak evil of me: When ſhall he die, and his name periſh? 6. And if he come to ſee me, [d] he ſpeaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itſelf, when he goeth abroad, he telleth it. 7. All that hate me, whiſper together againſt me: againſt me do they deviſe my hurt. 8. † An evil diſeaſe, ſay they, cleaveth faſt unto him: and now that he lieth, he ſhall riſe up no more. 9. [e] Yea, ‡ mine own familiar friend in whom I truſted, [f] which did eat of my bread, hath ‖ lift up his heel againſt me. 10. But thou, O LORD, be merciful unto me, and raiſe me up, that I may requite them. 11. [g] By this I know that thou favoureſt me, becauſe mine enemy doth not triumph over me. 12. And as for me, thou upholdeſt me in mine integrity, and ſetteſt me before thy face for ever. 13. [h] Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael, from everlaſting, and to everlaſting. Amen, and Amen.

[d] Pſal. xii. 2.
† Heb. A word or thing of Belial.
[e] Job xix. 19. Pſal. lv. 13, 20. Jer. xx. 10.
‡ Heb. The man of my peace.
[f] Obad. vii. John xiii. 18.
‖ Heb. Magnified.
[g] Pſal. lxxxvi. 17.
[h] Ibid. lxxii. 18, 19. & lxxxix. 52. & cvi. 41.

v. 5—13. They who live in a wicked world, may expect to meet with much deceit, as David did, to the great diſcomfort of his ſoul.

1. They ſpoke againſt him with inveterate rancour, and wiſhed every evil might attend him; death ſeize his body, and oblivion blot out his name for ever. And thus did Chriſt's enemies revile him with every opprobrious character, wiſh and contrive his death, and hope that then the memory of his miracles, and the doctrines of his goſpel, would periſh with him. But lo! their malice make his memorial more glorious and abiding. Let not Chriſt's ſervants count it ſtrange, then, if the worſt wiſhes and words attend them; their Lord hath ſuffered it before them.

2. If they came on pretence of paying him a friendly viſit, v. 2. their profeſſions were hypocriſy, their deſigns malignant, to obſerve his words and behaviour, that they might report it to his diſadvantage. The ſcribes and phariſees for this purpoſe attended the Saviour, to entangle him in his talk; and whilſt they pretended to admire him in his preaching and piety, ſought to impeach him as a teacher of ſedition, Mat. xxii. 17. If we meet with the ſame deceitful men, and hear the moſt invidious remarks or miſrepreſentations made of us, it was ſo from the beginning.

3. They flattered themſelves they ſhould ſooner or later prevail. In ſecret they whiſpered, plotted their wicked devices, and when an evil diſeaſe, ſome dangerous ſickneſs, ſeized him, or as the words literally may be rendered, a word of Belial, ſome vile aſperſion they had forged and propagated, cleaved to him, then they hoped he would never again recover his health or his character. Such whiſperers contrived the Saviour's death, with perjured evidence the ſons of Belial ſwore againſt him, and having procured his condemnation and death, and ſealed his ſepulchre, they promiſed themſelves he ſhould never riſe up again. How vain the hopes, as well as vile the efforts, of wicked men!

4. His boſom friend betrayed him, v. 9. perhaps Ahitophel, and ſought to ſpurn him from his throne, in return for the moſt obliging kindneſs. Ingratitude is a ſin as common as odious. We are aſſured, John xiii. 18. that David looked farther than his own caſe. Judas the traitor was this familiar friend, and from the table where Jeſus fed him, went to the prieſts to betray him. Put not your truſt in any child of man, friends will be faithleſs; the friend of ſinners alone will never deceive nor diſappoint thoſe who truſt him.

5. He directs his prayer to God, v. 10. for mercy and help, that he may requite them, either do them good for their evil, or rather, as their King, puniſh them for their wickedneſs: and ſuch ſupport he would interpret, and rejoice in, as a ſure ſign of God's favour and regard.—In anſwer to the Redeemer's prayer, he was raiſed from the duſt of death, and with ſwift deſtruction recompenſed his enemies into their own boſom. Neither Satan nor all the powers of darkneſs, nor the high-prieſt and all his wicked train, were permitted to triumph, when in the reſurrection day all their devices were confounded; and He, of whom they ſaid, Perſecute him, for there is none to deliver him, aroſe then moſt eminently declared to be the Son of God with power. Note, The very trials we are expoſed to, ſerve to make the love of God to our ſouls more evident and precious.

6. He expreſſes his confidence of being kept in faithfulneſs to God's everlaſting kingdom; and he acknowledges the work muſt be entirely of God's grace, both to uphold and reward him, v. 12. The ſon of David, in unſpotted integrity, ſtood faſt; and after an obedience unto death, received the reward in glory, where now he ſits at God's right hand, enthroned for evermore. May we come in his good time to ſit down by him! In order thereto, we muſt be ſenſible, 1. That the work is entirely of grace, either that we are called or kept. 2. That, left to ourſelves, we muſt inevitably fall. 3. That thoſe whom God upholds, none can prevail againſt; but in time and eternity they are ſafe.

7. He concludes with a thankſgiving for ſuch a glorious hope; and well he deſerves the everlaſting praiſe who brings the ſoul to everlaſting bleſſedneſs. The whole Iſrael of God, in the view of the glorious and finiſhed work of redemption in Chriſt Jeſus, cannot but echo back the ſound, with hearts warm with gratitude, and burſting with gladneſs. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, from everlaſting to everlaſting. Amen, Amen!

PSALM XLII.

This pſalm appears to have been penned when David, a fugitive from Saul or Abſalom, was forced from that ſanctuary, in the ſervice of which was his delight. 1. He earneſtly longs to return, ver. 1, 2. 2. Complains of his ſufferings during his abſence, ver. 3, 4. 3. Seeks by faith to ſtill his troubled ſoul, ver. 5. 4. He feels and laments his preſent deſolate eſtate, ver. 6, 7, 9, 10. 5. He eſtabliſhes his heart towards God, and reſts in hope, ver. 8, 11.

About 1023.
† i. e. Inſtruction.
a 1 Chron. vi. 33.
b Pſal. lxiii. 1. & lxxxiv. 2.
c 1 Theſ. i. 9.
d Pſal. lxxx. 5. & cii. 9.
e Ver. 10. Pſal. lxxix. 10. & cxv. 2.
f Job xxx. 16.
g Iſa. xxx. 29.
h Pſal. xliii. 5.
† Heb. bowed down.
‡ Or, his preſence is ſalvation.

¶ To the chief muſician. † Maſchil, for [a] the ſons of Korah.

1. AS the hart panteth after the water-brooks, ſo panteth my ſoul after thee, O God. 2. [b] My ſoul thirſteth for God, for [c] the living God: when ſhall I come and appear before God? 3. [d] My tears have been my meat day and night, while [e] they continually ſay unto me, Where is thy God? 4. When I remember theſe things, [f] I pour out my ſoul in me; for I had gone with the multitude, [g] I went with them to the houſe of God; with the voice of joy and praiſe, with the multitude that kept holy-day. 5. [h] Why art thou † caſt down, O my ſoul, and why art thou diſquieted in me? hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him ‡ for the help of his countenance.

v. 1—5. This pſalm is entitled Maſchil, inſtruction, as containing ſweet inſtructions for mourning ſouls. It is directed to the ſons of Korah; for though their father periſhed in his ſins, his children, who fled from his tent and treaſon, ſhared neither his puniſhment, nor loſt their office as miniſters of the ſanctuary. We have here,

1. The eager longings of his ſoul after communion with God in the courts of his ſanctuary. As the hart flying before the blood-thirſty hounds, parched with heat, and panting for breath, with ſuch intenſe deſires is he a-thirſt for God, for a ſenſe of his love and favour, even for the living God, the only fountain of true felicity; and looks with languiſhing eyes towards that heavenly hill where God manifeſted peculiarly his glorious preſence. Note, (1.) Nothing but God will ſatisfy the believer's ſoul; a ſenſe of his love is his ſupreme happineſs, and if that be withdrawn, every enjoyment is taſteleſs. (2.) Whilſt fooliſh men, with eager impatience, ſeek from the broken ciſterns of earthly comforts to ſlack their raging thirſt: how few feel theſe ardent deſires after the living fountain! (3.) Conſtrained abſence from the means of grace is a ſore burden to the faithful, and quickens his longings after them. (4.) If God's ſanctuary was ſo deſirable, how much more his beatific preſence in his eternal temple?

2. He laments the ſorrows that oppreſſed him, the inſults he ſuſtained from his taunting enemies, v. 5. and his dejection under the views of the bleſſings he had loſt and the miſeries he endured, v. 6. The heathen, among whom he dwelt, upbraided him as having no viſible God, whilſt their idols ſtood in their temples; or his Jewiſh enemies reproached him, as if he was now abandoned of God, becauſe he appeared not inſtantly for his relief. Theſe things melted his heart with ſorrow, and made his eyes as fountains of tears, that, flowing ceaſeleſs, mingled with his cup, or ſo affected him, that he forgot to eat his bread; whilſt the remembrance of paſt happy days roſe up to aggravate his diſtreſs in that ſtrange land, where no ſongs of Zion were heard, no holy feſtivals obſerved to Jehovah, nor multitude of worſhippers appeared, crouding his gates with ſacrifices of praiſe. Note, (1.) Affliction is no proof of God's want of affection to us. (2.) When outward diſtreſs lies heavy, inward temptations are often violent. (3.) The joys we have taſted in God, make the want of his preſence, and the withdrawing his comfort, more grievous.

3. Under all he encourages his heart in God. Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul, ſo broken, ſo diſpirited? why, though ſin hath prevailed, though Satan accuſes, though darkneſs overſhadows thee, is he not the ſame God of grace, can his promiſes fail, or doth the cloud blot out the ſun? why art thou then diſquieted within me, as if all were loſt, and help deſpaired of? hope thou in God, caſt this firm anchor there, and then thou ſhalt not only ride out the ſtorm in ſafety, but, when theſe thick clouds diſperſe before his bright beams, the light of his countenance ſhall return, and the language of my ranſomed ſoul be praiſe. Note, (1.) In our diſtreſſes it is good to reaſon with our ſouls, why am I thus? We often cauſe our own dejection, by poring on our corruptions or afflictions, and forgetting the promiſes, grace, and faithfulneſs of our Redeemer. (2.) The longeſt night ends in day: if we have a little patience under our troubles, we ſhall ſurely at laſt find cauſe for praiſe. (3.) In heaven at leaſt all our ſorrows ſhall end, and the never-clouded light of God's countenance fill our ſouls with everlaſting conſolations.

† Or, the little hill.
i Jer. iv. 20. Ezek. vii. 26.
k Pſal. lxxxviii. 7. Jonah. ii. 3.
l Deut. xxviii. 8. Pſ. cxxxiii. 3.
m Job xxxv. 10. Pſ. cxlix. 5. Iſa. xxx. 29.
n Pſ. xxxviii. 6. & xliii. 2.
‡ Or, killing.
o Ver. 3. Joel ii. 17. Mic. vii. 10.

6. O my God, my ſoul is caſt down within me: therefore will I remember thee from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, from † the hill of Mizar. 7. [i] Deep calleth unto deep at the noiſe of thy water-ſpouts: [k] all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me. 8. Yet the LORD will [l] command his loving-kindneſs in the day-time, and [m] in the night his ſong ſhall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life. 9. I will ſay unto God my rock, Why haſt thou forgotten me? [n] why go I mourning, becauſe of the oppreſſion of the enemy? 10. As with a ‡ ſword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me: [o] while they ſay daily unto me, Where is thy God? 11. Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul? and why art thou diſquieted within me? hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

v. 6—11. God is not diſpleaſed with us that we feel, nay that we complain, but he will not have us diſtruſt him. The Pſalmiſt is our gracious pattern.

1. He complains to God; and where can we get relief ſo ſoon as by pouring out our ſorrows into his compaſſionate boſom? His heart was dejected; his troubles, like ſtormy billows, ſucceſſive, and each threatning to ſwallow him up, v. 7. whilſt God ſeemed as if he had forgotten him, v. 9. and given him up to his oppreſſing foe; and their taunting reproaches, like a ſharp ſword, wounded his inmoſt ſoul, v. 10. Note, (1.) The louder the ſtorm blows, the more earneſt ſhould our applications be to God. (2.) Though trouble upon trouble follow us, far be it from us to think God hath forgotten us. (3.) The faith of God's elect doth not fail, but it is often feeble and ſore ſhaken.

2. He encourages his heart in God by the remembrance of paſt experience, when God in former afflictions had appeared for him, v. 6. or it may ſignify, wherever he was he continued in ceaſeleſs prayer; God was ſtill his rock, there his ſoul ſtuck faſt, and he could not but confidently expect deliverance. The Lord will command his loving-kindneſs, and all the ſtorms of affliction ſhall be huſhed into a calm, and this publickly and openly in the day-time, that his enemies may ſee and own the hand of God viſible in his protection; and in the night, during the continuance of his afflicted ſtate, though ſorrowful, he would rejoice in him, his ſong ſhall be with me; the ſong, of which his grace, and love, and faithfulneſs is the burden; and my prayer unto the God of my life; my life bound up as with his own, and which, with humble faith, I will commit to his ſafe keeping. With theſe views he can chide down his fears, and bid his troubled heart return to its reſt again; what can move him whoſe hope is in God? what make him miſerable, on whom the light of God's countenance ſhines? yea, what be wanting to his conſummate felicity, who can ſay aſſuredly, My God? Note, (1.) When we remember what God has done for us, it ſhould ſuppreſs our unbelieving fears. (2.) Wherever we are, or in whatever ſtate, it becomes us never to reſtrain prayer before God. (3.) If God command his loving kindneſs, it is not in the power of earth or hell to make us miſerable. (4.) In our worſt eſtate we have much to be thankful for; if we conſider our mercies, we owe continually the tribute of praiſe. (5.) If God be the God of our life, then death is diſarmed. (6.) The feeble minded need repeated encouragement, ſo ſlow of heart are they to believe. (7.) When we have a ſure intereſt in God, as our covenant God, we have nothing to fear from the malice of earth or hell.

PSALM XLIII.

This pſalm, it is likely, was penned upon the ſame occaſion with the former. In it, 1. He appeals to God concerning the injuries that were done him by his enemies, ver. 1, 2. 2. He prays to be reſtored to the free enjoyment of public ordinances again, and promiſes to make a good improvement of them, ver. 3, 4. 3. He endeavours to ſtill the tumult of his own ſpirit, with a lively hope and confidence in God, ver. 5.

About 1023.
† Or, unmerciful.
‡ Heb. the man of deceit and iniquity.
a Iſa. xxvi. 4.
b Pſal. xlii. 9.
c Ibid. xl. 11. & lvii. 3.
d Iſa. xxxviii. 22.
e Pſal. xlii. 5, 11.

1. JUDGE me, O God, and plead my cauſe againſt an † ungodly nation; O deliver me from ‡ the deceitful and unjuſt man. 2. For thou art the God of [a] my ſtrength: [b] why doſt thou caſt me off? why go I mourning, becauſe of the oppreſſion of the enemy? 3. O [c] ſend out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me, let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles. 4. Then [d] will I go unto the altar of God, unto God my exceeding joy: yea, upon the harp will I praiſe thee, O God, my God. 5. [e] Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul? and why art thou diſquieted within me? hope in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

v. 1—5. We have here,

1. David's appeal and prayer to God. Though in God's ſight he would cry, enter not into judgment; yet, with reſpect to his enemies, he deſired nothing more than to be tried at God's bar; where his innocence would certainly engage him for his advocate, againſt the ungodly nation of Iſrael, and the deceitful and unjuſt Saul; or his rebellious ſubjects, and his unnatural ſon. Note, Whether we deſire it or no, there is a tribunal at which we muſt appear; and a judge at hand from whoſe ſentence there is no appeal: happy the ſoul that hath boldneſs in that day.

2. Under the moſt diſcouraging circumſtances, he profeſſes his fixed dependance on divine ſupport: his fooliſh reaſon could hardly be reconciled to his oppreſſed ſituation, and his unbelieving fears were ready to prevail, v. 2. but he cleaves to God, as the God of his ſtrength; and if ſo, omnipotence was his guard. Note, (1.) Under deep convictions there are often melancholy apprehenſions in the children of God, as if they were caſtaways: but till unchangeableneſs become variable, and omnipotence weak, that cannot be. (2.) It is often difficult to reconcile providences with promiſes; but with a little patience the myſtery will be diſcloſed.

3. He prays for God's guidance and direction; his light of Divine teaching, and his truth in the revealed word, to lead him ſafe through all his difficulties and dark providences, and once more to bring him back to that happy hill and bleſt abode, where God's honour dwelled. Some interpret this of ſending the Meſſiah, the light of the world, and his goſpel, which is the truth emphatically, as theſe were the objects of longing deſire to all the ſaints of old, who wiſhed to ſee that bleſſed day: nor leſs do the faithful, in every age, cry for his appearing as the day-ſtar in their hearts, and to be led into deeper diſcoveries of his word of goſpel grace; that by theſe they may be brought to God's eternal ſanctuary, and have their feet ſet on the heavenly Zion.

4. He promiſes hereupon to compaſs God's altar; and his voice, like his harp in tune, ſhould utter grateful ſacrifice of praiſe to God; my God, he ſays, my covenant God, whom I have ever found gracious, good, and therefore true; and my exceeding joy; joy too big for utterance, and which time is too ſhort to tell. Note, (1.) We have an altar it becomes us ever to approach with joy, remembering the ſacrifice which Jeſus hath offered, and the ineſtimable bleſſings we receive thereby. (2.) When we can ſay, my God, we ſhall be able ever to add, my joy, my exceeding joy; ſince compared with him and his love, we ſhall rejoice in other things as though we rejoiced not.

5. He concludes as before, with chiding his anxious heart, and caſting his hope on that firm baſis, whence nothing can move him. Note, Hope in God will never ſhame us, either in time or eternity.

PSALM XLIV.

We are not told who the penman of this pſalm was, though probably it was David, who prophetically ſpeaks of the afflicted ſtate of the Jews under the Babyloniſh yoke, or the perſecution of Antiochus; or more probably it looks forwards to goſpel times, and the ſufferings of God's people in every age under the croſs; in which view the apoſtle quotes ver. 22. Rom. viii. 36. which may be conſidered as a key to the whole. Chriſt's church muſt ever expect the croſs, till he comes to beſtow the crown. The people of God are taught, 1. To own with thankfulneſs the great things God has done for their fathers, ver. 1—8. 2. To exhibit a memorial of their preſent calamitous ſtate, ver. 9—16. 3. To file a proteſtation of their integrity and adherence to God notwithſtanding, ver. 17—22. 4. To lodge a petition at the throne of grace for ſuccour and relief, ver. 22—26.

¶ To the chief muſician for the ſons of Korah, Maſchil.

1. WE have heard with our ears, O God, [a] our fathers have told us, what work thou didſt in their days, in the times of old. 2. How [b] thou didſt drive out the heathen with thy hand, and plantedſt them; how thou didſt afflict the people, and caſt them out. 3. For [c] they got not the land in poſſeſſion by their own ſword, neither did their own arm ſave them: but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance, [d] becauſe thou hadſt a favour unto them. 4. [e] Thou art my king, O God, [f] command deliverances for Jacob. 5. Through thee will we puſh down our enemies; through thy name will we tread them under that riſe up againſt us. 6. For [g] I will not truſt in my bow, neither ſhall my ſword ſave me. 7. But thou haſt ſaved us from our enemies, and haſt put them to ſhame that hated us. 8. [h] In God we boaſt all the day long: and praiſe thy name for ever. Selah.

[a] Pſ. lxxviii. 3. Iſa. xxxviii. 19.
[b] Ex. xv. 17. Pſal. lxxviii. 55. & lxxx. 8.
[c] Deut. viii. 17. Joſh. xxiv. 12. Hoſ. i. 7. Zech. iv. 6.
[d] Deut. iv. 37. & vii. 8.
[e] Pſ. lxxiv. 12.
[f] Ibid. xlii. 8.
[g] Ibid. xxxiii. 16.
[h] 1 Cor. i. 31.

v. 1—8. The church of God is the ſame in all ages, ſaved by the ſame blood, ſtrengthened by the ſame grace, oppoſed by the ſame enemies; and expecting the ſame deliverances. Here we behold her proſtrate under the feet of her enemies, but calling to mind former days, and hoping ſtill in God.

1. In their diſtreſs the people of God look back to their father's mercies; the wonders God had wrought of old, caſting out the Canaanites before them, and giving them their land for an inheritance; and this not by any proweſs or might of their own, but by ſuch repeated miracles as convinced them of the hand from whence all their victories came, and of the great good will of God therein manifeſted towards them, v. 1—3. Note, (1.) Memorials of paſt mercies deſerve to be faithfully recorded, and piouſly tranſmitted to our children, for their encouragement in every time of need. (2.) Not by human power, but Divine, was the glorious goſpel of Jeſus made at firſt triumphant over the powers of darkneſs and heatheniſm: and he who once made bare his arm to plant, will not fail to preſerve it; and every antichriſtian foe, however tyrannous and perſecuting, ſhall fall at laſt before it.

2. They profeſs their confidence in God for preſent ſalvation, and join their prayers that he would haſten it in his time. God is their king, therefore he will protect his faithful ſubjects: renouncing all human confidences, they reſt their caſe with him, to tread down their enemies, and cover them with ſhame, and know it is but for him to ſpeak and the work is done: Command deliverances for Jacob; deliverances of all kinds, ſpiritual, temporal, eternal, from men, devils, ſin, corruption, death. Note, (1.) Whilſt we pray for ourſelves as individuals, the church of Chriſt, and eſpecially the perſecuted members of it, ſhould ever be remembered by us. (2.) They who would prevail againſt their ſpiritual enemies, muſt firſt renounce themſelves, that God may be glorified. When I am weak, then am I ſtrong.

3. They boaſt themſelves in God, not in themſelves, unleſs they glory in their infirmities, that the power and grace of God may more abundantly appear: God is their glory and praiſe for ever. Note, The work of eternity will be everlaſting praiſe; when with unutterable tranſport our golden crowns ſhall be caſt at the Redeemer's feet, and all our great ſalvation aſcribed to his power, grace, and love.

9. But [i] thou haſt caſt off, and put us to ſhame; and goeſt not forth with our armies. 10. Thou makeſt us to turn back from the enemy: and they which hate us ſpoil for themſelves. 11. [k] Thou haſt given us † like ſheep appointed for meat: and haſt ſcattered us among the heathen. 12. [l] Thou ſelleſt thy people ‡ for nought, and doſt not increaſe thy wealth by their price. 13 [m] Thou makeſt us a reproach to our neighbours, a ſcorn and a deriſion to them that are round about us. 14. [n] Thou makeſt us a by-word among the heathen: [o] a ſhaking of the head among the people. 15. My confuſion is continually before me, and the ſhame of my face hath covered me: 16. For the voice of him that reproacheth and blaſphemeth; by reaſon of the enemy and avenger.

[i] Pſal. lx. 1. & lxxiv. 1. & lxxxix. 38.
[k] Rom. viii. 36.
† Heb. as ſheep of meat.
[l] Iſa. lii. 3. Jer. xv. 13.
‡ Heb. without riches.
[m] Deut. xxviii. 37. Pſ. lxxix. 4. & lxxx. 6.
[n] Jer. xxiv. 9.
[o] Pſal. xxii. 7.

v. 9—16. We have here the deep complaints of the perſecuted church of God: to the eye of ſenſe they ſeemed caſt off, diſowned and diſhonoured; their armies diſcomfited, as hath been often the caſe with thoſe who have attempted to oppoſe the papal tyranny, and ſlain like ſheep before hungry wolves; ſold under the antichriſtian yoke, and no glory ariſing to God, as they are apt to conclude, from their oppreſſion; loaded with contempt, and every opprobrious name, as heretics, dogs, fanatics; ridiculed and inſulted; covered with ſhame and confuſion, and grieved at the blaſphemies uttered by their antichriſtian foes againſt God, his truths, and people. Note, (1.) They who are caſt down, are tempted to think themſelves caſt off. (2.) Reproach and ſufferings are our appointed croſs; let us not ſhrink under them. (3.) Though we may fooliſhly wonder why God permits his foes and ours to trample on his people, we ſhall know hereafter, and admire the diſpenſation. (4.) The diſhonour caſt upon God, is a greater grief to the chriſtian ſpirit than the injury done himſelf.

17. All this is come upon us; yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falſly in thy covenant. 18. Our heart is not turned back, neither have our ſteps declined from thy way. 19. Though thou haſt ſore broken us in the place of † dragons, and covered us with [p] the ſhadow of death. 20. If we have forgotten the name of our God, or [q] ſtretched out our hands to a ſtrange god: 21. [r] Shall not God ſearch this out? for he knoweth the ſecrets of the heart. 22. [s] Yea, for thy ſake we are killed all the day long; we are counted as ſheep for the ſlaughter. 23. [t] Awake, why ſleepeſt thou, O LORD? ariſe, caſt us not off † Or, whales, as Gen. i. 21.

[p] Pſ. xxiii. 4.
[q] Job xxxi. 26.
[r] Jer. xvii. 10.
[s] Rom. viii. 36.
[t] Pſ. vii. 6. & xxxv. 23. & lix. 4, 5. & lxxviii. 65.

for u Ibid. xiii. 1. x Ibid. cxix. 25. † Heb. a help for us.

for ever. 24. [u] Wherefore hideſt thou thy face? and forgetteſt our affliction and our oppreſſion? 25. For [x] our ſoul is bowed down to the duſt; our belly cleaveth unto the earth. 26. Ariſe † for our help, and redeem us for thy mercies ſake.

v. 17—26. Lord, to whom ſhall we go, may the church and every ſuffering member well ſay, but unto thee? for there is ſalvation in no other: hither therefore they fly, and

